Rule (1). Any gain upon the closing of such short sale shall be considered as a gain upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months (notwithstanding the period of time any property used to close such short sale has been held); and

Rule (2). The holding period of such substantially identical property shall be considered to begin (notwithstanding the provisions of section 117 (h)) on the date of the closing of such short sale or on the date of a sale, gift, or other disposition of such property, whichever date occurs first.

For the purpose of rule (1) and rule (2) the acquisition of an option to sell property at a fixed price shall be considered a short sale, and the exercise or failure to exercise such option shall be considered as a closing of such short sale.

(2) The third rule, which is set forth in section 117 (l) (2), is applicable whenever property substantially identical to that sold short has been held by the taxpayer on the date of the short sale for more than 6 months. This rule is:

Rule (3). Any loss upon the closing of such short sale shall be considered as a loss upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months, nothwithstanding the period of time any property used to close such short sale has been held. For the purpose of rule (3), the acquisition of an option to sell property at a fixed price is not considered a short sale, and the exercise or failure to exercise such option is not considered as a closing of a short sale.

(3) Rules (1) and (3) do not apply to the gain or loss attributable to so much of the property sold short as exceeds in quantity the substantially identical property referred to in sections 117 (l) (1) and 117 (l) (2) respectively. Rule (2) applies to the substantially identical property referred to in section 117 (l) (1) in the order of the dates of the acquisition of such property but only to so much of such property as does not exceed the quantity sold short. If property substantially identical to that sold short has been held by the taxpayer on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months, or is acquired by him after the short sale and on or before the date of the closing thereof, and if property substantially identical to that sold short has been held by the taxpayer on the date of the short sale for more than 6 months, all three rules are applicable.

(4) The following examples illustrate the application of these rules to short sales of stock in the case of a taxpayer who makes his return on the basis of the calendar year:

Example (1). A buys 100 shares of X stock at $10 per share on February 1, 1952, sells short 100 shares of X stock at $16 per share on July 1, 1952, and closes the short sale on August 2, 1952, by delivering the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, to the lender of the stock used to effect the short sale. Since 100 shares of X stock had been held by A on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months, the gain of $600 realized upon the closing of the short sale is, by application of rule (1), a short-term capital gain.

Example (2). A buys 100 shares of X stock at $10 per share on February 1, 1952, sells short 100 shares of X stock at $16 per share on July 1, 1952, closes the short sale on August 1, 1952, with 100 shares of X stock purchased on that date at $18 per share, and on August 2, 1952, sells at $18 per share the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952. The $200 loss sustained upon the closing of the short sale is a short-term capital loss to which section 117 (l) has no application. By application of rule (2), however, the holding period of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, and sold on August 2, 1952, is considered to begin on August 1, 1952, the date of the closing of the short sale. The $800 gain realized upon the sale of such stock is, therefore, a short-term capital gain.

Example (3). A buys 100 shares of X stock at $10 per share on February 1, 1952, sells short 100 shares of X stock at $16 per share on September 1, 1952, sells on October 1, 1952, at $18 per share the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, and closes the short sale on October 1, 1952, with 100 shares of X stock purchased on that date at $18 per share. The $800 gain realized upon the sale of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, is a long-term capital gain to which section 117 (l) has no application. Since A had held 100 shares of X stock on the date of the short sale for more than 6 months, the $200 loss sustained upon the closing of the short sale is, by application of rule (3), a long-term capital loss.

Example (4). A sells short 100 shares of X stock at $16 per share on February 1, 1952. He buys 250 shares of X stock on March 1, 1952, at $10 per share and holds the latter stock until September 2, 1952 (more than 6 months), at which time, 100 of the 250 shares of X stock are delivered to close the short sale made on February 1, 1952. Since substantially identical property was acquired by A after the short sale and before it was closed, the $600 gain realized on the closing of the short sale is, by application of rule (1), a short-term capital gain. The holding period of the remaining 150 shares of X stock is not affected by section 117 (l) since this amount of the substantially identical property exceeds the quantity of the property sold short.

Example (5). A buys 100 shares of X stock at $10 per share on February 1, 1952, buys an additional 100 shares of X stock at $20 per share on July 1, 1952, sells short 100 shares of X stock at $30 per share on September 1, 1952, and closes the short sale on February 1, 1953, by delivering the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, to the lender of the stock used to effect the short sale. Since 100 shares of X stock had been held by A on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months, the gain of $2,000 realized upon the closing of the short sale is, by application of rule (1), a short-term capital gain, and the holding period of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on July 1, 1952, is considered, by application of rule (2), to begin on February 1, 1953, the date of the closing of the short sale. If, however, the 100 shares of X stock purchased on July 1, 1952, had been used by A to close the short sale, then, since 100 shares of X stock had been held by A on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months, the gain of $1,000 realized upon the closing of the short sale would be, by application of rule (1), a short-term capital gain, but the holding period of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, would not be affected by section 117 (l). If, on the other hand, A purchased an additional 100 shares of X stock at $40 per share on February 1, 1953, and used such shares to close the short sale at that time, then, since 100 shares of X stock had been held by A on the date of the short sale for more than 6 months, the loss of $1,000 sustained upon the closing of the short sale would be, by application of rule (3), a long-term capital loss, and, since 100 shares of X stock had been held by A on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months, the holding period of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on July 1, 1952, would be considered, by application of rule (2), to begin on February 1, 1953, but the holding period of the 100 shares of X stock purchased on February 1, 1952, would not be affected by section 117 (l).

Example (6). A buys 100 shares of X preferred stock at $10 per share on February 1, 1952. On July 1, 1952, he enters into a contract to sell 100 shares of XY common stock at $16 per share when, as, and if issued pursuant to a particular proposed plan of reorganization. On August 2, 1952, he receives 100 shares of XY common stock in exchange for the 100 shares of X preferred stock purchased on February 1, 1952, and delivers such common shares in performance of his July 1, 1952, contract. Assume that the exchange of the X preferred stock for the XY common stock is a tax-free exchange pursuant to section 112 (b) (3), and that on the basis of all of the facts and circumstances existing on July 1, 1952, the "when issued" XY common stock is substantially identical to the X preferred stock. Since 100 shares of substantially identical property had been held by A for not more than 6 months on the date of entering into the July 1, 1952, contract of sale, the gain of $600 realized upon the closing of the contract of sale is, by application of rule (1), a short-term capital gain.

(c) Other rules for the application of section 117 (l)—(1) Substantially identical property. The term "substantially identical property" is to be applied according to the facts and circumstances in each case. In general, as applied to stocks or securities, the term has the same meaning as the term "substantially identical stock or securities" used in section 118, relating to wash sales of stock or securities. For certain restrictions on the term as applied to commodity futures see sub-paragraph (2) of this paragraph. Ordinarily, stocks or securities of one corporation are not considered substantially identical to stocks or securities of another corporation. In certain situations they may be substantially identical; for example, in the case of a reorganization the facts and circumstances may be such that the stocks and securities of predecessor and successor corporations are substantially identical property. Similarly, bonds or preferred stock of a corporation are not ordinarily considered substantially identical to the common stock of the same corporation. However, in certain situations, as, for example, where the preferred stock or bonds are convertible into common stock of the same corporation, the relative values, price changes, and other circumstances may be such as to make such bonds or preferred stock and the common stock substantially identical property. Similarly, depending on the facts and circumstances, the term may apply to the stocks and securities to be received in a corporate reorganization or recapitalization, traded in on a when issued basis, as compared with the stocks or securities to be exchanged in such reorganization or recapitalization.

(2) Commodity futures. (i) As provided in section 117 (l) (3) (B) (ii) in the case of futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange, a commodity future requiring delivery in one calendar month shall not be considered as property substantially identical to another commodity future requiring delivery in a different calendar month. For example, commodity futures in May wheat and July wheat are not considered, for the purpose of section 117 (l) substantially identical property. Similarly, futures in different commodities which are not generally through custom of the trade used as hedges for each other (such as corn and wheat, for example) are not considered substantially identical property. If commodity futures are otherwise substantially identical property, the mere fact that they were procured through different brokers will not remove them from the scope of the term "substantially identical property" Commodity futures procured on different markets may come within the term "substantially identical property" depending upon the facts and circumstances in the case, with the historical similarity in the price movements in the two markets as the primary factor to be considered.

(ii) Since section 117 (l) applies only to sales or exchanges of capital assets, bona fide hedging transactions in commodity futures entered into by flour millers, producers of cloth, operators of grain elevators, etc., for the purpose of their business, and which do not give rise to capital gain or loss, are not within the scope of section 117 (l)

(iii) Section 117 (l) (3) (C) relating to so-called "arbitrage" transactions in commodity futures, provides that where a taxpayer enters into two commodity futures transactions on the same day, one requiring delivery by him in one market and the other requiring delivery to him of the same (or substantially identical) commodity in the same calendar month in a different market, and the taxpayer subsequently closes both such transactions on the same day, section 117 (l) shall have no application to so much of the commodity involved in either such transaction as does not exceed in quantity the commodity involved in the other.

Example. A, who makes his return on the basis of the calendar year, on February 1, 1952, enters into a contract through broker X to purchase 10,000 bushels of December wheat on the Chicago market at $2 per bushel. On July 1, 1952, he enters into a contract through broker Y to sell 10,000 bushels of December wheat on the Chicago market at $2.25 per bushel. On August 2, 1952, he closes both transactions at $2.50 per bushel. The $2,500 loss sustained on the closing of the short sale is a short-term capital loss to which section 117 (l) has no application. By application of rule (2) in paragraph (b) of this section, however, the holding period of the futures contract entered into on February 1, 1952, is considered to begin on August 2, 1952, the date of the closing of the short sale. The $5,000 gain realized upon the closing of such contract is, therefore, a short-term capital gain.

(3) Husband and wife. Section 117 (l) (3) (B) (iii) provides that, in the case of a short sale of property by an individual, the term "taxpayer" shall be read as "taxpayer or his spouse" Thus, if the spouse of a taxpayer holds or acquires property substantially identical to that sold short by the taxpayer, and the other conditions of this section are met, then the rules set forth herein are applicable to the same extent as if the taxpayer held or acquired the substantially identical property. For this purpose, an individual who is legally separated from the taxpayer under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as the spouse of the taxpayer.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(m) Collapsible corporations—(1) Treatment of gain to shareholders. Gain from the sale or exchange (whether in liquidation or otherwise) of stock of a collapsible corporation, to the extent that it would be considered (but for the provisions of this subsection) as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months, shall, except as provided in paragraph (3), be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is not a capital asset.

(2) Definitions. (A) For the purposes of this subsection, the term "collapsible corporation" means a corporation formed or availed of principally for the manufacture, construction, or production of property, for the purchase of property which (in the hands of the corporation) is property described in subsection (a) (1) (A), or for the holding of stock in a corporation so formed or availed of, with a view to—

(i) The sale or exchange of stock by its shareholders (whether in liquidation or otherwise), or a distribution to its shareholders, prior to the realization by the corporation manufacturing, constructing, producing, or purchasing the property of a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such property, and

(ii) The realization by such shareholders of gain attributable to such property.

(B) For the purposes of subparagraph (A), a corporation shall be deemed to have manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased property, if—

(i) It engaged in the manufacture, construction, or production of such property to any extent,

(ii) It holds property having a basis determined, in whole or in part, by reference to the cost of such property in the hands of a person who manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased the property, or

(iii) It holds property having a basis determined, in whole or in part, by reference to the cost of property manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased by the corporation.

(3) Limitations on application of subsection. In the case of gain realized by a shareholder upon his stock in a collapsible corporation—

(A) This subsection shall not apply unless, at any time after the commencement of the manufacture, construction, or production of the property, or at the time of the purchase of the property described in subsection (a) (1) (A) or at any time thereafter, such shareholder (i) owned (or was considered as owning) more than 10 per centum in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation, or (ii) owned stock which was considered as owned at such time by another shareholder who then owned (or was considered as owning) more than 10 per centum in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation;

(B) This subsection shall not apply to the gain recognized during a taxable year unless more than 70 per centum of such gain is attributable to the property so manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased; and

(C) This subsection shall not apply to gain realized after the expiration of three years following the completion of such manufacture, construction, production, or purchase.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the ownership of stock shall be determined in accordance with the rules prescribed by paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (5), and (6) of section 503 (a), except that, in addition to the persons prescribed by paragraph (2) of that section, the family of an individual shall include the spouses of that individual's brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood) and the spouses of that individual's lineal descendants.

§ 39.117 (m)-1 Collapsible corporations—(a) In general. Subject to the limitations contained in paragraph (c) of this section, the entire gain from (1) the actual sale or exchange of stock of a collapsible corporation, (2) amounts distributed in complete or partial liquidation of a collapsible corporation which are treated, under section 115 (c) as payment in exchange for stock, and (3) a distribution made by a collapsible corporation which, under section 115 (d) is treated, to the extent it exceeds the basis of the stock, in the same manner as a gain from the sale or exchange of property, shall be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is not a capital asset.

(b) Determination of collapsible corporation. (1) A collapsible corporation is defined by section 117 (m) (2) (A) to be a corporation formed or availed of principally for the manufacture, construction, or production of property, for the purchase of property which (in the hands of the corporation) is property described in section 117 (a) (1) (A) or for the holding of stock in a corporation so formed or availed of, with a view to (i) the sale or exchange of stock by its shareholders (whether in liquidation or otherwise) or a distribution to its shareholders, prior to the realization by the corporation manufacturing, constructing, producing, or purchasing the property of a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such property, and (ii) the realization by such shareholders of gain attributable to such property.

(2) See paragraph (d) of this section for a description of the facts which will ordinarily be considered sufficient to establish whether or not a corporation is a collapsible corporation under the rules of this section. See paragraph (e) of this section for examples of the application of section 117 (m)

(3) Under section 117 (m) (2) (A) the corporation must be formed or availed of with a view to the action therein described, that is, the sale or exchange of its stock by its shareholders, or a distribution to them, prior to the realization by the corporation manufacturing, constructing, producing, or purchasing the property of a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such property and the realization by the shareholders of gain attributable to such property. This requirement is satisfied in any case in which such action was contemplated by those persons in a position to determine the policies of the corporation, whether by reason of their owning a majority of the voting stock of the corporation or otherwise. The requirement is satisfied whether such action was contemplated unconditionally, conditionally or as a recognized possibility. If the corporation was so formed or availed of, it is immaterial that a particular shareholder was not a shareholder at the time of the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase of the property, or if a shareholder at such time, did not share in such view, and any gain of such shareholder on his stock in the corporation shall be treated in the same manner as gain of a shareholder who did share in such view. See, however, the limitation contained in paragraph (c) (2) of this section. The existence of a bona fide business reason for doing business in the corporate form does not, by itself, negate the fact that the corporation may also have been formed or availed of with a view to the action described in section 117 (m) (2) (A)

(4) A corporation is formed or availed of with a view to the action described in section 117 (m) (2) (A) if the requisite view existed at any time during the manufacture, production, construction, or purchase referred to in that section. Thus, if the sale, exchange, or distribution is attributable solely to circumstances which arose after the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase (other than circumstances which reasonably could be anticipated at the time of such manufacture, construction, production, or purchase) the corporation shall, in the absence of compelling facts to the contrary, be considered not to have been so formed or availed of. However, if the sale, exchange, or distribution is attributable to circumstances present at the time of the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase, the corporation shall, in the absence of compelling facts to the contrary, be considered to have been so formed or availed of.

(5) The property referred to in section 117 (m) (2) (A) is that property or the aggregate of those properties with respect to which the requisite view existed. In order to ascertain the property or properties as to which the requisite view existed, reference shall be made to each property as to which, at the time of the sale, exchange, or distribution referred to in section 117 (m) (2) (A) there has not been a realization by the corporation manufacturing, constructing, producing, or purchasing the property of a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such property. However, where any such property is a unit of an integrated project involving several properties similar in kind, the determination whether the requisite view existed shall be made only if a substantial part of the net income to be derived from the project has not been realized at the time of the sale, exchange, or distribution, and in such case the determination shall be made by reference to the aggregate of the properties constituting the single project.

(6) A corporation shall be deemed to have manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased property if it (i) engaged in the manufacture, construction, or production of property to any extent, or (ii) holds property having a basis determined, in whole or in part, by reference to the cost of such property in the hands of a person who manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased the property, or (iii) holds property having a basis determined, in whole or in part, by reference to the cost of property manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased by the corporation. Thus, under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, for example, a corporation need not have originated nor have completed the manufacture, construction, or production of the property. Under subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, for example, if an individual were to transfer property constructed by him to a corporation in exchange for all of the capital stock of such corporation, and such transfer qualifies under section 112 (b) (5) then the corporation would be deemed to have constructed the property, since the basis of the property in the hands of the corporation would, under section 113 (a) (8) be determined by reference to the basis of the property in the hands of the individual. Under subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph, for example, if a corporation were to exchange property constructed by it for property of like kind constructed by another person, and such exchange qualifies under section 112 (b) (1) then the corporation would be deemed to have constructed the property received by it in the exchange, since the basis of the property received by it in the exchange would, under section 113 (a) (6) be determined by reference to the basis of the property constructed by the corporation.

(7) In determining whether a corporation is a collapsible corporation by reason of the purchase of property, it is immaterial whether the property is purchased from the shareholders of the corporation or from persons other than such shareholders. The property, however, must be property which, in the hands of the corporation, is property of a kind described in section 117 (a) (1) (A) Section 117 (a) (1) (A) describes the following property: Stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of its trade or business. The determination whether property is of a kind described in section 117 (a) (1) (A) shall be made without regard to the fact that the corporation is formed or availed of with a view to the action described in section 117 (m) (2) (A)

(8) Section 117 (m) is applicable whether the shareholder is an individual, a trust, an estate, a partnership, a company, or a corporation.

(c) Limitations on application of section—(1) General. This section shall apply only to the extent that the recognized gain of a shareholder upon his stock in a collapsible corporation would be considered, but for the provisions of this section, as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. Thus, if a taxpayer sells at a gain stock of a collapsible corporation which he has held for six months or less, this section would not, in any event, apply to such gain. Also, if it is determined, under provisions of law other than section 117 (m), that a sale or exchange at a gain of stock of a collapsible corporation which has been held for more than six months results in ordinary income rather than long-term capital gain, then this section (including the limitations contained herein) has no application whatsoever to such gain.

(2) Stock ownership rules. (i) This section shall apply in the case of gain realized by a shareholder upon his stock in a collapsible corporation only if the shareholder, at any time after the actual commencement of the manufacture, construction, or production of the property, or at the time of the purchase of the property described in section 117 (a) (1) (A) or at any time thereafter, (a) owned, or was considered as owning, more than 10 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation, or (b) owned stock which was considered as owned at such time by another shareholder who then owned, or was considered as owning, more than 10 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation.

(ii) The ownership of stock shall be determined in accordance with the rules prescribed by section 503 (a) (1), (2), (3) (5) and (6), except that, in addition to the persons prescribed by section 503 (a) (2) the family of an individual shall include the spouses of that individual's brothers and sisters, whether such brothers and sisters are by the whole or the half blood, and the spouses of that individual's lineal descendants.

(iii) For the purpose of this limitation, treasury stock shall not be considered as outstanding stock.

(iv) It is possible, under this limitation, that a shareholder in a collapsible corporation may have gain upon his stock in that corporation treated differently from the gain of another shareholder in the same collapsible corporation.

(3) Seventy-percent rule. (i) This section shall apply to the gain recognized during a taxable year upon the stock in a collapsible corporation only if more than 70 percent of such gain is attributable to the property referred to in section 117 (m) (2) (A) If more than 70 percent of such gain is so attributable, then all of such gain is subject to this section, and, if 70 percent or less of such gain is so attributable, then none of such gain is subject to this section.

(ii) For the purpose of this limitation, the gain attributable to the property referred to in section 117 (m) (2) (A) is the excess of the recognized gain of the shareholder during the taxable year upon his stock in the collapsible corporation over the recognized gain which the shareholder would have if the property had not been manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased. In the case of gain on a distribution in partial liquidation or a distribution described in section 115 (d) the gain attributable to the property shall not be less than an amount which bears the same ratio to the gain on such distribution as the gain which would be attributable to the property if there had been a complete liquidation at the time of such distribution bears to the total gain which would have resulted from such complete liquidation.

(iii) Gain may be attributable to the property referred to in section 117 (m) (2) (A) even though such gain is represented by an appreciation in the value of property other than that manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased. Where, for example, a corporation owns a tract of land and the development of one-half of the tract increases the value of the other half, the gain attributable to the developed half of the tract includes the increase in the value of the other half.

(4) Three-year rule. This section shall not apply to that portion of the gain of a shareholder that is realized more than three years after the actual completion of the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase of the property to which such portion is attributable.

(d) Application of section. (1) Whether or not a corporation is a collapsible corporation shall be determined under the rules of paragraph (b) of this section on the basis of all the facts and circumstances in each particular case. The following subparagraphs of this paragraph set forth those facts which will ordinarily be considered sufficient to establish that a corporation is or is not a collapsible corporation. The facts set forth in the following subparagraphs of this paragraph are not exclusive of other facts which may be controlling in any particular case. For example, if the facts in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, but not the facts in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, are present, the corporation may nevertheless not be a collapsible corporation if there are other facts which clearly establish that the rules of paragraph (b) of this section are not satisfied. Similarly, if the facts in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph are present, the corporation may nevertheless be a collapsible corporation if there are other facts which clearly establish that the corporation was formed or availed of in the manner described in paragraph (b) of this section, or if the facts in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph are not significant by reason of other facts, such as the fact that the corporation is subject to the control of persons other than those who were in control immediately prior to the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase of the property. See paragraph (c) of this section for provisions which make section 117 (m) inapplicable to certain shareholders of collapsible corporations.

(2) The following facts will ordinarily be considered sufficient (except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph and subparagraph (3) of this paragraph) to establish that a corporation is a collapsible corporation:

(i) A shareholder of the corporation sells or exchanges his stock, or receives a liquidating distribution, or a distribution described in section 115 (d)

(ii) Upon such sale, exchange, or distribution, such shareholder realizes gain attributable to the property described in subdivisions (iv) and (v) of this subparagraph, and

(iii) At the time of the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase of the property described in subdivisions (iv) and (v) of this subparagraph, such activity was substantial in relation to the other activities of the corporation which manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased such property.

The property referred to in subdivisions (ii) and (iii) of this subparagraph is that property or the aggregate of those properties which meet the following two requirements:

(iv) The property is manufactured, constructed, or produced by the corporation or by another corporation stock of which is held by the corporation, or is property purchased by the corporation or by such other corporation which (in the hands of the corporation holding such property) is property described in section 117 (a) (1) (A) (relating to stock in trade, inventories, and property held primarily for sale to customers) and

(v) At the time of the sale, exchange, or distribution described in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, the corporation which manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased such property has not realized a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such property.

In the case of property which is a unit of an integrated project involving several properties similar in kind, the rules of this subparagraph shall be applied to the aggregate of the properties constituting the single project rather than separately to such unit. Under the rules of this subparagraph, a corporation shall be considered a collapsible corporation by reason of holding stock in other corporations which manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased the property only if the activity of the corporation in holding stock in such other corporations is substantial in relation to the other activities of the corporation.

(3) The absence of any of the facts set forth in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph or the presence of the following facts will ordinarily be considered sufficient (except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph) to establish that a corporation is not a collapsible corporation:

(i) In the case of a corporation subject to the rules of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph only by reason of the manufacture, construction, production, or purchase (either by the corporation or by another corporation the stock of which is held by the corporation) of property which is property described in section 117 (a) (1) (A), the amount (both in quantity and value) of such property is not in excess of the amount which is normal—

(a) For the purpose of the business activities of the corporation which manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased the property if such corporation has a substantial prior business history involving the use of such property and continues in business, or

(b) For the purpose of an orderly liquidation of the business if the corporation which manufactured, constructed, produced, or purchased such property has a substantial prior business history involving the use of such property and is in the process of liquidation.

(ii) In the case of a corporation subject to the rules of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph with respect to the manufacture, construction, or production (either by the corporation or by another corporation the stock of which is held by the corporation) of property, the amount of the unrealized net income from such property is not substantial in relation to the amount of the net income realized (after the completion of a material part of such manufacture, construction, or production, and prior to the sale, exchange, or distribution referred to in subparagraph (2) (i) of this paragraph) from such property and from other property manufactured, constructed, or produced by the corporation.

(e) Examples. The following examples will illustrate the application of this section:

Example (1). (i) On January 2, 1952, A formed the W corporation and contributed $50,000 cash in exchange for all of the stock thereof. The W corporation borrowed $900,000 from a bank, the loan being guaranteed by the Federal Housing Authority, and used $800,000 of such sum in the construction of an apartment house on land which it purchased for $50,000. The apartment house was completed on December 31, 1952. On December 31, 1952, the corporation, having determined that the fair market value of the apartment house, separate and apart from the land, was $900,000, made a distribution (permitted under the applicable State law) to A of $100,000. At this time, the fair market value of the land was $50,000. As of December 31, 1952, the corporation has not realized any earnings and profits. In 1953, the corporation began the operation of the apartment house and received rentals therefrom. The corporation has since continued to own and operate the building. The corporation reported on the basis of the calendar year and cash receipts and disbursements.

(ii) Since A received a distribution and realized a gain attributable to the building constructed by the corporation, since, at the time of such distribution, the corporation has not realized a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such building, and since the construction of the building was a substantial activity of the corporation, the W corporation is considered a collapsible corporation under paragraph (d) (2) of this section. The provisions of section 117 (m) (3) do not prohibit the application of section 117 (m) (1) to A. Therefore, the distribution, if and to the extent that it may be considered long-term capital gain rather than ordinary income without regard to section 117 (m), will be considered ordinary income under section 117 (m) (1).

(iii) In the event of the existence of additional facts and circumstances in the above case, the corporation, notwithstanding the above facts, might not be considered a collapsible corporation. See paragraphs (b) and (d) (1) of this section.

Example (2). On January 2, 1952, B formed the X corporation and became the sole shareholder thereof. This corporation completed the construction of an office building in 1952. Immediately after the completion of the building, the corporation sold this building at a gain of $50,000, included this entire gain in its return for 1952, and distributed this entire gain (less taxes) to B. The corporation completed the construction of a second office building in June 1953. In August 1953, B sold the entire stock of the X corporation at a gain of $12,000, which gain is attributable to the second building. In view of the fact that B sold stock of the X corporation and realized a gain attributable to the second office building, that, at the time of such sale, the corporation had not realized a substantial part of the net income to be derived from such building, and that the construction of such building during the time of such construction was a substantial activity of the corporation, the X corporation is considered a collapsible corporation under paragraph (d) (2) of this section. Since the provisions of section 117 (m) (3) do not prohibit the application of section 117 (m) (1) to B, the gain of $12,000 to B is, accordingly, considered ordinary income.

Example (3). The facts in this example are the same as in example (2), except that the following facts are shown: B was the president of the X corporation and active in the conduct of its business. The second building was constructed as the first step in a project of the X corporation for the development for rental purposes of a large suburban center involving the construction of several buildings by the corporation. The sale of the stock by B was caused by his retiring from all business activity as a result of illness arising after the second building was constructed. Under these additional facts, the corporation is not considered a collapsible corporation. See paragraphs (b) and (d) (1) of this section.

Example (4). (i) On January 2, 1948, C formed the Y corporation and became the sole shareholder thereof. The Y corporation has been engaged solely in the business of producing motion pictures and licensing their exhibition. On January 2, 1953, C sold all of the stock of the Y corporation at a gain. The Y corporation has produced one motion picture each year since its organization and before January 2, 1953, it has realized a substantial part of the net income to be derived from each of its motion pictures except the last one made in 1952. This last motion picture was completed September 1, 1952. As of January 2, 1953, no license had been made for its exhibition. The fair market value on January 2, 1953, of this last motion picture exceeds the cost of its production by $50,000. A material part of the production of this last picture was completed on January 1, 1952, and between that date and January 2, 1953, the corporation had realized net income of $500,000 from other motion pictures produced by it. The corporation has consistently distributed to its shareholder its net income when received (after adjustment for taxes).

(ii) Although the corporation is within paragraph (d) (2) of this section with respect to the production of property, the amount of the unrealized net income from such property ($50,000) is not substantial in relation to the amount of the net income realized, after the completion of a material part of the production of such property and prior to sale of the stock, from such property and other property produced by the corporation ($500,000). Accordingly, the Y corporation is within paragraph (d) (3) (ii) of this section, and is not considered a collapsible corporation.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4) except that C sold all of his stock to D on February 1, 1952. On January 2, 1953, D sold all of the Y corporation stock at a gain, the gain being attributable to the picture completed September 1, 1952, and not released by the corporation for exhibition. In view of the change of control of the corporation, the provisions of paragraph (d) (3) (ii) of this section are not significant at the time of the sale by D, and the Y corporation would be considered a collapsible corporation on January 2, 1953. See paragraphs (b) and (d) (1) of this section.

§ 39.117 (n) Statutory provisions; gains and losses from sales or exchanges of securities by dealers in securities.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *
(n) Dealers in securities—(1) Capital gains. Gain by a dealer in securities from the sale or exchange of any security shall in no event be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset unless—

(A) The security was, prior to the expiration of the thirtieth day after the date of its acquisition or after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951 (whichever is the later), clearly identified in the dealer's records as a security held for investment; and

(B) The security was not, at any time after the expiration of such thirtieth day, held by such dealer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business.

(2) Ordinary losses. Loss by a dealer in securities from the sale or exchange of any security shall, except as otherwise provided in subsection (i) (relating to bond, etc., losses of banks), in no event be considered as loss from the sale or exchange of property which is not a capital asset if at any time after the thirtieth day following the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951 the security was clearly identified in the dealer's records as a security held for investment.

(3) Definition of security. For the purposes of this subsection the term "security" means any share of stock in any corporation, certificate of stock or interest in any corporation, note, bond, debenture, or evidence of indebtedness, or any evidence of an interest in or right to subscribe to or purchase any of the foregoing.

§ 39.117 (n)-1 Dealers in securities—(a) Capital gain. (1) The gain by a dealer in securities from the sale or exchange of a security shall in no event be considered to be gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset unless—

(i) The security is, before the expiration of the thirtieth day after the date of its acqusition, or of the thirtieth day after October 20, 1951, whichever is later, clearly identified in the dealer's records as a security held for investment; and

(ii) The security is not, at any time after the expiration of such thirtieth day, held by the dealer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business.

(2) This provision is applicable only in the case where gain from the sale or exchange of a security would, but for such provision, be considered capital gain. Thus, if the sale of a security by a dealer would, but for section 117 (n) (1) be considered to constitute the sale of a security held for investment, gain from such sale will in no event be considered to be capital gain unless the security has been properly identified within the 30-day period in the dealer's records as being held for investment and such security is not at any time after the expiration of the 30-day period held by the dealer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business. However, the mere fact that a security which is actually held by a dealer for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business is identified as a security held for investment will not in and of itself cause the gain from the sale of the security to be treated as capital gain whether the security is sold within the 30-day period or after such period.

(b) Ordinary loss. (1) The loss sustained by a dealer in securities from the sale or exchange of a security shall in no event be considered to be loss from the sale or exchange of property which is not a capital asset if at any time after November 19, 1951, the security has been clearly identified in the dealer's records as a security held for investment. Once a security has been identified after November 19, 1951, as being held for investment, a loss on the subsequent disposition of such security shall in no event be considered an ordinary loss but shall be considered as one arising from the sale or exchange of a capital asset.

(2) Nothing in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall be taken to restrict or prohibit the application of section 117 (i) without regard to the manner in which the securities described therein have been identified in the records, to the net capital losses of a bank from sales or exchanges of bonds and certain other securities.

(c) General. (1) For the purpose of this section the term "security" means any share of stock in any corporation, any certificate of stock or interest in any corporation, any note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness, or any evidence of an interest in, or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the foregoing.

(2) A security is clearly identified in the dealer's records as a security held for investment when there is an accounting separation of such security from other securities. Accounting separation will be satisfied by (i) making appropriate entries in the dealer's books of account to distinguish the security from inventories and to carry it as an investment and (ii) indicating with such entries, to the extent feasible, the individual serial number of, or other characteristic symbol imprinted upon, the individual security.

(3) In computing the 30-day period within which the security must be clearly identified, and after which such security may not be held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the trade or business, the first day of such period is the day following the date of acquisition. Thus, in the case of a security acquired on March 18, 1952, the 30-day period expires at midnight on April 17, 1952.

§ 39.117 (o) Statutory provisions; gain from sale of certain property between spouses or between an individual and a controlled corporation.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(o) Gain from sale of certain property between spouses or between an individual and a controlled corporation—(1) Treatment of gain as ordinary income. In the case of a sale or exchange, directly or indirectly, of property described in paragraph (2)—

(A) Between a husband and wife; or

(B) Between an individual and a corporation more than 80 per centum in value of the outstanding stock of which is owned by such individual, his spouse, and his minor children and minor grandchildren; any gain recognized to the transferor from the sale or exchange of such property shall be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is neither a capital asset nor property described in subsection (j).

(2) Subsection applicable only to sales or exchanges of depreciable property. This subsection shall apply only in the case of a sale or exchange of property by a transferor which in the hands of the transferee is property of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l).

§ 39.117 (o)-1 Gain from sale or exchange of certain property between spouses or between an individual and a controlled corporation. Section 117 (o) provides that any gain recognized to the transferor from the sale or exchange, directly or indirectly, between a husband and wife or between an individual and a controlled corporation, of property which, in the hands of the transferee, is property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l) (including such property with respect to which a deduction for amortization is allowable under section 23 (t)) shall be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is neither a capital asset nor property described in section 117 (j) For the purpose of section 117 (o) a corporation is controlled when more than 80 percent in value of all outstanding stock of the corporation is owned (whether legal ownership or beneficial ownership) by the taxpayer, his spouse, and his minor children and minor grandchildren. For the purpose of this rule, the terms "children" and "grandchildren" include stepchildren and legally adopted children. The provisions of section 117 (o) are applicable whether the property be transferred from the corporation to the shareholder or from the shareholder to the corporation.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(p) Taxability to employee of termination payments. Amounts received from the assignment or release by an employee, after more than twenty years' employment, of all his rights to receive, after termination of his employment and for a period of not less than five years (or for a period ending with his death), a percentage of future profits or receipts of his employer shall be considered an amount received from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months, if such rights were included in the terms of the employment of such employee for not less than twelve years, and if the total of the amounts received for such assignment or release are [is] received in one taxable year and after the termination of such employment.

§ 39.117 (p)-1 Capital gains treatment of certain termination payments. Certain amounts received by an employee pursuant to the assignment or release by the employee of all his rights to receive, after termination of his employment and for a period of not less than five years or for a period ending with his death, a percentage of future profits or receipts of his employer, that is, profits or receipts attributable to a period subsequent to termination of employment, shall, under the provisions of section 117 (p) be considered and treated as an amount received from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. The provisions of section 117 (p) shall have application to such payments only if the following conditions are met:

(a) The employee was employed by the employer, in whose future profits or receipts the employee has an interest, for a period of more than 20 years before the assignment or release by the employee of his rights in such future profits or receipts,

(b) The full rights of the employee to the percentage of the future profits or receipts of such employer, which rights are the subject of the assignment or release, were incorporated in the terms of the contract of employment between the employee and the employer for a period of at least 12 years,

(c) The assignment or release was made after the termination of the employee's employment with such employer,

(d) The assignment or release conveyed all the rights of the employee in the future profits or receipts of such employer and conveyed no other rights of the employee, and

(e) The total amount to which the employee became entitled pursuant to the assignment or release was received by the employee after the termination of his employment with such employer and in one taxable year of the employee.

It is immaterial whether the contract of employment is oral or written provided the prescribed conditions are met. The requirement that the assignment or release be made after the termination of the employee's employment contemplates a complete and bona fide termination of the relationship of employer and employee and not merely, for example, a termination of such relationship under the particular contract or contracts of employment pursuant to which the employee acquired his rights in the future profits or receipts of the employer. The contract need not expressly provide that the employee shall share in the future profits or receipts of the employer for a minimum period of five years. However, if the contract does not expressly so provide and the assignment or release is made before the expiration of five years following the termination of employment, the terms of the contract considered in conjunction with the facts in the particular situation must establish that the rights of the employee to a percentage of future profits or receipts, in all probability, will extend to a period of not less than five years from the date of termination of employment or for a period ending with his death. Section 117 (p) has application only to an assignment or release made by the employee who acquired the right to a percentage of future profits or receipts of the employer, and has no application to amounts received other than as payment for assignment or release of such right. Section 117 (p) has no effect upon the determination of the income tax of the employer making the payment to the employee.

SEC. 118. Loss from wash sales of stock or securities. (a) In the case of any loss claimed to have been sustained from any sale or other disposition of shares of stock or securities where it appears that, within a period beginning 30 days before the date of such sale or disposition and ending 30 days after such date, the taxpayer has acquired (by purchase or by an exchange upon which the entire amount of gain or loss was recognized by law), or has entered into a contract or option so to acquire, substantially identical stock or securities, then no deduction for the loss shall be allowed under section 23 (e) (2); nor shall such deduction be allowed under section 23 (f) unless the claim is made by a corporation, a dealer in stocks or securities, and with respect to a transaction made in the ordinary course of its business.

(b) If the amount of stock or securities acquired (or covered by the contract or option to acquire) is less than the amount of stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of, then the particular shares of stock or securities the loss from the sale or other disposition of which is not deductible shall be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) If the amount of stock or securities acquired (or covered by the contract or option to acquire) is not less than the amount of stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of, then the particular shares of stock or securities the acquisition of which (or the contract or option to acquire which) resulted in the nondeductibility of the loss shall be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.118-1 Losses from wash sales of stock or securities. (a) A taxpayer cannot deduct any loss claimed to have been sustained from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities if, within a period beginning 30 days before the date of such sale or disposition and ending 30 days after such date (referred to in this section as the 61-day period) he has acquired (by purchase or by an exchange upon which the entire amount of gain or loss was recognized by law) or has entered into a contract or option so to acquire, substantially identical stock or securities. However, this prohibition does not apply (1) in the case of a taxpayer, not a corporation, if the sale or other disposition of stock or securities is made in connection with the taxpayer's trade or business, or (2) in the case of a corporation, a dealer in stock or securities, if the sale or other disposition of stock or securities is made in the ordinary course of its business as such dealer. See § 39.22 (a)–8 as to stock or securities sold from lots purchased at different dates or at different prices where the identity of the lots cannot be determined and § 39.113 (a) (10)–1 for the basis for determining gain or loss from the subsequent sale or other disposition of stock or securities acquired in connection with wash sales.

(b) Where more than one loss is claimed to have been sustained within the taxable year from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities, the provisions of this section shall be applied to the losses in the order in which the stock or securities the disposition of which resulted in the respective losses were disposed of (beginning with the earliest disposition) If the order of disposition of stock or securities disposed of at a loss on the same day cannot be determined, the stock or securities will be considered to have been disposed of in the order in which they were originally acquired (beginning with the earliest acquisition)

(c) Where the amount of stock or securities acquired within the 61-day period is less than the amount of stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of, then the particular shares of stock or securities the loss from the sale or other disposition of which is not deductible shall be those with which the stock or securities acquired are matched in accordance with the following rule: The stock or securities acquired will be matched in accordance with the order of their acquisition (beginning with the earliest acquisition) with an equal number of the shares of stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of.

(d) Where the amount of stock or securities acquired within the 61-day period is not less than the amount of stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of, then the particular shares of stock or securities the acquisition of which resulted in the nondeductibility of the loss shall be those with which the stock or securities disposed of are matched in accordance with the following rule: The stock or securities sold or otherwise disposed of will be matched with an equal number of the shares of stock or securities acquired in accordance with the order of acquisition (beginning with the earliest acquisition) of the stock or securities acquired.

(e) The acquisition of any share of stock or any security which results in the nondeductibility of a loss under the provisions of this section shall be disregarded in determining the deductibility of any other loss.

(f) The word "acquired" as used in this section means acquired by purchase or by an exchange upon which the entire amount of gain or loss was recognized by law, and comprehends cases where the taxpayer has entered into a contract or option within the 61-day period to acquire by purchase or by such an exchange.

(g) The following examples illustrate the application of this section:

Example (1). A, whose taxable year is the calendar year, on December 1, 1951, purchased 100 shares of common stock in the M Company for $10,000 and on December 15, 1951, purchased 100 additional shares for $9,000. On January 3, 1952, he sold the 100 shares purchased on December 1, 1951, for $9,000. Because of the provisions of section 118 no loss from the sale is allowable as a deduction.

Example (2). A, whose taxable year is the calendar year, on September 21, 1951, purchased 100 shares of the common stock of the M Company for $5,000. On December 21, 1951, he purchased 50 shares of substantially identical stock for $2,750, and on December 27, 1951, he purchased 25 additional shares of such stock for $1,125. On January 3, 1952, he sold for $4,000 the 100 shares purchased on September 21, 1951. There is an indicated loss of $1,000 on the sale of the 100 shares. Since, within the 61-day period, A purchased 75 shares of substantially identical stock, the loss on the sale of 75 of the shares ($3,750—$3,000, or $750) is not allowable as a deduction because of the provisions of section 118. The loss on the sale of the remaining 25 shares ($1,250—$1,000, or $250) is deductible subject to the limitations provided in sections 24 (b) and 117. The basis of the 50 shares purchased December 21, 1951, the acquisition of which resulted in the nondeductibility of the loss ($500) sustained on 50 of the 100 shares sold on January 3, 1952, is $2,500 (the cost of 50 of the shares sold on January 3, 1952) + $750 (the difference between the purchase price ($2,750) of the 50 shares acquired on December 21, 1951, and the selling price ($2,000) of 50 of the shares sold on January 3, 1952, or $3,250. Similarly, the basis of the 25 shares purchased on December 27, 1951, the acquisition of which resulted in the nondeductibility of the loss ($250) sustained on 25 of the shares sold on January 3, 1952, is $1,250+$125, or $1,375. See § 39.113 (a) (10)–1.

Example (3). A, whose taxable year is the calendar year, on September 15, 1950, purchased 100 shares of the stock of the M Company for $5,000. He sold these shares on February 1, 1952, for $4,000. On each of the four days from February 15, 1952, to February 18, 1952, inclusive, he purchased 50 shares of substantially identical stock for $2,000. There is an indicated loss of $1,000 from the sale of the 100 shares on February 1, 1952, but, since within the 61-day period A purchased not less than 100 shares of substantially identical stock, the loss is not deductible. The particular shares of stock the purchase of which resulted in the nondeductibility of the loss are the first 100 shares purchased within such period, that is, the 50 shares purchased on February 15, 1952, and the 50 shares purchased on February 16, 1952. In determining the period for which the 50 shares purchased on February 15, 1952, and the 50 shares purchased on February 16, 1952, were held, there is to be included the period for which the 100 shares purchased on September 15, 1950, and sold on February 1, 1952, were held.

FEDERAL REGISTER

THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF THE UNITED STATES 1934 LITTERA SCRIPTA MANET

VOLUME 18 NUMBER 189

Washington, Saturday, September 26, 1953

Part II of this issue is divided into two sections. Section 1 contains §§ 39.1 through 39.118-1 of Part 39, Chapter I, Title 26, and Section 2 contains §§ 39.119 (a) through 39.6000-1.

SEC. 119. Income from sources within United States—(a) Gross income from sources in United States. The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(1) Interest. Interest from the United States, any Territory, any political subdivision of a Territory, or the District of Columbia, and interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of residents, corporate or otherwise, not including—

(A) Interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to persons not engaged in business within the United States, or

(B) Interest received from a resident alien individual, a resident foreign corporation, or a domestic corporation, when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that less than 20 per centum of the gross income of such resident payor or domestic corporation has been derived from sources within the United States, as determined under the provisions of this section, for the three-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of such payor preceding the payment of such interest, or for such part of such period as may be applicable, or

(C) Income derived by a foreign central bank of issue from bankers' acceptances;

(2) Dividends. The amount received as dividends—

(A) From a domestic corporation other than a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251, and other than a corporation less than 20 per centum of whose gross income is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to have been derived from sources within the United States, as determined under provisions of this section, for the three-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of such corporation preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence), or

(B) From a foreign corporation unless less than 50 per centum of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of this section; but only in an amount which bears the same ratio to such dividends as the gross income of the corporation for such period derived from sources within the United States bears to its gross income from all sources; but dividends from a foreign corporation shall, for the purposes of section 131 (relating to foreign tax credit), be treated as income from sources without the United States to the extent exceeding the amount which is 100/85ths of the amount of the credit allowable under section 26 (b) in respect of such dividends;

(3) Personal services. Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States, but in the case of a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of ninety days during the taxable year, compensation received by such an individual (if such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate) for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States;

(4) Rentals and royalties. Rentals or royalties from property located in the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using in the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property; and

(5) Sale of real property. Gains, profits, and income from the sale of real property located in the United States.

(6) Sale of personal property. For gains, profits, and income from the sale of personal property, see subsection (e).

§ 39.119 (a)-1 Interest. (a) There shall be included in the gross income from sources within the United States, of nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations which are entitled to the benefits of section 251, all interest received or accrued, as the case may be, from the United States, any Territory, any political subdivision of a Territory, or the District of Columbia, and interest on bonds, notes, or other interest-bearing obligations of residents of the United States, whether corporate or otherwise, except:

(1) Interest paid on deposits with persons, including individuals, partnerships, or corporations, carrying on the banking business, to persons (nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251) not engaged in business within the United States;

(2) Interest received from a resident alien individual, a resident foreign corporation, or a domestic corporation, when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that less than 20 percent of the gross income of such resident payor or domestic corporation has been derived from sources within the United States (as determined under the provisions of section 119) for the 3-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of the payor which precedes the payment of such interest, or for such part of that period as may be applicable; and

(3) Income derived by a foreign central bank of issue from bankers' acceptances. A foreign central bank of issue means a bank which is by law or government sanction the principal authority (other than the government itself) issuing instruments intended to circulate as currency. Such banks are generally the custodians of the banking reserves of their countries.

(b) Any taxpayer who excludes from gross income from sources within the United States income of the type specified in paragraph (a) (1) (2) or (3) of this section shall file with his return a statement setting forth the amount of such income and such information as may be necessary to show that the income is of the type specified therein.

(c) Interest received from the United States by a foreign corporation or a nonresident alien on a refund of Federal income taxes is taxable as income from sources within the United States.

(d) As to the inclusion in gross income of items received in the United States even though representing income from sources without the United States, in the case of citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, see § 39.251 (b)-1.

§ 39.119 (a)-2 Dividends. (a) Gross income from sources within the United States includes dividends, as defined by section 115:

(1) From a domestic corporation other than one entitled to the benefits of section 251, and other than a corporation less than 20 percent of the gross income of which is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to have been derived from sources within the United States, as determined under the provisions of section 119, for the 3-year period ending with the close of the taxable year of such corporation preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) or

(2) From a foreign corporation unless less than 50 percent of its gross income for the 3-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends, or for such part of such period as it has been in existence, was derived from sources within the United States; but only in an amount which bears the same ratio to such dividends as the gross income of the corporation for such period derived from sources within the United States bears to its gross income from all sources. However, for the purpose of section 131, relating to credits for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States, dividends from a foreign corporation shall be treated as income from sources without the United States to the extent exceeding the amount which is 100/85ths of the amount of the credit, if any allowable under section 26 (b) in respect of such dividends.

(b) Dividends will be treated as income from sources within the United States (except, for the purpose of section 131, to the extent indicated in paragraph (a) (2) of this section) unless the taxpayer submits sufficient data to establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that they should be excluded from gross income under paragraph (a) (1) or (2) of this section. See also section 116 (f)

§ 39.119 (a)-3 Compensation for labor or personal services. Except as provided in section 119 (a) (3) gross income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services performed within the United States regardless of the residence of the payor, of the place in which the contract for service was made, or of the place of payment. If a specific amount is paid for labor or personal services performed in the United States, such amount (if income from sources within the United States) shall be included in the gross income. If no accurate allocation or segregation of compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States can be made, or when such labor or service is performed partly within and partly without the United States, the amount to be included in the gross income shall be determined by an apportionment on the time basis, i. e., there shall be included in the gross income an amount which bears the same relation to the total compensation as the number of days of performance of the labor or services within the United States bears to the total number of days of performance of labor or services for which the payment is made. Except as provided in section 119 (a) (3), wages received for services rendered inside the territorial limits of the United States and wages of an alien seaman earned on a coastwise vessel are to be regarded as from sources within the United States.

§ 39.119 (a)-4 Rentals and royalties. Gross income from sources within the United States includes rentals or royalties from property located within the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or the privilege of using in the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property. The income arising from the rental of property, whether tangible or intangible, located within the United States, or from the use of property whether tangible or intangible, within the United States, is from sources within the United States.

§ 39.119 (a)-5 Sale of real property. Gross income from sources within the United States includes gain, computed under the provisions of sections 111 to 113, inclusive, derived from the sale or other disposition of real property located in the United States. For the treatment of capital gains and losses, see section 117.

§ 39.119 (a)-6 Sale of personal property. Income derived from the purchase and sale of personal property shall be treated as derived entirely from the country in which sold, except that income derived from the purchase of personal property within a possession of the United States and its sale within the United States shall be treated as derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States. A possession of the United States constitutes a "country," within the meaning of this section, separate and distinct from the United States. Hence, income derived from the purchase of personal property within the United States and its sale within a possession of the United States shall be treated as derived entirely from within a possession of the United States. The word "sold" includes "exchanged." The "country in which sold" ordinarily means the place where the property is marketed. This section does not apply to income from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within and sold without the United States or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer without and sold within the United States. See § 39.119 (e)-1.

§ 39.119 (a)-7 Other income from sources within the United States. (a) Items of gross income other than those specified in section 119 (a) and (c) shall be allocated or apportioned to sources within or without the United States, as provided in section 119 (e)

(b) The income derived from the ownership or operation of any farm, mine, oil or gas well, other natural deposit, or timber, located within the United States, and from the sale by the producer of the products thereof within or without the United States, shall ordinarily be included in gross income from sources within the United States. If, however, it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that due to the peculiar conditions of production and sale in a specific case or for other reasons all of such gross income should not be allocated to sources within the United States, an apportionment thereof to sources within the United States and to sources without the United States shall be made as provided in § 39.119 (e)-1.

(c) Where items of gross income are separately allocated to sources within the United States, there shall be deducted therefrom, in computing net income, the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of other expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income.

SEC. 119. Income from sources within United States. * * *

(b) Net income from sources in United States. From the items of gross income specified in subsection (a) of this section there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States.

§ 39.119 (b)-1 Apportionment of deductions. (a) From the items specified in section 119 (a) as being derived specifically from sources within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any other expenses, losses, or deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States. The ratable part is based upon the ratio of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income.

Example. A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States whose taxable year is the calendar year derived gross income from all sources for 1952 of $180,000, one-fifth of which ($36,000) was from sources within the United States as follows:

Interest on bonds of a domestic corporation	$9,000
Dividends on stock of a domestic corporation	4,000
Royalty for the use of patents within the United States	12,000
Gain from sale of real property located within the United States	11,000

The remainder of the gross income was from sources without the United States, determined under § 39.119 (e)-1.

The expenses of the taxpayer for the year amounted to $78,000. Of these expenses the amount of $8,000 is properly allocated to income from sources within the United States and the amount of $40,000 is properly allocated to income from sources without the United States. The remainder of the expenses ($30,000) cannot be definitely allocated to any class of income. A ratable part thereof, based upon the relation of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income, shall be deducted in computing net income from sources within the United States. Thus, there are deducted from the $36,000 of gross income from sources within the United States expenses amounting to $14,000 (representing $8,000 properly apportioned to the income from sources within the United States and $6,000, a ratable part (one-fifth) of the expenses which could not be allocated to any item or class of gross income). The remainder ($22,000) is the net income from sources within the United States.

The deductions provided for in chapter 1 shall be allowed to nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, and to citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, only if and to the extent provided in sections 213, 215, 232, 233, and 251.

§ 39.119 (c) Statutory provisions; income from sources within the United States; gross income from sources without the United States.

SEC. 119. Income from sources within United States. * * *

(c) Gross income from sources without United States. The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources without the United States:

(1) Interest other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in subsection (a) (1) of this section;

(2) Dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in subsection (a) (2) of this section;

(3) Compensation for labor or personal services performed without the United States;

(4) Rentals or royalties from property located without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like properties; and

§ 39.119 (c)-1 Income from sources without the United States. Gross income from sources without the United States includes:

(a) Interest other than that specified in section 119 (a) (1) as being derived from sources within the United States;

(b) Dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 119 (a) (2)

(c) Compensation for labor or personal services performed without the United States (for the treatment of compensation for labor or personal services performed partly within the United States and partly without the United States, see § 39.119 (a)-3)

(d) Rentals or royalties derived from property without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States, patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, goodwill, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property (see § 39.119 (a)-4), and

(e) Gain derived from the sale of real property located without the United States (see sections 111 to 113, inclusive).

§ 39.119 (d)-(e) Statutory provisions; income from sources within the United States; net income from sources without the United States; income from sources partly within and partly without the United States.

SEC. 119. Income from sources within United States. * * *

(d) Net income from sources without United States. From the items of gross income specified in subsection (c) of this section there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto; and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be treated in full as net income from sources without the United States.

(e) Income from sources partly within and partly without United States. Items of gross income, expenses, losses and deductions, other than those specified in subsections (a) and (c) of this section, shall be allocated or apportioned to sources within or without the United States, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Where items of gross income are separately allocated to sources within the United States, there shall be deducted (for the purpose of computing the net income therefrom) the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of other expenses, losses or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States. In the case of gross income derived from sources partly within and partly without the United States, the net income may first be computed by deducting the expenses, losses, or other deductions apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which can not definitely be allocated to some items or class of gross income; and the portion of such net income attributable to sources within the United States may be determined by processes or formulas of general apportionment prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Gains, profits, and income from—

(1) Transportation or other services rendered partly within and partly without the United States, or

(2) From the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within and sold without the United States, or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer without and sold within the United States, shall be treated as derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States. Gains, profits and income derived from the purchase of personal property within and its sale without the United States or from the purchase of personal property without and its sale within the United States, shall be treated as derived entirely from sources within the country in which sold, except that gains, profits, and income derived from the purchase of personal property within a possession of the United States and its sale within the United States shall be treated as derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.

§ 39.119 (e)-1 Income from the sale of personal property derived from sources partly within and partly without the United States. (a) Items of gross income not allocated by section 119 (a) or section 119 (c) to sources within or without the United States shall (unless unmistakably from a source within or a source without the United States) be treated as derived from sources partly within and partly without the United States. Such income derived from the sale of personal property may be divided into two classes: Class A, income derived from sources partly within the United States and partly within a foreign country, and class B, income derived from sources partly within the United States and partly within a possession of the United States.

(b) Class A. The portion of class A income derived from the production and sale of personal property which is attributable to sources within the United States shall be determined according to the rules and cases set forth in this paragraph. Gross income derived from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within the United States and sold within a foreign country, or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within a foreign country and sold within the United States shall be treated as derived partly from sources within the United States and partly from sources within a foreign country under one of the cases set forth below. As used herein the word "produced" includes created, fabricated, manufactured, extracted, processed, cured, or aged.

Case A1. Where the manufacturer or producer regularly sells part of his output to wholly independent distributors or other selling concerns in such a way as to establish fairly an independent factory or production price—or shows to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such an independent factory or production price has been otherwise established—unaffected by considerations of tax liability, and the selling or distributing branch or department of the business is located in a different country from that in which the factory is located or the production carried on, the net income attributable to sources within the United States shall be computed by an accounting which treats the products as sold by the factory or productive department of the business to the distributing or selling department at the independent factory price so established. In all such cases the basis of the accounting shall be fully explained in a statement attached to the return.

Case A2. Where an independent factory or production price has not been established as provided under case A1, the net income shall first be computed by deducting from the gross income derived from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within the United States and sold within a foreign country or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within a foreign country and sold within the United States, the expenses, losses, or other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. Of the amount of net income so determined, one-half shall be apportioned in accordance with the value of the taxpayer's property within the United States and within the foreign country, the portion attributable to sources within the United States being determined by multiplying such one-half by a fraction the numerator of which consists of the value of the taxpayer's property within the United States, and the denominator of which consists of the value of the taxpayer's property both within the United States and within the foreign country. The remaining one-half of such net income shall be apportioned in accordance with the gross sales of the taxpayer within the United States and within the foreign country, the portion attributable to sources within the United States being determined by multiplying such one-half by a fraction the numerator of which consists of the taxpayer's gross sales for the taxable year or period within the United States, and the denominator of which consists of the taxpayer's gross sales for the taxable year or period both within the United States and within the foreign country. The term "gross sales of the taxpayer within the United States" means the gross sales made during the taxable year which were principally secured, negotiated, or effected by employees, agents, offices, or branches of the taxpayer's business resident or located in the United States. The term "gross sales," as used in case A2, refers only to the sales of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within the United States and sold within a foreign country or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within a foreign country and sold within the United States, and the term "property" includes only the property held or used to produce income which is derived from such sales. Such property should be taken at its actual value, which in the case of property valued or appraised for purposes of inventory, depreciation, depletion, or other purposes of taxation shall be the highest amount at which so valued or appraised, and which in other cases shall be deemed to be its book value in the absence of affirmative evidence showing such value to be greater or less than the actual value. The average value during the taxable year or period shall be employed. The average value of property as above prescribed at the beginning and end of the taxable year or period ordinarily may be used, unless by reason of material changes during the taxable year or period such average does not fairly represent the average for such year or period, in which event the average shall be determined upon a monthly or daily basis. Bills and accounts receivable shall (unless satisfactory reason for a different treatment is shown) be assigned or allocated to the United States when the debtor resides in the United States, unless the taxpayer has no office, branch, or agent in the United States.

Case A3. Application for permission to base the return upon the taxpayer's books of account will be considered by the Commissioner in the case of any taxpayer who, in good faith and unaffected by considerations of tax liability, regularly employs in his books of account a detailed allocation of receipts and expenditures which reflects more clearly than the processes or formulas herein prescribed the income derived from sources within the United States.

(c) Class B. The portion of class B income which is attributable to sources within the United States shall be determined according to the following rules and cases:

(1) Personal property produced and sold. Gross income derived from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within the United States and sold within a possession of the United States, or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within a possession of the United States and sold within the United States shall be treated as derived partly from sources within the United States and partly from sources within a possession of the United States under one of the cases set forth below. As used herein the word "produced" includes created, fabricated, manufactured, extracted, processed, cured, or aged.

Case B 1. Same as case A 1.

Case B 2. Where an independent factory or production price has not been established as provided under case A 1, the net income shall first be computed by deducting from the gross income derived from the sale of personal property produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within the United States and sold within a possession of the United States, or produced (in whole or in part) by the taxpayer within a possession of the United States and sold within the United States, the expenses, losses, or other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. Of the amount of net income so determined, one-half shall be apportioned in accordance with the value of the taxpayer's property within the United States and within the possession of the United States, the portion attributable to sources within the United States being determined by multiplying such one-half by a fraction the numerator of which consists of the value of the taxpayer's property within the United States, and the denominator of which consists of the value of the taxpayer's property both within the United States and within the possession of the United States. The remaining one-half of such net income shall be apportioned in accordance with the total business of the taxpayer within the United States and within the possession of the United States, the portion attributable to sources within the United States being determined by multiplying such one-half by a fraction the numerator of which consists of the amount of the taxpayer's business for the taxable year or period within the United States, and the denominator of which consists of the amount of the taxpayer's business for the taxable year or period both within the United States and within the possession of the United States. The "business of the taxpayer," as that term is used in case B 2, shall be measured by the amounts which the taxpayer paid out during the taxable year or period for wages, salaries, and other compensation of employees and for the purchase of goods, materials, and supplies consumed in the regular course of business, plus the amounts received during the taxable year or period from gross sales, such expenses, purchases, and gross sales being limited to those attributable to the production (in whole or in part) of personal property within the United States and its sale within a possession of the United States or to the production (in whole or in part) of personal property within a possession of the United States and its sale within the United States. The term "property," as used in case B 2, includes only the property held or used to produce income which is derived from such sales.

Case B3. Same as case A3.

(2) Personal property purchased and sold. Gross income derived from the purchase of personal property within a possession of the United States and its sale within the United States shall be treated as derived partly from sources within the United States and partly from sources within a possession of the United States under one of the following cases:

Case B4. The net income shall first be computed by deducting from such gross income the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The amount of net income so determined shall be apportioned in accordance with the total business of the taxpayer within the United States and within the possession of the United States, the portion attributable to sources within the United States being that percentage of such net income which the amount of the taxpayer's business for the taxable year or period within the United States bears to the amount of the taxpayer's business for the taxable year or period both within the United States and within the possession of the United States. The "business of the taxpayer," as that term is used in case B4, shall be measured by the amounts which the taxpayer paid out during the taxable year or period for wages, salaries and other compensation of employees and for the purchase of goods, materials, and supplies sold or consumed in the regular course of business, plus the amount received during the taxable year or period from gross sales, such expenses, purchases, and gross sales being limited to those attributable to the purchase of personal property within a possession of the United States and its sale within the United States.

Case B5. Same as case A3.

§ 39.119 (e)-2 Transportation service. (a) A foreign corporation carrying on the business of transportation service between points in the United States and points outside the United States derives income partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.

(b) The gross income from sources within the United States derived from services described in paragraph (a) of this section, shall be determined by taking such a portion of the total gross revenues therefrom as (1) the sum of the costs or expenses of such transportation business carried on by the taxpayer within the United States and a reasonable return upon the property used in its transportation business while within the United States bears to (2) the sum of the total costs or expenses of such transportation business carried on by the taxpayer and a reasonable return upon the total property used in such transportation business. Revenues from operations incidental to transportation services (such as the sale of money orders) shall be apportioned on the same basis as direct revenues from transportation services.

(c) In allocating the total costs or expenses incurred in a transportation business described in paragraph (a) of this section, costs or expenses incurred in connection with that part of the services which was wholly rendered in the United States should be assigned to the cost of transportation business within the United States. For example, expenses of loading and unloading in the United States, rentals, office expenses, salaries, and wages wholly incurred for services rendered to the taxpayer in the United States belong to this class. Costs and expenses incurred in connection with services rendered partly within and partly without the United States may be prorated on a reasonable basis between such services. For example, ship wages, charter money, insurance, and supplies chargeable to voyage expenses should ordinarily be prorated for each voyage on the basis of the proportion which the number of days the ship was within the territorial limits of the United States bears to the total number of days on the voyage, and fuel consumed on each voyage may be prorated on the basis of the proportion which the number of miles sailed within the territorial limits of the United States bears to the total number of miles sailed on the voyage. Income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes should not be regarded as costs or expenses for the purpose of determining the proportion of gross income from sources within the United States; and for such purpose, interest and other expenses for the use of borrowed capital should not be taken into the cost of services rendered, for the reason that the return upon the property used measures the extent to which such borrowed capital is the source of the income. For other expenses entering into the cost of services, only such expenses as are allowable deductions under the Internal Revenue Code should be taken.

(d) The value of the property used should be determined upon the basis of cost less depreciation. Eight percent may ordinarily be taken as a reasonable rate of return to apply to such property. The property taken should be the average property employed in the transportation service between points in the United States and points outside the United States during the taxable year. Current assets should be decreased by current liabilities and allocated to services between the United States and foreign countries and to other services. The part allocated to services between the United States and foreign countries should be based on the proportion which the gross receipts from such services bear to the gross receipts from all services. The amount so allocated to services between the United States and foreign countries should be further allocated to services rendered within the United States and to services rendered without the United States. The portion allocable to services rendered within the United States should be based on the proportion which the expenses incurred within the territorial limits of the United States bear to the total expenses incurred in services between the United States and foreign countries. For ships the average should be determined upon a daily basis for each ship and the amount to be apportioned for each ship as assets employed within the United States should be computed upon the proportion which the number of days the ship was within the territorial limits of the United States bears to the total number of days the ship was in service during the taxable period. For other assets employed in the transportation business, the average of the assets at the beginning and end of the taxable period ordinarily may be taken, but if the average so obtained does not, by reason of material changes during the taxable year, fairly represent the average for such year either for the assets employed in the transportation business in the United States or in total, the average must be determined upon a monthly or daily basis.

(e) In computing net income from sources within the United States there shall be allowed as deductions from the gross income as determined in accordance with paragraph (b) of this section, (1) the expenses of the transportation business carried on within the United States as determined under paragraph (b) of this section, and (2) the expenses determined in accordance with paragraphs (f) and (g) of this section.

(f) Interest and income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes should be excluded from the apportionment process, as explained in paragraph (b) of this section; but for the purpose of computing net income there may be deducted from the gross income from sources within the United States, after the amount of such gross income has been determined, a ratable part (1) of all interest (deductible under section 23 (b)) and (2) of all income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes (deductible under section 23 (c) and (d)) paid or accrued in respect of the business of transportation service between points in the United States and points outside the United States. Such ratable part should ordinarily be based upon the ratio of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income from such transportation service.

(g) If a foreign corporation subject to this section is also engaged in a business other than that of providing transportation service between points in the United States and points outside the United States, the costs and expenses (including taxes) properly apportioned or allocated to such other business should be excluded both from the deductions and from the apportionment process prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section; but, for the purpose of determining net income, a ratable part of any general expenses, losses, or deductions, which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income, may be deducted from the gross income from sources within the United States after the amount of such gross income has been determined. Such ratable part should ordinarily be based upon the ratio of gross income from sources within the United States to the total gross income.

(h) Application for permission to base the return upon the taxpayer's books of account will be considered by the Commissioner in the case of any taxpayer subject to this section, who, in good faith and unaffected by considerations of tax liability, regularly employs in his books of account a detailed allocation of receipts and expenditures which reflects more clearly than the process prescribed in paragraphs (b) to (g), inclusive, of this section the income derived from sources within the United States.

§ 39.119 (e)-3 Telegraph and cable service—(a) In general. A foreign corporation carrying on the business of transmission of telegraph or cable messages between points in the United States and points outside the United States derives income partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.

(b) Gross income. The gross income from sources within the United States derived from services described in paragraph (a) of this section, shall be determined by adding (1) its gross revenues derived from messages originating in the United States and (2) amounts collected abroad on collect messages originating in the United States and deducting from such sum amounts paid or accrued for transmission of messages beyond the company's own circuit. Amounts received by the company in the United States with respect to collect messages originating without the United States shall be excluded from gross income.

(c) Net income. In computing net income from sources within the United States there shall be allowed as deductions from gross income determined in accordance with paragraph (b) of this section, (1) all expenses incurred in the United States (not including any general overhead expenses) incident to the carrying on of the business in the United States, (2) all direct expenses incurred abroad in the transmission of messages originating in the United States (not including any general overhead expenses or maintenance, repairs, and depreciation of cables and not including any amount already deducted in computing gross income) (3) depreciation of property (other than cables) located in the United States and used in the trade or business therein, and (4) a proportionate part of the general overhead expenses (not including any items incurred abroad corresponding to those enumerated in clauses (1), (2), and (3) of this sentence) and of maintenance, repairs, and depreciation of cables of the entire cable system of the enterprise based on the ratio which the number of words originating in the United States bears to the total words transmitted by the enterprise.

§ 39.119 (e)-4 Computation of income. If a taxpayer has gross income from sources within or without the United States as defined by section 119 (a) or (c) together with gross income derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States, the amounts thereof, together with the expenses and investment applicable thereto, shall be segregated, and the net income from sources within the United States shall be separately computed therefrom.

SEC. 119. Income from sources within United States. * * *

(f) Definitions. As used in this section the words "sale" or "sold" include "exchange" or "exchanged" and the word "produced" includes "created," "fabricated," "manufactured," "extracted," "processed," "cured," or "aged."

Sec. 120. Unlimited deduction for charitable and other contributions. In the case of an individual if in the taxable year and in each of the ten preceding taxable years the amount of the contributions or gifts described in section 23 (o) (or corresponding provisions of prior revenue Acts) plus the amount of income (determined without regard to subchapter E, relating to tax on self-employment income), war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid during such year in respect of such year or preceding taxable years, exceeds 90 per centum of the taxpayer's net income for each such year, as computed without the benefit of the applicable subsection, then the 20 per centum limit imposed by section 23 (o) shall not be applicable.

[Sec. 120 as amended by sec. 208 (d) (6), Social Security Act Amendments 1950; Pub. Law 918 (81st Cong.) sec. 4 (b), Pub. Law 465 (82nd Cong.)]

§ 39.120-1 Unlimited deduction for charitable and other contributions. (a) Under the circumstances specified in section 120, the 20 percent limitation imposed by section 23 (o) on the deduction for charitable and other contributions is not applicable.

(b) The following rules shall apply with respect to the taxes included in determining for any taxable year whether the amount of the gifts, contributions, and taxes referred to in section 120 exceeds 90 percent of the net income computed without the benefit of any deduction for gifts or contributions:

(1) In the case of a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1943, there shall be included income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid during such taxable year in respect of preceding taxable years.

(2) In the case of a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1942, there shall be included, in addition to the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid during such taxable year in respect of preceding taxable years, the amount of income tax paid during such taxable year in respect of such taxable year. For example, there shall be included the amount paid as estimated tax during the taxable year, to the extent such amount does not exceed the tax for such taxable year.

(3) In the case of a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950, the amount of income tax paid during the taxable year shall be determined without regard to any payment of tax imposed under subchapter E of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code, which subchapter relates to the tax on self-employment income.

(c) In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return for any taxable year, the 20 percent limitation imposed by section 23 (o) on the deduction for charitable and other contributions shall not be applicable if in the taxable year and in each of the ten preceding taxable years the amount of the contributions or gifts described in section 23 (o) made by the husband and wife together during each such year plus the amount of the income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid by the husband and wife together during each such year (determined under the rules of paragraph (b) of this section) exceeds 90 percent of the net income of the husband and wife together for each such year, as computed without the benefit of any deduction for contributions or gifts.

Sec. 121. Deduction of dividends paid on certain preferred stock of certain corporations. In computing the net income of any national banking association, or of any bank or trust company organized under the laws of any State, Territory, possession of the United States, or the Canal Zone, or of any other banking corporation engaged in the business of industrial banking and under the supervision of a State banking department or of the Comptroller of the Currency, or of any incorporated domestic insurance company, there shall be allowed as a deduction from gross income, in addition to deductions otherwise provided for in this chapter, any dividend (not including any distribution in liquidation) paid, within the taxable year, to the United States or to any instrumentality thereof exempt from Federal income taxes, on the preferred stock of the corporation owned by the United States or such instrumentality. The amount allowable as a deduction under this section shall be deducted from the basic surtax credit otherwise computed under section 27 (b).

Sec. 122. Net operating loss deduction—(a) Definition of net operating loss. As used in this section, the term "net operating loss" means the excess of the deductions allowed by this chapter over the gross income, with the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in subsection (d).

(b) Amount of carry-back and carry-over—(1) Net operating loss carry-back—(A) Loss for taxable year beginning before 1950. * * *

(B) Loss for taxable year beginning after 1949. If for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1949, the taxpayer has a net operating loss, such net operating loss shall be a net operating loss carry-back for the preceding taxable year.

(2) Net operating loss carry-over—(A) Loss for taxable year beginning before 1948. * * *

(B) Loss for taxable year beginning after 1949. If for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1949, the taxpayer has a net operating loss, such net operating loss shall be a net operating loss carry-over for each of the five succeeding taxable years, except that the carry-over in the case of each such succeeding taxable year (other than the first succeeding taxable year) shall be the excess, if any, of the amount of such net operating loss over the sum of the net income for each of the intervening years computed—

(i) With the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in subsection (d) (1), (2), (4), and (6), and

(ii) By determining the net operating loss deduction for each intervening taxable year, without regard to such net operating loss or to the net operating loss for any succeeding taxable year and without regard to any reduction specified in subsection (c).

For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the net operating loss for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1949, shall be reduced by the amount, if any, of the net income for the preceding taxable year computed—

(i) With the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in subsection (d) (1), (2), (4), and (6), and

(ii) By determining the net operating loss deduction for such preceding taxable year without regard to such net operating loss and without regard to any reduction specified in subsection (c).

(C) Loss for taxable year beginning after December 31, 1947 and before January 1, 1950. If for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1947, and before January 1, 1950, the taxpayer has a net operating loss, such net operating loss shall be a net operating loss carry-over for each of the three succeeding taxable years, except that the carry-over in the case of each such succeeding taxable year (other than the first succeeding taxable year) shall be the excess, if any, of the amount of such net operating loss over the sum of the net income for each of the intervening years computed—

(i) With the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in subsection (d) (1), (2), (4), and (6), and

(ii) By determining the net operating loss deduction for each intervening taxable year without regard to such net operating loss or to the net operating loss for any succeeding taxable year and without regard to any reduction specified in subsection (c).

For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the net operating loss for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1947, and before January 1, 1950, shall be reduced by the sum of the net income for each of the two preceding taxable years computed—

(iii) With the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in subsection (d) (1), (2), (4), and (6), and

(iv) By determining the net operating loss deduction without regard to such net operating loss or to the net operating loss for the succeeding taxable year, and without regard to any reduction specified in subsection (c).

(D) Loss for taxable year beginning after December 31, 1946, and before January 1, 1948, in the case of a corporation which commenced business after December 31, 1945. * * *

(c) Amount of net operating loss deduction. The amount of the net operating loss deduction shall be the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and of the net operating loss carry-backs to the taxable year reduced by the amount, if any, by which the net income (computed with the exceptions and limitations provided in subsection (d) (1), (2), (3), and (4)) exceeds, in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the net income (computed without such deduction), or, in the case of a corporation, the normal-tax net income (computed without such deduction and without the credits provided in section 26 (h) and (i));

(d) Exceptions, additions, and limitations. The exceptions, additions, and limitations referred to in subsections (a), (b), and (c) shall be as follows:

(1) The deduction for depletion shall not exceed the amount which would be allowable if computed without reference to discovery value or to percentage depletion under section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4);

(2) There shall be included in computing gross income the amount of interest received which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter, decreased by the amount of interest paid or accrued which is not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (b), relating to interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry certain tax-exempt obligations;

(3) No net operating loss deduction shall be allowed;

(4) The amount deductible on account of losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall not exceed the amount includible on account of gains from such sales or exchanges. The deduction provided in section 23 (ee) shall not be allowed.

(5) Deductions otherwise allowed by law not attributable to the operation of a trade or business regularly carried on by the taxpayer shall (in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation) be allowed only to the extent of the amount of the gross income not derived from such trade or business. For the purposes of this paragraph deductions and gross income shall be computed with the exceptions and limitations specified in paragraphs (1) to (4) of this subsection. This paragraph shall not apply with respect to deductions allowable for losses sustained after December 31, 1950, in respect of property, if the losses arise from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft.

§ 39.122-1 Net operating loss deduction—(a) General. (1) Section 122 provides the rules for the computation of the net operating loss deduction allowed by section 23 (s). The net operating loss deduction is the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and carry-backs to the taxable year, reduced by certain adjustments to prevent the deduction of losses absorbed by income not taxed.

(2) Section 122 provides that the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and carry-backs to a taxable year shall be the basis of the net operating loss deduction. See § 39.122-4 for the taxable years from which a net operating loss may be carried over or carried back to the current taxable year. The amount of the net operating loss which may be carried back or carried over to any taxable year is the net operating loss to the extent it was not absorbed by the net income for the other taxable years, preceding such taxable year, to which it was carried back or carried over. If the net operating losses for several taxable years are carried back or carried over to one taxable year, they are considered to be applied in reduction of the net income for such taxable year in the order of the taxable years from which such losses are carried over or carried back, beginning with the loss for the earliest taxable year.

(3) A fractional part of a year which is a taxable year under section 48 (a) is a preceding or a succeeding taxable year for the purpose of determining under section 122 the first, second, etc., preceding or succeeding taxable year.

(4) Every taxpayer claiming a net operating loss deduction for any taxable year shall file with his return for such year a concise statement setting forth the amount of the net operating loss deduction claimed and all material and pertinent facts relative thereto, including a detailed schedule showing the computation of the net operating loss deduction.

(b) Steps in computation of net operating loss deduction. There are three steps in the ascertainment of the net operating loss deduction. The first step is the computation of the net operating loss, if any, for any preceding or succeeding taxable year from which a net operating loss may be carried over or carried back to the current taxable year. The second is the computation of the net operating loss carry-overs to the taxable year from such preceding taxable years and the computation of the net operating loss carry-back to the taxable year from the first succeeding taxable year. The third is the conversion of the aggregate of such net operating loss carry-overs and carry-back into the net operating loss deduction.

(c) Ascertainment of deduction dependent upon net operating loss carry-back. If the taxpayer is entitled in computing his net operating loss deduction to a carry-back which he is not able to ascertain at the time his return is due, he shall compute the net operating loss deduction on the return without regard to such net operating loss carry-back. When the taxpayer ascertains the net operating loss carry-back, he may within the applicable period of limitations file a claim for credit or refund of the overpayment, if any, resulting from the failure to compute the net operating loss deduction for the taxable year with the inclusion of such carry-back. Under the provisions of section 3771 (e), no interest is allowed with respect to any such overpayment for the period before the filing of the claim for credit or refund of such overpayment or before the filing of a petition with The Tax Court of the United States asserting such overpayment, whichever is earlier.

§ 39.122-2 Computation of net operating loss in case of corporation. (a) A net operating loss is sustained by a corporation in any taxable year if and to the extent that, for such year, there is an excess of deductions allowed by chapter 1 over gross income, both computed with the following exceptions, additions, and limitations:

(1) The deduction for depletion shall not exceed the amount which would be allowable if computed without reference to discovery value or to percentage depletion under section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4).

(2) There shall be included in computing gross income the amount of interest received which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1, decreased by the amount of interest paid or accrued which is not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (b), relating to interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry certain tax-exempt obligations; and

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. For the year 1952 the X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has gross income as defined in section 22 of $400,000 and deductions allowed by section 23 of $600,000, exclusive of any net operating loss deduction. The X Corporation deducted $75,000 for depletion on a percentage basis. If depletion had been computed without reference to percentage depletion, the amount of such deduction would have been $5,000. For 1952 the X Corporation also had $35,000 of wholly tax-exempt interest, and paid $15,000 in interest on indebtedness incurred to carry the obligations from which such tax-exempt interest was derived. On the basis of these facts the X Corporation has a net operating loss for the year 1952 of $110,000, computed as follows:

(1) Deductions for 1952		$600,000
(2) Less: Excess of percentage depletion over cost ($75,000 minus $5,000)		70,000
(3) Deductions adjusted as required by section 122 (d) (item (1) minus item (2))		530,000
(4) Gross income for 1952	$400,000
(5) Plus tax-exempt interest minus interest paid ($35,000 minus $15,000)	20,000
(6) Gross income adjusted as required by section 122 (d) (item (4) plus item (5))		420,000
(7) Net operating loss for 1952 (item (3) minus item (6))		110,000

§ 39.122-3 Computation of net operating loss in case of a taxpayer other than a corporation—(a) In General. A net operating loss is sustained by a taxpayer other than a corporation in any taxable year if and to the extent that, for such year, there is an excess of deductions allowed by chapter 1 over gross income, both computed with the following exceptions, additions, and limitations:

(1) The deduction for depletion shall not exceed the amount which would be allowable if computed without reference to discovery value or to percentage depletion under section 114 (b) (2) (3) or (4)

(2) There shall be included in computing gross income the amount of interest received which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1, decreased by the amount of interest paid or accrued which is not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (b) relating to interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry certain tax-exempt obligations;

(3) No net operating loss deduction shall be allowed;

(4) (i) The deduction provided in sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b) shall not be allowed;

(ii) The amount deductible on account of business capital losses shall not exceed the amount includible on account of business capital gains, plus a portion of any nonbusiness capital gains, computed in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section;

(iii) The amount deductible on account of nonbusiness capital losses shall not exceed the amount includible on account of nonbusiness capital gains; and

(5) Ordinary nonbusiness deductions (i. e., exclusive of capital losses) shall be allowed only to the extent of the amount of ordinary nonbusiness gross income

(i. e., exclusive of capital gains) plus the excess, if any of nonbusiness capital gains over nonbusiness capital losses. For the purpose of computing the net operating loss deduction, any deduction allowable for a loss sustained after December 31, 1950, in respect of property, if the loss arises from fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty or from theft, shall not be considered to be an ordinary nonbusiness deduction but shall be treated as a deduction attributable to the operation of a trade or business regularly carried on by the taxpayer.

(b) Treatment of net capital loss carry-overs. (1) Because of the distinction between business and nonbusiness capital gains and losses, a taxpayer who has a net capital loss carry-over from preceding taxable years, includible among the short-term capital losses for the current taxable year by virtue of section 117 (e) must determine how much of such net capital loss carry-over is a business capital loss and how much is a nonbusiness capital loss. In order to make this determination, the taxpayer must first ascertain what proportion of the net capital losses for such preceding taxable years was attributable to an excess of business capital losses over business capital gains for such years, and what proportion was attributable to an excess of nonbusiness capital losses over nonbusiness capital gains. The same proportion of the net capital loss carry-over from any such preceding taxable years shall be treated as a business capital loss and a nonbusiness capital loss, respectively.

(2) This rule may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (i) A, an individual, has $5,000 ordinary net income for the calendar year 1952 and also has the following capital gains and losses for such year: Business capital gains of $2,000; business capital losses of $3,200; nonbusiness capital gains of $1,000; and nonbusiness capital losses of $1,200.

(ii) A's net capital loss for the taxable year 1952 is $400, computed as follows:

Total capital losses	$4,400
Total capital gains	3,000
Excess of total capital losses over total capital gains	1,400
Less: $1,000 of ordinary net income	1,000
Net capital loss for 1952	400

(iii) A's total capital losses for 1952 exceeded his total capital gains for such year by $1,400 ($4,400 minus $3,000). Since A's business capital losses for 1952 ($3,200) exceeded his business capital gains ($2,000) for such year by $1,200 6/7ths (1,200/1,400) of A's net capital loss for 1952 was attributable to an excess of his business capital losses over his business capital gains for such year. Similarly, 1/7th of the net capital loss is attributable to the excess of nonbusiness capital losses over nonbusiness capital gains. Since the net capital loss carry-over from 1952 to 1953 is $400, 6/7ths of $400, or $342.86, will be treated as a business capital loss in 1953, and 1/7th of $400, or $57.14, as a nonbusiness capital loss.

(c) Determination of portion of nonbusiness capital gains available for the deduction of business capital losses. (1) In the computation of a net operating loss a taxpayer other than a corporation must use his nonbusiness capital gains for the deduction of his nonbusiness capital losses. See paragraph (a) (4) (iii) of this section. Any amounts not necessary for this purpose shall then be used for the deduction of any excess of ordinary nonbusiness deductions over ordinary nonbusiness gross income. See paragraph (a) (5) of this section. The remainders, computed by applying the excess ordinary nonbusiness deductions against the excess capital gains, shall be treated as capital gains and may be used for the purpose of determining the deductibility of business capital losses under paragraph (a) (4) (ii) of this section.

(2) This principle may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (i) A, an individual, has a total nonbusiness gross income of $20,500, computed as follows:

Ordinary gross income	$7,500
Capital gains	13,000
Total gross income	20,500

(ii) He also has total nonbusiness deductions of $16,000, computed as follows:

Ordinary deductions	$9,000
Capital losses	7,000
Total deductions	16,000

(iii) In order to determine the portion of the nonbusiness capital gains available for the deduction of business capital losses there must first be deducted the amounts of the nonbusiness capital losses. It is then found that the excess capital gains amount to $6,000 ($13,000 minus $7,000). Since the ordinary nonbusiness deductions exceed the ordinary nonbusiness gross income by $1,500 ($9,000 minus $7,500), $1,500 of the $6,000 excess capital gains must be used to permit the allowance of such $1,500 under paragraph (a) (5) of this section. Therefore, $1,500 excess of ordinary deductions over ordinary gross income will be deducted from the $6,000 of excess capital gains, leaving $4,500 to be added to the business capital gains for the purpose of determining the deductibility of any business capital loss.

(d) Illustration of computation of net operating loss by a taxpayer other than a corporation. (1) A, an individual, who makes his income tax returns on a calendar year basis, has for 1952 gross income of $483,000 and deductions (exclusive of any deductions attributable to capital losses and exclusive of the net operating loss deduction) of $540,000. Included in gross income are business capital gains of $50,000 and nonbusiness income of $10,000. Included among the deductions are deductions of $12,000 incurred in transactions not connected with a trade or business. A has a business capital loss of $60,000 in 1952. A also received $25,000 of interest on State bonds in 1952 which is wholly exempt from Federal income tax. A has no other items of income or deductions to which section 122 (d) is applicable.

(2) On the basis of these facts A has a net operating loss for 1952 of $80,000, computed as follows:

(i) Deductions for 1952 (exclusive of any deductions attributable to capital losses and exclusive of the net operating loss deduction)		$540,000
(ii) Plus amount of capital loss ($60,000) to extent such amount does not exceed capital gains ($50,000)		50,000
(iii) Sum of item (i) and item (ii)		590,000
(iv) Less excess of nonbusiness deductions over nonbusiness gross income ($12,000 minus $10,000)		2,000
(v) Deductions for 1952 adjusted as required by section 122 (d) (item (iii) minus item (iv))		588,000
(vi) Gross income for 1952	$483,000
(vii) Plus tax-exempt interest	25,000
(viii) Gross income for 1952 adjusted as required by section 122 (d) (item (vi) plus item (vii))		508,000
(ix) Net operating loss for 1952 (item (v) minus item (viii))		80,000

(3) For treatment of depletion deductions, see example in § 39.122-2. For treatment of net capital loss carry-over, nonbusiness capital gains and losses, and the portion of the nonbusiness capital gains which may be used to permit the deduction of business capital losses, see examples in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section.

(e) Joint return by husband and wife. In the case of a husband and wife, the joint net operating loss for any taxable year for which a joint return is filed is to be computed upon the basis of the combined income and deductions of both spouses, and the exceptions, additions, and limitations prescribed by section 122 (d) are to be computed as if the combined income and deductions of both spouses were the income and deductions of one individual.

§ 39.122-4 Computation of net operating loss carry-overs and net operating loss carry-back—(a) In general. (1) The aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and the net operating loss carry-back to a taxable year shall be the basis of the net operating loss deduction. In order to compute such deduction the taxpayer must first determine the part of any net operating losses for any preceding or succeeding taxable years which are carry-overs or a carry-back to the current taxable year.

(2) The number of taxable years to which a net operating loss may be carried back and carried over are as follows:

Net operating loss for a taxable year beginning:		May be carried back to the following preceding taxable years	May be carried over to the following succeeding taxable years
After	Before
Dec. 31, 1948	Jan. 1, 1950	2	3
Dec. 31, 1949		1	5

(3) The amount which is carried back or carried over to any taxable year is the net operating loss to the extent it was not absorbed in the computation of the net income for other taxable years, preceding such taxable year, to which it was carried back or carried over. For the purpose of determining the net income for a taxable year which so absorbs the net operating loss that is carried back or carried over, the various net operating loss carry-overs and carry-backs to such taxable year are considered to be applied in reduction of the net income for such taxable year in the order of the taxable years from which such losses are carried over or carried back, beginning with the loss for the earliest taxable year.

(b) Portion of net operating loss which is a carry-over or a carry-back to the current taxable year. A net operating loss must first be carried to the earliest of the several taxable years to which such loss is allowable as a carry-back or a carry-over, and is then to be carried to the next earliest of such several taxable years, etc. See paragraph (a) of this section for the taxable years to which a net operating loss incurred in any particular taxable year may be carried back or carried over. The entire net operating loss may be carried to such earliest year. The portion of the loss which may be carried to any taxable year subsequent to such earliest year is the excess of such net operating loss over the aggregate of the net income, if any (computed as provided in paragraph (c) of this section) for those of such several taxable years which precede the taxable year to which such net operating loss is allowable as a carry-back or a carry-over.

Example. A taxpayer on the calendar year basis has a net operating loss for 1952. The entire net operating loss for 1952 may be carried back to 1951. The amount of the carry-over to 1953 is the excess of the 1952 loss over the net income (computed as provided in paragraph (c) of this section) for 1951. Similarly, the amount of the carry-over to 1954, 1955, 1956, and 1957 is the excess of the 1952 loss over the aggregate of the net income (computed as provided in paragraph (c) of this section) for 1951 and 1953, for 1951, 1953 and 1954, for 1951, 1953, 1954, and 1955, and for 1951, 1953, 1954, 1955, and 1956, respectively.

(c) Computation of net income which is subtracted from net operating loss to determine carry-back or carry-over. The net income for any taxable year which is subtracted from the net operating loss for another taxable year to determine the portion of such net operating loss which is a carry-back or carry-over to a particular taxable year as provided in paragraph (b) of this section is computed with the following adjustments:

(1) The net operating loss deduction for such taxable year is computed (i) by taking into account only such net operating losses otherwise allowable as carry-overs or a carry-back to such taxable year as were sustained in taxable years preceding the taxable year in which the taxpayer sustained the net operating loss from which the net income is to be deducted, and (ii) by disregarding the adjustment provided in section 122 (c) and § 39.122-5 (relating to the conversion of the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and carry-back to the taxable year into the net operating loss deduction).

Example. The taxpayer files its income tax returns on the basis of the calendar year. In computing the net operating loss deduction for 1952, the taxpayer has a carry-over from 1950 of $9,000, a carry-over from 1951 of $6,000, and a carry-back from 1953 of $18,000, or an aggregate of $33,000 in carry-overs and a carry-back which is the basis for the deduction. The adjustment under section 122 (c) for the purpose of computing the net operating loss deduction for 1952 is $2,500. In computing the net income for 1952 which is deducted from the net operating loss for 1953 for the purpose of determining the amount of such loss which may be carried over to subsequent taxable years, the net operating loss deduction for 1952 is $15,000, that is, the aggregate of the $9,000 carry-over from 1950 and the $6,000 carry-over from 1951. In computing such net operating loss deduction for such purpose, the $18,000 carry-back from 1953 and the adjustment required by section 122 (c) are each disregarded.

(2) In the case of a corporation, the net income shall be computed in accordance with the exceptions, additions, and limitations applicable in the computation of a net operating loss (see § 39.122-2), except that the net operating loss deduction shall be allowed to the extent provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph.

(3) In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the net income and adjusted gross income shall be computed in accordance with the exceptions, additions, and limitations specified in subparagraphs (1), (2), (3) and (4) (i) of paragraph (a) of § 39.122-3, except that the net operating loss deduction shall be allowed to the extent provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph. In lieu of the last exceptions specified in subparagraphs (4) (ii) (4) (iii) and (5) of paragraph (a) of § 39.122-3, the taxpayer is required only to restrict the amount of his deduction for capital losses to the amount of his capital gains. The ordinary non-business deductions are allowed in full if otherwise allowable by law. The exceptions and limitations dependent upon the distinction between business and non-business items of gross income and deductions are not applicable in the computation of the net income to be subtracted in computing carry-backs and carry-overs.

(4) Any deduction which is limited in amount to a percentage of the taxpayer's net income or adjusted gross income shall be recomputed upon the basis of the net income or adjusted gross income, as the case may be, determined with the adjustments prescribed in subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) of this paragraph.

(5) The net income, as adjusted, shall in no case be considered less than zero.

(d) Illustration of computation of net operating loss carry-back and carry-overs. The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The taxpayer is a corporation making its income tax returns on the calendar year basis. It had no net operating loss in 1949, 1950, or 1951, or in 1962. Its net income, computed without any net operating loss deduction (it being assumed that none of the other adjustments provided in paragraph (c) of this section is applicable), was $20,000 in 1952, $15,000 in 1954, $30,000 in 1955, $20,000 in 1957, $10,000 in 1958, $30,000 in 1959, $35,000 in 1960, and $75,000 in 1961. It sustained net operating losses of $75,000 in 1953 and $150,000 in 1956. It is assumed for the purposes of this example that the application of § 39.122-5 does not cause any reduction of the amount of the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and the net operating loss carry-back to any taxable year, so that such aggregate is the net operating loss deduction for such taxable year.

(1) The portions of the $75,000 net operating loss for 1953 which may be used as a carry-back to 1952 and as carry-overs to 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, and 1958 are computed as follows:

(i) For 1952, the carry-back is $75,000, that is, the amount of the net operating loss.

(ii) For 1954, the carry-over is $55,000, that is, the excess of the $75,000 net operating loss over the $20,000 net income for 1952 (such net income being determined without any net operating loss deduction since there is no carry-over to 1952 from 1949, 1950, or 1951, and the carry-back from 1953 is not taken into account).

(iii) For 1955, the carry-over is $40,000, that is, the excess of the $75,000 net operating loss over $35,000, the sum of the $20,000 net income for 1952 (computed without the deduction of the carry-back from 1953) and the $15,000 net income for 1954 (computed without the deduction of the carry-over from 1953).

(iv) For 1956, the carry-over is $10,000, that is, the excess of the $75,000 net operating loss over $65,000, the sum of the $20,000 net income for 1952 (computed without the deduction of the carry-back from 1953), the $15,000 net income for 1954 (computed without the deduction of the carry-over from 1953), and the $30,000 net income for 1955 (computed without the deduction of the carry-over from 1953 or the carry-back from 1956).

(v) For 1957, the carry-over is $10,000, that is, the excess of the $75,000 net operating loss over $65,000, the sum of the $20,000 net income for 1952 (computed without the deduction of the carry-back from 1953), the $15,000 net income for 1954 (computed without the deduction of the carry-over from 1953), the $30,000 net income for 1955 (computed without the deduction of the carry-over from 1953 or the carry-back from 1956), and the $0 net income for 1956 (a year in which a net operating loss was sustained).

(vi) For 1958, there is no carry-over of the net operating loss for 1953 since such loss does not exceed $85,000, the sum of the net incomes for the first taxable year preceding 1953 and the first four taxable years following 1953 computed as provided in paragraph (c) of this section (the $20,000 net income for 1952, the $15,000 net income for 1954, the $30,000 net income for 1955, and the $20,000 net income for 1957, there being no net operating loss deduction for any of such taxable years since the carry-back and carry-overs from 1953, the year of the net operating loss, and from 1956, a year subsequent to the year of the net operating loss, are not taken into account).

(2) The portions of the $150,000 net operating loss for 1956 which may be used as a carry-back to 1955 and as carry-overs to 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, and 1961 are computed as follows:

(i) For 1955, the carry-back is $150,000, that is, the amount of the net operating loss.

(ii) For 1957, the carry-over is $150,000, that is, the excess of the $150,000 net operating loss over the $0 net income for 1955 (such net income for 1955 being computed as the $30,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $40,000 from 1953).

(iii) For 1958, the carry-over is $140,000, that is, the excess of the $150,000 net operating loss over $10,000, the sum of the $0 net income for 1955 (such net income for 1955 being computed as the $30,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $40,000 from 1953) and the $10,000 net income for 1957 (such net income for 1957 being computed as the $20,000 income reduced by the $10,000 carry-over from 1953, the $150,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1957 not being taken into account).

(iv) For 1959, the carry-over is $130,000, that is, the excess of the $150,000 net operating loss over $20,000, the sum of the $0 net income for 1955 (such net income for 1955 being computed as the $30,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $40,000 from 1953), the $10,000 net income for 1957 (such net income for 1957 being computed as the $20,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $10,000 from 1953, the $150,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1957 not being taken into account), and the $10,000 net income for 1958 (the $140,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1958 not being taken into account).

(v) For 1960, the carry-over is $100,000, that is, the excess of the $150,000 net operating loss over $50,000, the sum of the $0 net income for 1955 (such net income for 1955 being computed as the $30,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $40,000 from 1953), the $10,000 net income for 1957 (such net income for 1957 being computed as the $20,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $10,000 from 1953, the $150,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1957 not being taken into account), the $10,000 net income for 1958 (the $140,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1958 not being taken into account), and the $30,000 net income for 1959 (the $130,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1959 not being taken into account).

(vi) For 1961, the carry-over is $65,000, that is, the excess of the $150,000 net operating loss over $85,000, the sum of the $0 net income for 1955 (such net income for 1955 being computed as the $30,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $40,000 from 1953), the $10,000 net income for 1957 (such net income for 1957 being computed as the $20,000 income reduced by the carry-over of $10,000 from 1953, the $150,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1957 not being taken into account), the $10,000 net income for 1958 (the $140,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1958 not being taken into account), the $30,000 net income for 1959 (the $130,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1959 not being taken into account), and the $35,000 net income for 1960 (the $100,000 carry-over from 1956 to 1960 not being taken into account).

(3) (i) For 1952, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $75,000, that is, the carry-back from 1953.

(ii) For 1954, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $55,000, that is, the carry-over from 1953.

(iii) For 1955, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $190,000, that is, the aggregate of the $40,000 carry-over from 1953 and the $150,000 carry-back from 1956.

(iv) For 1957, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $160,000, that is, the aggregate of the carry-over of $10,000 from 1953 and of the carry-over of $150,000 from 1956.

(v) For 1958, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $140,000, that is, the carry-over from 1956.

(vi) For 1959, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $130,000, that is, the carry-over from 1956.

(vii) For 1960, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $100,000, that is, the carry-over from 1956.

(viii) For 1961, the net operating loss deduction is determined to be $65,000, that is, the carry-over from 1956.

(e) Joint return by husband and wife. (1) If a husband and wife making a joint return for any taxable year did not make a joint return for any of the taxable years involved in the computation of a net operating loss carry-over or a net operating loss carry-back to the taxable year for which the joint return is made, such separate net operating loss carry-over or separate net operating loss carry-back is a joint net operating loss carry-over or joint net operating loss carry-back to such taxable year.

(2) If a husband and wife making a joint return for a taxable year made a joint return for each of the taxable years involved in the computation of a net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back to such taxable year, the joint net operating loss carry-over or joint net operating loss carry-back to such taxable year is computed in the same manner as the net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back of an individual under paragraphs (a) to (d) inclusive, of this section but upon the basis of the joint net operating losses and the combined net income of both spouses.

(3) If a husband and wife making separate returns for a taxable year made a joint return for any or all of the taxable years involved in the computation of a net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back, the separate net operating loss carry-over or separate net operating loss carry-back of each spouse to the taxable year is computed in the manner set forth in paragraphs (a) to (d) inclusive, of this section, but with the following exceptions and limitations:

(i) The net operating loss of each spouse for a taxable for which a joint return was made shall be deemed to be the portion of the joint net operating loss (computed in accordance with paragraph (e) of § 39.122–3) attributable to the gross income and deductions of such spouse, both gross income and deductions being taken into account to the same extent that they are taken into account in computing the joint net operating loss.

(ii) The net income of a particular spouse for any taxable year which is subtracted from the net operating loss of such spouse for another taxable year in order to determine the amount of such such loss which may be carried back or carried over to still another taxable year is deemed to be, in a case in which such net income was reported in a joint return, the sum of the following:

(a) The portion of the combined net income of both spouses for such year for which the joint return was made which is attributable to the gross income and deductions of the particular spouse, both gross income and deductions being taken into account to the same extent that they are taken into account in computing such combined net income, and

(b) The portion of such combined net income attributable to the other spouse, but if such other spouse has a taxable year beginning on the same date as the taxable year in which the particular spouse sustained the net operating loss from which the net income is subtracted, and if such other spouse sustained a net operating loss in such taxable year, then such portion shall first be reduced by such net operating loss of such other spouse. However, such net operating loss of such other spouse shall first be diminished by the excess, if any, of the reduction provided in section 122 (c) for the year in which the net income was realized over the aggregate of the net opearting loss carry-overs and net operating loss carry-backs which are taken into account in computing the net operating loss deduction for such taxable year (see (d) of this subdivision)

For the purposes of subdivisions (a) and (b) of this subdivision, the combined net income shall be computed as though the combined income and deductions of both spouses were those of one individual, and in such computation:

(c) The exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in section 122 (d) (1) (2) and (4) shall apply, and

(d) The net operating loss deduction shall be determined without taking into account any net operating loss of either spouse or any joint net operating loss of both spouses which was sustained in a taxable year beginning on or after the date of the beginning of the taxable year in which the particular spouse sustained the net operating loss from which the net income is subtracted.

(4) In the following examples, which illustrate subdivisions (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, it is assumed that there are no items of adjustment under section 122 (d) (1), (2), and (4) and the net income or loss in each case is the net income or loss determined without any net operating loss deduction. The taxpayer in each example, H, a husband, and W, his wife, report their income on the calendar year basis.

Example (1). H and W filed joint returns for 1952 and 1953. They sustained a joint net operating loss of $1,000 for 1952 and a joint net operating loss of $2,000 for 1953. For 1952 the deductions of H exceeded his gross income by $700, and the deductions of W exceeded her gross income by $300, the total of such amounts being $1,000. Therefore, $700 of the $1,000 joint net operating loss for 1952 is considered the net operating loss of H for 1952, and $300 of such joint net operating loss is considered the net operating loss of W for 1952. For 1953 the gross income of H exceeded his deductions, so that his separate net income would be $1,500, and the deductions of W exceeded her gross income by $3,500. Therefore, all of the $2,000 joint net operating loss for 1953 is considered the separate net operating loss of W for 1953.

Example (2). (i) H and W filed joint returns for 1949 and 1951, and separate returns for 1950 and 1952. For such years they had net incomes and net operating losses as follows:

H	[1] $5,000	[1] $2,500	[2] $6,500	[1] $4,000
W	[1] 3,000	[2] 2,000	[2] 3,000	[1] 1,500
	[3] 8,000	----------	[4] 9,500	----------

(ii) The net operating loss carry-over of H from 1952 to 1953 is $4,000, that is, his $4,000 net operating loss for 1952 which is not reduced by any part of the net income for 1951, since none of such net income is attributable to H and the portion attributable to W is entirely offset by her separate net operating loss deduction for her taxable year 1952, which taxable year begins on the same date as H's taxable year 1952. The determination of the amount ($0) of net income for 1951 which reduces H's net operating loss for 1952 is made as follows:

(iii) The combined net income of $9,500 for 1951 is reduced to $1,000 by the net operating loss deduction for such year of $8,500. This net operating loss deduction is computed without taking into account any net operating loss sustained in a taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1952, the date of the beginning of the taxable year in which H sustained the net operating loss which is a carry-over to 1953. This $8,500 amount is composed of H's carry-overs of $5,000 from 1949 and $2,500 from 1950, or a total of $7,500, and of W's carry-over of $1,000 from 1949 (the excess of W's $3,000 loss for 1949 over her $2,000 income for 1950). None of the $1,000 combined net income for 1951 (computed with the net operating loss deduction described above) is attributable to H since it is caused by W's income (computed after deducting her separate carry-over) offsetting H's loss (computed by deducting from his income his separate carry-overs). No part of the $1,000 net income for 1951 which is attributable to W is used to reduce H's net operating loss for 1952 since such net income attributable to W must first be reduced by W's $1,500 net operating loss for 1952, her taxable year beginning on the same date as the taxable year of H in which he sustained the net operating loss from which the net income is subtracted.

(iv) The net operating loss carry-over of W from 1952 to 1953 is $500, her $1,500 loss reduced by the $1,000 net income for 1951, computed in the manner prescribed in subdivision (iii) of this example, since all of such net income is attributable to her.

Example (3). (i) Assume the same facts as in example (2), except that for 1952 the net operating loss of W is $200 instead of $1,500.

(ii) The net operating loss carry-over of H from 1952 to 1953 is $3,200, that is, his $4,000 net operating loss reduced by $800 of the net income for 1951 computed as follows:

(iii) The combined net income for 1951, computed with the net operating loss deduction in the manner described in example (2), remains $1,000, no part of which is attributable to H. To the $0 net income attributable to H, there is added $800, the excess of the $1,000 net income attributable to W over her $200 net operating loss sustained in 1952, a taxable year beginning on the same date (January 1, 1952) as the taxable year of H (1952) in which he sustained the $4,000 net operating loss from which the net income is subtracted. See subparagraph (3) (ii) (b) of this paragraph.

(iv) W has no net operating loss carry-over from 1952 to 1953 since her net operating loss of $200 for 1952 does not exceed the $1,000 net income for 1951 attributable to her.

Example (4). (i) Assume the same facts as in example (2), except that W changes her accounting period in 1952 to a fiscal year ending on January 31, and has neither income nor losses for the taxable year January 1, 1952, to January 31, 1952, but has a net operating loss of $200 for the fiscal year February 1, 1952, to January 31, 1953.

(ii) The net operating loss carry-over of H from 1952 to 1953 is $3,000, that is, his net operating loss of $4,000 for 1952 reduced by the $1,000 net income for 1951, computed as follows:

(iii) The combined net income for 1951, computed with the net operating loss deduction in the manner described in example (2), remains $1,000, no part of which is attributable to H. To the $0 net income attributable to H there is added the $1,000 net income attributable to W. The net income attributable to W is not reduced by any amount since she does not have a net operating loss for her taxable year beginning on January 1, 1952, the date of the beginning of the taxable year of H in which he sustained the $4,000 net operating loss from which the net income is deducted.

(iv) The net operating loss carry-over of W from the fiscal year beginning February 1, 1952, to her next fiscal year is $200, her net operating loss for such year. This net operating loss is not reduced by any amount of net income for any prior taxable year since W's net income, without regard to any net operating loss deduction for the taxable year January 1, 1952, to January 31, 1952, was zero, and since her net operating loss for the fiscal year beginning February 1, 1952, may be carried back only to the immediately preceding taxable year and accordingly cannot be carried back to any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1952.

(5) If a husband and wife making a joint return for any taxable year made a joint return for one or more but not all of the taxable years involved in the computation of a net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back to such taxable year, such net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back to the taxable year is computed in the manner set forth in subparagraph (3) (i) and (ii) of this paragraph. Such net operating loss carry-over or net operating loss carry-back is considered a joint net operating loss carry-over or joint net operating loss carry-back to such taxable year. For example, if in examples (2) and (3) of subparagraph (4) of this paragraph a joint return was filed for 1953, the same amounts computed in those examples as carry-overs of H and W to that year would be the amounts considered joint net operating loss carry-overs to that year.

(6) The joint net operating loss carry-overs and the joint net operating loss carry-back to any taxable year for which a joint return is made are all the net operating loss carry-overs and net operating loss carry-backs of both spouses to such taxable year. For example, a husband and wife file a joint return for the calendar year 1953. The wife filed a separate return for the calendar years 1951 and 1952, in which years she sustained net operating losses. The husband filed separate returns for his fiscal year ending June 30, 1952, and, having received permission to change his accounting period to a calendar year basis, for the 6-month period ending December 31, 1952. The husband sustained net operating losses in both such taxable periods. Since the husband and wife did not file a joint return for any taxable year involved in the computation of the net operating loss carry-overs to 1953 from 1951 and 1952 (see paragraphs (a) to (d) inclusive, of this section) the joint net operating loss carry-overs to 1953 are the separate net operating loss carry-overs of the wife from the calendar years 1951 and 1952 and the separate net operating loss carry-overs of the husband from the fiscal year ending June 30, 1952, and from the short taxable year ending December 31, 1952. If the husband and wife also filed joint returns for the calendar years 1954 and 1955, having a joint net income in 1954 and a joint net operating loss in 1955, the joint net operating loss carry-back to 1954 from 1955 is computed upon the basis of the joint net operating loss for 1955, since separate returns were not made for any taxable year involved in the computation of such carry-back.

§ 39.122-5 Conversion of net operating loss carry-back and net operating loss carry-overs into net operating loss deduticon. (a) The net operating loss deduction for any taxable year is the aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and carry-back to such taxable year computed as prescribed in § 39.122-4, reduced by the excess of the net income for such taxable year (computed in the same manner as the net income is computed for the purposes of § 39.122-4 except that no net operating loss deduction shall be taken into account) over—

(1) In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the net income computed without regard to the exceptions, additions, and limitations specified in paragraph (a) of § 39.122-3 except that no net operating loss deduction shall be taken into account; or

(2) In the case of a corporation, the normal-tax net income computed without regard to the exceptions, additions, and limitations specified in § 39.122-2 except that no net operating loss deduction shall be taken into account and the credits provided in section 26 (h) for dividends paid by a public utility on its preferred stock and section 26 (i) in the case of a Western Hemisphere trade corporation shall not be allowed.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and the net operating loss carry-back to 1952 for the X Corporation is $55,000. Its net income for 1952, computed with the adjustments required by this section, is $450,000 and its normal-tax net income, computed without any exceptions, additions, and limitations except that no net operating loss deduction is allowed and the credits provided in section 26 (h) and section 26 (i) are not allowed, is $445,000. The net operating loss deduction available to the X Corporation for the year 1952 is $50,000, computed as follows:

Aggregate of the net operating loss carry-overs and the net operating loss carry-back to 1952	$55,000
Less: Excess of net income for 1952, with adjustments, over normal-tax net income for 1952, without adjustments except that no net operating loss deduction shall be allowed and the credits provided in section 26 (h) and section 26 (i) shall not be allowed ($450,000 minus $445,000)	5,000
Net operating loss deduction for 1952	50,000

(c) If the same facts are assumed for an individual, except that, instead of having a normal-tax net income for 1952 of $445,000, he has a net income for such year of $445,000, computed without adjustments except that no net operating loss deduction shall be allowed, his net operating loss deduction for 1952 will likewise be $50,000, computed in the same manner.

(d) In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return for any taxable year, the computation of the net operating loss deduction (as set forth in paragraph (a) of this section) is to be made upon the basis of the aggregate of the joint net operating loss carry-overs and the joint net operating loss carry-back of the spouses to such year (computed as prescribed in paragraph (e) of § 39.122-4) and the combined net income of the spouses.

SEC. 123. Commodity credit loans. (a) Amounts received as loans from the Commodity Credit Corporation shall, at the election of the taxpayer, be considered as income and shall be included in gross income for the taxable year in which received.

(b) If a taxpayer exercises the election provided for in subsection (a) for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1938, then the method of computing income so adopted shall be adhered to with respect to all subsequent taxable years unless with the approval of the Commissioner a change to a different method is authorized.

(c) [Not applicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951.]

§ 39.123-1 Election to include loans in income. A taxpayer who receives a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation may at his election, include the amount of such loan in his gross income for the taxable year in which the loan is received. If a taxpayer makes such an election, then for subsequent taxable years he shall include in his gross income all amounts received during those years as loans from the Commodity Credit Corporation, unless he secures the permission of the Commissioner to change to a different method of accounting. Application for permission to change such method of accounting and the basis upon which the return is made shall be filed within 90 days after the beginning of the taxable year to be covered by the return.

§ 39.123-2 Effect of election on adjustments for other taxable years. (a) If a taxpayer elects or has elected under section 123 of the Internal Revenue Code or section 223 (d) of the Revenue Act of 1939, as amended, to include in his gross income the amount of a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation for the taxable year in which it is received, then—

(1) No part of the amount realized by the Commodity Credit Corporation upon the sale or other disposition of the commodity pledged for such loan shall be recognized as income to the taxpayer, unless the taxpayer receives an amount in addition to that advanced to him as the loan, in which event such additional amount shall be included in the gross income of the taxpayer for the year in which received; and

(2) No deductible loss to the taxpayer shall be recognized on account of any deficiency realized by the Commodity Credit Corporation on such loan if the taxpayer was relieved from liability for such deficiency.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, a taxpayer who elected for his taxable years 1952, 1953, and 1954 to include in gross income amounts received during those years as loans from the Commodity Credit Corporation, received as loans $500 in 1952, $700 in 1953, and $900 in 1954. In 1956 all the pledged commodity was sold by the Commodity Credit Corporation for an amount $100 and $200 less than the loans with respect to the commodity pledged in 1952 and 1953, respectively, and for an amount $150 greater than the loan with respect to the commodity pledged in 1954. A, in making his return for 1956, shall include in gross income the sum of $150 if it is received during that year, but will not be allowed a deduction for the deficiencies of $100 and $200 unless he is required to satisfy such deficiencies and does satisfy them during that year.

SEC. 124. Amortization deduction. [No longer applicable]

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction—(a) General rule. Every person, at his election, shall be entitled to a deduction with respect to the amortization of the adjusted basis (for determining gain) of any emergency facility (as defined in subsection (d)), based on a period of sixty months. Such amortization deduction shall be an amount, with respect to each month of such period within the taxable year, equal to the adjusted basis of the facility at the end of such month divided by the number of months (including the month for which the deduction is computed) remaining in the period. Such adjusted basis at the end of the month shall be computed without regard to the amortization deduction for such month. The amortization deduction above provided with respect to any month shall, except to the extent provided in subsection (f) of this section, be in lieu of the deduction with respect to such facility for such month provided by section 23 (l), relating to exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence. The sixty-month period shall begin as to any emergency facility, at the election of the taxpayer, with the month following the month in which the facility was completed or acquired, or with the succeeding taxable year.

§ 39.124A (a)-1 Amortization deduction, general rule. (a) A person (including an estate or trust (see section 172 and § 39.172-1) and a partnership (see section 190 and § 39.190-1)) is entitled, at his election, to a deduction with respect to the amortization of the adjusted basis (for determining gain) of an emergency facility, such amortization to be based on a period of 60 months. As to the adjusted basis of an emergency facility, see § 39.124A (e)-1. The taxpayer may, with respect to an emergency facility, elect to begin the 60-month amortization period with (1) the month following the month in which such facility was completed or acquired, or (2) the taxable year succeeding that in which such facility was completed or acquired (see § 39.124A (b)-(1)) The date on which, or the month within which, an emergency facility is completed or acquired is to be determined upon the facts in the particular case. Ordinarily, the taxpayer is in possession of all the facts and, therefore, in a position to ascertain such date. A statement of the date ascertained by the taxpayer, together with a statement of the pertinent facts relied upon, should be filed with the taxpayer's election to take amortization deductions with respect to such facility.

(b) In no event shall an amortization deduction be allowed with respect to an emergency facility for any taxable year unless such facility has been certified prior to the date of filing of the taxpayer's return for such taxable year, or, in the case of an emergency facility completed or acquired after December 31, 1949, and before September 23, 1950, unless certified on or before September 23, 1951, or the date on which the return is filed, whichever is later. See section 124A (d) (1)

(c) In general, with respect to each month of the 60-month period which falls within the taxable year, the amortization deduction is an amount equal to the adjusted basis of the facility at the end of such month divided by the number of months (including the particular month for which the deduction is computed) remaining in the 60-month period. The adjusted basis of the facility at the end of any month shall be computed without regard to the amortization deduction with respect to such facility for such month. The total amortization deduction with respect to an emergency facility for a particular taxable year is the sum of the amortization deductions allowable with respect to such facility for each month of the 60-month period which falls within such taxable year. The amortization deduction with respect to an emergency facility taken for any month is in lieu of the deduction for depreciation which would otherwise be allowable under section 23 (l) with respect to such facility for such month. See, however, § 39.124A (f)-1, relating to depreciation with respect to any amount not subject to amortization.

(d) This section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On July 1, 1952, the X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, begins the construction of an emergency facility which is completed on September 30, 1952, at a cost of $240,000. The certificate covers the entire construction. The X Corporation elects to take amortization deductions with respect to the facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period with October, the month following its completion. The adjusted basis of the facility at the end of October is $240,000. The allowable amortization deduction with respect to such facility for the taxable year 1952 is $12,000, computed as follows:

Monthly amortization deductions:
October: $240,000 divided by 60	$4,000
November: $236,000 ($240,000 minus $4,000) divided by 59	4,000
December: $232,000 ($236,000 minus $4,000) divided by 58	4,000
Total amortization deduction for 1952	12,000

Example (2). The Y Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the basis of a fiscal year ending November 30, purchases an emergency facility (No. 1) on July 29, 1953. On June 15, 1953, it begins the construction of an emergency facility (No. 2) which is completed on August 2, 1953. The entire acquisition and construction of such facilities are covered by the certificate. The Y Corporation elects to take amortization deductions with respect to both facilities and to begin the 60-month amortization period in each case with the month following the month of acquisition or completion. At the end of the first month of the amortization period the adjusted basis of facility No. 1 is $300,000 and the adjusted basis of facility No. 2 is $54,000. In September 1953 facility No. 1 is damaged by fire, as a result of which its adjusted basis is properly reduced by $25,370. The allowable amortization deduction with respect to such facilities for the taxable year ending November 30, 1953, is $21,410, computed as follows:

Monthly amortization deductions:
August: $300,000 divided by 60	$5,000
September: $269,630 ($300,000 minus $5,000 and $25,370) divided by 59	4,570
October: $265,060 ($269,630 minus $4,570) divided by 58	4,570
November: $260,490 ($265,060 minus $4,570) divided by 57	4,570
Amortization deduction for 1953	18,710

Monthly amortization deductions:
September: $54,000 divided by 60	$900
October: $53,100 divided by 59	900
November: $52,200 divided by 58	900
Amortization deduction for 1953	2,700
Total amortization deduction for 1953	21,410

Example (3). On June 15, 1952, the Z Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, completes the construction of an emergency facility at a cost of $110,000. In its income tax return for 1952, filed on March 15, 1953, the Z Corporation elects to take amortization deductions with respect to such facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period with July, the month following its completion. No certificate with respect to such facility is made until April 10, 1953, and therefore no amortization deduction with respect to such facility is allowable for any month in the taxable year 1952. The Z Corporation is entitled, however, to take a deduction for depreciation of such facility for the taxable year 1952, such deduction being assumed, for the purposes of this example, to be $2,000. Accordingly, the adjusted basis of such facility at the end of January 1953 (without regard to the amortization deduction for such month) is $108,000 ($110,000 minus $2,000). For the taxable year 1953, the Z Corporation is, with respect to such facility, entitled to an amortization deduction of $24,000 computed as follows:

Monthly amortization deductions:
January: $108,000 divided by 54	$2,000
February: $106,000 ($108,000 minus $2,000) divided by 53	2,000
March: $104,000 ($106,000 minus $2,000) divided by 52	2,000
For the remaining nine months (similarly computed)	18,000
Total amortization deduction for 1953	24,000

Since the Z Corporation elected in its return for 1952 to take amortization deductions with respect to such facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period with July 1952, it must compute its amortization deductions for the 12 months in the taxable year 1953 on the basis of the remaining months of the established 60-month amortization period, as indicated in the above computation.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(b) Election of amortization. The election of the taxpayer to take the amortization deduction and to begin the sixty-month period with the month following the month in which the facility was completed or acquired, or with the taxable year succeeding the taxable year in which such facility was completed or acquired, shall be made by filing with the Secretary, in such manner, in such form, and within such time, as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, a statement of such election.

§ 39.124A (b)-1 Election of amortization—(a) General rule. An election by the taxpayer to take amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period either with the month following the month in which such facility was completed or acquired, or with the taxable year succeeding the taxable year in which such facility was completed or acquired, shall be made by a statement to that effect in its return for the taxable year in which falls the first month of the 60-month amortization period so elected.

(b) Election not made in prescribed manner If the statement of election is not made by the taxpayer as prescribed in paragraph (a) of this section, it may, in the discretion of the Commissioner and for good cause shown, be made in such manner and form and within such time as may be approved by the Commissioner.

(c) Other requirements and considerations. No method of making such election other than those prescribed in this section and § 29.124A-4 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.) is permitted. Any statement of election should contain a description clearly identifying each emergency facility for which an amortization deduction is claimed. A taxpayer which does not elect, in the manner prescribed in this section or § 29.124A-4 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.), to take amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility shall not be entitled to amortization deductions with respect to such facility. See also the last sentence of section 124A (d) (1) and paragraph (b) of § 39.124A (a)-1, restricting allowance of amortization deduction to cases where the facility has been certified prior to the date on which the return for the taxable year is filed.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(c) Termination of amortization deduction. A taxpayer which has elected under subsection (b) to take the amortization deduction provided in subsection (a) may, at any time after making such election, discontinue the amortization deductions with respect to the remainder of the amortization period, such discontinuance to begin as of the beginning of any month specified by the taxpayer in a notice in writing filed with the Secretary before the beginning of such month. The deduction provided under section 23 (l) shall be allowed, beginning with the first month as to which the amortization deduction is not applicable, and the taxpayer shall not be entitled to any further amortization deductions with respect to such emergency facility.

§ 39.124A (c)-1 Election to discontinue amortization. (a) If a taxpayer has elected to take amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility, it may, after such election and prior to the expiration of the 60-month amortization period, discontinue the amortization deductions with respect to such facility for the remainder of the 60-month period. An election to discontinue the amortization deductions shall be made by a notice in writing filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., specifying the month as of the beginning of which the taxpayer elects to discontinue such deductions. Such notice shall be filed before the beginning of the month specified therein, and should contain a description clearly identifying the emergency facility with respect to which the taxpayer elects to discontinue the amortization deductions. If the taxpayer so elects to discontinue the amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility, it shall not be entitled to any further amortization deductions with respect to such facility.

(b) A taxpayer which thus elects to discontinue amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility is entitled, if such facility is depreciable property under section 23 (l) and the regulations thereunder, to a deduction for depreciation with respect to such facility. The deduction for depreciation shall begin with the first month as to which the amortization deduction is not applicable, and shall be computed on the adjusted basis of the property as of the beginning of such month (see section 113 (b) and the regulations thereunder)

(c) This section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. On July 1, 1952, the X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, purchases an emergency facility, consisting of land with a building thereon, at a cost of $306,000 of which $60,000 is allocable to the land and $246,000 to the building. The certificate covers the entire acquisition. The corporation elects to take amortization deductions with respect to the facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period with the taxable year 1953. Depreciation of the building in the amount of $6,000 is deducted and allowed for the taxable year 1952. On March 25, 1954, the corporation files notice with the Commissioner of its election to discontinue the amortization deductions beginning with the month of April 1954. The adjusted basis of the facility on January 31, 1953, is $300,000, or the cost of the facility ($306,000) less the depreciation allowed for 1952 ($6,000). The amortization deductions for the taxable year 1953 and the months of January, February, and March 1954, amount to $75,000, or $5,000 per month for 15 months. Since, at the beginning of the amortization period (January 1, 1953), the adjusted basis of the land is one-fifth of the adjusted basis of the entire facility and since there are no adjustments to basis other than on account of amortization during the period, the adjusted basis of the land should be reduced by $15,000, or one-fifth of the entire amortization deduction, and the adjusted basis of the building should be reduced by $60,000, or four-fifths of the entire amortization deduction. Accordingly, the adjusted basis of the facility as of April 1, 1954, is $225,000, of which $180,000 is allocable to the building for the purpose of depreciation deductions under section 23 (l), and $45,000 is allocable to the land.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(d) Definitions—(1) Emergency facility. As used in this section, the term "emergency facility" means any facility, land, building, machinery, or equipment, or any part thereof, the construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition of which was completed after December 31, 1949, and with respect to which a certificate under subsection (e) has been made. In no event shall an amortization deduction be allowed in respect of any emergency facility for any taxable year unless a certificate in respect thereof under this paragraph shall have been made prior to the filing of the taxpayer's return for such taxable year, or, in the case of an emergency facility completed or acquired by a taxpayer after December 31, 1949, and before the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1950, unless a certificate in respect thereof under this paragraph shall have been made prior to the expiration of twelve months after the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1950.

(2) Emergency period. As used in this section, the term "emergency period" means the period beginning January 1, 1950, and ending on the date on which the President proclaims that the utilization of a substantial portion of the emergency facilities with respect to which certifications under subsection (e) have been made is no longer required in the interest of national defense.

§ 39.124A (d)-1 Definitions. As used in §§ 39.124A (a)-1 to 39.124A (h)-1, inclusive, the term—

(a) "Certifying authority" means the certifying authority designated by the President by Executive order.

(b) "Emergency facility" means any facility, land, building, machinery, or equipment, or any part thereof, the acquisition of which occurred after December 31, 1949, or the construction, reconstruction, erection, or installation of which was completed after such date, and with respect to which a certificate under section 124A (e) has been made. In the case of an application for a certificate under section 124A (e) which is filed after March 23, 1951, only the part of any such facility which is constructed, reconstructed, erected, or installed by any person not earlier than six months prior to the filing of such application, and which is certified in accordance with section 124A (e) shall be deemed to be an emergency facility notwithstanding that the other part of such facility was constructed, reconstructed, erected, or installed earlier than six months prior to the filing of such application. The term "emergency facility" as so defined, may include, among other things, improvements of land, such as the construction of roads, bridges, and airstrips, and the dredging of channels.

(c) "Emergency period" means the period beginning on January 1, 1950, and ending on the date on which the President proclaims that the utilization of a substantial portion of the certified emergency facilities is no longer required in the interest of national defense.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(e) Determination of adjusted basis of emergency facility. In determining, for the purposes of subsection (a) or subsection (g), the adjusted basis of an emergency facility—

(1) There shall be included only so much of the amount of the adjusted basis of such facility (computed without regard to this section) as is properly attributable to such construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition after December 31, 1949, as the certifying authority, designated by the President by Executive order, has certified as necessary in the interest of national defense during the emergency period, and only such portion of such amount as such authority has certified as attributable to defense purposes. Such certifications shall be under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by such certifying authority with the approval of the President. An application for a certificate must be filed at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by such certifying authority under such regulations but in no event shall such certificate have any effect unless an application therefor is filed before the expiration of six months after the beginning of such construction, reconstruction, erection, or installation or the date of such acquisition, or before the expiration of six months after the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1950, whichever is later.

(2) After the completion or acquisition of any emergency facility with respect to which a certificate under paragraph (1) has been made, any expenditure (attributable to such facility and to the period after such completion or acquisition) which does not represent construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition, included in such certificate, but with respect to which a separate certificate is made under paragraph (1), shall not be applied in adjustment of the basis of such facility but a separate basis shall be computed therefor pursuant to paragraph (1) as if it were a new and separate emergency facility.

§ 39.124A (e)-1 Adjusted basis of emergency facility—(a) In general. (1) The adjusted basis of an emergency facility for the purpose of computing the amortization deduction may differ from what would otherwise constitute the adjusted basis of such emergency facility, in that it shall be the adjusted basis for determining gain (see section 113) and in that it may be only a portion of what would otherwise constitute the adjusted basis. It will be only a portion of such other adjusted basis if only a portion of the basis (unadjusted) is attributable to certified construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition taking place after December 31, 1949. Also, it will be only a portion of what would otherwise constitute the adjusted basis of the emergency facility if only a portion of the basis (unadjusted) is certified as attributable to defense purposes. It is therefore necessary first to determine the unadjusted basis of the emergency facility from which the adjusted basis for amortization purposes is derived.

(2) The unadjusted basis for amortization purposes is the same as the unadjusted basis otherwise determined only when the entire construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition takes place after December 31, 1949, and is certified in its entirety by the certifying authority.

(3) In cases in which only a portion of the construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition attributable to the facility takes place after December 31, 1949, and that portion is certified in its entirety by the certifying authority, the unadjusted basis for the purpose of amortization is so much of the entire unadjusted basis as is attributable to the certified construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition which takes place after December 31, 1949. For example, the X Corporation begins the construction of a facility on November 15, 1949, and such facility is completed on April 1, 1952, at a cost of $5,000,000 of which $4,600,000 is attributable to construction after December 31, 1949. The entire construction after December 31, 1949, is certified by the certifying authority. The unadjusted basis of the emergency facility for amortization purposes is therefore $4,600,000. For depreciation of the remaining portion of the cost ($400,000) see § 39.124A (f)-1.

(4) If the certifying authority certifies only a portion of the construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition of property which takes place after December 31, 1949, the unadjusted basis for amortization purposes is limited to such portion so certified. Assuming the same facts as in the example in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, except that only 50 percent of the construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition after December 31, 1949, is certified, the unadjusted basis for amortization purposes is 50 percent of $4,600,000, or $2,300,000.

(5) The adjusted basis of an emergency facility for amortization purposes is the unadjusted basis for amortization purposes less the adjustments properly applicable thereto. Such adjustments are those specified in section 113 (b), except that no adjustments are to be taken into account which increase the adjusted basis. (See paragraph (b) of this section.) If the taxpayer constructs, reconstructs, erects, installs, or acquires an emergency facility pursuant to a cost reimbursement contract with an obligation for reimbursement by the United States of all or a part of the cost of such facility, the unadjusted basis of such facility for amortization purposes shall not include that part of the cost for which the taxpayer is entitled to reimbursement, and the amount received as reimbursement shall be treated as a capital receipt. However, amounts received by a taxpayer which represent in fact compensation by reason of termination of a government contract or payment for articles under such a contract, though denominated reimbursements for all or a part of the cost of an emergency facility, are not to be treated as capital receipts but are to be taken into account in computing income, and are therefore not to be applied in reduction of the basis of such facility.

(6) The following examples will illustrate the computation of the adjusted basis of an emergency facility for amortization purposes:

Example (1). The X Corporation completes an emergency facility on July 1, 1952, the entire unadjusted basis of which is $500,000, and the unadjusted basis of which for the purpose of amortization is $300,000. The X Corporation elects to begin amortization as of January 1, 1953. The only adjustment to basis for the period July 1, 1952 to January 31, 1953, other than depreciation or amortization for January 1953, is $5,000 for depreciation for the last six months of 1952. The adjusted basis for the purpose of amortization is therefore $300,000 less $3,000 (300,000/500,000 X $5,000), or $297,000.

Example (2). On July 31, 1956, the Y Corporation has an emergency facility (a building) which was completed on July 1, 1952, the entire basis of which is $500,000, and the unadjusted basis of which for the purpose of amortization is $300,000. The corporation elected to begin amortization as of January 1, 1953, at which time it was entitled to $5,000 depreciation for the last six months of 1952. On July 1, 1956, the facility was damaged by fire, as the result of which its adjusted basis is properly reduced by $200,000. The adjusted basis of the emergency facility as of July 1956 for the purpose of amortization and depreciation, and the adjusted basis for other purposes, are $23,849.18, $49,250.82, and $73,100.00, respectively, computed as follows:

	For amortization	For depreciation	For other purposes
Unadjusted basis	$300,000.00	$200,000.00	$500,000
Less depreciation to Jan. 1, 1953	3,000.00	2,000.00	5,000
Adjusted basis Jan. 1953	297,000.00	198,000.00	495,000
Less amortization for 42 months	207,900.00		207,900
Less depreciation for 42 months		14,000.00	14,000
Adjusted basis at time of fire	89,100.00	184,000.00	273,100
Less fire loss (apportioned as explained below)	65,250.82	134,749.18	200,000
Adjusted basis after fire loss	23,849.18	49,250.82	73,100

The $200,000 fire loss is applied against the adjusted basis for the purpose of amortization and the adjusted basis for the purpose of depreciation in the proportion that each such adjusted basis at the time of the fire bears to their sum, i. e., 89,100/273,100 × $200,000 or $65,250.82, against the amortization basis, and 184,000/273,100 × $200,000, or $134,749.18, against the depreciation basis.

(b) Capital additions. (1) If, after the completion or acquisition of an emergency facility which has been certified by the certifying authority, further expenditures are made for construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition attributable to such facility but not covered by such certification, such expenditures shall not be added to the adjusted basis of the emergency facility for amortization purposes under such certification. If such further expenditures are separately certified in accordance with the provisions of section 124A (e) (1) and this section, they are treated as certified expenditures in connection with a new and separate emergency facility and, if proper election is made, will be taken into account in computing the adjusted basis of such new and separate emergency facility for the purpose of amortization.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. On March 1, 1952, the certifying authority certifies as an emergency facility a heating plant proposed to be constructed by the Z Corporation. Such facility is completed on July 1, 1952. The Z Corporation, on August 1, 1952, begins the installation in the plant of an additional boiler, which is not included in the certification for the plant but is certified as a new and separate emergency facility. For amortization purposes, the adjusted basis of the heating plant is determined without including the cost of the additional boiler. Such cost is taken into account in computing the adjusted basis of the new and separate emergency facility (the boiler), as to which the taxpayer has a separate election for amortization purposes and a separate amortization period.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(f) Depreciation deduction. If the adjusted basis of the emergency facility (computed without regard to this section) is in excess of the adjusted basis computed under subsection (e), the deduction provided by section 23 (l) shall, despite the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, be allowed with respect to such emergency facility as if its adjusted basis for the purpose of such deduction were an amount equal to the amount of such excess.

§ 39.124A (f)-1 Depreciation of portion of emergency facility not subject to amortization. (a) The rule set forth in section 124A (a) (see § 39.124A (a)-1), that an amortization deduction with respect to an emergency facility is in lieu of any deduction for depreciation which would otherwise be allowable under section 23 (l) with respect to such facility, is subject to the exception provided in section 124A (f) Under this exception, if the property constituting such facility is depreciable property under section 23 (l) and the regulations thereunder and if the adjusted basis of such facility as computed under section 113 (b) for purposes other than the amortization deductions (see § 39.113 (b) (1)-1) is in excess of the adjusted basis computed under section 124A (e) for the purpose of the amortization deductions (see § 39.124A (e)-1) then the excess shall be charged off over the useful life of the facility and recovered through depreciation deductions. Thus, if the construction of an emergency facility is begun on or before December 31, 1949, and completed after such date, no amortization deductions are allowable with respect to the amount attributable to such construction on or before such date (see § 39.124A (e)-1) However, if the property constituting such facility is depreciable property under section 23 (l) and the regulations thereunder, then the depreciation deduction provided by such section and regulations is allowable with respect to the amount attributable to such construction on or before December 31, 1949.

(b) Similarly, if only a portion of the construction, reconstruction, erection, installation, or acquisition after December 31, 1949, of an emergency facility has been certified by the certifying authority, and if such facility is depreciable property under section 23 (l) and the regulations thereunder, then the depreciation deduction provided by such section and regulations is allowable with respect to the portion which has not been so certified.

(c) For illustration of the treatment of a depreciable portion of an emergency facility, see example (2) in § 39.124A (e)-1 (a) (6).

§ 39.124A (g) Statutory provisions; amortization deduction; payment by United States of unamortized cost of facility.

SEC. 124A. Amortization deduction. * * *

(g) Payment by United States of unamortized cost of facility. If an amount is properly includible in the gross income of the taxpayer on account of a payment with respect to an emergency facility and such payment is certified as provided in paragraph (1), then, at the election of the taxpayer in its return for the taxable year in which such amount is so includible—

(1) The amortization deduction for the month in which such amount is so includible shall (in lieu of the amount of the deduction for such month computed under subsection (a)) be equal to the amount so includible but not in excess of the adjusted basis of the emergency facility as of the end of such month (computed without regard to any amortization deduction for such month). Payments referred to in this paragraph shall be payments the amounts of which are certified, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, by the certifying authority designated by the President as compensation to the taxpayer for the unamortized cost of the emergency facility made because—

(A) A contract with the United States involving the use of the facility has been terminated by its terms or by cancellation, or

(B) The taxpayer had reasonable ground (either from provisions of a contract with the United States involving the use of the facility, or from written or oral representations made under authority of the United States) for anticipating future contracts involving the use of the facility, which future contracts have not been made.

(2) In case the taxpayer is not entitled to any amortization deduction with respect to the emergency facility, the deduction allowable under section 23 (l) on account of the month in which such amount is so includible shall be increased by such amount, but such deduction on account of such month shall not be in excess of the adjusted basis of the emergency facility as of the end of such month (computed without regard to any amount allowable, on account of such month, under section 23 (l) or this paragraph).

§ 39.124A (g)-1 Payment by United States of unamortized cost of facility. (a) Section 124A (g) contemplates that certain payments may be made by the United States to a taxpayer as compensation for the unamortized cost of an emergency facility. If any such payment is properly includible in gross income and has been certified, as provided in section 124A (g) as having been paid under the circumstances described therein, a taxpayer which is recovering the adjusted basis of an emergency facility through amortization rather than depreciation may elect to take an amount equal to such payment as an amortization deduction with respect to such facility for the month in which such payment is so includible. Such amortization deduction shall be in lieu of the amortization deduction otherwise allowable with respect to such facility for such month, but it shall not in any case exceed the adjusted basis of such facility (see § 39.124A (e)-1) as of the end of such month (computed without regard to any amortization deduction for such month) The election referred to in this paragraph shall be made in the return for the taxable year in which the amount of such payment is includible in gross income.

(b) If a taxpayer is recovering the adjusted basis of an emergency facility through depreciation rather than amortization, the depreciation deduction allowable under section 23 (l) for the month in which the amount of any such payment is includible in gross income shall, at the taxpayer's election, be increased by such amount; but the total deduction with respect to the certified portion of such facility shall not in any case exceed the adjusted basis of such facility (computed as provided in section 124A (e) and § 39.124A (e)-1 for amortization purposes) as of the end of such month (computed without regard to any amount allowable for such month under section 23 (l) or 124A (g) (2)) The election referred to in this paragraph shall be made in the return for the taxable year in which the amount of such payment is includible in gross income.

(c) This section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 31, 1952, the X Corporation purchases an emergency facility at a cost of $600,000. The certificate covers the entire acquisition. The X Corporation elects to take amortization deductions with respect to such facility and to begin the 60-month amortization period with February 1952, the month following the month of acquisition. On July 15, 1953, as a result of the cancellation of certain contracts with the X Corporation, the United States makes a payment of $300,000 to the corporation as compensation for the unamortized cost of such facility. The $300,000 payment is includible in the X Corporation's gross income for July 1953. The adjusted basis of such facility for amortization purposes as of the end of July 1953, computed without regard to any amortization deduction for such month, is $430,000. Accordingly, the corporation is entitled to take an amortization deduction of $300,000 for such month, in lieu of the $10,000 amortization deduction which is otherwise allowable.

Example (2). On November 30, 1952, the Y Corporation purchases an emergency facility, consisting of land with a building thereon, at a cost of $500,000, of which $200,000 is allocable to the land and $300,000 to the building. The certificate covers the entire acquisition. The Y Corporation does not elect to take amortization deductions with respect to such facility, but is entitled to a depreciation deduction with respect to the building at the rate of 3 percent per annum, or $750 per month. On August 12, 1954, as a result of cancellation of certain contracts, the United States makes a payment of $400,000 to the corporation as compensation for the unrecovered cost of such facility. The $400,000 is includible in the Y Corporation's gross income for August 1954. The adjusted basis of the facility as of the end of August 1954, computed without regard to depreciation for such month, is $485,000, of which amount $200,000 is allocable to the land and $285,000 to the building. Accordingly, the corporation is entitled to increase the $750 depreciation deduction for August 1954 by the full amount of the $400,000 payment.

§ 39.124A (h)-1 Life tenant and remainderman. In the case of an emergency facility held by one person for life with remainder to another person, the amortization deduction shall be computed as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the facility and shall be allowable to the life tenant during his life.

§ 39.124A (i)-1 Cross reference. For income tax treatment of gain from the sale or exchange of an emergency facility for which an amortization deduction has been taken, see section 117 (g) (3) and § 39.117 (g)-2.

SEC. 125. Amortizable bond premium—(a) General rule. In the case of any bond, as defined in subsection (d), the following rules shall apply to the amortizable bond premium (determined under subsection (b)) on the bond for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941.

(1) Interest wholly or partially taxable. In the case of a bond (other than a bond the interest on which is excludible from gross income), the amount of the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year shall be allowed as a deduction.

(2) Interest wholly tax-exempt. In the case of any bond the interest on which is excludible from gross income, no deduction shall be allowed for the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year.

(3) Adjustment of credit in case of interest partially tax-exempt. In the case of any bond the interest on which is allowable as a credit against net income, the credit provided in section 25 (a) (1) or (2), or section 26 (a), as the case may be, shall be reduced by the amount of the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year.

For adjustment to basis on account of amortizable bond premium, see section 113 (b) (1) (H).

§ 39.125 (a)-1 In general—(a) Application. (1) Section 125 makes provision for the amortization of bond premium by the owners of the bonds.

(i) It is mandatory with respect to—

(a) Fully tax-exempt bonds (the interest on which is excludible from gross income) whether the owner is a corporation, individual, or other taxpayer; and

(b) Partially tax-exempt bonds (the interest on which is subject only to surtax) owned by a corporation.

(ii) It is optional, at the election of the taxpayer, with respect to—

(a) Fully taxable bonds (the interest on which is subject to normal tax and surtax) whether the owner is a corporation, individual, or other taxpayer; and

(b) Partially tax-exempt bonds owned by taxpayers other than corporations

(2) As used in section 125, the term "bond" means any bond, debenture, note, or certificate or other evidence of indebtedness, issued by any corporation and bearing interest (including any like obligation issued by a government or political subdivision thereof) with interest coupons or in registered form, but does not include any such obligation which constitutes stock in trade of the taxpayer or any such obligation of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or any such obligation held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business. Since bonds owned by dealers in securities are excluded from the foregoing definition, section 125 has no application to such dealers. See, however, § 39.22 (o)-1.

(b) Operation. (1) In the case of a fully tax-exempt bond, the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year is simply an adjustment to the basis or adjusted basis of the bonds. Thus, if such premium is $1, the basis or adjusted basis of the bond is reduced by $1. No deduction is allowable on account of such amortizable bond premium. In the case of a fully taxable bond to which section 125 is applicable, the amortizable bond premium is both an adjustment to the basis or adjusted basis of the bond and a deduction.

(2) In the case of a partially tax-exempt bond to which such section is applicable, the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year is used for three purposes: (i) As an adjustment to the basis or adjusted basis of the bond; (ii) as a deduction; and (iii) as a reduction of the credit for the interest on the bond, provided in section 25 (a) (1) or (2) or section 26 (a) Accordingly, if the interest on such a partially tax-exempt bond for the taxable year is $30 and the amortizable bond premium thereon for such taxable year is $5, the $30 is included in gross income, the $5 is allowable as a deduction, an adjustment in the amount of $5 is made to the basis or adjusted basis of the bond, and the credit on account of such interest is $25 ($30 minus $5) In the case of a taxpayer whose tax is computed under Supplement T (section 400) or who elects to take the standard deduction (section 23 (aa)) and thus no specific deduction is permitted under section 125 (a) (1) for amortization of bond premiums as such, it shall be deemed, if the taxpayer has elected to amortize bond premium in accordance with the provisions of section 125, that the deduction for amortization of amortized bond premium has been allowed for the purpose of determining the adjusted basis of the bond.

(3) In the case of a trust the income of which is distributable to the beneficiaries in whole or in part, where the trustee elects to amortize bond premium by deducting the amount thereof in the return filed for the trust on Form 1041, the distributable income of the trust determined in accordance with the provisions of section 162 (b) is the full amount otherwise distributable without reduction for amortization of bond premium in all cases where, under the law applicable to the trust or under the provisions of the trust instrument, the income distributable to the beneficiaries shall not be reduced by such reduction for amortization. See section 24 (d).

§ 39.125 (a)-2 Bonds owned by decedents—(a) Cash basis decedents. (1) If a decedent on the cash receipts and disbursements basis owned fully taxable bonds and partially tax-exempt bonds to which section 125 applies—

(i) In the case of a fully taxable bond—

(a) The interest accruing thereon during the period ending with his death is, by reason of section 126, included upon its receipt in the gross income of the estate or legatee, whichever acquires the right to receive such interest, while

(b) The deduction on account of amortizable bond premium for such period is properly allowable as a deduction for such period under the decedent's method of accounting and is not allowable as a deduction for the estate or legatee; and

(ii) In the case of a partially tax-exempt bond—

(a) The interest accruing thereon for such period is similarly included upon its receipt in the gross income of the estate or legatee, as the case may be;

(b) The estate's or legatee's credit for such interest is not reduced on account of the amortizable bond premium for such period; and

(c) The deduction on account of the amortizable bond premium for such period is allowable as a deduction in the return for the decedent as in the case of a fully taxable bond.

(2) The application of the provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph relating to a partially tax-exempt bond may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. At the time of his death in 1952, D owns a partially tax-exempt bond to which section 125 applies. For the period beginning January 1, 1952, and ending with his death, the accrued interest on such bond is $25 and the amortizable bond premium is $2. D's estate has the right to receive such interest. D's executor, in making the income tax return for such period, may take into account a deduction in the amount of $2 on account of the amortizable bond premium for such period. D's estate includes the interest ($25) in its gross income upon receipt and, for the purposes of the normal tax, receives a credit for $25, which is not reduced on account of the amortizable bond premium which was a deduction allowable for the last taxable period of the decedent.

(b) Accrual basis decedents. If a decedent on the accrual basis owns fully taxable bonds and partially tax-exempt bonds to which section 125 applies—

(1) In the case of a fully taxable bond, both the interest accruing thereon during the period ending with his death and the deduction on account of the amortizable bond premium for such period remain with the decedent; and

(2) In the case of a partially tax-exempt bond, the rule as to the accrued interest and the amortization deduction is the same as in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, and his credit for such interest is required to be reduced by the amount of the amortizable bond premium for the period ending with the decedent's death.

SEC. 125. Amortizable bond premium. * * * (b) Amortizable bond premium—(1) Amount of bond premium. For the purposes of paragraph (2), the amount of bond premium, in the case of the holder of any bond, shall be determined with reference to the amount of the basis (for determining loss on sale or exchange) of such bond, and with reference to the amount payable on maturity or on earlier call date, with adjustments proper to reflect unamortized bond premium with respect to the bond, for the period prior to the date as of which subsection (a) becomes applicable with respect to the taxpayer with respect to such bond. In no case shall the amount of bond premium on a convertible bond include any amount attributable to the conversion features of the bond.

(2) Amount amortizable. The amortizable bond premium of the taxable year shall be the amount of the bond premium attributable to such year.

(3) Method of determination. The determinations required under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be made—

(A) In accordance with the method of amortizing bond premium regularly employed by the holder of the bond, if such method is reasonable;

(B) In all other cases, in accordance with regulations prescribing reasonable methods of amortizing bond premium, prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

[Subsec. (b) as added by sec. 126 (b), Rev. Act 1942, and amended by sec. 217 (a), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.125 (b)-1 Bond premium and amortizable bond premium. (a) Bond premium on any bond to which section 125 applies is the excess of the amount of the basis (for determining loss on sale or exchange) of the bond over the amount payable at maturity or, in the case of a callable bond, earlier call date. For determination of applicable call date see § 39.125 (b)-2. If the date as of which such basis of the bond was established precedes the first taxable year with respect to which section 125 applies to the bond, there shall be made adjustments proper to reflect unamortized bond premium on such bond for the period including the holding period (as determined under section 117 (h)) before the date as of which section 125 first becomes applicable to the bond in the hands of the taxpayer.

(b) The application of the rule relating to adjustments set forth in paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 1, 1952, T, who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owns a fully taxable $100 bond, maturing on January 1, 1962. T purchased this bond on January 1, 1942, for $120. T elects to have section 125 apply to such bond for 1952 and subsequent taxable years. In determining the amount of bond premium to be amortized over the remaining 10 years of the life of the bond, T is required, but solely for such purpose, to treat the bond as if he had amortized the bond premium thereon during the prior 10 years under this section, and to make the proper adjustment in the original bond premium. Accordingly, T would treat $10 as having been amortized during the first 10 years and would be required to amortize the remaining $10 over the following 10 years. When the bond is redeemed on January 1, 1962, for $100, only the $10 attributable to the second 10 years will actually have been amortized. The $10 attributable to the first 10 years will have been treated as an adjustment to the original bond premium but will not have been amortized. Consequently T will have a capital loss in the year of redemption on account of the $10 attributable to the period January 1, 1942, to January 1, 1952.

Example (2). On January 1, 1952, X's father gave him a fully taxable $100 bond maturing on January 1, 1962. X's father had purchased the bond on January 1, 1942, for $120. The fair market value of the bond at the time of the gift was $130. X makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis and elects to amortize the bond premium on the bond during the period 1952-1962. Under section 113 (a) (2) the cost of the bond to X's father constitutes the basis of the bond in X's hands for determining loss, since such cost is lower than the fair market value of the bond at the time of the gift, and under section 117 (h) (2) X's holding period is deemed to include the 10 years during which his father held the bond. X is required to treat the bond as if the bond premium thereon had been amortized during his father's holding period. Thus, X is required to amortize $10 over the period January 1, 1952, to January 1, 1962, and in the year of redemption will have a capital loss on account of the $10 attributable to his father's holding period.

Example (3). Y, who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owns a tax-exempt $100 bond, maturing on January 1, 1961. He purchased this bond on January 1, 1941, for $120. On December 31, 1954, Y sells the bond for $108 and thus realizes a gain of $1, computed as follows:

(1) Total bond premium ($120—$100)	$20
(2) Amount of bond premium amortizable if held to maturity (total bond premium minus unamortized bond premium attributable to 1941, $20—$1)	19
(3) Amount of bond premium amortized from Jan. 1, 1942 through Dec. 31, 1954 ($1 for each such year)	13
(4) Adjusted basis of bond at close of 1954 ($120—$13)	107
(5) Gain ($108—$107)	1

(c) Amortizable bond premium on any bond to which section 125 applies is such part of the bond premium on the bond as is attributable to the taxable year.

§ 39.125 (b)-2 Callable and convertible bonds. (a) The fact that a bond is callable or convertible into stock does not, in itself, prevent the application of section 125. For the purposes of such section, in the case of a callable bond the earlier call date will be considered as the maturity date and the amount due on such date will be considered as the amount payable on maturity unless the taxpayer regularly employs a different method of amortization which is reasonable. Hence, the bond premium on such a bond is required to be spread over the period from the date as of which the basis for loss of the bond is established down to the earlier call date, rather than the maturity date. The earlier call date may be the earliest call date specified in the bond as a day certain, the earliest interest payment date if the bond is callable at such date, the earliest date at which the bond is callable at par, or such other call date, prior to maturity, specified in the bond as may be selected by the taxpayer. A taxpayer who deducts amortizable bond premium with reference to a particular call date may not thereafter use a different call date in the calculation of amortization deductions with respect to such premium.

(b) A convertible bond is within the scope of section 125 if the option to convert on a date certain specified in the bond rests with the holder thereof. However, for the purpose of determining the amount of amortizable bond premium on a convertible bond for the taxable year, the amount of bond premium shall not include any amount attributable to the conversion features of the bond. For the purpose of this rule, the term "convertible bond" includes a bond issued with detachable stock-purchase warrants.

(c) (1) The value of the conversion features of a particular bond shall be determined by ascertaining the assumed price at which such bond would be purchased on the open market if without conversion features, and by subtracting such assumed price from the cost of the bond. The determination of the assumed price of the bond without the conversion features shall be made by ascertaining the yield on which bonds of similar character, not having conversion features, are sold on the open market and adjusting the price of the bond in question to this yield. This adjustment may be made by the use of standard bond tables. In selecting quotations for comparative purposes, bonds of the same classification and grade shall be used.

(2) The application of the principles set forth in this paragraph may be illustrated as follows:

Example. T purchased for $115 a $100 bond, maturing in five years, on which interest is payable semiannually at the rate of 3.5 percent a year. This bond is convertible into common stock at the option of the holder. It is found that bonds of the same character, not having conversion features, were sold on the open market on or about the time of T's purchase on a basis to yield 2.80 percent. By recourse to a standard bond table, it is found that the cost of a 3½ percent 5-year $100 bond to yield 2.80 percent would have been $103.25. Since the taxpayer paid $115 for the convertible bond, the difference between $115 and $103.25, or $11.75, represents the value of the conversion features of the bond at the time of the purchase. The balance of $3.25 represents the bond premium subject to amortization under section 125.

(d) If a convertible bond acquired on or before June 15, 1950, is held during the taxable year, the amortizable bond premium shall be computed as if the provisions for the determination of the bond premium without the inclusion of any amount attributable to the conversion features of the bond were applicable for each year for which the bond was held prior to such taxable year. Thus, if T, in the example in paragraph (c) (2) of this section, had acquired the bond on January 1, 1949, and if T makes his income tax returns on the basis of the calendar year, the amortizable bond premium for 1952 would be $0.65, determined as follows:

Bond premium not attributable to conversion feature	$3.25
Amortizable bond premium for 1949 and 1950, determined by reference to bond premium not attributable to conversion feature	1.30
Portion of bond premium amortizable over remaining life of bond	1.95
Amortizable bond premium for each of the remaining 3 years, including the taxable year 1952 (one-third of $1.95)	65

§ 39.125 (b)-3 Capitalized expenses. (a) In the case of a bond on which there is no bond premium exclusive of capitalized expenses (such as buying commissions) but to which section 125 otherwise applies, a taxpayer who is required by the regulations under section 125 to use the method of amortization prescribed by § 39.125 (b)-5, a taxpayer who regularly employs a reasonable method of amortization under which such capitalized expenses are amortized, or a taxpayer who regularly employs a reasonable method of amortization under which such capitalized expenses are not amortized, is permitted, but is not required, to amortize such capitalized expenses in accordance with such method.

(b) In the case of a bond to which section 125 applies and on which there is bond premium exclusive of capitalized expenses, a taxpayer who is required by the regulations under section 125 to use the method of amortization prescribed by § 39.125 (b)-5, must treat capitalized expenses as being part of the bond premium for the purposes of section 125, or if the taxpayer regularly employs a reasonable method of amortization under which such capitalized expenses are treated as being part of the bond premium for the purposes of amortization, such capitalized expenses must be treated as being part of the bond premium for the purposes of section 125; but if under such regularly employed method such capitalized expenses are not treated as being part of the bond premium for the purposes of amortization, the taxpayer is permitted, but is not required, to treat such capitalized expenses as being part of the bond premium for the purposes of section 125.

§ 39.125 (b)-4 Taxable years in which interest not received or accruable. In the case of a taxpayer who makes his income returns on the cash receipts and disbursements basis or one who makes his returns on the accrual basis and who owns a bond to which section 125 applies and in respect of which no interest is received or accrued by the taxpayer during the taxable year, if the taxpayer is required by the regulations under section 125 to use the method of amortization prescribed by § 39.125 (b)-5, or if the taxpayer regularly employs a reasonable method of amortization under which the bond premium on such bond for such taxable year is amortized, or if the taxpayer regularly employs a reasonable method of amortization under which the bond premium on such bond for such taxable year is not amortized, amortization of bond premium on such bond for such taxable year is not required, but will be permitted in accordance with such method.

§ 39.125 (b)-5 Methods of amortization. (a) The determinations of the bond premium and amortizable bond premium on any bond to which section 125 applies shall be made in accordance with:

(1) The method of amortization regularly employed by the taxpayer, if such method is reasonable; or

A method of amortization will be deemed "regularly employed" by a taxpayer if the method was consistently followed in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1952, or if for taxable years beginning on or after such date a taxpayer who has never previously taken a deduction for amortization initiates in the first taxable year for which such a deduction is taken a reasonable method of amortization and consistently follows such method thereafter. A taxpayer who regularly employs a method of amortization may be one, for example, who is subject to the jurisdiction of a State or Federal regulatory agency and who, for the purposes of such agency, amortizes the bond premium on his bonds in accordance with a method prescribed or approved by such agency. However, it is not necessary that the taxpayer be subject to the jurisdiction of such an agency or that the method be prescribed or approved by such agency. It is sufficient if the taxpayer regularly employs a method of amortization and if such method is reasonable.

(b) The method of amortization prescribed by this section is as follows:

(1) The bond premium on any bond to which section 125 applies shall be determined in accordance with § 39.125 (b)-1 and shall be computed as of the end of the taxable year (or as of the date of disposition or redemption of the bond, if it was disposed of or redeemed in the taxable year) but without regard to the amortizable bond premium for the taxable year; and

(2) The amortizable bond premium on such bond for the taxable year shall be an amount which bears the same ratio to the bond premium on the bond as the number of months in the taxable year during which the bond was owned by the taxpayer bears to the number of months from the beginning of the taxable year (or, if the bond was acquired in the taxable year, from the date of acquisition) to the date of maturity or earlier call date. For the purposes of this subparagraph, a fractional part of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it shall be considered as a month.

SEC. 125. Amortizable bond premium. * * *

(c) Election on taxable and partially taxable bonds—(1) Eligibility to elect and bonds with respect to which election permitted. This section shall apply with respect to the following classes of taxpayers with respect to the following classes of bonds only if the taxpayer has elected to have this section apply.

(A) Partially tax-exempt. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, bonds with respect to the interest on which the credit provided in section 25 (a) (1) or (2) is allowable; and

(B) Wholly taxable. In the case of any taxpayer, bonds the interest on which is not excludible from gross income but with respect to which the credit provided in section 25 (a) (1) or (2), or section 26 (a), as the case may be, is not allowable.

(2) Manner and effect of election. The election authorized under this subsection shall be made in accordance with such regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall prescribe. If such election is made with respect to any bond (described in paragraph (1)) of the taxpayer, it shall also apply to all such bonds held by the taxpayer at the beginning of the first taxable year to which the election applies and to all such bonds thereafter acquired by him and shall be binding for all subsequent taxable years with respect to all such bonds of the taxpayer, unless, upon application by the taxpayer, the Commissioner permits him, subject to such conditions as the Commissioner deems necessary, to revoke such election. The election authorized under this subsection in the case of a member of a partnership shall be exercisable with respect to bonds of the partnership only by the partnership. In the case of bonds held by a common trust fund, as defined in section 169, or by a foreign personal holding company, as defined in section 331, the election authorized under this subsection shall be exercisable with respect to such bonds only by the common trust fund or foreign personal holding company.

§ 39.125 (c)-1 Election. In the case of a corporation, the election provided in section 125 may be made only with respect to fully taxable bonds. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the election provided in such section may be made with respect to (a) fully taxable bonds only, or (b) partially tax-exempt bonds only, or (c) both fully taxable bonds and partially tax-exempt bonds. Such election shall be made by the taxpayer by claiming a deduction for the bond premium in his return for the first taxable year to which he desires the election to be applicable. No other method of making such election is permitted. If the election is so made, the taxpayer should attach to his return a statement showing the computation of the deduction. The election shall apply to all bonds in respect of which it was made owned by the taxpayer at the beginning of the first taxable year to which the election applies and also to all bonds of such class (or classes) thereafter acquired by him, and shall be binding for all subsequent taxable years. Upon application by the taxpayer, the Commissioner may permit him to revoke the election, subject to such conditions as the Commissioner deems necessary. In the case of bonds owned by a partnership, common trust fund, or foreign personal holding company, the election shall be exercisable by such partnership, common trust fund, or foreign personal holding company.

§ 39.125 (c)-2 Partially tax-exempt bonds owned by estates, trusts, partnerships, etc. If a trust owning partially tax-exempt bonds elects to amortize the bond premium thereon under section 125, the credits of the trust and the beneficiaries on account of such interest are required to be reduced by the portion of the amortization deduction attributable to their shares of such interest. A similar rule is applied in the case of partially tax-exempt bonds owned by estates, common trust funds, partnerships, foreign personal holding companies, and personal service corporations.

SEC. 125. Amortizable bond premium. * * *

(d) Definition of bond. As used in this section, the term "bond" means any bond, debenture, note, or certificate or other evidence of indebtedness, issued by any corporation and bearing interest (including any like obligation issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), with interest coupons or in registered form, but does not include any such obligation which constitutes stock in trade of the taxpayer or any such obligation of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or any such obligation held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business.

(e) Dealers in tax-exempt securities. For special rules applicable, in the case of dealers in securities, with respect to premium attributable to certain wholly tax-exempt securities, see section 22 (o).

SEC. 126. Income in respect of decedents. (a) Inclusion in gross income—(1) General rule. The amount of all items of gross income in respect of a decedent which are not properly includible in respect of the taxable period in which falls the date of his death or a prior period shall be included in the gross income, for the taxable year when received, of:

(A) The estate of the decedent, if the right to receive the amount is acquired by the decedent's estate from the decedent;

(B) The person who, by reason of the death of the decedent, acquires the right to receive the amount, if the right to receive the amount is not acquired by the decedent's estate from the decedent; or

(C) The person who acquires from the decedent the right to receive the amount by bequest, devise, or inheritance, if the amount is received after a distribution by the decedent's estate of such right.

(2) Income in case of sale, etc. If a right, described in paragraph (1), to receive an amount is transferred by the estate of the decedent or a person who receives such right by reason of the death of the decedent or by bequest, devise or inheritance from the decedent, there shall be included in the gross income of the estate or such person, as the case may be, for the taxable period in which the transfer occurs, the fair market value of such right at the time of such transfer plus the amount by which any consideration for the transfer exceeds such fair market value. For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "transfer" includes sale, exchange, or other disposition, but does not include a transfer to a person pursuant to the right of such person to receive such amount by reason of the death of the decedent or by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent.

(3) Character of income determined by reference to decedent. The right, described in paragraph (1), to receive an amount shall be treated, in the hands of the estate of the decedent or any person who acquired such right by reason of the death of the decedent, or by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent, as if it had been acquired by the estate or such person in the transaction by which the decedent acquired such right; and the amount includible in gross income under paragraph (1) or (2) shall be considered in the hands of the estate or such person to have the character which it would have had in the hands of the decedent if the decedent had lived and received such amount.

§ 39.126 (a)-1 Inclusion in gross income of income in respect of a decedent. (a) The gross income for the taxable year of a decedent in which falls the date of his death is computed upon the basis of the method of accounting followed by such decedent even though amounts to which he is entitled as gross income are not includible under such method in computing net income for such taxable year or any prior taxable year. See § 39.42-1. Such amounts include all the accrued income of a decedent who reported his income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, and, in the case of a decedent who reported his income under the accrual method of accounting, such amounts include contingent items which were not accrued by the decedent and, under § 39.42-1, all items (except the amount of partnership income includible under section 182) which were accrued in the last taxable year of the decedent solely by reason of his death. For example, if the decedent who reported income on the basis of the accrual method of accounting was a member of a partnership which kept its books on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, the decedent would be entitled at the date of his death to his distributive share of the accrued income of the partnership, although there would be included in his gross income only his distributive share of the partnership income computed on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements.

(b) Under section 126 (a) (1) all such amounts to which a decedent is entitled as gross income and which are not includible in computing his net income for his last taxable year or any prior taxable year shall be included, when received, in the gross income of the estate of the decedent or of the person receiving such amounts if such amounts are received by the estate of the decedent or by a person entitled to such amounts by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent or by reason of the death of the decedent. These amounts are included in the income of the estate and such persons when received by them, regardless of whether or not they report income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements.

(c) The persons who are placed with respect to such amounts in the same position as the decedent are the decedent's estate (which in the great majority of cases will be the one who receives such amounts) and, if the estate does not collect such amounts but distributes the right to receive such amounts to the heir, next of kin, legatee, or devisee who inherited or was bequeathed or devised such right, such heir, next of kin, legatee or devisee. Thus, if the decedent who kept his books on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements was entitled at the date of his death to a large salary payment to be made in equal annual installments over five years, and his estate after collecting two installments distributed the right to the remaining installment payments to the residuary legatee of the estate, the estate must include in its gross income the two installments received by it, and the legatee must include in his gross income each of the three installments received by him.

(d) Also placed in the same position as the decedent with respect to such amounts are those who acquire the right to such amounts by reason of the death of the decedent. An example of the application of this provision is the case of a decedent who owned a defense bond, with his wife as co-owner or beneficiary and who died before the payment of such bond. The entire amount accruing on the bond and not includible in income by the decedent, not just the amount accruing after the death of the decedent, would be treated as income to his wife when the bond is paid. Another example is the case of a partner whose partnership agreement provided that upon his death his interest in certain partnership assets would pass to the surviving partners in exchange for payments to be made by them to his widow. Upon his death, the payments by the surviving partners must be included in the widow's income to the extent they are attributable to the earnings of the partnership accrued only by reason of his death. The income reflected by the payments to the extent they are so attributable was not includible in the partner's income since it was not received by the partner (for the purposes of the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting) and was accrued only by reason of his death (for the purposes of the accrual method of accounting) If the payments are to be made to the widow as trustee for minor children, and if the right to receive such payments is transferred to the children upon their majority, the children are within the provisions of section 126 (a) (1) as receiving the right to such payments by reason of the death of the decedent, and must include such payments when received in their income to the extent the payments are attributable to the earnings of the partnership accrued only by reason of the death.

Example. Suppose that A and the decedent B were equal partners in a business possessed of tangible assets having a present value considerably in excess of cost; suppose that certain current partnership business was well advanced toward completion before the death of B; and suppose that the partnership agreement provided that, upon the death of one of the partners, all partnership assets, including unfinished business, should pass to the surviving partner, and that the surviving partner should make certain payments to the estate of the decedent. To the extent that the payments by A to the estate of B are attributable to B's interest in the previously earned proportion of the unfinished partnership business transactions, their receipt by the estate of B will reflect the realization of income. With respect to such portion of the payments by A as is attributable to B's interest in the tangible assets of the partnership which had appreciated in value, no gain to the estate of B will be recognized. If some portion of the payments by A is attributable to a sale of B's interest in partnership assets consummated by B before his death, however, the gain to the estate of B reflected in such payments will be recognized regardless of the character of the asset sold, and regardless of whether or not payment was due on a day which must occur after B's death.

(e) Since section 126 provides for the treatment of such amounts as income to the estate and other persons placed in the same position as the decedent with respect to such amounts, the provisions of section 113 (a) (5) with respect to the basis of property acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance do not apply to these amounts in the hands of the estate and such persons. Furthermore, section 126 only applies to the amount of items of gross income in respect of a decedent, and items which are excluded from his gross income under section 22 (b) or section 116 are not within the provisions of section 126.

(f) If the right to receive an amount of income in respect of a decedent is transferred by the estate or the person entitled to such amount by bequest, devise, or inheritance, or by reason of the death of the decedent, the fair market value of such right at the date of the transfer shall be included in the income of the estate or of such person, plus the amount by which any consideration received on such transfer exceeds the fair market value of such right. Thus, upon a sale of such right, the fair market value of the right or the amount received upon the sale, whichever is greater, is included in income. Similarly, if the right to receive the income is disposed of, as by gift or bequest, the fair market value of such right at the time of such disposition must be included in the gross income of the donor, testator, or other transferor. However, if the person to whom such right is transferred is a person described in section 126 (a) (1) as being entitled to such right by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent or by reason of the death of the decedent, such fair market value of the right is not included in the income of the transferor. Examples of such transfers are those by the estate to a specific legatee of such right or to the residuary legatee. Another example is the case of a trust to which is bequeathed the right of the decedent to certain payments of income. If the trust terminates and the right to such payments is transferred to the beneficiary, the trust does not include the fair market value of the right to receive such payments in its income, but such payments are included in the income of the beneficiary under the provisions of section 126 (a) (1) Under section 126 (a) (1) the transferee in each of the above examples must include the amount, when received, in his income, and if he transfers the right to receive such amount to a person not entitled to such right by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent or by reason of his death, then he must include in his income the fair market value of the right at the time of such transfer.

(g) The right to receive an amount of income in respect of a decedent shall be treated in the hands of the estate or the person entitled to receive such amount by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent or by reason of his death as if it had been acquired in the transaction by which the decedent acquired such right, and shall be considered as having the same character it would have had if the decedent had lived and received such amount. The estate or such person is placed in the same position with respect to the nature of this income as the position the decedent enjoyed. Thus, if the income would have been capital gain to the decedent, if he had lived and had received it, from the sale of property held for more than six months, the income when received, or its fair market value if transferred, shall be treated in the hands of the estate or of such person as gain from the sale of the property, held for more than six months, in the same manner as if such person had held the property for the period the decedent held it, and had made the sale. Similarly, if the income is interest on United States obligations owned by the decedent, such income shall be treated as interest on United States obligations in the hands of the person receiving it, for the purpose of determining the credit provided by section 25 (a) (1) and (2) as if such person owned the obligations with respect to which such interest is paid. If the amount would have constituted earned income to the decedent, as in the case of the accrued wages of a decedent who reported income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, such amount shall constitute earned income to the person including such amount in his gross income to the same extent as if he had been engaged in place of the decedent in the transaction in which the amount was earned. If the amounts received would be subject to special treatment under section 107 if the decedent had lived and included such amounts in his gross income, section 107 applies. Similarly, the provisions of sections 105 and 106, relating to the surtax attributable to the sale of certain oil or gas property and to certain claims against the United States, apply to any amount included in gross income, the right to which was obtained by the decedent by a sale or claim within the provisions of those sections. The surtax attributable to the inclusion in the gross income of the person receiving the amount referred to in the preceding sentence shall not exceed 30 percent of such amount.

SEC. 126. Income in respect of decedents. * * *

(b) Allowance of deductions and credit. The amount of any deduction specified in section 23 (a), (b), (c), or (m) (relating to deductions for expenses, interest, taxes, and depletion) or credit specified in section 31 (foreign tax credit), in respect of a decedent which is not properly allowable to the decedent in respect of the taxable period in which falls the date of his death, or a prior period, shall be allowed:

(1) Expenses, interest, and taxes. In the case of a deduction specified in section 23 (a), (b), or (c) and a credit specified in section 31, in the taxable year when paid—

(A) To the estate of the decedent; except that

(B) If the estate of the decedent is not liable to discharge the obligation to which the deduction or credit relates, to the person who, by reason of the death of the decedent or by bequest, devise, or inheritance acquires, subject to such obligation, from the decedent an interest in property of the decedent.

(2) Depletion. In the case of the deduction specified in section 23 (m), to the person described in subsection (a) (1) (A), (B), or (C) who, in the manner described therein, receives the income to which the deduction relates, in the taxable year when such income is received.

§ 39.126 (b)-1 Allowance of deductions and credit in respect of decedent. (a) Under section 126 (b) the expenses, interest, and taxes described in section 23 (a) (b) and (c) for which the decedent was liable, which were not properly allowable as a deduction in his last taxable year or any prior taxable year, are allowed when paid (1) as a deduction by the estate, or (2) if the estate was not liable to pay such obligation, as a deduction by the person who by bequest, devise, or inheritance from the decedent or by reason of the death of the decedent acquires, subject to such obligation, an interest in property of the decedent. Similar treatment is given to the foreign tax credit provided by section 31. For the purposes of clause (2) of this paragraph, the right to receive an amount of gross income in respect of a decedent is considered property of the decedent; on the other hand, it is not necessary for a person, otherwise within the provisions of clause (2) of this paragraph, to receive the right to any income in respect of a decedent. Thus, if the right to income in respect of a decedent, receivable by reason of the death of the decedent by a person other than the estate, is subject to an income tax imposed during the life of the decedent by a foreign country, which tax must be satisfied out of such income, such person is entitled to the credit provided in section 31 when he pays this obligation. If the decedent, who reported income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, owned real property on which no income had accrued, but on which accrued taxes had become a lien, and if such property passed directly to the heir of the decedent in a jurisdiction in which real property does not become a part of a decedent's estate, the heir, upon paying such taxes, may take the same deduction under section 23 (c) that would be allowed to the decedent if, while alive, he had made such payments.

(b) The deduction for percentage depletion is allowable only to the person who receives the income in respect of the decedent to which the deduction relates, whether or not such person receives the property from which such income is derived. Thus, if the income results from payments on units of mineral sold by the decedent, who reported income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, the deduction for depletion, computed on such number of units as if the person receiving such income had the same economic interest as the decedent, shall be allowed to such person regardless of whether or not he receives any interest in the mineral property other than such income. If the decedent did not compute his deduction for depletion on the basis of percentage depletion, any deduction for depletion to which the decedent was entitled at the date of his death would be allowable in computing his net income for his last taxable year, and there can be no deduction in respect of the decedent by any other person for such depletion.

SEC. 126. Income in respect of decedents. * * *

(c) Deduction for estate tax—(1) Allowance of deduction. A person who includes an amount in gross income under subsection (a) shall be allowed, for the same taxable year, as a deduction an amount which bears the same ratio to the estate tax attributable to the net value for estate tax purposes of all the items described in subsection (a) (1) as the value for estate tax purposes of the items of gross income or portions thereof in respect of which such person included the amount in gross income (or the amount included in gross income, whichever is lower) bears to the value for estate tax purposes of all the items described in subsection (a) (1).

(2) Method of computing deduction. For the purposes of paragraph (1)

(A) The term "estate tax" means the tax imposed upon the estate of the decedent under section 810 or 860, reduced by the credits against such tax, plus the tax imposed upon the estate of the decedent under section 935, reduced by the credits against such tax.

(B) The net value for estate tax purposes of all the items described in subsection (a) (1) shall be the excess of the value for estate tax purposes of all the items described in subsection (a) (1) over the deductions from the gross estate in respect of claims which represent the deductions and credit described in subsection (b).

(C) The estate tax attributable to such net value shall be an amount equal to the excess of the estate tax over the estate tax computed without including in the gross estate such net value.

§ 39.126 (c)-1 Deduction for estate tax attributable to income in respect of decedent. (a) Section 126 (c) provides that the estate or person required to include in gross income any amount in respect of a decedent may deduct that portion of the estate tax on the decedent's estate which is attributable to the inclusion in the decedent's estate of the right to receive such amount. This deduction is determined by first ascertaining the net value in the decedent's estate of the items which are included under section 126 in computing the income of the persons described in that section, that is, the excess of the value included in the gross estate on account of the items of gross income in respect of the decedent over the deductions from the gross estate for claims which represent the deductions and credit in respect of the decedent described in section 126 (b) The portion of the estate tax (the sum of the basic estate tax and the additional estate tax, reduced by the credits against such taxes) attributable to the inclusion in the gross estate of such net value is the excess of the estate tax over the estate tax computed without including such net value in the gross estate. The estate and each person receiving income in respect of the decedent may deduct as his share of such portion of the estate tax an amount which bears the same ratio to such portion as the value in the gross estate of the right to the income included by the estate or such person in gross income bears to the value in the gross estate of all the items of gross income in respect of the decedent.

(b) Section 126 (c) is illustrated by the following example:

Example. X, an attorney who kept his books on the basis of the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting, was entitled at the date of his death to a fee for services rendered in a case not completed at the time of his death, which fee was valued in his estate at $1,000, and to accrued bond interest which was valued at $500. In all, $1,500 was included in his gross estate in respect of income described in section 126 (a) (1). There were deducted as claims against his estate $150 for business expenses for which his estate was liable, and $50 for taxes accrued on certain property he owned, in all, $200, for claims which represent the deductions described in section 126 (b) which are allowable as deductions to his estate or to the beneficiaries of his estate. His gross estate is $185,000 and his net estate, computed without deducting any specific exemption, is $170,000, on which the total basic and additional estate tax (reduced by credits against such tax) is $23,625. In the year following the death of X, his estate collected the fee in the amount of $1,200, which amount is included in the income of the estate. The estate may deduct, in computing its net income for such year, $260 on account of the estate tax attributable to such income; computed as follows:

(1) (i) Value of income described in section 126 (a) (1) included in computing gross estate	$1,500
(ii) Deductions in computing gross estate for claims representing deductions described in section 126 (b)	200
(iii) Net value of items described in section 126 (a) (1)	1,300
(2) (i) Estate tax (basic and additional estate taxes, less credits against such taxes)	23,625
(ii) Less: Estate tax computed without including $1,300 (item (1) (iii)) in gross estate	23,235
(iii) Portion of estate tax attributable to net value of income items	390
(3) (i) Value in gross estate of income received by estate in taxable year	1,000
(ii) Value in gross estate of all income items described in section 126 (a) (1) (item (1) (i))	1,500
(iii) Part of estate tax deductible upon receiving the $1,200 fee $\left(\frac{1,000}{1,500}\text{ of } $390\right)$	260

Although $1,200 was later collected as the fee, only the $1,000 actually included in the gross estate is used in the above computations. However, to avoid distortion, section 126 (c) provides that if the value included in the gross estate is greater than the amount finally collected, only the amount collected shall be used in the above computations. Thus, if the amount collected as the fee were only $500, the estate tax deductible on the receipt of such amount would be $\frac{500}{1,500}$ of $390, or $130.

SEC. 127. War losses—(a) Cases in which loss deemed sustained, and time deemed sustained. For the purposes of this chapter—

(1) Property not in enemy countries. Property destroyed or seized on or after December 7, 1941, in the course of military or naval operations by the United States or any other country engaged in the present war shall be deemed to have been destroyed or seized on a date chosen by the taxpayer in the manner provided in paragraph (4), which falls between—

(A) The latest date, as established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, on which such property may be considered as not destroyed or seized, and

(B) The earliest date, as established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, on which such property may be considered as having already been destroyed or seized.

For the purposes of this paragraph property within an area which comes under the control of a country at war with the United States after the date war with such country is declared by the United States shall be deemed to have been destroyed or seized in the course of military or naval operations by such country, and the date specified in subparagraph (A) shall not be later than the latest date determined by the Commissioner as the date on which such area was under the control of the United States or a country not at war with the United States, and the date specified in subparagraph (B) shall not be later than the earliest date determined by the Commissioner as the date on which such area may be considered under the control of the country which is at war with the United States.

(2) Property in enemy countries. Property within any country at war with the United States, or within an area under the control of any such country on the date war with such country was declared by the United States, shall be deemed to have been destroyed or seized on the date war with such country was declared by the United States.

(3) Investments referable to destroyed or seized property. Any interest in, or with respect to, property described in paragraph (1) or (2) (including any interest represented by a security as defined in section 23 (g) (3) or section 23 (k) (3)) which becomes worthless shall be considered to have been destroyed or seized (and the loss therefrom shall be considered a loss from the destruction or seizure) on the date chosen by the taxpayer which falls between the dates specified in paragraph (1), or on the date prescribed in paragraph (2), as the case may be, when the last property (described in the applicable paragraph) to which the interest relates would be deemed destroyed or seized under the applicable paragraph. This paragraph shall apply only if the interest would have become worthless if the property had been destroyed. For the purposes of this paragraph, an interest shall be deemed to have become worthless notwithstanding the fact that such interest has a value if such value is attributable solely to the possibility of recovery of the property, compensation (other than insurance or similar indemnity) on account of its destruction or seizure, or both. Section 23 (g) (2) and (k) (2) shall not apply to any interest which under this paragraph is considered to have been destroyed or seized. Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, a taxpayer which owns 100 per centum (excluding qualifying shares) of each class of stock of a corporation may elect to determine the worthlessness of its interest, described in this paragraph, in or with respect to the property of the corporation, without regard to the amount of the property of such corporation which would be excluded under subsection (e) (2) (A) in determining the adjusted basis of all the assets of the corporation for the purposes of subsection (e), but such amount shall be treated under subsection (b) (1) as a recovery by the taxpayer in the taxable year with respect to such interest.

(4) Choice of date. The taxpayer's choice of a date under paragraph (1) or (3) shall be effective only if made within such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.127 (a)-1 War losses generally. For regulations governing the treatment of war losses, see §§ 29.127 (a)-1 to 29.127 (a)-4, inclusive, 29.127 (b)-1, and 29.127 (e)-1 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.)

SEC. 127. War losses. * * *

(b) Amount of loss on destroyed or seized property. In the case of any property or interest in or with respect to property deemed to be destroyed or seized under subsection (a)—

(1) The amount of the loss on account of such property or interest shall be determined with regard to any recoveries with respect thereto in the taxable year but without regard to any possibility of recovering such property or interest, or of receiving any compensation (other than insurance or similar indemnity) on account of such property or interest in the taxable year or in any future taxable year.

(2) The taxpayer may choose to decrease the amount of the loss by all obligations or liabilities of the taxpayer with respect to such property or interest discharged or satisfied out of the property or interest upon its destruction or seizure, if the Commissioner is satisfied that such obligations or liabilities are so discharged or satisfied in a subsequent taxable year, or that the taxpayer is unable to determine whether or not such obligations or liabilities are in fact discharged or satisfied.

No loss shall be deemed to have been sustained upon the destruction or seizure of such property or interest to the extent that it is compensated for by the discharge or satisfaction of obligations and liabilities of the taxpayer out of such property or interest in the taxable year in which such destruction or seizure is deemed to have occurred. The taxpayer's choice under this subsection shall be effective only if made within such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) Recoveries—(1) General rule. Upon the recovery in the taxable year of any money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year, the amount of such recovery shall be included in gross income to the extent provided in paragraph (2), unless the provisions of paragraph (3) are applicable to the taxable year pursuant to an election made by the taxpayer under the provisions of paragraph (5).

(2) Inclusion in gross income—(A) Amount of recovery. The amount of the recovery of any money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year shall be an amount equal to the aggregate of such money and the fair market value of such property, determined as of the date of the recovery.

(B) Amount of gain includible. To the extent that the amount of the recovery plus the aggregate of the amounts of previous such recoveries do not exceed that part of the aggregate of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of the destruction or seizure of property described in subsection (a) which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under this chapter or chapter 2, such amount shall not be includible in gross income and shall not be deemed gain upon the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. To the extent that such amount plus the aggregate of the amounts of previous such recoveries exceed that part of the aggregate of such deductions, which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under this chapter or chapter 2 and do not exceed that part of the aggregate of such deductions which did result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under this chapter or chapter 2, such amount shall be included in gross income but shall not be deemed a gain upon the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. To the extent that such amount plus the aggregate of the amounts of previous such recoveries exceed the aggregate of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of the destruction or seizure of property described in subsection (a), such amount shall be considered a gain upon the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure and shall be recognized or not recognized as provided in section 112 (f). If for any previous taxable year the taxpayer chooses under subsection (b) to treat any obligations and liabilities as discharged or satisfied out of the property or interest described in subsection (a), and if such obligations and liabilities were not so discharged or satisfied, the amount of such obligations and liabilities treated as discharged or satisfied under subsection (b) shall be considered for the purposes of this section as a deduction by reason of this section which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under this chapter or chapter 2. For the purposes of this paragraph an allowable deduction for any taxable year on account of the destruction or seizure of property described in subsection (a) shall, to the extent not allowed in computing the tax of the taxpayer for such taxable year, be considered an allowable deduction which did not result in a reduction of any tax for the taxpayer under this chapter or chapter 2.

(3) Tax adjustment measured by prior benefits. If the provisions of this paragraph are applicable to the taxable year pursuant to an election made by the taxpayer under the provisions of paragraph (5)—

(A) Amount of recovery. The amount of the recovery in the taxable year of any money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year shall be an amount equal to the aggregate of such money and the fair market value of such property, determined as of the date of the recovery. For the purpose of this paragraph, in the case of the recovery of the same property or interest considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized, the fair market value of such property or interest shall, at the option of the taxpayer, be considered an amount equal to the adjusted basis (for determining loss) of such property or interest in the hands of the taxpayer on the date such property or interest was considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized. The amount of the recovery determined under this subparagraph shall be reduced for the purposes of subparagraphs (B) and (C) by the amount of the obligations or liabilities with respect to the property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized in respect of which the recovery was received, if the taxpayer for any previous taxable year chose under subsection (b) (2) to treat such obligations or liabilities as discharged or satisfied out of such property, and such obligations or liabilities were not so discharged or satisfied prior to the date of the recovery.

(B) Adjustment for prior tax benefits. That part of the amount of the recovery, in respect of any property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized, which is not in excess of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of such destruction or seizure of the property (the amount of such allowable deductions being first reduced by the aggregate amount of any prior recoveries in respect of the same property) shall be excluded from gross income for the taxable year of the recovery for the purpose of computing the tax under this chapter and chapter 2; but there shall be added to, and assessed and collected as a part of, the tax under this chapter for the taxable year of the recovery the total increase in the tax under this chapter and chapter 2 for all taxable years which would result by decreasing, in an amount equal to such part of the recovery so excluded, such deductions allowable in the prior taxable years with respect to the destruction or seizure of the property. Such increase in the tax for each such year so resulting shall be computed in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary. Such regulations shall give effect to previous recoveries of any kind (including recoveries described in section 22 (b) (12)) with respect to any prior year, and shall provide for the case where there was no tax for the prior year, but shall otherwise treat the tax previously determined for any year in accordance with the principles set forth in section 3801 (d). All credits allowable against the tax for any year and all carry-overs and carry-backs affected by so decreasing the allowable deductions shall be taken into account in computing the increase in the tax, except that the computation of the excess profits credit under Chapter 2E for any taxable year shall not be affected.

(C) Gain upon recovery. The amount of any recovery or part thereof, in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized, which is not excluded from gross income under the provisions of subparagraph (B) shall be considered for the taxable year of the recovery as gain on the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure and shall be recognized or not recognized as provided in section 112 (f).

(D) Recoveries treated as gross income for certain purposes. For the purposes of sections 51, 52, and 3801 (b) the recovery in the taxable year of any money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year shall be deemed to be an item includible in gross income for the taxable year in which the recovery is made.

(4) Restoration of value of investments referable to destroyed or seized property. For the purpose of this subsection the restoration in whole or in part of the value of any interest described in subsection (a) (3) by reason of any recovery of money or property in respect of property to which such interest related and which was considered under subsection (a) (1) or (2) as destroyed or seized shall be deemed a recovery of property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized. In applying paragraph (3) of this subsection such restoration shall be treated as the recovery of the same interest considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized.

(5) Election by taxpayer for application of paragraph (3). If the taxpayer elects to have the provisions of paragraph (3) applicable to any taxable year in which he recovered any money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized, the provisions of paragraph (3) shall be applicable to all taxable years of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1941, and such election, once made, shall be irrevocable. The election shall be made in such manner and at such time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, except that no election under this paragraph may be made after December 31, 1952, unless the taxpayer recovers money or property (in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized) during a taxable year ending after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951. If pursuant to such election the provisions of paragraph (3) are applicable to any taxable year—

(A) The period of limitations provided in sections 275 and 276 on the making of assessments and the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection shall not, with respect to—

(i) The amount to be added to the tax for such taxable year under the provisions of paragraph (3), and

(ii) Any deficiency for such taxable year or for any other taxable year, to the extent attributable to the basis of the recovered property being determined under the provisions of subsection (d) (2), expire prior to the expiration of two years following the date of the making of such election, and such amount and such deficiency may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of such period notwithstanding any law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment and collection, and

(B) In case refund or credit of any overpayment resulting from the application of the provisions of paragraph (3) to such taxable year is prevented on the date of the making of such election, or within one year from such date, by the operation of any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises), refund or credit of such overpayment may, nevertheless, be made or allowed if claim therefor is filed within one year from such date.

In the case of any taxable year ending before the date of the making by the taxpayer of an election under this paragraph, no interest shall be paid on any overpayment resulting from the application of the provisions of paragraph (3) to such taxable year, and no interest shall be assessed or collected with respect to any amount or any deficiency specified in clause (A), for any period prior to the expiration of six months following the date of the making of such election by the taxpayer.

§ 39.127 (c)-1 Recoveries in respect of war losses—(a) In general. (1) Upon the recovery by the taxpayer in the taxable year of any money or property in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year, the amount of such recovery must be included in gross income to the extent provided in section 127 (c) (2) unless, pursuant to the taxpayer's election, the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable to such recovery. For the treatment of war loss recoveries under such provisions, and the manner of making such election, see paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section.

(2) Except as provided in section 127 (c) (3) (A) and in this paragraph, the amount of the recovery in respect of a war loss in a previous taxable year is determined in the same manner for the purpose of section 127 (c) (2) or (3) The amount of the recovery of any money or property in respect of any war loss is the aggregate of the amount of such money and of the fair market value of such property both determined as of the date of the recovery If, pursuant to the taxpayer's election under section 127 (c) (5) the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable to any taxable year in which he recovers the same property or interest considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in a previous taxable year, the fair market value of such property or interest shall, at the option of the taxpayer, be considered an amount equal to the adjusted basis (for determining loss) of such property or interest in the hands of the taxpayer on the date such property or interest was considered as destroyed or seized. This option is exercisable by the taxpayer with respect to each separate property or interest considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in a previous taxable year. Also, if the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable pursuant to the taxpayer's election, the amount of the recovery of any money or property in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in any prior taxable year shall be reduced for the purpose of section 127 (c) (3) (B) and (C) by the amount of the obligations or liabilities with respect to such property, if the taxpayer for any previous taxable year chose under section 127 (b) (2) to treat such obligations or liabilities as discharged or satisfied out of such property, and such obligations or liabilities were not so discharged or satisfied before the date of the recovery. See § 29.127 (b)-1 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.) The recoveries in respect of any war loss include the recovery of the property or interest treated as destroyed or seized under section 127 and the recovery of any money or property in lieu of such property or interest or on account of the destruction or seizure of such property or interest. For example, there is a recovery upon the return to the taxpayer after the termination of the war of his property which was treated as resulting in a war loss because it was located in a country at war with the United States.

An award by a government on account of the seizure of the taxpayer's property by an enemy country is a recovery under section 127 (c) The amount obtained upon the sale or other transfer by the taxpayer of his right to any property treated as resulting in a war loss is also a recovery for the purpose of section 127 (c) Similarly if a taxpayer who sustained a war loss under section 127 (c) upon the liquidation of a corporation has received the rights to any property of the corporation which was treated as destroyed or seized under section 127 (a) (1) or (2) any recovery by the taxpayer with respect to such rights is a recovery by him for the purposes of section 127 (c) Furthermore, if any interest of the taxpayer in or with respect to property was determined to be worthless and was treated as a war loss under section 127 (a) (3) (see § 29.127 (a)-4 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.)) or if the taxpayer retained an interest in a corporation with respect to which he sustained a war loss under section 127 (e), and if the interest in the hands of the taxpayer is restored in value, in whole or in part, by reason of a recovery with respect to the underlying assets treated as destroyed or seized under section 127, then such restoration in value is a recovery by the taxpayer for the purposes of section 127 (c) In the application of section 127 (c) (3), such restoration shall be treated as a recovery of the same interest considered as destroyed or seized. Property considered as destroyed or seized under section 127 (a) is considered as not being in existence from the date of the loss to the date of its recovery.

(3) For the purpose of section 127 (c) the recoveries considered are only those with respect to war losses sustained in prior taxable years. Similarly, the only deductions considered are those allowable for prior taxable years, and any allowable deductions for the year of the recovery are ignored for the purposes of applying such section to the recovery. If property is treated as destroyed or seized under section 127, and if in the same taxable year there is also a recovery with respect to such property, such recovery is not within the provisions of section 127 (c) but is taken into account under section 127 (b) in determining the amount of the loss, if any, on the destruction or seizure. See section 127 (b)-1. An allowable deduction with respect to a war loss is any deduction to which the taxpayer is entitled on account of any property or interest being treated as destroyed or seized under section 127, regardless of whether or not such deduction was claimed by the taxpayer or otherwise allowed in computing his tax. If a deduction was claimed by a taxpayer in computing his tax for any taxable year and if such deduction was disallowed, such deduction will not be considered an allowable deduction for such taxable year since the previous determination will not be reconsidered.

(b) General rule; inclusion of recovery in gross income. (1) A taxpayer who has sustained a war loss described in section 127 and who has not elected to have the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) apply to any taxable year in which he recovered any money or property in respect of a war loss in any previous taxable year must include in his gross income for each taxable year, to the extent provided in section 127 (c) (2) the amount of his recoveries of money and property for such taxable year in respect of any war loss in a previous taxable year. Section 127 (c) (2) provides that such recoveries for any taxable year are not includible in income until the taxpayer has recovered an amount equal to his allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of such war losses which did not result in a reduction of any tax under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code, that is, of any income tax of the taxpayer, or chapter 2, including the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter E thereof. War loss recoveries are considered as made first on account of war losses allowable but not actually allowed as a deduction, and second on account of war losses allowed as a deduction but which did not result in a reduction of tax under chapter 1 or chapter 2. If there were deductions allowed on account of war losses for two or more taxable years which did not result in a reduction of any tax under chapter 1 or chapter 2, a recovery on account of such losses is considered as made on account of such losses in the order of the taxable years for which they were allowed, beginning with the latest. See § 39.127 (f)-1 for the determination of the amount of such deductions. Recoveries in excess of such amount are treated as ordinary income until such excess equals the amount of the taxpayer's allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of war losses which did result in a reduction of any such tax under chapter 1 or chapter 2. Any further recoveries in excess of all the taxpayer's allowable deductions in prior taxable years for war losses are treated as gain on an involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure, and such gain is recognized or not recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f) See § 39.112 (f)-1. Such gain, if recognized, is included in gross income as ordinary income unless section 117 (j) applies to cause such gain to be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. See § 39.117 (j)-1.

(2) The determination as to whether and to what extent any recoveries are to be included in gross income is made upon the basis of the amount of all the recoveries for each day upon which there are any such recoveries, as follows:

(i) The amount of the recoveries for any day is not included in gross income, and is not considered gain on an involuntary conversion, to the extent, if any, that the aggregate of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of war losses which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, as determined under § 39.127 (f)-1, exceeds the amount of all previous recoveries in the same and prior taxable years.

(ii) The amount of the recoveries for any day which is not excluded from gross income under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph is included in gross income as ordinary income, and is not considered gain on an involuntary conversion, to the extent, if any, that the aggregate of all the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of war losses (both those which resulted in a reduction of a tax of the taxpayer and those which did not) exceeds the sum of the amount of all previous recoveries in the same and prior taxable years and of that portion, if any, of the amount of the recoveries for such day which is not included in gross income under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph.

(iii) The amount of the recoveries for any day which is not excluded from gross income under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph and is not included in gross income as ordinary income under subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph is considered gain on an involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. The following provisions then apply to this gain:

(a) Such gain is recognized or not recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f) relating to gain upon such conversion of property. For the purpose of applying section 112 (f), such gain for any day is deemed to be expended in the manner provided in section 112 (f) to the extent the recovery for such day is so expended.

(b) If such gain is recognized, it is included in gross income as ordinary income or, if the provisions of section 117 (j) apply and require such treatment, as gain on the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. For the purpose of applying section 117 (j) such recognized gain for any day is deemed to be derived from property described in that section to the extent of the recovery for such day with respect to such property, except such portion of such recovery as is attributable to the nonrecognized gain for such day.

(c) Section 127 (d) provides that in determining the unadjusted basis of recovered property, the total gain and the recognized gain with respect to such property must be determined. For such purpose, the recognized gain deemed to be derived from properties described in section 117 (j) may be allocated among such properties in the proportion of the recoveries with respect to such properties, reduced for each property by the portion of the recovery attributable to the nonrecognized gain for such day, and the recoveries with respect to properties not described in section 117 (j) may be similarly allocated. The total gain derived from any recovered property is the sum of the nonrecognized gain attributable to the recovery of such property and of the recognized gain allocable to such property.

(3) The foregoing provisions may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The taxpayer sustained war losses of $3,000 on account of properties A, B, C, and D. Of this amount, $1,000 did not result in a reduction of any income tax of the taxpayer, as determined under the provisions of § 39.127 (f)-1. In a subsequent taxable year, he received an award of $800 from the Government on account of property A. This is not included in income since it is less than the amount by which his allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses which did not result in any tax benefit, $1,000, exceed $0, the sum of all his previous recoveries. On a later date the taxpayer recovers property B, which is worth $1,500 on the date of recovery. This recovery is not included in gross income to the extent of $200, the amount by which the allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses which did not result in any tax benefit, of $1,000, exceed the sum of all previous recoveries, or $800. All of the remaining $1,300 of the recovery is included in gross income as ordinary income, and is not considered gain on the involuntary conversion of property, since it is less than the amount by which the aggregate of all the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of war losses, or $3,000, exceeds $1,000, the sum of the $800 of previous recoveries and of the $200 portion of the recovery with respect to B which is not included in gross income. On a still later date the taxpayer sells for $2,500 his rights to recover C. Since the allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses which did not result in any tax benefit ($1,000) do not exceed the previous recoveries by the taxpayer ($800 and $1,500, or $2,300), none of the recovery on account of C is excluded from gross income. This recovery is included in gross income as ordinary income, and is not considered gain on the involuntary conversion of property, to the extent of $700, the amount by which the aggregate of all the allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses ($3,000) exceeds $2,300, the sum of the $2,300 of previous recoveries and of the $0 portion of the recovery on account of C which is not included in gross income. The remaining $1,800 of the recovery is considered gain on an involuntary conversion of property on account of its destruction or seizure, and is not recognized if forthwith expended in the manner provided in section 112 (f). Thus, it is not recognized if it is forthwith expended for the acquisition of property relating in service or use to C. On a later date the taxpayer recovers D, which has a fair market value of $400 at the time of the recovery. Since the aggregate of all the allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses ($3,000) does not exceed the previous recoveries by the taxpayer ($800+$1,500+$2,500, or $4,800), all of the recovery with respect to D is considered gain on an involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. Under the provisions of section 112 (f), this gain is not recognized if D is used for the same purposes for which it was used before it was deemed destroyed or seized under section 127.

Example (2). The taxpayer on one day recovers $3,000 for property A and $7,000 for property B, both of which were treated under section 127 as destroyed or seized in a prior taxable year, and $8,000 of such $10,000 recoveries is considered gain on the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. The taxpayer forthwith expends $5,000 in the acquisition of property similar in use to B. Therefore, $5,000 of the $8,000 gain is not recognized under section 112 (f), leaving $3,000 of recognized gain. Property B is within the provisions of section 117 (j), relating to gains and losses on the involuntary conversion of certain described property, but property A is not. Therefore, the provisions of section 117 (j) apply to $2,000 of the $3,000 gain, that is, the amount of the recovery with respect to B which is not attributable to the nonrecognized gain for such day ($7,000 minus $5,000). If the taxpayer forthwith expended $8,000 or more for the acquisition of property similar in use to B, none of the gain would be recognized. If the taxpayer forthwith expended the $5,000 to acquire property related in use to A, the $3,000 recognized gain would be considered derived from B to the extent of the recovery with respect to B ($7,000), not reduced by any nonrecognized gain since none of such recovery is attributable to such nonrecognized gain, and therefore all of the $3,000 recognized gain would be subject to the provisions of section 117 (j).

(c) Elective method; tax adjustment measured by prior benefits. (1) If the taxpayer elects pursuant to section 127 (c) (5) and in accordance with the provisions of these regulations to have the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) apply to any taxable year in which he recovers any money or property in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in any previous taxable year, the amount of the recovery in respect of such property for any taxable year shall not be included in income until the taxpayer has recovered an amount equal to his allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of the destruction or seizure of such property, whether or not such allowable deductions resulted in a reduction of any tax under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code. However, for the purposes of section 51, relating to the requirement of individual returns, section 52, relating to the requirement of corporation returns, and section 3801 (b), relating to the mitigation of the effect of the statute of limitations, the entire amount of the recovery shall be deemed to be an item includible in gross income for the taxable year in which the recovery is made. In lieu of including such amount in gross income, there shall be added to, and assessed and collected as a part of, the tax imposed under chapter 1 for the taxable year of the recovery an adjustment on account of any tax benefits in all prior taxable years resulting directly or indirectly from the fact that the loss from the destruction or seizure of such property was an allowable deduction. The amount of such adjustment shall be the total increase in the tax under chapter 1 of the Code, that is, any income tax of the taxpayer, and under chapter 2 including the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter E thereof, for all taxable years which would result by decreasing such allowable deductions with respect to the destruction or seizure of such property by an amount equal to that portion of the amount of the recovery which is not included in gross income for the taxable year of the recovery. The portion of the amount of the recovery which is in excess of such allowable deductions is included in gross income for the taxable year of the recovery as gain on the involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure and is recognized or not recognized as provided in section 112 (f) See § 39.112 (f)-1. Such gain, if recognized, is included in gross income as ordinary income unless section 117 (j) applies to cause such gain to be treated as gain on the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months. See §39.117 (j)-1.

(2) The determination as to whether and to what extent the amount of the recovery is to be excluded from gross income is to be made upon the basis of the total amount of the recoveries in each taxable year in respect of the same property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized in any previous taxable year, as follows:

(i) The amount of the recovery in any taxable year is excluded from the gross income of such year and is not considered gain on an involuntary conversion to the extent that such amount does not exceed the aggregate of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of the destruction or seizure of such property (whether or not such deductions resulted in a reduction of a tax of the taxpayer) reduced by the aggregate amount of any recoveries in intervening taxable years in respect of the same property.

(ii) The amount of the recovery in any taxable year which is not excluded from gross income under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph is included in gross income and is considered gain on an involuntary conversion of property as a result of its destruction or seizure. The following provisions apply to this gain:

(a) Such gain is recognized or not recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f) relating to gain upon such conversion of property. For the purpose of applying section 112 (f) such gain for any taxable year is deemed to be expended in the manner provided in section 112 (f) to the extent the recovery in such taxable year is so expended.

(b) If such gain is recognized it is included in gross income as ordinary income or, if the provisions of section 117 (j) apply and require such treatment, as gain on the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. In the case of the recovery of the same property or interest considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized, any gain will not be deemed to be recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f) if such property is used for the same purpose for which it was used before it was deemed destroyed or seized under section 127 (a)

(3) The determination of the total increase in the tax under chapters 1 and 2 of the Code for all taxable years which would result by decreasing the deductions allowable in any prior taxable years with respect to the destruction or seizure of the property in respect of which the taxpayer has made a recovery by an amount equal to the part of such recovery not included in gross income for the taxable year of such recovery shall be made as provided in this subparagraph. Such total increase shall include the increases described in subdivisions (i) (ii) (iii) and (iv) of this subparagraph, and shall be added to, and assessed and collected as a part of, the tax under chapter 1 for the taxable year of the recovery. Proper adjustment of such increases shall be made on account of the application of the provisions of this subparagraph to intervening taxable years. Proper adjustment shall also be made in the determination of such increases in the case of a taxpayer who has made a valid election under section 113 (d) relating to the adjustment of basis of property for depreciation, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion. The term "tax previously determined" as used in this subparagraph shall have the same meaning as used in section 3801 (d) of the Code and shall include any tax under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Code. In computing the amount of the increase in the tax previously determined under chapter 1 or chapter 2 for any taxable year, the principles of section 3801 (d) shall be applicable. See § 39.3801 (d)-1. However, the computation of the excess profits credit under chapter 2E for any taxable year shall not be affected by the adjustment provided in this subparagraph. All credits allowable against the tax for any year shall be taken into account in computing the increase in the tax previously determined. The increases referred to above include the following:

(i) The increase, if any, in the tax previously determined for each prior taxable year in which a deduction was allowable on account of the destruction or seizure of the property in respect of which there is a recovery in the taxable year. After the tax previously determined has been ascertained, such tax shall be recomputed by disregarding such allowable deduction (to the extent that it does not exceed the sum of the amount of such recovery not included in gross income for the taxable year of such recovery, plus the aggregate amount of any recoveries in intervening taxable years in respect of the same property) and any other deductions allowable on account of other war losses or any other losses, expenditures or accruals in such prior taxable year in respect of which, and to the extent that, recoveries in intervening taxable years have been excluded from gross income under section 127 (c) (3), section 22 (b) (12) or otherwise. The difference between the tax previously determined and the tax as recomputed will be the increase in the tax previously determined for the taxable year.

(ii) The increase, if any, in the tax previously determined for any taxable year (including the taxable year of the recovery) in which a net operating loss deduction was allowable, if all or a part of such deduction was attributable to the carry-over or carry-back to such taxable year of a net operating loss from another taxable year in which a deduction was allowable on account of the destruction or seizure of the property in respect of which there is a recovery in the taxable year to which such increase is to be added. After the tax previously determined has been ascertained, such tax shall be recomputed by redetermining such net operating loss deduction. In the determination of such net operating loss deduction the net operating loss shall be recomputed by disregarding the deduction allowable on account of the war loss in respect of which there is a recovery in the taxable year to which such increase is to be added (to the extent that such deduction does not exceed the sum of the amount of such recovery not included in gross income for the taxable year of such recovery, plus the aggregate amount of any recoveries in intervening taxable years in respect of the same property) and by disregarding any other deductions allowable on account of other war losses or any other losses, expenditures, or accruals in the taxable year in respect of which, and to the extent that, recoveries in intervening taxable years have been excluded from gross income under section 127 (c) (3), section 22 (b) (12) or otherwise. The difference between the tax previously determined and the tax as recomputed will be the increase in the tax previously determined for the taxable year.

(iii) The increase, if any, in the tax previously determined for any taxable year (including the taxable year of recovery) in which an unused excess profits credit was availed of in computing the unused excess profits credit adjustment for such taxable year, if all or a part of such adjustment was attributable to the carry-over or carry-back to such taxable year of an unused excess profits credit from another taxable year in which a deduction was allowable on account of the destruction or seizure of the property in respect of which there is a recovery in the taxable year to which such increase is to be added. After the tax previously determined has been ascertained, such tax shall be recomputed by redetermining such unused excess profits credit carry-over or carry-back. In the recomputation such carry-over or carry-back shall be redetermined by disregarding such allowable war loss deduction (to the extent such deduction does not exceed the sum of the amount of the recovery not included in gross income for the taxable year of such recovery, plus the aggregate amount of any recoveries in intervening taxable years in respect of the same property) and by disregarding any other deductions allowable on account of other war losses or any other losses, expenditures, or accruals in the taxable year in respect of which, and to the extent that, recoveries in intervening taxable years have been excluded from gross income under section 127 (c) (3), section 22 (b) (12) or otherwise. The difference between the tax previously determined and the tax as recomputed will be the increase in the tax previously determined for the taxable year. In case there is an increase in the excess profits tax under chapter 2E for the taxable year in which an unused excess profits credit was availed of in computing the unused excess profits credit adjustment, and a decrease in the income tax under chapter 1 for such taxable year, the increase in the tax previously determined shall be considered to be an amount equal to the excess of the increase in the excess profits tax over the decrease in the income tax.

(iv) The increase, if any, in the tax previously determined for any taxable year (including the taxable year of the recovery) in which an unused excess profits credit was availed of in computing the unused excess profits credit adjustment for such taxable year, if all or a part of such adjustment was attributable to the carry-over or carry-back to such taxable year of an unused excess profits credit from another taxable year in which there was allowable a net operating loss deduction attributable to the carry-over or carry-back to such other taxable year of a net operating loss, and such net operating loss resulted in whole or in part from the deduction allowable on account of the destruction or seizure of the property in respect of which there is a recovery in the taxable year to which such increase is to be added. After the tax previously determined has been ascertained, such tax shall be recomputed by redetermining such net operating loss deduction and such unused excess profits credit carry-over or carry-back. In the redetermination of such net operating loss deduction the net operating loss carry-over or carry-back shall be recomputed by disregarding such allowable war loss deduction (to the extent that such deduction does not exceed the sum of the amount of such recovery not included in gross income for the taxable year of such recovery, plus the aggregate amount of any recoveries in intervening taxable years in respect of the same property) and by disregarding any other deductions allowable on account of other war losses or any other losses, expenditures, or accruals in the taxable year in respect of which, and to the extent that, recoveries in intervening taxable years have been excluded from gross income under section 127 (c) (3) section 22 (b) (12) or otherwise. The unused excess profits credit carry-over or carry-back shall then be recomputed to conform to the redetermination of the net operating loss deduction for the taxable year from which the unused credit is carried over or carried back. The difference between the tax previously determined and the tax as recomputed shall be the amount of the increase which shall be added to the tax for the taxable year of the recovery. In case there is an increase in the excess profits tax under chapter 2E for the taxable year in which an unused excess profits credit was availed of in computing the unused excess profits credit adjustment, and a decrease in the income tax under chapter 1 for such taxable year, the increase which shall be added to the tax for the taxable year of the recovery shall be considered to be an amount equal to the excess of the increase in the excess profits tax over the decrease in the income tax.

(d) Elective method; time and manner of making election and effect thereof. (1) If the taxpayer elects to have the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) applicable to any taxable year in which any money or property is recovered in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized, section 127 (c) (3) will be applicable by virtue of that election to all taxable years of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1941. Thus, the taxpayer need not make an election with respect to each separate taxable year in which he had a recovery. An election for any taxable year in which the taxpayer had a recovery in respect of a prior war loss is sufficient to make the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) applicable not only to war loss recoveries received by the taxpayer in any past taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, but to any recoveries which may be received by the taxpayer in any future taxable year. Such election once made shall be irrevocable.

(2) The election of the taxpayer to have the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) applicable to any taxable year in which any money or property is recovered in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized must be made not later than December 31, 1952, unless the taxpayer recovers money or property (in respect of a prior war loss) during a taxable year ending after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951 (October 20, 1951) If the taxpayer has a recovery during any taxable year ending after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951, unless such taxable year is a taxable year ending on or before March 31, 1953, such election must be made by the taxpayer not later than the expiration of six months from the last day prescribed by law for the filing of his income tax return for such taxable year. However, if the taxpayer recovers any money or property (in respect of a prior war loss) during a taxable year ending after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951 and on or before March 31, 1953, such election must be made not later than December 31, 1953. In all cases the election shall be made by a written statement that the taxpayer elects to have the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) apply to any taxable year in which any money or property is recovered in respect of property considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized, which statement shall be made in (or attached to)—

(i) The return or amended return filed for such taxable year;

(ii) A claim for refund or credit filed for such taxable year for an overpayment resulting from the application of such provisions;

(iii) A timely petition or amended petition to The Tax Court of the United States for a redetermination of any deficiency for such taxable year;

(iv) A letter addressed to the district director of internal revenue for the district in which the return for such taxable year was required to be filed;

If the written statement of election is made in a letter, it shall be signed by the taxpayer making the election if an individual or, if the taxpayer is not an individual, the letter must be executed in the same manner as required in the case of the income tax return of such taxpayer. The date of the making of the election shall be the date the return, amended return, claim for refund or credit, or letter is filed in the office of the district director of internal revenue, or the date the petition or amended petition is filed with The Tax Court of the United States. In case the election is made in a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof (including any extension of time for such filing) such election shall not be considered made until such last day. In case the election is made in a letter addressed to the district director of internal revenue, such election will be considered as timely filed if it is placed in the mail on or before midnight of the last day prescribed by this paragraph for the making of the election, as shown by the postmark on the envelope containing the letter or as shown by other available evidence of the mailing date.

(3) If the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable to any taxable year pursuant to an election made by the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, the period of limitations provided in sections 275 and 276 of the Code on the making of assessments and the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection with respect to (i) the amount to be added to the tax for such taxable year under the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) and (ii) any deficiency for such taxable year or for any other taxable year to the extent attributable to the basis of the recovered property being determined under the provisions of section 127 (d) (2) shall not expire prior to the expiration of two years following the date of the making of such election. Such amount or such deficiency may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of such period, notwithstanding any law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment and collection. No interest shall be assessed or collected with respect to any such amount or any such deficiency for any period prior to the expiration of six months following the date of the making of the election by the taxpayer.

(4) If the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable to any taxable year pursuant to an election made by the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, and refund or credit of any overpayment resulting from the application of such provisions to such taxable year is prevented on the date of the making of such election, or within one year from such date, by the operation of any law or rule of law (other than section 3761 relating to compromises) refund or credit of such overpayment may nevertheless be made or allowed, provided claim therefor is filed within one year from such date. Thus, the amount of such overpayment which may be refunded or credited is not subject to the limitations contained in section 322 (b) or (d). No interest shall be paid on any overpayment resulting from the application of the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) to any taxable year ending before the date of the making of the election by the taxpayer.

SEC. 127. War losses. * * *

(d) Basis of recovered property—(1) In general. The unadjusted basis of property recovered in respect of property considered as destroyed or seized under subsection (a) shall be determined under this subsection. Such basis shall be an amount equal to the fair market value of such property, determined as of the date of the recovery, reduced by an amount equal to the excess of the aggregate of such fair market value and the amounts of previous recoveries of money or property in respect of property considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized over the aggregate of the allowable deductions in prior taxable years on account of the destruction or seizure of property described in subsection (a), and increased by that portion of the amount of the recovery which under subsection (c) is treated as a recognized gain from the involuntary conversion of property. Upon application of the taxpayer, the aggregate of the bases (determined under the preceding sentence) of any properties recovered in respect of properties considered under subsection (a) as destroyed or seized may be allocated among the properties so recovered in such manner as the Secretary may determine under regulations prescribed by him, and the amounts so allocated to any such property so recovered shall be the unadjusted basis of such property in lieu of the unadjusted basis of such property determined under the preceding sentence.

(2) Property recovered in taxable year to which subsection (c) (3) is applicable. In the case of a taxpayer who has made an election under the provisions of subsection (c) (5), the basis of property recovered shall be an amount equal to the value at which such property is included in the amount of the recovery under subsection (c) (3) (A) (determined without regard to the last sentence thereof), reduced by such part of the gain under subsection (c) (3) (C) which is not recognized as provided in section 112 (f).

§ 39.127 (d)-1 Basis of recovered property—(a) General rule. (1) Under section 127 (d) (1) the unadjusted basis of any property treated as a war loss under section 127 which is recovered and the unadjusted basis of any property which is recovered in lieu of or on account of any such war loss is considered the fair market value of such recovered property upon the date of its recovery with the following adjustments:

(i) If the sum of the recoveries for the day such property is recovered and of all previous recoveries exceeds the aggregate of the allowable deductions for prior taxable years on account of war losses, so that a portion of the recoveries for such day is treated as gain on the involuntary conversion of property, such fair market value of the property is reduced by the total gain, if any, for such day derived from such recovered property, as determined under § 39.127 (c)-1 (b)

(ii) Such fair market value, as reduced under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, is increased by the portion, if any, of the recognized gain resulting from the recoveries for such day which is allocable to such recovered property as determined under § 39.127 (c)-1 (b)

In effect, the unadjusted basis of such property is its fair market value upon the date of its recovery, reduced by the amount of nonrecognized gain attributable to such recovery under the provisions of § 39.127 (c)-1 (b).

(2) If the respective bases of several properties of a taxpayer determined under section 127 (d) (1) are greatly disproportionate to their adjusted bases immediately before their treatment as destroyed or seized property under section 127, the taxpayer may apply to the Commissioner for the allocation of the aggregate of the bases of such properties among them in the proportion of their adjusted bases immediately before the destruction or seizure of such properties determined under section 127. The amount so allocated to any such property, in an application approved by the Commissioner, shall be the unadjusted basis of such property in lieu of the amount determined under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph.

(3) The application to the Commissioner shall set forth a list of all the properties of the taxpayer having an unadjusted basis determined under this section, a description of each such property together with a statement as to the amount of its adjusted basis immediately before the destruction or seizure of such property determined under section 127, and a statement as to whether there has been any substantial change in the use or nature of the property chosen for the allocation from its nature or use immediately before the time it was treated as destroyed or seized. Such application will be allowed unless there has been such a substantial change in the nature or use of such property that the allocation of the bases would produce an arbitrary result, or unless the taxpayer has obtained such tax benefits by reason of the basis determined under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, that it would be inequitable to change his basis. Thus, the allocation will not be allowed if it would give the taxpayer an unadjusted basis with respect to any property which is less than the amount of the adjustments in reduction of the basis of such property which are allowable after its recovery For example, when property A is recovered it has an unadjusted basis of $100. After $70 depreciation has been allowed on A, an allocation is sought which would give A an unadjusted basis of $60. Since this is less than the depreciation which is an adjustment against such basis, the allocation will not be permitted.

(4) The amount of any adjustments to the unadjusted basis determined under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall, upon the allocation of the bases, be taken as an adjustment to the allocated unadjusted basis. Thus, if $30 depreciation was allowed upon a $100 basis determined under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph and if the unadjusted basis upon allocation is $75, such $30 depreciation is allowed against such allocated unadjusted basis, so that the adjusted basis of the property is then $45.

(5) The taxpayer may choose any group of recovered properties for allocation, except that if any such recovered properties form one economic unit, such properties may not be separated but all or none must be included in the group. For example, a building may not be separated from the land on which it stands if both are recovered property, nor may one block of stock in a corporation be separated from other stock in such corporation or from bonds in such corporation which are also treated as a recovery. If the taxpayer has once been permitted to allocate the bases of any group of properties, he may obtain another allocation with respect to such properties only if all the properties in the original group are included together with other recovered properties not included in the original group. For example, if the bases of properties A and B are allocated, a second allocation will be made for properties A, B, and C, but not for A and C or B and C.

(b) Property recovered in taxable year to which section 127 (c) (3) is applicable. If, pursuant to an election made by the taxpayer under section 127 (c) (5) and § 39.127 (c)-1 (d), the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) are applicable to any taxable year in which the taxpayer recovered property in respect of a war loss under section 127, the unadjusted basis of such property shall be the fair market value of such property determined as of the date of the recovery, reduced by the amount of nonrecognized gain attributable to such recovery under the provisions of § 39.127 (c)-1 (c) However, if the property recovered is the same property or interest considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized, and if the taxpayer under section 127 (c) (3) (A) includes such property or interest in the amount of the recovery at its adjusted basis (for determining loss) in his hands on the date such property or interest was considered under section 127 (a) as destroyed or seized, the unadjusted basis of such property shall be such adjusted basis, reduced by the amount of nonrecognized gain attributable to such recovery under the provisions of § 39.127 (c)-1 (c) The fair market value of any property recovered, or the adjusted basis (for determining loss) of such property or interest if the same property or interest treated as a war loss under section 127 is recovered, shall not be reduced in determining the unadjusted basis of such property or interest by the amount of the obligations or liabilities with respect to the property treated as a war loss under section 127 in respect of which the recovery was received, if the taxpayer for any previous taxable year chose under section 127 (b) (2) to treat such obligations or liabilities as discharged or satisfied out of such property but such obligations or liabilities were not so discharged or satisfied prior to the date of the recovery.

Sec. 127. War losses. * * *

(e) Partial worthlessness of certain investments in destroyed or seized property—(1) Destruction or seizure of investment. If a taxpayer owns not less than 50 per centum of each class of stock of a corporation, if such corporation has property described in subsection (a) (1) or (2) deemed to be destroyed or seized, the adjusted basis for determining loss of which is at least 75 per centum of the adjusted basis for determining loss of all such corporation's property, and if such corporation completely liquidates (by distributing all the assets which it is able to distribute and all its rights to assets which it is not able to distribute, including the right to the recovery of the property described in subsection (a) (1) and (2)) within one year after such property is deemed to be destroyed or seized, or within six months after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1942, whichever is the later, then that part of the loss by the taxpayer on such liquidation which would be attributable to the destruction or seizure of such property, as established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, shall be treated for the purposes of this chapter as a loss by the taxpayer upon the destruction or seizure of the part of the stock or other interest of the taxpayer to which such loss is allocable. Such part of the stock or other interest of the taxpayer shall be treated for the purposes of subsections (b), (c), and (d) as property described in subsection (a) (3).

(2) Application of paragraph (1). For the purposes of paragraph (1)—

(A) In determining the adjusted basis of all the property of the corporation, there shall be excluded money in the United States, bank deposits, the right to receive money from any person not situated in a country at war with the United States or in a territory under the control of such a country, and obligations issued or guaranteed as to principal or interest by the United States, except that there shall not be excluded any such property which is destroyed or seized as described in subsection (a) within or before the taxable period.

(B) The adjusted basis of property of such corporation shall be determined as of the date immediately preceding the first date on which any property was destroyed or seized, as described in subsection (a), or as of any later date falling within or before the taxable period on the basis of which such determination will produce a greater amount.

(f) Determination of tax benefits. The determination as to whether and to what extent an allowable deduction on account of the destruction or seizure of property described in subsection (a) did or did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under this chapter shall be made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.127 (f)-1 Determination of tax benefits from allowable deductions. (a) That part of the aggregate of the deductions allowed a taxpayer for any taxable year on account of war losses under section 127 which, if disallowed, would not result in an increase in the normal tax, surtax (including the tax imposed by section 102) or victory tax of taxpayer, or of any tax imposed in lieu of such taxes or of any tax imposed by chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, for the taxable year in which such deductions are allowed or in any other taxable year, such as a taxable year in which the taxpayer's income tax is computed by reference to a carry-over or carry-back of net operating losses from the taxable year in which such deductions are allowed, is considered, for the purposes of section 127, an allowable deduction for the taxable year which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Code. In the case of recoveries of war losses and other items to which the recovery exclusion provisions of section 22 (b) (12) apply, such as bad debts, the determination of the tax benefit should be made in accordance with paragraph (b) of § 39.22 (b) (12)-1. The deductions allowed a taxpayer for any taxable year on account of war losses are all the deductions on account of war losses which were claimed by the taxpayer in a return, in a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment, or in a petition to The Tax Court of the United States with respect to such taxable year and which were not disallowed, and all deductions on account of war losses which, although not so claimed by the taxpayer, were nevertheless allowed (for example, by the Commissioner, a court, or The Tax Court) in computing a tax of the taxpayer.

(b) Any deduction allowable for a taxable year on account of a war loss under section 127 which was not claimed by the taxpayer for such year in a return, a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment, or a petition to The Tax Court of the United States and was not allowed as a deduction (for example, by the Commissioner, a court, or The Tax Court) in computing his tax for such year or for any other year is considered a deduction which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, since it is an allowable deduction which was not allowed in computing any tax of the taxpayer. If the taxpayer claimed for any taxable year a deduction on account of a war loss, and if such deduction was disallowed, the taxpayer may not subsequently contend for the purposes of section 127 (c) that such deduction was an allowable deduction for such taxable year.

(c) If the taxpayer elected under section 127 (b) to decrease the amount of a war loss by treating the obligations and liabilities described in that section as discharged or satisfied out of the property destroyed or seized, and if the taxpayer establishes that any of the obligations and liabilities were not so discharged or satisfied, then the amount by which such continuing obligations and liabilities decreased the war loss shall be considered an allowable deduction for the taxable year in which the war loss was sustained which did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under chapter 1 or chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 128. Recovery of unconstitutional Federal taxes. Income (excluding interest) attributable to the recovery during the taxable year of a tax imposed by the United States which has been held unconstitutional, and in respect of which a deduction was allowed in a prior taxable year may be excluded from gross income for the taxable year, and the deduction allowed in respect thereof in such prior taxable year treated as not having been allowable, if—

(a) The taxpayer elects in writing (at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) to treat such deduction as not having been allowable for such prior taxable year, and

(b) The taxpayer consents in writing to the assessment, within such period as may be agreed upon, of any deficiencies resulting from such treatment, even though the statutory period for the assessment of any such deficiency had expired prior to the filing of such consent.

§ 39.128-1 Recovery of unconstitutional taxes—(a) In general. (1) Subject to the limitations herein, a taxpayer who recovers unconstitutional Federal taxes which were paid or accrued and for which a deduction was allowed in a prior taxable year is entitled at his election (see paragraph (b) of this section) to exclude the income (exclusive of interest) attributable to such recovery from his gross income in the taxable year of recovery.

(2) In the event a taxpayer elects to receive the benefits of section 128, the income (exclusive of interest) attributable to the recovery of the unconstitutional Federal tax will be treated as an offset to the deduction allowed therefor in prior taxable years. The taxpayer's return for the prior taxable year or years with respect to which the statutory period for the assessment of a deficiency has expired will be opened only for the purpose of reducing the deduction allowed for the unconstitutional Federal tax and assessing the resulting deficiency or deficiencies, if any, and only if the taxpayer consents in writing to the assessment (see paragraph (b) of this section) No other adjustment will be allowed.

(3) In the event the disallowance of the deduction allowed in respect of a prior taxable year results in a deficiency for that year, the deficiency will be assessed within the period agreed upon between the taxpayer and the Commissioner, in respect of the taxable year of the prior deduction, against the taxpayer (who must file a written consent to the assessment as provided in paragraph (b) of this section) even though the statutory period for the assessment may have expired prior to the filing of the consent.

(4) If a taxpayer does not elect under the provisions of section 128 to exclude the tax recovered from gross income in the taxable year of recovery, the tax recovered shall, from the standpoint of its inclusion in or exclusion from gross income, be governed by the provisions of section 22 (b) (12)

(5) Where a taxpayer's liability for income tax with respect to the deduction or the recovery or with respect to the tax liability for the year of the deduction or recovery has been finally determined by a written agreement or by a decision of The Tax Court of the United States or of any court, the taxpayer will not be entitled to the benefits of section 128 or of this section. As to taxability of refund of taxes generally, see section 22 (b) (12).

(b) Manner of making election. (1) The election provided for in paragraph (a) of this section shall be made by the taxpayer filing a statement in writing that he elects to treat the deduction allowed in a prior taxable year for the unconstitutional tax as not having been allowable for such taxable year. Such a statement must be filed with the taxpayer's return for the taxable year in which the recovery of the unconstitutional tax or taxes occurs. No other method of making the election is permitted. The statement of election must contain a description of the tax recovered, the date of recovery, the taxable year in which paid or accrued, and the taxable year for which the deduction was allowed. The statement of election must also contain a statement signifying the taxpayer's consent (i) to the Commissioner's treating the deduction or portion thereof allowed in a prior year with respect to the unconstitutional tax as not allowable for that year and (ii) to the Commissioner's assessing, in respect of the taxable year for which the deduction was allowed, any deficiency, together with interest thereon as provided by law, resulting from disallowance of the deduction or portion thereof, even though the statutory period for the assessment of any such deficiency may have expired before the filing of such consent.

(2) As used in this section, the term "recovery" includes not only refund or credit of taxes previously paid, but includes also the cancellation of a purported tax liability which was accrued and deducted for a prior taxable year but never actually paid.

SEC. 129. Acquisitions made to evade or avoid income or excess profits tax—(a) Disallowance of deduction, credit, or allowance. If (1) any person or persons acquire, on or after October 8, 1940, directly or indirectly, control of a corporation, or (2) any corporation acquires, on or after October 8, 1940, directly or indirectly, property of another corporation, not controlled, directly or indirectly, immediately prior to such acquisition, by such acquiring corporation or its stockholders, the basis of which property, in the hands of the acquiring corporation, is determined by reference to the basis in the hands of the transferor corporation, and the principal purpose for which such acquisition was made is evasion or avoidance of Federal income or excess profits tax by securing the benefit of a deduction, credit, or other allowance which such person or corporation would not otherwise enjoy, then such deduction, credit, or other allowance shall not be allowed. For the purposes of clause (1) and (2), control means the ownership of stock possessing at least 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 50 per centum of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

(b) Power of commissioner to allow deduction, etc., in part. In any case to which subsection (a) is applicable the Commissioner is authorized—

(1) To allow as a deduction, credit, or allowance any part of any amount disallowed by such subsection, if he determines that such allowance will not result in the evasion or avoidance of Federal income and excess profits tax for which the acquisition was made; or

(2) To distribute, apportion, or allocate gross income, and distribute, apportion, or allocate the deductions, credits, or allowances the benefit of which was sought to be secured, between or among the corporations, or properties, or parts thereof, involved, and to allow such deductions, credits, or allowances so distributed, apportioned, or allocated, but to give effect to such allowance only to such extent as he determines will not result in the evasion or avoidance of Federal income and excess profits tax for which the acquisition was made; or

§ 39.129-1 Meaning and use of terms. As used in section 129 and the regulations thereunder—

(a) The term "allowance" refers to anything in the internal revenue laws which has the effect of diminishing tax liability. The term includes, among other things, a deduction, a credit, an adjustment, an exemption, or an exclusion.

(b) The phrase "evasion or avoidance" is not limited to cases involving criminal penalties, or civil penalties for fraud.

(c) The phrase "Federal income or excess profits tax" refers to any Federal tax imposed by Congress upon an income base.

(d) The term "control" means the ownership of stock possessing at least 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote; or at least 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation. To "acquire, on or after October 8, 1940,* * * control," it is not necessary that all of such stock be acquired on or after October 8, 1940. Thus, if A, on October 7, 1940, and at all times thereafter, owns 40 percent of the stock of Corporation X and acquires on October 8, 1940, an additional 10 percent of such stock, an acquisition within the meaning of such phrase is made by A on October 8, 1940. Similarly, if B, on October 7, 1940, owns certain assets and transfers on October 8, 1940, such assets to a newly organized Corporation Y in exchange for all the stock of Corporation Y, an acquisition within the meaning of such phrase is made by B on October 8, 1940. If, under the facts stated in the preceding sentence, B is a corporation, all of whose stock is owned by Corporation C, then an acquisition within the meaning of such phrase is also made by Corporation C on October 8, 1940, by the shareholders taken as a group on such date, and by any of such shareholders if such shareholders as a group own 50 percent of the stock of C on such date.

(e) The term "person" includes an individual, a trust, an estate, a partnership, a company, or a corporation.

§ 39.129-2 Purpose and scope of section 129. (a) Section 129 is designed to prevent in the instances specified therein the use of the sections of the Internal Revenue Code providing deductions, credits, or allowances in evading or avoiding Federal income or excess profits taxes. See § 39.129-3.

(b) Under the Code, an amount otherwise constituting a deduction, credit, or other allowance becomes unavailable as such under certain circumstances. Characteristic of such circumstances are those in which the effect of the deduction, credit, or other allowance would be to distort the liability of the particular taxpayer when the essential nature of the transaction or situation is examined in the light of the basic purpose or plan which the deduction, credit, or other allowance was designed by the Congress to effectuate. The distortion may be evidenced, for example, by the fact that the transaction was not undertaken for reasons germane to the conduct of the business of the taxpayer, by the unreal nature of the transaction such as its sham character, or by the unreal or unreasonable relation which the deduction, credit, or other allowance bears to the transaction. The principle of law making an amount unavailable as a deduction, credit, or other allowance in cases in which the effect of making an amount so available would be to distort the liability of the taxpayer, has been judicially recognized and applied in several cases. Included in these cases are Gregory v. Helvering (1935) (293 U. S. 465), Griffiths v. Helvering (1939) (308 U. S. 355), Higgins v. Smith (1940) (308 U. S. 473), and J. D. & A. B. Spreckles Co. v. Commissioner (1940) (41 B. T. A. 370) In order to give effect to such principle, but not in limitation thereof, several provisions of the Code, for example, section 24 (b) and (c) and section 130, specify with some particularity instances in which disallowance of the deduction, credit, or other allowance is required. Section 129 is also included in such provisions of the Code. The principle of law and the particular sections of the Code are not mutually exclusive and in appropriate circumstances they may operate together or they may operate separately.

§ 39.129-3 Instances in which section 129 (a) disallows a deduction, credit, or other allowance. (a) Section 129 specifies two instances in which a deduction, credit, or other allowance is to be disallowed. These instances, described in clauses (1) and (2) of section 129 (a), are those in which:

(1) Any person or persons acquire, directly or indirectly, on or after October 8, 1940, control of a corporation; and

(2) Any corporation acquires, directly or indirectly, on or after October 8, 1940, property of another corporation (not controlled, directly or indirectly, immediately prior to such acquisition by such acquiring corporation or its stockholders) the basis of which property in the hands of the acquiring corporation is a substituted basis.

In either instance the principal purpose for which the acquisition was made must have been the evasion or avoidance of Federal income or excess profits tax by securing the benefit of a deduction, credit, or other allowance which such person or corporation would not otherwise enjoy. The principal purpose actuating the acquisition must have been to secure the benefit which such person or persons or corporation would not otherwise enjoy. If this requirement is satisfied, it is immaterial by what method or by what conjunction of events the benefit was sought. If the purpose to evade or avoid Federal income or excess profits tax exceeds in importance any other purpose, it is the principal purpose. This does not mean that only those acquistions fall within the provisions of section 129 which would not have been made if the evasion or avoidance purpose was not present. The determination of the purpose for which an acquisition was made requires a scrutiny of the entire circumstances in which the transaction or course of conduct occurred, in connection with the tax result claimed to arise therefrom.

(b) If the requisite acquisition and purpose exist, among the transactions within clause (1) of section 129 (a) are the following:

(1) A corporation (or the interest controlling such a corporation) with large profits acquires control of another corporation with current, past, or prospective credits, deductions, net operating losses, unused excess profits credits, or other allowances and the acquisition is followed by such transfers or other action as is necessary to bring the deduction, credit, or other allowance into conjunction with the income; or

(2) A corporation with large profits transfers the assets of each of its branches or departments to newly organized corporations in order to secure the benefit of the minimum excess profits credit provided in section 431, or

(3) A corporation with high earning assets transfers them to a newly organized subsidiary retaining assets likely to produce losses or to be disposed of at a loss for the purpose of securing refunds through a utilization of the unused excess profits carry-back or the net operating loss carry-back.

(c) If the requisite acquisition and purpose exist, among the transactions within clause (2) of section 129 (a) is the following: A corporation acquires property having in its hands a substituted basis which is materially greater than its fair market value at the time of such acquisition in order to secure a larger excess profits credit or to utilize the property to create tax-reducing losses.

§ 39.129-4 Power of Commissioner to allocate deduction, credit, or allowance in part. The Commissioner is authorized by section 129 (b) to allow a part of the amount disallowed by section 129 (a) but he may allow such part only if and to the extent that he determines that the amount allowed will not result in the evasion or avoidance of Federal income and excess profits tax for which the acquisition was made. The Commissioner is also authorized to use other methods to give effect to part of the amount disallowed under section 129 (a) but only to such extent as he determines will not result in the evasion or avoidance of Federal income and excess profits tax for which the acquisition was made. Whenever appropriate to give proper effect to the deduction, credit, or other allowance, or such part of it which may be allowed, this authority includes the distribution, apportionment, or allocation of both the gross income and the deductions, credits, or other allowances the benefit of which was sought, between or among the corporations, or properties, or parts thereof, involved, and includes the disallowance of any such deduction, credit, or other allowance to any of the taxpayers involved.

SEC. 130. Limitation on deductions allowable to individuals in certain cases—(a) Recomputation of net income. If the deductions (other than taxes and interest) allowable to an individual (except for the provisions of this section) and attributable to a trade or business carried on by him for five consecutive taxable years have, in each of such years, exceeded by more than $50,000 the gross income derived from such trade or business, the net income of such individual for each of such years shall be recomputed. For the purpose of such recomputation in the case of any such taxable year, such deductions shall be allowed only to the extent of $50,000 plus the gross income attributable to such trade or business, except that the net operating loss deduction, to the extent attributable to such trade or business shall not be allowed.

(b) Redetermination of tax. Upon the basis of the net income computed under the provisions of subsection (a) for each of the five consecutive taxable years specified in such subsection, the tax imposed by this chapter shall be redetermined for each such taxable year. If for any such taxable year assessment of a deficiency is prevented (except for the provisions of sections 3801 and 3807) by the operation of any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises) any increase in the tax previously determined for such taxable year shall be considered a deficiency for the purposes of this section. For the purposes of this section the term "tax previously determined" shall have the meaning assigned to such term by section 3801 (d).

(c) Extension of statute of limitations. Notwithstanding any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises), any amount determined as a deficiency under subsection (b), or which would be so determined if assessment were prevented in the manner described in subsection (b), with respect to any taxable year may be assessed as if on the date of the expiration of the time prescribed by law for the assessment of a deficiency for the fifth taxable year of the five consecutive taxable years specified in subsection (a), one year remained before the expiration of the period of limitation upon assesment for any taxable year.

§ 39.130-1 Limitation on deductions allowable to individuals in certain cases—(a) Recomputation of net income. (1) Section 130 serves to limit the deductions, other than taxes and interest, attributable to a trade or business carried on by an individual which are otherwise allowable to such individual under the provisions of chapter 1. If in each of five consecutive taxable years the deductions attributable to a trade or business, except the deduction for interest and except the deduction for taxes, exceed the gross income derived from such trade or business by more than $50,000, the net income of such individual must be recomputed for each of such five taxable years. In recomputing the net income for each of the five taxable years, deductions (other than those for interest and taxes) attributable to the trade or business, and otherwise allowable under chapter 1, shall be allowed only to the extent of (i) the gross income derived from the trade or business, plus (ii) $50,000. The deduction for interest and the deduction for taxes shall each be allowed in full. The net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) to the extent attributable to the given trade or business, shall be disallowed in its entirety in making such recomputation. Thus, any carry-over or carry-back of a net operating loss, so attributable, either from a year within the period of five consecutive taxable years or from a year outside of such period, shall be ignored in making the recomputation of net income. However, the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) shall be included in determining whether the deductions (other than the deduction for interest and the deduction for taxes) otherwise allowable under chapter 1, which are attributable to a trade or business exceed the gross income derived from such trade or business by more than $50,000 in any taxable year. The limitations on deductions provided by section 130 are applicable in determining under section 122 the amount of any net operating loss carry-over or carry-back from any year which falls within the provisions of section 130 to any year which does not fall within such provisions. Also in determining under section 122 the amount of any net operating loss carry-over from a year which falls within the provisions of section 130 to a year which does not fall within such provisions, the amount of the net operating loss is to be reduced by the net income (computed as provided in § 39.122-4 (c) and, in the case of any taxable year which falls within the provisions of section 130, determined after the application of section 130) of any taxable year preceding or succeeding the taxable year of the net operating loss to which such loss must first be carried back or carried over under the provisions of section 122 (b) even though the net operating loss deduction is not an allowable deduction for such preceding or succeeding taxable year.

(2) If an individual carries on several trades or businesses, the deductions attributable to such trades or businesses, and the gross income derived from such trades or businesses, shall not be aggregated in determining whether the deductions (other than those for interest and taxes) exceed the gross income derived from such trades or businesses by more than $50,000 in any taxable year. Each trade or business shall be considered separately. The trade or business carried on by the individual must be the same in each of the five consecutive taxable years in which the deductions (other than those for interest and taxes) exceed the gross income derived from such trade or business by more than $50,000.

(3) For purposes of section 130, a given taxable year may be part of two or more different periods of five consecutive taxable years. Thus, if the deductions, other than taxes and interest, attributable to a trade or business carried on by an individual exceed the gross income from such business by more than $50,000 for each of six consecutive taxable years, the fifth year of such six consecutive taxable years shall be considered to be a part both of a five-year period beginning with the first and ending with the fifth taxable year and of a five-year period beginning with the second and ending with the sixth taxable year.

(b) Redetermination of tax. The tax imposed by chapter 1 for each of the five consecutive taxable years specified in paragraph (a) of this section shall be redetermined upon the basis of the net income of the individual recomputed in the manner described in paragraph (a) of this section. If the assessment of a deficiency is prevented (except for the provisions of section 3801, relating to mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases, or 3807, relating to period of limitation in case of related taxes under chapter 1 and chapter 2) by the operation of any provision of law (e. g., sections 275 and 276, relating to the period of limitation upon assessment and collection) except section 3761, relating to compromises, or by any rule of law (e. g., res judicata) then the excess of the tax for such year as recomputed over the tax previously determined for such year shall be considered a deficiency for purposes of section 130. The term "tax previously determined" shall have the same meaning as that assigned to such term by section 3801 (d) See § 39.3801 (d)-1.

(c) Assessment of tax. Any amount determined as a deficiency in the manner described in paragraph (b) of this section in respect of any taxable year of the five consecutive taxable years specified in paragraph (a) of this section may be assessed and collected as if on the date of the expiration of the period of limitation for the assessment of a deficiency for the fifth taxable year of such five consecutive taxable years, one year remained before the expiration of the period of limitation upon assessment for the taxable year in respect of which the deficiency is determined. If the taxable year is one in respect of which an assessment could be made without regard to section 130, the amount of the actual deficiency as defined in section 271 (whether it is greater than, equal to, or less than the deficiency determined under section 130 (b)) shall be assessed and collected. However, if the assessment of a deficiency for such taxable year would be prevented by any provision of law (e. g., the period of limitation upon the assessment of tax) except section 3761, relating to compromises, or by the operation of any rule of law (e. g., res judicata) then the excess of the tax recomputed as described in paragraph (b) of this section over the tax previously determined may be assessed and collected even though in fact there is no actual deficiency, as defined in section 271, in respect of the given taxable year.

SEC. 130A. Employee stock options—(a) Treatment of restricted stock options. If a share of stock is transferred to an individual pursuant to his exercise after 1949 of a restricted stock option, and no disposition of such share is made by him within two years from the date of the granting of the option nor within six months after the transfer of such share to him—

(1) No income shall result at the time of the transfer of such share to the individual upon his exercise of the option with respect to such share;

(2) No deduction under section 23 (a) shall be allowable at any time to the employer corporation of such individual or its parent or subsidiary corporation with respect to the share so transferred; and

(3) No amount other than the option price shall be considered as received by either of such corporations for the share so transferred.

This subsection and subsection (b) shall not apply unless (A) the individual, at the time he exercises the restricted stock option, is an employee of the corporation granting such option or of a parent or subsidiary corporation of such corporation, or (B) the option is exercised by him within three months after the date he ceases to be an employee of any of such corporations.

(b) Special rule where option price is between 85 percent and 95 percent of value of stock. If no disposition of a share of stock acquired by an individual upon his exercise after 1949 of a restricted stock option is made by him within two years from the date of the granting of the option nor within six months after the transfer of such share to him, but, at the time the restricted stock option was granted, the option price was less than 95 per centum of the fair market value at such time of such share, then, in the event of any disposition of such share by him, or in the event of his death (whenever occurring) while owning such share, there shall be included as compensation (and not as gain upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset) in his gross income, for the taxable year in which falls the date of such disposition or for the taxable year closing with his death, whichever is applicable, an amount equal to the amount (if any) by which the option price is exceeded by the lesser of—

(1) The fair market value of the share at the time of such disposition or death, or

In the case of the disposition of such share by the individual, the basis of the share in his hands at the time of such disposition shall be increased by an amount equal to the amount so includible in his gross income.

(c) Acquisition of new stock. If stock transferred to an individual upon his exercise of the option is exchanged by him for stock or securities in an exchange within the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) or (3), or if new stock, as described in section 113 (a) (19), is acquired upon a distribution with respect to such stock, the stock or securities acquired in such exchange and such new stock shall be considered as having been transferred to him upon his exercise of such option. A similar rule shall be applied in the case of a series of such exchanges or acquisitions.

(d) Definitions. For the purposes of this section—

(1) Restricted stock option. The term "restricted stock option" means an option granted after February 26, 1945, to an individual, for any reason connected with his employment by a corporation, if granted by the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary corporation, to purchase stock of any of such corporations, but only if—

(A) At the time such option is granted the option price is at least 85 per centum of the fair market value at such time of the stock subject to the option; and

(B) Such option by its terms is not transferable by such individual otherwise than by will or the laws of descent and distribution, and is exercisable, during his lifetime, only by him; and

(C) Such individual, at the time the option is granted, does not own stock possessing more than 10 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary corporation. For the purposes of this subparagraph—

(i) Such individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants; and

(ii) Stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust, shall be considered as being owned proportionately by or for its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries.

(2) Parent corporation. The term "parent corporation" means any corporation (other than the employer corporation) in an unbroken chain of corporations ending with the employer corporation if, at the time of granting of the option, each of the corporations other than the employer corporation owns stock possessing more than 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock in one of the other corporations in such chain.

(3) Subsidiary corporation. The term "subsidiary corporation" means any corporation (other than the employer corporation) in an unbroken chain of corporations beginning with the employer corporation if, at the time of the granting of the option, each of the corporations other than the last corporation in the unbroken chain owns stock possessing more than 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock in one of the other corporations in such chain.

(4) Disposition. The term "disposition" includes a sale, exchange, gift, or any transfer of legal title, but does not include—

(A) A transfer from a decedent to his estate or a transfer by bequest or inheritance;

(B) An exchange which is within the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) or (3); or

(C) A mere pledge or hypothecation.

(5) Stockholder approval. If the grant of an option is subject to approval by stockholders, the date of grant of the option shall be determined as if the option had not been subject to such approval.

(e) Modification, extension, or renewal of option. For the purposes of subsection (d), if the terms of any option to purchase stock are modified, extended, or renewed, the following rules shall be applied with respect to transfers of stock made upon an exercise of the option after the making of such modification, extension, or renewal:

(1) Such modification, extension, or renewal shall be considered as the granting of a new option;

(2) The fair market value of such stock at the time of the granting of such option shall be considered as (A) the fair market value of such stock on the date of the original granting of the option, (B) the fair market value of such stock on the date of the making of such modification, extension, or renewal, or (C) the fair market value of such stock at the time of the making of any intervening modification, extension, or renewal, whichever is the highest.

§ 39.130A-1 Meaning and use of certain terms—(a) Option. (1) For the purpose of section 130A, the term "option" includes the right or privilege of an individual to purchase stock from a corporation by virtue of an offer of the corporation continuing for a stated period of time, whether or not irrevocable, to sell such stock at a stated price, such individual being under no obligation to purchase. Such right or privilege, when granted, must be evidenced in writing. The individual who has such right or privilege is referred to as the optionee and the corporation offering to sell stock under such an arrangement is referred to as the optionor. While no particular form of words is necessary, the written option should express, among other things, an offer to sell at a stated option price and the period of time during which the offer shall remain open.

(2) An option may be granted as part of or in conjunction with an employee stock purchase plan or subscription contract.

(3) An arrangement between a corporation and an employee may involve more than one option. For example, if a corporation on June 1, 1952, grants to an employee the right to purchase 1,000 shares of its stock on or after June 1, 1953, another 1,000 shares on or after June 1, 1954, and a further 1,000 shares on or after June 1, 1955, all shares to be purchased before June 1, 1956, provided the employee at the time of exercise of any of the purchase rights is employed by the corporation, such an arrangement will be construed as the grant to the employee on June 1, 1952, of three options, each for the purchase of 1,000 shares. Similarly, if a corporation grants to an employee on January 1, 1953, the right to purchase 1,000 shares of its stock at $85 per share during 1953, at $75 per share during 1954, and at $65 per share during 1955, such an arrangement will be construed as the grant to the employee on January 1, 1953, of three alternative options, one option for the purchase of 1,000 shares at $85 per share during 1953, an alternative option for the purchase of 1,000 shares at $75 per share during 1954, and a third alternative option for the purchase of 1,000 shares at $65 per share during 1955.

(b) Time and date of granting of option. (1) For the purpose of section 130A, the words "the date of the granting of the option" and "the time such option is granted" and similar phrases refer to the date or time when the corporation completes the corporate action constituting an offer of stock for sale to an individual under the terms and conditions of a restricted stock option. Ordinarily, if the corporate action contemplates an immediate offer of stock for sale to an individual or to a class including such individual, or contemplates a particular date on which such offer is to be made, the time or date of the granting of the option is the time or date of such corporate action if the offer is to be made immediately, or the date contemplated as the date of the offer, as the case may be. However, an unreasonable delay in the giving of notice of such offer to the individual or to the class will be taken into account as indicating that the corporation contemplated that the offer was to be made at the subsequent date on which such notice is given. If the terms of the offer do not specify the amount of the option price, the option will not be considered granted before the date on which the amount of the option price becomes fixed or determinable.

(2) If the corporation imposes conditions on the granting of an option (as distinguished from conditions governing the exercise of the option) such conditions shall be given effect in accordance with the intent of the corporation. A special rule is provided by section 130A (d) (5) for options subject to stockholder approval. If the grant of an option is subject to approval by stockholders, the date of grant of the option shall be determined as if the option had not been subject to such approval. A condition which does not require corporate action, such as the approval of some regulatory or governmental agency, for example, a stock exchange or the Securities and Exchange Commission, is ordinarily considered a condition upon the exercise of the option unless the corporate action clearly indicates that the option is not to be granted until such condition is satisfied. If an option is granted to an individual upon the condition that such individual will become an employee of the corporation granting the option or of its parent or subsidiary corporation, such option is not granted prior to the date the individual becomes such an employee.

(3) In general, conditions imposed upon the exercise of an option will not operate to make ineffective the granting of the option. For example, on June 1, 1952, the A Corporation grants to X, an employee, an option to purchase 5,000 shares of the corporation stock, exercisable by X on or after June 1, 1953, provided he is employed by the corporation on June 1, 1953. Such an option is granted to X on June 1, 1952.

(c) Stock. For the purpose of section 130A, the term "stock" means capital stock of any class, including voting or nonvoting common or preferred stock. The term includes both treasury stock and stock of original issue. Special classes of stock authorized to be issued to and held by employees are within the scope of the term "stock" as used in section 130A, provided such stock otherwise possesses the rights and characteristics of capital stock.

(d) Option price. For the purpose of section 130A, the term "option price" means the consideration in money or property which, pursuant to the terms of the option, is the price at which the stock subject to the option is purchased.

(e) Exercise. For the purpose of section 130A, the term "exercise" when used in reference to an option, means the act of acceptance by the optionee of the offer to sell contained in the option. In general, the time of exercise is the time when there is a sale or a contract to sell between the corporation and the individual. An agreement or undertaking by the employee to make payments under a stock purchase plan does not constitute the exercise of an option so long as the payments made remain subject to withdrawal by the employee. If the terms of the offer do not specify the amount of the option price, the option will not be considered exercised prior to the date on which the amount of the option price becomes fixed or determinable.

(f) Transfer. For the purpose of section 130A, the term "transfer" when used in reference to the transfer to an individual of a share of stock pursuant to his exercise of a restricted stock option, means the transfer of ownership of such share, or the transfer of substantially all the rights of ownership. Such transfer must, within a reasonable time, be evidenced on the books of the corporation.

§ 39.130A–2 Restricted stock option—(a) In general. (1) A "restricted stock option" is an option granted after February 26, 1945, to an individual, for any reason connected with his employment by a corporation, if granted by the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary corporation, to purchase stock of any of such corporations, but only if (i) at the time such option is granted the option price is at least 85 percent of the fair market value at such time of the stock subject to the option; and (ii) such option by its terms is not transferable by such individual otherwise than by will or by the laws of descent and distribution, and is exercisable, during his lifetime, only by him; and (iii) such individual, at the time the option is granted, does not own stock possessing more than 10 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock either of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary corporation.

(2) At the time the option is granted, the relationship between the individual to whom an option is granted and the corporation granting the option (or a corporation which is a parent or subsidiary thereof) must be the legal and bona fide relationship of employer and employee. For rules applicable to the determination whether the employer-employee relationship exists, see § 405.104 of this chapter (Regulations 116) relating to collection of income tax at source on wages. An option granted prior to employment or after termination of employment is not a restricted stock option. As to the granting of an option conditioned upon employment, see paragraph (b) of § 39.130A–1. The option must be granted for a reason connected with the individual's employment by the corporation or by its parent or subsidiary corporation. An option may qualify as a restricted stock option only if, under the terms of the option, it is not transferable (other than by will or by the laws of descent and distribution) by the individual to whom it is granted, and is exercisable, during the lifetime of such individual, only by him. Accordingly, an option which is transferable by the individual to whom it is granted during his lifetime, or is exercisable during such individual's lifetime by another person, is not a restricted stock option.

(b) Ownership of 10 percent of stock. In determining the amount of stock owned by an individual, for the purpose of applying the 10 percent test of section 130A (d) (1) (C) stock of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary owned (directly or indirectly) by or for such individual's brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood) spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants, shall be considered as owned by such individual. For the purpose of section 130A, if a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust owns (directly or indirectly) stock of the employer corporation or of its parent or subsidiary, such stock shall be considered as being owned proportionately by or for the shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries of the corporation, partnership, estate, or trust.

income tax treatment provided in section 130A (a) and (b) are applicable only if the following conditions exist with respect to the transfer of a share of stock to an individual:

(1) The share of stock is transferred to the individual pursuant to his exercise after 1949 of a restricted stock option; and

(2) At the time the option is exercised by him, the individual is an employee of the corporation granting such option (or of a parent or subsidiary thereof) or was an employee of any such corporations within three months prior to the date the option is exercised.

(b) The special treatment provided in section 130A (a) and (b) shall apply only if the restricted stock option is exercised by the individual to whom it was granted. Such special treatment shall not be applicable with respect to stock transferred pursuant to the exercise of the option by the individual's executor, administrator, heir, or legatee. Under the provisions of section 130A (d) (1) (B) an option may qualify as a restricted stock option although it is transferable at death to the individual's executor, administrator, heir, or legatee. Thus, the fact that a restricted stock option may be exercised by an executor, administrator, heir, or legatee does not deprive the individual who exercises such option during his lifetime of the special treatment provided in section 130A.

(c) At the time of exercise of a restricted stock option, the status of the individual exercising such option must be that of a bona fide employee of the corporation granting the option or that of a bona fide employee of a parent or subsidiary of such corporation, or such individual must have been a bona fide employee of any such corporation within three months previous to the date of exercise.

(d) (1) The determination whether an option ultimately exercised is a restricted stock option is made as of the date such option is granted. An option which is a restricted stock option when granted does not lose its character as such an option by reason of subsequent events, and an option which is not a restricted stock option when granted does not become such an option by reason of subsequent events. See, however, § 39.130A-4, relating to modification, extension, or renewal of an option.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). S-1 Corporation is a subsidiary of S Corporation which, in turn, is a subsidiary of P Corporation. On June 1, 1952, P grants to an employee of P a restricted stock option to purchase a share of stock of S-1. On January 1, 1953, S sells a portion of the S-1 stock which it owns to an unrelated corporation and, as of that date, S-1 ceases to be a subsidiary of S. On May 1, 1953, while still employed by P the employee exercises his option to purchase a share of S-1 stock. The employee has exercised a restricted stock option.

Example (2). Assume P grants an option to an employee under the same facts as in example (1) above, except that on June 1, 1952, S-1 is not a subsidiary of either S or P. Such option is not a restricted stock option on June 1, 1952. On January 1, 1953, S purchases from an unrelated corporation a sufficient number of shares of S-1 stock to make S-1, as of that date, a subsidiary of S. On May 1, 1953, while still employed by P, the employee exercises his option to purchase a share of S-1 stock. The employee has not exercised a restricted stock option.

§ 39.130A-4 Modification, extension, or renewal. (a) Section 130A (e) provides rules for determining whether a share of stock transferred to an individual upon his exercise of an option, after the terms thereof have been modified, extended, or renewed, is transferred pursuant to the exercise of a restricted stock option. For the purpose of such determination, the statute provides that:

(1) Any modification, extension, or renewal of the terms of an option to purchase stock shall be considered as the granting of a new option; and

(2) The fair market value of the stock subject to the option at the time of the granting of such option shall be considered as the fair market value of such stock (i) on the date of the original granting of the option, (ii) on the date of the making of such modification, extension, or renewal, or (iii) at the time of the making of any intervening modification, extension, or renewal, whichever is the highest.

(b) The time or date when an option is modified, extended, or renewed shall be determined, insofar as applicable, in accordance with the rules governing determination of the time or date of granting an option provided in paragraph (b) of § 39.130A-1. A modification of an option includes any material change in the terms or conditions of the option. For example, a material change in the terms of the option with respect to the kind or price of the shares of stock subject to the option is a modification of the option. Likewise, a material change in the time of issuance of stock subject to the option, the terms of payment for such stock, or an acceleration or postponement of the exercise date is a modification of the option. However, a mere change in the terms of the option, with respect to the number or price of the shares of stock subject to the option, to reflect a stock dividend or stock split-up is not a modification of the option. Where an option is amended solely to increase the number of shares subject to the option, such increase shall not be considered as a modification of the option, but shall be treated as the grant of a new option for the additional shares. An extension of an option refers to the granting by the corporation to the optionee of an additional period of time within which to exercise the option beyond the time originally prescribed. A renewal of an option is the granting by the corporation of the same rights or privileges contained in the original option on the same terms and conditions. The foregoing rules apply as well to successive modifications, extensions, and renewals.

(c) A restricted stock option may, as a result of a modification, extension, or renewal, thereafter cease to be a restricted stock option, or an option may, by modification, extension, or renewal, thereafter become a restricted stock option.

(d) The rule stated in section 130A (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On June 1, 1952, the X Corporation grants to an employee an option to purchase 100 shares of the stock of X Corporation at $90 per share, such option to be exercised on or before June 1, 1954. At the time the option is granted, the fair market value of the X Corporation stock is $100 per share. On February 1, 1953, before the employee exercises the option, X Corporation modifies the option to provide that the price at which the employee may purchase the stock shall be $80 per share. On February 1, 1953, the fair market value of the X Corporation stock is $90 per share. Under section 130A (e), the X Corporation is deemed to have granted an option to the employee on February 1, 1953, to purchase at $80 per share 100 shares of stock having a fair market value of $100 per share, that is, the higher of the fair market value of the stock on June 1, 1952, and on February 1, 1953. The exercise of such option by the employee after February 1, 1953, is not the exercise of a restricted stock option.

Example (2). On June 1, 1952, the X Corporation grants to an employee a restricted stock option to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation stock at $90 per share, exercisable after December 31, 1953, and on or before June 1, 1954. On June 1, 1952, the fair market value of X Corporation's stock is $100 per share. On February 1, 1953, X Corporation modifies the option to provide that the option shall be exercisable on or after February 1, 1953, and on or before June 1, 1954. On February 1, 1953, the fair market value of X Corporation stock is $110 per share. Under section 130A (e), X Corporation is deemed to have granted an option to the employee on February 1, 1953, to purchase at $90 per share 100 shares of stock having a fair market value of $110 per share, that is, the higher of the fair market value of the stock on June 1, 1952, and on February 1, 1953. The exercise of such option by the employee is not the exercise of a restricted stock option.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that the employee exercised the option to the extent of 50 shares on January 15, 1953, prior to the date of the modification of the option. Any exercise of the option after February 1, 1953, the date of the modification, is not the exercise of a restricted stock option. See example (1) in this paragraph. The exercise of the option on January 15, 1953, pursuant to which 50 shares were acquired, is the exercise of a restricted stock option.

Example (4). On June 1, 1952, the X Corporation grants to an employee an option to purchase 100 shares of the stock of X Corporation at $80 per share, such option to be exercised on or before June 1, 1954. At the time the option is granted the fair market value of the X Corporation stock is $100 per share. On February 1, 1953, before the employee exercises the option, the X Corporation modifies the option to provide that the number of shares of stock which the employee may purchase at $80 per share will be 250. On February 1, 1953, the fair market value of the X Corporation stock is $90 per share. Under these facts, the X Corporation has granted two options, one option (not a restricted stock option) with respect to 100 shares having been granted on June 1, 1952, and the other option (a restricted stock option) with respect to the additional 150 shares having been granted on February 1, 1953. In the absence of facts identifying which option is exercised first, the employee will be deemed to have exercised the options in the order in which they were granted.

§ 39.130A-5 Operation of section 130A—(a) Rules applicable to all restricted stock options—(1) In general. If a share of stock is transferred to an individual pursuant to his timely exercise of a restricted stock option and is not disposed of by him within two years from the date of the granting of the option nor within six months after the transfer of such share to him, then, under section 130A (a)—

(i) No income shall result at the time of the transfer of such share to the individual upon his exercise of the option with respect to such share;

(ii) No deduction under section 23 (a) shall be allowable at any time to the employer corporation of such individual or its parent or subsidiary corporation with respect to the share so transferred; and

(iii) No amount other than the option price shall be considered as received by either of such corporations for the share so transferred.

For the purpose of subdivisions (i) to (iii) of this subparagraph, each share of stock transferred pursuant to a restricted stock option is treated separately. For example, if an individual, while employed by a corporation granting him a restricted stock option, exercises the option with respect to part of the stock covered by the option, and if such individual exercises the balance of the option more than 3 months after leaving such employment, the application of section 130A to the stock obtained upon the earlier exercise of the option is not affected by the fact that the income taxes of the employer and the individual with respect to the stock obtained upon the later exercise of the option are not determined under section 130A.

(2) Holding period. The special rules provided in section 130A (a) are not applicable if the individual disposes of the share of stock within two years from the date the option is granted or within six months after the transfer of such share to him. Section 130A is not made inapplicable by a transfer within the 2-year or 6-month period if such transfer is not a disposition of the stock as defined in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, for example, a transfer from the decedent to his estate or a transfer by bequest or inheritance. Similarly, a disposition by the executor, administrator, heir, or legatee is not a disposition by the decedent.

(3) Disposition of stock. (i) For the purpose of section 130A, the term "disposition" includes a sale, exchange, gift, or any transfer of legal title, but does not include a transfer from a decedent to his estate or a transfer by bequest or inheritance, an exchange which is within the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) or (3) or a mere pledge or hypothecation. However, a disposition of the stock pursuant to a pledge or hypothecation is a disposition by the individual, even though the making of the pledge or hypothecation is not such a disposition.

(ii) If an individual exercises a restricted stock option, a share of stock acquired pursuant to such exercise is not considered disposed of by the individual if such share is taken in the name of the individual and another person jointly with right of survivorship, or is subsequently transferred into such joint ownership, or is retransferred from such joint ownership to the sole ownership of the individual. However, if such individual and his joint owner transfer such share to another person, the individual has made a disposition of such share. Likewise, if a share of stock held in the joint names of such individual and another person is transferred to the name of such other person, there is a disposition of such share by the individual. If an individual exercises a restricted stock option and a share of stock is transferred to another or is transferred to such individual in his name as trustee for another, the individual has made a disposition of such share.

(4) Examples. The rules of section 130A (a) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On June 1, 1952, the X Corporation grants to E, an employee, a restricted stock option to purchase 100 shares of X Corporation stock at $95 per share. On that date, the fair market value of X Corporation stock is $100 per share. On June 1, 1953, while employed by X Corporation, E exercises the option in full and pays X Corporation $9,500, and on that day X Corporation transfers to E 100 shares of its stock having a fair market value of $12,000. Prior to June 1, 1954, E makes no disposition of the 100 shares so purchased. E realizes no income on June 1, 1953, with respect to the transfer to him of the 100 shares of X Corporation stock. X Corporation is not entitled to any deduction at any time with respect to its transfer to E of the stock. In computing its gain or loss, if any, upon such transfer, X Corporation is considered to have received no more than $9,500 for the stock so transferred. E's basis for such 100 shares is $9,500.

Example (2). Assume, in example (1), that on August 1, 1954, two years and one month after the granting of the option and one year and one month after the transfer of the shares to him, E sells the 100 shares of X Corporation stock for $13,000, which is the fair market value of the stock on that date. For the taxable year in which the sale occurs, E realizes a gain of $3,500 ($13,000 minus E's basis of $9,500), which is treated as long-term capital gain.

Example (3). Assume, in example (2), that on August 1, 1954, E makes a gift of the 100 shares of X Corporation stock to his son. Such disposition results in no realization of gain to E either for the taxable year in which the option is exercised or the taxable year in which the gift is made. E's basis of $9,500 becomes the donee's basis for determining gain or loss.

Example (4). Assume, in example (1), that on May 1, 1954, one year and 11 months after the granting of the option and 11 months after the transfer of the shares to him, E sells the 100 shares of X Corporation stock for $13,000. The special rules of section 130A (a) are not applicable to the transfer of the stock by X Corporation to E, because disposition of the stock was made by E within two years from the date the option was granted.

Example (5). Assume, in example (1), that E dies on September 1, 1953, owning the 100 shares of X Corporation stock acquired by him pursuant to his exercise on June 1, 1953, of the restricted stock option. On the date of death, the fair market value of the stock is $12,500. No income is realized by E by reason of the transfer of the 100 shares to his estate. If E's executor elects to value the stock as of the date of death, the basis of the 100 shares in the hands of the executor is $12,500.

(b) Additional rules applicable where the option price is between 85 percent and 95 percent of the value of the stock—(1) In general. (i) If all the conditions necessary for the application of section 130A (a) exist, section 130A (b) provides additional rules which are applicable in cases where, at the time the restricted stock option is granted, the option price per share is less than 95 percent (but not less than 85 percent) of the fair market value of such share. In such case, upon the disposition of such share by the individual after the expiration of the 2-year and the 6-month periods, or upon his death while owning such share (whether occurring before or after the expiration of such periods) there shall be included in the individual's gross income as compensation (and not as gain upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset) the amount, if any, by which the option price is exceeded by the lesser of the fair market value of the share at the time the option was granted or the fair market value of the share at the time of such disposition or death. The amount of such compensation shall be included in the individual's gross income for the taxable year in which the disposition occurs or for the taxable year closing with his death, whichever event results in the application of section 130A (b)

(ii) The application of the special rules provided in section 130A (b) shall not affect the rules provided in section 130A (a) with respect to the individual exercising the option, the employer corporation, or its parent or subsidiary corporation. Thus, notwithstanding the inclusion of an amount as compensation in the gross income of an individual, as provided in section 130A (b) no income results to the individual at the time the stock is transferred to him, and no deduction under section 23 (a) is allowable at any time to the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary with respect to such amount. Likewise, for the purpose of determining gain or loss, if any, realized by any of such corporations by reason of the transfer of a share of stock with respect to which the rules of section 130A (b) apply, no amount other than the option price shall be considered as received by any of such corporations for the stock so transferred.

(iii) If the individual exercises a restricted stock option during his lifetime and dies before the stock is transferred to him pursuant to his exercise of the option, the transfer of such stock to the individual's executor, administrator, heir, or legatee is deemed, for the purpose of section 130A, to be a transfer of the stock to the individual exercising the option and a further transfer by reason of death from such individual to his executor, administrator, heir, or legatee.

(2) Basis. If the special rules provided in section 130A (b) are applicable to the disposition of a share of stock by an individual, the basis of such share in the individual's hands at the time of such disposition, determined under section 113, shall be increased by an amount equal to the amount includible as compensation in his gross income under section 130A (b) If the special rules provided in section 130A (b) are applicable to a share of stock upon the death of an individual, the basis of such share in the hands of the estate or the person receiving the stock by bequest or inheritance shall be determined under section 113, and shall not be increased by reason of the inclusion upon the decedent's death of any amount in his gross income under section 130A (b) See example (8) of this paragraph with respect to the determination of basis of the share in the hands of a surviving joint owner.

(3) Examples. The operation of section 130A (b) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On June 1, 1952, the X Corporation grants to E, an employee, a restricted stock option to purchase a share of X Corporation's stock for $85. The fair market value of the X Corporation stock on such date is $100 per share. On June 1, 1953, E exercises the restricted stock option and on that date the X Corporation transfers the share of stock to E. On January 1, 1955, E sells the share for $150, its fair market value on that date. E makes his income tax return on the basis of the calendar year. The income tax consequences to E and X Corporation are as follows: (i) Compensation in the amount of $15 is includible in E's gross income for 1955, the year of the disposition of the share. The $15 represents the difference between the option price ($85) and the fair market value of the share on the date the option was granted ($100), since such value is less than the fair market value of the share on the date of disposition ($150). For the purpose of computing E's gain or loss on the sale of the share, E's cost basis of $85 is increased by $15, the amount includible in E's gross income as compensation. Thus, E's basis for the share is $100. Since the share was sold for $150, E realizes a gain of $50, which is treated as long-term capital gain; (ii) the X Corporation is entitled to no deduction under section 23 (a) at any time with respect to the share transferred to E. For the purpose of computing gain or loss, if any, to the X Corporation on account of the transfer of the share to E, the X Corporation shall not be considered to have received any amount other than $85 for the share.

Example (2). Assume, in example (1), that E sells the share of X Corporation stock on January 1, 1956, for $75, its fair market value on that date. Since $75 is less than the option price ($85), no amount in respect of the sale is includible as compensation in E's gross income for 1956. E's basis for determining gain or loss on the sale is $85. Since E sold the share for $75, E realized a loss of $10 on the sale, which loss is treated as a long-term capital loss.

Example (3). Assume, in example (1), that instead of selling the share on January 1, 1955, E makes a gift of the share on that day. In such case, $15 is includible as compensation in E's gross income for 1955. E's cost basis of $85 is increased by $15, the amount includible in E's gross income as compensation. Thus, E's basis for the share is $100, which becomes the donee's basis, as of the time of the gift, for determining gain or loss.

Example (4). Assume, in example (2), that instead of selling the share on January 1, 1956, E makes a gift of the share on that date. Since the fair market value of the share on that day ($75) is less than the option price ($85), no amount in respect of the disposition by way of gift is includible as compensation in E's gross income for 1956. E's basis for the share is $85, which becomes the donee's basis, as of the time of the gift, for the purpose of determining gain. The donee's basis for the purpose of determining loss, determined under section 113 (a) (2), is $75 (fair market value of the share at the date of gift).

Example (5). Assume, in example (1), that after acquiring the share of stock on June 1, 1953, E dies on August 1, 1954, at which time the share has a fair market value of $150. Compensation in the amount of $15 is includible in E's gross income for the taxable year closing with his death, such $15 being the difference between the option price ($85) and the fair market value of the share when the option was granted ($100), since such value is less than the fair market value at date of death ($150). The basis of the share in the hands of E's estate is determined under section 113 (a) (5) without regard to the $15 includible in the decedent's gross income.

Example (6). Assume, in example (5), that E dies on August 1, 1953, at which time the share has a fair market value of $150. Although E's death occurred within two years from the date of the granting of the option and within six months after the transfer of the share to him, the income tax consequences are the same as in example (5).

Example (7). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the share of stock was issued in the names of E and his wife jointly with right of survivorship, and except that E and his wife sold the share on June 15, 1954, for $150, its fair market value on that date. Compensation in the amount of $15 is includible in E's gross income for 1954, the year of the disposition of the share. The basis of the share in the hands of E and his wife for the purpose of determining gain or loss on the sale is $100, that is, the cost of $85 increased by the amount of $15 includible as compensation in E's gross income. The gain of $50 on the sale is treated as long-term capital gain, and is divided equally between E and his wife.

Example (8). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the share of stock was issued in the names of E and his wife jointly with right of survivorship, and except that E predeceased his wife on August 1, 1954, at which time the share had a fair market value of $150. Compensation in the amount of $15 is includible in E's gross income for the taxable year closing with his death. See example (5). The basis of the share in the hands of E's wife as survivor is, under sections 113 (a) and 130A (b), the cost of $85 increased by the $15 includible in the decedent's gross income or $100.

Example (9). Assume in example (8) that E's wife predeceased him on July 1, 1954. Section 130A (b) does not apply in respect of her death. Upon the subsequent death of E on August 1, 1954, the income tax consequences in respect of E's taxable year closing with the date of his death, and in respect of the basis of the share in the hands of his estate, are the same as in example (5). If E had sold the share on July 15, 1954 (after the death of his wife), for $150, its fair market value at that time, the income tax consequences would be the same as in example (1).

(c) Acquisition of other stock or securities. (1) Section 130A (c) provides that the special rules stated in section 130A (a) and (b) if applicable with respect to stock transferred to an individual upon his exercise of an option, shall likewise be applicable with respect to (i) stock or securities acquired by such individual in exchange for such stock, if the exchange is within the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) or (3) and (ii) new stock, as described in section 113 (a) (19) acquired upon a distribution with respect to such stock. Such new stock and such stock or securities so acquired shall, for the purpose of section 130A, be considered as having been transferred to the individual upon his exercise of the option. A similar rule shall be applied in the case of a series of such exchanges or acquisitions.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If new stock, as described in section 113 (a) (19), is acquired upon a distribution with respect to stock transferred to the individual upon the timely exercise of a restricted stock option, and if such new stock is disposed of within two years from the date the option was granted or within six months after the original stock was transferred to such individual, section 130A is not applicable with respect to such new stock. If the disposition occurs after the 2-year and 6-month periods, section 130A is applicable.

SUPPLEMENT C—CREDITS AGAINST TAX

§ 39.131 (a) Statutory provisions; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; allowance of credit.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States—(a) Allowance of credit. If the taxpayer chooses to have the benefits of this section, the tax imposed by this chapter, except the tax imposed under section 102 and except the additional tax imposed for the taxable year under the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) and except the tax imposed under subchapter E and except, with respect to the tax imposed under subchapter D, only to the extent provided in subsection (j), shall be credited with:

(1) Citizens and domestic corporations. In the case of a citizen of the United States and of a domestic corporation, the amount of any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States; and

(2) Resident of the United States or Puerto Rico. In the case of a resident of the United States and in the case of an individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, the amount of any such taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any possession of the United States; and

(3) Alien resident of the United States or Puerto Rico. In the case of an alien resident of the United States and in the case of an alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, the amount of any such taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country, if the foreign country of which such alien resident is a citizen or subject, in imposing such taxes, allows a similar credit to citizens of the United States residing in such country; and

(4) Partnerships and estates. In the case of any such individual who is a member of a partnership or a beneficiary of an estate or trust, his proportionate share of such taxes of the partnership or the estate or trust paid or accrued during the taxable year to a foreign country or to any possession of the United States, as the case may be.

Such choice may be made or changed at any time prior to the expiration of the period prescribed for making a claim for credit or refund of the tax imposed by this chapter.

§ 39.131 (a)-1 Analysis of credit for taxes. (a) If the taxpayer chooses to claim a credit for taxes, the basis of such credit, in the case of a citizen of the United States, whether resident or nonresident, and in the case of a domestic corporation, is as follows: (1) The amount of any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States; and (2) an individual's proportionate share of any such taxes of a partnership of which he is a partner or of an estate or trust of which he is a beneficiary paid or accrued during the taxable year to a foreign country or to any possession of the United States, as the case may be.

(b) In the case of an alien resident of the United States and in the case of an alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year who chooses to claim a credit for the taxes referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, the basis of the credit is as follows: (1) The amount of any such taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any possession of the United States; (2) the amount of any such taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country, if the foreign country of which such alien resident is a citizen or subject, in imposing such taxes, allows a similar credit to citizens of the United States residing in such country; and (3) his proportionate share of any such taxes of a partnership of which he is a partner or of an estate or trust of which he is a beneficiary paid or accrued during the taxable year to any possession of the United States, or to any foreign country, as the case may be, if the foreign country of which such alien resident is a citizen or subject, in imposing such taxes, allows a similar credit to citizens of the United States residing in such country.

(c) If a taxpayer chooses to claim a credit for taxes, such action will be considered to apply to income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid to all foreign countries and possessions of the United States, and no portion of any such taxes shall be allowed as a deduction from gross income.

(d) The choice available to the taxpayer with respect to claiming such credit may be exercised (or changed if previously exercised) by the taxpayer at any time before the expiration of the period prescribed by statute for the making of a claim for credit or refund for the taxable year. For disallowance as a deduction of foreign income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes in the event such choice is made, see § 39.23 (c)-1.

(e) In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return, credit for taxes paid or accrued to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States shall be computed upon the basis of the total taxes so paid by or accrued against the spouses.

(f) No credit for taxes shall be allowed against the tax imposed under section 102 (relating to surtax on corporations improperly accumulating surplus) against the additional tax imposed under the provisions of section 127 (c) (3) (relating to war loss recoveries), or against the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480. Credit for taxes shall be allowed against the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1, but only to the extent provided in section 131 (j) and § 39.131 (j)-1.

(g) A citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251, or a China Trade Act corporation, is not allowed any of the credits provided by section 131.

§ 39.131 (a)-2 Countries which do or do not satisfy the similar credit requirement. A country satisfies the similar credit requirement of section 131 (a) (3) as to income tax paid to such country, either by allowing to citizens of the United States residing in such country a credit for the amount of income taxes paid to the United States, or, in imposing such taxes, by exempting from taxation the incomes received from sources within the United States by citizens of the United States residing in such country. A country does not satisfy the similar credit requirement of section 131 (a) (3) if it does not allow any credit to citizens of the United States residing in such country for the amount of income taxes paid to the United States, or if such country does not impose any income taxes. If the country of which a resident alien is a citizen or subject does not allow to a United States citizen residing in such country a credit for taxes paid by such citizen to another foreign country, no credit is allowed to such resident alien for taxes paid by him to such other foreign country.

§ 39.131 (b) Statutory provisions; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; limit on credit.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(b) Limit on credit. The amount of the credit taken under this section shall be subject to each of the following limitations:

(1) The amount of the credit in respect of the tax paid or accrued to any country shall not exceed, in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's net income from sources within such country bears to his entire net income for the same taxable year, or in the case of a corporation, the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's normal-tax net income from sources within such country bears to its entire normal-tax net income for the same taxable year; and

(2) The total amount of the credit shall not exceed, in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's net income from sources without the United States bears to his entire net income for the same taxable year, or, in the case of a corporation, the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's normal-tax net income from sources without the United States bears to its entire normal-tax net income for the same taxable year; and

§ 39.131 (b)-1 Limitations on credit for foreign taxes. (a) The amount of the income and profits taxes paid or accrued (including the taxes which, in accordance with the provisions of section 131 (f), are deemed to have been paid) during the taxable year to each foreign country or possession of the United States, limited under section 131 (b) (1) so as not to exceed that proportion of the tax against which credit is taken which the taxpayer's net income from sources within such country or possession bears to his entire net income, or, in the case of a corporation, which the taxpayer's normal-tax net income from sources within such country or possession bears to its entire normal-tax net income, for the same taxable year, is the tentative credit for the purpose of the income tax in respect of the taxes paid or accrued to such country or possession. The sum of these tentative credits, limited under section 131 (b) (2) so as not to exceed the same proportion of the tax against which credit is taken which the taxpayer's net income from sources without the United States bears to his entire net income, or, in the case of a corporation, which the taxpayer's normal-tax net income from sources without the United States bears to its entire normal-tax net income, for the same taxable year, is the amount allowable as a credit against the income tax under chapter 1 for income or profits taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries or possessions of the United States. There must be excluded, in computing the tax against which the credit is taken, the tax imposed by section 102, the additional tax imposed for the taxable year under the provisions of section 127 (c) (3), the tax imposed by section 480, and, except to the extent provided in section 131 (j) and § 39.131 (j)-1, the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1.

(b) The operation of the limitations on the credit for foreign taxes paid by individuals may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1952, A, a citizen of the United States, had a net income for services rendered within the United States amounting to $50,000 and a net income from sources within Great Britain of $25,000. He is entitled to a credit under section 25 for both normal tax and surtax of $600. The credit for foreign taxes allowable to A in his return for the calendar year 1952 is $16,089.33, computed as follows:

Income from sources within the United States	$50,000.00
Income from sources within Great Britain	25,000.00
Total net income	75,000.00
United States income tax on $74,400 ($75,000 less $600)	48,268.00
British income and profits taxes	18,000.00

Limitation on British income and profits taxes under section 131 (b) (1) and (2) to determine credit $\left(\frac{25,000}{75,000} \text{ of } $48,268\right)$ $16,089.33

Credit for British income and profits taxes (total British income and profits taxes, reduced in accordance with the limitations under section 131 (b) (1) and (2)) 16,089.33

Example (2). If, in example (1), above, A had a net income from sources within Great Britain of $15,000 and a net income from sources within Canada of $10,000 and the income and profits taxes paid or accrued to Great Britain and Canada were $10,800 and $4,500, respectively, the credit for foreign taxes allowable to A would be $14,153.60, computed as follows:

Income from sources within the United States	$50,000.00
Income from sources within Great Britain	15,000.00
Income from sources within Canada	10,000.00
Total net income	75,000.00
United States income tax on $74,400 ($75,000 less $600)	48,268.00
British income and profits taxes	10,800.00
Limitation on British income and profits taxes under section 131 (b) (1) to determine tentative credit $\left(\frac{15,000}{75,000} \text{ of } $48,268\right)$	9,653.60
Tentative credit for British income and profits taxes (total British income and profits taxes, reduced in accordance with the limitation under section 131 (b) (1))	9,653.60
Canadian income and profits taxes	4,500.00
Limitation on Canadian income and profits taxes under section 131 (b) (1) to determine tentative credit $\left(\frac{10,000}{75,000} \text{ of } $48,268\right)$	6,435.73
Tentative credit for Canadian income and profits taxes (total Canadian income and profits taxes, since such amount is within the limitation under section 131 (b) (1))	4,500.00
Sum of tentative credits ($9,653.60 plus $4,500)	14,153.60
Limitation on sum of tentative credits under section 131 (b) (2) to determine credit $\left(\frac{25,000}{75,000} \text{ of } $48,268\right)$	16,089.33
Total amount of credit allowable (sum of tentative credits, since such sum is within the limitation under section 131 (b) (2))	14,153.60

(c) In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return, the limitations prescribed by section 131 (b) upon the credit for taxes paid or accrued to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States shall be applied with respect to the aggregate net income from sources within each such country or possession, the aggregate net income from all sources without the United States, and the aggregate net income from all sources, of the spouses.

(d) It is provided in section 131 (b) that in the case of a domestic corporation the amount of the credit for any taxable year with respect to the tax paid or accrued to any foreign country or possession of the United States shall not exceed the same proportion of the tax imposed by chapter 1 which the corporation's normal-tax net income from sources within such foreign country or possession of the United States bears to the entire normal-tax net income of such corporation for the same taxable year. The total amount of the credit shall not exceed the same proportion of the tax imposed by chapter 1 which the corporation's normal-tax net income from sources without the United States bears to the entire normal-tax net income for the same taxable year.

(e) The operation of the limitations provided in section 131 (b) on the credit for foreign taxes paid by corporations may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The following facts exist for the calendar year 1952 with respect to the A Corporation which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis:

Net income from all sources	$250,000
Normal-tax net income	250,000
Net income from foreign country X	100,000
Foreign tax paid on country X income	60,000
Total normal tax and surtax	124,500
Computation of foreign tax credit for purposes of normal tax and surtax: $\frac{$100,000}{$250,000} \times $124,500$	49,800
Amount allowable as a credit	49,800

(f) In the event that normal-tax net income is derived from more than one foreign country or possession of the United States, the limitation provided in section 131 (b) (2) shall be applied based upon the taxpayer's normal-tax net income from sources without the United States and the entire normal-tax net income of the corporation and such limitation is in addition to the limitation provided in section 131 (b) (1)

(g) The application of paragraph (f) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) The net income for the calendar year 1952 and the income and profits taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries and possessions of the United States in the case of a domestic corporation are as follows:

Country	Net income	Loss	Income and profits taxes (paid or accrued)
United States	$157,500
Great Britain	30,000		$17,000
Canada	20,000		12,000
Brazil	40,000		5,800
Nicaragua	60,000		None
Mexico		$100,000	None
Puerto Rico	10,000		2,250
France (dividend)	50,000		19,000
France (branch)	20,000		11,000

Net income		$387,500
Less: United States bond interest exempt from normal tax		25,000
Normal-tax net income		362,500
Surtax net income		387,500
Total foreign net income		230,000
United States tax (not including tax imposed under section 102):
Normal tax	$108,750
		188,500

The income and losses from all foreign countries and possessions of the United States, except the dividend from sources within France, were derived from branch operations. Dividends of $50,000 were received from a French corporation, a majority of the voting stock of which was owned by the domestic corporation. The French corporation paid to France income and profits taxes on income earned by it and in addition a dividend tax for the account of its shareholders on income distributed to them, the latter tax being withheld and paid at the source.

(2) The credit is $70,450 computed as follows:

Great Britain

Income and profits taxes paid or accrued	$17,000
Limitation under section 131 (b) (1) $\frac{30,000}{362,500} \times $188,500$	15,600
Tentative credit	15,600

(h) As to the allowance of credit for foreign income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes against the excess-profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1, see section 131 (j) and § 39.131 (j)-1.

§ 39.131 (c) Statutory provisions; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; adjustments on payment of accrued taxes.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(c) Adjustments on payment of accrued taxes. If accrued taxes when paid differ from the amounts claimed as credits by the taxpayer, or if any tax paid is refunded in whole or in part, the taxpayer shall notify the Commissioner, who shall redetermine the amount of the tax for the year or years affected, and the amount of tax due upon such redetermination, if any, shall be paid by the taxpayer upon notice and demand by the collector, or the amount of tax overpaid, if any, shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 322. In the case of such a tax accrued but not paid, the Commissioner as a condition precedent to the allowance of this credit may require the taxpayer to give a bond with sureties satisfactory to and to be approved by the Commissioner in such sum as the Commissioner may require, conditioned upon the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of tax found due upon any such redetermination; and the bond herein prescribed shall contain such further conditions as the Commissioner may require. In such redetermination by the Commissioner of the amount of tax due from the taxpayer for the year or years affected by a refund, the amount of the taxes refunded for which credit has been allowed under this section shall be reduced by the amount of any tax described in subsection (a) imposed by the foreign country or possession of the United States with respect to such refund; but no credit under this section, and no deduction under section 23, shall be allowed for any taxable year with respect to such tax imposed on the refund. No interest shall be assessed or collected on any amount of tax due upon any redetermination by the Commissioner, resulting from a refund to the taxpayer, for any period prior to the receipt of such refund except to the extent interest was paid by the foreign country or possession of the United States on such refund for such period.

[Subsec. (c) as amended by sec. 2 (a), Pub. Law 378 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.131 (c)-1 Redetermination of tax when credit proves incorrect—(a) In general. In case credit has been given for taxes accrued, or a proportionate share thereof, and the amount that is actually paid on account of such taxes, or a proportionate share thereof, is not the same as the amount of such credit, or in case any tax payment credited is refunded in whole or in part, the taxpayer shall immediately notify the Commissioner. The Commissioner will thereupon redetermine the amount of the tax of such taxpayer for the year or years for which such incorrect credit was granted. The amount of tax, if any, due upon such redetermination shall be paid by the taxpayer upon notice and demand by the district director of internal revenue. The amount of tax, if any, shown by such redetermination to have been overpaid shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in accordance with the provisions of section 322.

(b) Foreign tax imposed on foreign refund. Where the redetermination of the tax for a taxable year, or years, is occasioned by the refund to the taxpayer of tax paid to a foreign country or possession of the United States, the amount of such refund for which credit has been allowed shall be reduced by the amount of any tax described in section 131 (a) imposed by the foreign country or possession of the United States with respect to such refund. In such case no credit under section 131, and no deduction under section 23, shall be allowed with respect to such tax imposed on the refund.

(c) Interest. Where the redetermination of the tax for a taxable year, or years, is occasioned by the refund to the taxpayer of tax paid to a foreign country or possession of the United States, no interest shall be assessed or collected on the amount of tax due upon such redetermination resulting from such refund to the taxpayer, for any period before the receipt of such refund, except to the extent interest was paid by the foreign country or possession of the United States on such refund for such period.

§ 39.131 (c)-2 Credit for taxes accrued but not paid. In the case of a credit sought for a tax accrued but not paid, the Commissioner may require as a condition precedent to the allowance of a credit a bond from the taxpayer in addition to Form 1116 or 1118. If such a bond is required, Form 1117 shall be used by an individual and Form 1119 by a corporation. It shall be in such sum as the Commissioner may prescribe, and shall be conditioned for the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of tax found due upon any redetermination of the tax made necessary by such credit proving incorrect, with such further conditions as the Commissioner may require. This bond shall be executed by the taxpayer, or the agent or representative of the taxpayer, as principal, and by sureties satisfactory to and approved by the Commissioner. See also 6 U. S. C. 15.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(d) Year in which credit taken. The credits provided for in this section may, at the option of the taxpayer and irrespective of the method of accounting employed in keeping his books, be taken in the year in which the taxes of the foreign country or the possession of the United States accrued, subject, however, to the conditions prescribed in subsection (c) of this section. If the taxpayer elects to take such credits in the year in which the taxes of the foreign country or the possession of the United States accrued, the credits for all subsequent years shall be taken upon the same basis, and no portion of any such taxes shall be allowed as a deduction in the same or any succeeding year.

§ 39.131 (d)-1 When credit for taxes may be taken. (a) The credit for taxes provided by section 131 (a) may ordinarily be taken either in the return for the year in which the taxes accrued or in which the taxes were paid, dependent upon whether the accounts of the taxpayer are kept and his returns filed upon the accrual basis or upon the cash receipts and disbursements basis. Section 131 (d) allows the taxpayer, at his option and irrespective of the method of accounting employed in keeping his books, to take such credit for taxes as may be allowable in the return for the year in which the taxes accrued. An election thus made under section 131 (d) or under section 222 (c) or 238 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1924 or 1926, or under section 131 (d) of the Revenue Act of 1928, 1932, 1934, 1936, or 1938, must be followed in returns for all subsequent years, and no portion of any such taxes will be allowed as a deduction from gross income.

(b) If, however, under the provisions of § 39.43-1 an amount otherwise constituting gross income for the taxable year from sources without the United States is, owing to monetary, exchange, or other restrictions imposed by a foreign country, not includible in gross income of the taxpayer for such year, the credit for income taxes imposed by such foreign country with respect to such amount shall be taken proportionately in any subsequent taxable year in which such amount or portion thereof is includible in gross income.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(e) Proof of credits. The credits provided in this section shall be allowed only if the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner (1) the total amount of income derived from sources without the United States, determined as provided in section 119, (2) the amount of income derived from each country, the tax paid or accrued to which is claimed as a credit under this section, such amount to be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, and (3) all other information necessary for the verification and computation of such credits.

§ 39.131 (e)-1 Conditions of allowance of credit. (a) If the taxpayer does not signify in his return his desire to claim credit for income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid other than to the United States, but subsequent to the filing of such return chooses to claim such credit, the taxpayer must so notify the Commissioner and attach to such notification Form 1116 in the case of an individual, and Form 1118 in the case of a corporation. The form must be carefully filled in with all the information called for and with the calculations of credits indicated, and must be signed and contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. Except where it is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that it is impossible for the taxpayer to furnish such evidence, the form must have attached to it (1) the receipt for each such tax payment if credit is sought for taxes already paid or (2) the return on which each such accrued tax was based if credit is sought for taxes accrued. This receipt or return so attached must be either the original, a duplicate original, a duly certified or authenticated copy, or a sworn copy. In case only a sworn copy of a receipt or return is attached, there must be kept readily available for comparison on request the original, a duplicate original, or a duly certified or authenticated copy. If the receipt or the return is in a foreign language, a certified translation thereof must be furnished by the taxpayer. Any additional information necessary for the determination under section 119 of the amount of income derived from sources without the United States and from each foreign country shall, upon the request of the Commissioner, be furnished by the taxpayer.

(b) Where it has been established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that it is impossible to furnish (1) a receipt for such foreign tax payment, (2) the foreign tax return, or (3) direct evidence of the amount of tax withheld at the source, the Commissioner may, in his discretion and under such rules as he may prescribe, accept secondary evidence of the payment or accrual of the tax or of the withholding of the tax.

(c) For credit available to a domestic corporation with respect to taxes paid by a foreign corporation, see § 39.131 (f)-1. A claim for credit in such a case is also to be made on Form 1118. See § 39.131 (d)-1 with reference to the option granted by section 131 (d)

(d) The taxpayer may, with respect to a particular taxable year, claim the benefits of section 131 at any time before the expiration of the period prescribed for the making of claim for credit or refund of the tax imposed under chapter 1 for such taxable year.

§ 39.131 (f) Statutory provisions; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; taxes of foreign corporation.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(f) Taxes of foreign corporation—(1) Treatment of taxes paid by foreign corporation. For the purposes of this section, a domestic corporation which owns at least 10 per centum of the voting stock of a foreign corporation from which it receives dividends in any taxable year shall be deemed to have paid the same proportion of any income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid or deemed to be paid by such foreign corporation to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States, upon or with respect to the accumulated profits of such foreign corporation from which such dividends were paid, which the amount of such dividends bears to the amount of such accumulated profits. The term "accumulated profits" when used in this subsection in reference to a foreign corporation, means the amount of its gains, profits, or income in excess of the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed upon or with respect to such profits or income; and the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall have full power to determine from the accumulated profits of what year or years such dividends were paid; treating dividends paid in the first sixty days of any year as having been paid from the accumulated profits of the preceding year or years (unless to his satisfaction shown otherwise), and in other respects treating dividends as having been paid from the most recently accumulated gains, profits, or earnings. In the case of a foreign corporation, the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes of which are determined on the basis of an accounting period of less than one year, the word "year" as used in this subsection shall be construed to mean such accounting period.

(2) Foreign subsidiary of foreign corporation. If such foreign corporation owns 50 per centum or more of the voting stock of another foreign corporation from which it receives dividends in any taxable year it shall be deemed to have paid the same proportion of any income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid by such other foreign corporation to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States, upon or with respect to the accumulated profits of the corporation from which such dividends were paid, which the amount of such dividends bears to the amount of such accumulated profits.

§ 39.131 (f)-1 Taxes of foreign corporation—(a) Domestic corporation owning stock of a foreign corporation. In the case of a domestic corporation which owns at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a foreign corporation from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, the credit for foreign taxes includes not only the income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States by such domestic corporation, but also income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes deemed to have been paid by such domestic corporation, determined by taking the same proportion of any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued by such foreign corporation to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States, upon or with respect to the accumulated profits of such foreign corporation from which such dividends were paid, which the amount of any such dividends received bears to the amount of such accumulated profits. If dividends are received from more than one such foreign corporation, the limitation is to be computed separately for the dividends received from each. For other limitations upon the amount of credit available under section 131, see § 39.131 (b)-1. If the credit for foreign taxes includes taxes deemed to have been paid, the taxpayer must furnish the same information with respect to the taxes deemed to have been paid as it is required to furnish with respect to the taxes actually paid or accrued by it. Taxes paid or accrued by such a foreign corporation are deemed to have been paid by the domestic corporation for purposes of credit only.

(b) Foreign corporation owning stock of another foreign corporation. If any foreign corporation coming within the scope of paragraph (a) of this section (hereinafter referred to as former corporation) owns 50 percent or more of the voting stock of another foreign corporation (hereinafter referred to as latter corporation) from which it receives dividends in any taxable year, it shall be deemed, for the purpose of determining the foreign taxes the former corporation has paid or accrued, to have paid that proportion of any income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes paid or accrued by the latter corporation to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States, upon or with respect to the accumulated profits from which such dividends were paid, which the amount of such dividends bears to the amount of such accumulated profits. Such tax so deemed to have been paid shall then be taken into consideration in determining the amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or deemed to have been paid by the former corporation to any possession or foreign country upon or with respect to its own accumulated profits from which the dividends were paid by such former corporation to the domestic corporation.

(c) Illustration of principles. The application of the principles of this section in the determination of the amount of the foreign tax available as a basis for a credit to the domestic corporation may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The A Company, a domestic corporation, owns a majority of the voting stock of the B Company, Ltd., a foreign corporation, which in turn owns all of the stock except qualifying shares of the C Company, Ltd., another foreign corporation. The accumulated profits of the B Company amount to $200,000 (including $25,000 dividend derived from the C Company) and the foreign income tax paid by the B Company with respect to such accumulated profits amounts to $60,000. The C Company has accumulated profits of $150,000 upon or with respect to which the foreign income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes are $45,000. A dividend of $50,000 is paid in 1952 by the B Company to the A Company and in the same year a dividend of $25,000 is paid by the C Company to the B Company. The amount of the foreign income, war-profits, and excess-profits tax of the C Company deemed to have been paid by the B Company is $\frac{25,000}{150,000} \times $45,000$, or $7,500. The proportion of the foreign income tax deemed to have been paid by the A Company with respect to the accumulated profits of the B Company from which the dividend of $50,000 was paid by the B Company to the A Company equals $\frac{50,000}{200,000} \times ($60,000 + $7,500)$ or $16,875.

§ 39.131 (g)-(h) Statutory provisions; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; corporations treated as foreign, credit for taxes in lieu of income, etc., taxes.

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(g) Corporations treated as foreign. For the purposes of this section the following corporations shall be treated as foreign corporations:

(1) A corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251, by reason of receiving a large percentage of its gross income from sources within a possession of the United States;

(2) A corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, 42 Stat. 849 (U. S. C., Title 15, c. 4), and entitled to the credit provided for in section 262.

(h) Credit for taxes in lieu of income, etc., taxes. For the purposes of this section and section 23 (c) (1), the term "income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes" shall include a tax paid in lieu of a tax upon income, war-profits, or excess-profits otherwise generally imposed by any foreign country or by any possession of the United States.

[Subsec. (h) as added by sec. 158 (f), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.131 (h)-1 Meaning of terms. (a) The term "amount of any income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year" means taxes proper (no credit being given for amounts representing interest or penalties) paid or accrued during the taxable year on behalf of the taxpayer claiming credit.

(b) For the purposes of sections 131 and 23 (c) (1) (C) the term "income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes" includes a tax imposed by statute or decree by a foreign country or by a possession of the United States if (1) such country or possession has in force a general income tax law, (2) the taxpayer claiming the credit would, in the absence of a specific provision applicable to such taxpayer, be subject to such general income tax, and (3) such general income tax is not imposed upon the taxpayer thus subject to such substituted tax. For example, the A Corporation does business in the X country, which imposes an income tax upon substantially a net income base. The ascertainment of net income, though not the determination of gross income, from sources in X country is found administratively difficult. The X country, by decree, provides that corporations circumstanced as was the A Corporation would, in lieu of the income tax at the rate of 20 percent otherwise payable, be subject to tax at the rate of 10 percent upon the amount of gross income from X country. In accordance with such decree, the A Corporation paid X country the sum of $25,000 in 1953 with respect to its tax liability to the X country for the year 1952. Such amount, subject to the applicable limitations, is available as a credit to the A Corporation as foreign income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes against the United States tax liability for the year 1952.

(c) The term "foreign country" means any foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or any foreign political entity, which levies and collects income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes.

(d) The term "any possession of the United States" includes, among others, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. But see section 251.

(e) As to the meaning of "sources," see section 119.

No. 189—Pt. II—Sec. 2——6

SEC. 131. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. * * *

(i) Tax withheld at source. For the purposes of this supplement the tax imposed by this chapter shall be the tax computed without regard to the credit provided in section 32 and section 35.

[Subsec. (i) as added by sec. 172 (d), Rev. Act 1942, and amended by sec. 6 (b) (5), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

(j) Tax imposed by subchapter D. This section shall be applicable for purposes of the tax imposed by subchapter D, but the tax paid or accrued to any country shall be deemed to be the amount of such tax reduced by the amount of the credit allowed under this section with respect to such tax against the tax imposed by this chapter without regard to subchapter D. The amount of the credit taken under this subsection shall be subject to each of the following conditions:

(1) The amount of the credit in respect of the tax paid or accrued to any country shall not exceed the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's excess profits net income from sources within such country bears to its entire excess profits net income for the same taxable year; and

(2) The total amount of the credit shall not exceed the same proportion of the tax against which such credit is taken, which the taxpayer's excess profits net income from sources without the United States bears to its entire excess profits net income for the same taxable year.

§ 39.131 (j)-1 Credit against excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D. (a) A domestic corporation is allowed a credit against the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1 for the amount of any income, war-profits, and excess profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country or to any possession of the United States. To the extent pertinent, the provisions of section 131 and the regulations promulgated thereunder are applicable for the purpose of claiming credit for taxes under this section, except that for such purpose the amount of income and profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to any foreign country or possession shall be deemed to be the amount of such taxes actually paid or accrued reduced by the amount of such taxes allowed as a credit under section 131 against the tax imposed by chapter 1 without regard to the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D. See § 39.131 (b)-1 as to the amount of such credit allowable and as to the computation of the tax against which such credit may be taken.

(b) The amount of the income and profits taxes (determined under paragraph (a) of this section) paid or accrued (including the taxes which, in accordance with the provisions of section 131 (f) are deemed to have been paid) during the taxable year to each foreign country or possession of the United States, limited under section 131 (j) (1) so as not to exceed that proportion of the excess profits tax which the taxpayer's excess profits net income from sources within such country or possession bears to its entire excess profits net income for the same taxable year, is the tentative credit for the purpose of this section in respect of the taxes paid or accrued to such country or possession. The sum of these tentative credits, limited under section 131 (j) (2) so as not to exceed that proportion of the excess profits tax which the taxpayer's excess profits net income from sources without the United States bears to its entire excess profits net income for the same taxable year, is the amount allowable as a credit against the excess profits tax for income or profits taxes paid or accrued to foreign countries or possessions of the United States. For the determination of the excess profits net income, see §§ 40.433 (a)-1 and 40.433 (a)-2 of this chapter (Regulations 130) For the determination of the source of such net income, see section 119 and the regulations thereunder.

(c) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples involving the calendar year 1952.

Example (1). In this example it is assumed that the taxpayer has no income or loss from any foreign country other than Country X. Accordingly, the limitation under section 131 (j) (2) will not change the credit determined after applying section 131 (j) (1).

(A) Normal tax net income from all sources	$100,000
(B) Total normal tax and surtax (before section 131 credit)	46,500
(C) Normal tax net income from foreign Country X	90,000
(D) Foreign tax paid on Country X income	49,500
(E) Limitation on foreign tax under section 131 (b) (1) and (2) to determine section 131 (a) credit allowable against normal tax and surtax: $\frac{$90,000}{$100,000} \times $46,500$	41,850
(F) Foreign tax credit allowable against normal tax and surtax (foreign tax, but not in excess of above limitation of $41,850	41,850
(G) Excess profits net income from all sources	80,000
(H) Excess profits net income from foreign Country X	75,000
(I) Excess profits credit	60,000
(J) Excess profits tax (before section 131 credit)	6,000
(K) Foreign tax paid on Country X income for the purpose of section 131 (j) $49,500−$41,850	7,650
(L) Limitation on foreign tax under section 131 (j) (1) and (2) to determine section 131 (j) credit allowable against excess profits tax: $\frac{$75,000}{$80,000} \times $6,000$	5,625
(M) Foreign tax credit allowable against excess profits tax (foreign tax for purpose of section 131 (j), but not in excess of above limitation of $5,625)	5,625
(N) Total income and excess profits tax (before section 131 credit) $46,500+$6,000	52,500
(O) Total credit under section 131. $41,850+$5,625	47,475
(P) Total income and excess profits tax after credit under section 131: $52,500—$47,475	5,025

Example (2). The facts are assumed to be the same as those under example (1), except that there is a net loss of $10,000 allocable to foreign country Y, which net loss was taken into account in determining the normal tax net income from all sources of $100,000 (item (A), example (1)) and the excess profits net income from all sources of $80,000 (item (G), example (1)). The total income and excess profits tax after credit under section 131 is computed as follows:

(A) Tentative foreign tax credit under section 131 (b) (1) allowable against normal tax and surtax (foreign tax paid on country X income, but not in excess of limitation under section 131 (b) (1)) $\frac{$90,000}{$100,000}\times$46,500$	$41,850
(B) Limitation on foreign tax under section 131 (b) (2) to determine section 131 (a) credit allowable against normal tax and surtax: $\frac{$80,000}{$100,000}\times$46,500$	37,200
(C) Foreign tax credit allowable against normal tax and surtax (tentative credit under section 131 (b) (1), but not in excess of $37,200 limitation under section 131 (b) (2))	37,200
(D) Foreign tax paid for the purpose of section 131 (j) $49,500−$37,200	12,300
(E) Tentative foreign tax credit under section 131 (j) (1) allowable against excess profits tax (foreign tax for purpose of section 131 (j), but not in excess of limitation under section 131 (j) (1)) $\frac{$75,000}{$80,000}\times$6,000$	5,625
(F) Limitation on foreign tax under section 131 (j) (2) to determine section 131 (j) credit allowable against excess profits tax: $\frac{$65,000}{$80,000}\times$6,000$	4,875
(G) Foreign tax credit allowable against excess profits tax (tentative credit under section 131 (j) (1), but not in excess of $4,875, limitation under section 131 (j) (2))	4,875
(H) Total income and excess profits tax (before section 131 credit) $46,500+$6,000	52,500
(I) Total credit under section 131. $37,200+$4,875	42,075
(J) Total income and excess profits tax after credit under section 131. $52,500−$42,075	10,425

SUPPLEMENT D—RETURNS AND PAYMENT OF TAX

SEC. 141. Consolidated returns—(a) Privilege to file consolidated returns. An affiliated group of corporations shall, subject to the provisions of this section, have the privilege of making a consolidated return for the taxable year in lieu of separate returns. The making of a consolidated return shall be upon the condition that all corporations which at any time during the taxable year have been members of the affiliated group consent to all the consolidated return regulations prescribed under subsection (b) prior to the last day prescribed by law for the filing of such return. The making of a consolidated return shall be considered as such consent. In the case of a corporation which is a member of the affiliated group for a fractional part of the year, the consolidated return shall include the income of such corporation for such part of the year as it is a member of the affiliated group.

(b) Regulations. The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as he may deem necessary in order that the tax liability of any affiliated group of corporations making a consolidated return and of each corporation in the group, both during and after the period of affiliation, may be returned, determined, computed, assessed, collected, and adjusted, in such manner as clearly to reflect the income- and excess-profits-tax liability and the various factors necessary for the determination of such liability, and in order to prevent avoidance of such tax liability.

(c) Computation and payment of tax. In any case in which a consolidated return is made or is required to be made, the tax shall be determined, computed, assessed, collected, and adjusted in accordance with the regulations under subsection (b) prescribed prior to the last day prescribed by law for the filing of such return; except that the tax imposed under section 15 or section 204 shall be increased by 2 per centum of the consolidated corporation surtax net income of the affiliated group of includible corporations. If the affiliated group includes one or more Western Hemisphere trade corporations (as defined in section 109), the increase of 2 per centum provided in the preceding sentence shall be applied only on the amount by which the consolidated corporation surtax net income of the affiliated group exceeds the portion (if any) of the consolidated corporation surtax net income attributable to the Western Hemisphere trade corporations included in such group. For the purposes of the tax imposed by section 430, the sum of the excess profits credit and the unused excess profits credit adjustment of the affiliated group shall not be increased under the last sentence of section 431 to an amount in excess of $25,000 for the entire group.

(d) Definition of "affiliated group" As used in this section, an "affiliated group" means one or more chains of includible corporations connected through stock ownership with a common parent corporation which is an includible corporation if—

(1) Stock possessing at least 95 per centum of the voting power of all classes of stock and at least 95 per centum of each class of the nonvoting stock of each of the includible corporations (except the common parent corporation) is owned directly by one or more of the other includible corporations; and

(2) The common parent corporation owns directly stock possessing at least 95 per centum of the voting power of all classes of stock and at least 95 per centum of each class of the nonvoting stock of at least one of the other includible corporations.

As used in this subsection, the term "stock" does not include nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends.

(e) Definition of "includible corporation" As used in this section, the term "includible corporation" means any corporation except—

(1) Corporations exempt from taxation under section 101.

(2) Insurance companies subject to taxation under section 201 or 207.

(3) Foreign corporations.

(4) Corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, by reason of receiving a large percentage of their income from sources within possessions of the United States.

(5) Corporations organized under the China Trade Act, 1922.

(7) Any corporation described in section 449, or in section 454 (d), (f), and (g) (without regard to the exception in the initial clause of section 454), but not including such a corporation which has made and filed a consent, for the taxable year or any prior taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, to be treated as an includible corporation. Such consent shall be made and filed at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

(8) Regulated public utilities described in section 448 (d) which compute their excess profits credit under section 448 but not including any such regulated public utility which has made and filed a consent, applicable to the taxable year, to compute its excess profits credit without regard to section 448. The consent shall be made and filed at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary. The consent shall be applicable to the taxable year for which filed and to each consecutive subsequent taxable year for which a consolidated return is filed.

(f) Includible insurance companies. Despite the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (e), two or more domestic insurance companies each of which is subject to taxation under the same section of this chapter shall be considered as includible corporations for the purpose of the application of subsection (d) to such insurance companies alone.

(g) Subsidiary formed to comply with foreign law. In the case of a domestic corporation owning or controlling, directly or indirectly, 100 per centum of the capital stock (exclusive of directors' qualifying shares) of a corporation organized under the laws of a contiguous foreign country and maintained solely for the purpose of complying with the laws of such country as to title and operation of property, such foreign corporation may, at the option of the domestic corporation, be treated for the purpose of this chapter as a domestic corporation.

(h) Suspension of running of statute of limitations. If a notice under section 272 (a) in respect of a deficiency for any taxable year is mailed to a corporation, the suspension of the running of the statute of limitations, provided in section 277, shall apply in the case of corporations with which such corporation made a consolidated return for such taxable year.

(i) Allocation of income and deductions. For allocation of income and deductions of related trades or businesses, see section 45.

(j) Includible regulated public utilities. Despite the provisions of paragraph (8) of subsection (e), two or more regulated public utilities each of which has made and filed a consent, applicable to the taxable year, to compute its excess profits credit under section 448 only, shall be considered as includible corporations for the purpose of the application of subsection (d) to such regulated public utilities alone. The consent shall be made and filed at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary. The consent shall be applicable to the taxable year for which filed and to each consecutive subsequent taxable year for which a consolidated return is filed.

§ 39.141-1 Consolidated income and excess profits tax returns of affiliated corporations—(a) In general. Section 141 prescribes rules for the making of consolidated income and excess profits tax returns by affiliated groups of corporations. Part 24 of this chapter (Regulations 129) is applicable to the making of the consolidated income and excess profits tax return in the case of a taxable year ending after December 31, 1949. The determination, computation, assessment, collection, and adjustment of income and excess profits tax liabilities of the affiliated group and each member thereof both during and after the period of affiliation shall be made under the applicable provisions of such regulations.

(b) Formation of and changes in affiliated group. An affiliated group of corporations, within the meaning of section 141, is formed at the time that the common parent corporation, which is an includible corporation, becomes the owner directly of stock possessing at least 95 percent of the voting power of all classes of stock and at least 95 percent of each class of the nonvoting stock (not including nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends) of another includible corporation. A corporation becomes a member of such an affiliated group at the time that one or more members of such group become the owners directly of stock possessing at least 95 percent of the voting power of all classes of its stock and at least 95 percent of each class of its nonvoting stock (not including nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends) A corporation ceases to be a member of such an affiliated group at the time that the members of such group cease to own directly stock possessing at least 95 percent of the voting power of all classes of its stock, or at least 95 percent of each class of its nonvoting stock (not including nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends)

(c) Corporations to be included in consolidated returns. (1) The privilege of filing consolidated returns is extended to all includible corporations constituting an "affiliated group" as defined in section 141 (d) In case a corporation is a member of an affiliated group for a fractional part of the year, the consolidated return shall include the income of such corporation for the part of the year during which it is a member of the group. An "includible corporation" is defined by section 141 (e) to mean any corporation except—

(i) A corporation exempt under section 101 from the tax imposed by chapter 1,

(ii) An insurance company subject to taxation under section 201 or 207 (except as provided in section 141 (f))

(iii) A foreign corporation (except as provided in section 141 (g))

(iv) A corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251, by reason of receiving a large percentage of its income from sources within possessions of the United States;

(v) A corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4)

(vi) A regulated investment company subject to tax under Supplement Q (sections 361 and 362)

(vii) A personal service corporation described in section 449 or a corporation described in section 454 (d), (f) or (g) which, without regard to the exception stated in the initial clause of section 454, would be exempt from the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1, except as otherwise provided in section 141 (e) (7). As to the exception provided in section 141 (e) (7), see the provisions set forth in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph; and

(viii) A regulated public utility corporation described in section 448 (d), except as otherwise provided in section 141 (e) (8) and section 141 (j) As to the exception provided in section 141 (e) (8), see the provisions set forth in subparagraph (4) of this paragraph. As to the exception provided in section 141 (j) see paragraph (g) of this section.

(2) The corporations described in section 454 (d), (f) and (g), are personal holding companies as defined in section 501, certain domestic corporations which derive a specified part of their gross income from sources outside the United States (section 454 (f)), and certain corporations which receive compensation from the United States for the transportation of mail by aircraft (section 454 (g))

(3) Any corporation which otherwise would not be an includible corporation under subparagraph (1) (vii) of this paragraph and section 141 (e) (7) may make and file a consent to be treated as an includible corporation. A corporation which has made and filed a consent for any taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, shall be treated as an includible corporation for such taxable year and for each subsequent taxable year. With respect to the subsequent taxable years, such corporation shall be deemed to be an includible corporation regardless of whether the affiliated group of which such corporation is a member during the subsequent taxable year is the same as the affiliated group of which it was a member when the consent was filed. If such corporation is a common parent corporation, the making and filing of the consolidated income tax return shall constitute the making and filing of its consent under section 141 (e) (7) If such corporation is a subsidiary, the filing for a taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, of its authorization and consent on Form 1122 in the manner prescribed by § 24.12 (b) of this subchapter (Regulations 129) shall constitute the making and filing of such consent. A consent to be treated as an includible corporation under section 141 (e) (7) cannot be withdrawn or revoked at any time after the consolidated return is filed for the first taxable year for which the consent is filed, except as otherwise provided in section 613 of the Revenue Act of 1951. Section 613 of that Act relates to the withdrawal within 90 days after October 20, 1951 (the date of enactment of that act) of consents for the first taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, with respect to corporations described in section 454 (f)

(4) Under section 141 (e) (8), any regulated public utility corporation may make and file a consent to compute its excess profits credit without regard to section 448. A corporation which has made and filed such consent shall be treated as an includible corporation under section 141 (e) (8) for the taxable year for which such consent is filed and for each consecutive subsequent taxable year for which a consolidated return is made or is required to be made by the affiliated group of which it was a member at the time such consent was filed unless it has ceased to be a member of such group. If such corporation is a common parent corporation, the making and filing of a consolidated return in which the consolidated excess profits credit is determined under provisions other than those of section 448 shall constitute the making and filing of its consent under section 141 (e) (8). If such corporation is a subsidiary, the filing of an authorization and consent on Form 1122, in the manner prescribed by § 24.12 (b) of this subchapter (Regulations 129), indicating thereon its consent to compute its excess profits credit without regard to section 448 shall constitute the making and filing of such consent. A consent to be treated as an includible corporation under section 141 (e) (8) cannot be withdrawn or revoked at any time after the consolidated return is filed for the first taxable year for which the consent is filed; however, if a separate return is properly filed by such a corporation for a subsequent taxable year, it is not thereafter an includible corporation under section 141 (e) (8) unless another consent under such section is made and filed.

(5) The consolidated income and excess-profits tax return must include every includible corporation which, under the provisions of section 141, is a member of the affiliated group. In no case may a consolidated return be filed by subsidiary corporations as an affiliated group unless the common parent corporation through which the subsidiaries are connected is a member of the group. For instance, there will not be recognized as an affiliated group two domestic industrial corporations the common parent corporation of which is a regulated investment company subject to tax under Supplement Q. In addition, no corporation which is connected by stock ownership with an affiliated group of includible corporations through a nonincludible corporation may be included in the consolidated return of such group.

(6) Every corporation which is a member of an affiliated group making consolidated returns under section 141 is a member of such group, regardless of any exemption to which it might have been entitled if separate returns had been made. See sections 449 and 454.

(d) Consolidated returns of insurance companies. An insurance company subject to tax under section 204 is an includible corporation and may be included in an affiliated group together with corporations other than insurance companies taxable under section 201 or section 207. Insurance companies subject to tax under section 201 or 207 are not includible corporations under section 141 (e) (2). Under section 141 (f), however, a domestic insurance company taxable under section 201 may be included in an affiliated group comprised solely of other domestic insurance companies taxable under section 201; it may not be included in an affiliated group with other corporations. Similarly a domestic insurance company taxable under section 207 may be included in an affiliated group comprised solely of other domestic insurance companies taxable under section 207; it may not be included in an affiliated group with other corporations. An affiliated group of domestic insurance companies taxable under section 201, or a group of domestic insurance companies taxable under section 207, may not include a domestic insurance company taxable under section 204.

(e) Foreign corporations which may be treated as domestic corporations. In the case of a domestic corporation owning or controlling, directly or indirectly, the entire capital stock (exclusive of directors' qualifying shares) of a corporation organized under the laws of Canada or of Mexico and maintained solely for the purpose of complying with the laws of such country as to title and operation of property, such foreign corporation may, at the option of the domestic corporation, be treated as a domestic corporation. The option to treat such foreign corporation as a domestic corporation must be exercised at the time of making the consolidated return, and cannot be exercised at any time thereafter. If the foreign corporation is included or is required to be included in the consolidated return of the affiliated group of which it is a member for any taxable year, it must be included in the consolidated return for each consecutive taxable year thereafter for which such group makes or is required to make a consolidated return.

(f) Computation of tax. The surtax imposed by section 15 or section 204 upon an affiliated group making a consolidated income tax return shall be increased by 2 percent of the consolidated corporation surtax net income. For example, if the consolidated corporation surtax net income of an affiliated group for a taxable year is $40,000, the increase in the surtax for such taxable year is $800, that is 2 percent of $40,000. If the affiliated group includes one or more Western Hemisphere trade corporations (as defined in section 109) the increase shall be applied in the manner provided in § 24.30 (b) (1) of this subchapter (Regulations 129)

(g) Consolidated returns of regulated public utilities computing excess profits credit under section 448. A regulated public utility which has made and filed a consent to compute its excess profits credit under section 448 only may be included in an affiliated group (within the meaning of section 141 (d)) comprised solely of regulated public utility corporations each of which has made and filed such a consent. If such consent of a regulated public utility corporation is filed for any taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, such corporation shall be an includible corporation within the meaning of section 141 (j) for the taxable year for which such consent is filed and for all consecutive subsequent taxable years for which such affiliated group of which such corporation is a member makes or is required to make a consolidated return. If such corporation is a common parent corporation, the making and filing of a consolidated return in which the consolidated excess profits credit is determined under the provisions of section 448 shall constitute the making and filing of its consent under section 141 (j) If such corporation is a subsidiary, the filing of its authorization and consent on Form 1122, in the manner prescribed by § 24.12 (b) of this subchapter (Regulations 129) indicating thereon its consent to compute its excess profits credit with respect to section 448 only, shall constitute the making and filing of such consent. A consent to be treated as an includible corporation under section 141 (j) cannot be withdrawn or revoked at any time after the consolidated return is filed for the first taxable year for which the consent is filed. However, if a separate return is properly filed by such a corporation for a subsequent taxable year, it is not thereafter an includible corporation under section 141 (j) unless another consent under such section is made and filed.

SEC. 142. Fiduciary returns—(a) Requirement of return. Every fiduciary (except a receiver appointed by authority of law in possession of part only of the property of an individual) shall make under oath a return for any of the following individuals, estates, or trusts for which he acts, stating specifically the items of gross income thereof and the deductions and credits allowed under this chapter and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may by regulations prescribe—

(1) Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $600 or over;

(2) Every estate the gross income of which for the taxable year is $600 or over;

(3) Every trust the net income of which for the taxable year is $100 or over, or the gross income of which for the taxable year is $600 or over, regardless of the amount of net income;

(4) Every estate or trust of which any beneficiary is a nonresident alien.

(b) Joint fiduciaries. Under such regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe a return made by one of two or more joint fiduciaries and filed in the office of the collector of the district where such fiduciary resides shall be sufficient compliance with the above requirement. Such fiduciary shall make oath (1) that he has sufficient knowledge of the affairs of the individual, estate, or trust for which the return is made, to enable him to make the return, and (2) that the return is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, true and correct.

(c) Law applicable to fiduciaries. Any fiduciary required to make a return under this chapter shall be subject to all the provisions of law which apply to individuals.

§ 39.142–1 Fiduciary returns. (a) Every fiduciary, or at least one of joint fiduciaries, must make a return of income—

(1) Returns for individuals. For the individual whose income is in his charge, if the gross income of such individual is $600 or over. The return shall be on Form 1040.

(2) Returns for estates and trusts. For the estate for which he acts if the gross income of such estate is $600 or over, and for the trust for which he acts if the gross income of such trust is $600 or over, or the net income of such trust, as computed under section 162, is $100 or over, or if any beneficiary of such estate or trust is a nonresident alien. The return shall be on Form 1041.

(b) In cases in which the gross income of the estate or trust is $5,000 or over, a copy of the will or trust instrument, sworn to by the fiduciary as a true and complete copy must be filed with the fiduciary return of the estate or trust, together with a statement by the fiduciary indicating the provisions of the will or trust instrument which, in his opinion, determine the extent to which the income of the estate or trust is taxable to the estate or trust, the beneficiaries, or the grantor, respectively. If, however, a copy of the will or trust instrument, and statement relating to the provisions of the will or trust instrument, have once been filed, they need not again be filed if the fiduciary return contains a statement showing when and where they were filed. If the trust instrument is amended in any way after such copies have been filed, a copy of the amendment, together with a statement by the fiduciary, indicating the effect, if any, in his opinion, of such amendment on the extent to which the income of the estate or trust is taxable to the estate or trust, the beneficiaries, or the grantor, respectively, must be filed with the return for the taxable year in which the amendment was made.

(c) See § 39.142–5 for returns in cases where any beneficiary is a nonresident alien. For returns on Form 990–T by certain trusts otherwise exempt from tax under section 101 (6), which trusts are subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) (2) upon Supplement U net income, see § 39.421–3. For information returns required to be made by fiduciaries under section 147, see § 39.147–1. As to further duties and liabilities of fiduciaries, see section 312.

§ 39.142–2 Return by guardian or committee. A fiduciary acting as the guardian of a minor, or as the guardian or committee of an insane person, having a gross income of $600 or more for the taxable year, must make a return for such person on Form 1040 and pay the tax unless, in the case of a minor, the minor himself makes a return or causes it to be made. As to the use of the optional return, see § 39.51–2.

§ 39.142–3 Returns in case of two trusts. In the case of two or more trusts the income of which is taxable to the beneficiaries, which were created by the same person and for which the same trustee acts, the trustee shall make a single return on Form 1041 for all such trusts, notwithstanding that they may arise from different instruments. If, however, one person acts as trustee for trusts created by different persons for the benefit of the same beneficiary, he shall make a return on Form 1041 for each trust separately.

§ 39.142-4 Return by receiver A receiver who stands in the place of an individual or corporation must render a return of income and pay the tax for his trust, but a receiver of only part of the property of an individual or corporation need not. If the receiver acts for an individual, the return shall be on Form 1040 or 1040A. When acting for a corporation a receiver is not treated as a fiduciary, and in such a case the return shall be made as if by the corporation itself. See section 52. A receiver in charge of the business of a partnership shall render a return on Form 1065. A receiver of the rents and profits appointed to hold and operate a mortgaged parcel of real estate, but not in control of all the property or business of the mortgagor, and a receiver in partition proceedings, are not required to render returns of income. In general, statutory receivers and common-law receivers of all the property or business of an individual or corporation must make returns. See also sections 147 and 148 (a)

§ 39.142-5 Return for nonresident alien beneficiary—(a) United States business. If a citizen or resident fiduciary has the distribution of the income of an estate or trust any beneficiary of which is a nonresident alien engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year, the fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1040B for such nonresident alien and pay any tax shown thereon to be due. See sections 143 and 211. Unless such return is a true and accurate return of the nonresident alien beneficiary's income from all sources within the United States, the benefits of the credits and deductions to which the beneficiary is entitled cannot be obtained in the return filed by the fiduciary. See sections 215 and 251. If the beneficiary appoints a person in the United States to act as his agent for the purpose of rendering income tax returns, the fiduciary shall be relieved from the necessity of filing Form 1040B in behalf of the beneficiary and from paying the tax. In such a case the fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1041 and attach thereto a copy of the notice of appointment. If the sole beneficiary of an estate or trust is a nonresident alien engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year, the fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1041, as well as on Form 1040B. If there are two or more such nonresident alien beneficiaries, the fiduciary shall render a return on Form 1041 and also a return on Form 1040B for each nonresident alien beneficiary. See further § 39.217-1.

(b) No United States business. A citizen or resident fiduciary having the distribution of the income of an estate or trust will not be required to make a return for any beneficiary of the estate or trust who is a nonresident alien not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year if the entire amount of the tax on the income payable to such beneficiary has been withheld at the source (see sections 143 and 211 (a)). A citizen or resident fiduciary having the distribution of the income of an estate or trust shall make a return on Form 1040NB-a if a beneficiary has gross income for the taxable year of more than $15,400 from the sources specified in section 211 (a), regardless of the amount of tax withheld at the source. If the gross income from such sources is $15,400 or less, the return (if a return is required to be filed) for the beneficiary shall be on Form 1040NB. If a return is required to be filed for a beneficiary who is a resident of Canada, such return also shall be on Form 1040NB. If the beneficiary appoints a person in the United States to act as his agent for the purpose of rendering income tax returns, the fiduciary shall be relieved from the necessity of filing a return in behalf of the beneficiary and from paying the tax. In such a case the fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1041 and attach thereto a copy of the notice of appointment. The fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1042 of the tax on the entire amount of the income payable to the beneficiary. In addition to such return or returns, the fiduciary shall make a return on Form 1041 for the estate or trust, irrespective of the number of beneficiaries.

§ 39:142-6 Time for filing return upon death, or termination of trust. (a) Under the provisions of section 47 (g), the return by a taxpayer which was not in existence throughout a taxable period of 12 months is a return for the fractional part of a year during which the taxpayer was in existence. If a return is required under the provisions of §§ 39.47-1 and 39.142-1 for the last taxable year of a decedent, the executor or administrator of the decedent shall file such return at the time prescribed in § 39.53-1. If a return for the last taxable year of an estate or trust is required to be filed under the provisions of § 39.142-1, such return shall be filed at the time prescribed in § 39.53-1, and the last date prescribed for such filing shall also be the due date for payment of the tax or the first installment thereof if payment is made under the provisions of section 56 (b)

(b) The domiciliary representative is required to include in the return rendered by him as such domiciliary representative the entire income of the estate. Consequently, the only return required to be filed by the ancillary representative is on Form 1041, which shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for his internal revenue district and shall show the name and address of the domiciliary representative, the amount of gross income received by the ancillary representative, and the deductions to be claimed against such income, including any amount of income properly paid or credited by the ancillary representative to any legatee, heir, or other beneficiary. If the ancillary representative for the estate of a nonresident alien is a citizen or resident of the United States, and the domiciliary representative is a nonresident alien, such ancillary representative is required to render the return otherwise required of the domiciliary representative.

SEC. 143. Withholding of tax at source—(a) Tax-free covenant bonds—(1) Requirement of withholding. In any case where bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a corporation, issued before January 1, 1934, contain a contract or provision by which the obligor agrees to pay any portion of the tax imposed by this chapter upon the obligee, or to reimburse the obligee for any portion of the tax, or to pay the interest without deduction for any tax which the obligor may be required or permitted to pay thereon, or to retain therefrom under any law of the United States, the obligor shall deduct and withhold a tax equal to 2 per centum of the interest upon such bonds, mortgages, deeds of trust, or other obligations, whether such interest is payable annually or at shorter or longer periods, if payable to an individual, a partnership, or a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States: Provided, That if the liability assumed by the obligor does not exceed 2 per centum of the interest, then the deduction and withholding shall be at the following rates: (A) 30 per centum in the case of a nonresident alien individual (except that such rate shall be reduced, in the case of a resident of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, to such rate, not less than 5 per centum, as may be provided by treaty with such country), or of any partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States and composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, (B) in the case of such a foreign corporation, 30 per centum, and (C) 2 per centum in the case of other individuals and partnerships: Provided further, That if the owners of such obligations are not known to the withholding agent the Commissioner may authorize such deduction and withholding to be at the rate of 2 per centum, or, if the liability assumed by the obligor does not exceed 2 per centum of the interest, then at the rate of 30 per centum. As used in this subsection the term "nonresident alien individual" includes an alien resident of Puerto Rico.

(2) Benefit of credits against net income. Such deduction and withholding shall not be required in the case of a citizen or resident entitled to receive such interest, if he files with the withholding agent on or before February 1 a signed notice in writing claiming the benefit of the exemptions provided in section 25 (b); nor in the case of a nonresident alien individual if so provided for in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner under section 215.

(3) Income or obligor and obligee. The obligor shall not be allowed a deduction for the payment of the tax imposed by this chapter, or any other tax paid pursuant to the tax-free covenant clause, nor shall such tax be included in the gross income of the obligee.

(b) Nonresident aliens. All persons, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, fiduciaries, employers, and all officers and employees of the United States, having the control, receipt, custody, disposal, or payment of interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to persons not engaged in business in the United States), dividends, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, renumerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income (but only to the extent that any of the above items constitutes gross income from sources within the United States), of any nonresident alien individual, or of any partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States and composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, shall (except in the cases provided for in subsection (a) of this section and except as otherwise provided in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner under section 215) deduct and withhold from such annual or periodical gains, profits, and income a tax equal to 30 per centum thereof, except that such rate shall be reduced, in the case of a nonresident alien individual a resident of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, to such rate (not less than 5 per centum) as may be provided by treaty with such country: Provided, That no such deduction or withholding shall be required in the case of dividends paid by a foreign corporation unless (1) such corporation is engaged in trade or business within the United States, and (2) more than 85 per centum of the gross income of such corporation for the three-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of section 119: Provided further That the Commissioner may authorize such tax to be deducted and withheld from the interest upon any securities the owners of which are not known to the withholding agent: Provided further That the deduction and withholding in the case of interest on bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust or other similar obligations of a corporation, within the provisions of subsection (a) (1) of this section were it not for the fact that the maturity date of such obligations has been extended on or after January 1, 1934, and the liability assumed by the debtor exceeds 27½ per centum of the interest, shall not exceed the rate of 27½ per centum per annum. Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, there may be exempted from such deduction and withholding the compensation for personal services of nonresident alien individuals who enter and leave the United States at frequent intervals. In respect of the compensation for services performed by nonresident alien individuals brought into the United States under the authority of the War Manpower Commission for temporary employment essential to the war effort and subject to withholding under this subsection, the deduction and withholding shall be at the rate of 10 per centum, and there shall be no deduction or withholding under section 1622. As used in this subsection, the term "nonresident alien individual" includes an alien resident of Puerto Rico.

(c) Return and payment. Every person required to deduct and withhold any tax under this section shall, on or before March 15 of each year, make return thereof and pay the tax to the collector designated in section 53 (b). Every such person is hereby made liable for such tax and is hereby indemnified against the claims and demands of any person for the amount of any payments made in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(d) Income of recipient. Income upon which any tax is required to be withheld at the source under this section shall be included in the return of the recipient of such income, but any amount of tax so withheld shall be credited against the amount of income tax as computed in such return.

(e) Tax paid by recipient. If any tax required under this section to be deducted and withheld is paid by the recipient of the income, it shall not be re-collected from the withholding agent; nor in cases in which the tax is so paid shall any penalty be imposed upon or collected from the recipient of the income or the withholding agent for failure to return or pay the same, unless such failure was fraudulent and for the purpose of evading payment.

(f) Refunds and credits. Where there has been an overpayment of tax under this section any refund or credit made under the provisions of section 322 shall be made to the withholding agent unless the amount of such tax was actually withheld by the withholding agent.

(g) Cross reference. For definition of "withholding agent," see section 3797 (a) (16).

(h) Withholding on certain foreign tax-exempt organizations. In the case of income of a foreign organization subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a), the provisions of this section and section 144 shall apply to rents includible under section 422 in computing its unrelated business net income, but only to the extent and subject to such conditions as may be provided under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

§ 39.143-1 Withholding tax at source—(a) Withholding in general. (1) Withholding of a tax of 30 percent is required in the case of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income paid to a nonresident alien individual, even though such individual is engaged in trade or business within the United States, or to a nonresident partnership, composed in whole or in part of nonresident alien individuals, except—

(i) Income from sources without the United States, including interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to persons not engaged in business in the United States,

(ii) Interest upon bonds or other obligations of a corporation containing a tax-free covenant and issued before January 1, 1934 (but see paragraph (b) of this section)

(iii) Dividends paid by a foreign corporation unless (a) such corporation is engaged in trade or business within the United States, and (b) more than 85 percent of the gross income of such corporation for the 3-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States, as determined under the provisions of section 119, and

(iv) Dividends distributed by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4) to a resident of China.

Such rate of 30 percent shall be reduced as may be provided by treaty with any country. See section 22 (b) (7) Withholding is required in the case of interest paid on obligations issued on or after March 1, 1941, by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. See §§ 39.22 (b) (4)-4 and 39.22 (b) (4)-6, relating to the taxation of such interest, and § 39.143-4, relating to ownership certificates.

(2) The rate of withholding provided with respect to compensation for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, or by a citizen of a possession of the United States not otherwise a citizen of the United States, brought into the United States under proper authority for temporary employment essential to the war effort shall be at the reduced rate of 10 percent. In applying such reduced rate of withholding, however, to the compensation of a nonresident alien or other individual coming within the scope of this subparagraph, the proration of the exemptions provided in § 39.143-3, is not applicable. The rate of 10 percent provided in this subparagraph should, therefore, be applied against the gross amount of the compensation derived from labor or personal services by such an individual. The provisions of this subparagraph shall not be construed as cancelling or affecting any exemption from withholding in the case of any nonresident alien individual under existing law, regulations, or ruling, nor do such provisions affect the tax liability of such a nonresident alien individual.

(3) Under the provisions of section 143 (b) the rate of tax withheld at the source shall not exceed 27½ percent in the case of interest on bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust or other similar obligations of a corporation within the provisions of section 143 (a) (1) were it not for the fact that the maturity date of such obligations has been extended on or after January 1, 1934.

(4) The tax must be withheld at the source from the gross amount of any distribution made by a corporation, other than a nontaxable distribution payable in stock or stock rights or a distribution in partial or complete liquidation, without regard to any claim that all or a portion of such distribution is not taxable. Appropriate adjustments, if any, will be made upon the filing of claims for refund.

(5) The tax need not be withheld on accrued interest paid in connection with the sale of bonds between interest dates.

(6) A tax of 30 percent must be withheld from interest on bonds or securities not containing a tax-free covenant, or containing a tax-free covenant and issued on or after January 1, 1934, if the owner is unknown to the withholding agent, except where such interest represents income from sources without the United States.

(7) The gross amount of rents paid under a Supplement U lease to an organization subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) with respect to rents includible under section 422 in computing unrelated business net income is subject to withholding.

(9) Resident or domestic fiduciaries are required to deduct the income tax at the source from all fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income of nonresident alien beneficiaries, to the extent that such items constitute gross income from sources within the United States. Bond interest, dividends, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical income paid to a nonresident alien fiduciary is subject to withholding even though the beneficiaries of the estate or trust are citizens or residents of the United States.

(10) The income of a trust created by a nonresident alien individual and taxable to the grantor under the provisions of section 166 or 167 is subject to withholding even though the beneficiaries of such trust are citizens or residents of the United States, and regardless of whether the beneficiaries are exempt from income tax.

(11) A debtor corporation having an issue of bonds or other similar obligations which appoints a duly authorized agent to act in its behalf under the withholding provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, is required to file notice of such appointment with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., giving the name and address of the agent; except that, on and after July 19, 1953, such notice shall be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore 2, Maryland.

(12) If, in connection with the sale of its property, payment of the bonds or other obligations of a corporation is assumed by the assignee, such assignee, whether an individual, partnership, or corporation, must deduct and withhold such taxes as would be required to be withheld by the assignor had no such sale or transfer been made.

(14) As to who are nonresident alien individuals, see §§ 39.211-2 and 39.3797-8. For the purpose of section 143 (a) (1) and (b) the term "nonresident alien individual" includes an alien resident of Puerto Rico. For classification of foreign corporations, see §§ 39.231-2 and 39.3797-8. As to what partnerships are deemed to be nonresident partnerships, see § 39.3797-8.

(15) For withholding in the case of dividends distributed by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4) see §§ 39.143-3 and 39.262-4.

(b) Tax-free covenant bonds issued before January 1, 1934. (1) The withholding provisions of section 143 (a) (1) are applicable only to bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a corporation which were issued before January 1, 1934, and which contain a tax-free covenant. For the purpose of section 143 (a) (1) bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a corporation, are issued when delivered. If a broker or other person acts as selling agent of the obligor, the obligation is issued when delivered by the agent to the purchaser. If a broker or other person purchases the obligation outright for the purpose of holding or reselling it, the obligation is issued when delivered to such broker or other person.

(2) In order that the date of issue of bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of corporations, containing a tax-free covenant may be readily determined by the owner, for the purpose of preparing the ownership certificates required by the regulation under section 143, the "issuing" or debtor corporation shall indicate, by an appropriate notation, the date of issue or use the phrase "Issued on or after January 1, 1934," on each such obligation or in a statement accompanying the delivery of such obligation.

(3) In cases where on or after January 1, 1934, the maturity date of bonds or other obligations of a corporation is extended, the bonds or other obligations shall be considered to have been issued on or after January 1, 1934. The interest on such obligations is not subject to the withholding provisions of section 143 (a) but falls within the class of interest described in section 143 (b)

(4) In the case of interest upon bonds or other obligations of a corporation containing a tax-free covenant and issued before January 1, 1934, paid to an individual, a fiduciary, or a partnership, whether resident or nonresident, withholding of a tax of 2 percent is required, except that if the liability assumed by the obligor in connection with such a covenant does not exceed 2 percent of the interest, withholding is required at the rate of 30 percent in the case of a nonresident alien, or a nonresident partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident alien individuals, or if the owner is unknown to the withholding agent. The rates of withholding applicable to the interest on bonds or other obligations of a corporation containing a tax-free covenant, and issued before January 1, 1934, are applicable to interest on such obligations issued by a domestic corporation or a resident foreign corporation. However, withholding is not required in the case of interest payments on such bonds or obligations if such interest is not to be treated as income from sources within the United States under section 119 (a) (1) (B) and the payments are made to a nonresident alien or a partnership composed wholly of nonresident aliens. A nonresident foreign corporation having a fiscal or paying agent in the United States is required to withhold a tax of 2 percent upon the interest on its tax-free covenant bonds issued before January 1, 1934, paid to an individual or fiduciary who is a citizen or resident of the United States, or to a partnership any member of which is a citizen or resident, or to an unknown owner.

(5) For withholding in the case of interest upon bonds or other obligations of a corporation containing a tax-free covenant and issued before January 1, 1934, paid to nonresident foreign corporations, see § 39.144-1.

(6) Bonds issued under a trust deed containing a tax-free covenant are treated as if they contain such a covenant. If neither the bonds nor the trust deeds given by the obligor to secure them contained a tax-free covenant, but the original trust deeds were modified before January 1, 1934, by supplemental agreements containing a tax-free covenant executed by the obligor corporation and the trustee, the bonds issued before January 1, 1934, are subject to the provisions of section 143 (a) provided appropriate authority existed for the modification of the trust deeds in this manner. The authority must have been contained in the original trust deeds or actually secured from the bondholders.

(7) In the case of corporate bonds or other obligations containing a tax-free covenant, issued before January 1, 1934, the corporation paying a Federal tax, or any part of it, for someone else pursuant to its agreement is not entitled to deduct such payment from its gross income on any ground nor shall the tax so paid be included in the gross income of the bondholder. The amount of the tax may nevertheless be claimed by the bondholder as a credit against the total amount of income tax due in accordance with section 143 (d). The tax withheld at the source upon tax-free covenant bond interest included in the income of an estate or trust and taxable to the beneficiaries thereof (including the grantor of a trust subject to section 166 or 167) is allowable, pro rata, as a credit against (i) the tax required to be withheld by the fiduciary from the income of nonresident alien beneficiaries and (ii) the total tax computed in the returns of the beneficiaries required to make returns. In the case, however, of corporate bonds or other obligations containing an appropriate tax-free covenant, the corporation paying for someone else, pursuant to its agreement, a State tax or any tax other than a Federal tax may deduct such payment as interest paid on indebtedness.

§ 39.143-2 Fixed or determinable annual or periodical income. (a) Only fixed or determinable annual or periodical income is subject to withholding. The Internal Revenue Code specifically includes in such income, interest, dividends, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, and emoluments. But other kinds of income are included, as, for instance, royalties.

(b) Income is fixed when it is to be paid in amounts definitely predetermined. Income is determinable whenever there is a basis of calculation by which the amount to be paid may be ascertained. The income need not be paid annually if it is paid periodically; that is to say, from time to time, whether or not at regular intervals. That the length of time during which the payments are to be made may be increased or diminished in accordance with someone's will or with the happening of an event does not make the payments any the less determinable or periodical. A salesman working by the month for a commission on sales which is paid or credited monthly receives determinable periodical income. The share of the fixed or determinable annual or periodical income of an estate or trust from sources within the United States which is distributable, whether distributed or not, or which has been paid or credited during the taxable year to a nonresident alien beneficiary of such estate or trust constitutes fixed or determinable annual or periodical income within the meaning of section 143 (b) The income derived from the sale in the United States of property, whether real or personal, is not fixed or determinable annual or periodical income. Such items as taxes, interest on mortgages, or premiums on insurance paid to or for the account of a nonresident alien landlord by a tenant, pursuant to the terms of the lease, constitute fixed or determinable annual or periodical income.

§ 39.143-3 Exemption from withholding. (a) Withholding from interest on bonds or other obligations of corporations issued before January 1, 1934, containing a tax-free covenant, shall not be required if there is filed with the withholding agent when presenting coupons for payment, or not later than February 1 of the following year, an ownership certificate on Form 1000 stating—

(1) In the case of a citizen or resident of the United States, that his net income does not exceed his exemptions under section 25 (b) or

(2) In the case of an estate or trust, that the net income does not exceed the credit allowed under section 163 (a) (1)

To avoid inconvenience, a resident alien should file a certificate of residence on Form 1078 with withholding agents, who shall forward such certificates to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., with a letter of transmittal; except that, on and after July 19, 1953, such certificates shall be forwarded to the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore 2, Maryland.

(b) The income of domestic corporations and of resident foreign corporations is free from withholding.

(c) No withholding from dividends paid by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4) is required unless the dividends are treated as income from sources within the United States under section 119 and are distributed to—

(1) A nonresident alien other than a resident of China at the time of such distribution;

(2) A nonresident partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens (other than a partnership resident in China) or

(3) A nonresident foreign corporation (other than a corporation resident in China)

(d) The salary or other compensation for personal services of a nonresident alien individual who enters or leaves the United States at frequent intervals shall not be subject to deduction and withholding of income tax at the source if—

(1) Such nonresident alien is a resident of Canada or Mexico, or

(2) Such nonresident alien is engaged in agricultural labor as defined in section 1426 (h)

(e) A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year is subject to the tax imposed by section 211 (a) on gross income and is not entitled to the exemptions under section 25 (b) A nonresident alien individual who is engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year is entitled to the exemption allowed by section 25 (b) (1) (A) If such nonresident alien is a resident of Canada or Mexico, he is also entitled to the exemptions allowed by section 25 (b) (1) (B) (C) or (D) The benefit of such exemptions may not be received by filing a claim therefor with the withholding agent. However, in the determination of the tax to be withheld at the source under section 143 (b) with respect to remuneration paid for labor or personal services performed within the United States by a nonresident alien, the benefit of the exemption for both normal tax and surtax shall be allowed, prorated upon a daily basis for the period of employment during any portion of which labor or personal services are performed within the United States by such alien. Such proration is on a basis of $1.70 per day. Thus, if A, a nonresident alien seaman employed by X Shipping Corporation, is paid in 1952 upon the termination of a voyage covering 100 days and A performs personal services within the United States during, or incident to such voyage, the amount of $170 will be allocated as the portion of the exemption to be allowed as a credit against the remuneration of A for personal services performed within the United States during such voyage, and withholding shall be applied against the balance, if any, of such remuneration. If, for example, the total remuneration paid to A for such voyage is $800, of which the amount of $120 is allocable to sources within the United States, there is no withholding. As to what constitutes remuneration for labor or personal services performed within the United States, see section 119 (a) (3) and § 39.119 (a)-3. The amount of the compensation allocable to labor or personal services performed within the United States together with the amount of the exemption for both normal tax and surtax, prorated as set forth above, shall be shown on the annual withholding return, Form 1042.

§ 39.143-4 Ownership certificates for bond interest. (a) In accordance with the provisions of section 147 (b) citizens and resident individuals and fiduciaries, resident partnerships and nonresident partnerships all of the members of which are citizens or residents, owning bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations issued by a domestic corporation, a resident foreign corporation, or a nonresident foreign corporation having a fiscal agent or a paying agent in the United States, when presenting interest coupons for payment shall file ownership certificates, regardless of the amount of the coupons, for each issue of such obligations issued before January 1, 1934, and containing a tax-free covenant.

(b) In the case of interest payments on overdue coupon bonds, the interest coupons of which have been exhausted, ownership certificates are required to be filed when collecting the interest in the same manner as if interest coupons were presented for collection.

(c) In all cases where the owner of bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a corporation is a nonresident alien, a nonresident partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, a nonresident foreign corporation, or where the owner is unknown, an ownership certificate for each issue of such obligations shall be filed when interest coupons for any amount are presented for payment. The ownership certificate is required in such cases whether or not the obligation contains a tax-free covenant. However, ownership certificates need not be filed by a nonresident alien, a partnership composed wholly of nonresident aliens, or a nonresident foreign corporation in connection with interest payments on such bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations of a domestic or resident foreign corporation qualifying under section 119 (a) (1) (B), or of a nonresident foreign corporation. Ownership certificates (Form 1001) shall also be filed in the case of interest paid on obligations of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, regardless of the date of issuance of such obligations, if such obligations are owned by the persons described in the first sentence of this paragraph.

(d) The ownership certificate shall show the name and address of the obligor, the name and address of the owner of the obligations, a description of the obligations, the amount of interest and its due date, the rate at which tax is to be withheld, and the date upon which the interest coupons were presented for payment.

(e) Ownership certificates need not be filed in the case of interest payments on obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or the obligations of possessions of the United States. See section 22 (b) (4) Ownership certificates are not required to be filed in connection with interest payments on bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust, or other similar obligations issued by an individual or a partnership. Ownership certificates are not required where the owner is a domestic corporation, a resident foreign corporation, or a foreign government.

(f) When interest coupons detached from corporate bonds, or from obligations of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof, are received unaccompanied by ownership certificates, unless the owner of the bonds is known to the first bank to which the coupons are presented for payment, and the bank is satisfied that the owner is a person who is not required to file an ownership certificate, the bank shall require of the payee a statement showing the name and address of the person from whom the coupons were received by the payee, and alleging that the owner of the bonds is unknown to the payee. Such statement shall be forwarded to the Commissioner with the quarterly return on Form 1012; except that, on and after July 19, 1953, such statement and return shall be forwarded to the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore 2, Maryland. The bank shall also require the payee to prepare a certificate on Form 1001, crossing out "owner" and inserting "payee" and entering the amount of the interest, and shall stamp or write across the face of the certificate "Statement furnished," adding the name of the bank.

(g) Ownership certificates are required in connection with interest payments on registered bonds as in the case of coupon bonds, except that if ownership certificates are not furnished by the owner of such bonds, ownership certificates must be prepared by the withholding agent.

§ 39.143-5 Form of certificate for citizens or residents. For the purpose of § 39.143-4, Form 1000 shall be used in preparing ownership certificates of citizens or residents of the United States (individual or fiduciary) resident partnerships, and nonresident partnerships all of the members of which are citizens or residents. If the obligations are issued by a nonresident foreign corporation having a fiscal or paying agent in the United States, Form 1000 should be modified to show the name and address of the fiscal agent or the paying agent in addition to the name and address of the debtor corporation.

§ 39.143-7 Return and payment of tax withheld. (a) Every withholding agent shall make on or before March 15 an annual return on Form 1013 of the tax withheld from interest on bonds or other obligations of corporations and interest on obligations issued by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof on or after March 1, 1941. This return should be filed with the district director for the internal revenue district in which the withholding agent is located. The withholding agent also shall make a quarterly return on Form 1012 on or before the last day of the month following the termination of the quarter for which the return is made. The ownership certificates, Forms 1000 and 1001, must be forwarded to the Commissioner with the quarterly return; except that, on and after July 19, 1953, such certificates and return shall be forwarded to the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore 2, Maryland. Forms 1001 should be listed on the quarterly return. While Forms 1000 need not be listed on the return, the number of such forms submitted and the total amount of interest paid and of the tax withheld on such of the forms as report interest from which the tax is to be withheld should be entered in the spaces provided. If Form 1000 is modified to show the name and address of a fiscal or paying agent in the United States (see § 39.143-5) Forms 1012 and 1013 should be likewise modified. In the case of interest on obligations of the United States or of any agency or instrumentality thereof the withholding agents shall be: (1) The Commissioner of the Public Debt for interest paid by checks issued through the Bureau of the Public Debt; (2) the Treasurer of the United States for all interest paid by him, whether by check or otherwise; and (3) each Federal reserve bank for all interest paid by it, whether by check or otherwise.

(b) Every person required to deduct and withhold any tax from income other than such bond interest shall make an annual return thereof to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which such person is located on or before March 15 on Form 1042, showing the amount of tax required to be withheld from each nonresident alien, nonresident partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, or nonresident foreign corporation to which income other than bond interest was paid during the previous taxable year. There shall be reported on Form 1042B not only such items of income listed on Form 1042, but also such items of interest listed on quarterly returns on Form 1012, including items of interest where the liability for withholding is only 2 percent.

(c) In every case the tax withheld must be paid to the district director of internal revenue on or before March 15 of the following year. For penalties and additions to the tax attaching upon failure to make such returns or such payments, see sections 145 and 291.

(d) If a debtor corporation has designated a person to act for it as withholding agent, and such person has not withheld any tax from the income nor received any funds from the debtor corporation to pay the tax which the debtor corporation assumed in connection with its tax-free covenant bonds, such person cannot be held liable for the tax assumed by the debtor corporation merely by reason of such person's appointment as withholding agent. If a duly authorized withholding agent has become insolvent or for any other reason fails to make payment to the district director of internal revenue of money deposited with it by the debtor corporation to pay taxes, or money withheld from bondholders, the debtor corporation is not discharged of its liability under section 143 (a) (1), since the withholding agent is merely the agent of the debtor corporation.

(e) In any case where income is payable in any medium other than money, the withholding agent shall not release the property so received until it has been placed in funds sufficient to enable it to pay over in money the tax required to be withheld with respect to such income.

§ 39.143-8 Ownership certificates in the case of fiduciaries and joint owners. If fiduciaries have the control and custody of more than one estate or trust, and such estates and trusts have as assets bonds of corporations and other securities, a certificate of ownership shall be executed for each estate or trust, regardless of the fact that the bonds are of the same issue. The ownership certificate should show the name of the estate or trust, in addition to the name and address of the fiduciary. If bonds are owned jointly by two or more persons, a separate ownership certificate must be executed in behalf of each of the owners.

§ 39.143-9 Return of income from which tax was withheld. (a) The entire amount of the income from which the tax was withheld shall be included in gross income in the return required to be made by the recipient of the income without deduction for such payment of the tax but any tax so withheld shall be credited against the total income tax as computed in the taxpayer's return. See, however, § 39.142-5. If the tax is paid by the recipient of the income or by the withholding agent it shall not be re-collected from the other, regardless of the original liability therefor, and in such event no penalty will be asserted against either person for failure to return or pay the tax where no fraud or purpose to evade payment is involved.

(b) Tax withheld at the source upon fixed or determinable annual or periodical income paid to nonresident alien fiduciaries is deemed to have been paid by the persons ultimately liable for the tax upon such income. Accordingly, if a person is subject to the taxes imposed by section 11, 12, 13, or 15 upon any portion of the income of a nonresident alien estate or trust, the part of any tax withheld at the source which is properly allocable to the income so taxed to such person shall be credited against the amount of the income tax computed upon his return, and any excess shall be credited against any income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax, or installment thereof, then due from such person, and any balance shall be refunded.

SEC. 144. Payment of corporation income tax at source. In the case of foreign corporations subject to taxation under this chapter not engaged in trade or business within the United States, there shall be deducted and withheld at the source in the same manner and upon the same items of income as is provided in section 143 a tax equal to 30 per centum thereof, except that in the case of corporations organized under the laws of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, such rate with respect to dividends shall be reduced to such rate (not less than 5 per centum) as may be provided by treaty with such country; and such tax shall be returned and paid in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided in that section: Provided, That in the case of interest described in subsection (a) of that section (relating to tax-free covenant bonds) the deduction and withholding shall be at the rate specified in such subsection.

[Sec. 144 as amended by sec. 5 (b), Rev. Act 1940; secs. 107 (a) and 109 (a), Rev. Act 1941; secs. 103 (a) and 160 (a) (3), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.144-1 Withholding in the case of nonresident foreign corporations. (a) A tax of 30 percent is required to be withheld in the case of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income paid to a nonresident foreign corporation except (1) income from sources without the United States, including interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business paid to such corporation, and (2) interest upon bonds or other obligations of a corporation containing a tax-free covenant and issued before January 1, 1934, where the liability assumed by the obligor exceeds 2 percent of the interest. Such rate shall be reduced as may be provided by treaty with any country.

(b) Withholding is required in the case of interest paid on obligations issued on or after March 1, 1941, by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. See §§ 39.22 (b) (4)-4 and 39.22 (b) (4)-6, relating to the taxation of such interest, and § 39.143-4, relating to ownership certificates.

(c) Withholding of a tax at the rate of 2 percent is required in the case of interest paid to a nonresident foreign corporation, upon bonds or other obligations of a corporation issued before January 1, 1934, and containing a tax-free covenant, if the liability assumed by the obligor exceeds 2 percent of the interest and the interest is treated as income from sources within the United States.

(d) A tax of 30 percent is required to be withheld from dividends (other than dividends distributed by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4) to a resident of China) from sources within the United States paid to a nonresident foreign corporation, except that such rate of 30 percent shall be reduced as may be provided by treaty with any country. Dividends paid by a foreign corporation are not, however, subject to withholding unless such corporation is engaged in trade or business within the United States and more than 85 percent of the gross income of such foreign corporation for the 3-year period ending with the close of its taxable year preceding the declaration of such dividends (or for such part of such period as the corporation has been in existence) was derived from sources within the United States as determined under the provisions of section 119. See also section 143.

(e) For withholding in the case of dividends distributed by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4), see §§ 39.143-3 and 39.262-4.

(f) For withholding in the case of rents under a Supplement U lease paid to a foreign corporation subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) see section 143 (h) and § 39.143-1 (a)

(g) Under the provisions of section 143 (b) the rate of tax withheld at the source shall not exceed 27½ percent in the case of interest on bonds, mortgages, or deeds of trust or other similar obligations of a corporation within the provisions of section 143 (a) (1) were it not for the fact that the maturity date of such obligations has been extended on or after January 1, 1934.

§ 39.144-2 Aids to withholding agents in determining liability for withholding of tax. (a) Since no withholding of tax on bond interest, dividends, or other income is required in the case of a resident foreign corporation (see § 39.143-3) the person paying such income should be notified by a letter from such corporation that it is not subject to the withholding provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. The letter from the corporation shall contain the address of its office or place of business in the United States and be signed by an officer of the corporation giving his official title. Such letter of notification, or copy thereof, should be immediately forwarded by the recipient to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Returns Section, Washington 25, D. C., except that, on and after July 19, 1953, such letter, or a copy thereof, shall be forwarded to the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore 2, Maryland. The same procedure should be followed in the case of resident partnerships, composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, not subject to the withholding provisions of the Code except in the case of interest on tax-free covenant bonds. The letter should be signed by a member of the firm.

(b) When a payor corporation, or any other person (including a nominee), having the control, receipt, custody disposal, or payment of dividends has no definite knowledge of the status of a shareholder, the tax should be withheld if the shareholder's address is outside the United States. If the shareholder's address is within the United States, it may be assumed that such shareholder is a citizen or a resident thereof. Unless the name and style of the shareholder are such as to indicate clearly that he is a nonresident alien, an address in care of another person in the United States does not of itself warrant the treating of the shareholder as a nonresident alien. If a shareholder changes his address from a place without the United States to a place within the United States, the tax should be withheld unless proof is furnished showing that he is a citizen or a resident of the United States. A person's written statement that he is a citizen, or resident of the United States, may be relied upon by the payor of income as proof that such person is a citizen or resident of the United States.

SEC. 145. Penalties—(a) Failure to file returns, submit information, or pay estimated tax or tax. Any person required under this chapter to pay any estimated tax or tax, or required by law or regulations made under authority thereof to make a return or declaration, keep any records, or supply any information, for the purposes of the computation, assessment, or collection of any estimated tax or tax imposed by this chapter, who willfully fails to pay such estimated tax or tax, make such return or declaration, keep such records, or supply such information, at the time or times required by law or regulations, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

(b) Failure to collect and pay over tax, or attempt to defeat or evade tax. Any person required under this chapter to collect, account for, and pay over any tax imposed by this chapter, who willfully fails to collect or truthfully account for and pay over such tax, and any person who willfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat any tax imposed by this chapter or the payment thereof, shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

(c) * * * [Repealed—see sec. 3809 (a) for corresponding provision of law.]

(d) Person defined. The term "person" as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

(e) * * * [Relates to taxable years beginning before October 1, 1950, and ending after September 30, 1950.]

(f) * * * [Relates to taxable years beginning before November 1, 1951, and ending after October 31, 1951.]

(g) Cross reference. For penalties for failure to file information returns with respect to foreign personal holding companies and foreign corporations, see section 340.

[Sec. 145 as amended by secs. 136 and 172 (f) (3), Rev. Act 1942; sec. (5) (c), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 6 (b) (6), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 4 (b), Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.); sec. 1, Pub. Law 907 (81st Cong.); sec. 103 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.145-1 Penalties. The penalties provided for in section 145 cannot be assessed but are enforceable only by suit or prosecution. For limitations on prosecutions, see section 3748. The willful failure of a taxpayer to give information required in his return as to advice or assistance rendered in the preparation of the return, and the willful failure of the person preparing a return for another to execute the statement required with reference thereto, make such persons subject to the penalties imposed by section 145 (a) Any person who willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains or is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury and which he does not believe to be true and correct as to every material matter, shall be guilty of a felony, and, if convicted, shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than five years or both (see section 3809) The privilege against incrimination in the fifth amendment to the Constitution is not a defense to a charge of failure to file a return, and does not authorize a refusal to state the amount of income, though the taxpayer's income was made through crime.

SEC. 146. Closing by Commissioner of taxable year—(a) Tax in jeopardy—(1) Departure of taxpayer or removal of property from United States. If the Commissioner finds that a taxpayer designs quickly to depart from the United States or to remove his property therefrom, or to conceal himself or his property therein, or to do any other act tending to prejudice or to render wholly or partly ineffectual proceedings to collect the tax for the taxable year then last past or the taxable year then current unless such proceedings be brought without delay, the Commissioner shall declare the taxable period for such taxpayer immediately terminated and shall cause notice of such finding and declaration to be given the taxpayer, together with a demand for immediate payment of the tax for the taxable period so declared terminated and of the tax for the preceding taxable year or so much of such tax as is unpaid, whether or not the time otherwise allowed by law for filing return and paying the tax has expired; and such taxes shall thereupon become immediately due and payable. In any proceeding in court brought to enforce payment of taxes made due and payable by virtue of the provisions of this section the finding of the Commissioner, made as herein provided, whether made after notice to the taxpayer or not, shall be for all purposes presumptive evidence of the taxpayer's design.

(2) Corporation in liquidation. If the Commissioner finds that the collection of the tax of a corporation for the current or last preceding taxable year will be jeopardized by the distribution of all or a portion of the assets of such corporation in the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock, the Commissioner shall declare the taxable period for such taxpayer immediately terminated and shall cause notice of such finding and declaration to be given the taxpayer, together with a demand for immediate payment of the tax for the taxable period so declared terminated and of the tax for the last preceding taxable year or so much of such tax as is unpaid, whether or not the time otherwise allowed by law for filing return and paying the tax has expired; and such taxes shall thereupon become immediately due and payable.

(b) Security for payment. A taxpayer who is not in default in making any return or paying income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax under any Act of Congress may furnish to the United States, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, security approved by the Commissioner that he will duly make the return next thereafter required to be filed and pay the tax next thereafter required to be paid. The Commissioner may approve and accept in like manner security for return and payment of taxes made due and payable by virtue of the provisions of this section, provided the taxpayer has paid in full all other income, war-profits, or excess-profits taxes due from him under any Act of Congress.

(c) Same—Exemption from section. If security is approved and accepted pursuant to the provisions of this section and such further or other security with respect to the tax or taxes covered thereby is given as the Commissioner shall from time to time find necessary and require, payment of such taxes shall not be enforced by any proceedings under the provisions of this section prior to the expiration of the time otherwise allowed for paying such respective taxes.

(d) Citizens. In the case of a citizen of the United States or of a possession of the United States about to depart from the United States the Commissioner may, at his discretion, waive any or all of the requirements placed on the taxpayer by this section.

(e) Departure of alien. No alien shall depart from the United States unless he first procures from the collector or agent in charge a certificate that he has complied with all the obligations imposed upon him by the income, war-profits, and excess-profits tax laws.

(f) Addition to tax. If a taxpayer violates or attempts to violate this section there shall, in addition to all other penalties, be added as part of the tax 25 per centum of the total amount of the tax or deficiency in the tax, together with interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the time the tax became due.

§ 39.146–1 Termination of the taxable period by Commissioner (a) Section 146 provides that in the case of a taxpayer who designs by immediate departure from the United States or otherwise to avoid the payment of the tax for the preceding or current taxable year, the Commissioner may upon evidence satisfactory to him, declare the taxable period for such taxpayer immediately terminated and cause to be served upon him notice and demand for immediate payment of the tax for the taxable period declared terminated, and of the tax for the preceding taxable year, or so much of such tax as is unpaid. In such a case the taxpayer is entitled to the exemptions for both normal tax and surtax provided by section 25 (b) if otherwise allowable, but the amount of such exemptions shall be reduced proportionately to the length of the period for which the return is made. If suit is necessary to collect a tax made due and payable by the provisions of section 146 (a) (1) the Commissioner's finding is presumptive evidence of the taxpayer's design. Section 146 (a) (2) provides for a similar termination of the taxable period of a corporation if the Commissioner finds that the collection of the tax of the corporation for the current or preceding taxable year will be jeopardized by the distribution of all or a portion of the assets of such corporation in the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock. Such finding of the Commissioner is considered prima facie correct. A taxpayer who is not in default in making the returns or in paying other taxes may procure the postponement until the usual time of the payment of taxes which are or may be due pursuant to this section by depositing, with the Commissioner, United States bonds of a principal amount not exceeding double the amount of taxes due for the taxable period, or by furnishing such other security as may be approved by the Commissioner.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, an alien who intends to depart from the United States will be required to file a return of income on Form 1040C and to obtain a certificate of compliance with income tax obligations from the district director of internal revenue. A certificate of compliance is attached to and made a part of Form 1040C. An alien, whether resident or nonresident, who intends to depart from the United States should appear before the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which he resides and satisfy all income tax obligations with respect to income received or to be received, determined as nearly as may be, up to and including the date of his intended departure. Upon payment of such obligations, or upon the furnishing of such security as may be approved by the Commissioner for the payment of such obligations, or upon satisfactory evidence that no tax is due and payable, the district director of internal revenue will issue a certificate of compliance to the applicant. A properly executed certificate of compliance issued by the district director of internal revenue must be presented at the point of departure. An alien presenting himself at the point of departure without such certificate of compliance will be examined by an internal revenue officer at that point and such taxes as appear to be due and owing will be collected. Citizens of the United States or of possessions of the United States departing from the United States will not be required to procure certificates of compliance or to present any other evidence of compliance with income tax obligations.

(c) An alien who intends to depart from the United States and whose taxable year has not been terminated by the Commissioner as provided in section 146 (a) and who is not in default in making any return, or paying income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax under any Act of Congress, may procure a certificate of compliance as provided in section 146 (e) by (1) appointing in writing on Form 934 an attorney in fact, resident in the United States, to make his income tax return or returns for the taxable year current at the time of his intended departure and for the preceding taxable year (if not already made), (2) making on Form 1040D a return of information for his taxable year current at the time of his intended departure and a return on that form for the preceding taxable year where the period for making the income tax return for the preceding taxable year has not expired, and (3) either paying the estimated tax as shown on the information return (Form 1040D) which will be credited on account for the year covered by such return, or furnishing security approved by the Commissioner that he will make the required return or returns and pay the tax or taxes required to be paid. If such security is approved and accepted and such further security with respect to the tax or taxes covered thereby is given as the Commissioner shall from time to time find necessary and require, payment of such taxes may be postponed until the expiration of the time otherwise allowed for their payment. The departing alien may furnish as security a surety bond on Form 1133 in an amount not exceeding double the amount of tax for his taxable year current at the time of his intended departure, and for the preceding taxable year (if not already paid) conditioned upon the making of his return or returns for such year or years (if not already made) and the payment of any tax or taxes that may become payable for such year or years together with any penalty and interest that may accrue thereon, such bond to be executed by a surety or sureties approved by the Commissioner. In lieu of such a surety bond, the taxpayer may furnish as security a penal bond (Form 1133) approved by the Commissioner, secured by deposit of bonds or notes of the United States equal in their total par value to an amount not exceeding double the amount of the tax or taxes in respect of which the bond is furnished. A form of a "certificate of compliance" is made a part of Form 1040D. Bonds complying with the provisions of this section, if properly executed and with adequate surety, are approved, and may be accepted in the name of the Commissioner, by the district director of internal revenue by signing the Form 1133 as follows:

Commissioner of Internal Revenue
By ------------------------
(District Director of Internal Revenue)

(d) A corporation will not be accepted as a surety on a bond unless the corporation holds a certificate of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury as an acceptable surety on Federal bonds. If the surety on the bond is an individual or individuals, such bond shall not be accepted until an investigation is made as to the financial and other responsibility of such surety or sureties and such investigation shows that the collection of the tax is amply secured by the bond.

SEC. 147. Information at source—(a) Payments of $600 or more. All persons, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, fiduciaries, and employers, making payment to another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments described in section 148 (a) or 149), of $600 or more in any taxable year, or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Commissioner, under such regulations and in such form and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains, profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

(b) Returns regardless of amount of payment. Such returns may be required, regardless of amounts, (1) in the case of payments of interest, and (2) in the case of collections of items (not payable in the United States) of interest upon the bonds of foreign countries and interest upon the bonds of and dividends from foreign corporations by persons undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of such interest or dividends by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange.

(c) Recipient to furnish name and address. When necessary to make effective the provisions of this section the name and address of the recipient of income shall be furnished upon demand of the person paying the income.

§ 39.147-1 Return of information as to payments of $600 or more. (a) All persons making payment to another person of fixed or determinable income of $600 or more in any calendar year must render a return thereof for such year on or before February 28 of the following year except as specified in §§ 39.147-3 to 39.147-5, inclusive. A return shall be made in each case on Form 1099, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096 showing the number of returns filed, except that the return with respect to distributions to beneficiaries of a trust or of an estate shall be made on Form 1041 in lieu of Forms 1099 and 1096. Returns of information on Forms 1096 and 1099 should be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri. For place of filing Form 1041, see section 53. The street and number where the recipient of the payment lives should be stated, if possible. If no present address is available, the last known post-office address must be given. Although to make necessary a return of information the income must be fixed or determinable, it need not be annual or periodical. See section 39.143-2.

(b) Sums paid in respect of life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts which are required to be included in gross income under §§ 39.22 (b) (1)-1, 39.22 (b) (2)-1, and 39.22 (b) (2)-2 come within the meaning of the term "fixed or determinable income" and are required to be reported in returns of information as required by this section, except that payments in respect of policies surrendered before maturity and lapsed policies need not be reported.

(c) Fees for professional services paid to attorneys, physicians, and members of other professions come within the meaning of the term "fixed or determinable income" and are required to be reported in returns of information as required by this section.

(d) For the purposes of a return of information, an amount is deemed to have been paid when it is credited or set apart to the taxpayer without any substantial limitation or restriction as to the time or manner of payment or condition upon which payment is to be made, and which is made available to him so that it may be drawn at any time, and its receipt brought within his own control and disposition.

§ 39.147-2 Return of information as to payments to employees. (a) The names of all employees to whom payments are made of $600 or more in any calendar year, whether such total sum is made up of wages, salaries, annuities, commissions, or compensation in any other form, must be reported. In the case of any such payments of $600 or more, if a portion thereof constitutes wages subject to withholding under section 1622 and such portion is reported on Form W-2, the remainder of such payments must be reported on Form 1099. For example, if such payments made to an employee by his employer in 1952 amount to $700 and $400 thereof represents wages subject to withholding under section 1622, and the remaining $300 represents compensation not subject to withholding, for instance, advances or reimbursements for traveling or other expenses, or insurance premiums which in accordance with § 39.165-6 are income to the employee for the year in which the insurance is purchased, the $400 must be reported on Form W-2 and the $300 must be reported on Form 1099. Heads of branch offices and subcontractors employing labor, who keep the only complete record of payments therefor, shall file returns of information in regard to such payments with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri. When both main office and branch office have adequate records, the return shall be filed by the main office.

(b) Amounts distributed or made available in any calendar year under an employees' trust governed by the provisions of section 165, or under an annuity plan to which § 39.22 (b) (2)-5 relates, to a beneficiary shall be reported to the extent such amounts are includible in the gross income of such beneficiary where the amounts so includible are $600 or more.

(c) In the case of payments made by the United States to persons in its service (civil or armed forces) of wages, salaries, or compensation in any other form, the returns of information shall be made by heads of the executive departments and other United States Government establishments.

§ 39.147-3 Cases where no return of information required. (a) Payments of the following character, although amounting to $600 or more during a calendar year, need not be reported in returns of information on Form 1099:

(1) Payments by a broker to his customers;

(2) Payments of any type made to corporations;

(3) Bills paid for merchandise, telegrams, telephone, freight, storage, and similar charges;

(4) Payments of rent made to real estate agents (but the agent must report payments to the landlord if the amount paid during the calendar year was $600 or more)

(5) Payments representing earned income for services rendered without the United States made to a citizen of the United States, if it is reasonable to believe that such amounts will be excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a) and the regulations thereunder·

(6) Salaries and profits paid or distributed by a partnership to the individual partners;

(7) Payments of commissions made by fire insurance companies, or other companies insuring property, to general agents, except when specifically directed by the Commissioner to be filed;

(8) Payments of income upon which income tax has been withheld at the source and reported on Forms 1012, 1013, and 1042, or Forms 941, W-2, and W-3;

(9) Amounts paid by the United States to persons in its service (civil or armed forces) as an allowance for traveling expenses, including an allowance for meals and lodgings, as, for example, a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence, and amounts paid as reimbursements for traveling expenses;

(10) Payments of interest on obligations of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof;

(11) Payments of interest on corporate bonds, except in the case of interest on bonds, mortgages, deeds of trust, or other similar obligations issued before January 1, 1934, and containing a tax-free covenant; and

(12) Payments made to employees for services performed in Puerto Rico.

(b) The provisions of this section shall not be applicable with respect to returns of information as to patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds required under section 148 (f) See § 39.148 (f)-1.

§ 39.147-4 Return of information as to certain interest. In the case of payments of interest, regardless of amount, upon bonds and similar obligations of corporations, and interest on obligations of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, the ownership certificates, when duly filed, shall constitute and be treated as returns of information and in such cases no return of information on Form 1099 is required. See § 39.143-5. As to the requirements of filing ownership certificates for bond interest generally in the case of a nonresident alien, a nonresident partnership composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, a nonresident foreign corporation or where the owner is unknown, and with respect only to interest on obligations containing a tax-free covenant and issued before January 1, 1934, in the case of a citizen or resident of the United States, a resident partnership and nonresident partnership all the members of which are citizens or residents of the United States, see § 39.143-4.

§ 39.147-5 Return of information as to payments to other than citizens or residents. In the case of payments of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income to nonresident aliens (individual or fiduciary) to nonresident partnerships composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, or to nonresident foreign corporations (see § 39.3797-8) the returns filed by withholding agents on Form 1042 shall constitute and be treated as returns of information. See sections 143 and 144.

§ 39.147-6 Foreign items. The term "foreign items," as used in the regulations in this part, means any item of interest upon the bonds of a foreign country or of a nonresident foreign corporation not having a fiscal or paying agent in the United States (including Puerto Rico as if a part of the United States) or any item of dividends upon the stock of such corporation.

§ 39.147-7 Return of information as to foreign items. In the case of foreign items, an information return on Form 1099 is required to be filed by the bank or collecting agent accepting the items for collection, if the foreign item is paid to a citizen or resident of the United States (individual or fiduciary) or a partnership any member of which is a citizen or resident, and if the amount of the foreign items paid in any taxable year to an individual, a partnership, or a fiduciary is $600 or more. Such forms accompanied by transmittal Form 1096 should be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, on or before February 28 of each year. The term "collection" includes the following: (a) The payment by the licensee of the foreign item in cash; (b) the crediting by the licensee of the account of the person presenting the foreign item; (c) the tentative crediting by the licensee of the account of the person presenting the foreign item until the amount of the foreign item is received by the licensee from abroad; and (d) the receipt of foreign items by the licensee for the purpose of transmitting them abroad for deposits. See §§ 39.147-1 and 39.147-3.

§ 39.147-8 Information as to actual owner (a) When the person receiving a payment falling within the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code for information at the source is not the actual owner of the income received, the name and address of the actual owner or payee shall be furnished upon demand of the individual, corporation, or partnership paying the income, and in default of a compliance with such demand the payee becomes liable for the penalties provided. See section 145. Dividends on stock are prima facie the income of the record owner of the stock. Upon receipt of dividends by a record owner, he should execute Form 1087 to disclose the name and address of the actual owner or payee. Form 1087 should be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, not later than February 28 of the succeeding year. Unless such a disclosure is made, the record owner will be held liable for any tax based upon such dividends. See § 39.148 (a)-1.

(b) The filing of Form 1087 is not required (1) if the record owner is required to file a fiduciary return on Form 1041, or a withholding return on Form 1042, disclosing the name and address of the actual owner or payee, or (2) if the actual owner or payee is a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation and the tax has been withheld at the source before receipt of the dividends by the record owner. See § 39.143-1.

SEC. 148. Information by corporations— (a) Dividend payments. Every corporation shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its payments of dividends, stating the name and address of each shareholder, the number of shares owned by him, and the amount of dividends paid to him.

§ 39.148 (a)-1 Return of information as to payments of dividends. (a) Section 148 provides that every corporation shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its payments of dividends, stating the name and address of each shareholder, the number of shares owned by him, and the amount of dividends paid to him. In accordance with that section, returns of information in respect of dividend payments shall be rendered for each calendar year as follows:

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, every domestic corporation or foreign corporation engaged in business within the United States or having an office or place of business or a fiscal or paying agent in the United States, making payments of dividends and distributions (other than distributions in liquidation) to any shareholder who is an individual (citizen or resident of the United States) a resident fiduciary, or a resident partnership any member of which is a citizen or resident, amounting to $10 or more during the calendar year, shall render an information return on Forms 1096 and 1099. A separate Form 1099 must be prepared for each shareholder, upon which shall be shown the name and address of the shareholder to whom such payment was made, and the amount paid. These forms, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096 showing the number of Forms 1099 filed therewith, shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, on or before February 28 of the following year.

(2) The periodical distributions of earnings on running installment shares of stock paid or credited by a building and loan association to its holders of that class of stock are dividends within the meaning of section 115 (a) The sum received upon withdrawal from a building and loan association in excess of the amounts paid in on account of membership fees and stock subscriptions, consisting of accumulated profits, constitutes a dividend within the meaning of section 115 (a) As to when a stock dividend is taxable as a dividend, see section 115 (f)

(b) In the case of a distribution which is made from a depletion or depreciation reserve, or which for any other reason is deemed by the corporation to be nontaxable or partly nontaxable to its shareholders, the corporation shall fill in the information on both sides of Form 1096 and forward this form, together with Forms 1099, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, not later than February 1 of the following year. Upon receipt of this information the Commissioner will advise the corporation by letter as to any apparent errors made by the corporation in computing the nontaxable portion of the distribution in order that the corporation may, if time permits, furnish such advice to its shareholders before the shareholders file their income tax returns for the year in which the distribution was made. In the case of a corporation described in section 101 (10) (11) (12) or (13), making a payment of a dividend or a distribution to any shareholder, the information return on Forms 1096 and 1099 shall be rendered only in the case of payments amounting to $100 or more during the calendar year. In the case of a savings and loan association, a cooperative bank, a homestead association, a credit union, or a building and loan association an information return is required to be filed with respect to dividends or distributions to a shareholder only if an information return would have been required under the provisions of § 39.147-1 had the dividends or distributions been payments of interest, except that, for years prior to 1953, such an organization is required to file an information return where the payments to a shareholder amount to $100 or more during the calendar year.

(c) In any case in which it is impossible to file the return within the time prescribed in this section, the corporation may, upon a showing of such fact, obtain a reasonable extension of time for filing the return. Authority for granting extensions of time for filing the return of information is hereby delegated to the various district directors of internal revenue. Applications for such extensions shall be addressed to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the corporation files its income tax returns, must contain a full recital of the causes for the delay and must be submitted on or before the date prescribed for filing the return of information. No extension may be granted for more than six months.

§ 39.148 (b)-(d) Statutory provisions; information by corporations; profits declared as dividends; accumulated earnings and profits; contemplated dissolution or liquidation.

SEC. 148. Information by corporations. * * *

(b) Profits declared as dividends. Every corporation shall, when required by the Commissioner, furnish him a statement of such facts as will enable him to determine the portion of the earnings or profits of the corporation (including gains, profits, and income not taxed) accumulated during such periods as the Commssioner may specify, which have been distributed or ordered to be distributed, respectively, to its shareholders during such taxable years as the Commissioner may specify.

(c) Accumulated earnings and profits. When requested by the Commissioner, or any collector, every corporation shall forward to him a correct statement of accumulated earnings and profits and the names and addresses of the indivduals or shareholders who would be entitled to the same if divided or distributed, and of the amounts that would be payable to each.

(d) Contemplated dissolution or liquidation. Every corporation shall, within thirty days after the adoption by the corporation of a resolution or plan for the dissolution of the corporation or for the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock, render a correct return to the Commissioner, verified under oath, setting forth the terms of such resolution or plan and such other information as the Commissioner shall, with the approval of the Secretary, by regulations prescribe.

§ 39.148 (d)-1 Return of information respecting contemplated dissolution or liquidation—(a) Making and filing of returns. Within 30 days after the adoption of any resolution or plan for or in respect of the dissolution of a corporation or the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock, the corporation shall file with the district director of internal revenue (Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., prior to the date of publication of this section in the FEDERAL REGISTER) a correct return on Form 966, containing the information required by paragraph (b) of this section and by such form. A like return shall be filed by the corporation in the case of any amendment of, or supplement to, a resolution or plan for or in respect of the dissolution of the corporation or the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock. A return must be filed under section 148 (d) in respect of a liquidation whether or not any part of the gain or loss to the shareholders upon the liquidation is recognized under the provisions of section 112.

(b) Contents of return—(1) General. There shall be attached to and made a part of the return required by section 148 (d) and paragraph (a) of this section a certified copy of the resolution or plan, together with any amendments thereof or supplements thereto, and such return shall in addition contain the following information:

(i) The name and address of the corporation;

(ii) The place and date of incorporation;

(iii) The date of the adoption of the resolution or plan and the dates of any amendments thereof or supplements thereto; and

(iv) The collection district in which the last income tax return of the corporation was filed and the taxable year covered thereby.

(2) Liquidation within one calendar month. In the event that the corporation is a domestic corporation and the plan of liquidation provides for a distribution in complete cancellation or redemption of all the capital stock of the corporation, and for the transfer of all the property of the corporation under the liquidation entirely within some one calendar month pursuant to section 112 (b) (7) and any shareholder claims the benefit of such section, such return shall, in addition to the information required by subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, contain the following:

(i) A statement showing the number of shares of each class of stock outstanding at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, together with a description of the voting power of each such class;

(ii) A list of all the shareholders owning stock at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, together with the number of shares of each class of stock owned by each shareholder, the certificate numbers thereof, and the total number of votes to which entitled on the adoption of the plan of liquidation; and

(iii) A list of all corporate shareholders as of August 15, 1950, together with the number of shares of each class of stock owned by each such shareholder, the certificate numbers thereof, the total number of votes to which entitled on the adoption of the plan of liquidation, and a statement of all changes in ownership of stock by corporate shareholders between August 15, 1950, and the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, both dates inclusive.

(3) Returns in respect of amendments or supplements. If a return in respect of any resolution or plan for or in respect of the dissolution of a corporation or the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock has already been filed pursuant to section 148 (d), a return in respect of any amendment thereof or supplement thereto will be deemed sufficient if it gives the date such prior return was filed and contains a duly certified copy of such amendment or supplement and all other information required by this section and by Form 966 which was not given in such prior return. If no return was filed relative to the resolution or plan which is being amended or supplemented, the return relative to the amendment thereof or supplement thereto shall contain a duly certified copy of the resolution or plan which is being amended or supplemented, together with all amendments thereof and supplements thereto, and all other information required by this section and by Form 966.

SEC. 148. Information by corporations. * * *

(e) Distributions in liquidation. Every corporation shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its distributions in liquidation, stating the name and address of each shareholder, the number and class of shares owned by him, and the amount paid to him or, if the distribution is in property other than money, the fair market value (as of the date the distribution is made) of the property distributed to him.

§ 39.148 (e)-1 Return of information respecting distributions in liquidation. (a) Unless the distribution is one in respect of which information is required to be filed pursuant to § 39.112 (b) (6)-5 (b) § 39.112 (g)-6 (a), or § 39.371-11, every corporation making any distribution of $600 or more during a calendar year to any shareholder in liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock shall file a return of information on Forms 1096 and 1099L, giving all the information required by such forms and by the regulations in this part. A separate Form 1099L must be prepared for each shareholder to whom such distribution was made, showing the name and address of such shareholder, the number and class of shares owned by him in liquidation of which such distribution was made, and the total amount distributed to him on each class of stock. If the amount distributed to such shareholder on any class of stock consisted in whole or in part of property other than money the return on such form shall in addition show the amount of money distributed, if any, and shall list separately each class of property other than money distributed, giving a description of the property in each such class and a statement of its fair market value at the time of the distribution. Such forms, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096 showing the number of Forms 1099L filed therewith, shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, on or before February 28 of the year following the calendar year in which such distribution was made.

(b) If the distribution is in complete liquidation of a domestic corporation pursuant to a plan of liquidation in accordance with which all the capital stock of the corporation is canceled or redeemed and the transfer of all the property under the liquidation occurs within some one calendar month pursuant to section 112 (b) (7) and any shareholder claims the benefit of such section, the return on Form 1096 shall show (1) the amount of earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, determined as of the close of such calendar month, without diminution by reason of distributions made during such calendar month, but including in such computation all items of income and expense accrued up to the date on which the transfer of all the property under the liquidation is completed, (2) the ratable share of such earnings and profits of each share of stock canceled or redeemed in the liquidation, and (3) the date and circumstances of the acquisition by the corporation of any stock or securities distributed to shareholders in the liquidation.

SEC. 148. Information by corporations. * * *

(f) Patronage dividends. Any corporation allocating amounts as patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds (whether in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the amount of such dividend, refund, or rebate) shall render a correct return stating (1) the name and address of each patron to whom it has made such allocations amounting to $100 or more during the calendar year, and (2) the amount of such allocations to each patron. If required by the Secretary, any such corporation shall render a correct return of all patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds made during the calendar year to its patrons. This subsection shall not apply in the case of any corporation (including any cooperative or nonprofit corporation engaged in rural electrification) exempt from taxation under section 101 (10) or (11) or in the case of any corporation subject to a tax imposed by supplement G.

[Sec. 148 (f) as amended by sec. 407, Rev. Act 1939; sec. 5, Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.); sec. 314 (c), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.148 (f)-1 Returns of information as to patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds—(a) In general. Any corporation allocating to any patron amounts aggregating $100 or more during the calendar year as patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds (whether in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the amount of such dividend, rebate, or refund) shall for each calendar year render a return of information with respect to such allocation on Forms 1096 and 1099. The allocation shall be reported for the calendar year during which the allocation is made, regardless of whether the allocation is deemed for the purpose of section 101 (12) (B) to be made at the close of a preceding taxable year of the corporation.

(b) Contents of return; manner of making and filing. A separate Form 1099 shall be prepared for each patron showing the name and address of the patron to whom such allocation is made, and the amount of the allocation. These forms, accompanied by transmittal Form 1096, showing the number of Forms 1099 filed therewith, shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Processing Division, C. C. Station, Kansas City 2, Missouri, on or before February 28 of the following year.

(c) Extension of time for filing. In any case in which it is impossible to file the return within the time prescribed in this section, the corporation may, upon a showing of such fact, obtain a reasonable extension of time for filing the return. Authority for granting extensions of time for filing the return of information is hereby delegated to the various district directors of internal revenue. Applications for such extensions shall be addressed to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the corporation is required to file its income tax return, must contain a full recital of the causes for the delay, and must be submitted on or before the date prescribed for filing the return of information. No extension may be granted for more than six months.

(d) Definitions. The terms "cooperative association" "patron" "patronage dividends, rebates, and refunds", and "allocation" are defined, for the purpose of this section, in § 39.101 (12)-2 (b).

SEC. 149. Returns of brokers. Every person doing business as a broker shall, when required by the Commissioner, render a correct return duly verified under oath, under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe, showing the names of customers for whom such person has transacted any business, with such details as to the profits, losses, or other information which the Commissioner may require, as to each of such customers, as will enable the Commissioner to determine whether all income tax due on profits or gains of such customers has been paid.

SEC. 150. Collection of foreign items. All persons undertaking as a matter of business or for profit the collection of foreign payments of interest or dividends by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange shall obtain a license from the Commissioner and shall be subject to such regulations enabling the Government to obtain the information required under this chapter as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe; and whoever knowingly undertakes to collect such payments without having obtained a license therefor, or without complying with such regulations, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

§ 39.150-1 License to collect foreign items. Banks or agents collecting foreign items, as defined in § 39.147-6, and required by § 39.147-7 to make returns of information with respect thereto, must obtain a license from the Commissioner to engage in such business. Application Form 1017 for such license may be procured from district directors of internal revenue. The license is issued without cost on Form 1010. Any person holding a license under the Revenue Act of 1938 or any prior act will not be required to renew such license.

SEC. 151. Foreign personal holding companies. For information returns by officers, directors, and large shareholders, with respect to foreign personal holding companies, see sections 338, 339, and 340.

For information returns by attorneys, accountants, and so forth, as to formation, and so forth, of foreign croporations, see section 3604.

SEC. 152. Pan-American trade corporations. [Made inapplicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1941, by sec. 153 (b), Rev. Act 1942]

SEC. 153. Information required from certain tax-exempt organizations and certain trusts—(a) Certain tax-exempt organizations. Every organization described in section 101 (6) which is subject to the requirements of section 54 (f) shall furnish annually information, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, setting forth—

(1) Its gross income for the year,

(2) Its expenses attributable to such income and incurred within the year,

(3) Its disbursements out of income within the year for the purposes for which it is exempt,

(4) Its accumulation of income within the year,

(5) Its aggregate accumulations of income at the beginning of the year,

(6) Its disbursements out of principal in the current and prior years for the purposes for which it is exempt, and

(7) A balance sheet showing its assets, liabilities and net worth as of the beginning of such year.

(b) Trusts claiming charitable, etc., deductions under section 162 (a). Every trust claiming a charitable, etc., deduction under section 162 (a) for the taxable year shall furnish information with respect to such taxable year, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, setting forth—

(1) The amount of the charitable, etc., deduction taken under section 162 (a) within such year (showing separately the amount of such deduction which was paid out and the amount which was permanently set aside for charitable, etc., purposes during such year),

(2) The amount paid out within such year which represents amounts for which charitable, etc., deductions under section 162 (a) have been taken in prior years,

(3) The amount for which charitable, etc., deductions have been taken in prior years but which has not been paid out at the beginning of such year,

(4) The amount paid out of principal in the current and prior years for charitable, etc., purposes,

(5) The total income of the trust within such year and the expenses attributable thereto, and

(6) A balance sheet showing the assets, liabilities, and net worth of the trust as of the beginning of such year.

This subsection shall not apply in the case of a taxable year if all the net income for such year, determined under the applicable principles of the law of trusts, is required to be distributed currently to the beneficiaries.

(c) Information available to the public. The information required to be furnished by subsections (a) and (b), together with the names and addresses of such organizations and trusts, shall be made available to the public at such times and in such places as the Secretary may prescribe.

(d) Penalties. In the case of a willful failure to furnish the information required under this section, the penalties provided in section 145 (a) shall be applicable.

[Sec. 153 as added by sec. 341 (a), Rev. Act 1950; amended by Pub. Law 35 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.153-1 Information required from certain tax-exempt organizations. (a) Every organization described in section 101 (6) except organizations specifically exempt from filing annual returns under section 54 (f) (see § 39.101-1 (h)) shall file a return of information on Form 990-A. The return shall be on the basis of the established annual accounting period of the organization. Where the organization has no established annual accounting period, the return shall be made on the basis of the calendar year. The return shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the fifth full calendar month following the close of the period for which the return is required to be filed, and it shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization.

(b) Pages 3 and 4 of the return shall set forth the name and address of the organization, and the following information concerning the organization in such detail as may be prescribed by the Commissioner in the instructions on the form or issued by him therewith:

(1) Its gross income for the year in sufficient detail to show the different categories of income,

(2) Its expenses attributable to such income and incurred within the year, in sufficient detail to show the different categories of expense,

(3) Its disbursements made within the year out of current or accumulated income for the purpose for which it is exempt, separately listing the total amount of disbursements for each classification of the exempt purposes of the organization,

(4) Its accumulation of income within the year,

(5) Its aggregate accumulation of income at the beginning of the year,

(6) (i) Its disbursements made out of principal during the current year for the purpose for which it is exempt, separately listing the total amount of disbursements for each classification of the exempt purposes of the organization,

(ii) Its disbursements made out of principal during prior years for the purpose for which it is exempt,

(7) The total of its administrative and operating expenses disbursed out of both principal and income,

(8) A balance sheet showing its assets, liabilities, and net worth as of the beginning of the year.

§ 39.153-2 Information required of certain trusts claiming charitable or other deductions under section 162 (a)—(a) In general. Every trust (other than a trust described in paragraph (b) of this section) claiming a charitable or other deduction under section 162 (a) shall file, with respect to the taxable year for which such deduction is claimed, a return of information on Form 1041-A. The return shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the fourth month following the close of the taxable year of the trust with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the fiduciary resides or has his principal place of business. The return shall set forth the name and address of the trust and the following information concerning the trust in such detail as may be prescribed by the Commissioner in the instructions on the form or issued by him therewith.

(1) The amount of the charitable or other deduction taken under section 162 (a) for the taxable year, showing separately for each class of activity for which disbursements were made (or amounts were permanently set aside) the amounts which, during such year, were paid out (or which were permanently set aside) for charitable or other purposes under section 162 (a)

(2) The amount paid out during the taxable year which represents amounts permanently set aside in prior years for which charitable or other deductions have been taken under section 162 (a) and separately listing for each class of activity for which disbursements were made, the total amount paid out,

(3) The amount for which charitable or other deductions have been taken in prior years under section 162 (a) and which had not been paid out at the beginning of the taxable year,

(4) (i) The amount paid out of principal in the taxable year for charitable, etc., purposes, and separately listing for each such class of activity for which disbursements were made, the total amount paid out,

(ii) The total amount paid out of principal in prior years for charitable, etc., purposes,

(5) The gross income of the trust for the taxable year and the expenses attributable thereto, in sufficient detail to show the different categories of income and of expense, and

(6) A balance sheet showing the assets, liabilities, and net worth of the trust as of the beginning of the taxable year.

(b) Exception. The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section with respect to the filing of information returns shall not be applicable to the taxable year of a trust if the trustee is bound by the instrument creating the trust to distribute each year to the beneficiaries all the net income of the trust (such net income being determined under the applicable principles of the law of trusts)

§ 39.153-3 Publicity of returns. The information furnished on pages 3 and 4 of Form 990-A and the information furnished on Form 1041-A shall be a matter of public record, and shall be open to public inspection, during regular hours of business, in the office of the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the forms are filed. The Commissioner may use such information for the purpose of making and publishing statistical or other studies.

§ 39.153-4 Penalties. In the case of a willful failure to furnish the information required under section 153 and §§ 39.153-1 and 39.153-2, the penalties provided in section 145 (a) shall be applicable.

SEC. 154. Income taxes of members of Armed forces upon death. In the case of any individual who dies after June 24, 1950, and prior to January 1, 1954, while in active service as a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, if such death occurred while serving in a combat zone (as determined under section 22 (b) (13)) or as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while so serving—

(a) The tax imposed by this chapter shall not apply with respect to the taxable year in which falls the date of his death, or with respect to any prior taxable year ending on or after the first day he so served in a combat zone after June 24, 1950; and

(b) The tax under this chapter and under the corresponding title of each prior revenue law for taxable years preceding those specified in clause (a) which is unpaid at the date of his death (including interest, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) shall not be assessed, and if assessed the assessment shall be abated, and if collected shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment.

§ 39.154-1 Abatement of income taxes of certain members of the armed forces of the United States upon death. (a) If an individual dies after June 24, 1950, and before January 1, 1954, while in active service as a member of the armed forces of the United States, and such death occurs while serving in a combat zone, as determined under section 22 (b) (13) or at any place as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while so serving, then—

(1) The tax liability of such individual under chapter 1 for the taxable year ending on the date of his death, or for any prior taxable year ending on or after the first day he so served in a combat zone after June 24, 1950, is cancelled and if the tax (including interest, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) is assessed, the assessment shall be abated, and if the amount of such tax is collected (regardless of the date of collection) the amount so collected shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment; and

(2) That amount of tax of such individual for taxable years preceding those specified in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph under chapter 1, or corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws, which remains unpaid as of the date of death shall not be assessed, and if any such unpaid tax (including interest, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) has been assessed, such assessment shall be abated, and if the amount of any such unpaid tax is collected subsequent to the date of death, the amount so collected shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment.

(b) If such an individual and his spouse have for any such year filed a joint return, the tax abated, credited, or refunded pursuant to the provisions of section 154 for such year shall be an amount equal to that portion of the joint tax liability which is the same percentage of such joint tax liability as a tax computed upon the separate income of such individual is of the sum of the taxes computed upon the separate income of such individual and his spouse, but with respect to taxable years ending before June 24, 1950, and with respect to taxable years ending before the first day such individual served in a combat zone, as determined under section 22 (b) (13), the amount so abated, credited, or refunded shall not exceed the amount unpaid at the date of death. For such purpose, the separate tax of each spouse shall be the tax computed under chapter 1 before the application of sections 32, 35, and 322 (a) but after the application of section 31, as if such spouse were required to make a separate return.

(c) If such an individual and his spouse filed a joint declaration of estimated tax for the taxable year ending with the date of his death, the estimated tax paid pursuant to such declaration may be treated as the estimated tax of either such individual or his spouse, or may be divided between them, in such manner as his legal representative and such spouse may agree. Should they agree to treat such estimated tax, or any portion thereof, as the estimated tax of such individual, the estimated tax so paid shall be credited or refunded as an overpayment for the taxable year ending with the date of his death.

(d) For the purpose of determining the tax which is unpaid at the date of death, amounts deducted and withheld under subchapter D of chapter 9 constitute payment of a tax imposed under chapter 1.

(e) This section shall have no application whatsoever with respect to the liability of an individual as a transferee of property of a taxpayer where such liability relates to the tax imposed upon the taxpayer by chapter 1.

(f) As to what constitutes active service as a member of the armed forces, service in a combat zone, and wounds, disease, or injury incurred while serving in a combat zone, see § 39.22 (b) (13)-1. As to who are members of the armed forces, see § 39.3797-11.

SUPPLEMENT E—ESTATES AND TRUSTS

SEC. 161. Imposition of tax—(a) Application of tax. The taxes imposed by this chapter (other than the tax imposed by subchapter E, relating to tax on self-employment income) upon individuals shall apply to the income of estates or of any kind of property held in trust, including—

(1) Income accumulated in trust for the benefit of unborn or unascertained persons or persons with contingent interests, and income accumulated or held for future distribution under the terms of the will or trust;

(2) Income which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the beneficiaries, and income collected by a guardian of an infant which is to be held or distributed as the court may direct;

(3) Income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate; and

(4) Income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiaries or accumulated.

(b) Computation and payment. The tax shall be computed upon the net income of the estate or trust, and shall be paid by the fiduciary, except as provided in section 166 (relating to revocable trusts) and section 167 (relating to income for benefit of the grantor).

(c) Cross reference. For return made by beneficiary, see section 142.

§ 39.161-1 Imposition of the tax—(a) Scope. (1) Supplement E (sections 161 to 172, inclusive) prescribes that the taxes imposed upon individuals by chapter 1 (other than the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480) shall be applicable to the income of estates or of any kind of property held in trust. The rate of tax, the statutory provisions respecting gross income, and, with certain exceptions, the deductions and credits allowed to individuals apply also to estates and trusts.

(2) The several classes of income enumerated and described in the paragraphs of section 161 (a) do not exclude others which also may come within the general purpose of section 161 (a)

(3) A guardian, whether of an infant or other person, is a fiduciary (see section 3797 (a) (6)), and, as such, is required to make and file the return for his ward and pay the tax, or the return may be made by the ward. See §§ 39.51-3 and 39.142-2. The estate of a ward is not a taxable entity, in that respect differing from the estate of a deceased person or of a trust.

(4) The provisions of sections 161, 162, and 163 (relating to estates and trusts, fiduciaries, and beneficiaries) contemplate that the corpus of the trust, or the income therefrom, is, within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, no longer to be regarded as that of the grantor. If, by virtue of the nature and purpose of the trust, the corpus or income therefrom remains attributable to the grantor, these provisions do not apply. Thus, the provisions of sections 166 and 167 deal with certain trusts which are excluded from the scope of sections 161, 162, and 163. Other trusts not specified in sections 166 and 167 where the income is attributable to the grantor are likewise excluded from the scope of sections 161, 162, and 163. For example, a grantor is taxable under section 22 (a) on the income of a trust if he is still in practical effect the owner of the income. See § 39.22 (a)-21. A grantor is also taxable under section 22 (a) on the income of a trust providing for the payment and application of such income in satisfaction of his legal obligations. So-called alimony trusts to which section 22 (k) or section 171 applies may be of a type to which the provisions of sections 161, 162, and 163 also apply, or of a type which is excluded from the provisions of sections 161, 162, and 163. Except to the extent that section 22 (k) or section 171 governs the taxability of amounts paid, credited, or to be distributed attributable to trust property, the treatment of such trusts under sections 161, 162, and 163 or under sections 22 (a) 166, and 167 is not affected by section 22 (k) or section 171. See section 165 as to the exemptions of employees' trusts.

(b) Taxability of the income. The fiduciary is required to make and file the return and pay the tax on the net income of the estate or trust except as otherwise provided in sections 22 (a) 165, 166, and 167, and §§ 39.22 (a)-21, 39.22 (a)-22, 39.166-1, and 39.167-1. In determining whether there is any net income subject to tax and the amount thereof, consideration is to be given to the additional deductions authorized in section 162.

SEC. 162. Net income. The net income of the estate or trust shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except that—

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection (g), there shall be allowed as a deduction (in lieu of the deduction for charitable, etc., contributions authorized by section 23 (o)) any part of the gross income, without limitation, which pursuant to the terms of the will or deed creating the trust, is during the taxable year paid or permanently set aside for the purposes and in the manner specified in section 23 (o), or is to be used exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, or for the establishment, acquisition, maintenance or operation of a public cemetery not operated for profit. Where any amount of the income so paid or set aside is attributable to gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months, proper adjustment of the deduction otherwise allowable under this subsection shall be made for any deduction allowable to the trust under section 23 (ee);

(b) There shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to the legatees, heirs, or beneficiaries, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the legatees, heirs, or beneficiaries whether distributed to them or not. As used in this subsection, "income which is to be distributed currently" includes income for the taxable year of the estate or trust which, within the taxable year, becomes payable to the legatee, heir, or beneficiary. Any amount allowed as a deduction under this paragraph shall not be allowed as a deduction under subsection (c) of this section in the same or any succeeding taxable year;

(c) In the case of income received by estates of deceased persons during the period of administration or settlement of the estate, and in the case of income which, in the discretion of the fiduciary, may be either distributed to the beneficiary or accumulated, there shall be allowed as an additional deduction in computing the net income of the estate or trust the amount of the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year, which is properly paid or credited during such year to any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, but the amount so allowed as a deduction shall be included in computing the net income of the legatee, heir, or beneficiary;

(d) Rules for application of subsections (b) and (c). For the purposes of subsections (b) and (c)—

(1) Amounts distributable out of income or corpus. In cases where the amount paid, credited, or to be distributed can be paid, credited, or distributed out of other than income, the amount paid, credited, or to be distributed (except under a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance not to be paid, credited, or distributed at intervals) during the taxable year of the estate or trust shall be considered as income of the estate or trust which is paid, credited, or to be distributed if the aggregate of such amounts so paid, credited, or to be distributed does not exceed the distributable income of the estate or trust for its taxable year. If the aggregate of such amounts so paid, credited, or to be distributed during the taxable year of the estate or trust in such cases exceeds the distributable income of the estate or trust for its taxable year, the amount so paid, credited, or to be distributed to any legatee, heir, or beneficiary shall be considered income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is paid, credited, or to be distributed in an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of such distributable income as the amount so paid, credited, or to be distributed to the legatee, heir, or beneficiary bears to the aggregate of such amounts so paid, credited, or to be distributed to legatees, heirs, and beneficiaries for the taxable year of the estate or trust. For the purposes of this paragraph "distributable income" means either (A) the net income of the estate or trust computed with the deductions allowed under subsections (b) and (c) in cases to which this paragraph does not apply, or (B) the income of the estate or trust minus the deductions provided in subsections (b) and (c) in cases to which this paragraph does not apply, whichever is the greater. In computing such distributable income the deductions under subsections (b) and (c) shall be determined without the application of paragraph (2).

(2) Amounts distributable out of income of prior period. In cases, other than cases described in paragraph (1), if on a date more than 65 days after the beginning of the taxable year of the estate or trust, income of the estate or trust for any period becomes payable, the amount of such income shall be considered income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is paid, credited, or to be distributed to the extent of the income of the estate or trust for such period, or if such period is a period of more than 12 months, the last 12 months thereof.

(3) Distributions in first 65 days of taxable year—(A) General rule. If within the first 65 days of any taxable year of the estate or trust, income of the estate or trust, for a period beginning before the beginning of the taxable year, becomes payable, such income, to the extent of the income of the estate or trust for the part of such period not falling within the taxable year or, if such part is longer than 12 months, the last 12 months thereof, shall be considered, paid, credited, or to be distributed on the last day of the preceding taxable year. This subparagraph shall not apply with respect to any amount with respect to which subparagraph (B) applies.

(B) Payable out of income or corpus. If within the first 65 days of any taxable year of the estate or trust, an amount which can be paid at intervals out of other than income becomes payable, there shall be considered as paid, credited, or to be distributed on the last day of the preceding taxable year the part of such amount which bears the same ratio to such amount as the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year bears to the period of the interval. If the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year is a period of more than 12 months, the interval shall be considered to begin on the date 12 months before the end of the taxable year.

(4) Excess deductions. If for any taxable year of an estate or trust the deductions allowed under subsection (b) or (c) solely by reason of paragraph (2) or (3) (A) in respect of any income which becomes payable to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary exceed the net income of the estate or trust for such year, computed without such deductions, the amount of such excess shall not be included in computing the net income of such legatee, heir, or beneficiary under subsection (b) or (c). In cases where the income deductible solely by reason of paragraph (2) or (3) (A) becomes payable to two or more legatees, heirs, or beneficiaries, the benefit of such exclusion shall be divided among such legatees, heirs, and beneficiaries, in the proportions in which they share in such income. In any case where the estate or trust is entitled to a deduction by reason of paragraph (1), in the determination of the net income of the estate or trust for the purposes of this paragraph the amount of such deduction shall be determined with the application of paragraph (3) (A).

(e) Amounts allowable under section 812 (b) as a deduction in computing the net estate of a decedent shall not be allowed as a deduction under section 23, except subsection (w), in computing the net income of the estate unless there is filed, within the time and in the manner and form prescribed by the Commissioner, a statement that the items have not been claimed or allowed as deductions under section 812 (b) and a waiver of the right to have such items allowed at any time as deductions under section 812 (b).

(g) Rules for application of subsection (a) in the case of trusts—(1) Trade or business income. In computing the deduction allowable under subsection (a) to a trust for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950, no amount otherwise allowable under subsection (a) as a deduction shall be allowed as a deduction with respect to income of the taxable year which is allocable to its supplement U business income for such year. As used in this paragraph the term "supplement U business income" means an amount equal to the amount which, if such trust were exempt under section 101 (6) from taxation, would be computed as its unrelated business net income under section 422 (relating to income derived from certain business activities and from certain leases).

(2) Operations of trusts—(A) Limitation on charitable, etc., deduction. The amount otherwise allowable under subsection (a) as a deduction shall not exceed 15 per centum of the net income of the trust (computed without the benefit of subsection (a) if the trust has engaged in a prohibited transaction, as defined in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

(B) Prohibited transactions. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "prohibited transaction" means any transaction after July 1, 1950, in which any trust while holding income or corpus which has been permanently set aside or is to be used exclusively for charitable or other purposes described in subsection (a)—

(i) Lends any part of such income or corpus, without receipt of adequate security and a reasonable rate of interest to;

(ii) Pays any compensation from such income or corpus, in excess of a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered, to;

(iii) Makes any part of its services available on a preferential basis to;

(iv) Uses such income or corpus to make any substantial purchase of securities or any other property, for more than an adequate consideration in money or money's worth, from;

(v) Sells any substantial part of the securities or other property comprising such income or corpus, for less than an adequate consideration in money or money's worth, to; or

(vi) Engages in any other transaction which results in a substantial diversion of such income or corpus to;

the creator of such trust; any person who has made a substantial contribution to such trust; a member of the family (as defined in section 24 (b) (2) (D)) of an individual who is the creator of the trust or who has made a substantial contribution to the trust; or a corporation controlled by any such creator or person through the ownership, directly or indirectly, of 50 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 per centum or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

(C) Taxable years affected. The amount otherwise allowable under subsection (a) as a deduction shall be limited as provided in subparagraph (A) only for taxable years subsequent to the taxable year during which the trust is notified by the Secretary that it has engaged in such transaction, unless such trust entered into such prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting such corpus or income from the purposes described in subsection (a), and such transaction involved a substantial part of such corpus or income.

(D) Future charitable, etc., deductions of trusts denied deduction under subparagraph (C). If the deduction of any trust under subsection (a) has been limited as provided in this paragraph, such trust, with respect to any taxable year following the taxable year in which notice is received of limitation of deduction under subsection (a), may, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, file claim for the allowance of the unlimited deduction under subsection (a), and if the Secretary, pursuant to such regulations, is satisfied that such trust will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction, the limitation provided in subparagraph (A) shall not be applicable with respect to taxable years subsequent to the year in which such claim is filed.

(E) Disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions. No gift or bequest for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes (including the encouragement of art, and the prevention of cruelty to children or animals), otherwise allowable as a deduction under section 23 (o) (2), 23 (q) (2), 162 (a), 505 (a) (2), 812 (d), 861 (a) (3), 1004 (a) (2) (B), or 1004 (b) (2) or (3), shall be allowed as a deduction if made in trust and, in the taxable year of the trust in which the gift or bequest is made, the deduction allowed the trust under subsection (a) is limited by subparagraph (A). With respect to any taxable year of a trust in which such deduction has been so limited by reason of entering into a prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting such corpus or income from the purposes described in subsection (a), and such transaction involved a substantial part of such income or corpus, and which taxable year is the same, or prior to the, taxable year of the trust in which such prohibited transaction occurred, such deduction shall be disallowed the donor only if such donor or (if such donor is an individual) any member of his family (as defined in section 24 (b) (2) (D)) was a party to such prohibited transaction.

(F) Definition. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "gift or bequest" means any gift, contribution, bequest, devise, legacy, or transfer.

(3) Cross reference. For disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under subsection (a), see section 3813.

(4) Accumulated income. If the amounts permanently set aside, or to be used exclusively for the charitable and other purposes described in subsection (a) during the taxable year or any prior taxable year and not actually paid out by the end of the taxable year—

(A) Are unreasonable in amount or duration in order to carry out such purposes of the trust; or

(B) Are used to a substantial degree for purposes other than those described in subsection (a); or

(C) Are invested in such a manner as to jeopardize the interests of the religious, charitable, scientific, etc., beneficiaries, the amount otherwise allowable under subsection (a) as a deduction shall be limited to the amount actually paid out during the taxable year and shall not exceed 15 per centum of the net income of the trust (computed without the benefit of subsection (a)).

§ 39.162–1 Income of estates and trusts. (a) In ascertaining the tax liability of the estate of a deceased person or of a trust, there are deductible from the gross income, subject to exceptions, the same deductions which are allowed to individual taxpayers. See generally section 23, and the provisions thereof governing the right of deduction for depreciation and depletion in the case of property held in trust. Amounts allowable under section 812 (b) as a deduction in computing the net estate of a decedent are not allowed as a deduction under section 23, except subsection (w) in computing the net income of the estate unless there is filed in duplicate a statement to the effect that the items have not been claimed or allowed as deductions from the gross estate of the decedent under section 812 (b) and a waiver of any and all right to have such item allowed at any time as a deduction under section 812 (b) Such statement and waiver should be filed with the return for the year for which the item is claimed as a deduction, or with the Commissioner, or with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which such return was filed, for association with the return. For items not deductible, see section 24. For limitations on the deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) see section 3813. See also paragraph (b) (1) of this section, and §§ 39.162–3 and 39.162–4. Against the net income of the estate or trust there are allowable certain credits, for which see sections 25 and 163.

(b) From the gross income of the estate or trust there are also deductible (either in lieu of, or in addition to, the deductions referred to in paragraph (a) of this section) the following:

(1) Any part of the gross income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which, by the terms of the will or of the instrument creating the trust, is paid or permanently set aside during such year for the charitable, etc., uses or purposes referred to or described in section 162 (a) This deduction is in lieu of that authorized by section 23 (o) in the case of individual taxpayers. In the case of a trust, the deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) is subject to the limitations of section 162 (g). See §§ 39.162–3 and 39.162–4. Where any amount of the income so paid or set aside for the charitable uses or purposes referred to or described in section 162 (a) is attributable to gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months, the amount of the deduction allowable under section 162 (a) must be determined with regard to the inclusion of 100 percent of such gains in gross income and with appropriate adjustment for the deduction provided in sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b) of 50 percent of the excess, if any, of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss. See § 39.117 (b)–1 (a) The application of this rule is illustrated by the following example:

Example. Under the terms of a trust created by the will of a decedent, the trust net income (including capital gains) is to be distributed, one-half to certain individual beneficiaries and one-half to M University, an organization exempt from taxation under section 101 (6). During 1952 the trust has ordinary net income of $100,000, plus $100,000 of gains from the sale of capital assets held for more than six months. In computing the gross income of the trust for tax purposes 100 per cent of such gains are includible. M University receives a total of $100,000 from the trust in respect of the year 1952. However, the amount allowable to the trust as a deduction under section 162 (a) is subject to appropriate adjustment for the deduction allowable under section 23 (ee). In view of the distributions made to individual beneficiaries, the deduction allowable to the trust under section 23 (ee) is limited by the provisions of section 117 (b) to $25,000. Since the whole of this deduction is attributable to the distribution to M University, the deduction allowable in 1952 to the trust under section 162 (a) will be $75,000.

See § 39.153–2 relating to the annual information return that must be filed by certain trusts claiming charitable, etc., deductions under section 162 (a) for the taxable year.

(2) Any income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is to be distributed currently by the fiduciary to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary, whether or not such income is actually distributed. For this purpose, it is provided in section 162 (b) that "income which is to be distributed currently" includes income of the estate or trust which, within the taxable year, becomes payable to the legatee, heir, or beneficiary.

(3) Any income of the estate of a deceased person for its taxable year which is properly paid or credited during such year to a legatee or heir, and any income either of such an estate or of a trust for its taxable year which is similarly paid or credited during that year to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary if there was vested in the fiduciary a discretion either to distribute or to accumulate such income.

(4) Any income of the class described in subparagraph (2) or (3) of this paragraph which is currently distributable, or paid or credited, to a guardian for his ward, is likewise deductible from the gross income of the estate or trust.

(c) There is included in the income of the estate or the trust, unless it is included in the income of the grantor of the trust, or in the income of some other person granted the power exercisable solely by himself to vest the property in himself. See §§ 39.166–1, 39.167–1, 39.22 (a)–21, and 39.22 (a)–22.

(1) All income thereof accumulated for the benefit of unborn or unascertained persons or persons with contingent interests,

(2) All income either accumulated or held for future distribution pursuant to the terms of the will or trust,

(3) All other income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is not to be distributed currently to legatees or other beneficiaries (see paragraph (b) (2) of this section),

(4) All income of the estate for its taxable year not properly paid or credited during such year to a legatee or heir, and

(5) All income either of the estate or of the trust for its taxable year which is not similarly paid or credited during that year to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary in case there was vested in the fiduciary a discretion either to distribute or to accumulate such income (see paragraph (b) (3) of this section).

In all such cases the tax with respect to such income included in the income of the estate or trust for its taxable year is payable by the fiduciary, except where the income is deductible by the estate or trust for such taxable year (and is includible in the income of the legatee or beneficiary).

(d) Income described in paragraph (c) (1) (2) (4) and (5) of this section may, in some cases, be deductible by the estate or trust under paragraph (b) (2) of this section. It is expressly provided in section 162 (b) that such income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which, within its taxable year, becomes payable to the legatee, heir, or beneficiary is deductible by the estate or trust. Thus, if income of a trust is to be accumulated until A, the beneficiary, reaches his twenty-first birthday, which is December 31, 1952, the income of the trust (assuming the income tax returns of the trust are made on the calendar year basis) for the calendar year 1952 is to be deducted by the trust under section 162 (b) in computing its net income for 1952 and is to be included in the income of A for his taxable year in which December 31, 1952, falls. In the case of a similar trust, where the twenty-first birthday of B, the beneficiary was on July 1, 1952, and the income of the trust was to be accumulated until that date and then to be distributed to B at such time as the trustee in his discretion decides, if the trustee on December 31, 1952, decides to distribute the accumulated income to B, the income becomes payable to B on December 31, 1952, whether distributed to him or not. In such a case, the extent to which such amount is considered to be payable out of income of the trust for its taxable year is determined under section 162 (d) (2) and § 39.162-2 (b)

(e) Any amount described in paragraph (b) (2) and (3) of this section as being deductible from the gross income of the estate or trust shall be included in computing the net income of the legatees, heirs, or beneficiaries, whether distributed to them or not. As to the amount of income of the estate or trust which is considered paid, credited, or to be distributed, and the time thereof, for the purposes of the deduction under paragraph (b) (2) and (3) of this section and the inclusion in income of the legatee, heir, or beneficiary, see section 162 (d) and § 39.162-2.

(f) Any income of an estate or trust for its taxable year which during that year may be used, pursuant to the terms of the will or trust instrument, in the discharge or satisfaction, in whole or in part, of a legal obligation of any person is, to the extent so used, taxable to such person as though directly distributed to him as a beneficiary, except in cases to which section 22 (k) or section 171 applies. See §§ 39.167-1, 39.171-1, and 39.171-2.

(g) The income of an estate of a deceased person, as dealt with in the Internal Revenue Code, is therein described as received by the estate during the period of administration or settlement thereof. The period of administration or settlement of the estate is the period required by the executor or administrator to perform the ordinary duties pertaining to administration, in particular the collection of assets and the payment of debts and legacies. It is the time actually required for this purpose, whether longer or shorter than the period specified in the local statute for the settlement of estates. If an executor, who is also named as trustee, fails to obtain his discharge as executor, the period of administration continues up to the time when the duties of administration are complete and he actually assumes his duties as trustee, whether pursuant to an order of the court or not. No taxable income is realized from the passage of property to the executor or administrator on the death of the decedent, even though it may have appreciated in value since the decedent acquired it. But see sections 42, 43, and 44. As to the taxable gain realized, or the deductible loss sustained, upon the sale or other disposition of property by an administrator, executor, or trustee, and by a legatee, heir, or other beneficiary see sections 111 and 112. As to capital gains and losses, see section 117. A statutory allowance paid a widow is not deductible from gross income, except to the extent that under the principles of § 39.162-2 such allowance is taxable to the widow. If real estate is sold by the devisee or heir thereof, whether before or after settlement of the estate, he is taxable individually on any profit derived.

(h) The tax upon the net income of the estate or trust shall be paid by the fiduciary (see section 161 (b)) If the tax has been properly paid on the net income of an estate or trust for a taxable year, the net income on which the tax is so paid is not, generally, in the hands of the distributee thereof (the legatee, heir, or beneficiary) taxable as income to him, but if such income becomes payable in a subsequent taxable year of the estate or trust it may be required to be included in the income of the distributee under section 162 (d) (2) or (3) See § 39.162-2 (b) (c) and (d)

(i) Liability for the payment of the tax attaches to the person of the executor or administrator up to and after his discharge if prior to distribution and discharge he had notice of his tax obligations or failed to exercise due diligence in ascertaining whether or not such obligations existed. For the extent of such liability, see section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 518 of the Revenue Act of 1934. Liability for the tax also follows the assets of the estate distributed to heirs, devisees, legatees, and distributees, who may be required to discharge the amount of the tax due and unpaid to the extent of the distributive shares received by them. See section 311. The same considerations apply to trusts.

§ 39.162-2 Allocation of estate and trust income to legatees and beneficiaries—(a) Allocation among annuitants. (1) Section 162 (d) (1) applies to all cases in which the executor or trustee can or must (for example, by the terms of the trust instrument or will) pay the whole or any part of a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance out of other than income, except that no income is to be allocated under it to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary of a lump-sum gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance. It applies in all cases of annuities where any deficiency in the amount to be paid can be made up by a payment out of corpus of the trust. It also applies in cases where amounts are to be paid or credited at intervals and the executor or trustee has discretion whether to pay or credit such amounts out of income or corpus, regardless of the source (income or corpus) to which the executor or trustee attributes such amount. If an annuity is paid, credited, or to be distributed tax-free, that is, under a provision whereby the executor or trustee will pay the income tax of the annuitant resulting from the receipt of the annuity, the payment of or for the tax by the executor or trustee will be income to the annuitant under the rules of section 162 (d) to the extent such payment is treated thereunder as out of income.

(2) The method of allocating income of the estate or trust for its taxable year in cases to which section 162 (d) (1) applies is as follows: The aggregate of all amounts which can be paid, credited, or distributed out of other than income (except under a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance not to be paid, credited, or to be distributed at intervals) is obtained. The aggregate of such amounts is considered to be paid, credited, or distributed in such cases out of income of the estate or trust for its taxable year if it does not exceed the distributable income of the estate or trust for its taxable year. If the aggregate of such amounts does exceed the distributable income of the estate or trust for its taxable year, the portion of such amount paid, credited, or to be distributed to a legatee or beneficiary is considered income of the estate or trust for its taxable year which is paid, credited, or to be distributed in an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of all distributable income as the amount so paid, credited, or to be distributed to the legatee or beneficiary bears to the aggregate of such amounts so paid, credited, or to be distributed to such legatees or beneficiaries for the taxable year of the estate or trust. The proportion stated in the preceding sentence applies only to legatees or beneficiaries of amounts which can be paid, credited, or distributed out of other than income of the estate or trust and, in computing such proportion, the amount of any gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance not to be paid, credited, or distributed at intervals is not to be included.

(3) Section 162 (d) (1) introduces a concept of distributable income. This is defined in that section as meaning (i) the net income of the estate or trust computed with the deductions allowed under subsections (b) and (c) of section 162 in the case of amounts paid, credited, or to be distributed to which section 162 (d) (1) does not apply, or (ii) the income of the estate or trust minus the deductions provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 162 in the case of amounts paid, credited, or to be distributed to which section 162 (d) (1) does not apply, whichever is greater. "Net income," as thus used, means the statutory net income of the trust under the Internal Revenue Code before the application of section 162 (b) and (c) (but, as stated in the preceding sentence, such amount is to be reduced by the deductions allowed under subsections (b) and (c) of section 162 in the case of amounts to which section 162 (d) (1) does not apply) "Income," as thus used, must be determined in accordance with the following principles: First, such "income" means, in general, the amount which under the applicable law of estates and trusts is considered income available for distribution to the life tenant, legatee, or beneficiary, as the case may be. Second, there must be eliminated from the income of the estate or trust, determined in accordance with the terms of the trust instrument and State law, items of income which are not includible in income of an individual for Federal income tax purposes. Therefore, the "income," referred to in clause (B) of section 162 (d) (1) may exceed net income and thus be treated as distributable income under section 162 (d) in cases where items which are deductible for Federal income tax purposes are, by the terms of the trust instrument or State law, not to be used to reduce income available for distribution but to be allocated to corpus.

(4) The application of section 162 (d) (1) in general, may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Pursuant to the terms of the will of A, a trust is established on January 1, 1952, to pay $5,000 a year to B, and upon the death of B to pay the corpus and any accumulated income to his estate. The returns of the trust and of B are made on the calendar year basis. The trust instrument provides that the amount payable to B is to be paid out of income (after payment of trustees' commissions) or out of corpus to the extent income is insufficient. The receipts and expenditures of the trust for 1952 are as follows:

Taxable stock dividend	$1,000
Income from rents	3,000
Tax-exempt interest from State bonds	1,200
Deductible trustees' commissions	200
Other deductible expenditures	1,300

In accordance with the terms of the trust instrument stock dividends are to be allocated to corpus, and trustees' commissions are to be charged to income. However, the other expenditures indicated above ($1,300) are of a nature which under the terms of the trust instrument are to be charged to corpus. The distributable income of the trust to be deducted by it for 1952 and included in the beneficiary's income for such year is $2,800, the greater of the statutory net income or the available trust income includible in gross income, determined as follows:

Statutory Net Income (Prior to Application of Section 162 (b) and (c))

Gross income:
Stock dividend	$1,000
Rents	3,000
	4,000
Deductions:
Trustees' commissions	200
Other deductible expenses	1,300
	1,500
Net income	2,500

Trust Income Under Clause (B) of Section 162 (d) (1)

Income:
Rents	$3,000
Interest from State bonds	1,200
	4,200
Expenses allocated to income: Trustees' commissions	200
Eliminating items not includible in gross income: Tax-exempt interest	1,200
	1,400
Income determined under section 162 (d) (1) (B)	2,800

(5) "Net income" and "income" for the purpose of section 162 (d) (1) also do not include income of a prior taxable year, even though such income may be considered income of the estate or trust for the current taxable year under section 162 (d) (2) This rule may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Under the terms of a trust, established in 1935, the trustees are to accumulate the income thereof until A reaches his twenty-first birthday, and then are to pay A such accumulated income, and on each December 31 thereafter, are to pay B $5,000, out of income of the trust, if income is available, or, if not, out of corpus of the trust. A became 21 years of age on June 30, 1952. The returns of the trust and of A and B are made on the calendar year basis. Under section 162 (b), the income of the trust for that part of 1952 on and before June 30, 1952, is to be considered income of the trust for 1952 which is to be distributed currently to A. In computing the distributable income of the trust for 1952 which is to be considered distributed to B in payment of the $5,000 annuity, the amount of income for the first six months of 1952 which is considered to be currently distributable to A is to be deducted. Although under section 162 (d) (2) the amount of the income of the trust for the period July 1, 1951, through June 30, 1952, will be considered income of the trust for 1952 which is to be deducted by the trust and included in A's income for 1952 (see paragraphs (b) and (d) of this section), for the purposes of section 162 (d) (1) such amount is not to be deducted from the trust's income for 1952 in computing its distribuable income considered to be distributed to B and no account is to be taken of the income of the trust for the period July 1, 1951, through December 31, 1951.

(b) Allocation among income beneficiaries and legatees. (1) Section 162 (d) (2) applies in cases where income of the estate or trust for any period becomes payable on a date more than 65 days after the beginning of its taxable year. It applies in every case where income of the estate or trust is paid, credited, or to be distributed to a legatee, heir, or beneficiary, other than a legatee, heir, or beneficiary to whom paragraph (a) of this section applies or a legatee, heir, or beneficiary of a lump-sum gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance. This paragraph, and not paragraph (a) of this section, applies to income paid, credited, or to be distributed to a legatee who, in addition to any part of the principal of an estate, is entitled to receive any income during the administration of the estate or upon its termination, whether payment of such income is made in accordance with directions in the will, or for support as allowed under State law, or by the administrator to the residuary legatee in the ordinary course of administration. This rule, however, has no application in cases where income may be paid or credited, or is to be distributed under an obligation to pay an amount periodically at all events, whether or not income is available, as in the ordinary case of an annuity. Section 162 (d) (2) also has no application in determining the amount to be included in the income of the estate or trust under section 161 but applies only in determining the amount allowed as deductions under section 162 (b) and (c)

(2) Section 162 (d) (2) applies whether amounts are paid, credited, or to be distributed out of the income of the estate or trust for its current taxable year or out of the income for any period. It includes a rule for allocating income of the estate or trust to the legatees or beneficiaries in cases in which the income of a prior period is paid, credited, or to be distributed to the legatee or beneficiary during the taxable year of the estate or trust. In the absence of proof that any particular period of time is the source of an amount of income which becomes payable within the taxable year, the period from which such income is derived will be presumed to be a period ended with the date the income becomes payable. In such a case the year ended with the date the income becomes payable shall be considered the last 12 months of such period (whether or not other distributions under this paragraph have been made during such last 12 months) and the income which becomes payable shall be considered as derived from the most recently accumulated income for such period.

(3) As used in section 162, the term "income which becomes payable" means income to which the legatee, heir, or beneficiary has a present right, whether or not such income is actually paid. Such right may be derived from the directions in the trust instrument or will to make distributions of income at a certain date, or from the exercise of the fiduciary's discretion to distribute income, or from a recognized present right under the local law to obtain income or compel a distribution of income. Income is not considered to become payable within a taxable year where during the entire taxable year there is only a future right to such income. For example, under valid terms of a trust instrument, income received by a trust during its taxable year is to be accumulated until the twenty-first birthday of the beneficiary (or his prior death) at which time the accumulated income is to be distributed to the beneficiary (or his estate, as the case may be) In such case, the income of the trust received in any taxable year prior to the taxable year of the trust in which the date of distribution occurs (the beneficiary's twenty-first birthday or his prior death) is not income which becomes payable within such prior taxable year but is income which becomes payable in the taxable year of the trust in which the date of distribution occurs. In any case, income becomes payable at a date not later than the date it is actually paid for the use of the distributee.

(4) The application of section 162 (d) (2) in general, may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). An existing trust makes its returns on the cash receipts and disbursements basis and on the basis of a calendar year accounting period. Under the terms of the trust and the local law (which allows accumulations) the income of the trust for the period of 12 months ended June 30 of each year is to be accumulated and payment made to the beneficiary on the last day of such period (June 30). It is assumed that the entire net income of the trust (determined before the application of section 162 (b)) is available for distribution and that the trust receives $100 of such income each month during 1951 and 1952. For the calendar year 1952, the trust will include $1,200 in its income, which is its actual income for 1952 determined under section 161 and before taking the deductions under section 162. Under section 162 (d) (2) the trust income for the 12 months ending June 30, 1952, amounting to $1,200, which under the terms of the trust instrument is available for distribution on such date, is considered for the purposes of section 162 (b) as income for the taxable year 1952 and accordingly will be deducted by the trust for 1952. Assuming that the beneficiary makes his returns on the calendar year basis, he will include this amount deducted by the trust in 1952 in his income for 1952, unless he is permitted to exclude part or all of the income earned by the trust in the last six months of 1951 under the provisions of section 162 (d) (4). The same process will be repeated each year thereafter as long as the accounting periods and the distribution date remain the same.

Example (2). An estate which came into being on January 1, 1951, accumulates the income received (as is allowed under the local law) until June 30, 1952, at which time the executor distributes $6,000 of income to the residuary legatee. The balance of the accumulated income becomes payable under the local law on December 31, 1952, the date the administration of the estate is terminated, and a final distribution of $18,000 of income is then made to the residuary legatee. It is established that the estate, which was on a cash basis, received net income, which it accumulated during the administration of the estate, at the rate of $1,000 a month, but in making the distributions to the residuary legatee the executor did not attempt to identify such distributions with the income received during any particular period during the administration of the estate. Upon such facts, for the taxable year 1952, the distribution on June 30, 1952, of $6,000 will be presumed to be a distribution out of the most recently accumulated income of the estate, that is, for the first six months of 1952, and the final distribution of $18,000 on December 31, 1952, will be considered a distribution out of the income for the entire period of administration, of which the last 12 months is the calendar year 1952 and the most recently accumulated income is the $6,000 for the last six months of 1952. Accordingly, for 1952 the estate will take a deduction of $12,000 and the legatee will include the same amount (out of the total of $24,000 received) in his income, by reason of the distributions on June 30 and December 31, 1952.

(5) The rule of section 162 (d) (2) also applies in the case of a distribution out of income for a period which does not include any part of the current taxable year. Thus, in the case of a trust established on January 1, 1951, which accumulates the income in the first year of the trust and each year thereafter (more than 65 days after the close of the prior taxable year) distributes the prior year's accumulation, the 1951 accumulated income to be distributed in 1952 will be considered income of the trust for 1952 which is to be distributed in 1952.

(6) If the prior period, the income of which becomes payable in the taxable year, is a period of more than 12 months, then only the income of the last 12 months of such period is considered to be income which is to be distributed during the current taxable year. This rule may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Under the terms of an existing trust with respect to which the local law allows accumulations, the trustee has discretion to either accumulate or distribute the income to the beneficiary. The income tax returns of the trust and the beneficiary are made on the calendar year basis. On April 1, 1953, the trustee distributes to the beneficiary all the income accumulated from January 1, 1950, through March 31, 1953. Pursuant to section 162 (d) (2), the amount of the income of the trust for the period April 1, 1952, through March 31, 1953, that is, for the last 12 months of the period of accumulation, is deductible under section 162 (c) in the return of the trust for the calendar year 1953, and is includible in the beneficiary's income tax return for that year, subject to the limitation provided in section 162 (d) (4). The distribution of the accumulated income will include the income of the trust for the last nine months of 1952 upon which the trust may have paid a tax for the year 1952, but such income is, if under the terms of the trust instrument and the local law the Federal income tax is a charge against such income, reduced by the amount of Federal income tax attributable to such income and paid by the trustee. If the deduction taken by the trust for the distribution to the beneficiary on April 1, 1953, exceeds the net income of the trust for the calendar year 1953, see section 162 (d) (4) and paragraph (d) of this section.

(c) Distributions in first 65 days of taxable year (1) Section 162 (d) (3) is designed to apportion amounts paid, credited, or to be distributed within the first 65 days of the taxable year of the estate or trust to that part of such first 65 days and the preceding taxable year to which such amounts are attributable.

(2) Section 162 (d) (3) (B) applies in cases described in section 162 (d) (1), that is, generally, in cases of annuities. If an annuity becomes payable in the first 65 days of the taxable year of the estate or trust, a proportionate part of the amount which thus becomes payable is considered payable on the last day of the preceding year. This proportionate part is that part of the amount which becomes payable within the first 65 days as the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year bears to the whole period of the interval. If, however, the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year (the year in which the amount becomes payable) is a period of more than 12 months, the interval is considered to begin on a date 12 months before the end of the preceding taxable year. Thus, if $4,250 is to be paid every two years on March 1, the period of the interval ending March 1, 1953, is considered to begin 12 months preceding December 31, 1952, since the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year 1953 (March 2, 1951, through December 31, 1952) is more than 12 months. Accordingly, the interval is considered to be the period January 1, 1952, through March 1, 1953, or 425 days, and the part of the interval not falling within the taxable year is considered to be the calendar year 1952, or 365 days. Therefore, of the $4,250 which becomes payable on March 1, 1953, 365/425 of such amount, or $3,650, is considered to be an amount to be distributed on December 31, 1952. The provisions of section 162 (d) (1) determine the extent to which the amount distributed on March 1 and the amount considered to be distributed on December 31 are paid, credited, or to be distributed out of income of the estate or trust for its taxable year.

(3) Section 162 (d) (3) (A) applies in the type of cases described in section 162 (d) (2) but only where income is paid, credited, or to be distributed within the first 65 days of the taxable year of the estate or trust. In such cases, if income of the estate or trust for a period beginning before the beginning of the taxable year becomes payable within the first 65 days of the taxable year, the income for the part of such period not falling within the taxable year is considered to be paid, credited, or distributed on the last day of the preceding taxable year. If the part of such period beginning before the beginning of the taxable year is more than 12 months, only the income of the last 12 months of such part is considered paid, credited, or to be distributed on the last day of the preceding taxable year. If the amount of income for any period paid, credited, or to be distributed to a legatee or beneficiary during the taxable year of the estate or trust is less than the total amount of income (not already paid, credited, or to be distributed to legatees or beneficiaries) for such period, such amount will be considered paid, credited, or to be distributed from the most recently accumulated income of the period. For example, a trust which makes its returns on the calendar year basis and which is to distribute the income of the trust, but not in excess of $5,000, to the beneficiary each February 28 received $500 of income each month during the period March 1, 1952, through February 28, 1953, or a total of $6,000. In such case, $1,000 of the $5,000 to be distributed to the beneficiary on February 28, 1953, will be considered to be distributed out of the income of the trust for 1953 (the income of the period January 1, 1953, through February 28, 1953) and $4,000 will be considered to have been distributed to the beneficiary on December 31, 1952, out of the income of the trust for 1952.

(d) Treatment of excess deductions of estates and trusts. (1) Section 162 (d) (4) is designed to avoid a form of double taxation which can arise through operation of section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A). It becomes applicable only in cases where the deductions allowed to an estate or trust for a taxable year under section 162 (b) or (c) solely upon application of section 162 (d) (2) or (3) (A) exceed the net income of the estate or trust for such year, computed without the deductions allowed by reason of section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A) The provisions of section 162 (d) (4) do not prevent the taxation of income distributed to legatees, heirs, or beneficiaries merely because the income may have been previously taxed to the estate or trust. See the example in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph.

(2) It is in the case of an estate which terminates its administration on a date more than 65 days after the beginning of its final taxable year that section 162 (d) (4) will be applicable most frequently to eliminate the double taxation that can arise by reason of section 162 (d) (2). For example, the income of an estate during its several years of administration, amounting to $100 each month, was accumulated until the estate was closed on May 31, 1952, on which date the accumulated income was payable under the terms of the will or local law to B, the residuary legatee, together with or as a part of the residue of the estate. The return of the estate for the calendar year 1952 will include income of $500 from which there will be deducted under section 162 (c) pursuant to section 162 (d) (2) the sum of $1,200 (assuming that under the local law any income taxes paid by the estate with respect to the 1952 income are not chargeable to income) Since the estate is entitled to a deduction of $500 under section 162 (c) without the application of section 162 (d) (2) that is, for income received and distributed in the year 1952, only $700 of the $1,200 deduction is taken by the estate solely by reason of section 162 (d) (2) Thus, the deduction allowed the estate solely by reason of section 162 (d) (2) exceeds the net income of the estate for 1952 computed without such deduction by the amount of $700, which amount would be excluded from B's income for the year 1952. B's return for the calendar year 1952 would include only the income of $500 received by the estate in 1952.

(3) If a trustee is required, or permitted, under the terms of the trust to distribute in one year the income of a prior period, excess deductions of the type covered by section 162 (d) (4) also may arise by reason of section 162 (d) (2) in such a case. For example, the income of a trust for the calendar year 1952 amounted to $10,000 and was properly accumulated by the trustee until July 1, 1953, when only the income for the year 1952 was paid to the beneficiary, and no other distribution was made during the year 1953 or within the first 65 days of 1954. The net income of the trust for the year 1953, computed without the deduction allowed through the operation of section 162 (d) (2) amounted to only $8,000. The deduction of $10,000, being allowed solely by reason of section 162 (d) (2) exceeded the net income of the trust for 1953, computed without such deduction, by $2,000. Thus, section 162 (d) (4) operates so as to exclude from the beneficiary's return the amount of such excess deduction. The beneficiary, in his return for the calendar year 1953, would include $8,000 of the July 1, 1953, distribution, even though the trust may have paid taxes on such income for the year 1952.

(4) Excess deductions of an estate or trust solely by reason of section 162 (d) (3) (A) will not arise frequently, for the distribution of income within the first 65 days of a taxable year of an estate or trust will generally consist of income received by the estate or trust in the immediately preceding taxable year of the estate or trust. Thus, if on February 1, 1953, an estate or trust distributes the 1952 income to B, the deduction for such distribution is taken in the return of the estate or trust for the calendar year 1952, and in most cases the deduction allowed will be equal to the net income (before such deductions) for the year 1952. However, if the estate or trust income (as determined by the will, trust instrument, or local law) for the year 1952 payable to B on February 1, 1953, exceeded the net income of the estate or trust for 1952 before the application of section 162 (d) (3) (A) then section 162 (d) (4) would operate to exclude from B's income the amount of the excess deduction to the estate or trust. Excess deductions also can arise upon application of section 162 (d) (3) (A) in a case where a fiduciary of an estate or trust distributes within the first 65 days of its taxable year the income of a period not covering its immediately preceding taxable year. Thus, if a trustee who accumulated the income for the calendar years 1951 and 1952 distributes to B on March 1, 1953, the income of the year 1951 only, the trust in its return for the year 1952 will deduct the amount of income of the year 1951 distributed on March 1, 1953. If such deduction allowed to the trust exceeds the net income of the trust for the year 1952, computed without such deduction, B will exclude the amount of such excess from his return for the calendar year 1952.

(5) The deductions allowed to an estate or trust solely by reason of section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A) are compared under the provisions of section 162 (d) (4) with the net income of the estate or trust computed without such deductions, except that in a case where the estate or trust in computing its net income for a taxable year is entitled to a deduction under section 162 (d) (1) (relating to amounts paid to annuitants), the amount of the deduction under section 162 (d) (1) shall be computed with the application of section 162 (d) (3) (A). Such application of section 162 (d) (3) (A) in computing the net income of an estate or trust for the purpose of section 162 (d) (4) in a case where section 162 (d) (1) is applicable is shown in the following example which also illustrates the manner in which excess deductions are treated when two or more beneficiaries are involved.

Example. (i) Under an existing trust the trustee in his discretion may either accumulate or distribute the income to the beneficiaries, A and B, who share equally in the income of the trust. The returns of the trust and of the beneficiaries are made upon the calendar year basis. Under the terms of the trust, the trustee is required to pay an annuity of $4,000 to C on April 1 of each year. During the year 1952 the trust had gross income of $9,000 and expenses of $1,000 which were deductible in computing the net income under the Internal Revenue Code and were chargeable against income under the terms of the trust instrument.

(ii) The following distributions were made by the trustee during 1952 and the first 65 days of 1953:

(a) Six thousand dollars was paid to A on April 1, 1952, $5,000 as his share of the trust income during the last nine months of 1951 and $1,000 as his share of the trust income during the first three months of 1952.

(b) Two thousand dollars was paid to A on November 1, 1952, out of income received by the trust after March 31, 1952.

(c) Three thousand dollars was paid to B on January 5, 1953, out of his share of trust income for 1953.

(iii) Of the $15,000 distributed, the trust is allowed deductions of only $13,000 by reason of such distributions, since only $2,000 of the $4,000 paid to C is deductible by the trust inasmuch as the distributable income as defined in section 162 (d) (1) is only $2,000, that is, $3,000 less: $1,000 of the April 1, 1952, distribution to A, the $2,000 distribution to A on November 1, 1952, and the $3,000 distribution to B on January 5, 1953.

(iv) The amount of the deductions of the trust which is to be excluded under section 162 (d) (4) in computing the net incomes of A and B is $5,000 computed as follows:

(a) Without the application of section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A), the following deductions would not have been taken by the trust:

(1) $5,000 paid to A on Apr. 1, 1952, out of 1951 income, and deductible under section 162 (d) (2)	$5,000
(2) Amount paid to B on Jan. 5, 1953, deductible for 1952 under section 162 (d) (3) (A)	3,000
(3) Total	8,000

(b) The net income, for the purpose of section 162 (d) (4), is computed without applying section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A), except that in computing the deduction allowed under section 162 (d) (1) it is necessary to apply section 162 (d) (3) (A) in determining the amount of the deduction allowable to the trust under section 162 (d) (1). The net income so computed is $3,000, determined as follows:

(1) Net income before any deductions under section 162	$8,000
(2) Less deductions allowable other than under section 162 (d) (2) and (3) (A)
(i) Paid to A on Apr. 1, 1952, out of 1952 income	1,000
(ii) Paid to A on Nov. 1, 1952, out of 1952 income	2,000
(iii) Portion of the $4,000 paid to C, the annuitant (the distributable income under section 162 (d) (1) being only $2,000 in view of the $3,000 paid to B within the first 65 days of 1953)	2,000
(iv) Total of deductions	5,000
(3) Net income for the purpose of section 162 (d) (4)	3,000

(c) The deductions of $8,000 (item (a) (3)) exceed the net income of $3,000 (item (b) (3)) (c) by $5,000. Such excess is excluded from the net income of A and B (the beneficiaries receiving the income in item (a)) in the following proportions:

(6) Section 162 (d) (4) has no application to a case where, without applying section 162 (d) (2) or (3) (A) the deductions of the estate trust under section 162 (b) or (c) by reason of distributions of income exceed the net income of the estate or trust for the taxable year computed under the Internal Revenue Code without such deductions. For example, section 162 (d) (4) would not be applicable in the case of a trust which receives a deduction of $10,000 by reason of its distribution to the beneficiary during the taxable year of the entire trust income (determined under the trust and local law) received during the taxable year, even though the net income of the trust under the Code before such deduction amounted to less than $10,000.

§ 39.162-3 Rules for the application of section 162 (a) in the case of trusts— (a) Limitation on charitable, etc., deduction of trusts with trade or business income. (1) In computing the deduction allowable under section 162 (a) to a trust for any taxable year, no amount otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) as a deduction shall be allowed as a deduction with respect to income of the taxable year which is allocable to the trust's Supplement U business income for such year. For the purpose of this section, the term "Supplement U business income" means an amount equal to the amount which, if such trust were exempt from taxation under section 101 (6) would be computed as its unrelated business net income under section 422 and the regulations thereunder. For the purpose of such computation under section 422, the term "unrelated trade or business" includes any trade or business regularly carried on by such a trust, or by a partnership of which it is a member.

(2) Unless the facts clearly indicate the contrary, the deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) is allocable to the Supplement U business income on the basis of the ratio which the Supplement U business income bears to the net income of the trust computed without any deduction under section 162.

(3) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X trust has net income of $50,000 computed without any deduction under section 162. There is included in this amount a net profit of $30,000 from the operation of a trade or business. The trustee is required to pay one-half of the net income to A, an individual, and the balance of the net income to the Y charity, an organization described in section 23 (o) (2). The trustee pays each beneficiary $25,000. Under these facts, the Supplement U business income of the trust (computed after the deduction allowable under section 422 (a) (9) for charitable contributions) is $25,500. The deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) is $25,000, the amount paid to the Y charity. The portion thereof allocable to the Supplement U business income and therefore disallowed as a deduction is $12,750, that is, an amount which bears the same ratio to $25,000 as $25,500 bears to $50,000.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the trustee has discretion as to the portion of the net income to be paid to each beneficiary, and the trustee pays $40,000 to A and $10,000 to the Y charity. The deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) is $10,000. The portion thereof allocable to the Supplement U business income and therefore disallowed as a deduction is $5,100, that is, an amount which bears the same ratio to $10,000 as $25,500 bears to $50,000.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the terms of the trust instrument require the trustee to pay to the Y charity the net income, if any, derived from the trade or business, and to pay to A all the net income derived from other sources. The trustee pays $30,000 to the Y charity and $20,000 to A. The deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) is $30,000. Under the facts in this case, $25,500 of the amount paid to the Y charity is allocable to the Supplement U business income and is therefore disallowed as a deduction.

(b) Limitation on charitable, etc., deduction of trusts engaged in prohibited transactions. (1) In the case of a trust which has engaged in any prohibited transaction (as described in section 162 (g) (2) (B)) the amount otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) as a deduction shall not exceed 15 percent of the net income of such trust (computed without the benefit of section 162 (a)) for any taxable year subsequent to the taxable year in which there is mailed to it a notice in writing by the Commissioner that it has engaged in such prohibited transaction. Such notification by the Commissioner shall be by registered mail to the last known address of the fiduciary. However, notwithstanding the requirement of notification by the Commissioner, such limitation (on the amount otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) as a deduction) shall apply with respect to any taxable year, if such trust during or prior to such taxable year commenced the prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting such income or corpus from the purposes described in section 162 (a) and such transaction involved a substantial part of such income or corpus. See examples under §§ 39.162-4 and 39.3813-1.

(2) A trust whose deduction under section 162 (a) has been limited by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (2) (A) may file, in any taxable year following the taxable year in which notice of limitation of deduction was issued, a claim for allowance of unlimited deduction under section 162 (a). This claim shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the fiduciary resides or has his principal place of business. The claim must contain or have attached to it an affidavit by the fiduciary that the trust will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction.

(3) If the Commissioner is satisfied that the trust will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction, he shall so notify the trust in writing. In such case the trust will be allowed unlimited deduction under section 162 (a) (subject to the provisions of section 162 (g)) with respect to taxable years subsequent to the taxable year in which such claim is filed. Section 162 (g) (2) (C) contemplates that a trust whose charitable, etc., deduction has been limited as prescribed therein shall be subject to such limitation for at least one full taxable year.

(c) Limitation on charitable, etc., deduction of trusts accumulating income. (1) The amount otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) as a deduction shall be limited to the amount actually paid out during the taxable year and shall not exceed 15 percent of the net income of the trust (computed without the benefit of section 162 (a)), if the amounts permanently set aside, or to be used exclusively, for the charitable and other purposes described in section 162 (a) during the taxable year or any prior taxable year (including taxable years beginning before the effective date of section 162 (g) (4)) and not actually paid out by the end of the taxable year are unreasonable. Amounts accumulated out of income for purposes described in section 162 (a) become unreasonable when more income is accumulated than is needed, or when the duration of the accumulation is longer than is needed, in order to carry out the charitable or other purpose described in section 162 (a) for which such amounts were set aside. Furthermore, such limitation on the deduction otherwise allowable under section 162 (a) shall apply if amounts accumulated out of income for purposes described in section 162 (a) are used to a substantial degree for purposes other than those described in section 162 (a), or if such amounts are invested in such a manner as to jeopardize the interests of the religious, charitable, scientific, etc., beneficiaries.

(2) For the purpose of section 162 (g) (4) the term "income" means gains, profits, and income determined under the principles applicable in determining the earnings or profits of a corporation. The amount accumulated out of income during the taxable year or any prior taxable year shall be determined under the principles applicable in determining the accumulated earnings or profits of a corporation. In determining the reasonableness of an accumulation out of income, there will be disregarded the following: (i) The accumulation of gain upon the sale or exchange of a donated asset to the extent that such gain represents the excess of the fair market value of such asset when acquired by the trust over its substituted basis in the hands of the organization; (ii) the accumulation of gain upon the sale or exchange of property held for the production of investment income, such as dividends, interest, and rents, where the proceeds of such sale or exchange are within a reasonable time reinvested in property acquired and held in good faith for the production of investment income.

(3) Whether the conditions specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of section 162 (g) (4) are present in any case must be determined from all the facts. The conditions specified in section 162 (g) (4) (A), (B) and (C) may result from the use of only one trust or of a chain of two or more organizations.

(4) A trust whose deduction under section 162 (a) has been limited by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (4) may file a claim for allowance of unlimited deduction under section 162 (a). This claim shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the fiduciary resides or has his principal place of business. The claim must contain or be accompanied by information or evidence showing that the circumstances that caused the limitation on deduction prescribed under section 162 (g) (4) no longer exist, and an affidavit by the fiduciary that the trust will not knowingly again violate the terms of such section. Section 162 (g) (4) contemplates that a trust whose charitable, etc., deduction has been limited as prescribed therein shall be subject to such limitation for at least one full taxable year.

(5) In the case of a trust the deduction under section 162 (a) of which has been limited solely by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (4) deductions otherwise allowable under section 23 (o) (2) 23 (q) (2) 162 (a) or 505 (a) (2) for gifts or contributions made to such a trust in trust for charitable, etc., purposes, shall not be disallowed.

§ 39.162-4 Disallowance to donors of certain charitable, etc., deductions for gifts made in trust. (a) No gift or contribution which would otherwise be allowable as a charitable or other deduction under section 23 (o) (2) 23 (q) (2) 162 (a) or 505 (a) (2) shall be allowed as a deduction if made in trust and, in the taxable year of the trust in which the gift or contribution is made, the deduction allowed the trust under section 162 (a) is limited by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (2) (A)

(b) The prohibited transactions enumerated in section 162 (g) (2) (B) are in addition to and not in limitation of the restrictions contained in section 23 (o) (2) 23 (q) (2) 162 (a) or 505 (a) (2) A deduction may not be allowed in view of the general provisions of those sections, even though the trust has not engaged in any of the prohibited transactions referred to in section 162 (g) (2) (B) Thus, if the donor or the fiduciary of the trust enters into a transaction with the trust, such transaction will be closely scrutinized to ascertain whether the contribution is in fact made for the stated exempt purposes.

(c) If a trust, which receives a gift or contribution for charitable, etc., purposes is not entitled to the unlimited deduction under section 162 (a) because it engaged in a prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting its income or corpus from the purposes described in section 162 (a), and such transaction involved a substantial part of such income or corpus, and if the taxable year of the trust during which such gift or contribution is made is the same as, or is prior to, the taxable year of the trust in which such transaction occurred, then a deduction by the donor with respect to the gift or contribution shall not be disallowed under paragraph (a) of this section unless the donor (or any member of his family if the donor is an individual) is a party to such prohibited transaction. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the members of an individual donor's family include only his brothers and sisters, whether by whole or half blood, spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants. See § 39.3813-3 for disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under section 162 (a).

(d) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Under the terms of an irrevocable trust established by A in 1949, the trustees were to pay one-half of the income of the trust to A's wife for life, and the trustees were given discretion either to accumulate or distribute the remaining one-half of the income to a specified charitable beneficiary. Upon the death of the wife, the entire corpus was to be paid to the named charity. The trust makes its income tax returns on the basis of the calendar year. For 1949, A takes a charitable deduction for the amount of the gift in trust to the charity. In 1952, 1953, 1954, and 1955, A makes further contributions to the trust and takes charitable deductions for such years under section 23 (o) (2). In 1953, 1954, and 1955, B (not a member of A's family) makes contributions to the trust for its designated charitable purpose and takes charitable deductions for such years. In 1953, the trust commences purposely to divert income and corpus which had been set aside for its charitable purpose and to turn such income and corpus over to A, the creator of the trust, and a substantial amount of such income and corpus is so diverted by the close of the taxable year 1954. For 1953 and subsequent taxable years, the deduction allowed the trust under section 162 (a) is limited by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (2) (A). Both A and B are disallowed any charitable deduction for their charitable contributions made during 1955 to the trust. Moreover, the charitable deduction taken by A for contributions to the trust in the years 1953 and 1954 would also be disallowed since A was a party to the prohibited transaction. If the facts and surrounding circumstances indicate that the contribution in 1952 by A was for the purpose of the prohibited transaction, then the charitable deduction for the year 1952 shall also be disallowed with respect to A, since the prohibited transaction would then have commenced with the making of such contribution and the deduction allowed the trust under section 162 (a) would then be limited for 1952 by reason of the provisions of section 162 (g) (2) (A).

SEC. 163. Credits against net income—(a) Credits of estate or trust. (1) For the purpose of the normal tax and the surtax, an estate shall be allowed, in lieu of the exemptions under section 25 (b) (1), a credit of $600 against net income, and a trust shall be allowed, in lieu of the exemptions under section 25 (b) (1), a credit of $100 against net income.

(2) If no part of the income of the estate or trust is included in computing the net income of any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, then the estate or trust shall be allowed the same credits against net income for interest as are allowed by section 25 (a).

(b) Credits of beneficiary. If any part of the income of an estate or trust is included in computing the net income of any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, such legatee, heir, or beneficiary shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as credits against net income, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 25, his proportionate share of such amounts of interest specified in section 25 (a) as are, under this Supplement, required to be included in computing his net income. Any remaining portion of such amounts specified in section 25 (a) shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as credits to the estate or trust.

(c) Credits of estate or trust and beneficiary in case of bond premium. If the estate or trust elects under section 125 to treat the premium on bonds, the interest on which is allowable as a credit under section 25 (a) (1) or (2), as amortizable,

(1) For the purposes of subsection (a) (2), the credits allowed by section 25 (a) shall be reduced as provided in section 125 (a) (3);

(2) For the purposes of subsection (b), the proportionate share of the legatee, heir, or beneficiary of such interest shall be his proportionate share of such interest (determined without regard to this paragraph) reduced by so much of the deduction under section 23 (v) as is attributable to such share. The remainder of such deduction, for the purposes of the last sentence of subsection (b), shall be applied in reduction of such credits of the estate or trust.

§ 39.163-1 Credits to estate, trust, or beneficiary—(a) Credits allowed estates and trusts for normal tax and surtax purposes. An estate is allowed, in lieu of the exemptions allowed by section 25 (b) (1) a credit of $600 against net income for both normal tax and surtax purposes. For proration of such credit in the case of a fractional part of a year resulting from termination of the taxable period by the Commissioner under section 146, see § 39.47-1. A trust is allowed, in lieu of the exemptions under section 25 (b) (1) a credit of $100 against net income for both normal tax and surtax purposes. A credit for dependents is not allowable to an estate or trust.

(b) Credit for interest to estate or trust. If no part of the income of the estate or trust is included in computing the net income of any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, the estate or trust shall be allowed the credits provided in section 25 (a) in respect of interest upon certain obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities. (For reduction of credits on account of amortizable bond premium, see § 39.125 (c)-2.)

(c) Credit for interest to beneficiary. If any part of the income of the estate or trust is included in computing the net income of any legatee, heir, or beneficiary, he is allowed for the purpose of the normal tax, in addition to his individual credits, the proportionate share of the interest upon obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities which is exempt from normal tax only and is required to be included in computing net income. Any remaining portion of such interest will be allowed as a credit for the purpose of the normal tax to the estate or trust. Where the amount of the interest specified in section 25 (a) is in excess of the net income of the estate or trust, the proportionate share of such interest which each beneficiary is required to include in computing his net income and for which he is allowed a credit for normal tax purposes is an amount equal to his distributive share of the net income of the estate or trust. No additional exemption is allowable to the beneficiary of a trust by reason of the receipt of income from such trust. For reduction of credits on account of amortizable bond premium see § 39.125 (c)-2.

SEC. 164. Different taxable years. If the taxable year of a legatee, heir, or beneficiary is different from that of the estate or trust, the amount which he is required, under section 162 (b), to include in computing his net income, shall be based upon the income of the estate or trust for any taxable year of the estate or trust (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1939) ending within or with his taxable year.

SEC. 165. Employees' trusts—(a) Exemption from tax. A trust forming part of a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries shall not be taxable under this supplement and no other provision of this supplement shall apply with respect to such trust or to its beneficiary—

(1) If contributions are made to the trust by such employer, or employees, or both, for the purpose of distributing to such employees or their beneficiaries the corpus and income of the fund accumulated by the trust in accordance with such plan;

(2) If under the trust instrument it is impossible, at any time prior to the satisfaction of all liabilities with respect to employees and their beneficiaries under the trust, for any part of the corpus or income to be (within the taxable year or thereafter) used for, or diverted to, purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries;

(3) If the trust, or two or more trusts, or the trust or trusts and annuity plan or plans are designated by the employer as constituting parts of a plan intended to qualify under this subsection which benefits either—

(A) 70 per centum or more of all the employees, or 80 per centum or more of all the employees who are eligible to benefit under the plan if 70 per centum or more of all the employees are eligible to benefit under the plan, excluding in each case employees who have been employed not more than a minimum period prescribed by the plan, not exceeding five years, employees whose customary employment is for not more than twenty hours in any one week, and employees whose customary employment is for not more than five months in any calendar year, or

(B) Such employees as qualify under a classification set up by the employer and found by the Commissioner not to be discriminatory in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, persons whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly compensated employees;

(4) If the contributions or benefits provided under the plan do not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, persons whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly compensated employees.

(5) A classification shall not be considered discriminatory within the meaning of paragraph (3) (B) or (4) of this subsection merely because it excludes employees the whole of whose remuneration constitutes "wages" under section 1426 (a) (1) (relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act) or merely because it is limited to salaried or clerical employees. Neither shall a plan be considered discriminatory within the meaning of such provisions merely because the contributions or benefits of or on behalf of the employees under the plan bear a uniform relationship to the total compensation, or the basic or regular rate of compensation, of such employees, or merely because the contributions or benefits based on that part of an employee's remuneration which is excluded from "wages" by section 1426 (a) (1) differ from the contributions or benefits based on employee's remuneration not so excluded, or differ because of any retirement benefits created under State or Federal law.

(6) A plan shall be considered as meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) of this subsection during the whole of any taxable year of the plan if on one day in each quarter it satisfied such requirements.

(b) Taxability of beneficiary. The amount actually distributed or made available to any distributee by any such trust shall be taxable to him, in the year in which so distributed or made available, under section 22 (b) (2) as if it were an annuity the consideration for which is the amount contributed by the employee, except that if the total distributions payable with respect to any employee are paid to the distributee within one taxable year of the distributee on account of the employee's separation from the service, the amount of such distribution to the extent exceeding the amounts contributed by the employee, shall be considered a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months. Where such total distributions include securities of the employer corporation, there shall be excluded from such excess the net unrealized appreciation attributable to that part of the total distributions which consists of the securities of the employer corporation so distributed. The amount of such net unrealized appreciation and the resulting adjustments to basis of the securities of the employer corporation so distributed shall be determined in accordance with regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary. For purposes of this subsection, the term "securities" means only shares of stock and bonds or debentures issued by a corporation with interest coupons or in registered form, and the term "securities of the employer corporation" includes securities of a parent or subsidiary corporation (as defined in section 130A (d) (2) and (3)) of the employer corporation. In no event shall the amount actually distributed or made available to any distributee include net unrealized appreciation in securities of the employer corporation attributable to the amount contributed by the employee. Such net unrealized appreciation and the resulting adjustments to basis of such securities shall also be determined in accordance with regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) Treatment of beneficiary of trust not exempt under subsection (a). Contributions to a trust made by an employer during a taxable year of the employer which ends within or with a taxable year of the trust for which the trust is not exempt under section 165 (a) shall be included in the gross income of an employee for the taxable year in which the contribution is made to the trust in the case of an employee whose beneficial interest in such contribution is nonforfeitable at the time the contribution is made.

(d) Certain employees' annuities. Notwithstanding subsection (c), or any other provision of this chapter, a contribution to a trust by an employer shall not be included in the income of the employee in the year in which the contribution is made if—

(1) Such contribution is to be applied by the trustee for the purchase of annuity contracts for the benefit of such employee;

(2) Such contribution is made to the trustee pursuant to a written agreement entered into prior to October 21, 1942, between the employer and the trustee, or between the employer and employee; and

(3) Under the terms of the trust agreement the employee is not entitled during his lifetime, except with the consent of the trustee, to any payments under annuity contracts purchased by the trustee other than annuity payments.

The amount so contributed by the employer shall not constitute consideration paid by the employee for such annuity contract in determining the amount of annuity payments required to be included in his gross income under section 22 (b) (2); except that if the tax imposed by this chapter for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1949, has been paid by the employee with respect to such contribution for such year, and not credited or refunded, the amount so contributed for such year shall constitute consideration paid by the employee for such annuity contract. This subsection shall have no application with respect to amounts contributed to a trust after June 1, 1949, if the trust on such date was exempt under subsection (a). For the purposes of this subsection, amounts paid by an employer for the purchase of annuity contracts which are transferred to the trustee shall be deemed to be contributions made to a trust or trustee and contributions applied by the trustee for the purchase of annuity contracts; the term "annuity contracts purchased by the trustee" shall include annuity contracts so purchased by the employer and transferred to the trustee; and the term "employee" shall include only a person who was in the employ of the employer, and was covered by the agreement referred to in paragraph (2), prior to October 21, 1942.

(d) Taxable years to which amendments applicable. The amendments made by this section shall be applicable as to both employer and employees only with respect to taxable years of the employer beginning after December 31, 1941, except that—* * *

(2) A stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan—* * *

(B) put into effect after December 31, 1944, shall be considered as satisfying the requirements of section 165 (a) (3), (4), (5) and (6) for the period beginning with the date on which it was put into effect and ending with the 15th day of the third month following the close of the taxable year of the employer in which the plan was put in effect, if all provisions of the plan which are necessary to satisfy such requirements are in effect by the end of such period and have been made effective for all purposes with respect to the whole of such period.

[Sec. 162 (d) (2) as amended by sec. 2 (b), Pub. Law 511 (78th Cong.)]

§ 39.165-1 Employees' trusts—(a) In general. (1) In order that a trust may be exempt under section 165 (a) it must be part of a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries. The trust must be formed and availed of solely to aid in the proper execution of a plan which is a definite written program and arrangement communicated to the employees, solely designed and applied to enable such employees or their beneficiaries to share in the capital or profits of such employer's trade or business or to provide for the livelihood of such employees or their beneficiaries after the retirement of such employees. As to inclusion of full-time life insurance salesmen within the class of persons considered to be employees, see section 3797 (a) (20)

(2) A pension plan within the meaning of section 165 (a) is a plan established and maintained by an employer primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to his employees over a period of years, usually for life, after retirement. Retirement benefits generally are measured by, and based on, such factors as years of service and compensation received by the employees. The determination of the amount of retirement benefits and the contributions to provide such benefits are not dependent upon profits. Benefits are not definitely determinable if funds arising from forfeitures on termination of service, or other reason, may be used to provide increased benefits for the remaining participants instead of being used to reduce the amount of contributions by the employer. A plan designed to provide benefits for employees or their beneficiaries to be paid upon retirement or over a period of years after retirement will, for the purposes of section 165 (a) be considered a pension plan if under the plan either the benefits payable to the employee or the required contributions by the employer can be determined actuarially. A profit-sharing plan, on the other hand, is a plan established and maintained by an employer to provide for the participation in his profits, by his employees or their beneficiaries, based on a definite predetermined formula for determining the profits to be shared and a definite predetermined formula for distributing the funds accumulated under the plan after a fixed number of years, the attainment of a stated age, or upon the prior occurrence of some event such as illness, disability, retirement, death, or severance of employment. A formula for determining the profits to be shared is definite, for example, if it provides for a contribution equal to (i) a specified percentage of the annual profits, (ii) a specified percentage of the sum of dividend commitments plus a fixed amount with an over-all limitation, or (iii) a specified percentage of the annual profits not to exceed a specified percentage of the salaries of the participants or their contributions, if any, to the fund. A formula for distributing the accumulated funds among the participants is definite, for example, if it provides for a distribution in proportion to the basic compensation of each participant. A stock bonus plan is a plan established and maintained by an employer to provide benefits similar to that of a profit-sharing plan except that the contributions by the employer are not necessarily dependent upon profits and the benefits are distributable in stock of the employer company. Such a plan, with respect to determining and distributing the stock of the employer which is to be shared among his employees or their beneficiaries, is subject to the same requirements as in the case of a profit-sharing plan. A stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan, as used in section 165 (a) does not include any plan which is primarily a dismissal wage plan.

(3) The term "plan" implies a permanent as distinguished from a temporary program. While the employer may reserve the right to change or terminate the plan, and to discontinue contributions thereunder, if the plan is abandoned for any cause other than business necessity within a few years after it has taken effect, this will be evidence that the plan from its inception was not a bona fide program for the exclusive benefit of employees in general. Especially will this be true in the case of a pension plan under which pensions were fully funded for the highly paid employees or others in favor of whom discrimination is prohibited under section 165 (a), and which was abandoned soon after the pensions for such favored employees had been provided. The permanency of the plan will be indicated by all of the surrounding facts and circumstances, including the likelihood of the employer's ability to continue contributions as provided under the plan. In the event a plan is abandoned, the employer should promptly notify the district director of internal revenue (Commissioner, before January 1, 1954), stating the circumstances which led to the discontinuance of the plan.

(4) If the plan is so designed as to amount to a subterfuge for the distribution of profits to shareholders, even if other employees who are not shareholders are included under the plan, it will not qualify as a plan for the exclusive benefit of employees. The plan must benefit the employees in general, although it need not provide benefits for all of the employees. Among the employees to be benefited may be persons who are officers and shareholders. However, a plan is not for the exclusive benefit of employees in general if it discriminates either in eligibility requirements, contributions, or benefits by any device whatever in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, persons whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or the highly compensated employees. See section 165 (a) (3) (4) and (5) Neither is a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan for the exclusive benefit of employees in general if the funds therein may be used to relieve the employer from contributing to a pension plan operating concurrently and covering the same employees. All of the surrounding and attendant circumstances and the details of the plan will be indicative of whether it is a bona fide stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan for the exclusive benefit of employees in general. The law is concerned not so much with the form of any plan as it is with its effects in operation. For example, in section 165 (a) (5) the law specifies certain provisions, which of themselves are not discriminatory, but this does not mean that a plan containing these provisions may not be discriminatory in actual operation.

(5) A plan is for the exclusive benefit of employees or their beneficiaries even though it may cover former employees as well as present employees and employees who are temporarily on leave, as, for example, in the military or naval forces. A plan covering only former employees may qualify under section 165 (a) if it complies with the provisions of section 165 (a) (3) (B) with respect to coverage, and section 165 (a) (4) with respect to contributions and benefits, as applied to all of the former employees. The term "beneficiaries" of an employee within the meaning of section 165 includes the estate of the employee, dependents of the employee, persons who are the natural objects of the employee's bounty, and any persons designated by the employee to share in the benefits of the plan after the death of the employee.

(6) No specific limitations are provided in section 165 (a) with respect to investments which may be made by the trustees of a trust qualifying under section 165 (a) The contributions may be used by the trustees to purchase any investments permitted by the trust agreement, to the extent allowed by local law. Where, however, the trust funds are invested in stock or securities of the employer, full disclosure must be made of the reasons for such arrangement and of the conditions under which such investments are made in order that a determination may be made whether the trust serves any purpose other than constituting part of a plan for the exclusive benefit of employees.

(b) Portions of years; affiliated corporations. An exempt status must be maintained throughout the entire taxable year of the trust in order for the trust to obtain any exemption for such year. But see section 165 (a) (6) and § 39.165-3. A trust forming part of a plan of affiliated corporations for their employees may be exempt if all the requirements are otherwise satisfied.

(c) Proof of exemption. Every trust claiming exemption must prove its right thereto by filing with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the trust is located (Commissioner if filed before January 1, 1954) the information required under § 39.23 (p)-2 in order to show that the trust forms part of a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries, which plan meets the requirements of section 165 (a). Such information must be filed for each taxable year of the trust with respect to which this section is applicable, except that, where the information required by § 39.23 (p)-2 for a particular taxable year has been filed by the employer and he so notifies the trustee, the trustee, in lieu of the information required under § 39.23 (p)-2, may file with the district director (Commissioner if filed before January 1, 1954) the following information: (1) The names and addresses of the parties to the trust agreement and the date thereof; (2) the taxable year involved; (3) a copy of the notification from the employer with respect to the filing of such information; (4) the office of the district director of internal revenue in which the employer files his returns; and (5) a request for exemption of the trust under section 165 (a)

§ 39.165-2 Impossibility of diversion under the trust instrument—(a) In general. Under section 165 (a) (2) a trust is not exempt unless under the trust instrument it is impossible (in the taxable year and at any time thereafter prior to the satisfaction of all liabilities to employees or their beneficiaries covered by the trust) for any part of the trust corpus or income to be used for, or diverted to, purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of such employees or their beneficiaries. As used in section 165 (a) (2) the phrase "if under the trust instrument it is impossible" means that the trust instrument must definitely and affirmatively make it impossible for the nonexempt diversion or use to occur, whether by operation or natural termination of the trust, by power of revocation or amendment, by the happening of a contingency, by collateral arrangement, or by any other means. It is not essential that the employer relinquish all power to modify or terminate the rights of certain employees covered by the trust, but it must be impossible for the trust funds to be used or diverted for purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries. As used in section 165 (a) (2) the phrase "purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of his employees or their beneficiaries" includes all objects or aims not solely designed for the proper satisfaction of all liabilities to employees or their beneficiaries covered by the trust.

(b) Meaning of "liabilities" The intent and purpose in section 165 (a) (2) of the phrase "prior to the satisfaction of all liabilities with respect to employees and their beneficiaries under the trust" is to permit the employer to reserve the right to recover at the termination of the trust, and only at such termination, such balance in the trust as is due to erroneous actuarial computations during the previous life of the trust. A balance due to an "erroneous acturial computation" is the surplus arising because actual requirements differ from the expected requirements based upon previous actuarial valuations of liabilities or determinations of costs of providing pension benefits under the plan in accordance with reasonable assumptions as to mortality, interest, etc., and correct procedures relating to the method of funding, all as made by a careful person skilled in calculating the amounts necessary to satisfy pecuniary obligations of such a nature. For example, a trust has accumulated assets of $1,000,000 at the time of liquidation, determined by acceptable actuarial procedures using reasonable assumptions as to interest, mortality, etc., as being necessary to provide the benefits in accordance with the provisions of the plan. Upon such liquidation it is found that $950,000 will satisfy all of the liabilities under the plan. The surplus of $50,000 arises, therefore, because of the difference between the amounts actuarially determined and the amounts actually required to satisfy the liabilities. This $50,000, therefore, is the amount which may be returned to the employer as the result of an erroneous actuarial computation. If, however, the surplus of $50,000 had been accumulated as a result of a change in the benefit provisions or in the eligibility requirements of the plan, the $50,000 could not revert to the employer because such surplus would not be the result of an erroneous actuarial calculation. The term "liabilities" as used in section 165 (a) (2) includes both fixed and contingent obligations to employees. For example, if 1,000 employees are covered by a trust forming part of a pension plan, 300 of whom have satisfied all the requirements for a monthly pension, while the remaining 700 employees have not yet completed the required period of service, contingent obligations to such 700 employees have nevertheless arisen which constitute "liabilities" within the meaning of that term. It must be impossible for the employer (or other nonemployee) to recover any amounts other than such amounts as remain in the trust because of "erroneous actuarial computations" after the satisfaction of all fixed and contingent obligations, and the trust instrument must contain a definite affirmative provision to that effect, whether the obligations to employees have their source in the trust instrument itself, in the plan of which the trust forms a part, or in some collateral instrument or arrangement forming a part of such plan, and whether such obligations are, technically speaking, liabilities of the employer, of the trust, or of some other person forming a part of the plan or connected with it.

§ 39.165-3 Requirements as to coverage. (a) (1) In order to insure that stock bonus, pension, and profit-sharing plans are utilized for the welfare of employees in general, and to prevent the trust device from being used for the principal benefit of shareholders, officers, persons whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly paid employees, or as a means of tax avoidance, a trust will not be exempt unless it is part of a plan which satisfies the coverage requirements of section 165 (a) (3) The percentage requirements in section 165 (a) (3) (A) refer to a percentage of all the active employees, including employees temporarily on leave, such as those in the armed forces of the United States, if such employees are eligible under the plan.

(2) The application of section 165 (a) (3) (A) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. An employer adopts a plan at a time when he has 1,000 employees. The plan provides that all full-time employees who have been in the employment for a period of two years and have reached the age of 30 shall be eligible to participate. The plan also requires the participating employees to agree to contribute 3 percent of their monthly pay. At the time the plan is made effective 100 of the 1,000 employees had not been in the employment for a period of two years. Fifty of the employees were seasonal employees whose customary employment was for not more than five months in any calendar year. Twenty-five of the employees were part-time employees whose customary employment was for not more than 20 hours in any one week. One hundred and fifty of the full-time employees who had been employed for two years or more had not yet reached age 30. Section 165 (a) (3) (A) will be met if 540 employees are covered by the plan, as shown by the following computation:

(i) Total employees with respect to which the percentage requirements are applicable (1,000 minus 175 (100 plus 50 plus 25))	825
(ii) Employees not eligible to participate because of age requirements	150
(iii) Total employees eligible to participate	675
(iv) Percentage of employees in item (i) eligible to participate	.81+
(v) Minimum number of participating employees to qualify the plan (80 percent of 675)	540

If only 70 percent, or 578, of the 825 employees satisfied the age and service requirements, then 462 (80 percent of 578) participating employees would satisfy the percentage requirements.

(b) If a plan fails to qualify under the percentage requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (A) it may still qualify under section 165 (a) (3) (B) provided always that (as required by section 165 (a) (3) and (4)) the plan's eligibility conditions, benefits, and contributions do not discriminate in favor of employees who are officers, shareholders, persons whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or the highly compensated employees.

(c) Section 165 (a) (5) sets out certain classifications that will not in themselves be considered discriminatory. However, those so designated are not intended to be exclusive. Thus, plans may qualify under section 165 (a) (3) (B) which are limited to employees who have reached a designated age or have been in the employment for a designated number of years or are employed in certain designated departments or are in other classifications: Provided, That the effect of covering only such employees is not to discriminate in favor of officers, shareholders, employees whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly compensated employees. For example, if there are 1,000 employees, and the plan is written for only salaried employees, and consequently only 500 employees are covered, that fact alone will not justify the conclusion that the plan does not meet the coverage requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (B) provided the classification as established does not discriminate in favor of shareholders, officers, employees whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, and the highly paid employees. If a contributory plan is offered to all of the employees, but the requirement of contribution by the employee participants is so burdensome as to make the plan acceptable only to the highly paid employees, the classification will be considered discriminatory in favor of such highly paid employees.

(d) Section 165 (a) (5) contains a provision to the effect that a classification shall not be considered discriminatory within the meaning of section 165 (a) (3) (B) merely because there are excluded from the plan employees the whole of whose annual remuneration constitutes wages under section 1426 (a) (1) (for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act) This provision, in conjunction with section 165 (a) (3) (B) is intended to permit the qualification of plans which supplement the social security program. A classification which excludes all employees the whole of whose remunerations constitutes wages under section 1426 (a) (1) or a classification including such employees in a plan under which the contributions or benefits based on that part of an employee's remuneration which is excluded from wages under section 1426 (a) (1) differs from the contributions or benefits based on the employee's remuneration not so excluded, will not be a discriminatory classification merely because of such exclusion or difference. However, in making his determination with respect to discrimination in classification under section 165 (a) (3) (B) the Commissioner will consider whether the total benefits resulting to each employee under the plan and under the Social Security Act, or under the Social Security Act only, establish an integrated and correlated retirement system satisfying the tests of section 165 (a) Thus, a classification of employees under any plan which results in relatively or proportionately greater benefits for employees earning above any specified salary amount or rate than for those below such salary amount or rate may be found to be discriminatory within the meaning of section 165 (a) (3) (B) unless such relative or proportionate differences in benefits as between employees resulting from such classification are approximately offset by the retirement benefits provided by the Social Security Act. For this purpose the total Social Security Act benefits of an employee, in view of the supplementary benefits provided by such law, may be considered as 150 percent of the primary insurance benefit provided thereby. A plan supplementing the Social Security Act and excluding employees the whole of whose annual remuneration constitutes wages under section 1426 (a) (1) will not, however, be deemed discriminatory merely because for administrative convenience, it provides a reasonable minimum benefit not to exceed $20 a month. Similar considerations, to the extent applicable in any case, will govern classifications under plans supplementing the benefits provided by other Federal or State laws. See section 165 (a) (5)

(e) An employer may designate several trusts or a trust or trusts and an annuity plan or plans as constituting one plan which is intended to qualify under section 165 (a) (3) in which case all of such trusts and plans taken as a whole may meet the requirements of such section. The fact that such combination of trusts and plans fails to qualify as one plan does not prevent such of the trusts and plans as qualify from meeting the requirements of section 165 (a).

(f) It is provided in section 165 (a) (6) that a plan will satisfy the requirements of section 165 (a) (3), if on at least one day in each quarter of the taxable year of the plan it satisfies such requirements. This makes it possible for a new plan requiring contributions from employees to qualify if by the end of the quarter-year in which the plan is adopted it secures sufficient contributing participants to meet the requirements of section 165 (a) (3). It also affords a period of time in which new participants may be secured to replace former participants, so as to meet the requirements of either subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 165 (a) (3)

§ 39.165-4 Discrimination as to contributions or benefits. (a) To be exempt under section 165 (a) a trust must not only meet the coverage requirements of section 165 (a) (3), but, as provided in section 165 (a) (4), it must also be part of a plan under which there is no discrimination in contributions or benefits in favor of officers, shareholders, employees whose principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees, or highly compensated employees as against other employees whether within or without the plan. Funds in a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan arising from forfeitures on termination of service, or other reason, must not be allocated to the remaining participants in such a manner as will effect the prohibited discrimination. With respect to forfeitures in a pension plan, see § 39.165-1 (a) Section 165 (a) (5) sets out certain provisions which will not in and of themselves be discriminatory within the meaning of section 165 (a) (3) or (4). See § 39.165-3. Thus, a plan will not be considered discriminatory merely because the contributions or benefits bear a uniform relationship to total compensation, or to the basic or regular rate of compensation, or merely because the contributions or benefits based on that part of the annual compensation of employees subject to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act differ from the contributions or benefits based on the excess of such annual compensation over such part. The exceptions specified in section 165 (a) (5) are not an exclusive enumeration, but a recital of provisions frequently encountered which will not of themselves constitute forbidden discrimination in contributions or benefits. Variations in contributions or benefits may be provided so long as the plan, viewed as a whole for the benefit of employees in general, with all its attendant circumstances, does not discriminate in favor of employees within the enumerations with respect to which discrimination is prohibited. Thus, benefits in a stock bonus or profit-sharing plan which vary by reason of a distribution formula which takes into consideration years of service, or other factors, are not prohibited unless they discriminate in favor of such employees.

(b) A plan which excludes employees, the whole of whose remuneration constitutes wages under section 1426 (a) (1) (relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act) or a plan in which the contributions or benefits based on that part of an employee's remuneration which is excluded from wages under such law differs from contributions or benefits based on the employee's remuneration not so excluded, or a plan in which the contributions or benefits differ because of any retirement benefit created under State or Federal law, will not be discriminatory because of such exclusion or difference, provided the total benefits resulting under the plan and under such law establish an integrated and correlated retirement system satisfying the tests of section 165 (a)

(c) Although a plan may provide for termination at will by the employer, this will not of itself prevent a trust from qualifying as exempt under section 165 (a) However, in certain cases that fact may necessitate some provision in the plan which will preclude such termination from effecting the prohibited discriminations. This may occur where, for example, certain officers or highly compensated employees are at the inception of the plan within a few years of retirement age and the operation of the plan will fund and vest their benefits in a short period, thus resulting in such discrimination in favor of such officers or highly compensated employees.

§ 39.165-5 Period for which requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (4) (5), and (6) are applicable. A pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus or annuity plan shall be considered as satisfying the requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (4), (5) and (6) for the period beginning with the date on which it was put into effect and ending with the 15th day of the third month following the close of the taxable year of the employer in which the plan was put into effect, if all the provisions of the plan which are necessary to satisfy such requirements are in effect by the end of such period and have been made effective for all purposes with respect to the whole of such period. Thus, if an employer in 1952 adopts such a plan as of January 1, 1952, and makes a return on the basis of the calendar year, he will have until March 15, 1953, to amend his plan so as to make it satisfy the requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (4), (5) and (6) for the calendar year 1952 provided that by March 15, 1953, all provisions of such plan necessary to satisfy such requirements are in effect and have been made retroactive for all purposes to January 1, 1952, the effective date of the plan. If an employer is on a fiscal year basis, for example, April 1 to March 31, and in 1952 adopts such a plan effective as of April 1, 1952, he will have until June 15, 1953, to amend his plan so as to make it satisfy the requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (4) (5) and (6) for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1952, and ending March 31, 1953: Provided, That by June 15, 1953, all provisions of such plan necessary to satisfy such requirements are in effect and have been made retroactive for all purposes to April 1, 1952, the effective date of the plan.

§ 39.165-6 Taxability of beneficiary under a trust which meets the requirements of section 165 (a)—(a) In general. (1) Section 165 (b) (c) and (d) relates to the taxation of the beneficiary of an employees' trust. If an employer makes a contribution for the benefit of an employee to a trust for the taxable year of the employer which ends within or with a taxable year of the trust for which the trust is exempt under section 165 (a) the employee is not required to include such contribution in his income except in the year or years in which such contribution is distributed or made available to him. For rules providing for exclusion from income in the year of distribution of amounts representing unrealized appreciation in the value of securities of the employer corporation, see paragraph (b) of this section. It is immaterial in the case of contributions to an exempt trust whether the employee's rights in the contributions to the trust are forfeitable or nonforfeitable either at the time the contribution is made to the trust or thereafter. The distribution from such an exempt trust when received or made available will be taxable to him as if it were an annuity to the extent provided in section 22 (b) (2) The provisions of section 165 (b) relate only to distributions by a trust which is exempt under section 165 (a) for the taxable year of the trust in which the distribution is made. If a trust is exempt for the taxable year in which the distribution occurs, but was not so exempt for one or more prior taxable years, the amount of any such taxable distribution may be reduced by the part thereof shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be properly allocable to employer's contributions or earnings of the trust previously accounted for as taxable income by the employee or to earnings of the trust previously accounted for as taxable income by the trust. Where the distribution occurs in a taxable year of the trust for which it is not exempt under section 165 (a) the taxability of such distribution will depend on the taxable status of the trust under other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code at the time of the distribution. If such trust was not exempt for one or more prior taxable years, the adjustments outlined above may be made in connection with any distribution.

(2) If a trust exempt under section 165 (a) purchases an annuity contract for an employee and distributes it to the employee in a year for which the trust is exempt, the contract containing a cash surrender value which may be available to an employee by surrendering the contract, such cash surrender value will not be considered income to the employee unless and until the contract is surrendered.

(3) (i) Except as provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-2, if pension or annuity payments are continued after the death of a retired employee to his beneficiary, such beneficiary will be required to include such pension or annuity payments in income to the same extent that the deceased employee would have been required to include such payments in income had he lived to receive such payments. See also section 126 (a) If the trust purchases under the plan retirement income insurance with life insurance protection payable upon the death of the employee participants, so much of the premiums as was paid from the contributions of the employer or earnings thereon for such life insurance protection will constitute income to the employee for the year or years in which the contributions or earnings are applied to the purchase of such life insurance. If the amount payable upon death at any time during the year exceeds the cash value (or if no cash value, then the reserve) of the insurance policy at the end of the year, the entire amount of such excess will be considered current life insurance protection. The cost of such insurance will be considered to be the 1-year term premium for such amount based upon the rates of the company issuing the annuity contract (or if no 1-year term policy is issued, the cost of such 1-year term computed by using the same mortality table and rate of interest and rate of loading as was used in determining the rates for the annuity contract)

(ii) The determination of the cost of life insurance protection may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A policy is purchased by an employer for an employee 35 years of age, providing an annuity of $100 per month upon retirement at age 65, with a minimum death benefit of $10,000. The level annual premium for the policy is $436.40. The insurance payable if death occurred in the first year would be $10,000. The cash value at the end of the first year is 0. The net insurance is therefore $10,000 minus 0, or $10,000. Assuming that the 1-year term premium for the same insurance company is $12.15 per $1,000, the premium for $10,000 of life insurance is therefore $121.50, and this is the amount to be reported as income by the employee for the year. The balance of $314.90 is the amount contributed for the annuity, which is not taxable to the employee under a plan meeting the requirements of section 165 (a), except as provided under section 165 (b). Assuming that the cash value at the end of the second year is $480, the net insurance would then be $9,520 for the second year. With a 1-year term rate of $12.33 (age 36), the amount to be reported as income to the employee would be $117.38. Any amounts paid under an annuity contract as a death benefit, not in the nature of life insurance, shall be included in the income of the beneficiary when received, and is not excluded from income under section 22 (b) (1).

(4) If the total distributions payable with respect to any employee under a trust that in the year of distribution is exempt under section 165 (a) are paid to the distributee within one taxable year of the distributee on account of the employee's separation from the service, the amount of such distribution, to the extent it exceeds the amount contributed by the employee, shall be considered a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. For example, if, under a profit-sharing trust, the total distributions to which an employee is entitled are paid, in a taxable year of the trust for which it is exempt, to the employee in the year in which he retires or severs his connection with his employer, or to his widow if he dies during the course of his employment, the amount received by the employee or widow to the extent it exceeds the employee's contributions will be considered a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months, to be treated as provided in section 117 (b) See, however, paragraph (b) of this section for rules relating to exclusion from such excess of amounts representing net unrealized appreciation in the value of securities of the employer corporation. As to adjustments if the trust was not exempt for one or more taxable years prior to the year of distribution, see paragraph (a) (1) of this section.

(5) See also § 39.22 (b) (1)-2 as to the limited exclusion from income of death benefits made by or on behalf of an employer in pursuance of an express contract and paid by reason of the death of an employee.

(b) Distributions including securities of the employer corporation—(1) In general. (i) If a trust exempt under section 165 (a) makes a distribution to a distributee, and such distribution includes securities of the employer corporation, there shall be excluded for purposes of computing the amount of such distribution includible in the distributee's income in the year of distribution net unrealized appreciation in such securities to the following extent:

(a) If the distribution constitutes a total distribution to which the rules of paragraph (a) (4) of this section are applicable, the amount to be excluded is the entire net unrealized appreciation attributable to that part of the total distribution which consists of securities of the employer corporation; and

(b) If the distribution is other than a total distribution to which paragraph (a) (4) of this section is applicable, the amount to be excluded is that portion of the net unrealized appreciation in the securities of the employer corporation which is attributable to the amount considered to be contributed by the employee to the purchase of such securities.

The amount of net unrealized appreciation which is excludible under the rules of subdivisions (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph shall not be included in the basis of the securities in the hands of the distributee at the time of distribution for purposes of determining gain or loss on subsequent disposition. In the case of a total distribution the amount of net unrealized appreciation which is not included in the basis of the securities in the hands of the distributee at the time of distribution shall be considered to the extent realized in a subsequent taxable transaction as a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months. However, if the net gain realized by the distributee exceeds the amount of the net unrealized appreciation, such excess shall constitute a long-term or short-term capital gain depending upon the holding period of the securities in the hands of the distributee.

(ii) For purposes of section 165 (b) and of this section, the term "securities" means only shares of stock and bonds or debentures issued by a corporation with interest coupons or in registered form, and the term "securities of the employer corporation" includes securities of a parent or subsidiary corporation (as defined in section 130A (d) (2) and (3) relating to employee stock options) of the employer corporation.

(2) Determination of net unrealized appreciation. (i) The amount of net unrealized appreciation in securities of the employer corporation which are distributed by the trust is to be determined by reference to the cost or other basis to the trust of such securities and by reference to the market value of such securities at the time of distribution. Thus, if a distribution consists in part of securities which have appreciated in value and in part of securities which have depreciated in value, the net unrealized appreciation shall be considered to consist of the net increase in value of all of the securities included in the distribution. For this purpose, two or more distributions made by a trust to a distributee in a single taxable year of the distributee shall be treated as a single distribution.

(ii) The determination of the cost or other basis to the trust of a distributed security of the employer corporation, for purposes of determining net unrealized appreciation thereon, shall be made in accordance with whichever of the following rules is applicable:

(a) If a security was, at the time of purchase by, or contribution to, the trust, earmarked for the account of a particuler employee so that the cost or other basis of such security to the trust is reflected in the account of such employee, such cost or other basis shall be used.

(b) If as of the close of each taxable year of the trust (or other specified period of time not in excess of 12 consecutive calendar months) the trust allocates among the accounts of participating employees all securities acquired by the trust during the period (exclusive of securities unallocated under a plan providing for allocation in whole shares only) the cost or other basis to the trust of any securities allocated as of the close of a particular allocation period shall be the average cost or other basis to the trust of all securities of the same type which were purchased or otherwise acquired by the trust during such allocation period. For purposes of determining the average cost to the trust of securities included in a subsequent allocation, the actual cost to the trust of the securities unallocated as of the close of a prior allocation period shall be deemed to be the average cost or other basis to the trust of securities of the same type allocated as of the close of such prior allocation period.

(c) In a case where neither (a) nor (b) is applicable, if the trust fund, or a specified portion thereof, is invested exclusively in one particular type of security of the employer corporation, and if during the period the distributee participated in the plan none of such securities has been sold except for the purpose of paying benefits under the trust or for the purpose of enabling the trustee to obtain funds with which to exercise rights which have accrued to the trust, the cost or other basis to the trust of all securities distributed to such distributee shall be the total amount credited to the account of such distributee (or such portion thereof as was available for investment in such securities) reduced by the amount available for investment but uninvested on the date of distribution. If at the time of distribution to a particular distributee a portion of the amount credited to his account is forfeited, appropriate adjustment shall be made with respect thereto in determining the cost or other basis to the trust of the securities distributed.

(d) (1) In all other cases, there shall be used the average cost (or other basis) to the trust of all securities of the employer corporation of the type distributed to the distributee which the trust has on hand at the time of the distribution, or which the trust had on hand on a specified inventory date which date does not precede the date of distribution by more than twelve calendar months. If a distribution includes securities of the employer corporation of more than one type, the average cost (or other basis) to the trust of each type of security distributed shall be determined. The average cost to the trust of securities of the employer corporation on hand on a specified inventory date (or on hand at the time of distribution) shall be computed on the basis of their actual cost, considering the securities most recently purchased to be those on hand, or by means of a moving average calculated by subtracting from the total cost of securities on hand immediately preceding a particular sale or distribution an amount computed by multiplying the number of securities sold or distributed by the average cost of all securities on hand preceding such sale or distribution.

(2) These methods of computing average cost may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a distributee who makes his income tax returns on the basis of a calendar year, receives on August 1, 1952, in a total distribution, to which paragraph (a) (4) of this section is applicable, ten shares of class D stock of the employer corporation. On July 1, 1952 (the specified inventory date of the trust) the trust had on hand 80 shares of class D stock. The average cost of the 10 shares distributed, on the basis of the actual cost method, is $100 computed as follows:

Shares	Purchase date	Cost per share	Total cost
20	June 24, 1952	$101	$2,020
40	Jan. 10, 1951	102	4,080
20	Oct. 20, 1950	95	1,900
80			8,000

Example (2). B, a distributee who makes his income tax returns on the basis of a calendar year, receives on October 30, 1952, in a total distribution, to which paragraph (a) (4) of this section is applicable, 20 shares of class E stock of the employer corporation. The specified inventory date of the trust is the last day of each calendar year. The trust had on hand on December 31, 1950, 1,000 shares of class E stock of the employer corporation. During the calendar year 1951 the trust distributed to four distributees a total of 100 shares of such stock and acquired, through a number of purchases, a total of 120 shares. The average cost of the 20 shares distributed to B, on the basis of the moving average method, is $52 computed as follows:

	Shares	Total cost	Average cost
On hand December 31, 1950	1,000	$50,000	$50
Distributed during 1951 at average cost of $50	100	5,000
	900	45,000
Purchased during 1951	120	8,040
On hand December 31, 1951	1,020	53,040	52

(3) Unrealized appreciation attributable to employee contributions. In any case in which it is necessary to determine the amount of net unrealized appreciation in securities of the employer corporation which is attributable to contributions made by an employee:

(i) The cost or other basis of the securities to the trust and the amount of net unrealized appreciation shall first be determined in accordance with the rules in paragraph (b) (2) of this section;

(ii) The amount contributed by the employee to the purchase of the securities shall be solely the portion of his actual contributions to the trust properly allocable to such securities, and shall not include any part of the increment in the trust fund expended in the purchase of the securities;

(iii) The amount of net unrealized appreciation in the securities distributed which is attributable to the contributions of the employee shall be that proportion of the net unrealized appreciation determined under the rules of paragraph (b) (2) of this section which the contributions of the employee properly allocable to such securities bear to the cost or other basis to the trust of the securities;

(iv) If a distribution consists solely of securities of the employer corporation, the contributions of the employee expended in the purchase of such securities shall be allocated to the securities distributed in a manner consistent with the principles set forth in paragraph (b) (2) (ii) (a) (b), (c) or (d) of this section, whichever is applicable, that is, the amount of the employee's contribution which can be identified as having been expended in the purchase of a particular security shall be allocated to such security, and the amount of such contribution which cannot be so identified shall be allocated ratably among the securities distributed. If a distribution consists in part of securities of the employer corporation and in part of cash or other property, appropriate allocation of a portion of the employee's contribution to such cash or other property shall be made unless such allocation is inconsistent with the terms of the plan or trust.

(v) The application of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A trust distributes ten shares of stock issued by the employer corporation each of which has an average cost to the trust of $100, consisting of employee contributions in the amount of $60 and employer contributions in the amount of $40, and on the date of distribution has a fair market value of $180. The portion of the net unrealized appreciation attributable to the contributions of the employee with respect to each of the shares of stock is $48 computed as follows:

(1) Value of one share of stock on distribution date	$180
(2) Employee contributions	60
(3) Employer contributions	40
(4) Total contributions	100
(5) Net unrealized appreciation	80
(6) Portion of net unrealized appreciation attributable to employee contributions, 60/100 (amount of employee contributions (item 2) over total contributions (item 4) of $80 (item 5)	48

(vi) For the purpose of determining gain or loss to the distributee in the year or years in which any share of stock referred to in the example in subdivision (v) of this subparagraph is sold or otherwise disposed of in a taxable transaction, the basis of each such share in the hands of the distributee at the time of the distribution by the trust will be $132 computed as follows:

(a) Employee contributions	$60
(b) Employer contributions (taxable as ordinary income in the year the securities were distributed)	40
(c) Portion of net unrealized appreciation attributable to employer contributions (item (5) minus item (6)) (taxable as ordinary income in the year the securities were distributed)	32
(d) Basis of stock	132

(4) Change in exempt status of trust. For principles applicable in making appropriate adjustments if the trust was not exempt for one or more years prior to the year of distribution, see paragraph (a) of this section.

§ 39.165-7 Treatment of beneficiary of a trust not exempt under section 165 (a)—(a) In general. Generally, any contribution made by an employer on behalf of an employee to a trust during a taxable year of the employer which ends within or with a taxable year of the trust for which the trust is not exempt under section 165 (a) shall be included in income of the employee for his taxable year during which the contribution is made if the employee's beneficial interest in the contribution is nonforfeitable at the time the contribution is made. But see section 165 (d) and paragraph (b) of this section. An employee's beneficial interest in the contribution is nonforfeitable within the meaning of sections 165 (c) and 23 (p) (1) (D) at the time the contribution is made if there is no contingency under the plan which may cause the employee to lose his rights in the contribution. For example, if under the terms of a pension plan, an employee upon termination of his services prior to the retirement date, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, is entitled to a deferred annuity contract to be purchased with the employer's contributions made on his behalf, or is entitled to annuity payments which the trustee is obligated to make under the terms of the trust instrument based on the contributions made by the employer on his behalf, the employee's beneficial interest in such contributions is nonforfeitable. On the other hand, if, under the terms of a pension plan, an employee will lose the right to any annuity purchased from, or to be provided by, contributions made by the employer if his services should be terminated prior to retirement, his beneficial interest in such contributions is forfeitable. The mere fact that an employee may not live to the retirement date, or may live only a short period after the retirement date, and may not be able to enjoy the receipt of annuity or pension payments, does not make his beneficial interest in the contributions made by the employer on his behalf forfeitable. If the employer's contributions have been irrevocably applied to purchase an annuity contract for the employee, or if the trustee is obligated to use the employer's contributions to provide an annuity for the employee provided only that the employee is alive on the dates the annuity payments are due, the employee's rights in the employer's contributions are nonforfeitable.

(b) Effect of section 165 (d) (1) If the requirements of section 165 (d) are met, a contribution made by an employer on behalf of an employee to a trust which is not exempt under section 165 (a) shall not be included in the income of the employee in the year in which the contribution is made. Such contribution will be taxable to the employee, when received in later years, as an annuity. (See § 39.22 (b) (2)-5.) The intent and purpose of section 165 (d) is to give those employees, covered under certain nonexempt trusts to which such section applies, essentially the same tax treatment as those covered by trusts qualifying under section 165 (a)

(2) Every person claiming the benefit of section 165 (d) must be able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that all of the provisions of such section are met. The taxpayer must produce sufficient evidence to prove:

(i) That, prior to October 21, 1942, he was employed by the particular employer making the contribution in question and was at such time definitely covered by a written agreement, entered into before October 21, 1942, between himself and the employer, or between the employer and the trustee of a trust established by the employer prior to October 21, 1942, and that the contribution by the employer was made pursuant to such agreement. The fact that an employee may have been potentially covered is not sufficient. Evidence that the employment was entered into, or the agreement executed, "as of" a date before October 21, 1942, or that the agreement or trust instrument which did not theretofore meet the requirements of section 165 (d) was modified or amended after October 20, 1942, so as to come within the provisions of such section, will not satisfy the requirements of section 165 (d)

(ii) That such contribution, pursuant to the terms of such agreement, was to be applied for the purchase of an annuity contract for the taxpayer. In the case of a contribution by the employer of an annuity contract purchased by such employer and transferred by him to the trustee of the trust, evidence should be presented to prove that such contract was purchased for the taxpayer by the employer pursuant to the terms of a written agreement between the employer and the employee or between the employer and the trustee, entered into before October 21, 1942.

(iii) That under the written terms of the trust agreement the taxpayer is not entitled during his lifetime, except with the consent of the trustee, to any payments other than annuity payments under the annuity contract or contracts purchased by the trustee or by the employer and transferred to the trustee, and that the trustee may grant or withhold such consent free from control by the taxpayer, the employer or any other person (for definition of annuity payments, see § 39.22 (b) (2)-2) However, such control will not be presumed from the fact that the trustee is himself an officer or employee of the employer. As used in section 165 (d) the phrase "if * * * under the terms of the trust agreement the employee is not entitled" means that the trust instrument must make it impossible for the prohibited distribution to occur, whether by operation or natural termination of the trust, whether by power of revocation or amendment, other than with the consent of the trustee, whether by the happening of a contingency by collateral arrangement, or any other means. It is not essential that the employer relinquish all power to modify or terminate the trust but it must be impossible, except with the consent of the trustee, for any payments under annuity contracts purchased by the trustee, or by the employer and transferred to the trustee, to be received by the taxpayer, directly or indirectly, other than as annuity payments.

(iv) The nature and amount of such contribution and the extent to which income taxes have been paid thereon before January 1, 1949, and not credited or refunded.

(v) If it is claimed that section 165 (d) applies to amounts contributed to a trust after June 1, 1949, the taxpayer must prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the trust did not, on June 1, 1949, qualify for exemption under section 165 (a) Where an employer buys an annuity contract which is transferred to the trustee, the date of the purchase of the annuity contract and not the date of the transfer to the trustee is the controlling date in determining whether or not the contribution was made to the trust after June 1, 1949.

SEC. 166. Revocable trusts. Where at any time the power to revest in the grantor title to any part of the corpus of the trust is vested—

(1) In the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom, or

(2) In any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom, then the income of such part of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

§ 39.166-1 Trusts with power to revest corpus in the grantor—(a) Scope. (1) Where the power to revest in the grantor title to any part of the corpus of a trust is vested in the grantor or in any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the corpus or the income therefrom, or both, the income of that part of the corpus subject to the power to revest is not taxable in accordance with the provisions of sections 161, 162, and 163 but remains attributable and taxable to the grantor, except as provided in sections 22 (k) and 171. This section deals with the taxation of such income. As used in this section, the term "corpus" means any part or the whole of the property, real or personal, constituting the subject matter of the trust.

(2) For rules applicable to trusts the income of which is taxable to the grantor under section 22 (a) because the grantor has retained a control of the trust so complete that he is still in practical effect the owner of its income, see § 39.22 (a)-21.

(3) For rules applicable to trusts the income of which is taxable under section 22 (a) to a person other than the grantor because of a power, exercisable solely by such other person, to vest the property or the income therefrom in himself, see § 39.22 (a)-22.

(b) Test of taxability to grantor. (1) Section 166 provides for taxability of income to the grantor by reason of the fact that he has retained power to revest the corpus in himself. For the purposes of this section, the grantor is deemed to have retained such power if he or any person not having a substantial interest in the corpus or the income therefrom adverse to the grantor, or both, may cause the title to the corpus to revest in the grantor. A bare legal interest, such as that of a trustee, is never substantial and never adverse. If the title to the corpus will revest in the grantor upon the exercise of such power, the income of the trust is attributed and taxable to the grantor (except as provided in section 22 (k) or 171) regardless of—

(i) Whether such power or ability to retake the trust corpus to the grantor's own use is effected by means of a power to revoke, to terminate, to alter or amend, or to appoint;

(ii) Whether the exercise of such power is conditioned on the precedent giving of notice or on the elapsing of a period of years, or on the happening of a specific event;

(iii) The time at which the title to the corpus will revest in the grantor in possession and enjoyment, whether such time is within the taxable year or not, or whether such time be fixed, determinable, or certain to come;

(iv) Whether the power to revest in the grantor title to the corpus is in the grantor, or in any person not having a substantial interest in the corpus or income therefrom adverse to the grantor, or in both;

(v) When the trust was created.

(2) A person may have an interest that is both substantial and adverse to the grantor in the disposition of only part of the corpus or the income therefrom. If the power to revest title in the grantor is vested in him in conjunction with such person, or is vested solely in such person, there is to be excluded in computing the net income of the grantor only the income of such part.

(c) Income and deductions. If income from the corpus of a trust is included in the gross income of the grantor under this section because of a power to revest such corpus in the grantor, he shall be allowed those deductions with respect to such corpus as he would have been entitled to had the trust not been created.

SEC. 167. Income for benefit of grantor. (a) Where any part of the income of a trust—

(1) Is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be, held or accumulated for future distribution to the grantor; or

(2) May, in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income, be distributed to the grantor; or

(3) Is, or in the discretion of the grantor or of any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such part of the income may be, applied to the payment of premiums upon policies of insurance on the life of the grantor (except policies of insurance irrevocably payable for the purposes and in the manner specified in section 23 (0), relating to the so-called "charitable contribution" deduction);

then such part of the income of the trust shall be included in computing the net income of the grantor.

(b) As used in this section the term "in the discretion of the grantor" means "in the discretion of the grantor, either alone or in conjunction with any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of the part of the income in question."

(c) Income of a trust shall not be considered taxable to the grantor under subsection (a) or any other provision of this chapter merely because such income, in the discretion of another person, the trustee, or the grantor acting as trustee or cotrustee, may be applied or distributed for the support or maintenance of a beneficiary whom the grantor is legally obligated to support or maintain, except to the extent that such income is so applied or distributed. In cases where the amounts so applied or distributed are paid out of corpus or out of other than income for the taxable year, such amounts shall be considered paid out of income to the extent of the income of the trust for such taxable year which is not paid, credited, or to be distributed under section 162 and which is not otherwise taxable to the grantor.

§ 39.167-1 Trusts in the income of which the grantor retains an interest—(a) Scope. Section 167 prescribes that the income, or any part of the income, of certain trusts shall be taxed to the grantor, not because the grantor has retained a certain interest in the corpus of the trust (as in section 166) but because of his retention of a certain interest in the income of the trust. This section deals with the taxation of such income. The term "income," as used in this section, means any part or the whole of the income of the trust.

(b) Test of taxability to the grantor. (1) The test prescribed by the Internal Revenue Code as to the sufficiency of the grantor's retained interest in the trust income, resulting in the taxation of such income to the grantor, is whether he has failed to divest himself, permanently and definitively, of every right which might, by any possibility, enable him to have such income, at some time, distributed to him, either actually or constructively. Such a distribution to the grantor occurs within the meaning of section 167 if the income is paid to him or to another (except a wife to whom such income is taxable under section 22 (k) or 171) in obedience to his direction or if the income is applied in payment of premiums upon policies of insurance on the grantor's life.

(2) For the purposes of this section, the sufficiency of the grantor's retained interest in the income is not affected by the fact that the grantor has provided that the right so to effect or direct the distribution of income is, or may at some future time be, vested in any person (either alone or in conjunction with the grantor) not having a substantial interest in the income adverse to the grantor. A bare legal interest, such as that of a trustee, is never substantial and never adverse.

(3) If the grantor has retained any such interest in the income, such income is taxable to the grantor (except as provided in section 22 (k), 167 (c) or 171) regardless of—

(i) Whether it may be distributed currently or accumulated for future distribution;

(ii) Whether such distribution, either current or subject to accumulation, is fixed by the trust instrument or is dependent on an exercise of discretion;

(iii) Whether, if such distribution is in any way affected by or dependent on an exercise of discretion, the person exercising the discretion is the grantor or a person not having a substantial interest in the income adverse to the grantor, or both;

(iv) The time or times of such distribution, whether within or without the taxable period, whether conditioned on the precedent giving of notice, or on the elapsing of an interval of time, or on the happening of a specified event, or otherwise;

(v) When the trust was created.

(4) Thus, the inclusion of any trust within the scope of section 167 is based on the fact that the grantor has retained an interest in the income therefrom by which he is, or may be enabled at some time, to receive its benefits. But the provisions of section 167 are not to be regarded as excluding from taxation to the grantor the income of other trusts, not specified therein, in which the grantor is, for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, similarly regarded as remaining in substance the owner of the trust income. See § 39.22 (a)-21.

(5) If the grantor strips himself permanently and definitively of every such interest retained by him, the income of the trust realized after such divesting takes effect is not taxable to the grantor but is taxable as provided in sections 161 and 162.

(6) A person may have an interest that is both substantial and adverse to the grantor in the disposition of only part of the income. There is to be excluded in computing the net income of the grantor only that part of the trust income in the disposition of which such person has a substantial interest adverse to the grantor.

(c) Income and deductions. If, as to any of the income, the test of taxability to the grantor is satisfied, such income shall be included in the gross income of the grantor, and he shall be allowed those deductions with respect to such income as he would have been entitled to had such income been distributable currently to him.

§ 39.167-2 Discretionary trusts for maintenance or support of certain beneficiaries. (a) Section 167 (c) provides that income shall not be taxable to the grantor under section 167 (a) or any other provision of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code merely because such income, in the discretion of another person, the trustee, or the grantor acting as trustee or cotrustee, may be applied or distributed for the support or maintenance of a beneficiary, such as the wife or child of the grantor, whom he is legally obligated to support, except to the extent that such income is actually so applied or distributed. Where income has actually been so applied, such income is taxable to the grantor, whether or not the trust income may also be applied or distributed for purposes other than the maintenance or support of a beneficiary whom the grantor is legally obligated to support.

(b) The grantor of a trust continues to be taxable under section 167 with respect to such income as may, in the discretion of persons lacking a substantial adverse interest, be applied in discharge of his obligations other than his obligation of support or maintenance falling within section 167 (c) Thus, if the grantor creates a trust, the income of which may, in the discretion of a person lacking a substantial adverse interest, be applied in the payment of the grantor's debts, including the payment of his rent or other household expenses, such income is taxable to the grantor regardless of whether it is actually so applied.

(c) Section 167 (c) is not applicable if discretion to apply or distribute the trust income rests solely in the grantor or in the grantor in conjunction with other persons unless the grantor has such discretion as trustee.

(d) Section 167 (c) does not affect the present scope of sections 22 (k) and 171 (relating to alimony and separate maintenance payments taxable to a wife or former wife) Nor does section 167 (c) alter the provisions governing the taxability of trust income to the grantor under some other provision of law, as for example, section 22 (a) See § 39.22 (a)-21.

(e) Section 167 (c) has no application where, under the terms of the trust, income is required to be applied to the support or maintenance of a beneficiary whom the grantor is legally obligated to support.

(f) Section 167 (c) provides that in those cases where amounts applied or distributed for support or maintenance of beneficiaries whom the grantor is legally obligated to support are paid out of corpus or out of other than income for the taxable year such amounts are to be considered paid out of income to the extent of the income of the trust for such taxable year which is not paid, credited, or to be distributed under section 162 and which is not otherwise taxable to the grantor. For example, a trust indenture provides for the annual payment of income, not exceeding $7,000, to the grantor's adult son whom he is not legally obligated to support; for the payment of premiums on policies of insurance on the life of the grantor in an amount not to exceed $3,000 per annum; and for the application, in the trustee's discretion, of any part of the remaining income or of corpus for the support of the grantor's minor daughter. The entire income for the taxable year is $12,000. The trustee pays $7,000 of such income to the son and $3,000 thereof for insurance premiums, and $6,000 is applied for the support of the minor daughter. The grantor is taxable under section 167 (c) with respect to $2,000 of the sum applied to the support of the daughter, whether paid out of income or out of principal ($12,000 less $7,000 paid, credited or distributed under section 162, and less $3,000 taxable to the grantor under section 167 (a) (3))

§ 39.168-169 Statutory provisions; estates and trusts; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; common trust funds.

SEC. 168. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. The amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by foreign countries or possessions of the United States shall be allowed as credit against the tax of the beneficiary of an estate or trust to the extent provided in section 131.

SEC. 169. Common trust funds—(a) Definitions. The term "common trust fund" means a fund maintained by a bank (as defined in section 104)—

(1) Exclusively for the collective investment and reinvestment of moneys contributed thereto by the bank in its capacity as a trustee, executor, administrator, or guardian; and

(2) In conformity with the rules and regulations, prevailing from time to time, of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System pertaining to the collective investment of trust funds by national banks.

(b) Taxation of common trust funds. A common trust fund shall not be subject to taxation under this chapter, subchapter A or B of chapter 2, or section 105 or 106 of the Revenue Act of 1935, 49 Stat. 1017, 1019, or chapter 6 and for the purposes of such chapters and subchapters shall not be considered a corporation.

(c) Income of participants in fund—(1) Inclusions in net income. Each participant in the common trust fund in computing its net income shall include, whether or not distributed and whether or not distributable—

(A) As part of its gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than 6 months, its proportionate share of the gains and losses of the common trust fund from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than 6 months.

(B) As part of its gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 6 months, its proportionate share of the gains and losses of the common trust fund from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 6 months.

(C) Its proportionate share of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of the common trust fund, computed as provided in subsection (d).

(2) Credit for partially exempt interest. The proportionate share of each participant in the amount of interest specified in section 25 (a) received by the common trust fund shall for the purposes of this Supplement be considered as having been received by such participant as such interest. If the common trust fund elects under section 125 to treat the premium on bonds, the interest on which is allowable as a credit under section 25 (a) (1) or (2), as amortizable, for the purposes of the preceding sentence the proportionate share of the participant of such interest received by the common trust fund shall be his proportionate share of such interest (determined without regard to this sentence) reduced by so much of the deduction under section 23 (v) as is attributable to such share.

(d) Computation of common trust fund income. The net income of the common trust fund shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except that—

(1) There shall be segregated the gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets;

(2) After excluding all items of gain and loss from sales or exchanges of capital assets, there shall be computed—

(A) An ordinary net income which shall consist of the excess of the gross income over deductions; or

(B) An ordinary net loss which shall consist of the excess of the deductions over the gross income;

(3) The so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (o) shall not be allowed.

(4) The standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa) shall not be allowed.

(e) Admission and withdrawal. No gain or loss shall be realized by the common trust fund by the admission or withdrawal of a participant. The withdrawal of any participating interest by a participant shall be treated as a sale or exchange of such interest by the participant.

(f) Returns by bank. Every bank (as defined in section 104) maintaining a common trust fund shall make a return under oath for each taxable year, stating specifically, with respect to such fund, the items of gross income and the deductions allowed by this chapter, and shall include in the return the names and addresses of the participants who would be entitled to share in the net income if distributed and the amount of the proportionate share of each participant. The return shall be sworn to as in the case of a return filed by the bank under section 52.

(g) Different taxable years of common trust fund and participant. If the taxable year of the common trust fund is different from that of a participant, the inclusions with respect to the net income of the common trust fund, in computing the net income of the participant for its taxable year shall be based upon the net income of the common trust fund for any taxable year of the common trust fund (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1939) ending within or with the taxable year of the participant.

§ 39.169–1 Common trust fund defined. (a) Under section 169 two conditions must be satisfied by a fund maintained by a bank (as defined in section 104) before such fund may be designated as a "common trust fund." These conditions are that such fund must be maintained by such a bank—

(1) Exclusively for the collective investment and reinvestment of moneys contributed thereto by the bank, whether acting alone or in conjunction with one or more co-fiduciaries, but solely in its capacity· (i) As a trustee of a trust created by will, deed, agreement, declaration of trust, or order of court, (ii) as an executor of the will of, or as an administrator of the estate of, a deceased person, or (iii) as a guardian (by whatever name known under local law) of the estate of an infant, of an incompetent individual or of an absent individual; and

(2) In conformity with the rules and regulations, prevailing from time to time, of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System pertaining to the collective investment of trust funds by national banks, whether or not the bank maintaining such fund is a national bank or a member of the Federal Reserve System.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this section and §§ 39.169–2 to 39.169–5, inclusive, the term "participant" refers to any trust or estate, the moneys of, which have been contributed to the common trust fund.

§ 39.169–2 Income of participants in common trust fund. (a) Each participant in a common trust fund is required to include in computing its net income for its taxable year within which or with which the taxable year of the fund ends, whether or not distributed and whether or not distributable:

(1) Its proportionate share of the gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months, computed as provided in § 39.169–3, as part of its gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months.

(2) Its proportionate share of the gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months, computed as provided in § 39.169–3, as part of its gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months.

(3) Its proportionate share of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of the common trust fund, computed as provided in § 39.169–3.

(b) Each participant's proportionate share in the amount of interest specified in section 25 (a) received by the common trust fund shall be deemed to have been received by such participant as such interest. (For reduction of credit for such interest on account of amortizable bond premium, see § 39.125 (c)–2.) For the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, any tax withheld at the source from income of the fund shall be deemed to have been withheld proportionately from the participants to whom such income is allocated.

(c) (1) The proportionate share of each participant in the gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months, gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months, the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss, the partially exempt interest, and the tax withheld at the source shall be determined in accordance with the method of accounting adopted by the bank in accordance with the written plan under which the common trust fund is established and administered, provided such method clearly reflects the income of each participant.

(2) The items of income and deductions are, therefore, to be allocated to the periods between valuation dates within the taxable year established by such plan in which they were realized or sustained, and the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss, gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months, and gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months computed for each such period. The proportionate shares of the participants in such items are then to be determined.

(3) The provisions of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (i) The plan of a common trust fund provides for quarterly valuation dates and for the computation and the distribution of the income upon a quarterly basis, except that there shall be no distribution of capital gains. The participants are as follows: Trusts A, B, C, and D for the first quarter; Trusts A, B, C, and E for the second quarter; and Trusts A, B, F, and G for the third and fourth quarters, the participants having equal participating interests. As computed upon the quarterly basis, the ordinary net income, the short-term capital gain, and the long-term capital loss for the taxable year were as follows:

	First quarter	Second quarter	Third quarter	Fourth quarter	Total
Ordinary net income	$200	$300	$200	$400	$1,100
Short-term capital gain	200	100	200	100	600
Long-term capital loss	100	200	100	200	600

(ii) The participants' shares of ordinary net income are as follows:

PARTICIPANTS' SHARES OF ORDINARY NET INCOME

Participant	First quarter	Second quarter	Third quarter	Fourth quarter	Total
A	$50	$75	$50	$100	$275
B	50	75	50	100	275
C	50	75			125
D	50				50
E		75			75
F			50	100	150
G			50	100	150
Total	200	300	200	400	1,100

(iii) The participants' shares of the short-term capital gain are as follows:

PARTICIPANTS' SHARES OF SHORT-TERM CAPITAL GAIN

Participant	First quarter	Second quarter	Third quarter	Fourth quarter	Total
A	$50	$25	$50	$25	$150
B	50	25	50	25	150
C	50	25			75
E		25			25
F			50	25	75
G			50	25	75
Total	200	100	200	100	600

(iv) The participants' shares of the long-term capital loss are as follows:

Participant	First quarter	Second quarter	Third quarter	Fourth quarter	Total
A	$25	$50	$25	$50	$150
B	25	50	25	50	150
D	25				25
E		50			50
F			25	50	75
G			25	50	75
Total	100	200	100	200	600

(4) If in the above example the common trust fund also had short-term capital losses and long-term capital gains, the treatment of such gains or losses would be similar to that accorded to the short-term capital gains and long-term capital losses in the above example.

(d) The provisions of sections 161, 162, 166, and 167 are applicable in determining the extent to which each participant's proportionate share of the income of the common trust fund is taxable to the participant, or to the beneficiaries or the grantor of the participant.

§ 39.169–3 Computation of common trust fund income. The net income of the common trust fund shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except that:

(b) The gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets of the common trust fund are required to be segregated. A common trust fund is not allowed the benefit of the capital loss carry-over provided by section 117 (e)

(c) The ordinary net income, that is, the excess of the gross income over the deductions, or the ordinary net loss, that is, the excess of the deductions over the gross income, shall be computed after excluding gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital-assets.

§ 39.169-4 Admission and withdrawal of participants from the common trust fund—(a) Gain or loss. The common trust fund realizes no gain or loss by the admission or withdrawal of a participant, and the basis of the assets and the period for which they are deemed to have been held by the common trust fund for the purposes of section 117 (b) are unaffected by such an admission or withdrawal. If a participant withdraws the whole or any part of its participating interest from the common trust fund, such withdrawal shall be treated as a sale or exchange by the participant of the participating interest or portion thereof which is so withdrawn. A participant is not deemed to have withdrawn any part of its participating interest in the common trust fund so as to have completed a closed transaction by reason of the segregation and administration of an investment of the fund, pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (c) (7) of section 17 of Regulation F of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, as amended, for the benefit of all the then participants in the common trust fund. Such segregated investment shall be considered as held by, or on behalf of, the common trust fund for the benefit ratably of all participants in the common trust fund at the time of segregation, and any income or loss arising from its administration and liquidation shall constitute income or loss to the common trust fund apportionable among the participants for whose benefit the investment was segregated.

(b) Basis for gain or loss upon withdrawal. The participant's gain or loss upon withdrawal of its participating interest or portion thereof shall be measured by the difference between the amount received upon such withdrawal and the basis of the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn (with proper adjustments as provided in section 113 (b) to the date of withdrawal) plus the additions prescribed in paragraph (c) of this section and minus the reductions prescribed in paragraph (d) of this section. The amount received by the participant shall be the sum of any money plus the fair market value of property (other than money) received upon such withdrawal. The basis of the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn shall be the money contributed by the participant to the common trust fund to acquire the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn. Such basis shall not be reduced on account of the segregation of any investment in the common trust fund pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (c) (7) of section 17 of Regulation F of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, as amended. For the purpose of making the adjustments, additions, and reductions with respect to basis as prescribed in this paragraph, the ward, rather than the guardian, shall be deemed to be the participant; and the grantor, rather than the trust to the extent that the income of the trust is taxable to the grantor pursuant to the provisions of section 166 or 167, shall be deemed to be the participant.

(c) Additions to basis. As prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section, in computing the gain or loss upon the withdrawal of a participating interest or portion thereof, there shall be added to the basis of the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn an amount equal to the aggregate of the following items, to the extent that they were properly allocated to the participant for a taxable year of the common trust fund, and were not distributed to the participant prior to withdrawal:

(1) Wholly exempt income of the common trust fund for any taxable year,

(2) Net income of the common trust fund for the taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, and prior to January 1, 1938,

(3) Net short-term capital gain of the common trust fund for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937,

(4) The excess of the gains over the losses recognized to the common trust fund for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937, upon sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 18 months (more than 6 months for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1941) and

(5) Ordinary net income of the common trust fund for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937.

(d) Reductions in basis. As prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section, in computing the gain or loss upon the withdrawal of a participating interest or portion thereof, the basis of the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn shall be reduced by such portions of the following items as were allocable to the participant with respect to the participating interest or portion thereof withdrawn:

(1) The amount of the excess of the allowable deductions of the common trust fund over its gross income for the taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, and before January 1, 1938, and

(2) The amount of the net short-term capital loss, net long-term capital loss, and ordinary net loss of the common trust fund for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937.

§ 39.169-5 Returns of common trust funds. A bank maintaining a common trust fund shall make a return of income of the common trust fund, regardless of the amount of its net income. If a bank maintains more than one common trust fund, a separate return shall be made for each. The return shall be made for the taxable year of the common trust fund on the form prescribed by the Commissioner, in accordance with these regulations and the instructions on the form or issued therewith. The return of a common trust fund shall state specifically with respect to the fund the items of gross income and the deductions allowed under chapter 1, and shall include each participant's name and address, the ordinary net income or loss, and its proportionate share of gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. See § 39.169-2. A copy of the plan of the common trust fund must be filed with the return. If, however, a copy of such plan has once been filed with a return, it need not again be filed if the return contains a statement showing when and where it was filed. If the plan is amended in any way after such copy has been filed, a copy of the amendment must be filed with the return for the taxable year in which the amendment was made. Each such return shall be verified in the same manner as the return filed by the bank under section 52.

SEC. 170. Net operating losses. The benefit of the deduction for net operating losses allowed by section 23 (s) shall be allowed to estates and trusts under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. The benefit of such deduction shall not be allowed to a common trust fund, but shall be allowed to the participants in the common trust fund under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.170-1 Net operating loss deduction in the case of estates, trusts, and common trust funds—(a) Estates and trusts. The net operating loss deduction allowed by section 23 (s), computed as provided by section 122, shall be available to estates and trusts generally, with the following exceptions and limitations:

(1) A net operating loss for a year for which a trust was exempt from tax under section 165 may not be used in the computation of the net operating loss carry-over.

(2) In computing gross income and deductions for the purposes of section 122, a trust shall exclude that portion of the income and deductions attributable to the grantor under section 166 and § 39.166-1 (c)

(3) An estate or trust shall not, for the purposes of section 122, avail itself of the deductions allowed by section 162.

(b) Common trust funds. The net operating loss deduction is not allowed to a common trust fund. Each participant in a common trust fund, however, will be allowed the benefits of such deduction. In the computation of such deduction a participant in a common trust fund shall take into account its pro rata share of the income and losses of the common trust fund as prescribed by § 39.189-1 in the case of partners.

SEC. 171. Income of an estate or trust in case of divorce, etc.— (a) Inclusion in gross income. There shall be included in the gross income of a wife who is divorced or legally separated under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance the amount of the income of any trust which such wife is entitled to receive and which, except for the provisions of this section, would be includible in the gross income of her husband, and such amount shall not, despite section 166, section 167, or any other provision of this chapter, be includible in the gross income of such husband. This subsection shall not apply to that part of any such income of the trust which the terms of the decree or trust instrument fix, in terms of an amount of money or a portion of such income, as a sum which is payable for the support of minor children of such husband. In case such income is less than the amount specified in the decree or instrument, for the purpose of applying the preceding sentence, such income, to the extent of such sum payable for such support, shall be considered a payment for such support.

(b) Wife considered a beneficiary. For the purposes of computing the net income of the estate or trust and the net income of the wife described in section 22 (k) or subsection (a) of this section, such wife shall be considered as the beneficiary specified in this supplement. A periodic payment under section 22 (k) to any part of which the provisions of this supplement are applicable shall be included in the gross income of the beneficiary in the taxable year in which under this supplement such part is required to be included.

§ 39.171-1 Income of trust in case of divorce, etc.—(a) In general. (1) Section 171 (a) provides rules in certain cases for taxability of income of trusts as between spouses who are divorced or legally separated under a court order or decree. In such cases, the spouse actually entitled to receive payments from the trust is considered the beneficiary rather than the spouse in discharge of whose obligation such payments are made. For convenience, the beneficiary spouse will hereafter in this section and in § 39.171-2 be referred to as the "wife" and the obligor spouse from whom she is divorced or legally separated as the "husband." (See section 3797 (a) (17).) Thus, under section 171 (a) income of a trust—

(i) Which is paid, credited or to be distributed to the wife in a taxable year of the wife, and

(ii) Which, except for the provisions of section 171, would be includible in the gross income of her husband, shall be includible in her gross income and shall not be includible in his gross income.

(2) Section 171 (a) does not apply in any case to which section 22 (k) applies. Although section 171 (a) and section 22 (k) seemingly cover some of the same situations, there are important differences between them. Thus, section 171 (a) applies, for example, to a trust created before the divorce or separation and not in contemplation of it, while section 22 (k) applies only if the creation of the trust or payments by a previously created trust are in discharge of a legal obligation imposed upon or assumed by the husband (or made specific) under the court decree or an instrument incident to the divorce or legal separation. On the other hand, section 22 (k) requires inclusion in the wife's income of the full amount of periodic payments received attributable to property in trust (whether or not out of trust income), while section 171 (a) requires amounts paid, credited or to be distributed to her to be included only to the extent such amounts are out of income of the trust for its taxable year (determined as provided in section 162).

(3) Section 171 (a) is designed to produce uniformity as between cases described in section 171 (a) and cases not described in section 171 (a) where, in the former cases, without section 171 (a), the income of a so-called alimony trust would be taxable to the husband because of his continuing obligation to support his former wife, and where, in the latter cases, the income of a so-called alimony trust is taxable to the former wife because of the termination of the husband's obligation. Furthermore, section 171 (a) taxes trust income to the wife in all cases where under prior law the husband would be taxed not only because of the discharge of his alimony obligation but also because of his retention of control over the income or trust corpus. Section 171 (a) applies whether or not the wife is the beneficiary under the terms of the trust instrument or is an assignee of a beneficiary.

(4) The application of section 171 (a) may be illustrated by the following examples, in which it is assumed that both the husband and wife make their income tax returns on a calendar year basis:

Example (1). Upon the marriage of H and W, H irrevocably transfers property in trust to pay the income therefrom to W for her life for support, maintenance, and all other expenses. Some years later, W obtains a legal separation from H under an order of court. W, relying upon the income from the trust payable to her, does not ask for any provision for her support and none is ordered by the court; the court, however, has jurisdiction under the law of the State to order at any time prior to an absolute divorce that provision be made by H for W's support. Under the provisions of section 171 (a), the income of the trust which becomes payable to W after the order of separation is includible in her income and is deductible by the trust. No part thereof is includible in H's income or deductible by him.

Example (2). H transfers property in trust for the benefit of W, retaining the power to revoke the trust at any time. H, however, promises that if he revokes the trust he will transfer to W property in the value of $100,000. The transfer in trust and the agreement were not incident to divorce, but some years later W divorces H. The court decree is silent as to alimony and the trust. After the divorce, income of the trust which becomes payable to W is taxable to her, and is not taxable to H or deductible by him. If H later terminates the trust and transfers $100,000 of property to W, such $100,000 is not income to W nor deductible by H.

(b) Alimony trust income designated for support of minor children. Section 171 (a) does not require the inclusion in the wife's income of trust income which the terms of the decree or trust instrument fix in terms of an amount of money or a portion of such income as a sum which is payable for the support of minor children of the husband. The statute prescribes the treatment in cases where under the terms of the decree or trust instrument a specific amount of trust income is to be paid but a lesser amount becomes payable. In such cases, to the extent of the sum which would be payable for such support out of the originally specified amount of trust income, such trust income is considered payable for support of such minor children. This rule is similar to that provided in the case of periodic payments under section 22 (k). See § 39.22 (k)-1 (d).

§ 39.171-2 Application of trust rules to alimony payments. (a) For the purpose of the application of sections 162, 163, and 164, the wife described in section 171 or section 22 (k) who is entitled to receive payments attributable to property in trust is considered a beneficiary of the trust, whether or not the payments are made for the benefit of the husband in discharge of his obligations.

(b) A periodic payment includible in the wife's gross income under section 22 (k) attributable to property in trust shall be included in full in her gross income in her taxable year in which any part is required to be included under sections 162 and 164. Assume, for example, in a case in which both the wife and the trust file income tax returns on the calendar year basis, that an annuity of $5,000 is to be paid to the wife by the trustee every December 31, (out of trust income if possible and, if not, out of corpus) pursuant to the terms of a divorce decree. Of the $5,000 distributable on December 31, 1952, $4,000 is payable out of income and $1,000 out of corpus. The actual distribution is made in 1953. Although the periodic payment is received by the wife in 1953, since under sections 162 and 164 the $4,000 income distributable on December 31, 1952, is to be included in the wife's income for 1952, the $1,000 payment out of corpus is to be included in her income for 1952.

SEC. 172. Allowance of amortization deduction. The benefit of the deduction for amortization of emergency facilities allowed by section 23 (t) shall be allowed to estates and trusts in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of an individual. The allowable deduction shall be apportioned between the income beneficiaries and the fiduciary under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.172-1 Amortization of emergency facility of estate or trusts. In the case of an emergency facility, as defined in section 124A (d) acquired or completed by an estate or trust after December 31, 1949, such estate or trust is entitled to take amortization deductions with respect thereto in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of an individual. See section 23 (t) and section 124A and the regulations thereunder. The principles governing the apportionment of depreciation in the case of property held in trust are applicable with respect to the amortization of an emergency facility of an estate or trust. See § 39.23 (l)-1.

SUPPLEMENT F—PARTNERSHIPS

SEC. 181. Partnership not taxable. Individuals carrying on business in partnerships shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity.

§ 39.181-1 Partnerships. Partnerships as such are not subject to the income tax imposed by chapter 1, but are required to make returns of income. See sections 187 and 188. For definition of what the term "partnership" includes, see section 3797 (a) (2) For rules as to allocation of partnership income in the case of family partnerships, see section 191 and the regulations thereunder.

SEC. 182. Tax of partners. In computing the net income of each partner, he shall include, whether or not distribution is made to him—

(a) As part of his gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than 6 months, his distributive share of the gains and losses of the partnership from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than 6 months.

(b) As part of his gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 6 months, his distributive share of the gains and losses of the partnership from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 6 months.

(c) His distributive share of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of the partnership, computed as provided in section 183 (b).

§ 39.182-1 Distributive shares of partners. (a) Each partner is required to include in his return for his taxable year within which or with which the taxable year of the partnership ends, whether or not distributed:

(1) As part of his gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months, his distributive share of the gains and losses of the partnership from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months.

(2) As part of his gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months, his distributive share of the gains and losses of the partnership from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months.

(3) His distributive share of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of the partnership, computed as provided in section 183 (b)

(b) If separate returns are made by a husband and wife domiciled in a community property State, and the husband only is a member of a partnership, the part of his distributive share of gains and losses of the partnership from sales or exchanges of capital assets or the part of his distributive share of ordinary net income or ordinary net loss, which is, or is derived from, community property should be reported by the husband and by the wife in equal proportions. In the case of a partnership closely related to other trades or businesses, see section 45.

SEC. 183. Computation of partnership income—(a) General rule. The net income of the partnership shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as in the case of an individual, except as provided in subsections (b), (c), and (d).

(b) Segregation of items—(1) Capital gains and losses. There shall be segregated gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets.

(2) Ordinary net income or loss. After excluding all items of gain and loss from sales or exchanges of capital assets, there shall be computed—

(A) An ordinary net income which shall consist of the excess of the gross income over the deductions; or

(c) Charitable contributions. In computing the net income of the partnership the so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (o) shall not be allowed; but each partner shall be considered as having made payment, within his taxable year, of his distributive portion of any contribution or gift, payment of which was made by the partnership within its taxable year, of the character which would be allowed to the partnership as a deduction under such section if this subsection had not been enacted.

(d) Standard deduction. In computing the net income of the partnership, the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa) shall not be allowed.

[Sec. 183 as amended by sec. 150 (g) (2), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 9 (c), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.183-1 Computation of partnership income. The net income of the partnership shall be computed in the same manner and on the same basis as the net income of an individual, except that:

(a) The partnership is required to segregate its gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. A partnership is not allowed the benefit of section 117 (e)

(b) The partnership is further required, after excluding all items described in paragraph (a) of this section, to compute (1) an ordinary net income which consists of the excess of gross income over the deductions, or (2) an ordinary net loss which consists of the excess of the deductions over the gross income. In the computation of its ordinary net income or ordinary net loss, the partnership is denied the so-called charitable contribution deduction allowed by section 23 (o) but each partner is considered as having made payment, within his taxable year, of his distributive portion of any contribution or gift, payment of which was made by the partnership within its taxable year, of a character which would be allowed to the partnership as a deduction if section 183 (c) had not been enacted. Payments made to a partner for services rendered and for interest on capital contributions are not deductible in computing the net income of the partnership, such payments being held to represent a division of partnership profits.

(c) The partnership is not allowed the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa)

SEC. 184. Credits against net income. The partner shall, for the purpose of the normal tax, be allowed as a credit against his net income, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 25, his proportionate share of such amounts (not in excess of the net income of the partnership) of interest specified in section 25 (a) as are received by the partnership. If the partnership elects under section 125 to treat the premium on bonds, the interest on which is allowable as a credit under section 25 (a) (1) or (2), as amortizable, for the purposes of the preceding sentence the partner's proportionate share of the interest received by the partnership shall be his proportionate share of such interest (determined without regard to this sentence) reduced by so much of the deduction under section 23 (v) as is attributable to such share.

§ 39.184-1 Credits allowed partners. The credits against net income provided in section 25 are not applicable to partnerships as such. An individual partner, however, is entitled for the purpose of the normal tax to a credit against his net income, in addition to the credits allowed to him under section 25, of his proportionate share of such amounts (not in excess of the net income of the partnership) of interest specified in section 25 (a) as are received by the partnership. There shall be included in the return of the partnership a statement of the amounts of such interest and the proportionate share thereof of each partner. For reduction of credit for such interest on account of amortizable bond premium, see § 39.125 (c)-2.

[Repealed by sec. 107 (a), Rev. Act 1943]

SEC. 186. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. The amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by foreign countries or possessions of the United States shall be allowed as a credit against the tax of the member of a partnership to the extent provided in section 131.

SEC. 187. Partnership returns. Every partnership shall make a return for each taxable year, stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions allowed by this chapter and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, and shall include in the return the names and addresses of the individuals who would be entitled to share in the net income if distributed and the amount of the distributive share of each individual. The return shall be sworn to by any one of the partners.

§ 39.187-1 Partnership returns. Every partnership shall make a return of income, regardless of the amount of its net income (see section 3797 (a) (2) defining the term "partnership"). The return shall be on Form 1065; shall state specifically the information required to be stated by the return form; shall be filled in according to the instructions contained thereon or issued with respect thereto; and shall contain or be verified by a written declaration, signed by one of the partners, that it is made under the penalties of perjury. Such return shall be made for the taxable year of the partnership, that is, for its annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) irrespective of the taxable years of the partners. See sections 182 and 183. If the partnership makes any change in its accounting period, it shall make its return in accordance with the provisions of section 47, except that the return shall not be placed on an annual basis under section 47 (c)

§ 39.188-189 Statutory provisions; partnership; different taxable years of partner and partnership; net operating losses.

SEC. 188. Different taxable years of partner and partnership. If the taxable year of a partner is different from that of the partnership, the inclusions with respect to the net income of the partnership, in computing the net income of the partner for his taxable year, shall be based upon the net income of the partnership for any taxable year of the partnership (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1939) ending within or with the taxable year of the partner.

SEC. 189. Net operating losses. The benefit of the deduction for net operating losses allowed by section 23 (s) shall not be allowed to a partnership but shall be allowed to the members of the partnership under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.189-1 Net operating loss deduction in the case of partners—(a) In general. The benefit of the deduction for net operating losses provided by section 23 (s) shall not be allowed to a partnership. In computing his own net operating loss or his own net income (where required to be computed in accordance with the exceptions and limitations provided in section 122 (d) (1) to (4) inclusive) for any taxable year for the purposes of the computations required by section 122, however, each partner shall take into account the income and losses of the partnership in accordance with sections 182 to 188, inclusive, with the exceptions and limitations set forth in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section.

(b) Exceptions and limitations applicable in computation of partner's net operating loss—(1) Long-term capital gains and losses. The partnership's gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months shall be taken into account in full. The business gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months and the nonbusiness gains and losses from such sales or exchanges shall be segregated and his distributive share of the partnership's business gains and losses from such sales or exchanges and the partnership's nonbusiness gains and losses from such sales or exchanges shall be included by each partner as business and nonbusiness gains and losses from the sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months, respectively.

(2) Short-term capital gains and losses. The partnership's business gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months and the partnership's nonbusiness gains and losses from such sales or exchanges shall be segregated, and his distributive share of such business gains and losses and such nonbusiness gains and losses shall be included by each partner as business and nonbusiness gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for not more than six months, respectively.

(3) Ordinary net income or loss. (i) After excluding all items required to be segregated by subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph, there shall be computed—

(a) A business ordinary net income of the partnership, which shall consist of the excess of the business gross income over the business deductions; or

(b) A business ordinary net loss of the partnership, which shall consist of the excess of the business deductions over the business gross income; and

(c) A nonbusiness ordinary net income of the partnership, which shall consist of the excess of the nonbusiness gross income over the nonbusiness deductions; or

(d) A nonbusiness ordinary net loss of the partnership, which shall consist of the excess of the nonbusiness deductions over the nonbusiness gross income.

In making the above computations the limitations and exceptions provided by section 122 (d) (1) and (2) shall be applied.

(ii) His distributive share of a business ordinary net income of the partnership shall be included by each partner as ordinary business gross income, and of a business ordinary net loss of the partnership as an ordinary business deduction. His distributive share of a nonbusiness ordinary net income of the partnership shall be included by each partner as ordinary nonbusiness gross income, and of a nonbusiness ordinary net loss of the partnership as an ordinary nonbusiness deduction.

(c) Exceptions and limitations applicable in computation of partner's net income. (1) The ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of the partnership shall be computed with the exceptions and limitations provided in section 122 (d) (1) and (2)

(2) The partnership's gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than six months shall be taken in account in full.

SEC. 190. Allowance of amortization deduction. In the case of emergency facilities of a partnership, the benefit of the deduction for amortization allowed by section 23 (t) shall not be allowed to the members of a partnership but shall be allowed to the partnership in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of an individual.

§ 39.190-1 Amortization of emergency facility of partnership. In the case of an emergency facility, as defined in section 124A (d) (1) acquired or completed by a partnership after December 31, 1949, the partnership is entitled to take amortization deductions with respect thereto in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of an individual. See section 23 (t) and section 124A and the regulations thereunder. Amortization deductions with respect to an emergency facility of a partnership are not allowed to the members of the partnership.

SEC. 191. Family partnerships. In the case of any partnership interest created by gift, the distributive share of the donee under the partnership agreement shall be includible in his gross income, except to the extent that such share is determined without allowance of reasonable compensation for services rendered to the partnership by the donor, and except to the extent that the portion of such share attributable to donated capital is proportionately greater than the share of the donor attributable to the donor's capital. The distributive share of a partner in the earnings of the partnership shall not be diminished because of absence due to military service. For the purpose of this section, an interest purchased by one member of a family from another shall be considered to be created by gift from the seller, and the fair market value of the purchased interest shall be considered to be donated capital. The "family" of any individual shall include only his spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants, and any trust for the primary benefit of such persons.

§ 39.191-1 Family partnerships—(a) In general—(1) Introduction. The production of income by a partnership is attributable to the capital or services, or both, contributed by the partners. The provisions of Supplement F, which govern the taxation of the income of individuals carrying on business in partnership, are to be read in the light of their relationship to section 22 (a) which requires that income be taxed to the person who earns it through his own labor and skill and the utilization of his own capital.

(2) Recognition of donee as partner With respect to partnerships in which capital is a material income-producing factor, section 3797 (a) (2) (dealing with definition of partnership and partner) provides that a person shall be recognized as a partner for income tax purposes if he owns a capital interest in such a partnership whether or not such interest is derived by purchase or gift from any other person. In the case of any partnership in which capital is a material income-producing factor, if any capital interest in such partnership is created by gift, section 191 provides for allocation of the partnership income where the distributive share of a donee partner under the partnership agreement is determined without allowance of reasonable compensation for services rendered to the partnership by the donor or is proportionately greater than the share of the donor attributable to the donor's capital. For rules of allocation, see § 39.191-2.

(3) Requirement of complete transfer to donee. A donee or purchaser of a capital interest in a partnership is not recognized as a partner under the principles of section 3797 (a) (2) unless the capital interest is acquired in a bona fide transaction, not a mere sham for tax avoidance purposes or otherwise, and the donee or purchaser is the real owner of such interest. To be recognized, a transfer must vest dominion and control of the partnership interest in the transferee. The existence of such dominion and control in the donee is to be determined from all the pertinent facts and circumstances. A transfer is not recognized if the transferor retains such incidents of ownership that the transferee has not acquired full and complete ownership of the partnership interest. Transactions between members of a family will be closely scrutinized, and in the case of such transactions the circumstances at the time of a purported transfer and during the periods preceding and following it will be taken into consideration in determining the bona fides or lack of bona fides of the purported gift or sale. A partnership may be recognized for income tax purposes as to some alleged partners but not as to others.

(4) Capital as a material income-producing factor The determination as to whether capital is a material income-producing factor, for purposes of section 3797 (a) (2) must be made by reference to all the relevant facts of the individual case. Capital is a material income-producing factor if a substantial portion of the gross income of the business is attributable to the employment of capital in the business conducted by the partnership. In general, capital is not a material income-producing factor where the income of the business consists principally of fees, commissions, or other compensation for personal services performed by members or employees of the partnership. On the other hand, capital is ordinarily a material income-producing factor if the operation of the business requires substantial inventories or a substantial investment in plant, machinery, or equipment.

(5) Capital interest in a partnership. For purposes of sections 191 and 3797 (a) (2) a capital interest in a partnership means an interest in the capital of the partnership, including accretions thereto, which interest is distributable to the owner of the capital interest upon his withdrawal from the partnership or upon dissolution or liquidation of the partnership. The mere right to participate in the earnings and profits of a partnership is not a capital interest in the partnership.

(b) Basic tests as to ownership—(1) In general. Whether an alleged partner in a gift capital case is the real owner of the capital interest attributed to him and whether the donee has dominion and control over his or her interest, must be ascertained from all the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Isolated facts should not be considered determinative; the reality of the donee's ownership is to be determined in the light of the transaction as a whole. The execution of legally sufficient and irrevocable deeds or other instruments of gift under State law is a factor to be taken into account but is not determinative of ownership in the donee. The reality of the transfer and of the donee's ownership of the property attributed to him are to be ascertained from the conduct of the parties with respect to the alleged gift and not by any mechanical or formulistic test. Some of the more important factors to be considered in determining whether the donee has acquired ownership of the capital interest in a partnership are indicated in subparagraphs (2) to (10) inclusive, of this paragraph.

(2) Retained controls. The donor may have retained such controls of the interest which he has purported to transfer to the donee that the donor should be treated as remaining the substantial owner of the interest. Controls of particular significance include, for example, the following:

(i) Retention of control of the distribution of income or restrictions on the distribution of income other than amounts retained in the partnership annually with the consent of the partners (including the donee partner) for the reasonable needs of the business. If there is a partnership agreement providing for a managing partner, or partners, then, amounts of income may be retained in the partnership without the acquiesence of all the partners if such amounts are retained for the reasonable needs of the business.

(ii) Limitation of the right of the donee to withdraw or sell his interest in the partnership at his discretion without financial detriment.

(iii) Retention of control of assets essential to the business (for example, through retention of assets leased to the alleged partnership)

(iv) Retention of management powers inconsistent with normal relationships among partners. Retention by the donor of control of business management or of voting control, such as is common in ordinary business relationships, is not by itself to be considered as inconsistent with normal relationships among partners provided the donee is free to withdraw his interest without financial detriment at his discretion. The donee shall not be considered free to withdraw his interest unless, considering all the facts, it is evident that the donee is independent of the donor and has such maturity and understanding of his rights as to be capable of deciding to exercise, and of exercising, his right to withdraw his capital interest from the partnership.

The existence of some of the indicated controls, though amounting to less than substantial ownership retained by the donor, may be considered along with other facts and circumstances as tending to show the lack of reality of the partnership interest of the donee.

(3) Indirect controls. Controls inconsistent with ownership by the donee may be exercised indirectly as well as directly for example, through a separate business organization, estate, trust, individual, or other partnership. Where such indirect controls exist, the reality of the donee's interest will be determined as if such controls were exercisable directly.

(4) Participation in management. Substantial participation by the donee in the control and management of the business (including participation in the major policy decisions affecting the business) is strong evidence of a donee partner's exercise of the dominion and control over his interest. Such participation presupposes sufficient maturity and experience on the part of the donee to deal with the business problems of the partnership.

(5) Income distributions. The actual distribution to a donee partner of all or the major portion of his distributive share of the business income for the sole benefit and use of the donee is substantial evidence of the reality of the donee's interest provided the donor has not retained controls inconsistent with real ownership in the donee. Amounts distributed are not considered to be used for the donee's sole benefit if, for example, they are deposited, loaned, or invested in such ways that the donor controls or can control the use or enjoyment of such funds.

(6) Conduct of partnership business. In determining the reality of the donee's ownership of a capital interest in a partnership, consideration shall be given to whether the donee is actually treated as a partner in the operation of the business. It is of principal importance for this purpose whether the donee has been held out publicly as a partner in the conduct of the business, in relations with customers, or with creditors or other sources of financing. Other factors of significance in this connection include:

(i) Compliance with local partnership, fictitious name, and business registration statutes.

(ii) Control of business bank accounts.

(iii) Recognition of the donee's interest in appropriate capital and drawing accounts.

(iv) Recognition of the donee's interest in insurance policies, leases, and other business contracts and in litigation affecting business.

(v) The existence of written agreements, records or memoranda, contemporaneous with the taxable year or years concerned, establishing the nature of the partnership agreement and the rights and liabilities of the respective partners.

(vi) Filing of partnership tax returns as required by law.

However, despite formal compliance with the above factors, other circumstances may indicate that the donor has retained substantial ownership of the interest purportedly transferred to the donee.

(7) Trustees as partners. A trustee may be recognized as a partner for income tax purposes under the principles relative to family partnerships generally as applied to the particular facts of the trust-partnership arrangement. A trustee who is unrelated to and independent of the grantor, and who participates as a partner and receives distribution of the income distributable to the trust, will ordinarily be recognized as the owner of the partnership interest which he holds for the trust unless the grantor has retained controls inconsistent with such ownership. However, if the grantor is the trustee, or if the trustee is amenable to the will of the grantor, the provisions of the trust instrument (particularly with relation to whether the trustee is subject to the responsibilities of a fiduciary) the provisions of the partnership agreement, and the conduct of the parties must all be taken into account in determining whether the trustee in a fiduciary capacity has become the real owner of the partnership interest. In a case where the grantor (or person amenable to his will) is the trustee, the trust may be recognized as a partner only if the grantor (or such other person) in his participation in the affairs of the partnership actively represents and protects the interests of the beneficiaries in accordance with the obligations of a fiduciary, and does not subordinate such interests to the interests of the grantor. Furthermore, if the grantor (or person amenable to his will) is the trustee, particular consideration should be given to the following factors:

(i) Whether the trust is recognized as a partner in business dealings with customers and creditors, and

(ii) Whether, if the partnership income is not properly retained for the reasonable needs of the business, the trust's share of the income is distributed to the trust annually and paid to the beneficiaries or reinvested solely in the interests of the beneficiaries.

(8) Interests of minor children (not held in trust) Except where a minor child is shown to be competent to manage his own property and participate in the partnership activities in accordance with his interest in the property, a minor child generally will not be recognized as a member of a partnership unless control of the property and its enjoyment is exercised by another person as fiduciary for the sole benefit of the child and unless there is such judicial supervision of the conduct of the fiduciary, guardian or otherwise, as is required by law. The use of the child's property or income for support for which a parent is legally responsible will be considered a use for the parent's benefit. "Judicial supervision of the conduct of a fiduciary" includes filing of such accountings and reports as are required by law of the fiduciary who participates in the affairs of the partnership on behalf of the minor. A minor child will be considered as competent to manage his own property if he actually has sufficient maturity and experience to be treated by disinterested persons as competent to enter business dealings and otherwise to conduct his affairs on a basis of equality with adult persons, notwithstanding legal disabilities of the minor under State law.

(9) Donees as limited partners. The recognition of a donee's interest in a limited partnership will depend, as in the case of other donated interests, on whether the transfer of property is real and the donee has acquired dominion and control over the interests purportedly transferred to him. To be recognized for Federal income tax purposes, a limited partnership must be organized and conducted in accordance with the requirements of the applicable State limited partnership law. The absence of services and participation in management by a donee in a limited partnership is immaterial if the limited partnership meets all the other requirements prescribed in this section. If the limited partner's right to withdraw his interest is subject to substantial restrictions (for example, where the interest of the limited partner is not assignable in a real sense or where it may be required to be left in the business for a long term of years), or if the general partner retains any other control which substantially limits any of the rights which would ordinarily be exercisable by unrelated limited partners in normal business relationships, such restrictions on the right to withdraw or retention of other control will be considered strong evidence of lack of reality of ownership by the donee.

(10) Motive. If the reality of the transfer of interest is satisfactorily established, the motives for the transaction are immaterial. However, the presence or absence of a tax avoidance motive is one of many factors to be considered in determining the reality of a gift capital transaction.

(c) Purchased interest—(1) In general. If a purported purchase of a capital interest in a partnership does not meet the requirements of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the ownership by the transferee of such capital interest will be recognized only if it qualifies under the requirements applicable to a transfer of a partnership interest by gift. In a case not qualifying under subparagraph (2), if payment of any part of the purchase price is made out of the partnership earnings, the transaction may be regarded in the same light as a purported gift subject to deferred enjoyment of the income. Such a transaction may be lacking in reality either as a gift or as a bona fide purchase.

(2) Tests as to reality of purchased interests. A purchase of a capital interest in a partnership either directly or by means of a loan or credit extended by a member of the family will be recognized if it is shown to be bona fide under either of the following tests:

(i) That the purchase has the usual characteristics of an arm's length transaction, considering all relevant factors including the terms of the purchase agreement (as to price, due date of payment, rate of interest, and security, if any) and the terms of any loan or credit arrangement collateral to the purchase agreement; the credit standing of the purchaser, apart from relationship to the seller; and the capacity of the purchaser to incur a legally binding obligation; or

(ii) Assuming the lack of one or more of the usual characteristics of arm's length dealing, that the transaction was genuinely intended to promote the success of the business through securing participation in the business of the purchaser or the addition of his or her credit to that of other participants.

However, if the alleged purchase price or loan has not been paid or the obligation otherwise discharged the factors indicated in subdivisions (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph, shall be taken into account only as an aid in determining whether a bona fide purchase or loan obligation existed.

§ 39.191-2 Allocation of family partnership income—(a) In general. (1) In the case of any partnership in which capital is a material income-producing factor, if any capital interest in such a partnership is created by gift, the distributive share of the donee under the partnership agreement shall be includible in his gross income, except to the extent that such share is determined without allowance of reasonable compensation for services rendered to the partnership by the donor, and except to the extent that the portion of such share attributable to donated capital is proportionately greater than the share attributable to the donor's capital. For the purpose of this section, a capital interest in a partnership purchased by one member of a family from another shall be considered to be created by gift from the seller, and the fair market value of the purchased interest shall be considered to be donated capital. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the "family" of any individual shall include only his spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants, and any trust for the primary benefit of such persons.

(2) To the extent that the partnership agreement does not so allocate the partnership income, the partnership income of the donor and donee shall be reallocated by making a reasonable allowance for the services of the donor and by attributing the balance of such income (other than a reasonable allowance for the services, if any, rendered by the donee) to the partnership capital of the donor and donee. The portion of income, if any, thus attributable to partnership capital for the taxable year shall be allocated between donor and donee in accordance with their respective interests in the partnership capital.

(3) In determining a reasonable allowance for services rendered by the partners, consideration shall be given to all the circumstances of the business, including the fact that some of the partners may have greater managerial responsibility than others. Among other factors, there shall be considered the amount that would ordinarily be paid in order to obtain comparable services from a person not having a capital interest in the partnership.

(4) In the case of a partner who rendered services to a partnership before entering service in the armed forces of the United States, his distributive share in the earnings of the partnership, determined under subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, shall not be diminished because of absence due to military service. Such distributive share shall be adjusted to reflect increases or decreases in the capital interest of the absent partner. However, the partners may by agreement allocate a smaller share to the absent partner due to his absence.

(b) Special rules. (1) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, relating to allocation, are applicable where the gift interest in the partnership is created indirectly as well as directly. Where the partnership interest is created indirectly, the term "donor" may include persons other than the nominal transferor.

Example (1). A father gives property to his son who shortly thereafter conveys the property to a partnership consisting of the father and the son. The partnership interest of the son may be considered created by gift and the father may be considered the donor of the son's partnership interest.

Example (2). A father, the owner of a business conducted as a sole proprietorship, transfers the business to a partnership consisting of his wife and himself. The wife subsequently conveys such interest to their son. In such case, the father, as well as the mother, may be considered the donor of the son's partnership interest.

Example (3). A father makes a gift to his son of stock in the family corporation. The corporation is subsequently liquidated. The son later contributes the property received in the liquidation of the corporation to a partnership consisting of his father and himself. In such case, the son's partnership interest may be considered created by gift and the father may be considered the donor of his son's partnership interest.

(2) The allocation rules set forth in section 191 and paragraph (a) of this section apply in any case in which the transfer or creation of the partnership interest has any of the substantial characteristics of a gift. Thus, allocation may be required where transfer of a partnership interest is made between members of a family (including collaterals) under a purported purchase agreement, if the characteristics of a gift are ascertained from the terms of the purchase agreement, the terms of any loan or credit arrangements made to finance the purchase, or from other relevant data.

(3) In the case of limited partnership, for the purpose of the allocation provisions of paragraph (a) of this section, proper weight shall be given to the fact that a general partner, unlike the limited partner, risks his credit in the partnership business.

SUPPLEMENT G—INSURANCE COMPANIES

SEC. 201. Life insurance companies—(a) Imposition of tax—(1) In general. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the adjusted normal-tax net income (as defined in section 202) and upon the adjusted corporation surtax net income (as defined in section 203) of every life insurance company taxes computed as provided in section 13 (b) and in section 15 (b). In lieu of the taxes imposed by the preceding sentence, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for taxable years beginning in 1951 and 1952 upon the 1951 and 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income (as defined in section 203A) of every life insurance company a tax equal to the sum of the following:

3¾ per centum of the amount thereof not in excess of $200,000, plus

6½ per centum of the amount thereof in excess of $200,000.

(2) Foreign life insurance companies. A foreign life insurance company carrying on a life insurance business within the United States if with respect to its United States business it would qualify as a life insurance company under subsection (b) shall be taxable in the same manner as a domestic life insurance company except that the determinations necessary for the purposes of this chapter shall be made on the basis of the income, disbursements, assets, and liabilities reported in the annual statement for the taxable year of the United States business of such company on the form approved for life insurance companies by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

(3) No United States insurance business. Foreign life insurance companies not carrying on an insurance business within the United States shall not be taxable under this section but shall be taxable as other foreign corporations.

(b) Definition of life insurance company. When used in this chapter, the term "life insurance company" means an insurance company which is engaged in the business of issuing life insurance and annuity contracts (either separately or combined with health and accident insurance), or noncancellable contracts of health and accident insurance, and the life insurance reserves (as defined in subsection (c) (2)) plus unearned premiums and unpaid losses on noncancellable life, health, or accident policies not included in life insurance reserves, of which comprise more than 50 per centum of its total reserves. For the purpose of this subsection, total reserves means life insurance reserves, unearned premiums and unpaid losses not included in life insurance reserves, and all other insurance reserves required by law. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1943, a burial or funeral benefit insurance company engaged directly in the manufacture of funeral supplies or the performance of funeral services shall not be taxable under this section but shall be taxable under section 204 or section 207.

(c) Other definitions. In the case of a life insurance company—

(1) Gross income. The term "gross income" means the gross amount of income received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, and rents.

(2) Life insurance reserves. The term "life insurance reserves" means amounts which are computed or estimated on the basis of recognized mortality or morbidity tables and assumed rates of interest, and which are set aside to mature or liquidate, either by payment or reinsurance, future unaccrued claims arising from life insurance, annuity, and noncancellable health and accident insurance contracts (including life insurance or annuity contracts combined with noncancelable health and accident insurance) involving, at the time with respect to which the reserve is computed, life, health, or accident contingencies. Such life insurance reserves, except in the case of policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, continuing for life and not subject to cancellation and except as hereinafter provided in the case of assessment life insurance, must also be required by law. In the case of an assessment life insurance company or association the term "life insurance reserves" includes sums actually deposited by such company or association with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as guaranty or reserve funds, and any funds maintained under the charter or articles of incorporation or association, or bylaws approved by State Insurance Commissioner of such company or association exclusively for the payment of claims arising under certificates of membership or policies issued upon the assessment plan and not subject to any other use.

(3) Adjusted reserves. The term "adjusted reserves" means life insurance reserves plus 7 per centum of that portion of such reserves as are computed on a preliminary term basis.

(4) Reserve earnings rate. The term "reserve earnings rate" means a rate computed by adding 2.1125 per centum (65 per centum of 3¼ per centum) to 35 per centum of the average rate of interest assumed in computing life insurance reserves. Such average rate shall be calculated by multiplying each assumed rate of interest by the means of the amounts of the adjusted reserves computed at that rate at the beginning and end of the taxable year and dividing the sum of the products by the mean of the total adjusted reserves at the beginning and end of the taxable year.

(5) Reserve for deferred dividends. The term "reserve for deferred dividends" means sums held at the end of the taxable year as a reserve for dividends (other than dividends payable during the year following the taxable year) the payment of which is deferred for a period of not less than five years from the date of the policy contract.

(6) Interest paid. The term "interest paid" means—

(A) All interest paid within the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this chapter, and

(B) All amounts in the nature of interest, whether or not guaranteed, paid within the taxable year on insurance or annuity contracts (or contracts arising out of insurance or annuity contracts) which do not involve, at the time of payment, life, health, or accident contingencies.

(7) Net income. The term "net income" means the gross income less—

(A) Tax-free interest. The amount of interest received during the taxable year which under section 22 (b) (4) is excluded from gross income;

(B) Investment expenses. Investment expenses paid during the taxable year. If any general expenses are in part assigned to or included in the investment expenses, the total deduction under this subparagraph shall not exceed one-fourth of 1 per centum of the mean of the book value of the invested assets held at the beginning and end of the taxable year plus one-fourth of the amount by which net income computed without any deduction for investment expenses allowed by this subparagraph, or for tax-free interest allowed by subparagraph (A), exceeds 3¾ per centum of the book value of the mean of the invested assets held at the beginning and end of the taxable year;

(C) Real estate expenses. Taxes and other expenses paid during the taxable year exclusively upon or with respect to the real estate owned by the company, not including taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed, and not including any amount paid out for new buildings, or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property. The deduction allowed by this paragraph shall be allowed in the case of taxes imposed upon a shareholder of a company upon his interest as shareholder, which are paid by the company without reimbursement from the shareholder, but in such cases no deduction shall be allowed the shareholder for the amount of such taxes;

(D) Depreciation. A reasonable allowance, as provided in section 23 (l), for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence.

(d) Rental value of real estate. The deduction under subsection (c) (7) (C) or (c) (7) (D) of this section on account of any real estate owned and occupied in whole or in part by a life insurance company, shall be limited to an amount which bears the same ratio to such deduction (computed without regard to this subsection) as the rental value of the space not so occupied bears to the rental value of the entire property.

(e) Amortization of premium and accrual of discount. The gross income, the deduction provided in section 201 (c) (7) (A) and the credit allowed against net income in section 26 (a) shall each be decreased by the appropriate amortization of premium and increased by the appropriate accrual of discount attributable to the taxable year on bonds, notes, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness held by a life insurance company. Such amortization and accrual shall be determined (1) in accordance with the method regularly employed by such company, if such method is reasonable, and (2) in all other cases, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(f) Double deductions. Nothing in this section or in section 202, 203, or 203A shall be construed to permit the same items to be twice deducted.

(g) Credits under section 26. For the purposes of this section, in computing normal tax net income and corporation surtax net income, the credits provided in section 26 shall be allowed in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and 15 (a).

§ 39.201-1 Tax on life insurance companies. (a) Except as otherwise provided in § 39.203A-1 with respect to taxable years beginning in 1952, all life insurance companies (including a foreign life insurance company carrying on a life insurance business within the United States if with respect to its United States business it would qualify as a life insurance company under section 201 (b)) are subject to both normal tax and surtax. The normal tax is imposed on the adjusted normal-tax net income (as defined in section 202) and the surtax is imposed on the adjusted corporation surtax net income (as defined in section 203) at the rates provided in section 13 (b) and in section 15 (b)

(b) The net income of life insurance companies differs from the net income of other corporations. See section 201 (c) Life insurance companies are entitled, in computing normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income, to the credits provided in section 26 in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and 15 (a) respectively. The gross income, the deduction under section 201 (c) (7) (A) for wholly tax-exempt interest, and the credit under section 26 (a) for partially tax-exempt interest, are decreased by the appropriate amortization of premium and increased by the appropriate accrual of discount attributable to the taxable year on bonds, notes, debentures, or other evidences of indebtedness held by a life insurance company. See section 201 (e) and § 39.201-9. Such companies are not subject to the provisions of section 117 (capital gains and losses) nor to the provisions of section 125 (amortizable bond premium) For computation of the adjusted normal-tax net income from normal-tax net income and the adjusted corporation surtax net income from corporation surtax net income, see §§ 39.202-1, 39.202-2, and 39.203-1. For computation of the 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income from the normal tax net income for such year, see §§ 39.203A-1 and 39.203A-2.

(c) All provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and of these regulations not inconsistent with the specific provisions of sections 201 to 203A, inclusive, are applicable to the assessment and collection of the tax imposed by section 201 (a) and life insurance companies are subject to the same penalties as are provided in the case of returns and payment of income tax by other corporations. The return shall be on Form 1120L.

(d) Foreign life insurance companies not carrying on an insurance business within the United States are not taxable under section 201 (a) but are taxable as other foreign corporations. See section 231.

§ 39.201-2 Foreign life insurance companies. A foreign life insurance company carrying on a life insurance business within the United States, if with respect to its United States business it would qualify as a life insurance company under section 201 (b), is taxable on its income received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, and rents, from sources within and without the United States, pertaining to its United States business. Such a company is taxable in the same manner as a domestic life insurance company except that the determinations necessary for the purposes of chapter 1, such as gross income, the adjustment for certain reserves, deductions and limitations on deductions, amortization of premiums and accrual of discount, and the credits provided in section 26, shall be made on the basis of the income, disbursements, assets, and liabilities reported in the annual statement for the taxable year of the United States business of such company on the form approved for life insurance companies by the National Association of Life Insurance Commissioners. This statement is presumed clearly to reflect the income, disbursements, assets, and liabilities of the United States business of the company and in so far as it is not inconsistent with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code will be recognized and used as a basis for that purpose.

§ 39.201-3 Life insurance companies; definition. The term "life insurance company" as used in chapter 1 is defined in section 201 (b) In determining whether an insurance company is a life insurance company, the life insurance reserves (as defined in section 201 (c) (2)) plus any unearned premiums and unpaid losses on noncancelable life, health, or accident policies, not included in "life insurance reserves" must comprise more than 50 percent of its total reserves (as defined in section 201 (b)) An insurance company writing only noncancelable life, health, or accident policies and having no "life insurance reserves" may qualify as a life insurance company if its unearned premiums and unpaid losses on such policies comprise more than 50 percent of its total reserves. A noncancelable insurance policy means a contract which the insurance company is under an obligation to renew or continue at a specified premium and with respect to which a reserve in addition to the unearned premium must be carried to cover that obligation. A burial or funeral benefit insurance company qualifying as a life insurance company engaged directly in the manufacture of funeral supplies or the performance of funeral services will be taxable under section 204 or section 207 as an insurance company other than life. For the definition of an insurance company see § 39.3797-7.

§ 39.201-4 Life insurance reserves. (a) The term "life insurance reserves" is defined in section 201 (c) (2) Generally, such reserves, as in the case of level premium life insurance, are held to supplement the future premium receipts when the latter, alone, are insufficient to cover the increased risk in the later years. In the case of cancelable health and accident policies and similar cancelable contracts, the unearned premiums held to cover the risk for the unexpired period covered by the premiums are not included in life insurance reserves. Unpaid loss reserves for noncancelable health and accident policies are included in life insurance reserves if they are computed or estimated on the basis of recognized mortality or morbidity tables and assumed rates of interest.

(b) In the case of an assessment life insurance company or association, life insurance reserves include sums actually deposited by such company or association with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as guaranty or reserve funds, and any funds maintained under the charter or articles of incorporation or association of such company or association, or by-laws (approved by the State insurance commissioner) of such company or association, exclusively for the payment of claims arising under certificates of membership or policies issued upon the assessment plan and not subject to any other use.

(c) Life insurance reserves, except as otherwise provided in section 201 (c) (2) must be required by law either by express statutory provisions or by rules and regulations of the insurance department of a State, Territory, or the District of Columbia when promulgated in the exercise of a power conferred by statute, but such requirement, without more, is not conclusive; for example, life insurance reserves do not include reserves required to be maintained to provide for the ordinary running expenses of a business definite in amount, and which must be currently paid by every company from its income if its business is to continue, such as taxes, salaries, and unpaid brokerage; nor do they include the net value of risks reinsured in other solvent companies; liability for premiums paid in advance; liability for annual and deferred dividends declared or apportioned; liability for dividends left on deposit at interest; liability for accrued but unsettled policy claims whether known or unreported; liability for supplementary contracts not involving, at the time with respect to which the liability is computed, life, health or accident contingencies.

(d) In any case where reserves are claimed, sufficient information must be filed with the return to enable the Commissioner to determine the validity of the claim. Only reserves which are required by law or insurance department ruling, which are peculiar to insurance companies, and which are dependent upon interest earnings for their maintenance will, except as otherwise specifically provided in section 201 (c) (2) be considered as life insurance reserves. A company is permitted to make use of the highest aggregate reserve required by any State or Territory or the District of Columbia in which it transacts business, but the reserve must have been actually held.

(e) In the case of life insurance companies issuing policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, continuing for life and not subject to cancellation, it is required that reserve funds thereon be based upon recognized mortality or morbidity tables covering disability benefits of the kind contained in policies issued by this particular class of companies but they need not be required by law.

§ 39.201-5 Interest paid. Interest paid is one of the elements to be used, together with adjusted reserves, reserve earnings rate, and reserve for deferred dividends, in arriving at the figure to be determined and proclaimed by the Secretary under the formula set forth in section 202 (b) See § 39.202-1. Interest paid is also one of the elements to be used in computing the amount of "required interest" for purposes of determining the reserve interest credit provided in section 203A in the case of taxable years beginning in 1952. See § 39.203A-2. Interest paid consists of (a) interest paid on indebtedness (except indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry tax-exempt securities as set forth in section 201 (c) (6) (A)) and (b) amounts in the nature of interest paid on certain contracts, as provided in section 201 (c) (6) (B) Interest on indebtedness includes interest on dividends held on deposit and surrendered during the taxable year but does not include interest paid on deferred dividends the reserve for which is used in determining the policy and other liability credit provided in section 202 (b) Life insurance reserves as defined in § 39.201-4 are not indebtedness. Dividends left with the company to accumulate at interest are a debt and not a reserve liability. Amounts in the nature of interest include so-called excess-interest dividends as well as guaranteed interest paid within the taxable year on insurance or annuity contracts (or contracts arising out of insurance or annuity contracts) which do not involve at the time of payment, life, health, or accident contingencies. It is immaterial whether the optional mode of settlement specified in the insurance or annuity contract arises from an option exercised by the insured during his or her lifetime or from an option exercised by a beneficiary after the policy has matured, frequently referred to as a supplementary contract not involving life contingencies; for example, a contract to pay the insurance benefit in 10 annual installments. No distinction is made based on the person choosing the method of payment and the full amount of the interest paid and not merely the guaranteed interest is considered as interest paid.

§ 39.201-6 Adjusted reserves. For the purpose of determining the figure to be proclaimed by the Secretary under the formula set forth in section 202 (b) and also for the purpose of determining "required interest" for taxable years beginning in 1952, certain reserves computed on a preliminary term method are to be adjusted by increasing such reserves by 7 percent (see § 39.202-1) The reserves to be thus adjusted are reserves computed on preliminary term methods, such as the Illinois Standard, or the Select and Ultimate methods. Only reserves on policies in the modification period are to be so adjusted. Where reserves under a preliminary term method are the same as on the level premium method, and in the case of reserves for extended or paid-up insurance, no adjustment is to be made. The reserves as thus adjusted, and the rate of interest on which they are computed should be reported in Schedule A, Form 1120L.

§ 39.201-7 Net income and deductions—(a) In general. The net income of a life insurance company is its gross amount of income received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, and rents, less the deductions provided in section 201 (c) (7) for wholly tax-exempt interest, investment expenses, real estate expenses, and depreciation. In addition to the limitations on deductions relating to real estate owned and occupied by a life insurance company provided in section 201 (d), the limitations on the adjustment for amortization of premium and accrual of discount provided in section 201 (e), and the limitation on the deduction for investment expenses where general expenses are allocated to investment income provided in section 201 (c) (7) (B), life insurance companies are subject to the limitation on deductions relating to wholly tax-exempt income provided in section 24 (a) (5) Life insurance companies are not entitled to the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s)

(b) Wholly tax-exempt interest. Interest which in the case of other taxpayers is excluded from gross income by section 22 (b) (4) but included in the gross income of a life insurance company by section 201 (c) (1) is allowed as a deduction from gross income by section 201 (c) (7) (A)

(c) Investment expenses. (1) As used in the Internal Revenue Code, the term "general expenses" means any expense incurred for the benefit of more than one department of the company rather than for the benefit of a particular department thereof. Any assignment of such expense to the investment department of the company for which a deduction is claimed under section 201 (c) (7) (B) subjects the entire deduction for investment expenses to the limitation provided in that section. The accounting procedure employed is not conclusive as to whether any assignment has in fact been made. Investment expenses do not include Federal income and excess profits taxes.

(2) If no general expenses are assigned to or included in investment expenses the deduction may consist of investment expenses actually paid during the taxable year in which case an itemized schedule of such expenses must be appended to the return.

(3) Invested assets for the purpose of section 201 (c) (7) (B) and this section are those which are owned and used, and to the extent used, for the purpose of producing the income specified in section 201 (c) (1) They do not include real estate owned and occupied, and to the extent owned and occupied, by the company. If general expenses are assigned to or included in investment expenses, the maximum allowance will not be granted unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such allowance is justified by a reasonable assignment of actual expenses.

(d) Taxes and expenses with respect to real estate. The deduction for taxes and expenses under section 201 (c) (7) (C) includes taxes and expenses paid during the taxable year exclusively upon or with respect to real estate owned by the company and any sum representing taxes imposed upon a shareholder of the company upon his interest as shareholder which is paid by the company without reimbursement from the shareholder. No deduction shall be allowed, however, for taxes, expenses, and depreciation upon or with respect to any real estate owned by the company except to the extent used for the purpose of producing investment income. See paragraph (c) of this section. As to real estate owned and occupied by the company, see § 39.201-8.

(e) Depreciation. The deduction allowed for depreciation is, except as provided in section 201 (d) identical with that allowed other corporations by section 23 (l) The amount allowed by section 23 (l) in the case of life insurance companies is limited to depreciation sustained on the property used, and to the extent used, for the purpose of producing the income specified in section 201 (c) (1)

§ 39.201-8 Real estate owned and occupied. The amount allowable as a deduction for taxes, expenses, and depreciation upon or with respect to any real estate owned and occupied in whole or in part by a life insurance company is limited to an amount which bears the same ratio to such deduction (computed without regard to this limitation) as the rental value of the space not so occupied bears to the rental value of the entire property. For example, if the rental value of the space not occupied by the company is equal to one-half of the rental value of the entire property, the deduction for taxes, expenses, and depreciation is one-half of the taxes, expenses, and depreciation on account of the entire property. Where a deduction is claimed as provided in this section, the parts of the property occupied and the parts not occupied by the company, together with the respective rental values thereof, must be shown in a statement accompanying the return.

§ 39.201-9 Amortization of premium and accrual of discount. (a) Section 201 (e) provides for certain adjustments on account of amortization of premium and accrual of discount on bonds, notes, debentures, or other evidences of indebtedness held by a life insurance company. Such adjustments are limited to the amount of appropriate amortization or accrual attributable to the taxable year with respect to such securities which are not in default as to principal or interest and which are amply secured. The question of ample security will be resolved according to the rules laid down from time to time by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. The adjustment for amortization of premium decreases, and for accrual of discount increases, (1) the gross income, (2) the deduction for wholly tax-exempt interest, and (3) the credit for partially tax-exempt interest.

(b) The premium for any such security is the excess of its acquisition value over its maturity value and the discount is the excess of its maturity value over its acquisition value. The acquisition value of any such security is its cost (including buying commissions or brokerage but excluding any amounts paid for accrued interest) if purchased for cash, or if not purchased for cash, then its fair market value. The maturity value of any such security is the amount payable thereunder either at the maturity date or an earlier call date. The earlier call date of any such security may be the earliest call date specified therein as a day certain, the earliest interest payment date if it is callable or payable at such date, the earliest date at which it is callable at par, or such other call or payment date, prior to maturity, specified in the security as may be selected by the life insurance company. A life insurance company which adjusts amortization of premium or accrual of discount with reference to a particular call or payment date must make the adjustments with reference to the value on such date and may not, after selecting such date, use a different call or payment date, or value, in the calculation of such amortization or discount with respect to such security unless the security was not in fact called or paid on such selected date.

(c) The adjustments for amortization of premium and accrual of discount will be determined:

(1) According to the method regularly employed by the company, if such method is reasonable, or

(2) According to the method prescribed by this section.

A method of amortization of premium or accrual of discount will be deemed "regularly employed" by a life insurance company if the method was consistently followed in prior taxable years, or if, in the case of a company which has never before made such adjustments, the company initiates in the first taxable year for which the adjustments are made a reasonable method of amortization of premium or accrual of discount and consistently follows such method thereafter. Ordinarily, a company regularly employs a method in accordance with the statute of some State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, in which it operates.

(d) The method of amortization and accrual prescribed by this section is as follows:

(1) The premium (or discount) shall be determined in accordance with this section; and

(2) The appropriate amortization of premium (or accrual of discount) attributable to the taxable year shall be an amount which bears the same ratio to the premium (or discount) as the number of months in the taxable year during which the security was owned by the life insurance company bears to the number of months between the date of acquisition of the security and its maturity or earlier call date, determined in accordance with this section. For the purpose of this section, a fractional part of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it shall be considered as a month.

SEC. 202. Adjusted normal-tax net income—(a) Definition. For the purposes of section 201, the term "adjusted normal-tax net income" means the normal-tax net income minus the reserve and other policy liability credit provided in subsection (b) and plus the amount of the adjustment for certain reserves provided in subsection (c).

(b) Reserve and other policy liability credit. As used in this section the term "reserve and other policy liability credit" means an amount computed by multiplying the normal-tax net income by a figure, to be determined and proclaimed by the Secretary for each taxable year. This figure shall be based on such data with respect to life insurance companies for the preceding taxable year as the Secretary considers representative and shall be computed as follows:

(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (2), the figure shall be computed in accordance with the following formula: The ratio which a numerator comprised of the aggregate of the sums of (A) 2 per centum of the reserves for deferred dividends, (B) interest paid, and (C) the product of (i) the mean of the adjusted reserves at the beginning and end of the taxable year and (ii) the reserve earnings rate bears to a denominator comprised of the aggregate of the excess of net incomes computed without any deduction for tax-free interest, over the adjustment for certain reserves provided in subsection (c).

(2) Special rule for 1949 and 1950. * * *

(c) Adjustment for certain reserves. In the case of a life insurance company writing contracts other than life insurance or annuity contracts (either separately or combined with noncancellable health and accident insurance), the term "adjustment for certain reserves" means an amount equal to 3¼ per centum of the unearned premiums and unpaid losses on such other contracts which are not included in life insurance reserves. For the purposes of this subsection such unearned premiums shall not be considered to be less than 25 per centum of the net premiums written during the taxable year on such other contracts.

§ 39.202-1 Reserve and other policy liability credit for adjusted normal-tax net income. (a) Life insurance companies in computing adjusted normal-tax net income are allowed a "reserve and other policy liability credit" in lieu of a deduction for the interest allowed on their reserves, for interest paid and for deferred dividends. This credit is a flat percentage of normal-tax net income. The figure is the same for all companies and is determined on the basis of the aggregate of the interest allowed on reserves, interest paid, and 2 percent of the reserves held for deferred dividends, as provided in section 202 (b) for all companies. The figure for each taxable year is to be determined and proclaimed by the Secretary, based on such data with respect to life insurance companies for the preceding taxable year as the Secretary considers representative for such year.

(b) The application of the reserve and other policy liability credit for the purpose of this section and section 203 may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Life Insurance Company for the calendar year 1942 had gross income, consisting of interest and rents, of $4,000,000, of which $700,000 consists of wholly tax-exempt interest. It had investment expenses of $100,000, real estate expenses of $80,000, and depreciation of $20,000. Its net income and its normal-tax net income was accordingly $3,100,000 ($4,000,000 less investment expenses, real estate expenses, and depreciation, totaling $200,000, and wholly tax-exempt interest of $700,000).

Since the Secretary determined and proclaimed that for the taxable year 1942 the figure based on data for the taxable year 1941 is 0.93, the X Life Insurance Company was entitled to a credit of $2,883,000 ($3,100,000×0.93) and its adjusted normal-tax net income as well as its adjusted corporation surtax net income was $217,000 ($3,100,000−$2,883,000).

Example (2). If in example (1) $100,000 of the $4,000,000 gross income of the X Life Insurance Company for the calendar year 1942 consisted of partially tax-exempt interest, in addition to the $700,000 of wholly tax-exempt interest, its corporation surtax net income and adjusted corporation surtax net income would be the same as in the above example. Its normal-tax net income, however, would be $3,000,000 ($4,000,000 less $200,000 less $700,000 less $100,000), its credit would be $2,790,000 ($3,000,000×0.93) and its adjusted normal-tax net income would be $210,000 ($3,000,000−$2,790,000).

§ 39.202–2 Adjustment for certain reserves. (a) A life insurance company writing contracts other than life insurance or annuity contracts (either separately or combined with noncancellable health and accident insurance contracts) must add to its normal-tax net income and to its corporation surtax net income, as an offset to its reserve and other policy liability credit, an amount equal to 3¼ percent of the mean of the unearned premiums and unpaid losses at the beginning and end of the taxable year on such other contracts as are not included in life insurance reserves. If such unearned premiums, however, are less than 25 percent of the net premiums written during the taxable year on such other contracts, then the amount to be added to normal-tax net income and to corporation surtax net income is 3¼ percent of 25 percent of the net premiums written during the taxable year on such other contracts plus 3¼ percent of the mean of the unpaid losses at the beginning and end of the taxable year on such other contracts. As used in this section, the term "unearned premiums" has the same meaning as in section 204 (b) (5) and § 39.204–2.

(b) For taxable years beginning in 1952, an amount equal to 8 times the amount of the applicable adjustment provided in paragraph (a) of this section, must be added to normal-tax net income for such year as a factor in determining 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income.

SEC. 203. Adjusted corporation surtax net income—(a) Definition. For the purposes of section 201, the term "adjusted corporation surtax net income" means the corporation surtax net income minus the reserve and other policy liability credit and plus the adjustment for certain reserves provided in section 202 (c).

(b) Reserve and other policy liability credit. As used in this section, the term "reserve and other policy liability credit" means an amount computed by multiplying the corporation surtax net income by the applicable figure determined and proclaimed under section 202 (b).

§ 39.203–1 Reserve and other policy liability credit for adjusted corporation surtax net income. Life insurance companies in computing adjusted corporation surtax net income are allowed a reserve and other policy liability credit. This credit is similar to that provided in section 202 except that it is based on corporation surtax net income, which includes partially tax-exempt interest. See § 39.202–1 for the application and effect of this provision.

§ 39.203A Statutory provisions; life insurance companies; 1951 and 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income.

SEC. 203A. 1951 and 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income—(a) 1951 and 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income. For the purposes of section 201, the term "1951 and 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income" means the normal-tax net income plus eight times the amount of the adjustment for certain reserves provided in section 202 (c) and minus the reserve interest credit, if any, provided in subsection (b) of this section.

(b) Reserve interest credit. For the purposes of subsection (a), the reserve interest credit shall be an amount determined as follows:

(1) Divide the amount of the adjusted net income (as defined in subsection (c)) by the amount of the required interest (as defined in subsection (d)).

(2) If the quotient obtained in paragraph (1) is 1.05 or more, the reserve interest credit shall be zero.

(3) If the quotient obtained in paragraph (1) is 1.00 or less, the reserve interest credit shall be an amount equal to 50 per centum of the normal-tax net income.

(4) If the quotient obtained in paragraph (1) is more than 1.00 but less than 1.05, the reserve interest credit shall be the amount obtained by multiplying the normal-tax net income by 10 times the difference between the figures 1.05 and such quotient.

(c) Adjusted net income. For the purposes of subsection (b) (1), the term "adjusted net income" means the net income computed without any deduction for tax-free interest minus 50 per centum of the amount of the adjustment for certain reserves provided in section 202 (c).

(d) Required interest. For the purposes of subsection (b) (1), the term "required interest" means the total of—

(1) The sum of the amounts obtained by multiplying (A) each rate of interest assumed in computing the taxpayer's life insurance reserves by (B) the means of the amounts of the taxpayer's adjusted reserves computed at that rate at the beginning and end of the taxable year,

(2) 2 per centum of the reserve for deferred dividends, and

[Sec. 203A as added by sec. 336 (b), Rev. Act 1951, amended by sec. 1 (b); Pub. Law 468, (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.203A–1 Tax on life insurance companies in the case of a taxable year beginning in 1952. (a) In the case of a taxable year beginning in 1952, the tax imposed on a life insurance company for such year shall consist of a tax upon the 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income of the company equal to 3¾ percent of the amount of such income not in excess of $200,000, plus 6½ percent of the amount of such income in excess of $200,000. The term "1952 adjusted normal-tax net income" means the normal-tax net income (consisting of net income computed as provided in § 39.201–7 less the credit for partially tax-exempt interest allowed under section 26 (a) and less the credit for dividends received allowed under section 26 (b)) for the taxable year beginning in 1952 plus eight times the amount of the adjustment for certain reserves computed as provided in section 202 (c) (see § 39.202–2), and minus the reserve interest credit, if any, provided in section 203A (b) (see § 39.203A–2) The reserve and other policy liability credit is not allowed for purposes of the computation of 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income.

(b) The tax imposed upon 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income by section 201 (a) is in lieu of the tax otherwise imposed on adjusted normal-tax net income and adjusted corporation surtax net income by section 201 (a)

§ 39.203A–2 Reserve interest credit. (a) In computing 1952 adjusted normal-tax net income, a reserve interest credit is allowed where the "adjusted net income" of the company is less than 105 percent of its required interest. For the purpose of computing the reserve interest credit, the term "adjusted net income" means the net income of the company without any deduction for tax-free interest otherwise allowed by section 201 (c) (7) (A) less 50 percent of the adjustment for certain reserves on contracts other than life insurance or annuity contracts provided in section 202 (c)

(b) The required interest for which a credit may be allowed consists of the total of:

(1) The sum of amounts obtained by multiplying each rate of interest assumed in computing life insurance reserves (see section 201 (c) (2) and § 39.201–4) by the means of the amounts of the adjusted reserves, as defined in section 201 (c) (3), computed at that rate at the beginning and the end of the taxable year;

(2) Two percent of the reserve for deferred dividends; and

(3) Interest paid.

(c) To determine the amount of the reserve interest credit, it is necessary to divide the amount of the adjusted net income by the amount of the required interest. If the adjusted net income is 100 percent or less of the required interest, the reserve interest credit is an amount equal to 50 percent of the normal-tax net income. If the adjusted net income is 105 percent or more of the required interest, the reserve interest credit is zero. If the adjusted net income is more than 100 percent and less than 105 percent of the required interest, the reserve interest credit is computed by multiplying the normal-tax net income by ten times the difference between 105 percent and the percentage established. Thus, if the adjusted net income of a life insurance company for the calendar year 1952 is $103,000 and the required interest for such year is $100,000, the adjusted net income is 103 percent of the required interest and the reserve interest, accordingly, is the normal-tax net income multiplied by 20 percent (10 times 2 percent, the difference between 105 percent and 103 percent)

(d) In determining the percentage of the adjusted net income to required interest for purposes of determining the reserve interest credit, the figures shall be computed to at least the nearest one-tenth of a percentage point.

SEC. 204. Insurance companies other than life or mutual—(a) Imposition of tax—(1) In general. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the normal-tax net income and upon the corporation surtax net income of every insurance company (other than a life or mutual insurance company) and every mutual marine insurance company and every mutual fire insurance company exclusively issuing either perpetual policies, or policies for which the sole premium charged is a single deposit which (except for such deduction of underwriting costs as may be provided) is refundable upon cancellation or expiration of the policy taxes computed as provided in section 13 (b) and in section 15 (b).

(2) Normal-tax and corporation surtax net income of foreign insurance companies other than life or mutual and foreign mutual marine. In the case of a foreign insurance company (other than a life or mutual insurance company) and a foreign mutual marine insurance company and a foreign mutual fire insurance company described in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the normal-tax net income shall be the net income from sources within the United States minus the credit provided in section 26 (a) and the credit provided in section 26 (b), and the corporation surtax net income shall be the net income from sources within the United States minus the credit provided in section 26 (b).

(3) No United States insurance business. Foreign insurance companies (other than a life or mutual insurance company) and foreign mutual marine insurance companies and foreign mutual fire insurance companies described in paragraph (1) of this subsection not carrying on an insurance business within the United States shall not be taxable under this section but shall be taxable as other foreign corporations.

(b) Definition of income, etc. In the case of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section—

(1) Gross income. "Gross income" means the sum of (A) the combined gross amount earned during the taxable year, from investment income and from underwriting income as provided in this subsection, computed on the basis of the underwriting and investment exhibit of the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, and (B) gain during the taxable year from the sale or other disposition of property, and (C) all other items constituting gross income under section 22; except that in the case of a mutual fire insurance company described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this section, the amount of single deposit premiums paid to such company shall not be included in gross income;

(2) Net income. "Net income" means the gross income as defined in paragraph (1) of this subsection less the deductions allowed by subsection (c) of this section;

(3) Investment income. "Investment income" means the gross amount of income earned during the taxable year from interest, dividends, and rents, computed as follows:

To all interest, dividends and rents received during the taxable year, add interest, dividends and rents due and accrued at the end of the taxable year, and deduct all interest, dividends and rents due and accrued at the end of the preceding taxable year;

(4) Underwriting income. "Underwriting income" means the premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year less losses incurred and expenses incurred;

(5) Premiums earned. "Premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year" means an amount computed as follows:

From the amount of gross premiums written on insurance contracts during the taxable year, deduct return premiums and premiums paid for reinsurance. To the result so obtained add unearned premiums on outstanding business at the end of the preceding taxable year and deduct unearned premiums on outstanding business at the end of the taxable year. For the purposes of this subsection, unearned premiums shall include life insurance reserves, as defined in section 201 (c) (2), pertaining to the life, burial, or funeral insurance, or annuity business of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section and not qualifying as a life insurance company under section 201 (b);

(6) Losses incurred. "Losses incurred" means losses incurred during the taxable year on insurance contracts, computed as follows:

To losses paid during the taxable year, add salvage and reinsurance recoverable outstanding at the end of the preceding taxable year, and deduct salvage and reinsurance recoverable outstanding at the end of the taxable year. To the result so obtained add all unpaid losses outstanding at the end of the taxable year and deduct unpaid losses outstanding at the end of the preceding taxable year;

(7) Expenses incurred. "Expenses incurred" means all expenses shown on the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, and shall be computed as follows:

To all expenses paid during the taxable year add expenses unpaid at the end of the taxable year and deduct expenses unpaid at the end of the preceding taxable year. For the purpose of computing the net income subject to the tax imposed by this section there shall be deducted from expenses incurred as defined in this paragraph all expenses incurred which are not allowed as deductions by subsection (c) of this section.

(c) Deductions allowed. In computing the net income of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section there shall be allowed as deductions:

(1) All ordinary and necessary expenses incurred, as provided in section 23 (a);

(2) All interest as provided in section 23 (b);

(3) Taxes as provided in section 23 (c);

(4) Losses incurred as defined in subsection (b) (6) of this section;

(5) Capital losses. Capital losses to the extent provided in section 117 plus losses from capital assets sold or exchanged in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders. Capital assets shall be considered as sold or exchanged in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders to the extent that the gross receipts from their sale or exchange are not greater than the excess, if any, for the taxable year of the sum of dividends and similar distributions paid to policyholders in their capacity as such, losses paid, and expenses paid over the sum of interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums received. In the application of section 117 (e) for the purposes of this section, the net capital loss for the taxable year shall be the amount by which losses for such year from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceeds the sum of the gains from such sales or exchanges and whichever of the following amounts is the lesser:

(A) The corporation surtax net income (computed without regard to gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets); or

(B) Losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets sold or exchanged to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders;

(6) Debts in the nature of agency balances and bills receivable which become worthless within the taxable year;

(7) The amount of interest earned during the taxable year which under section 22 (b) (4) is excluded from gross income;

(8) A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, as provided in section 23 (l);

(9) Charitable, and so forth, contributions, as provided in section 23 (q);

(10) Deductions (other than those specified in this subsection) as provided in section 23;

(11) Dividends and similar distributions paid or declared to policyholders in their capacity as such, except in the case of a mutual fire insurance company described in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this section. The term "paid or declared" shall be construed according to the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of the insurance company.

(d) Deductions of foreign corporations. In the case of a foreign corporation the deductions allowed in this section shall be allowed to the extent provided in Supplement I in the case of a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States.

(e) Double deductions. Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the same item to be twice deducted.

(f) Credits under section 26. For the purposes of this section, in computing normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income, the credits provided in section 26 shall be allowed in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and (15) (a).

[Sec. 204 as amended by secs. 204 and 226 (a), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 124 (b), 160 (d), and 164, Rev. Act 1942; sec. 135, Rev. Act 1943; sec. 122 (g) (7), Rev. Act 1945; sec. 121 (g) (4), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.204-1 Tax on insurance companies other than life or mutual, mutual marine insurance companies, and mutual fire insurance companies issuing perpetual policies. (a) All insurance companies, other than life or mutual or foreign insurance companies not carrying on an insurance business within the United States, and all mutual marine insurance companies and mutual fire insurance companies exclusively issuing either perpetual policies, or policies for which the sole premium charged is a single deposit which, except for such deduction of underwriting costs as may be provided, is refundable upon cancellation or expiration of the policy, are subject to the tax imposed by section 204. As used in this section and §§ 39.204-2 and 39.204-3, the term "insurance companies" means only those companies subject to the tax imposed by section 204. For what constitutes an insurance company, see § 39.3797-7. The net income of insurance companies is defined in section 204 and differs from the net income of other corporations. All provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and of these regulations not inconsistent with the specific provisions of section 204 are applicable to the assessment and collection of the tax imposed by section 204 (a) and insurance companies are subject to the same penalties as are provided in the case of returns and payment of income tax by other corporations. Since section 204 provides that the underwriting and investment exhibit of the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners shall be the basis for computing gross income and since the annual statement is rendered on the calendar year basis, the returns under section 204 shall be made on the basis of the calendar year and shall be on Form 1120. Insurance companies are entitled, in computing normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income, to the credits provided in section 26 in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and 15 (a)

(b) Foreign insurance companies not carrying on an insurance business within the United States are not taxable under section 204 but are taxable as other foreign corporations. See section 231.

(c) Insurance companies are subject to both normal tax and surtax. The normal tax shall be computed as provided in section 13 (b) For what constitutes normal-tax net income, see § 39.13-1. The surtax shall be computed as provided in section 15 (b) For what constitutes corporation surtax net income, see § 39.15-1. For the circumstances under which the $25,000 exemption from surtax for certain taxable years may be disallowed in whole or in part, see § 39.15-2. For alternative tax where the net long-term capital gain for any taxable year exceeds the net short-term capital loss, see section 117 (c) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.204-2 Gross income. (a) Gross income as defined in section 204 (b) means the gross amount of income earned during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and premium income, computed on the basis of the underwriting and investment exhibit of the annual statement approved by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, as well as the gain derived from the sale or other disposition of property, and all other items constituting gross income under section 22, except that in the case of a mutual fire insurance company described in § 39.204-1 the amount of single deposit premiums received, but not assessments, shall be excluded from gross income. See section 22 (a) (b) and (c) and sections 28 and 334. It does not include increase in liabilities during the year on account of reinsurance treaties, remittances from the home office of a foreign insurance company to the United States branch, borrowed money, or gross increase due to adjustments in book value of capital assets. The underwriting and investment exhibit is presumed clearly to reflect the true net income of the company and insofar as it is not inconsistent with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code will be recognized and used as a basis for that purpose. All items of the exhibit, however, do not reflect an insurance company's income as defined in the Code. By reason of the definition of investment income, miscellaneous items which are intended to reflect surplus but do not properly enter into the computation of income, such as dividends declared to shareholders in their capacity as such, home office remittances and receipts, and special deposits, are ignored. Gain or loss from agency balances and bills receivable not admitted as assets on the underwriting and investment exhibit will be ignored, excepting only such agency balances and bills receivable as have been allowed as deductions for worthless debts or, having been previously so allowed, are recovered during the taxable year. In computing "premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year" the amount of the unearned premiums shall include (1) life insurance reserves as defined in section 201 (c) (2) and § 39.201-4 pertaining to the life, burial, or funeral insurance, or annuity business of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 204 and not qualifying as a life insurance company under section 201 (b) and (2) liability for return premiums under a rate credit or retrospective rating plan based on experience, such as the "War Department Insurance Rating Plan," and which return premiums are therefore not earned premiums. In computing "losses incurred" the determination of unpaid losses at the close of each year must represent actual unpaid losses as nearly as it is possible to ascertain them.

(b) Every insurance company to which this section applies must be prepared to establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that the part of the deduction for "losses incurred" which represents unpaid losses at the close of the taxable year comprises only actual unpaid losses stated in amounts which, based upon the facts in each case and the company's experience with similar cases, can be said to represent a fair and reasonable estimate of the amount the company will be required to pay. Amounts included in, or added to, the estimates of such losses which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, are in excess of the actual liability determined as provided in the preceding sentence will be disallowed as a deduction. The Commissioner may require any such insurance company to submit such detailed information with respect to its actual experience as is deemed necessary to establish the reasonableness of the deduction for "losses incurred."

(c) That part of the deduction for "losses incurred" which represents an adjustment to "losses paid" for "salvage and reinsurance recoverable" shall, except as hereinafter provided, include all salvage in course of liquidation, and all reinsurance in process of collection not otherwise taken into account as a reduction of "losses paid," outstanding at the end of the taxable year. Salvage in course of liquidation includes all property (other than cash), real or personal, tangible or intangible, except that which may not be included by reason of express statutory provisions (or rules and regulations of an insurance department) of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia in which the company transacts business. Such salvage in course of liquidation shall be taken into account to the extent of the value thereof at the end of the taxable year as determined from a fair and reasonable estimate based upon either the facts in each case or the company's experience with similar cases. Cash received during the taxable year with respect to items of salvage or reinsurance shall be taken into account in computing losses paid during such taxable year.

§ 39.204-3. Deductions. (a) The deductions allowable are specified in section 204 (c) and by reason of the provisions of section 204 (c) (10) include deductions (other than those specified in section 204 (c)) as provided in section 23. The deductions, however, are subject to the limitation provided in section 24 (a) (5) The net operating loss deduction allowed by section 23 (s) is computed under section 122 and the regulations thereunder. In computing net operating loss or net income of insurance companies for the purposes of section 122, "gross income" shall mean gross income as defined in section 204 (b) (1) and the allowable deductions shall be those allowed by section 204 (c) with the exceptions and limitations set forth in section 122 (d) In addition to the deduction for capital losses provided in section 117, insurance companies are allowed a deduction for losses from capital assets sold or exchanged in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders. A special rule is provided for the application of the 5-year capital loss carry-over provisions of section 117 (e) The deduction is the same as that allowed mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207, see section 207 (b) (4) (F) and the regulations thereunder. Insurance companies, other than mutual fire insurance companies described in § 39.204-1, are also allowed a deduction for dividends and similar distributions paid or declared to policyholders in their capacity as such. The deduction is otherwise the same as that allowed mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207, see section 207 (b) (3) and the regulations thereunder.

(b) Among the items which may not be deducted are income and profits taxes imposed by the United States, income and profits taxes imposed by any foreign country or possession of the United States (in cases where the company chooses to claim to any extent a credit for such taxes) taxes assessed against local benefits, decrease during the year due to adjustments in the book value of capital assets, decrease in liabilities during the year on account of reinsurance treaties, dividends paid to shareholders in their capacity as such, remittances to the home office of a foreign insurance company by the United States branch, and borrowed money repaid.

(c) In computing net income of insurance companies, losses sustained during the taxable year from the sale or other disposition of property are deductible subject to the limitation contained in section 117 (d) (1) Insurance companies are entitled to the alternative taxes provided in section 117 (c)

§ 39.205–207 Statutory provisions; insurance companies; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; computation of gross income; tax on mutual insurance companies other than life or marine.

SEC. 205. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. The amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by foreign countries or possessions of the United States shall be allowed as a credit against the tax of a domestic insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 201, 204, or 207, to the extent provided in the case of a domestic corporation in section 131, and in the case of the tax imposed by section 201 or 204 "net income" as used in section 131 means the net income as defined in this Supplement.

SEC. 206. Computation of gross income. The gross income of insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 201 or 204 shall not be determined in the manner provided in section 119.

SEC. 207. Mutual insurance companies other than life or marine—(a) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the income of every mutual insurance company (other than a life or a marine insurance company or a fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 204 and other than an interinsurer or reciprocal underwriter) a tax computed under paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) whichever is the greater and upon the income of every mutual insurance company (other than a life or marine insurance company or a fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 204) which is an interinsurer or reciprocal underwriter, a tax computed under paragraph (3)

(1) If the corporation surtax net income is over $3,000 a tax computed as follows:

(A) Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1950, and before April 1, 1951. * * *

(B) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954—

(i) Normal tax. A normal tax of 30 per centum of the normal-tax net income, or 60 per centum of the amount by which the normal-tax net income exceeds $3,000, whichever is the lesser; plus

(ii) Surtax. A surtax of 22 per centum of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000.

(C) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954. In the case of a taxable year beginning after March 31, 1954—

(i) Normal tax. A normal tax of 25 per centum of the normal-tax net income, or 50 per centum of the amount by which the normal-tax net income exceeds $3,000, whichever is the lesser; plus

(ii) Surtax. A surtax of 22 per centum of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000.

(2) If for the taxable year the gross amount of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders, minus the interest which under section 22 (b) (4) is excluded from gross income, exceeds $75,000, a tax equal to the excess of—

(A) 1 per centum of the amounts so computed, or 2 per centum of the excess of the amount so computed over $75,000, whichever is the lesser, over

(3) In the case of an interinsurer or reciprocal underwriter, if the corporation surtax net income is over $50,000 a tax computed as follows:

(A) Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1950, and before April 1, 1951. * * *

(B) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954—

(i) Normal tax. A normal tax of 30 per centum of the normal-tax net income, or 60 per centum of the amount by which the normal-tax net income exceeds $50,000, whichever is the lesser; plus

(ii) Surtax. A surtax of 22 per centum of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000, or 33 per centum of the amount by which the corporation surtax net income exceeds $50,000, whichever is the lesser.

(C) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954. In the case of a taxable year beginning after March 31, 1954—

(i) Normal tax. A normal tax of 25 per centum of the normal-tax net income, or 50 per centum of the amount by which the normal-tax net income exceeds $50,000, whichever is the lesser; plus

(ii) Surtax. A surtax of 22 per centum of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000, or 33 per centum of the amount by which the corporation surtax net income exceeds $50,000, whichever is the lesser.

(4) Gross amount received over $75,000 but less than $125,000. If the gross amount received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) is over $75,000 but less than $125,000 the amount ascertained under paragraph (1), paragraph (2) (A), and paragraph (3) shall be an amount which bears the same proportion to the amount ascertained under such paragraph, computed without reference to this paragraph, as the excess over $75,000 of such gross amount received bears to $50,000.

(5) Foreign mutual insurance companies other than life or marine. In the case of a foreign mutual insurance company (other than a life or marine insurance company or a fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 204), the net income shall be the net income from sources within the United States and the gross amount of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums shall be the amount of such income from sources within the United States.

(6) No United States insurance business. Foreign mutual insurance companies (other than a life or marine insurance company or a fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 204) not carrying on an insurance business within the United States shall not be taxable under this section but shall be taxable as other foreign corporations.

(b) Definition of income, etc. In the case of an insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section—

(1) Gross investment income. "Gross investment income" means the gross amount of income during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets to the extent provided in section 117;

(2) Net premiums. "Net premiums" means gross premiums (including deposits and assessments) written or received on insurance contracts during the taxable year less return premiums and premiums paid or incurred for reinsurance. Amounts returned where the amount is not fixed in the insurance contract but depends upon the experience of the company or the discretion of the management shall not be included in return premiums but shall be treated as dividends to policyholders under paragraph (3);

(3) Dividends to policyholders. "Dividends to policyholders" means dividends and similar distributions paid or declared to policyholders. The term "paid or declared" shall be construed according to the method regularly employed in keeping the books of the insurance company;

(4) Net income. The term "net income" means the gross investment income less—

(A) Tax-free interest. The amount of interest which under section 22 (b) (4) is excluded for the taxable year from gross income;

(B) Investment expenses. Investment expenses paid or accrued during the taxable year. If any general expenses are in part assigned to or included in the investment expenses, the total deduction under this subparagraph shall not exceed one-fourth of 1 per centum of the mean of the book value of the invested assets held at the beginning and end of the taxable year plus one-fourth of the amount by which net income computed without any deduction for investment expenses allowed by this subparagraph, or for tax-free interest allowed by subsection (b) (4) (A), exceeds 3¾ per centum of the book value of the mean of the invested assets held at the beginning and end of the taxable year.

(C) Real estate expenses. Taxes and other expenses paid or accrued during the taxable year exclusively upon or with respect to the real estate owned by the company, not including taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed, and not including any amount paid out for new buildings, or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property The deduction allowed by this paragraph shall be allowed in the case of taxes imposed upon a shareholder of a company upon his interest as shareholder, which are paid or accrued by the company without reimbursement from the shareholder, but in such cases no deduction shall be allowed the shareholder for the amount of such taxes;

(D) Depreciation. A reasonable allowance, as provided in section 23 (l), for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence;

(E) Interest paid or accrued. All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation under this chapter.

(F) Capital losses. Capital losses to the extent provided in section 117 plus losses from capital assets sold or exchanged in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders. Capital assets shall be considered as sold or exchanged in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders to the extent that the gross receipts from their sale or exchange are not greater than the excess, if any, for the taxable year of the sum of dividends and similar distributions paid to policyholders, losses paid, and expenses paid over the sum of interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums received. In the application of section 117 (e) for the purposes of this section, the net capital loss for the taxable year shall be the amount by which losses for such year from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceeds the sum of the gains from such sales or exchanges and whichever of the following amounts is the lesser:

(i) The corporation surtax net income (computed without regard to gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets); or

(ii) Losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets sold or exchanged to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders.

(c) Rental value of real estate. The deduction under subsection (b) (4) (C) or (b) (4) (D) of this section on account of any real estate owned and occupied in whole or in part by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section, shall be limited to an amount which bears the same ratio to such deduction (computed without regard to this subsection) as the rental value of the space not so occupied bears to the rental value of the entire property.

(d) Amortization of premium and accrual of discount. The gross amount of income during the taxable year from interest, the deduction provided in subsection (b) (4) (A), and the credit allowed against net income in section 26 (a) shall each be decreased by the appropriate amortization of premium and increased by the appropriate accrual of discount attributable to the taxable year on bonds, notes, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness held by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by this section. Such amortization and accrual shall be determined (1) in accordance with the method regularly employed by such company, if such method is reasonable, and (2) in all other cases, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(e) Deductions of foreign corporations. In the case of a foreign corporation the deductions allowed in this section shall be allowed to the extent provided in Supplement I in the case of a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States.

(f) Double deductions. Nothing in this section shall be construed to permit the same item to be twice deducted.

(g) Credits under section 26. For the purposes of this section, in computing normal tax net income and corporation surtax net income, the credits provided in section 26 shall be allowed in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and 15 (a).

§ 39.207-1 Tax on mutual insurance companies other than life or marine or fire insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 204—(a) In general. (1) All mutual insurance companies, including foreign insurance companies carrying on an insurance business within the United States, not taxable under section 201 or 204 and not specifically exempt under the provisions of section 101 (11) are subject to the tax imposed by section 207 (a) on their investment income or on their gross income, whichever tax is the greater, except interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters which are taxed only on their investment income. For the alternative tax, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 207 (a) (1) or (3) where the net long-term capital gain for any taxable year exceeds the net short-term capital loss, see section 117 (c) (1) and the regulations thereunder.

(2) The taxable income of mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207 differs from the taxable income of other corporations. See section 207 (a) (2) and section 207 (b) Such companies are entitled, in computing normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income, to the credits provided in section 26 in the manner and to the extent provided in sections 13 (a) and 15 (a) The gross amount of income during the taxable year from interest, the deductions under section 207 (b) (4) (A) for wholly tax-exempt interest, and the credit under section 26 (a) for partially tax-exempt interest, are decreased by the appropriate amortization of premiums and increased by the appropriate accrual of discount attributable to the taxable year on bonds, notes, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness held by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207. See section 207 (d) and § 39.207-6.

(3) All provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and of the regulations in this part not inconsistent with the specific provisions of section 207 are applicable to the assessment and collection of the tax imposed by section 207 (a) and mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207 are subject to the same penalties as are provided in the case of returns and payment of income tax by other corporations. The return shall be on Form 1120M.

(4) Foreign mutual insurance companies not carrying on an insurance business within the United States are not taxable under section 207 (a) but are taxable as other foreign corporations. See section 231.

(5) Mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207, except interinsurers or reciprocal underwriters, with corporation surtax net incomes of over $3,000 or with gross amounts of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums (minus dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest) in excess of $75,000, are subject to a tax computed under section 207 (a) (1) or section 207 (a) (2) whichever is the greater. Interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters with corporation surtax net incomes of over $50,000 are subject to a tax computed under section 207 (a) (3)

(b) Rates of tax. (1) The normal tax under section 207 (a) (1) and 207 (a) (3) except as hereinafter indicated, is computed upon normal-tax net income at the following rates:

	Percent
(i) For taxable years beginning before Apr. 1, 1954	30
(ii) For taxable years beginning after Mar. 31, 1954	25

(2) The surtax under section 207 (a) (1) and 207 (a) (3) except as hereinafter indicated, is computed on that portion of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000 at the rate of 22 percent. The tax under section 207 (a) (2) except as hereinafter indicated, is 1 percent of the gross amount of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and minus wholly tax-exempt interest.

(3) Under section 207 (a) (1) companies with normal-tax net incomes of over $3,000 and not over $6,000 pay a normal tax, at a specified rate, on that portion of the normal-tax net income in excess of $3,000. The rates applicable in computing the normal tax of such companies are as follows:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before Apr. 1, 1954	60
For taxable years beginning after Mar. 31, 1954	50

Under section 207 (a) (2) companies with gross amounts of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and minus wholly tax-exempt interest, of over $75,000 and not over $150,000 pay a tax equal to 2 percent of that portion in excess of $75,000. Under section 207 (a) (3) interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters with normal-tax net incomes of over $50,000 and not over $100,000 pay a normal tax computed on that portion of the normal-tax net income in excess of $50,000 at the following rates:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before Apr. 1, 1954	60
For taxable years beginning after Mar. 31, 1954	50

Under section 207 (a) (3) interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters with corporation surtax net incomes of over $50,000 and not over $100,000 pay a surtax, at the rate of 33 percent, on that portion of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $50,000.

(4) Section 207 (a) (4) provides for an adjustment of the amount computed under section 207 (a) (1) section 207 (a) (2) (A) and section 207 (a) (3) where the gross amount received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) is over $75,000 and less than $125,000. The adjustment reduces the tax otherwise computed under those sections to an amount which bears the same proportion to such tax as the excess over $75,000 bears to $50,000.

(c) Application. The application of section 207 (a) (1) (2), (3), and (4) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The W Company, a mutual casualty insurance company, for the calendar year 1952 has corporation surtax net income of $5,500 and, due to partially tax-exempt interest of $800, normal-tax net income of $4,700. The gross amount of income of the W Company from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest, is $150,000. Its normal tax under section 207 (a) (1) for the calendar year 1952 is 60 percent of $1,700 ($4,700-$3,000), or $1,020, since its normal-tax net income is not over $6,000. It is not liable for surtax for the calendar year 1952 as its surtax net income does not exceed $25,000. It has no surtax and, therefore, its total tax under section 207 (a) (1) is the normal tax of $1,020. The tax under section 207 (a) (2) is 2 percent of $75,000 ($150,000-$75,000), or $1,500. Since the tax under section 207 (a) (2) exceeds the tax under section 207 (a) (1), the tax under section 207 (a) is $1,500, namely, that imposed by section 207 (a) (2).

Example (2). If in the above example the normal-tax net income were not over $3,000, the corporation surtax net income were not over $25,000, the gross amount received from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) were $90,000, and the gross amount of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest, were $70,000, the W Company would be required to file an income tax return but due to section 207 (a) no income tax would be imposed.

Example (3). The X Company, a mutual casualty insurance company, for the calendar year 1952 has corporation surtax net income of $28,000 and, due to partially tax-exempt interest of $5,000, normal-tax net income of $23,000. The gross amount of income of the X Company from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest, is $1,200,000. Under section 207 (a) (1) its normal tax for the calendar year 1952 is 30 percent of $23,000, or $6,900, and the surtax is 22 percent of $3,000 ($28,000–$25,000), or $660. The combined tax under section 207 (a) (1) is $7,560 ($6,900 plus $660). The tax under section 207 (a) (2) is 1 percent of $1,200,000, or $12,000. Since the tax under section 207 (a) (2) exceeds the tax under section 207 (a) (1), the tax under section 207 (a) is $12,000, namely, that imposed by section 207 (a) (2).

Example (4). The Y Company, a mutual fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207, for the calendar year 1952 has corporation surtax net income of $35,000 and, due to partially tax-exempt interest of $5,000, normal-tax net income of $30,000. The gross amount received from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) is $120,000, and the gross amount of income from interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums, minus dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest, is $100,000. Under section 207 (a) (1), without application of section 207 (a) (4), the normal tax would be 30 percent of $30,000, or $9,000, since this is less than $16,200, 60 percent of $27,000 (excess of normal-tax net income of $30,000 over $3,000); and the surtax would be 22 percent of $10,000 (excess of corporation surtax net income of $35,000 over $25,000), or $2,200. The combined tax of $11,200 ($9,000 plus $2,200) would then be reduced by applying section 207 (a) (4), since the gross receipts are between $75,000 and $125,000. The tax under section 207 (a) (1), as thus adjusted, would be 90 percent of $11,200, or $10,080, since $45,000 (excess of $120,000 over $75,000) is 90 percent of $50,000. Under section 207 (a) (2) (A), without reference to section 207 (a) (4), the tax is 2 percent of $25,000 (excess of $100,000 over $75,000), or $500, since this is less than $1,000, 1 percent of $100,000. Applying section 207 (a) (4) reduces this to $450, or 90 percent of $500. Since $10,080, the tax under section 207 (a) (1), as adjusted, exceeds $450, the tax under section 207 (a) (2), as adjusted, the tax under section 207 (a) (1), as adjusted, is applicable. The Y Company would accordingly pay a combined normal tax and surtax of $10,080.

Example (5). The Z Exchange, an inter-insurer, for the calendar year 1952 has corporation surtax net income of $60,000 and, due to partially tax-exempt interest of $12,000, normal-tax net income of $48,000. The gross amount received from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) is $2,700,000. The Z Exchange is not liable for normal tax under section 207 (a) (3) for the calendar year 1952 as its normal-tax net income does not exceed $50,000. Its surtax is 33 percent of $10,000 ($60,000 minus $50,000), or $3,300, since that amount is less than $7,700, 22 percent of $35,000 (excess of corporation surtax net income of $60,000 over $25,000). Since the Z Exchange has no normal tax, is not subject to the tax imposed by section 207 (a) (2), and is not entitled to the adjustment provided in section 207 (a) (4), its total tax under section 207 (a) is $3,300.

§ 39.207–2 Net premiums. Net premiums are one of the items used, together with interest, dividends, and rents, less dividends to policyholders and wholly tax-exempt interest, in determining tax liability under section 207 (a) (2) They are also used in section 207 (b) (4) (F) in determining the limitation on certain capital losses and in the application of section 117 (e) The term "net premiums" is defined in section 207 (b) (2) and includes deposits and assessments, but excludes amounts returned to policyholders which are treated as dividends under section 207 (b) (3)

§ 39.207–3 Dividends to policyholders. (a) "Dividends to policyholders" is one of the deductions used, together with wholly tax-exempt interest, in determining tax liability under section 207 (a) (2) They are also used in section 207 (b) (4) (F) in determining the limitation on certain capital losses and in the application of section 117 (e). The term "dividends to policyholders" is defined in section 207 (b) (3) as dividends and similar distributions paid or declared to policyholders. It includes amounts returned to policyholders where the amount is not fixed in the insurance contract but depends upon the experience of the company or the discretion of the management. Such amounts are not to be treated as return premiums under section 207 (b) (2). Similar distributions include such payments as the so-called unabsorbed premium deposits returned to policyholders by factory mutual fire insurance companies. The term "paid or declared" is to be construed according to the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of the insurance company, and such method shall be consistently followed with respect to all deductions (including dividends and similar distributions to policyholders) and all items of income.

(b) If the method of accounting so employed is the cash receipts and disbursements method, the deduction is limited to the dividends and similar distributions actually paid to policyholders in the taxable year. If, on the other hand, the method of accounting so employed is the accrual method, the deduction, or a reasonably accurate estimate thereof, for dividends and similar distributions declared to policyholders for any taxable year will, in general, be computed as follows:

To dividends and similar distributions paid during the taxable year add the amount of dividends and similar distributions declared but unpaid at the end of the taxable year and deduct dividends and similar distributions declared but unpaid at the beginning of the taxable year.

If an insurance company on the accrual basis does not use the above method in determining the deduction for dividends and similar distributions declared to policyholders, it must submit with its return a full and complete explanation of the method actually used. For the rule as to when dividends are considered paid, see § 39.27 (b)–2 (a)

§ 39.207–4 Net income and deductions—(a) In general. The net income of a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207 is its gross investment income, namely, the gross amount of income during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets, less the deductions provided in section 207 (b) (4) for wholly tax-exempt interest, investment expenses, real estate expenses, depreciation, interest paid or accrued, and capital losses to the extent provided in section 117. In addition to the limitations on deductions relating to real estate owned and occupied by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207 provided in section 207 (c) the adjustment for amortization of premium and accrual of discount provided in section 207 (d) and the limitation on the deduction for investment expenses where general expenses are allocated to investment income provided in section 207 (b) (4) (B) mutual insurance companies subject to the tax imposed by section 207 are subject to the limitation on deductions relating to wholly tax-exempt income provided in section 24 (a) (5). Such companies are not entitled to the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s).

(b) Wholly tax-exempt interest. Interest which in the case of other taxpayers is excluded from gross income by section 22 (b) (4) but included in the gross investment income by section 207 (b) (1) is allowed as a deduction from gross investment income by section 207 (b) (4) (A).

(c) Investment expenses. The deduction allowed by section 207 (b) (4) (B) for investment expenses is the same as that allowed life insurance companies by section 201 (c) (7) (B) except that provision is made for both the cash and accrual method of accounting. See § 39.201–7 (c).

(d) Taxes and expenses with respect to real estate. The deduction allowed by section 207 (b) (4) (C) for taxes and expenses with respect to real estate owned by the company is the same as that allowed life insurance companies by section 201 (c) (7) (C) except that provision is made for both the cash and accrual method of accounting. See § 39.201–7 (d)

(e) Depreciation. The deduction allowed by section 207 (b) (4) (D) for depreciation is the same as that allowed life insurance companies by section 201 (c) (7) (D). See § 39.201–7 (e)

(f) Interest paid or accrued. The deduction allowed by section 207 (b) (4) (E) for interest on indebtedness is the same as that allowed other corporations by section 23 (b). See § 39.23 (b)–1.

(g) Capital losses. (1) The deduction for capital losses under section 207 (b) (4) (F) includes not only capital losses to the extent provided in section 117 but in addition thereto losses from capital assets sold or exchanged to provide funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders. Losses in the latter case may be deducted from ordinary income while the deduction for losses under section 117 is limited to the gains. See section 117 (d) (1)

(2) Capital assets are considered as sold or exchanged to provide for the funds or payments specified in section 207 (b) (4) (F) to the extent that the gross receipts from the sale or exchange of such assets are not greater than the excess, if any, for the taxable year of the sum of dividends and similar distributions paid to policyholders, and losses and expenses paid over the sum of interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums received. If, by reason of a particular sale or exchange of a capital asset, gross receipts are greater than such excess, the gross receipts and the resulting loss should be apportioned and the excess included in capital losses subject to the provisions of section 117. Capital losses actually used to reduce net income in any taxable year may not again be used in a succeeding taxable year as an offset against capital gains in that year and for that purpose a special rule is set forth for the application of section 117 (e)

(3) The application of section 207 (b) (4) (F) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Company, a mutual fire insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207, in the taxable year 1952 sells capital assets in order to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders. The gross receipts from the sale are $60,000, resulting in losses of $20,000. It pays dividends to policyholders of $150,000. It sustains losses of $25,000, and pays expenses of $25,000. It receives interest of $50,000, dividends of $5,000, rents of $4,000, and net premiums of $66,000. The excess of the sum of dividends, losses and expenses paid ($200,000) over the sum of interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums received ($125,000) is $75,000. As the gross receipts from the sale of capital assets ($60,000) do not exceed such excess ($75,000), the losses of $20,000 are allowable as a deduction from gross investment income.

Example (2). If in the above example the gross receipts were $76,000 and the last capital asset sold, for the purpose therein specified, resulted in gross receipts of $2,000 and a loss of $500, the losses allowable as a deduction from gross investment income would be $19,750. The last sale made the gross receipts of $76,000 exceed by $1,000 the excess ($75,000) of the sum of dividends, losses, and expenses paid ($200,000) over the sum of interest, dividends, rents, and net premiums received ($125,000). The gross receipts and the resulting loss from the last sale are apportioned on the basis of the ratio of the excess of $1,000 to the gross receipts of $2,000, or 50 percent. Fifty percent of the loss of $500 is deducted from the total loss of $20,000. The remaining gross receipts of $1,000 and the proportionate loss of $250 should be reported as capital losses under section 117.

Example (3). If in example (1) the X Company had a corporation surtax net income of $9,750 and, under the provisions of section 117, had capital losses of $18,000 and capital gains of $10,000, the net capital loss for the taxable year 1952, in applying section 117 (e) for the purposes of section 207 (b) (4) (F), would be $8,000. This is determined by subtracting from total losses of $38,000 ($18,000 capital losses under section 117 plus $20,000 other capital losses under section 207 (b) (4) (F)) the sum of capital gains of $10,000 and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assests sold or exchanged to obtain funds to meet abnormal insurance losses and to provide for the payment of dividends and similar distributions to policyholders of $20,000. Such losses of $20,000 are added to capital gains of $10,000, since they are less than corporation surtax net income, computed without regard to gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets, of $29,750 ($9,750 corporation surtax net income plus $20,000 other capital losses under section 207 (b) (4) (F) plus the portion of capital losses allowable under section 117 of $10,000 minus capital gains under section 117 of $10,000).

§ 39.207-5 Real estate owned and occupied. The limitation in section 207 (c) on the amount allowable as a deduction for taxes, expenses, and depreciation upon or with respect to any real estate owned and occupied in whole or in part by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207 is the same as that provided in the case of life insurance companies by section 201 (d) See § 39.201-8.

§ 39.207-6 Amortization of premium and accrual of discount. Section 207 (d) makes provision for the appropriate amortization of premium and the appropriate accrual of discount, attributable to the taxable year, on bonds, notes, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness held by a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207. Such amortization and accrual is the same as that provided for life insurance companies by section 201 (e) and shall be determined in accordance with § 39.201-9, except that in determining the premium and discount of a mutual insurance company subject to the tax imposed by section 207 the basis provided in section 113 shall be used in lieu of the acquisition value.

SUPPLEMENT H—NONRESIDENT ALIEN INDIVIDUALS

SEC. 211. Tax on nonresident alien individuals—(a) No United States business or office—(1) General rule—(A) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year, in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 11 and 12, upon the amount received, by every nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States, from sources within the United States as interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business), dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income, a tax of 30 per centum of such amount, except that such rate shall be reduced, in the case of a resident of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, to such rate (not less than 5 per centum) as may be provided by treaty with such country.

(B) Capital gains of aliens temporarily present in the United States. In the case of a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business in the United States, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year, in addition to the tax imposed by subparagraph (A)—

(i) If he is present in the United States for a period or periods aggregating less than ninety days during such taxable year—a tax of 30 per centum of the amount by which his gains, derived from sources within the United States, from sales or exchanges of capital assets effected during his presence in the United States exceed his losses, allocable to sources within the United States, from such sales or exchanges effected during such presence; or

(ii) If he is present in the United States for a period or periods aggregating ninety days or more during such taxable year—a tax of 30 per centum of the amount by which his gains, derived from sources within the United States, from sales or exchanges of capital assets effected at any time during such year exceed his losses, allocable to sources within the United States, from such sales or exchanges effected at any time during such year.

For the purposes of this subparagraph, gains and losses shall be taken into account only if, and to the extent that, they would be recognized and taken into account if such individual were engaged in trade or business in the United States, except that such gains and losses shall be computed without regard to the provisions of section 117 (b) and such losses shall be determined without the benefits of the capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e).

(C) Cross reference. For inclusion in computation of tax of amount specified in shareholder's consent, see section 28.

(2) Aggregate more than $15,400. The taxes imposed by paragraph (1) shall not apply to any individual if during the taxable year the sum of—

(A) The aggregate amount received from the sources specified in paragraph (1) (A), plus

(B) The amount, determined in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (1) (B), by which gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceed losses from such sales or exchanges, is more than $15,400.

(3) Residents of certain countries. The provisions of paragraph (2) shall not apply to a resident of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, so long as there is in effect with such country a treaty which provides otherwise.

(b) United States business or office. A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business in the United States shall be taxable without regard to the provisions of subsection (a). As used in this section, section 119, section 143, section 144, and section 231, the phrase "engaged in trade or business within the United States" includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not include the performance of personal services for a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of ninety days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate $3,000. Such phrase does not include the effecting, through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian, of transactions in the United States in commodities (if of a kind customarily dealt in on an organized commodity exchange, if the transaction is of the kind customarily consummated at such place, and if the alien, partnership, or corporation has no office or place of business in the United States at any time during the taxable year through which or by the direction of which such transactions in commodities are effected), or in stocks or securities.

(c) No United States business or office and gross income of more than $15,400. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States shall be taxable without regard to the provisions of subsection (a) (1) if during the taxable year the sum of the aggregate amount received from the sources specified in subsection (a) (1) (A), plus the amount (determined in accordance with the provisions of subsection (a) (1) (B)) by which gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceed losses from such sales or exchanges, is more than $15,400, except that—

(1) The gross income shall include only income from the sources specified in subsection (a) (1) (A) plus any gain (to the extent provided in section 117) from a sale or exchange of a capital asset if such gain would be taken into account were the tax being determined under subsection (a) (1) (B);

(2) The deductions (other than the so-called "charitable deduction" provided in section 213 (c)) shall be allowed only if and to the extent that they are properly allocable to the gross income from the sources specified in subsection (a) (1) (A), except that any loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be allowed (to the extent provided in section 117 without the benefit of the capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e)) if such loss would be taken into account were the tax being determined under subsection (a) (1) (B);

(3) The tax imposed by this chapter (under sections 11 and 12, or under section 117 (c)) shall, in no case, be less than 30 per centum of the sum of—

(A) The aggregate amount received from the sources specified in subsection (a) (1) (A), plus

(B) The amount, determined in accordance with the provisions of subsection (a) (1) (B), by which gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceed losses from such sales or exchanges; and

(4) This subsection shall not apply to a resident of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland, so long as there is in effect with such country a treaty which provides otherwise.

[Sec. 211 as amended by sec. 4, Rev. Act 1940; secs. 105 and 109, Rev. Act 1941; secs. 106, 160 (d) and (e), and 167, Rev. Act 1942; sec. 213 (a) and (b), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.211-1 Taxation of aliens in general. For the purposes of chapter 1, alien individuals are divided generally into two classes, namely, resident aliens and nonresident aliens. Resident aliens are, in general, taxable the same as citizens of the United States, that is, a resident alien is taxable on income derived from all sources including sources without the United States. Nonresident aliens are taxable only on income from sources within the United States. For classification of nonresident aliens, see § 39.211-7.

§ 39.211-2 Definition. (a) A "nonresident alien individual" means an individual—

(1) Whose residence is not within the United States; and

(2) Who is not a citizen of the United States.

The term includes a nonresident alien fiduciary.

(b) An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient; but if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

§ 39.211-3 Alien seamen as residents. In order to determine whether an alien seaman is a resident within the meaning of chapter 1, it is necessary to decide whether the presumption of nonresidence is overcome by facts showing that he has established a residence in the United States. Residence may be established on a vessel regularly engaged in coastwise trade, but the mere fact that a sailor makes his home on a vessel flying the United States flag and engaged in foreign trade is not sufficient to establish residence in the United States, even though the vessel, while carrying on foreign trade, touches at American ports. An alien seaman may acquire an actual residence in the United States within the rules laid down in § 39.211-4, although the nature of his calling requires him to be absent for a long period from the place where his residence is established. An alien seaman may acquire such a residence at a sailors' boarding house or hotel, but such a claim should be carefully scrutinized in order to make sure that such residence is bona fide. The filing of Form 1078 or taking out first citizenship papers is proof of residence in the United States from the time the form is filed or the papers taken out, unless rebutted by other evidence showing an intention to be a transient. The fact that a head tax has been paid on behalf of an alien seaman entering the United States is no evidence that he has acquired residence, because the head tax is payable unless the alien who is entering the country is merely in transit through the country.

§ 39.211-4 Proof of residence of alien. (a) The following rules of evidence shall govern in determining whether or not an alien within the United States has acquired residence therein within the meaning of chapter 1. An alien, by reason of his alienage, is presumed to be a nonresident alien. Such presumption may be overcome—

(1) In the case of an alien who presents himself for determination of tax liability before departure for his native country by (i) proof that the alien, at least six months before the date he so presents himself, has filed a declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States under the naturalization laws, (ii) proof that the alien, at least six months before the date he so presents himself, has filed Form 1078 or its equivalent, or (iii) proof of acts and statements of the alien showing a definite intention to acquire residence in the United States or showing that his stay in the United States has been of such an extended nature as to constitute him a resident;

(2) In other cases by (i) proof that the alien has filed a declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States under the naturalization laws, (ii) proof that the alien has filed Form 1078 or its equivalent, or (iii) proof of acts and statements of an alien showing a definite intention to acquire residence in the United States or showing that his stay in the United States has been of such an extended nature as to constitute him a resident.

(b) In any case in which an alien seeks to overcome the presumption of nonresidence under paragraph (a) (1) (iii) or (2) (iii) of this section, if the internal-revenue officer who examines the alien is in doubt as to the facts, such officer may, to assist him in determining the facts, require an affidavit or affidavits setting forth the facts relied upon, executed by some credible person or persons, other than the alien and members of his family, who have known the alien at least six months before the date of execution of the affidavit or affidavits.

§ 39.211-5 Loss of residence by alien. An alien who has acquired residence in the United States retains his status as a resident until he abandons the same and actually departs from the United States. An intention to change his residence does not change his status as a resident alien to that of a nonresident alien. Thus, an alien who has acquired a residence in the United States is taxable as a resident for the remainder of his stay in the United States.

§ 39.211-6 Duty of employer to determine status of alien employee. If wages are paid to aliens without withholding the tax, except as permitted in § 39.143-3, in the case of a resident of Canada or Mexico, the employer should be prepared to prove the status of the alien as provided in §§ 39.211-1 to 39.211-5, inclusive. An employer may rely upon the evidence of residence afforded by the fact that an alien has filed Form 1078, or an equivalent certificate of the alien establishing residence. An employer need not secure Form 1078 from the alien if he is satisfied that the alien is a resident alien. An employer who seeks to account for failure to withhold in the past, if he had not at the time secured Form 1078 or its equivalent, is permitted to prove the former status of the alien by any competent evidence. The written statement of the alien employee may ordinarily be relied upon by the employer as proof that the alien is a resident of the United States.

§ 39.211-7 Taxation of nonresident alien individuals—(a) In general. For the purposes of this section and §§ 39.212-1, 39.213-1, 39.214-1, 39.215-1, and 39.217-2, nonresident alien individuals are divided into three classes: (1) Nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and deriving in such taxable year an amount of not more than $15,400 in the aggregate which is the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States plus the excess of capital gains over capital losses, determined in accordance with paragraph (b) (2) of this section, from sources within the United States; (2) nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and deriving in such taxable year an amount of more than $15,400 in the aggregate which is the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States plus the excess of capital gains over capital losses, determined in accordance with paragraph (b) (2) of this section, from sources within the United States; and (3) nonresident alien individuals who at any time during the taxable year are engaged in trade or business in the United States. But see § 39.220-1 with respect to alien individuals who are bona fide residents of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year.

(b) No United States business; general rule—(1) Fixed or determinable annual or periodical income. (i) A nonresident alien individual within class (1) referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, is liable to the tax upon the aggregate amount received from sources within the United States, determined under the provisions of section 119, which consists of fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income and the excess of capital gains over capital losses, determined in accordance with subparagraph (2) of this paragraph. For the purposes of section 211 (a) the term "amount received" means "gross income." Specific items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income are enumerated in the Internal Revenue Code as interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business) dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensation, remunerations, and emoluments, but other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income are also subject to the tax, as, for instance, royalties. As to the determination of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income, see § 39.143-2.

(ii) The fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States of a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and deriving in the taxable year not more than $15,400 gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States is taxable at the rate of 30 percent as to such income received, except that such rate shall be reduced as may be provided by treaty with any country. The excess of capital gains over capital losses, determined in accordance with subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, is also subject to tax and is to be aggregated with such fixed or determinable annual or periodical income in determining such $15,400.

(2) Capital gains and losses. (i) A nonresident alien individual within class (1) referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, is liable to a tax of 30 percent upon the excess of capital gains derived from sources within the United States over capital losses allocable to such sources, determined under the provisions of section 119 and in accordance with the provisions of this subparagraph. This tax is in addition to the tax imposed, as indicated in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, upon the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income derived from sources within the United States by such nonresident alien individual. However, section 211 (a) (1) (B) and this subparagraph do not apply to any capital gain which is exempt from tax under a treaty or convention to which the United States is a party.

(ii) If he has been present in the United States for a period or periods aggregating less than 90 days during the taxable year, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during such taxable year is liable to a tax of 30 percent upon the amount by which his gains, derived from sources within the United States, from sales or exchanges of capital assets effected during his presence in the United States exceed his losses, allocable to sources within the United States, from such sales or exchanges effected during such presence. Gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets effected during such taxable year at times other than during such presence in the United States are not to be taken into account.

(iii) If he has been present in the United States for a period or periods aggregating 90 days or more during the taxable year, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during such taxable year is liable to a tax of 30 percent upon the amount by which his gains, derived from sources within the United States, from sales or exchanges of capital assets effected at any time during such year exceed his losses, allocable to sources within the United States, from such sales or exchanges effected at any time during such year. Gains or losses from sales or exchanges effected at any time during such taxable year are to be taken into account even though such alien individual is not present in the United States at the time such sales or exchanges are effected.

(iv) In computing the total period of presence in the United States for a taxable year, all separate periods of presence in the United States during the taxable year are to be aggregated.

(v) For the purpose of the computation of the excess of capital gains over capital losses subject to tax, gains and losses shall be taken into account only if, and to the extent that, they would be recognized and taken into account if the nonresident alien individual were engaged in trade or business within the United States, except that such gains or losses shall be computed without regard to the provisions of section 117 (b) and that such losses shall be determined without the benefit of the provision under section 117 (e) for the capital loss carry-over. The excess, if any, of capital losses over capital gains in such computation is of no tax significance, since such losses shall be allowed only to the extent of such gains.

(vi) Where sales or exchanges of capital assets (effected either during the period or periods of presence in the United States when such period or periods aggregate less than 90 days during the taxable year, or at any time during the taxable year when such period or periods aggregate 90 days or more during such taxable year) result only in capital losses allocable to United States sources, there being no gains derived from United States sources from such sales or exchanges, such losses shall not to any extent be allowed as a deduction from the fixed or determinable annual or periodical income derived by such nonresident alien individual from United States sources during such taxable year.

(c) No United States business; aggregate more than $15,400. A nonresident alien individual within class (2), referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, is, in accordance with the provisions of section 211 (c), subject to tax under sections 11 and 12, or in the alternative under section 117 (c) upon the amount which is the sum of the aggregate of his fixed or determinable annual or periodical income specified in section 211 (a) (1) (A), determined under the provisions of section 119, plus any gain from a sale or exchange of a capital asset if such gain would be taken into account were the tax being determined under section 211 (a) (1) (B) and under paragraph (b) (2) of this section, minus (1) the deductions properly allocable to such fixed or determinable annual or periodical income, (2) the so-called "charitable contributions" deduction provided in section 213 (c), and (3) any loss (without the benefit of the capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e)) from the sale or exchange of a capital asset if such loss would be taken into account were the tax being determined under section 211 (a) (1) (B) and under paragraph (b) (2) of this section. Such nonresident alien is entitled to the credits against net income allowable to an individual by section 25, subject to the limitations provided in section 214. However, the tax thus computed under sections 11 and 12, or in the alternative under section 117 (c), shall in no case be less than 30 percent of the amount which is the sum of the aggregate of the gross amounts of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States plus the amount, determined in accordance with the provisions of section 211 (a) (1) (B) and of paragraph (b) (2) of this section, by which gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets exceed losses from such sales or exchanges.

(d) United States business. A nonresident alien individual within class (3), referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, is not taxable at the rate of 30 percent upon the items of gross income enumerated in section 211 (a) The net income from sources within the United States of such a nonresident alien individual (gross income from sources within the United States minus the statutory deductions provided in sections 23 and 213) less the credits against net income allowable to an individual by section 25, is subject to the normal tax and surtax under sections 11 and 12.

(e) What constitutes engaging in trade or business. As used in sections 119, 143, 144, 211, and 231, the phrase "engaged in trade or business within the United States" includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year but does not include the performance of personal services for a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate $3,000. Such phrase does not include the effecting of transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian. See also § 39.212-1. As used in section 211 (b) the term "commodities" means only goods of a kind customarily dealt in on an organized commodity exchange, such as a grain futures or a cotton futures market, and does not include merchandise in the ordinary channels of commerce. Neither the beneficiary nor the grantor of a trust, whether revocable or irrevocable, is deemed to be engaged in trade or business in the United States merely because the trustee is engaged in trade or business in the United States.

SEC. 212. Gross income—(a) General rule. In the case of a nonresident alien individual gross income includes only the gross income from sources within the United States.

(b) Exclusions. The following items shall not be included in gross income of a nonresident alien individual and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter:

(1) Ships under foreign flag. Earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equilavent exemption to citizens of the United States and to corporations organized in the United States;

(2) Aircraft of foreign registry. Earnings derived from the operation of aircraft registered under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States and to corporations organized in the United States.

[Sec. 212 as amended by sec. 1 (a), Pub. Law 514 (80th Cong.)]

§ 39.212-1 Gross income of nonresident alien individuals—(a) In general. (1) In general, in the case of nonresident alien individuals "gross income" means only the gross income from sources within the United States. See section 119 and the regulations thereunder. The items of gross income from sources without the United States and therefore not taxable to nonresident aliens are described in section 119 (c) As to who are nonresident alien individuals, see §§ 39.211-2 to 39.211-6, inclusive.

(2) Income received by a resident alien from sources without the United States is taxable although such person may become a nonresident alien subsequent to its receipt and before the close of the taxable year. Conversely, income received by a nonresident alien from sources without the United States is not taxable though such person may become a resident alien subsequent to its receipt and before the close of the taxable year.

(b) No United States business. The gross income of a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, whether such alien comes within section 211 (a) or section 211 (c) is gross income from sources within the United States consisting of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income and any gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset to the extent required to be included in gross income under the provisions of section 211 (a) (1) (B) or section 211 (c).

(c) United States business. The gross income of a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States is not limited to the items of gross income specified in section 211 (a) but includes any item of gross income which is treated as income from sources within the United States, except those items which are exempt from taxation by statute or treaty or which are not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution. See sections 22 (b) 112, 116, 119, and 212 (b).

(d) What constitutes engaging in trade or business within United States. (1) In general, any nonresident alien individual who performs personal services within the United States is considered as being engaged in trade or business within the United States and, therefore, his net income from sources within the United States, including his compensation, is subject to the normal tax and the surtax. However, the phrase "engaged in trade or business within the United States" does not apply to the personal services performed within the United States for a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate $3,000. Such compensation is not income from sources within the United States. See section 119 (a) (3). As to the exclusion from gross income of the official compensation received by employees of foreign governments or of international organizations, see section 116 (h)

(2) The effecting of transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian does not bring a nonresident alien individual within the class of nonresident alien individuals engaged in trade or business within the United States, but if a nonresident alien individual by reason of rendering personal services in the United States, or for other reasons, is classed as a nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States, he is taxable upon all income from sources within the United States, including profits derived from the effecting of such transactions. Such a nonresident alien individual is required to include in gross income capital gains, gains from hedging transactions, and profits derived from the sale within the United States of personal property, or of real property located therein. As used in section 211 (b), the term "commodities" means only goods of a kind customarily dealt in on an organized commodity exchange, such as a grain futures or a cotton futures market, and does not include merchandise in the ordinary channels of commerce.

§ 39.212-2 Exclusion of earnings of foreign ships or aircraft from gross income—(a) Ships under foreign flag. So much of the income from sources within the United States of a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States as consists of earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States nonresident in such foreign country and to corporations organized in the United States, shall not be included in gross income. Foreign countries which either impose no income tax, or, in imposing such tax, exempt from taxation so much of the income of a citizen of the United States nonresident in such foreign country and of a corporation organized in the United States as consists of earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented under the laws of the United States are considered as granting an equivalent exemption within the meaning of this paragraph. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year is not required to include in gross income such income from sources within the United States as is derived from the operation of a ship or ships, whether or not the foreign country under the laws of which such ships are documented meets the equivalent exemption requirement of the Internal Revenue Code.

(b) Aircraft of foreign registry. So much of the income from sources within the United States of a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States as consists of earnings derived from the operation of aircraft registered under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States nonresident in such foreign country and to corporations organized in the United States, shall not be included in gross income. Foreign countries which either impose no income tax, or, in imposing such tax, exempt from taxation so much of the income of a citizen of the United States nonresident in such foreign country and of a corporation organized in the United States as consists of earnings derived from the operation of aircraft registered under the laws of the United States are considered as granting an equivalent exemption within the meaning of this paragraph. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year is not required to include in gross income such income from sources within the United States as is derived from the operation of aircraft, whether or not the foreign country under the laws of which such aircraft are registered meets the equivalent exemption requirement of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 213. Deductions—(a) General rule. In the case of a nonresident alien individual the deductions shall be allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources of income within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 119, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(b) Losses. (1) The deduction, for losses not connected with the trade or business if incurred in transactions entered into for profit, allowed by section 23 (e) (2) shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States, but only if the profit, if such transaction had resulted in a profit, would be taxable under this chapter.

(2) The deduction for losses of property not connected with the trade or business if arising from certain casualties or theft, allowed by section 23 (e) (3), shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States, but only if the loss is of property within the United States.

(c) Charitable, etc., contributions. The so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (o) shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States, but only as to contributions or gifts made to domestic corporations, or to community chests, funds, or foundations, created in the United States, or to the vocational rehabilitation fund.

§ 39.213-1 Deductions allowed nonresident alien individuals—(a) No United States business—(1) General rule. In general, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year is not allowed any deductions, the tax being imposed upon the amount of gross income received, except that losses allocable to sources within the United States from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (b) (2) of § 39.211-7 to the extent of gains, derived from sources therein, from such sales or exchanges.

(2) Aggregate more than $15,400. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and deriving for such year more than $15,400 in the aggregate which is the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States plus the excess of capital gains over capital losses (determined in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (b) (2) of § 39.-211-7) from sources within the United States is allowed for such year (i) such deductions as are properly allocable to such fixed or determinable annual or periodical income and (ii) losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets, allocable to sources within the United States, to the extent and in the manner provided in paragraph (c) of § 39.211-7. He is also allowed the contributions or gifts made within the taxable year whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States but only if made to domestic corporations or to community chests, funds, or foundations created in the United States of the type specified in section 23 (o) subject to the limitations provided in section 23 (o)

(b) United States business. (1) In the case of a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States, the deductions allowed by section 23 (other than the optional standard deduction for individuals allowed by section 23 (aa)) are allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States. See also section 215. In the case of such taxpayers, however, (i) losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, if incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, although not connected with the trade or business, are (if otherwise allowable) deductible only if and to the extent that the profit, if such transaction had resulted in a profit, would have been taxable as income from sources within the United States; (ii) losses sustained during the taxable year of property not connected with the trade or business if arising from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft, and if not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, are deductible only if the property was located within the United States; and (iii) contributions or gifts made within the taxable year are deductible, only if made to domestic corporations or to community chests, funds, or foundations created in the United States of the type specified in section 23 (o) subject to the limitation provided in section 23 (o)

(2) Losses embraced under subdivision (ii) of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph are deductible in full from items of gross income specified as being derived in full from sources within the United States, and, if greater than the sum of such items, the unabsorbed loss may be deducted from the income apportioned to sources within the United States under the provisions of § 39.119 (e)-1. Losses embraced under subdivision (i) of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph are deductible in full (as provided in § 39.119 (a)-7 or § 39.119 (b)-1) when the profit from the transaction, if it had resulted in a profit, would have been taxable in full as income from sources within the United States, but should be deducted under the provisions of § 39.119 (e)-1 when the profit from the transaction, if it had resulted in profit, would have been taxable only in part.

SEC. 214. Credits against net income. In the case of a nonresident alien individual who is not a resident of a contiguous country, only one exemption under section 25 (b) shall be allowed.

§ 39.214-1 Credits to nonresident alien individuals—(a) No United States business—(1) General rule. In general, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business in the United States at any time during the taxable year is not allowed any credits under section 25, the tax being imposed upon the amount of gross income received.

(2) Aggregate more than $15,400. In the case of a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and deriving in such year gross income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States of more than $15,400, the credits allowed are those applicable in the case of nonresident alien individuals engaged in trade or business within the United States.

(b) United States business. In the case of a nonresident alien individual (except a resident of Canada or Mexico) who at any time during the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States, only one exemption under section 25 (b) for both normal-tax and surtax purposes shall be allowed. In the case of a resident of Canada or Mexico, the same exemptions under section 25 (b) for both normal tax and surtax, as in the case of a citizen of the United States, shall apply.

SEC. 215. Allowance of deductions and credits—(a) Return to contain information. A nonresident alien individual shall receive the benefit of the deductions and credits allowed to him in this chapter only by filing or causing to be filed with the collector a true and accurate return of his total income received from all sources in the United States, in the manner prescribed in this chapter; including therein all the information which the Commissioner may deem necessary for the calculation of such deductions and credits.

(b) Tax withheld at source. The benefit of the exemptions under section 25 (b) may, in the discretion of the Commissioner and under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, be received by a nonresident alien individual entitled thereto, by filing a claim therefor with the withholding agent.

[Sec. 215 as amended by sec. 10 (g), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 102 (b) (8), Rev. Act 1945]

§ 39.215-1 Allowance of deductions and credits to nonresident alien individuals—(a) No United States business—(1) General rule. In general, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year is not entitled to any allowance of deductions (except as provided in paragraph (b) (2) of § 39.211-7) or credits even though he may file a return of income.

(2) Aggregate more than $15,400. Unless a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year and having, for such year from sources within the United States, income described in section 211 (a) (1) in a gross amount of more than $15,400 shall file or cause to be filed with the district director of internal revenue a true and accurate return of his total income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States as required by paragraph (a) (2) of § 39.217-2, the tax shall be collected on the basis of gross amount of such income described in section 211 (a) (1) Where such nonresident alien has various sources of income described in section 211 (a) (1) from within the United States, as, for instance, from an estate or trust, from stocks or bonds held directly by him, or from securities held for him by a custodian resident in the United States, so that his income described in section 211 (a) (1) from United States sources is in excess of $15,400 and a return of income is not filed by him or on his behalf, the Commissioner will cause a return of income to be made and include therein the income described in section 211 (a) (1) from all sources within the United States concerning which he has information without allowance for deductions and credits, and will assess the tax and collect it from one or more of the sources of income within the United States. Such nonresident alien shall make or have made a full and accurate return on Form 1040NB-a of all income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States. Such return shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. As to the duty of the representative or agent of such alien to file the return and pay the tax, see paragraph (b) (2) of § 39.217-2, which is hereby made equally applicable in the case of a nonresident alien individual coming within the provisions of this subparagraph.

(b) United States business. Unless a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States shall file, or cause to be filed, with the district director of internal revenue, a true and accurate return of his total income from sources within the United States, as required by paragraph (b) (1) of § 39.217-2, the tax shall be collected on the basis of the gross income (not the net income) from sources within the United States. Where such a nonresident alien has various sources of income within the United States, so that his total income calls for the assessment of a surtax, and a return of income was not filed by him or on his behalf, the Commissioner will cause a return of income to be made and include therein the income of such nonresident alien from all sources concerning which he has information, without allowance for deductions or credits, and will assess the tax and collect it from one or more of the sources of income of such nonresident alien within the United States.

SEC. 216. Credits against tax. A nonresident alien individual shall not be allowed the credits against the tax for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States allowed by section 131. A nonresident alien individual shall be allowed as a credit against his tax the amount required by section 396 to be paid by the personal service corporation of which he is a shareholder with respect to his tax liability under Supplement S.

SEC. 217. Returns—(a) Requirement. In the case of a nonresident alien individual with respect to whose wages, as defined in section 1621 (a), withholding under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 is not made applicable, the return, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 53 (a) (1), shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the fiscal year, or, if the return is made on the basis of the calendar year, then on or before the fifteenth day of June.

(b) Exemption from requirement. Subject to such conditions, limitations, and exceptions and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, nonresident alien individuals subject to the tax imposed by section 211 (a) (1) (A) may be exempted from the requirement of filing returns of such tax.

§ 39.217-1 Time and place for filing returns of nonresident alien individuals. (a) In the case of a nonresident alien individual who for the taxable year does not have wages subject to withholding at the source under section 1622, the return must be made on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth full calendar month following the close of the taxable year. In the case of any return for a fractional part of a year, the Commissioner may, upon a showing by the taxpayer of unusual circumstances, prescribe a later time for the filing of the return, but such time shall not be later than the fifteenth day of the eighteenth full calendar month ending after the beginning of the fractional part of the year. For certain cases in which the time for filing the return is postponed, see section 3804. The return must be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the nonresident alien individual has his principal place of business in the United States, or if he has no principal place of business in the United States, then with the District Director of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Maryland. For failure to make and file return within the time prescribed, see section 291. For cases in which no return is required, see paragraph (a) of § 39.217-2.

(b) In the case of nonresident alien individuals who have wages subject to withholding under section 1622, the general rule provided in paragraph (a) of this section with respect to the filing of the return has no application. Such aliens are required to file their returns and to pay the tax at the time prescribed generally for United States citizens and residents. As to the time of filing the return in the case of United States citizens and residents, see section 53 and § 39.53-1.

§ 39.217-2 Return of income—(a) No United States business—(1) General rule. If the tax liability of a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year is fully satisfied at the source, a return of income is not required. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year shall make or have made a return on Form 1040NB with respect to that portion of his income received from sources within the United States consisting of interest on so-called tax-free covenant bonds on which a tax of only 2 percent was withheld at the source, and with respect to any other income described in section 211 (a) (1) upon which the tax was not fully satisfied at the source, including dividends received from a foreign corporation which are treated as income from sources within the United States under section 119 (a) (2) (B) and shall pay the balance of the tax shown to be due.

(2) Aggregate more than $15,400. A nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, and deriving in such year more than $15,400 gross amount of income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States, shall make or have made a full and accurate return on Form 1040NB-a of all his income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States. Except as to gains from transactions described in section 211 (a) (1) (B) such return need not disclose profits derived from the effecting of transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian, or profits derived from the sale within the United States of personal property or real property located therein. As to the duty of the representative or agent of such alien to file the return and pay the tax, see paragraph (b) (2) of this section, which is hereby made equally applicable in the case of a nonresident alien coming within the provisions of this subparagraph.

(b) United States business. (1) If a nonresident alien individual at any time within the taxable year is engaged in trade or business within the United States, he shall make or have made a full and accurate return on Form 1040B of his income received from all sources within the United States. A return will not be required, however, in the case of such a nonresident alien individual, a resident of Canada or Mexico, whose sole income from sources within the United States consists of compensation for personal services and does not exceed $600 during the taxable year.

(2) The responsible representative or agent within the United States of a nonresident alien individual who at any time within the taxable year was engaged in trade or business within the United States shall make in behalf of his nonresident alien principal, a return of, and shall pay the tax on, all income from sources within the United States coming within his control as representative or agent. The agency appointment will determine how completely the agent is substituted for the principal for tax purposes. See § 39.51-2. Any person who collects interest or dividends on deposited securities of such a nonresident alien, executes ownership certificates in connection therewith and sells such securities under special instructions shall not be deemed merely by reason of such acts to be the responsible representative or agent of the nonresident alien.

(c) Refund based on return. Where upon filing a return of income it appears that such a nonresident alien is not liable for tax, but nevertheless a tax shall have been withheld at the source, there should, in order to obtain a refund on the basis of the showing made by the return, be attached to it a statement showing accurately the amounts of tax withheld, with the names and post-office addresses of all withholding agents. See § 39.143-4.

(d) Verification of returns. A return on Form 1040B, Form 1040NB, or Form 1040NB-a shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(e) Supplement U tax. For returns with respect to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) upon Supplement U net income, see § 39.421-3.

SEC. 218. Payment of tax—(a) Time of payment. In the case of a nonresident alien individual with respect to whose wages, as defined in section 1621 (a), withholding under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 is not made applicable, the total amount of tax imposed by this chapter shall be paid, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 56 (a), on the fifteenth day of June following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the fiscal year.

(b) Withholding at source. For withholding at source of tax on income of nonresident aliens, see section 143.

[Sec. 218 as amended by sec. 5 (e) (2), Current Tax Payment Act 1943]

§ 39.218-1 Date on which tax shall be paid by nonresident alien individual. (a) In the case of a nonresident alien individual who, for the taxable year, does not have wages subject to withholding under section 1622, the tax shall be paid on or before the date prescribed by section 217 and § 39.217-1 for filing of the return, without regard to any extension of time granted for the filing of the return under authority of section 53. As to payment of the tax in installments, see § 39.56-1. For provisions relating to certain cases in which the time for payment of income tax is postponed by reason of an individual serving in or in support of the military or naval forces of the United States in combat zone, see section 3804.

(b) In the case of a nonresident alien individual who for the taxable year has wages subject to withholding at the source under the provisions of section 1622, the tax shall be paid at the time provided in the case of United States citizens and residents. See § 39.56-1.

SEC. 219. Partnerships. For the purpose of this chapter, a nonresident alien individual shall be considered as being engaged in a trade or business within the United States if the partnership of which he is a member is so engaged.

§ 39.219-1 Partnerships. Whether a nonresident alien individual who is a member of a partnership is taxable under the provisions of section 211 (a) or (c) or under the provisions of section 211 (b) may depend on the status of the partnership. A nonresident alien individual who is a member of a partnership which is not engaged in trade or business within the United States is subject to the provisions of section 211 (a) or (c) as the case may be, depending on whether, in the taxable year, he derives income described in section 211 (a) (1) from sources within the United States of more than $15,400, if he is not otherwise engaged in trade or business within the United States. A nonresident alien individual who is a member of a partnership which at any time within the taxable year is engaged in trade or business within the United States is considered as being engaged in trade or business within the United States and is therefore taxable under section 211 (b) For definition of what the term "partnership" includes, see section 3797 (a) (2) The test of whether a partnership is engaged in trade or business within the United States is the same as in the case of a nonresident alien individual. See § 39.211-7.

SEC. 220. Alien residents of Puerto Rico—(a) No application to certain alien residents of Puerto Rico. The provisions of this supplement shall have no application to an alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, and such alien shall be subject to the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12.

(b) Cross reference. For exclusion from gross income of income derived from sources within Puerto Rico, see section 116 (l) (1).

[Sec. 220 as added by sec. 221 (d), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.220-1 Alien residents of Puerto Rico. The provisions of Supplement H, relating to the taxation of nonresident alien individuals, do not apply to a nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, irrespective of whether he has engaged in trade or business within the United States during the taxable year. The income of such alien individual from sources both within and without the United States is subject to the normal tax and the surtax imposed by sections 11 and 12, respectively, except that under the provisions of section 116 (l) income derived from sources within Puerto Rico (other than amounts received for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof) is excluded from gross income. For rules respecting filing of returns and payment of tax, see sections 51, 53, 56, 58, and 59 and the regulations thereunder.

SEC. 221. Foreign educational, charitable and certain other exempt organizations. For special provisions relating to foreign educational, charitable and other exempt trusts, see section 421 (d).

[Sec. 221 as added by sec. 301 (c) (5), Rev. Act 1950]

SUPPLEMENT I—FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

SEC. 231. Tax on foreign corporations—(a) Nonresident corporations—(1) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year, in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 13 and 14, upon the amount received by every foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, from sources within the United States as interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business), dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income, a tax of 30 per centum of such amount, except that in the case of corporations organized under the laws of any country in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or of Newfoundland such rate with respect to dividends shall be reduced to such rate (not less than 5 per centum) as may be provided by treaty with such country.

(2) Cross reference. For inclusion in computation of tax of amount specified in shareholder's consent, see section 28.

(b) Resident corporations. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States shall be taxable as provided in section 13 and section 15.

(c) Gross income. In the case of a foreign corporation gross income includes only the gross income from sources within the United States.

(d) Exclusions. The following items shall not be included in gross income of a foreign corporation and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter:

(1) Ships under foreign flag. Earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States and to corporations organized in the United States;

(2) Aircraft of foreign registry. Earnings derived from the operation of aircraft registered under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States and to corporations organized in the United States.

[Sec. 231 as amended by sec. 206, Rev. Act 1939; sec. 3 (c), Rev. Act 1940; secs. 104 (d), 106, and 109 (a), Rev. Act 1941; secs. 107 and 160 (d) and (e), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 1 (b), Pub. Law 514 (80th Cong.); sec. 121 (g) (5), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.231-1 Taxation of foreign corporations—(a) General. For the purposes of this section and §§ 39.231-2, 39.232-1, 39.235-1, 39.235-2, and 39.236-1, foreign corporations are divided into two classes: (1) Foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time within the taxable year, referred to in the regulations as nonresident foreign corporations (see § 39.3797-8) and (2) foreign corporations which at any time within the taxable year are engaged in trade or business within the United States, referred to in the regulations as resident foreign corporations (see § 39.3797-8)

(b) Nonresident foreign corporations. (1) A nonresident foreign corporation is liable to the tax upon the amount received from sources within the United States, determined under the provisions of section 119, which is fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income. For the purposes of section 231 (a) the term "amount received" means "gross income." Specific items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income are enumerated in the Internal Revenue Code as interest (except interest on deposits with persons carrying on the banking business) dividends, rents, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, renumerations, emoluments, but other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income are also subject to the tax, as, for instance, royalties. As to the definition of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income, see § 39.143-2.

(2) The fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States, including royalties, of a nonresident foreign corporation is taxable at the rate of 30 percent. In the case of dividends received by a nonresident foreign corporation, the rate shall be reduced to such rate as may be provided by treaty with any country.

(c) Resident foreign corporations. (1) A resident foreign corporation is not taxable upon the items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income enumerated in section 231 (a) at the rate specified in that section. A resident foreign corporation is, under section 13, liable to a tax of 30 percent (25 percent for taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954) of its normal-tax net income. The normal-tax net income of a resident foreign corporation is its net income from sources within the United States (gross income from sources within the United States minus the statutory deductions provided in sections 23 and 232) less the credits provided in section 26 (a) and (b)

(2) A resident foreign corporation is, under section 15, also liable to a tax of 22 percent of the amount of its corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000. See, however, § 39.15-2, as to the circumstances under which the $25,000 exemption from surtax for certain taxable years may be disallowed in whole or in part. The corporation surtax net income of a resident foreign corporation is its net income from sources within the United States (gross income from sources within the United States minus the statutory deductions provided in sections 23 and 232) less the credit provided in section 26 (b) which credit is limited in amount to 85 percent of its adjusted net income from sources within the United States computed without regard to the deduction for net operating loss provided in section 23 (s)

(3) For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108-2.

(d) Meaning of terms used. As used in sections 119, 143, 144, 211, and 231, the phrase "engaged in trade or business within the United States" includes the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year. Such phrase does not include the effecting of transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian. The term "commodities," as used in section 211 (b) means only goods of a kind customarily dealt in on an organized commodity exchange, such as a grain futures or a cotton futures market, and does not include merchandise in the ordinary channels of commerce.

§ 39.231-2 Gross income of foreign corporations—(a) In general. In the case of a foreign corporation, including a life insurance company not carrying on an insurance business within the United States and holding no reserve funds upon business transacted within the United States (see section 201 (a) (3)), an insurance company other than life or mutual not carrying on an insurance business within the United States (see section 204 (a) (3)) and a mutual insurance company other than life not carrying on an insurance business within the United States (see section 207 (a)), the term "gross income" means gross income from sources within the United States as defined and described in section 119. See §§ 39.119 (a)-1 to 39.119(e)-4, inclusive. The items of gross income from sources without the United States and therefore not taxable to foreign corporations are described in section 119 (c) As to the definition of a foreign corporation, see section 3797 (a) (3) and (5). As to foreign life insurance companies, see § 39.201-2. As to foreign corporations formed or availed of to avoid surtax, see § 39.102-4. As to personal holding companies organized under the laws of foreign countries, see § 39.505-1. As to foreign personal holding companies, see sections 331 to 340, inclusive, and §§ 39.331-1 to 39.339-3, inclusive.

(b) Nonresident foreign corporations. A nonresident foreign corporation is taxable under section 231 (a) only on fixed or determinable annual or periodical gross income received from sources within the United States. Its taxable income does not include profits derived from the effecting of transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian, or profits derived from the sale within the United States of personal property or real property located therein.

(c) Resident foreign corporations. (1) The gross income from sources within the United States of a resident foreign corporation is not limited to the items of fixed or determinable annual or periodical income referred to in section 231 (a) but includes every item of gross income which is treated as income from sources within the United States, except those items which are specifically exempt from taxation by statute or treaty or which are not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution. See sections 22 (b) 119, and 231 (d).

(2) A resident foreign corporation is also required to include in its gross income capital gains, gains from hedging transactions, and profits derived from the sale within the United States of personal property, or of real property located therein.

(3) A foreign corporation which effects transactions in the United States in stocks, securities, or commodities (including hedging transactions) through a resident broker, commission agent, or custodian is not merely by reason of such transactions considered as being engaged in trade or business within the United States which would cause it to be classed as a resident foreign corporation. However, a foreign corporation which at any time within the taxable year is otherwise engaged in trade or business in the United States, being a resident foreign corporation, is taxable upon all income derived from sources within the United States, including the profits realized from such transactions.

§ 39.231-3 Exclusion of earnings of foreign ships or aircraft from gross income—(a) Nonresident foreign corporations. A nonresident foreign corporation is not required to include in gross income such income from sources within the United States as is derived from the operation of a ship or ships or aircraft, whether or not the foreign country under the laws of which such ships are documented or aircraft registered meets the equivalent exemption requirements of the statute.

(b) Resident foreign corporations. A resident foreign corporation may exclude from gross income under section 231 (d) so much of its income from sources within the United States as consists of earnings derived from the operation of a ship or ships documented or aircraft registered under the laws of a foreign country to the same extent as provided in § 39.212-2 with respect to nonresident alien individuals.

SEC. 232. Deductions—(a) In general. In the case of a foreign corporation the deductions shall be allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States; and the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 119, under the rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(b) Charitable, and so forth, contributions. The so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (q) shall be allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States.

§ 39.232-1 Deductions allowed foreign corporations—(a) Nonresident foreign corporations. A nonresident foreign corporation is not allowed any deductions from gross income from sources within the United States, the tax being imposed upon the amount of gross income received. See § 39.231-1.

(b) Resident foreign corporations. A resident foreign corporation is allowed the same deductions from its gross income arising from sources within the United States as are allowed a domestic corporation under section 23 to the extent that such deductions are connected with such gross income, except that the so-called charitable contribution deduction allowed by section 23 (q) is allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States. The proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 119. As to foreign life insurance companies, see § 39.201-2. As to foreign corporations formed or availed of to avoid surtax, see § 39.102-4. As to personal holding companies organized under the laws of foreign countries, see § 39.505-1. As to foreign personal holding companies, see sections 331 to 340, inclusive, and §§ 39.331-1 to 39.339-3, inclusive.

SEC. 233. Allowance of deductions and credits. A foreign corporation shall receive the benefit of the deductions and credits allowed to it in this chapter only by filing or causing to be filed with the collector a true and accurate return of its total income received from all sources in the United States, in the manner prescribed in this chapter; including therein all the information which the Commissioner may deem necessary for the calculation of such deductions and credits.

§ 39.233-1 Allowance of deductions and credits—(a) Resident foreign corporations. The benefit of the deductions and credits allowed a resident foreign corporation can be had only by filing or causing to be filed with the district director of internal revenue a true and accurate return of its total income received from sources within the United States. Only items of interest and dividends included in gross income may be credited under section 26 (a) and (b)

(b) Nonresident foreign corporations. Inasmuch as a nonresident foreign corporation is taxable under section 231 (a) only upon fixed or determinable annual or periodical gross income received from sources within the United States, such foreign corporation may not receive the benefit of the deductions and credits by filing a return of income.

SEC. 234. Credits against tax. Foreign corporations shall not be allowed the credits against the tax for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States allowed by section 131. A foreign corporation shall be allowed as a credit against its tax the amount required by section 396 to be paid by the personal service corporation of which it is a shareholder with respect to its tax liability under Supplement S.

SEC. 235. Returns—(a) Time of filing. In the case of a foreign corporation not having any office or place of business in the United States the return, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 53 (a) (1), shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the fiscal year, or, if the return is made on the basis of the calendar year then on or before the fifteenth day of June. If any foreign corporation has no office or place of business in the United States but has an agent in the United States, the return shall be made by the agent.

(b) Exemption from requirement. Subject to such conditions, limitations, and exceptions and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, corporations subject to the tax imposed by section 231 (a) may be exempted from the requirement of filing returns of such tax.

§ 39.235-1 Time and place for filing returns of foreign corporations—(a) Nonresident foreign corporations. The return in the case of a nonresident foreign corporation shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth full calendar month following the close of the taxable year. In the case of any return for a fractional part of a year the Commissioner may, upon a showing by the taxpayer of unusual circumstances, prescribe a later time for the filing of the return, but such time shall not be later than the fifteenth day of the eighteenth full calendar month ending after the beginning of the fractional part of the year. If a nonresident foreign corporation has an agent in the United States, the return shall be made by the agent. The return must be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Maryland. See section 53 (b) (2) For failure to make and file a return within the time prescribed, see section 291. For cases in which no return is required, see paragraph (a) of § 39.235-2.

(b) Resident foreign corporations. The return in the case of a resident foreign corporation, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 235, shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, or on or before the fifteenth day of March if on the basis of the calendar year. See section 53 (a) (1) If the return is for a fractional part of a year, it shall be filed at the time prescribed in § 39.53-1. The return must be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the resident foreign corporation has its principal place of business or principal office or agency in the United States. See section 53 (b) (2) For failure to make and file a return within the time prescribed, see section 291.

§ 39.235-2 Return of income—(a) Nonresident foreign corporations. If the tax liability of a nonresident foreign corporation is fully satisfied at the source, a return of income is not required. A nonresident foreign corporation shall make or have made a return on Form 1120NB with respect to that portion of its income received from sources within the United States consisting of interest on so-called tax-free covenant bonds on which a tax of only 2 percent was withheld at the source, and with respect to any other fixed or determinable annual or periodical income upon which the tax was not fully satisfied at the source, including dividends received from a foreign corporation which are treated as income from sources within the United States under section 119 (a) (2) (B), and shall pay the balance of the tax shown to be due.

(b) Resident foreign corporations. If a foreign corporation at any time within the taxable year is a resident corporation, it shall make a full and accurate return on Form 1120 of its income received from sources within the United States.

(c) Supplement U tax. For returns with respect to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) upon Supplement U net income, see § 39.421-3.

SEC. 236. Payment of tax—(a) Time of payment. In the case of a foreign corporation not having any office or place of business in the United States the total amount of tax imposed by this chapter shall be paid, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 56 (a), on the fifteenth day of June following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the fiscal year.

(b) Withholding at source. For withholding at source of tax on income of foreign corporations, see section 144.

§ 39.236-1 Dates on which tax shall be paid by foreign corporations—(a) Nonresident foreign corporations. In the case of a nonresident foreign corporation, the total amount of tax imposed by chapter 1 shall be paid on or before the date prescribed by section 235 and § 39.235-1 for filing of the return, without regard to any extension of time granted for the filing of the return under authority of section 53. As to payment of the tax in installments, see § 39.56-1.

(b) Resident foreign corporations. In the case of a resident foreign corporation, the total amount of tax imposed by chapter 1 shall be paid, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 236 (a) on the fifteenth day of March following the close of the calendar year, or if the return is made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year. If the return is made for a fractional part of a year, the tax shall be paid at the time prescribed in § 39.56-1. As to payment of the tax in installments, see § 39.56-1.

§ 39.237—238 Statutory provisions; foreign corporations; insurance companies; certain exempt organizations.

SEC. 237. Foreign insurance companies. For special provisions relating to foreign insurance companies, see Supplement G.

SEC. 238. Foreign educational, charitable and certain other exempt organizations. For special provisions, relating to foreign educational, charitable and certain other exempt organizations, see section 421 (d).

[Sec. 238 as added by sec. 301 (c) (6), Rev. Act 1950]

SUPPLEMENT J—POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES

§ 39.251 (a) Statutory provisions; income from sources within possessions of the United States; general rule.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States—(a) General Rule. In the case of citizens of the United States or domestic corporations, satisfying the following conditions, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States—

(1) If 80 per centum or more of the gross income of such citizen or domestic corporation (computed without the benefit of this section), for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and

(2) If, in the case of such corporation, 50 per centum or more of its gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States; or

(3) If, in case of such citizen, 50 per centum or more of his gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.

§ 39.251 (a)-1 Citizens of the United States and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within a possession of the United States. (a) In the case of a citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation satisfying the following conditions, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States—

(1) If 80 percent or more of the gross income of such citizen or domestic corporation (computed without the benefit of section 251) for the 3-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States, and

(2) If 50 percent or more of the gross income of such citizen or domestic corporation (computed without the benefit of section 251) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States. In the case of a citizen, the trade or business may be conducted on his own account or as an employee or agent of another. The salary or other compensation paid by the United States to the members of its civil, military, or naval personnel for services rendered within a possession of the United States represents income derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States. The salary or other compensation paid for services preformed by a citizen of the United States as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof shall, for the purposes of section 251 and this section, be deemed to be derived from sources within the United States. Dividends received by a citizen from a corporation whose income was derived from the active conduct of a business within a possession of the United States, although such citizen was actively engaged in the management of such corporation, does not represent income derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within the possession of the United States, either on the taxpayer's own account or as an employee or agent of another.

(b) A citizen of the United States who on account of the nature and amount of his income cannot meet the 80 percent and the 50 percent requirements of the Internal Revenue Code, but who receives earned income from sources within a possession of the United States, is not deprived of the benefits of the provisions of section 116 (a) provided that (1) he is a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries during the entire taxable year, and (2) he does not receive his earned income from the United States or any agency thereof. In such a case none of the provisions of section 251 is applicable in determining the citizen's tax liability. For what constitutes earned income, see section 116 (a) (3).

(c) In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return, the term "gross income," as used in this section, means the combined gross income of the spouses.

(d) For a determination of income from sources within the United States, see sections 119 and 251 (j) A citizen entitled to the benefits of section 251 is required to file with his individual return Form 1040 the schedule on Form 1040E. If a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 251 has no income from sources within the United States or does not receive within the United States any income whether derived from sources within or without the United States, he is not required to file a return or the schedule on Form 1040E.

(e) This section may be illustrated by the following example: On July 1, 1952, A, who is a citizen of the United States, went to a possession of the United States and established a business there which he actively conducted during the remainder of that year. His gross income from the business during such period was $20,000. In addition, he made a profit of $12,000 from the sale during the latter part of 1952 of some real estate located in such possession and not connected with his trade or business. In the first six months of 1952 he also derived $8,000 gross income from rental property located in the United States. He derived a like amount of gross income from such property during the last six months of 1952. Inasmuch as for the applicable part (July 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952) of the 3-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (the calendar year 1952) 80 percent of A's gross income ($32,000, or 80 percent of $40,000) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States and as 50 percent or more of his gross income ($20,000, or 50 percent of $40,000) for such part of the 3-year period was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States, he is required to report in gross income in his return for 1952 only the gross income derived by him from sources within the United States ($16,000 from the rental property located in the United States).

§ 39.251 (b) Statutory provisions; income from sources within possessions of the United States; amounts received in the United States.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(b) Amounts received in United States. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) there shall be included in gross income all amounts received by such citizens or corporations within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States.

§ 39.251 (b)-1 Income received within the United States. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 251 (a), there shall be included in the gross income of citizens and domestic corporations therein specified all amounts, whether derived from sources within or without the United States, which are received by such citizens or corporations within the United States. From the amounts so included in gross income there shall be deducted only the expenses properly apportioned or allocated thereto. For instance, if in the example set forth in paragraph (e) of § 39.251 (a)-1, the taxpayer during the latter part of 1952 returned to the United States for a few weeks and while there received the proceeds resulting from the sale of the real estate located in the possession, the profits derived from such transaction should be reported in gross income. Such receipt in the United States, however, would not deprive the taxpayer of the benefits of section 251 with respect to other items of gross income excluded by that section.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(c) Tax in case of corporations—(1) Corporation tax. A domestic corporation entitled to the benefits of this section shall be subject to tax under section 13 or section 14 (b), and under section 15.

(2) Cross reference. For inclusion in computation of tax of amount specified in shareholder's consent, see section 28.

[Sec. 251 (c) as amended by sec. 207, Rev. Act 1939; sec. 104 (e), Rev. Act 1940]

§ 39.251 (c)-1 Tax in case of corporations. A domestic corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251 is, under section 251 (c) (1) subject to the normal tax on corporations imposed by section 13 and the surtax on corporations imposed by section 15.

§ 39.251 (d) Statutory provisions; income from sources within possessions of the United States; definition.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(d) Definition. As used in this section the term "possession of the United States" does not include the Virgin Islands of the United States, and such term when used with respect to citizens of the United States does not include Puerto Rico.

[Sec. 251 (d) as amended by sec. 221 (a), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.251 (d)-1 Definitions. (a) As used in section 251 and the regulations thereunder, the term "United States" includes only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

(b) As used in sections 251 and 252 and §§ 39.251 (a)-1 and 39.252-1, the term "possession of the United States" includes the Panama Canal Zone, Guam, American Samoa, Wake, and the Midway Islands. The term does not include the Virgin Islands, nor does it include Puerto Rico when used with respect to citizens of the United States.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(e) Deductions. (1) Citizens of the United States entitled to the benefits of this section shall have the same deductions as are allowed by Supplement H in the case of a nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States.

(2) Domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of this section shall have the same deductions as are allowed by Supplement I in the case of a foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States.

§ 39.251 (e)-1 Deductions allowed citizens and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251. In the case of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 251, the deductions allowed by section 23 (other than the optional standard deduction for individuals allowed by section 23 (aa)) are allowed only if and to the extent that they are connected with income from sources within the United States. The provisions of § 39.213-1 relating to the allowance to nonresident alien individuals who at any time within the taxable year were engaged in trade or business within the United States, of the deductions provided in section 23 (e) (2) and (3) for losses not connected with the trade or business are applicable in the case of citizens entitled to the benefits of section 251. The provisions of § 39.213-1 pertaining to the allowance to such nonresident alien individuals of deductions for contributions provided in section 23 (o) are also applicable in the case of such citizens. Corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 are allowed the same deductions from their gross income arising from sources within the United States as are allowed to domestic corporations to the extent that such deductions are connected with such gross income, except that the so-called charitable contribution deduction allowed by section 23 (q) is allowed whether or not connected with income from sources within the United States. The proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to sources within and without the United States shall be determined as provided in section 119.

§ 39.251 (f)-(g) Statutory provisions; income from sources within possessions of the United States; credits against net income; allowance of deductions and credits.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(f) Credits against net income. A citizen of the United States entitled to the benefits of this section shall be allowed only one exemption under section 25 (b).

[Sec. 251 (f) as amended by sec. 6 (c), Rev. Act 1940; sec. 111 (c), Rev. Act 1941; sec. 131 (a) (3), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 10 (h), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 102 (b) (9), Rev. Act 1945]

(g) Allowance of deductions and credits. Citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of this section shall receive the benefit of the deductions and credits allowed to them in this chapter only by filing or causing to be filed with the collector a true and accurate return of their total income received from all sources in the United States, in the manner prescribed in this chapter; including therein all the information which the Commissioner may deem necessary for the calculation of such deductions and credits.

§ 39.251 (g)-1 Allowance of deductions and credits to citizens and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251. Unless a citizen of the United States or a domestic corporation entitled to the benefits of section 251 shall file or cause to be filed with the district director of internal revenue a true and accurate return of total income from sources within the United States, the tax shall be collected on the basis of the gross income (not the net income) from sources within the United States. Where such a citizen or corporation has various sources of income within the United States so that the total income calls for the assessment of a tax, and a return of income was not filed by or on behalf of the citizen or corporation, the Commissioner will cause a return of income to be made and include therein the income of such citizen or corporation from all sources concerning which he has information, and will assess the tax and collect it from one or more of the sources of income of such citizen or corporation within the United States without allowance for deductions or credits.

§ 39.251(h)-(j) Statutory provisions; income from sources within possessions of the United States; credits against tax; prisoners of war and internees; employees of the United States.

SEC. 251. Income from sources within possessions of United States. * * *

(h) Credits against tax. Persons entitled to the benefits of this section shall not be allowed the credits against the tax for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States allowed by section 131.

(i) Prisoners of war and internees. In the case of a citizen of the United States taken as a prisoner of war while serving within a possession of the United States as a member of the military or naval forces of the United States, and in the case of a citizen interned by the enemy while serving as an employee within a possession of the United States—

(1) If such citizen was confined in any place not within a possession of the United States, such place of confinement shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered as within a possession of the United States; and

(2) Any compensation received within the United States by such citizen attributable to the period of time during which such citizen was a prisoner of war or interned by the enemy shall, for the purposes of subsection (b), be considered as compensation received outside the United States.

[Sec. 251 (i) as added by Pub. Law 310 (80th Cong.)]

(j) Employees of United States. For the purposes of this section, amounts paid for services performed by a citizen of the United States as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof shall be deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

[Sec. 251 (j) as added by sec. 220, Rev. Act 1950]

SEC. 252. Citizens of possessions of United States. (a) Any individual who is a citizen of any possession of the United States (but not otherwise a citizen of the United States) and who is not a resident of the United States, shall be subject to taxation under this chapter only as to income derived from sources within the United States, and in such case the tax shall be computed and paid in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as in the case of other persons who are taxable only as to income derived from such sources. This subsection shall have no application in the case of a citizen of Puerto Rico.

(b) Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes" approved July 12, 1921, c. 44, 42 Stat. 123 (U. S. C., Title 48, § 1397), relating to the imposition of income taxes in the Virgin Islands of the United States.

[Sec. 252 as amended by sec. 221 (b), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.252–1 Status of citizens of United States possession. (a) (1) A citizen of a possession of the United States (except the Virgin Islands or Puerto Rico) who is not otherwise a citizen or resident of the United States, including only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia, is treated for the purpose of the tax as if he were a nonresident alien individual. See sections 211 to 219, inclusive. For Federal income tax purposes, a citizen of a possession of the United States who is not otherwise a citizen of the United States is a citizen of a possession of the United States who has not become a citizen of the United States by naturalization. The fixed or determinable annual or periodical income from sources within the United States of a citizen of a possession of the United States who is treated as if he were a nonresident alien individual is subject to withholding. See section 143.

(2) For the purpose of this section citizens of the possessions of the United States who are not otherwise citizens of the United States are divided into two classes: (i) Citizens of possessions of the United States who at any time within the taxable year are not engaged in trade or business within the United States and (ii) citizens of possessions of the United States who at any time within the taxable year are engaged in trade or business within the United States. The provisions of §§ 39.211–7 to 39.219–1, inclusive, applicable to nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or business within the United States, are applicable to the citizens of possessions falling within the first class, while the provisions of such sections applicable to nonresident alien individuals who at any time within the taxable year are engaged in trade or business within the United States are applicable to citizens of possessions falling within the second class.

(b) The provisions of section 252 (a) and this section shall have no application in the case of a citizen of Puerto Rico.

(c) The act of July 12, 1921 (48 U. S. C. 1397) referred to in section 252 (b), provides that income tax laws then or thereafter in force in the United States shall apply to the Virgin Islands, but that the taxes shall be paid into the treasury of the Virgin Islands. Accordingly, persons are taxed there under the income tax provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

SUPPLEMENT K—CHINA TRADE ACT CORPORATIONS

SEC. 261. Taxation in general—(a) Corporation tax. A corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (42 Stat. 849; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 15, ch. 4), shall be subject to tax under section 13 or section 14 (b), and under section 15.

(b) Cross reference. For inclusion in computation of tax of amount specified in shareholder's consent, see section 28.

[Sec. 261 as amended by sec. 203, Rev. Act 1939; sec. 104 (f) (1), Rev. Act 1941]

§ 39.261–1 Tax on China Trade Act corporations. A China Trade Act corporation is, under section 261 (a), subject to the normal tax on corporations imposed by section 13 and the surtax on corporations imposed by section 15.

SEC. 262. Credit against net income—(a) Allowance of credit. For the purpose only of the taxes imposed by sections 13, 14, 15, and 600 of this title and section 106 of the Revenue Act of 1935 there shall be allowed, in the case of a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, in addition to the credits against net income otherwise allowed such corporation, a credit against the net income of an amount equal to the proportion of the net income derived from sources within China (determined in a similar manner to that provided in section 119) which the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned on the last day of the taxable year by (1) persons resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, and (2) individual citizens of the United States or China wherever resident, bears to the par value of the whole number of shares of stock of the corporation outstanding on such date: Provided, That in no case shall the diminution, by reason of such credit, of the tax imposed by such section 13, 14, or 15 (computed without regard to this section) exceed the amount of the special dividend certified under subsection (b) of this section; and in no case shall the diminution, by reason of such credit, of the tax imposed by such section 106 or 600 (computed without regard to this section) exceed the amount by which such special dividend exceeds the diminution permitted by this section in the tax imposed by such section 13, 14, or 15.

(b) Special dividend. Such credit shall not be allowed unless the Secretary of Commerce has certified to the Commissioner—

(1) The amount which, during the year ending on the date fixed by law for filing the return, the corporation has distributed as a special dividend to or for the benefit of such persons as on the last day of the taxable year were resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, or were individual citizens of the United States or China, and owned shares of stock of the corporation;

(2) That such special dividend was in addition to all other amounts, payable or to be payable to such persons or for their benefit, by reason of their interest in the corporation; and

(3) That such distribution has been made to or for the benefit of such persons in proportion to the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned by each; except that if the corporation has more than one class of stock, the certificates shall contain a statement that the articles of incorporation provide a method for the apportionment of such special dividend among such persons, and that the amount certified has been distributed in accordance with the methods so provided.

(c) Ownership of stock. For the purposes of this section shares of stock of a corporation shall be considered to be owned by the person in whom the equitable right to the income from such shares is in good faith vested.

(d) Definition of China. As used in this section the term "China" shall have the same meaning as when used in the China Trade Act, 1922.

[Sec. 262 as amended by sec. 210 (c), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 104 (f) (2), Rev. Act 1941]

§ 39.262–1 Income and deductions of China Trade Act corporations. The items of gross income to be included in the return of a China Trade Act corporation and the deductions allowable are the same as in the case of other domestic corporations.

§ 39.262–2 Credits allowed China Trade Act corporations. (a) In addition to the credits allowed under section 26 (a) and (b), a China Trade Act corporation is, under certain conditions, allowed an additional credit for the purpose of computing the taxes imposed by sections 13 and 15. This credit is an amount equal to the proportion of the net income derived from sources within China (determined in a similar manner to that provided in section 119) which the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation, owned on the last day of the taxable year by (1) persons resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, and (2) individual citizens of the United States or China wherever resident, bears to the par value of the whole number of shares of stock of the corporation outstanding on that date. The decrease in the tax imposed by sections 13 and 15 by reason of such credit must not, however, exceed the amount of the special dividend referred to in section 262 (b), and is not allowable unless the special dividend has been certified to the Commissioner by the Secretary of Commerce. A China Trade Act corporation is not entitled to the credit for taxes paid to foreign countries and possessions of the United States allowed to domestic corporations under the provisions of section 131.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) The A Company, a China Trade Act corporation, has a net income for the calendar year 1952 of $200,000 and receives no dividends from domestic corporations. All of its stock on December 31, 1952, is owned on that date by persons resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, or individual citizens of the United States or China. It distributes a special dividend amounting to $100,000 on February 15, 1953, which is certified by the Secretary of Commerce as provided in section 262 (b). For the purpose of the tax imposed by sections 13 and 15, it is necessary in this example to make two computations, first, without allowing the special credit against net income on account of income derived from sources within China, and, second, allowing such credit. The computations are as follows:

Net income subject to tax	$200,000
Normal-tax net income	200,000
Normal tax (section 13)	60,000
Surtax net income	200,000
Surtax (section 15)	33,500
Total income tax	93,500

Net income	$200,000
Since the total net income is derived from sources within China and since the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned on the last day of the taxable year by (1) persons resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, and (2) individual citizens of the United States or China wherever resident, is 100 percent of the par value of the total number of shares of stock of the corporation outstanding on that day, 100 percent of the net income from sources within China is deductible as a special credit against net income.
Special credit against net income	200,000
Amount of income subject to tax under sections 13 and 15	None

(4) Since the special dividend ($100,000) exceeds the diminution of the tax ($98,500) on account of the allowance of the special credit against net income, the entire amount of the special credit is allowable and the corporation has no income tax liability for 1952.

§ 39.262-3 Meaning of terms used in connection with China Trade Act corporations. (a) A China Trade Act corporation is one organized under the provisions of the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4)

(b) The term "China" means (1) China, including Manchuria, Tibet, Mongolia, and any territory leased by China to any foreign government, (2) the Crown Colony of Hong Kong, and (3) the Province of Macao.

(c) The term "special dividend" means the amount which, during the year ending on the date fixed by law for the filing of the corporation's return, is distributed as a dividend to or for the benefit of such persons as on the last day of the taxable year were resident in China, the United States, or possessions of the United States, or were individual citizens of the United States or China, and owned shares of stock of the corporation. The time fixed by law for filing the return includes the period of any extension of time granted under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Such special dividend does not include any other amounts payable or to be payable to such persons or for their benefit by reason of their interest in the corporation and must be made in proportion to the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned by each.

(d) For the purposes of section 262, the shares of stock of a China Trade Act corporation are considered to be owned by the person in whom the equitable right to the income from such shares is in good faith vested.

(e) "Net income derived from sources within China" is the sum of the net income from sources wholly within China and that portion of the net income from sources partly within and partly without China which may be allocated to sources within China. The method of computing this income is similar to that described in section 119.

§ 39.262-4 Withholding by a China Trade Act corporation. Dividends distributed by a China Trade Act corporation which are treated as income from sources within the United States under the provisions of section 119 are subject to withholding at the rate of 30 percent when paid to persons (other than residents of China) who are (a) nonresident aliens, (b) nonresident partnerships composed in whole or in part of nonresident aliens, or (c) nonresident foreign corporations. The 30 percent rate of withholding specified in this section with respect to dividends shall be reduced to such rate as may be provided by treaty with any country.

SEC. 263. Credits against the tax. A corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, shall not be allowed the credits against the tax for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States allowed by section 131.

SEC. 264. Affiliation. * * * [Repealed by sec. 159 (e), Rev. Act 1942.]

SUPPLEMENT L—ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF DEFICIENCIES

SEC. 271. Definition of deficiency—(a) In general. As used in this chapter in respect of a tax imposed by this chapter, "deficiency" means the amount by which the tax imposed by this chapter exceeds the excess of—

(1) The sum of (A) the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return, if a return was made by the taxpayer and an amount was shown as the tax by the taxpayer thereon, plus (B) the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, over—

(2) The amount of rebates, as defined in subsection (b) (2), made.

(b) Rules for application of subsection (a). For the purposes of this section—

(1) The tax imposed by this chapter and the tax shown on the return shall both be determined without regard to payments on account of estimated tax, without regard to the credit under section 35, and without regard to so much of the credit under section 32 as exceeds 2 per centum of the interest on obligations described in section 143 (a);

(2) The term "rebate" means so much of an abatement, credit, refund, or other repayment, as was made on the ground that the tax imposed by this chapter was less than the excess of the amount specified in subsection (a) (1) over the amount of rebates previously made; and

(3) The computation by the collector, pursuant to section 51 (f), of the tax imposed by this chapter shall be considered as having been made by the taxpayer and the tax so computed considered as shown by the taxpayer upon his return.

[Sec. 271 as amended by sec. 14 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.271-1 Deficiency defined. (a) The term "deficiency" means the excess of the tax imposed by chapter 1 over the sum of the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return and the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, but such sum shall first be reduced by the amount of rebates made. If no return is made, or if the return (except a return on Form 1040A pursuant to section 51 (f)) does not show any tax, for the purposes of the definition "the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return" shall be considered as zero. Accordingly in any such case, if no deficiencies have been assessed, or collected without assessment, and no rebates have been made, the deficiency is the amount of the tax imposed by chapter 1. Additional tax shown on an "amended return," so-called, filed after the due date of the return for the taxable year, is a deficiency within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

(b) For the purposes of the definition, the tax imposed by chapter 1 and the tax shown on the return shall both be determined without regard to the credit provided in section 35 for tax withheld at the source, and without regard to so much of the credit provided in section 32 for taxes withheld at the source as exceeds 2 percent of the interest on bonds containing a tax-free covenant. Payments on account of estimated tax, like other payments of tax by the taxpayer, shall likewise be disregarded in the determination of a deficiency.

(c) The computation by the district director of internal revenue, pursuant to section 51 (f) of the tax imposed by chapter 1 shall be considered as having been made by the taxpayer and the tax so computed shall be considered as the tax shown by the taxpayer upon his return.

(d) If so much of the credits claimed on the return for taxes withheld at the source as exceeds 2 percent of the interest on tax-free covenant bonds is greater than the amount of such credits allowable, the unpaid portion of the tax attributable to such difference will be collected not as a deficiency but as an underpayment of the tax shown on the return.

(e) This section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The amount of tax shown by the taxpayer upon his return for the calendar year 1952 was $1,500. The taxpayer had no amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency. He claimed a credit in the amount of $2,000 for tax withheld at source on wages under section 1622, and a refund of $500 (not a rebate under section 271) was made to him as an overpayment of tax for the taxable year. It is later determined that the correct tax for the taxable year is $1,750. A deficiency of $250 is determined as follows:

Tax imposed by chapter 1		$1,750
Tax shown on return	$1,500
Tax previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency	None
Total	1,500
Amount of rebates made	None
Balance		1,500
Deficiency		250

Example (2). The taxpayer made a return for the calendar year 1952 showing a tax of $1,250 before any credits for tax withheld at the source. He claimed a credit in the amount of $800 for tax withheld at source on wages under section 1622 and $60 for tax paid at source under section 143 upon interest on bonds containing a tax-free covenant. The taxpayer had no amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency. The Commissioner determines that the 2 percent tax paid at the source on tax-free covenant bonds is $40 instead of $60 as claimed by the taxpayer and that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is $1,360 (total tax $1,400 less $40 tax paid at source on tax-free covenant bonds). A deficiency in the amount of $170 is determined as follows:

Tax imposed by chapter 1 ($1,400 minus $40)		$1,360
Tax shown on return ($1,250 minus $60)	$1,190
Tax previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency	None
Total	1,190
Amount of rebates made	None
Balance		1,190
Deficiency		170

Example (3). For the calendar year 1952, the taxpayer, a nonresident alien individual not engaged in trade or business within the United States, received gross income from sources within the United States consisting of dividends, and interest on bonds containing a tax-free covenant under which the tax liability assumed by the obligor does not exceed 2 percent of the interest. The taxpayer made a return showing a tax of $7,860 before any credits for tax withheld at the source. He claimed a credit of $6,000 under section 32 for tax withheld at the source under section 143 of which amount $5,600 was represented as tax withheld, and $400 was represented as the tax at 2 percent paid by the obligor on interest on tax-free covenant bonds described in section 143 (a). The Commissioner determines that the 2 percent tax paid by the obligor on interest on tax-free covenant bonds amounts to $200 instead of $400 as claimed by the taxpayer, and that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is $11,320 (total tax $11,520 less $200 tax paid by obligor on interest on tax-free covenant bonds). The Commissioner also determines that the tax withheld at the source amounts to $7,750 in addition to the $200 paid by the obligor of the bonds. A deficiency in the amount of $3,860 is determined as follows:

Tax imposed by chapter 1 ($11,520 minus $200)		$11,320
Tax shown on return ($7,860 minus $400)	$7,460
Tax previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency	None
Total	7,460
Amount of rebates made	None
Balance		7,460
Deficiency		3,860

(f) As used in section 271, the term "rebate" means so much of an abatement, credit, refund, or other repayment as is made on the ground that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is less than the excess of (1) the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return increased by the amount previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency over (2) the amount of rebates previously made. For example, assume that the amount of the tax shown by the taxpayer upon his return for the taxable year is $600 and the amount claimed as a credit under section 35 for tax withheld at the source is $900. If the Commissioner determines that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is $600 and makes a refund of $300, no part of such refund constitutes a "rebate" since the refund is not made on the ground that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is less than the tax shown on the return. If, however, the Commissioner determines that the tax imposed by chapter 1 is $500 and refunds $400, the amount of $100 of such refund would constitute a rebate since it is made on the ground that the tax imposed by chapter 1 ($500) is less than the tax shown on the return ($600). The amount of such rebate ($100) would be taken into account in arriving at the amount of any deficiency subsequently determined.

SEC. 272. Procedure in general—(a) (1) Petition to Board of Tax Appeals. If in the case of any taxpayer, the Commissioner determines that there is a deficiency in respect of the tax imposed by this chapter, the Commissioner is authorized to send notice of such deficiency to the taxpayer by registered mail. Within ninety days after such notice is mailed (not counting Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday in the District of Columbia as the ninetieth day), the taxpayer may file a petition with the Board of Tax Appeals for a redetermination of the deficiency. No assessment of a deficiency in respect of the tax imposed by this chapter and no distraint or proceeding in court for its collection shall be made, begun, or prosecuted until such notice has been mailed to the taxpayer, nor until the expiration of such ninety-day period, nor, if a petition has been filed with the Board, until the decision of the Board has become final. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 3653 (a) the making of such assessment or the beginning of such proceeding or distraint during the time such prohibition is in force may be enjoined by a proceeding in the proper court. In the case of a joint return filed by husband and wife such notice of deficiency may be a single joint notice, except that if the Commissioner has been notified by either spouse that separate residences have been established, then, in lieu of the single joint notice, duplicate originals of the joint notice must be sent by registered mail to each spouse at his last known address. If the notice is addressed to a person outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia, the period specified in this paragraph shall be one hundred and fifty days in lieu of ninety days.

(2) Cross references. For exceptions to the restrictions imposed by this subsection, see—

Subsection (d) of this section, relating to waivers by the taxpayer;

Subsection (f) of this section, relating to notifications of mathematical errors appearing upon the face of the return;

Section 273, relating to jeopardy assessments;

Section 274, relating to bankruptcy and receiverships; and

Section 1145, relating to assessment or collection of the amount of the deficiency determined by the Board pending court review.

(b) Collection of deficiency found by Board. If the taxpayer files a petition with the Board, the entire amount redetermined as the deficiency by the decision of the Board which has become final shall be assessed and shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector. No part of the amount determined as a deficiency by the Commissioner but disallowed as such by the decision of the Board which has become final shall be assessed or be collected by distraint or by proceeding in court with or without assessment.

(c) Failure to file petition. If the taxpayer does not file a petition with the Board within the time prescribed in subsection (a) of this section, the deficiency, notice of which has been mailed to the taxpayer, shall be assessed, and shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector.

(d) Waiver of restrictions. The taxpayer shall at any time have the right, by a signed notice in writing filed with the Commissioner, to waive the restrictions provided in subsection (a) of this section on the assessment and collection of the whole or any part of the deficiency.

(e) Increase of deficiency after notice mailed. The Board shall have jurisdiction to redetermine the correct amount of the deficiency even if the amount so redetermined is greater than the amount of the deficiency, notice of which has been mailed to the taxpayer, and to determine whether any penalty, additional amount or addition to the tax should be assessed—if claim therefor is asserted by the Commissioner at or before the hearing or a rehearing.

(f) Further deficiency letters restricted. If the Commissioner has mailed to the taxpayer notice of a deficiency as provided in subsection (a) of this section, and the taxpayer files a petition with the Board within the time prescribed in such subsection, the Commissioner shall have no right to determine any additional deficiency in respect of the same taxable year, except in the case of fraud, and except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, relating to assertion of greater deficiencies before the Board, or in section 273 (c), relating to the making of jeopardy assessments. If the taxpayer is notified that, on account of a mathematical error appearing upon the face of the return, an amount of tax in excess of that shown upon the return is due, and that an assessment of the tax has been or will be made on the basis of what would have been the correct amount of tax but for the mathematical error, such notice shall not be considered (for the purposes of this subsection, or of subsection (a) of this section, prohibiting assessment and collection until notice of deficiency has been mailed, or of section 322 (c), prohibiting credits or refunds after petition to the Board of Tax Appeals) as a notice of a deficiency, and the taxpayer shall have no right to file a petition with the Board based on such notice, nor shall such assessment or collection be prohibited by the provisions of subsection (a) of this section.

(g) Jurisdiction over other taxable years. The Board in redetermining a deficiency in respect of any taxable year shall consider such facts with relation to the taxes for other taxable years as may be necessary correctly to redetermine the amount of such deficiency, but in so doing shall have no jurisdiction to determine whether or not the tax for any other taxable year has been overpaid or underpaid.

(h) Final decisions of Board. For the purposes of this chapter the date on which a decision of the Board becomes final shall be determined according to the provisions of section 1140.

(i) Prorating of deficiency to installments. If the taxpayer has elected to pay the tax in installments and a deficiency has been assessed, the deficiency shall be prorated to the four installments. Except as provided in section 273 (relating to jeopardy assessments), that part of the deficiency so prorated to any installment the date for payment of which has not arrived, shall be collected at the same time as and as part of such installment. That part of the deficiency so prorated to any installment the date for payment of which has arrived, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector.

(j) Extension of time for payment of deficiencies. Where it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the payment of a deficiency upon the date prescribed for the payment thereof will result in undue hardship to the taxpayer the Commissioner, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may grant an extension for the payment of such deficiency for a period not in excess of eighteen months, and, in exceptional cases, for a further period not in excess of twelve months. If an extension is granted, the Commissioner may require the taxpayer to furnish a bond in such amount, not exceeding double the amount of the deficiency, and with such sureties, as the Commissioner deems necessary, conditioned upon the payment of the deficiency in accordance with the terms of the extension. No extension shall be granted if the deficiency is due to negligence, to intentional disregard of rules and regulations, or to fraud with intent to evade tax.

(k) Address for notice of deficiency. In the absence of notice to the Commissioner under section 312 (a) of the existence of a fiduciary relationship, notice of a deficiency in respect of a tax imposed by this chapter, if mailed to the taxpayer at his last known address, shall be sufficient for the purposes of this chapter even if such taxpayer is deceased, or is under a legal disability, or, in the case of a corporation, has terminated its existence.

§ 39.272-1 Assessment of a deficiency. (a) If the Commissioner determines that there is a deficiency in respect of the income tax imposed by chapter 1 (see sections 57 and 271) the Commissioner is authorized to notify the taxpayer of the deficiency by registered mail. If a joint return has been filed by husband and wife the Commissioner may unless he has been notified by either spouse that a separate residence has been established, send either a joint or separate notice of deficiency. If, however, the Commissioner has been so notified, a separate notice of deficiency, that is, a duplicate original of the joint notice, must be sent by registered mail to each spouse at his or her last known address. The notice to the Commissioner provided for in section 272 (a) relating to separate residences, should be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention Audit Services Branch, Audit Division. Within 90 days after notice of the deficiency is mailed (or within 150 days after mailing in the case of such a notice addressed to a person outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia) as provided in section 272 (a) a petition may be filed with the Tax Court of the United States for a redetermination of the deficiency. In determining such 90-day or 150-day period, Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday in the District of Columbia is not to be counted as the 90th or 150th day. Except as stated in paragraphs (b) (c) (d) (e) and (f) of this section, no assessment of a deficiency in respect of a tax imposed by chapter 1 shall be made until such notice has been mailed to the taxpayer, nor until the expiration of such 90-day or 150-day period, nor, if a petition has been filed with the Tax Court, until the decision of the Tax Court has become final. As to the date on which a decision of the Tax Court becomes final, see section 1140.

(b) If a taxpayer is notified of an additional amount of tax due on account of a mathematical error appearing upon the face of the return, such notice is not to be considered as a notice of deficiency, and the taxpayer has no right to file a petition with the Tax Court upon the basis of such notice, nor is the assessment of such additional tax prohibited by the provisions of section 272 (a)

(c) If the Commissioner believes that the assessment or collection of a deficiency will be jeopardized by delay, such deficiency shall be assessed immediately, as provided in section 273. See § 39.273-1.

(d) Upon the adjudication of bankruptcy of any taxpayer or the appointment of a receiver for any taxpayer in any receivership proceeding before any court of the United States or of any State or Territory or of the District of Columbia, any deficiency determined by the Commissioner in respect of the tax shall be assessed immediately, irrespective of the provisions of section 272 (a) if such deficiency has not been assessed in accordance with law prior to the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of a receiver. See sections 274 and 298 and §§ 39.274-1 and 39.274-2.

(e) (1) If the Tax Court renders a decision and determines that there is a deficiency and, if the taxpayer duly files a petition for review of the decision by a United States Court of Appeals, the filing of the petition will not operate as a stay of the assessment of any portion of the deficiency determined by the Tax Court unless he has filed a bond with the Tax Court as provided in section 1145. If in such a case the necessary bond has not been filed by the taxpayer on or before the time his petition for review is filed, the amount determined by the Tax Court as the deficiency will be assessed immediately after the filing of such petition.

(2) If the Commissioner files a petition for review and (i) if the taxpayer has not filed a petition for review within three months after the decision of the Tax Court is rendered, or (ii) if such petition has been filed by the taxpayer, but the necessary bond referred to in section 1145 has not been filed with the Tax Court on or before the time his petition for review is filed, the amount determined by the Tax Court as the deficiency will be assessed in the case of (i), immediately after the expiration of the 3-month period, and in the case of (ii) immediately after the filing of the petition for review by the taxpayer.

(f) The taxpayer may at any time by a signed notice in writing filed with the Commissioner waive the restrictions on the assessment of the whole or any part of the deficiency. The notice must in all cases be filed with the Commissioner. The filing of such notice with the Tax Court does not constitute filing with the Commissioner within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code. After such waiver has been acted upon by the Commissioner and the assessment has been made in accordance with its terms, the waiver cannot be withdrawn.

(g) If a petition is filed with the Tax Court, the taxpayer should notify the Commissioner that the petition has been filed, in order to prevent an assessment by the Commissioner of the amount determined to be the deficiency. If no petition is filed with the Tax Court within the period prescribed, the Commissioner shall assess the amount determined by him as the deficiency and of which he has notified the taxpayer by registered mail. In such case the Commissioner will not be precluded from determining a further deficiency and notifying the taxpayer thereof by registered mail. Where a petition is filed with the Tax Court, the entire amount redetermined as the deficiency by the decision of the Tax Court which has become final shall be assessed by the Commissioner. If the Commissioner mails to the taxpayer notice of a deficiency, and the taxpayer files a petition with the Tax Court within the prescribed period, the Commissioner is barred from determining any additional deficiency for the same taxable year except in the case of fraud and except as provided in section 272 (e), relating to the assertion of greater deficiencies before the Tax Court, or in section 273, relating to jeopardy assessments.

§ 39.272-2 Collection of a deficiency. Where a deficiency as redetermined by a decision of the Tax Court which has become final is assessed, or where the taxpayer has not filed a petition and the deficiency as determined by the Commissioner has been assessed, the unpaid portion of the amount so assessed shall be paid upon notice and demand from the district director of internal revenue. As to cases coming within the provisions of paragraphs (c), (d), and (e) of § 39.272-1, see sections 273 (i), 298, and 1145. As to interest on deficiencies, see section 292.

§ 39.272-3 Extension of time for payment of a deficiency. (a) If it is shown to the satisfaction of the district director (Commissioner if before September 1, 1953) that the payment of a deficiency upon the date or dates prescribed for the payment thereof will result in undue hardship to the taxpayer, the district director or Commissioner may grant an extension of time for the payment of the deficiency or any part thereof for a period not in excess of 18 months, and in exceptional cases for a further period not in excess of 12 months. The extension will not be granted upon a general statement of hardship. The term "undue hardship" means more than an inconvenience to the taxpayer. It must appear that substantial financial loss, for example, due to the sale of property at a sacrifice price, will result to the taxpayer from making payment of the deficiency at the due date. If a market exists, the sale of property at the current market price is not ordinarily considered as resulting in an undue hardship. Section 272 (j) provides that no extension will be granted where the deficiency is due to negligence or intentional disregard of rules and regulations or to fraud with intent to evade tax.

(b) An application for an extension of time for the payment of a deficiency should be made on Form 1127 and must be accompanied or supported by evidence showing the undue hardship that would result to the taxpayer if the extension were refused. The application must be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. A statement of assets and liabilities of the taxpayer and an itemized statement showing all receipts and disbursements for each of the three months immediately preceding the month in which falls the date prescribed for the payment of the deficiency are required and should accompany the application. The application, with the evidence, must be filed with the district director of internal revenue. An application for an extension of time for the payment of a deficiency will not be considered unless request therefor is made to the district director of internal revenue on or before the date prescribed for payment thereof, as shown by the notice and demand from the district director of internal revenue or on or before the date or dates prescribed for payment in any prior extension granted.

(c) As a condition to the granting of such an extension, the Commissioner (after August 31, 1953, the district director) will usually require the taxpayer to furnish a bond on Form 1127B in an amount not exceeding double the amount of the deficiency or to furnish other security satisfactory to the Commissioner for the payment of the liability on or before the date or dates prescribed for payment in the extension, so that the risk of loss to the Government will not be greater at the end of the extension period than it was at the beginning of the period. If a bond is required, it shall be conditioned upon the payment of the deficiency, interest, and additional amounts assessed in connection therewith in accordance with the terms of the extension granted, and shall be executed by a surety company holding a certificate of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury as an acceptable surety on Federal bonds, and shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner. In lieu of such a bond, the taxpayer may file a bond secured by deposit of bonds or notes of the United States as provided in 6 U. S. C. 15. The amount of the deficiency and additions thereto shall be paid on or before the expiration of the period of the extension without the necessity of notice and demand from the district director of internal revenue. Payment of the deficiency and additions thereto before the expiration of the extension will not relieve the taxpayer from paying the entire amount of interest provided for in the extension. See section 296.

SEC. 273. Jeopardy assessments—(a) Authority for making. If the Commissioner believes that the assessment or collection of a deficiency will be jeopardized by delay, he shall immediately assess such deficiency (together with all interest, additional amounts, or additions to the tax provided for by law) and notice and demand shall be made by the collector for the payment thereof.

(b) Deficiency letters. If the jeopardy assessment is made before any notice in respect of the tax to which the jeopardy assessment relates has been mailed under section 272 (a), then the Commissioner shall mail a notice under such subsection within sixty days after the making of the assessment.

(c) Amount assessable before decision of Board. The jeopardy assessment may be made in respect of a deficiency greater or less than that notice of which has been mailed to the taxpayer, despite the provisions of section 272 (f) prohibiting the determination of additional deficiencies, and whether or not the taxpayer has theretofore filed a petition with the Board of Tax Appeals. The Commissioner may, at any time before the decision of the Board is rendered, abate such assessment, or any unpaid portion thereof, to the extent that he believes the assessment to be excessive in amount. The Commissioner shall notify the Board of the amount of such assessment, or abatement, if the petition is filed with the Board before the making of the assessment or is subsequently filed, and the Board shall have jurisdiction to redetermine the entire amount of the deficiency and of all amounts assessed at the same time in connection therewith.

(d) Amount assessable after decision of Board. If the jeopardy assessment is made after the decision of the Board is rendered such assessment may be made only in respect of the deficiency determined by the Board in its decision.

(e) Expiration of right to assess. A jeopardy assessment may not be made after the decision of the Board has become final or after the taxpayer has filed a petition for review of the decision of the Board.

(f) Bond to stay collection. When a jeopardy assessment has been made the taxpayer, within 10 days after notice and demand from the collector for the payment of the amount of the assessment, may obtain a stay of collection of the whole or any part of the amount of the assessment by filing with the collector a bond in such amount, not exceeding double the amount as to which the stay is desired, and with such sureties, as the collector deems necessary, conditioned upon the payment of so much of the amount, the collection of which is stayed by the bond, as is not abated by a decision of the Board which has become final, together with interest thereon as provided in section 297. If any portion of the jeopardy assessment is abated by the Commissioner before the decision of the Board is rendered, the bond shall, at the request of the taxpayer, be proportionately reduced.

(g) Same; further conditions. If the bond is given before the taxpayer has filed his petition with the Board under section 272 (a), the bond shall contain a further condition that if a petition is not filed within the period provided in such subsection, then the amount the collection of which is stayed by the bond will be paid on notice and demand at any time after the expiration of such period, together with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand to the date of notice and demand under this subsection.

(h) Waiver of stay. Upon the filing of the bond the collection of so much of the amount assessed as is covered by the bond shall be stayed. The taxpayer shall have the right to waive such stay at any time in respect of the whole or any part of the amount covered by the bond, and if as a result of such waiver any part of the amount covered by the bond is paid, then the bond shall, at the request of the taxpayer, be proportionately reduced. If the Board determines that the amount assessed is greater than the amount which should have been assessed, then when the decision of the Board is rendered the bond shall, at the request of the taxpayer, be proportionately reduced.

(i) Collection of unpaid amounts. When the petition has been filed with the Board and when the amount which should have been assessed has been determined by a decision of the Board which has become final, then any unpaid portion, the collection of which has been stayed by the bond, shall be collected as part of the tax upon notice and demand from the collector, and any remaining portion of the assessment shall be abated. If the amount already collected exceeds the amount determined as the amount which should have been assessed, such excess shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer as provided in section 322, without the filing of claim therefor. If the amount determined as the amount which should have been assessed is greater than the amount actually assessed, then the difference shall be assessed and shall be collected as part of the tax upon notice and demand from the collector.

(j) Claims in abatement. No claim in abatement shall be filed in respect of any assessment in respect of any tax imposed by this chapter.

§ 39.273-1 Jeopardy assessments. (a) If the Commissioner believes that the assessment or collection of a deficiency will be jeopardized by delay, he is required to assess such deficiency immediately, together with the interest and other additional amounts provided by law. If a deficiency is assessed on account of jeopardy after the decision of The Tax Court of the United States is rendered, the jeopardy assessment may be made only with respect to the deficiency determined by The Tax Court. The Commissioner is prohibited from making a jeopardy assessment after a decision of The Tax Court has become final (see section 1140) or after the taxpayer has filed a petition for review of the decision of The Tax Court.

(b) If notice of a deficiency was mailed to the taxpayer (see section 272 (a)) before it was discovered that delay would jeopardize the assessment or collection of the tax, a jeopardy assessment may be made in an amount greater or less than that included in the deficiency notice. On the other hand if the assessment on account of jeopardy was made without mailing the notice required by section 272 (a) the Commissioner must within 60 days after the making of the assessment send the taxpayer notice of the deficiency by registered mail. The taxpayer may file a petition with The Tax Court for a redetermination of the amount of the deficiency within 90 days after such notice is mailed (or within 150 days after mailing in the case of such a notice addressed to a person outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia) not counting

Saturday Sunday, or a legal holiday in the District of Columbia as the 90th or 150th day. The Commissioner may, at any time before the decision of The Tax Court is rendered, abate such assessment, or any unpaid portion thereof, to the extent that he believes the assessment to be excessive in amount. If the petition of the taxpayer is filed with The Tax Court, either before or after the making of the jeopardy assessment, the Commissioner is required to notify The Tax Court of such assessment or abatement, and The Tax Court has jurisdiction to redetermine the amount of the deficiency together with all other amounts assessed at the same time in connection therewith. (See section 273 (c).)

(c) After a jeopardy assessment has been made, the list showing such assessment will be immediately transmitted to the district director of internal revenue. Upon receipt of the list containing the assessment, the district director of internal revenue is required to send notice and demand to the taxpayer for the amount of the jeopardy assessment. Regardless of whether the taxpayer has filed a petition with The Tax Court, he is required to make payment of the amount of such assessment (to the extent that it has not been abated) within 10 days after the sending of notice and demand by the district director of internal revenue, unless before the expiration of such 10-day period he files with the district director of internal revenue a bond on Form 1129 of the character hereinafter prescribed. The bond must be in such amount, not exceeding double the amount for which the stay is desired, as the district director of internal revenue deems necessary and must be executed by sureties satisfactory to the district director of internal revenue. It must be conditioned upon the payment of so much of the amount included therein as is not abated by a decision of The Tax Court which has become final, together with the interest on such amount provided for in section 297. If the bond is given before the taxpayer has filed his petition with The Tax Court, it must contain a further condition that if a petition is not filed before the expiration of the 90-day or 150-day period provided for the filing of such petition, the amount stayed by the bond will be paid upon notice and demand at any time after the expiration of such period, together with interest thereon at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand to the date of the notice and demand made after the expiration of the 90-day or 150-day period. If a petition is not filed with The Tax Court within the 90-day or 150-day period, the district director of internal revenue will be so advised, and, if collection of the deficiency has been stayed by the filing of a bond within 10 days after the date of jeopardy notice and demand, he should then give notice and make demand for payment of the amount assessed plus interest. Any bond filed after the expiration of 10 days from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand is not such a bond as is contemplated by section 273 (f) and, while the district director of internal revenue may in his discretion accept the bond and stay collection of the deficiency, the taxpayer will not be relieved from payment of interest on the amount of the deficiency at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand to the date of payment.

(d) Upon the filing of a bond of the character described within 10 days after the date of notice and demand for payment of the amount assessed, the collection of so much thereof as is covered by the bond will be stayed. The taxpayer may at any time waive the stay of collection of the whole or any part of the amount covered by the bond. If as a result of such waiver any part of the amount covered by the bond is paid, or if any portion of the jeopardy assessment is abated by the Commissioner before the decision of The Tax Court is rendered, then the bond shall at the request of the taxpayer be proportionately reduced. If The Tax Court determines that the amount assessed is greater than the correct amount of the tax, the bond will also be proportionately reduced at the request of the taxpayer after The Tax Court renders its decision.

(e) After The Tax Court has rendered its decision and such decision has become final, the district director of internal revenue will be notified of the action taken. The district director of internal revenue will then send notice and demand for the unpaid portion of the amount determined by The Tax Court, the collection of which has been stayed by the bond. The district director of internal revenue is required to include in the notice and demand for the unpaid portion, interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand to the date of the notice and demand referred to in this paragraph. If the amount of the jeopardy assessment is less than the amount determined by The Tax Court, the difference, together with interest as provided in section 292, will be assessed, and collected as part of the tax upon notice and demand from the district director of internal revenue. If the amount included in the notice and demand made after the decision of The Tax Court is not paid within 10 days after such notice and demand, there shall be collected as part of the tax, interest as provided in section 294 (b) If the amount of the jeopardy assessment is in excess of the amount determined by The Tax Court, the unpaid portion of such excess will be abated. If any part of the excess amount has been paid, it will be credited or refunded to the taxpayer as provided in section 322.

(f) As to bankruptcy proceedings for the relief of debtors and receivership proceedings, see sections 274 and 298 and §§ 39.274-1 and 39.274-2.

§ 39.274 Statutory provisions; assessment and collection of deficiencies; bankruptcy and receiverships.

SEC. 274. Bankruptcy and receiverships—(a) Immediate assessment. Upon the adjudication of bankruptcy of any taxpayer in any bankruptcy proceeding or the appointment of a receiver for any taxpayer in any receivership proceeding before any court of the United States or of any State or Territory or of the District of Columbia, any deficiency (together with all interest, additional amounts, or additions to the tax provided for by law) determined by the Commissioner in respect of a tax imposed by this chapter upon such taxpayer shall, despite the restrictions imposed by section 272 (a) upon assessments be immediately assessed if such deficiency has not theretofore been assessed in accordance with law. In such cases the trustee in bankruptcy or receiver shall give notice in writing to the Commissioner of the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of the receiver, and the running of the statute of limitations on the making of assessments shall be suspended for the period from the date of adjudication in bankruptcy or the appointment of the receiver to a date 30 days after the date upon which the notice from the trustee or receiver is received by the Commissioner; but the suspension under this sentence shall in no case be for a period in excess of two years. Claims for the deficiency and such interest, additional amounts and additions to the tax may be presented, for adjudication in accordance with law, to the court before which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending, despite the pendency of proceedings for the redetermination of the deficiency in pursuance of a petition to the Board; but no petition for any such redetermination shall be filed with the Board after the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of the receiver.

(b) Unpaid claims. Any portion of the claim allowed in such bankruptcy or receivership proceeding which is unpaid shall be paid by the taxpayer upon notice and demand from the collector after the termination of such proceeding, and may be collected by distraint or proceeding in court within 6 years after termination of such proceeding. Extensions of time for such payment may be had in the same manner and subject to the same provisions and limitations as are provided in section 272 (j) and section 296 in the case of a deficiency in a tax imposed by this chapter.

§ 39.274-1 Bankruptcy and receivership proceedings. (a) During a bankruptcy proceeding, or an equity receivership proceeding in either a Federal or a State court, the assets of the taxpayer are in general under the control of the court in which such proceeding is pending, and the collection of taxes cannot be made by distraining upon such assets. However, any assets which under applicable provisions of law are not under the control of the court may be subject to distraint.

(b) As used in this section and § 39.274-2, the term "bankruptcy proceeding" includes proceedings under Chapters I to VII of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. cc. I-VII) or under sections 75 or 77, or Chapters X-XIII of such act; and the term "adjudication of bankruptcy" includes, in addition to an adjudication in a proceeding under Chapters I to VII, the approval of a petition as properly filed under section 77 or Chapter X by a court of competent jurisdiction or the filing of a petition under section 75 or Chapters XI to XIII with a court of competent jurisdiction.

(c) A trustee in bankruptcy (including a trustee, receiver, debtor in possession, or other person designated as in control of the assets of a debtor in any bankruptcy proceeding by order of the court in which such proceeding is pending) or a receiver in any receivership proceeding is required to give notice in writing to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., of the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of a receiver.

(d) District directors of internal revenue should, promptly after notice of outstanding liability against a taxpayer in any bankruptcy or receivership proceeding, and in any event within the time limited by the appropriate provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, and the orders of the court in which such proceeding is pending, file claim covering such liability in the court in which such proceeding is pending. Such claim should be filed whether the unpaid taxes involved have been assessed or not, except in cases where the departmental instructions direct otherwise; for example, where the payment of the taxes is secured by a sufficient bond. At the same time claim is filed with the bankruptcy or receivership court, the district director of internal revenue will send notice and demand for payment to the taxpayer together with a copy of such claim.

(e) Under section 3466 of the Revised Statutes and section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, and section 64 of the Bankruptcy Act, taxes are entitled to the priority over other claims therein stated and the trustee, receiver, debtor in possession, or other person designated as in control of the assets of the debtor by the court in which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending, may be held personally liable for failure on his part to protect the priority of the Government respecting taxes of which he has notice. Sections 75 (l) 77 (e), 199, 337 (2) 455, and 659 (6) of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 203 (l), 205 (e) 599, 737 (2) 855, and 1059 (6)) also contain provisions with respect to the rights of the United States relative to priority of payment. Bankruptcy courts have jurisdiction under the Bankruptcy Act to determine all disputes regarding the amount and validity of taxes of a bankrupt or of a debtor in a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act. A bankruptcy or receivership proceeding does not discharge any portion of a claim of the United States for taxes except in the case of a proceeding under Chapter X of the Bankruptcy Act, and except to the extent which may be provided in a plan or arrangement duly effectuated in a bankruptcy proceeding. Any portion of a claim of the United States for taxes which has been allowed by the court in which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending and which remains unsatisfied after the termination of the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding shall be collected with interest as provided in section 298.

§ 39.274-2 Immediate assessments in bankruptcy and receivership cases. (a) If the Commissioner has determined that a deficiency is due in respect of income tax and the taxpayer has filed a petition with The Tax Court of the United States prior to the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of a receiver, the trustee, receiver, debtor in possession, or other person designated as in control of the assets of the debtor by the court in which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending, may prosecute the taxpayer's appeal before the The Tax Court as to that particular determination. No petition shall be filed with The Tax Court for a redetermination of the deficiency after the adjudication of bankruptcy or the appointment of a receiver.

(b) Claim for the amount of a deficiency, even though pending before The Tax Court for consideration, may be filed with the court in which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending without awaiting final decision of The Tax Court. In case of final decision of The Tax Court before the termination of the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding, a copy of The Tax Court's decision may be filed by the Commissioner with the court in which such proceeding is pending.

(c) While the Commissioner is required by section 274 to make immediate assessment of any deficiency, such assessment is not made as a jeopardy assessment within the meaning of section 273, and consequently the provisions of that section do not apply to any assessment made under section 274. Therefore, the notice of the deficiency provided for in section 273 (b) will not be mailed. Although such notice will not be issued, nevertheless a letter will be sent to the taxpayer, or to the trustee, receiver, debtor in possession, or other person designated by the court in which the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding is pending as in control of the assets of the debtor, notifying him in detail how the deficiency was computed, that he may furnish evidence showing wherein the deficiency is incorrect, and that upon request he will be granted a hearing with respect to such deficiency. If after such evidence is submitted and hearing held any adjustment appears necessary in the deficiency, appropriate action will be taken. A copy of the notification letter will be attached to the assessment list.

(d) If any portion of the claim allowed by the court in a bankruptcy or receivership proceeding remains unpaid after the termination of such proceeding, the district director of internal revenue will send notice and demand for payment thereof to the taxpayer. Such unpaid portion with interest as provided in section 298 may be collected from the taxpayer by distraint or proceeding in court within six years after the termination of the bankruptcy or receivership proceeding. Extensions of time for the payment of such unpaid amount may be granted in the same manner and subject to the same provisions and limitations as provided in sections 272 (j) and 297. See § 39.272-3.

(e) This section deals only with immediate assessments provided for in section 274 and the procedure in connection with such assessments.

§ 39.275-277 Statutory provisions; assessment and collection of deficiencies; period of limitation; exceptions; suspension of running of period of limitation.

SEC. 275. Period of limitation upon assessment and collection. Except as provided in section 276—

(a) General rule. The amount of income taxes imposed by this chapter shall be assessed within three years after the return was filed, and no proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such taxes shall be begun after the expiration of such period.

(b) Request for prompt assessment. In the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent, or by his estate during the period of administration, or by a corporation, the tax shall be assessed, and any proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such tax shall be begun, within eighteen months after written request therefor (filed after the return is made) by the executor, administrator, or other fiduciary representing the estate of such decedent, or by the corporation, but not after the expiration of three years after the return was filed. This subsection shall not apply in the case of a corporation unless—

(1) Such written request notifies the Commissioner that the corporation contemplates dissolution at or before the expiration of such 18 months' period; and

(2) The dissolution is in good faith begun before the expiration of such 18 months' period; and

(3) The dissolution is completed.

(c) Omission from gross income. If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein which is in excess of 25 per centum of the amount of gross income stated in the return, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time within 5 years after the return was filed.

(d) Constructive dividends. If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein—

(1) Foreign personal-holding companies. Under section 337 (b) (relating to the inclusion in the gross income of United States shareholders of their distributive shares of the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal-holding company); or

(2) Personal service corporations. Under section 394 (b) (relating to the inclusion in the gross income of shareholders of their distributive shares of undistributed Supplement S net income of a personal service corporation); the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time within seven years after the return was filed.

(e) Distributions in liquidation to shareholders. If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein under section 115 (c) as an amount distributed in liquidation of a corporation, other than a foreign personal holding company, the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time within four years after the return was filed.

(f) For the purposes of subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e), a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof shall be considered as filed on such last day.

(g) Corporation and shareholder. If a corporation makes no return of the tax imposed by this chapter, but each of the shareholders includes in his return his distributive share of the net income of the corporation, then the tax of the corporation shall be assessed within four years after the last date on which any such shareholder's return was filed.

Sec. 276. Same; exceptions—(a) False return or no return. In the case of a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax or of a failure to file a return the tax may be assessed, or a proceeding in court for the collection of such tax may be begun without assessment, at any time.

(b) Waiver Where before the expiration of the time prescribed in section 275 for the assessment of the tax, both the Commissioner and the taxpayer have consented in writing to its assessment after such time, the tax may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

(c) Collection after assessment. Where the assessment of any income tax imposed by this chapter has been made within the period of limitation properly applicable thereto, such tax may be collected by distraint or by a proceeding in court, but only if begun (1) within six years after the assessment of the tax, or (2) prior to the expiration of any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the Commissioner and the taxpayer before the expiration of such six-year period. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

(d) Net operating loss carry-backs and unused excess profits credit carry-backs. In the case of a deficiency attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back or an unused excess profits credit carry-back, including deficiencies which may be assessed pursuant to the provisions of section 3780 (b) or (c), such deficiency may be assessed—

(1) * * * [Not applicable.]

(2) In case a return was not required under subchapter E of chapter 2 for the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit resulting in the carry-back, at any time before the expiration of the period within which (under section 275 or subsection (a) or (b) of this section) a deficiency (with respect to tax imposed either by chapter 1 or by subchapter A or B of chapter 2) for such taxable year (whichever is the longer period) may be assessed.

(e) Gain upon sale or exchange of residence. In the case of a deficiency described in section 112 (n) (7), such deficiency may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the time therein provided.

(f) Involuntary conversion. In the case of a deficiency described in section 112 (f) (3) (C) or (D), such deficiency may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the time therein provided.

[Sec. 276 as amended by sec. 5 (e), Tax Adjustment Act 1945; sec. 122 (f), Rev. Act 1945; sec. 318 (b) (5), Rev. Act 1951; sec. 1 (b), Pub. Law 251 (82d Cong.)]

Sec. 277. Suspension of running of statute. The running of the statute of limitations provided in section 275 or 276 on the making of assessments and the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection, in respect of any deficiency, shall (after the mailing of a notice under section 272 (a)) be suspended for the period during which the Commissioner is prohibited from making the assessment or beginning distraint or a proceeding in court (and in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the deficiency is placed on the docket of the Board, until the decision of the Board becomes final), and for sixty days thereafter.

§ 39.275-1 Period of limitation upon assessment of tax. The amount of income tax imposed by the Internal Revenue Code must be assessed within three years after the return was filed. For the purposes of subsections (a) (b) (c) (d) and (e) of section 275, a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof shall be considered as filed on such last day. Exceptions to the period of limitation stated in this section (other than those provided for elsewhere in the Code) are as follows:

(a) In the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent or by his estate during the period of administration, or by a corporation contemplating dissolution, the tax shall be assessed within 18 months after written request therefor by the fiduciary or legal representative of the estate of the decedent or by the corporation, but not after the expiration of three years after the return was filed. The effect of this provision is to limit the period in which the Commissioner may assess the tax in such cases to a period of 18 months from the date the request is filed, even though more than 18 months still remain of the regular 3-year period in which the assessment may under ordinary circumstances be made. The request, in order to be effective, must be made after the return is filed and must be in such language as to make it clear to the Commissioner that it is desired to take advantage of the provisions of section 275 (b) In the case of a corporation the 18-month period of limitation shall not apply unless—

(1) The written request notifies the Commissioner that the corporation contemplates dissolution at or before the expiration of such period,

(2) The dissolution is in good faith begun before the expiration of such period, and

(3) The dissolution so begun is completed either before or after the expiration of such 18-month period.

Such a request does not have the effect of extending the regular period of limitation even though the request is made less than 18 months before the expiration of the regular period of limitation.

(b) If a corporation makes no income tax return under the Internal Revenue Code, but each of the shareholders includes in his personal return his distributive share of the net income of the corporation, the tax of the corporation shall be assessed within four years after the last date on which any such shareholder's return was filed.

(c) In the case of a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax, the tax may be assessed at any time after such false or fraudulent return is filed.

(d) If there is omitted from the gross income stated in the return an amount properly includible therein which is in excess of 25 percent of the gross income so stated, the tax may be assessed at any time within five years after the return was filed.

(e) In the event the taxpayer fails to file a return, the amount of tax due may be assessed at any time after the date prescribed for filing the return. But see paragraph (b) of this section.

(f) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein under section 337 (b) as his distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company (see sections 331 to 340, inclusive), or an amount properly includible therein under section 394 (b) as his distributive share of the Supplement S net income of a personal service corporation (see sections 391 to 396, inclusive) the tax may be assessed at any time within seven years after the return was filed.

(g) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein under section 115 (c) as an amount distributed in liquidation of a corporation, other than a foreign personal holding company, the tax may be assessed at any time within four years after the return was filed.

(h) If before the expiration of the time prescribed in section 275 for the assessment of the tax the Commissioner and the taxpayer have consented in writing to the assessment of the tax after such time, the tax may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

(i) If a notice of a deficiency has been mailed to the taxpayer under the provisions of section 272 (a) then the running of the statute of limitations on assessment of any deficiency shall be suspended for the period during which the Commissioner is prohibited from making the assessment (and in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the deficiency is placed on the docket of The Tax Court of the United States, until the decision of The Tax Court becomes final) and for 60 days thereafter. If the Commissioner mails to a taxpayer a notice of deficiency within the statutory period of limitation and the taxpayer does not appeal therefrom to The Tax Court, the notice of deficiency so given does not suspend the running of the period of limitation on assessment for the purpose of any additional deficiency shown to be due in a subsequent deficiency notice.

(j) In a bankruptcy or receivership proceeding the running of the statute of limitations on the making of assessments is suspended from the date of adjudication in bankruptcy or the date of the appointment of a receiver, as the case may be, to a date 30 days after the date upon which the notice provided for in section 274 (a) is received by the Commissioner in Washington, D. C., but in no case shall the suspension be for a period in excess of two years. See section 274 (a) and §§ 39.274-1 and 39.274-2.

(k) A special period of limitation is provided in section 276 (d) within which a deficiency in any tax (including a deficiency which may be assessed pursuant to the provisions of section 3780 (b) or (c) relating to tentative carry-back adjustments) which is attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back or an unused excess profits credit carry-back, may be assessed. The period within which such a deficiency may be assessed depends, in general, on the period within which a deficiency may be assessed with respect to the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit which resulted in the carry-back. A deficiency in any tax attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back or an unused excess profits credit carry-back may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period within which (under the provisions of section 275 or 276 (a) or (b) or section 508 which makes such sections 275 and 276 (a) and (b) applicable to subchapter A of chapter 2) a deficiency may be assessed with respect to the same or any other tax imposed by chapter 1 or subchapter A of chapter 2 for the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit which resulted in such carry-back. A deficiency attributable to the application to the taxpayer of the carry-back thus may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of whichever of the following two periods, each period being determined under the applicable provisions of sections 275, 276 (a) and (b), and 508, expires the latest:

(1) The period within which a deficiency may be assessed with respect to the tax imposed by chapter 1 for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit which resulted in the carry-back; or

(2) The period within which a deficiency may be assessed with respect to the surtax on personal holding companies, imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2, for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit which resulted in the carry-back.

If a corporation is not a personal holding company, as defined in section 501, for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit which resulted in the carry-back, the period within which a deficiency may be assessed with respect to the surtax on personal holding companies for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit shall be disregarded in determining the period within which a deficiency attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a carry-back, resulting from such loss or unused credit, may be assessed. It is immaterial whether the deficiency is attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back or an unused excess profits credit carry-back or whether the deficiency is in respect of the same tax as that of the carry-back or in respect of some other tax. It is likewise immaterial whether the tax, in respect of which the deficiency resulting from the application to the taxpayer of the carry-back is to be assessed, is the same kind of tax with respect to which a deficiency might be assessed for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit which resulted in the carry-back. Thus, if a deficiency for the calendar year 1952 with respect to the tax imposed by chapter 1 is attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back from 1953, and if the periods within which deficiencies with respect to the taxes imposed by chapter 1 and subchapter A of chapter 2 for 1953 expire respectively on March 15, 1957, and September 15, 1957, the period within which such deficiency, attributable to the application to the taxpayer of the net operating loss carry-back from 1953, may be assessed with respect to the tax imposed by chapter 1 for 1952 will expire on September 15, 1957. A deficiency attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a carry-back may result from an adjustment to a net operating loss or an unused excess profits credit, to the resulting carry-back, or to the net operating loss deduction or the unused excess profits credit adjustment. A deficiency may be attributable to the application to the taxpayer of a carry-back even though the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit or the resulting carry-back, as claimed by the taxpayer, is identical in amount with the actual loss or unused credit or the resulting carry-back. For example, if in computing a net operating loss deduction, the taxpayer fails to make the adjustment required by section 122 (c) the resulting deficiency will be considered to be attributable to the application to the taxpayer of any operating loss carry-back which entered into the computation of such net operating loss deduction. If the period within which a deficiency may be assessed under any other applicable provisions of law is longer than the period provided in section 276 (d) a deficiency attributable to the application to the taxpayer of such carry-back may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of such longer period.

(l) In the case of a joint return made under section 51 (g), the period of limitations shall not be less than one year immediately after the date of the actual filing of such return, computed without regard to the provisions of section 51 (g) (7)

(m) For the period of limitations for assessing a deficiency attributable to an award made pursuant to the order issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission on December 4, 1950, under the Railway Mail Pay Act of 1916, see § 29.275-1 of Regulations 111 (26 C. F. R., 1949 ed., Supps.).

(n) In the case of a deficiency described in section 112 (n) (7), such deficiency may be assessed at any time before the expiration of the time therein provided. See § 39.112 (n)-1.

(o) In the case of a deficiency described in section 112 (f) (3) (C) or (D), such deficiency may be assessed at any time before the expiration of the time therein provided. See § 39.112 (f)-1.

(p) With respect to the period of limitation for assessing the amount of the liability of a transferee of property, or for assessing the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U. S. C. 192), see section 311.

(q) For the period of limitation for assessing amounts determined under section 127 (c) (3) (relating to war loss recoveries) or any deficiency attributable to the basis of recovered property being determined under section 127 (d) (2) see section 127 (c) (5) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.275-2 Period of limitation upon collection of tax. (a) In the case of the income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code, a proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such tax must be begun within three years after the return was filed.

(b) The exceptions to the period of limitation upon collection of the tax without assessment stated in paragraph (a) of this section are as follows:

(1) In the case of income received during the lifetime of a decedent or by his estate during the period of administration, or by a corporation, a proceeding in court for the collection of the tax without assessment must be begun within 18 months after a written request therefor by the executor, administrator, or other fiduciary representing the estate of the decedent, or by the corporation, but not after the expiration of three years after the return was filed. Such a request does not have the effect of extending the regular period of limitation within which a proceeding in court without assessment may be begun, even though the request is made less than 18 months before the expiration of the regular period of limitation, nor is it of any effect if made before the return is filed. In the case of a corporation the conditions stated in (1), (2) and (3) of paragraph (a) of § 39.275-1 also must be met.

(2) A proceeding in court for the collection of the tax without assessment may be begun at any time—

(i) In case the taxpayer files a false or fraudulent return with intent to evade tax; or

(ii) In case the taxpayer fails to file a return.

(3) If there is omitted from the gross income stated in the return an amount properly includible therein which is in excess of 25 percent of the gross income so stated, a proceeding in court for the collection of the tax may be begun without assessment at any time within five years after the return was filed.

(4) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein under section 337 (b) as his distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company (see sections 331 to 340, inclusive), or an amount properly includible therein under section 394 (b) as his distributive share of the Supplement S net income of a personal service corporation (see sections 391 to 396, inclusive), a proceeding in court for the collection of the tax may be begun without assessment at any time within seven years after the return was filed.

(5) If the taxpayer omits from gross income an amount properly includible therein under section 115 (c) as an amount distributed in liquidation of a corporation, other than a foreign personal holding company, a proceeding in court for the collection of the tax may be begun without assessment at any time within four years after the return was filed.

(6) In the case of a joint return made under section 51 (g) the period of limitations shall not be less than one year immediately after the date of the actual filing of such return, computed without regard to the provisions of section 51 (g) (7)

(c) In any case in which the tax has been assessed within the statutory period of limitation properly applicable thereto, a proceeding in court or distraint for the collection of such tax may be begun within six years after the assessment thereof, or prior to the expiration of any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the Commissioner and the taxpayer before the expiration of such 6-year period. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon. In determining the running of the statute of limitations in respect of distraint, the distraint shall be held to have been begun, in the case of personal property, on the date on which the levy upon such property is made, or, in the case of real property, on the date on which notice of the time and place of sale is given to the person whose estate it is proposed to sell.

(d) If a notice of a deficiency has been mailed to the taxpayer under the provisions of section 272 (a) (see § 39.272-1) then the running of the statute of limitations on the beginning of distraint after assessment, or on the beginning of a proceeding in court after assessment or without assessment, in respect of any deficiency, shall be suspended for the period during which the Commissioner is prohibited from beginning such distraint or proceeding in court (and in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the deficiency is placed on the docket of The Tax Court of the United States, until the decision of the Tax Court becomes final) and for 60 days thereafter.

(e) With respect to the period of limitation upon the collection of the tax on unpaid claims in bankruptcy or receivership proceedings, see section 274 (b) and § 39.274-2.

SUPPLEMENT M—INTEREST AND ADDITIONS TO THE TAX

SEC. 291. Failure to file return. (a) In case of any failure to make and file return required by this chapter, within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Commissioner in pursuance of law, unless it is shown that such failure is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect, there shall be added to the tax: 5 per centum if the failure is for not more than thirty days with an additional 5 per centum for each additional thirty days or fraction thereof during which such failure continues, not exceeding 25 per centum in the aggregate. The amount so added to any tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as a part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax. The amount added to the tax under this section shall be in lieu of the 25 per centum addition to the tax provided in section 3612 (d) (1).

[Sec. 291 as amended by sec. 172 (f) (4), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 6 (b) (7), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.291-1 Addition to the tax in case of failure to file return. (a) In case of failure to make and file a return required by chapter 1 within the prescribed time, a certain percent of the amount of the tax is added to the tax unless failure to file the return within the prescribed time is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. The amount to be added to the tax is 5 percent if the failure is for not more than 30 days, with an additional 5 percent for each additional 30 days or fraction thereof during which failure continues, not to exceed 25 percent in the aggregate.

(b) A taxpayer who wishes to avoid the addition to the tax for delinquency must make an affirmative showing of all facts alleged as a reasonable cause for failure to file the return on time in the form of a written statement containing a declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury, which should be filed with the district director of internal revenue, who, unless otherwise directed by the Commissioner, will forward the statement to the Commissioner, and, if the Commissioner determines that the delinquency was due to a reasonable cause, and not to willful neglect, the addition to the tax will not be assessed. If the taxpayer exercised ordinary business care and prudence and was nevertheless unable to file the return within the prescribed time, then the delay is due to a reasonable cause.

(c) If the addition to the tax for delinquency in filing the return has been added, the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax.

(d) For addition to the tax in case of a deficiency due to fraud with intent to evade tax, see section 293. As to the making of returns for taxpayers by district directors of internal revenue or the Commissioner in the case of delinquency in filing a return, or in the case of a false or fraudulent return, see section 3612.

§ 39.292-294 Statutory provisions; interest and additions to the tax; interest on deficiencies; additions to tax in case of deficiency; additions to tax in case of nonpayment.

SEC. 292. Interest on deficiencies—(a) General rule. Interest upon the amount determined as a deficiency shall be assessed at the same time as the deficiency, shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector, and shall be collected as a part of the tax, at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax (or, if the tax is paid in installments, from the date prescribed for the payment of the first installment) to the date the deficiency is assessed, or, in the case of a waiver under section 272 (d), to the thirtieth day after the filing of such waiver or to the date the deficiency is assessed whichever is the earlier. If any portion of the deficiency assessed is not to be collected by reason of a prior satisfaction, in whole or in part, of the tax, proper adjustment shall be made with respect to the interest on such portion.

(b) Deficiency resulting from relief under section 722. * * * [Not applicable]

(c) Deficiency resulting from carry-back and related matters. If any part of a deficiency is determined by the Commissioner to be attributable (A) to a carry-back to which an overpayment described in section 3771 (e), or a decrease determined under section 3780 (b), in any other tax is attributable, or (B) to an error in the amount or effect of a carry-back which resulted in a credit or refund of an overpayment with interest computed pursuant to section 3771 (e), or in a decrease determined under section 3780 (b), no interest shall be assessed or paid under subsection (a) with respect to such part of the deficiency for any period during which interest was not allowed with respect to such overpayment or for a period prior to the application of such decrease.

(d) With respect to any corporation entitled to receive payment for the transportation of United States mail, if an award is retroactively received for the transportation of United States mail, and if such award is required to be treated as income in the year or years in which the mail was carried, then, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, no interest shall be due, with respect to any period prior to thirty days after such award is granted, for tax deficiencies resulting from the inclusion of such additional mail payments retroactively.

[Sec. 292 as amended by Pub. Law 201 (78th Cong.); sec. 14 (c), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 6 (a), Tax Adjustment Act 1945; sec. 611 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

SEC. 293. Additions to the tax in case of deficiency—(a) Negligence. If any part of any deficiency is due to negligence, or intentional disregard of rules and regulations but without intent to defraud, 5 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as if it were a deficiency, except that the provisions of section 272 (i), relating to the prorating of a deficiency, and of section 292, relating to interest on deficiencies, shall not be applicable.

(b) Fraud. If any part of any deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, then 50 per centum of the total amount of the deficiency (in addition to such deficiency) shall be so assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the 50 per centum addition to the tax provided in section 3612 (d) (2).

SEC. 294. Additions to the tax in case of nonpayment—(a) Tax shown on return—(1) General rule. Where the amount determined by the taxpayer as the tax imposed by this chapter, or any installment thereof, or any part of such amount or installment, is not paid on or before the date prescribed for its payment, there shall be collected as a part of the tax, interest upon such unpaid amount at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date prescribed for its payment until it is paid.

(2) If extension granted. Where an extension of time for payment of the amount so determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, has been granted, and the amount the time for payment of which has been extended, and the interest thereon determined under section 295, is not paid in full prior to the expiration of the period of the extension, then, in lieu of the interest provided for in paragraph (1) of this subsection, interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum shall be collected on such unpaid amount from the date of the expiration of the period of the extension until it is paid.

(b) Deficiency. Where a deficiency, or any interest or additional amounts assessed in connection therewith under section 292, or under section 293, or any addition to the tax in case of delinquency provided for in section 291, is not paid in full within ten days from the date of notice and demand from the collector, there shall be collected as part of the tax, interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date of such notice and demand until it is paid. If any part of a deficiency prorated to any unpaid installment under section 272 (i) is not paid in full on or before the date prescribed for the payment of such installment, there shall be collected as part of the tax interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from such date until it is paid.

(c) Filing of jeopardy bond. If a bond is filed, as provided in section 273, the provisions of subsection (b) of this section shall not apply to the amount covered by the bond.

(d) Estimated tax—(1) Failure to file declaration or pay installment of estimated tax—(A) Failure to file declaration. In the case of a failure to make and file a declaration of estimated tax within the time prescribed, unless such failure is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, there shall be added to the tax 5 per centum of each installment due but unpaid, and in addition, with respect to each such installment due but unpaid, 1 per centum of the unpaid amount thereof for each month (except the first) or fraction thereof during which such amount remains unpaid. In no event shall the aggregate addition to the tax under this subparagraph with respect to any installment due but unpaid, exceed 10 per centum of the unpaid portion of such installment. For the purposes of this subparagraph the amount and due date of each installment shall be the same as if a declaration had been filed within the time prescribed showing an estimated tax equal to the correct tax reduced by the credits under sections 32 and 35.

(B) Failure to pay installments of estimated tax declared. Where a declaration of estimated tax has been made and filed within the time prescribed, or where a declaration of estimated tax has been made and filed after the time prescribed and the Commissioner has found that failure to make and file such declaration within the time prescribed was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, in the case of a failure to pay an installment of the estimated tax within the time prescribed, unless such failure is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, there shall be added to the tax 5 per centum of the unpaid amount of such installment, and in addition 1 per centum of such unpaid amount for each month (except the first) or fraction thereof during which such amount remains unpaid. In no event shall the aggregate addition to the tax under this subparagraph with respect to any installment due but unpaid, exceed 10 per centum of the unpaid portion of such installment.

(2) Substantial underestimate of estimated tax. If 80 per centum of the tax (determined without regard to the credits under sections 32 and 35), in the case of individuals other than farmers exercising an election under section 60 (a), or 66⅔ per centum of such tax so determined in the case of such farmers, exceeds the estimated tax (increased by such credits), there shall be added to the tax an amount equal to such excess, or equal to 6 per centum of the amount by which such tax so determined exceeds the estimated tax so increased, whichever is the lesser. This paragraph shall not apply to the taxable year in which falls the death of the taxpayer, nor, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, shall it apply to the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a timely payment of estimated tax within or before each quarter * * * [deleted material no longer applicable] of such year (or in the case of farmers exercising an election under section 60 (a), within the last quarter) in an amount at least as great as though computed (under such regulations) on the basis of the taxpayer's status with respect to the personal exemption and credit for dependents on the date of the filing of the declaration for such taxable year (or in the case of any such farmer, or in case the fifteenth day of the third month of the taxable year occurs after July 1, on July 1 of the taxable year) but otherwise on the basis of the facts shown on his return for the preceding taxable year. * * * [deleted material no longer applicable]

(3) Tax on self-employment income. This subsection shall be applied without regard to the tax imposed by subchapter E, relating to tax on self-employment income.

(e) Substantial overstatement of expected carry-backs. If the time for payment of any tax or taxes for any taxable year is extended under section 3779, there shall be added to such tax or taxes an amount equal to 5 per centum of the penalty portion, if any, of the amount to which such extension relates, unless the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that, as of the end of the taxable year in which such extension was made, there was reasonable cause to expect there would be no such penalty portion. The penalty portion shall be the excess of the amount to which such extension relates which is not paid by the end of the taxable year in which such extension is made over 125 per centum of the amount to which such extension relates which is satisfied by applying thereto a decrease in tax in respect of an application under section 3780 (a) less any amounts assessed in respect of such application which are not so satisfied.

Law 807 (81st Cong.); sec. 103 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.294–1 Additions to the tax—(a) In general. Section 294 (d) provides for certain additions to the tax in the case of—

(1) Failure to file timely a declaration of estimated tax;

(2) Failure to pay within the time prescribed any installment of declared estimated tax; and

(3) Substantial underestimate of the estimated tax.

These additions to the tax are in addition to any applicable criminal penalties.

(b) Additions for specific failures on the part of the taxpayer with respect to the estimated tax—(1) Failure to file declaration. (i) Section 294 (d) (1) (A) provides for an addition to the tax in the case of a failure to make and file a declaration of estimated tax within the time prescribed unless such failure is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect. Such addition to the tax shall be in an amount equal to 5 percent of the unpaid amount of each installment and in addition 1 percent of the unpaid amount of the installment for each month (except the first) or fraction thereof during which such amount remains unpaid. Such addition to the tax with respect to any installment due but unpaid shall not exceed 10 percent of the unpaid portion of such installment. For the purposes of section 294 (d) (1) (A) the amount and due date of each installment shall be the same as if a declaration had been filed within the time prescribed showing an estimated tax equal to the correct tax reduced by the credits for tax withheld at source.

(ii) The application of section 294 (d) (1) (A) in the case of taxpayers not entitled to elect under section 60 (a) relating to farmers, may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. An individual filed a declaration on May 15, 1952, for the calendar year 1952, disclosing an estimated tax of $1,400, and paid installments of $350 each on May 15, June 15, and September 15, 1952, and January 15, 1953. In computing his estimated tax he correctly estimated the amount of tax to be withheld at source on his wages for 1952 to be $1,000. On March 15, 1953, he filed a return on Form 1040 showing a correct tax of $4,000 and paid the balance of the tax due, $1,600 ($4,000 less the sum of $1,400 and $1,000). Examination of his return disclosed that his entire income consisted of a regular salary, dividends, and interest. The failure to file a timely declaration was not due to reasonable cause. Hence the individual is subject to the penalty imposed by section 294 (d) (1) (A). Under the facts assumed, installments of tax in the amount of $750 each were due and payable on March 15, June 15, and September 15, 1952, and January 15, 1953, that is, one-fourth of $3,000, the balance of correct tax remaining after taking into account the amount withheld at source on his wages. The entire amount of the March installment of $750 remained unpaid for two months; $400 of the same installment remained unpaid for an additional ten months; $400 of the June installment remained unpaid for nine months; $400 of the September installment remained unpaid for six months; $400 of the January installment remained unpaid for two months. The addition to the tax under section 294 (d) (1) (A), subject to the limitation of 10 percent of the unpaid amount of each installment, is $179, computed as follows:

Unpaid amount	Percentage	Penalty before limitation	10 percent limitation	Addition to tax
March:
$750	5 percent plus 1 percent	$45
$400	10 times 1 percent	40
		85	$75	$75
June: $400	5 percent plus 8 percent	52	40	40
September: $400	5 percent plus 5 percent	40	40	40
January: $400	5 percent plus 1 percent	24	40	24
Total addition to tax under sec. 294 (d) (1) (A)				179

(2) Failure to pay installment of declared estimated tax. (i) Section 294 (d) (1) (B) provides for an addition to the tax in the case of the failure to pay an installment of the declared estimated tax within the time prescribed unless such failure is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to be due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect. Such addition to the tax is applicable to delinquency in payment only (a) where a timely declaration of estimated tax has been made and filed or (b) where the Commissioner has found that the failure to make and file a timely declaration was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. Such addition to the tax shall be in an amount equal to 5 percent of the unpaid amount of each installment of declared estimated tax and in addition 1 percent of such unpaid amount for each month (except the first) or fraction thereof during which such amount remains unpaid. The addition to the tax is limited with respect to any installment due but unpaid to 10 percent of the unpaid portion of such installment. Such addition to the tax is not applicable in cases to which the addition to the tax under section 294 (d) (1) (A) applies.

(ii) The application of section 294 (d) (1) (B) in the case of taxpayers not entitled to elect under section 60 (a) relating to farmers, may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). For the calendar year 1952 E and F, husband and wife, file timely declarations. E's separate declaration discloses a balance of estimated tax in the amount of $400. Instead of making timely payment of one installment of $100, he pays such amount 10 days after the due date. The delay in payment was not due to reasonable cause. F is similarly delinquent with respect to one installment of $50 of her balance of estimated tax of $200. On the joint return of E and F for 1952 the addition to the tax with respect to the delinquent installments of estimated tax will be $7.50, which is the sum of 5 percent of $100 and 5 percent of $50.

Example (2). The timely joint declaration of G and H for the calendar year 1952 discloses a balance of estimated tax in the amount of $500. G and H are delinquent without reasonable cause for a period of less than one month in the payment of one installment of $125. They file separate income tax returns for 1952. They are jointly and severally liable for the payment of the addition to the tax for delay in paying an installment of estimated tax. Such addition amounts to $6.25, that is, 5 percent of $125.

(3) Substantial understatement of estimated tax. (i) Section 294 (d) (2) provides for an addition to the tax in the case of a taxpayer who makes a substantial underestimate of tax on his declaration. Such addition to the tax shall not apply to the taxable year in which falls the death of the taxpayer. Except as hereinafter provided—

(a) In the case of individuals, other than those exercising the election under section 60 (a) relating to farmers, an addition to the tax under section 294 (d) (2) is applicable in the event that the amount of the estimated tax (increased by the amount of the credit for taxes withheld at source on wages (under section 35 and the credit under section 32) is less than 80 percent of the tax imposed by chapter 1 for the taxable year (determined without regard to such credits) In the event of a failure to file the required declaration, the amount of the estimated tax for the purposes of this provision is zero.

(b) In the case of individuals exercising the election under section 60 (a) relating to farmers, the addition to the tax is applicable if the amount of the estimated tax increased by the amount of the credit for taxes withheld at source on wages under section 35 and the credit under section 32 is less than 66⅔ percent of the amount of the tax (determined without regard to such credits)

(c) The addition to the tax in any case in which there has been such underestimate as comes within the scope of section 294 (d) (2) is an amount equal to—

(1) The excess of 80 percent of the tax (or 66⅔ percent in the case of farmers exercising an option under section 60 (a)) determined without regard to the credit for taxes withheld at source on wages under section 35 and the credit under section 32 over the amount of the estimated tax increased by such credits; or

(2) 6 percent of the excess of the tax determined without regard to the credit for taxes withheld at source on wages under section 35 and the credit under section 32 over the amount of the estimated tax increased by such credits, whichever is the lesser.

(ii) The addition to the tax for substantial underestimate of the estimated tax shall not apply to the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a timely payment of estimated tax within or before each quarter of such year in an amount at least as great as though such estimated tax were computed under the law applicable to the taxable year on the basis of the taxpayer's status with respect to the personal exemption and credit for dependents on the date of filing the declaration, and on the basis of the tax withheld, and reasonably expected on the date of the filing of the declaration to be withheld, on wages received during the calendar year ending with or within the taxable year, but otherwise as though such estimated tax were computed on the basis of the net income and the surtax net income shown on the taxpayer's return for the preceding taxable year, adjusted to conform to the law applicable to the taxable year. The net income and the surtax net income shown on the taxpayer's return for the preceding taxable year shall be considered to be zero for the purposes of this section if for such year the taxpayer did not file a return and was not required to file a return. In the case of farmers exercising an election under section 60 (a) such addition to the tax shall not apply to the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a timely payment of estimated tax within the last quarter of such year in an amount at least as great as though computed under the law applicable to the taxable year on the basis of the taxpayer's status with respect to the personal exemption and credit for dependents on the date of filing the declaration, but otherwise as though computed on the basis of the net income and the surtax net income shown on the taxpayer's return for the preceding taxable year, adjusted to conform to the law applicable to the taxable year.

(iii) As used in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, the expression "personal exemption and credit for dependents" shall be taken to refer to the exemptions for both normal tax and surtax under section 25 (b) (1), the expression "each quarter" shall be taken to include the period (ending with the fifteenth day of the first month of the succeeding taxable year) within which the last installment of the estimated tax is required to be paid; and the expression "last quarter" shall mean the period (similarly ending with the fifteenth day of the first month of the succeeding taxable year) within which farmers exercising an election under section 60 (a) are required to pay the estimated tax.

(iv) The application of section 294 (d) (2) in the case of taxpayers not entitled to elect under section 60 (a) relating to farmers, may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a professional man made a return on January 10, 1953, for the calendar year 1952. A was entitled to two exemptions for 1952. However, for 1953 he was entitled to only one exemption and he was not the head of a household. On March 15, 1953, A filed a declaration of estimated tax on which estimated tax for 1953 was shown in the amount of $11,000. He made payment of the estimated tax in four installments of $2,750 each on March 15, June 15, and September 15, 1953, and January 15, 1954. As a result of a transaction occurring in December 1953, A received taxable income in an amount which made him subject to a tax for the calendar year 1953 in the amount of $15,000. A's tax at 1953 rates on 1952 income amounts to $10,940 computed as follows:

Gross income shown on return for 1952	$30,000
Less: Deductions	5,000
Net income	25,000
Less: Exemption	600
Income subject to tax	24,400
Normal tax	732
Surtax	10,208
Total tax on basis of 1952 income	10,940

Since the installments of $2,750 each were timely paid for each quarter and each was at least as great as one-fourth of $10,940, A is not subject to the penalty for underestimating the tax for 1953.

Example (2). C, a single individual (and not the head of a household) with no dependents, received a salary of $5,200 for the calendar year 1951. He had other income of $1,000 for such calendar year. C's deductions for such calendar year amounted to $700. His salary was increased to $5,800 per annum on January 1, 1952. On March 15, 1952, at which time C's status for exemption purposes had not changed, he filed a declaration of estimated tax for the calendar year 1952. In computing his estimated tax, he used a gross income of $6,200 (his income for 1952) and deductions of $700. He also used one exemption and the rates for 1952. Since his salary had been increased to $5,800 per annum on January 1, 1952, he computed his estimated tax withheld and to be withheld during the entire year (on the excess of $5,800 over the exemption for withholding of $667) as $1,026.60, at the rate of 20 percent. C's declaration showed a balance of estimated tax of $170.40 after taking credit for the estimated amount of tax withheld ($1,026.60) against a tax of $1,197, which balance he paid in quarterly installments. He received more income in 1952 than anticipated at the time he filed his declaration for 1952 and his correct tax liability after deducting the amount withheld from his wages and the amount paid pursuant to his declaration was $1,500. C computed his estimated tax for 1952 (1) under the law applicable to the taxable year 1952 on the basis of his status with respect to the personal exemption and credit for dependents on the date of filing his declaration for 1952, (2) on the basis of the tax withheld, and reasonably expected on the date of the declaration to be withheld, on wages received during 1952, and (3) otherwise on the basis of the net income and the surtax net income shown on his return for the taxable year 1951, adjusted to conform to the law applicable to the year 1952 and, hence, C is not subject to the addition to the tax for substantial underestimate of the estimated tax, even though the estimate was less than 80 percent of his tax liability for 1952.

(c) Tax on self-employment income. The provisions of section 294 (d) and of this section shall be applied without regard to the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480.

§ 39.294-2 Substantial overestimate of expected carry-backs. (a) Section 294 (e) provides for an addition to the tax in case the amount of tax the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779 is substantially in excess of the amount the time for payment of which might properly have been extended. Such addition to the tax is in addition to the interest payable under section 3779 (i) to any other applicable additions to the tax, and to any applicable criminal penalties.

(b) Section 294 (e) provides that if the time for payment of any amount of tax or taxes has been extended under section 3779, there shall be added to such tax or taxes an amount equal to 5 percent of the penalty portion, if any, of the amount to which such extension relates unless the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that, as of the end of the taxable year in which the extension was made, there was reasonable cause to expect that there would be no such penalty portion. If the extension of time under section 3779 relates to more than one tax any addition to the tax under section 294 (e) will, in the discretion of the Commissioner, be added to any one tax or prorated among two or more of such taxes in any proportion he deems advisable.

(c) The "penalty portion" is the excess of—

(1) The amount to which an extension relates which is not paid by the end of the taxable year in which the extension was made, over

(2) 125 percent of (i) the amount to which such extension relates which is satisfied by applying or crediting thereto a decrease in tax determined in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment under section 3780, less (ii) any amounts assessed in respect of such application which are not so satisfied.

The penalty portion in effect, therefore, is the excess of the amount of tax the time for payment of which was extended over 125 percent of the amount the time for payment of which might properly have been extended. The amount the time for overpayment of which might properly have been extended in the net amount to which the extension relates which is satisfied by applying or crediting thereto a decrease in tax determined in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment under section 3780.

(d) Any amount to which an extension under section 3779 relates which is paid before the end of the taxable year in which the extension was made shall not to be deemed to be an amount the time for payment of which was extended in determining under section 294 (e) whether the amount the time for payment of which was extended was substantially in excess of the amount the time for payment of which might properly have been extended. Interest on any amount so paid before the end of the taxable year in which the extension was made will be payable at the rate of 6 percent per annum.

(e) The computation of the penalty portion and the resulting addition to the tax may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation X, which came into existence on January 1, 1952, and which keeps its books and makes its tax returns on the calendar year basis, filed a statement under section 3779 on March 15, 1953, extending the time for payment of $855 of its income tax for 1952. The extension was based on an expected net operating loss carry-back from 1953, and no part of the amount to which the extension related was paid before the end of 1953. The corporation in fact had a net operating loss for 1953, and on March 31, 1954, it filed an application under section 3780 (a) for a tentative carry-back adjustment with respect to the resulting carry-back from 1953. The application showed that the corporation's income tax for 1952 was decreased by $455 as a result of such carry-back from 1953. The Commissioner allowed the application in full on June 29, 1954. The $455 decrease in the corporation's income tax for 1952 was applied against the $855 of its income tax for 1952, the time for payment of which had been extended pursuant to the statement filed under section 3779 on March 15, 1953. Since the decrease in the corporation's income tax for 1952 was only $455, the corporation paid the remainder of $400 for 1952 in cash. The penalty portion is $286.25, and the addition to the tax is $14.31. These amounts are computed as follows:

Amount to which extension under section 3779 related which was not paid before the end of 1953	$855.00
125 percent of $455 (amount of tax time for payment of which might properly be extended)	568.75
The penalty portion	286.25
Addition to the tax (5 percent of $286.25)	14.31

Since the reduction, attributable to the net operating loss carry-back from 1953, in the aggregate of all of Corporation X's taxes previously determined for taxable years before 1953 was only $455, the corporation properly should not have extended under section 3779 the time for payment of an amount greater than $455. The penalty portion accordingly is the excess of the amount the time for payment of which was extended over 125 percent of the amount the time for payment of which might properly have been extended. The above addition to the tax, in the amount of $14.31, will be added to the income tax for 1952 and collected as part of such tax unless Corporation X establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that as of December 31, 1953, there was reasonable cause to expect that there would be no penalty portion.

§ 39.295-299 Statutory provisions; interest and additions to tax; time extended for payment of tax shown on return; time extended for payment of deficiency; interest in case of jeopardy assessments; bankruptcy and receiverships; removal of property or departure from United States.

SEC. 295. Time extended for payment of tax shown on return. If the time for payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, is extended under the authority of section 56 (c), there shall be collected as a part of such amount, interest thereon at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date when such payment should have been made if no extension had been granted, until the expiration of the period of the extension.

SEC. 296. Time extended for payment of deficiency. If the time for the payment of any part of a deficiency is extended, there shall be collected, as a part of the tax, interest on the part of the deficiency the time for payment of which is so extended, at the rate of 6 per centum per annum for the period of the extension, and no other interest shall be collected on such part of the deficiency for such period. If the part of the deficiency the time for payment of which is so extended is not paid in accordance with the terms of the extension, there shall be collected, as a part of the tax, interest on such unpaid amount at the rate of 6 per centum per annum for the period from the time fixed by the terms of the extension for its payment until it is paid, and no other interest shall be collected on such unpaid amount for such period.

SEC. 297. Interest in case of jeopardy assessments. In the case of the amount collected under section 273 (i) there shall be collected at the same time as such amount, and as a part of the tax, interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum upon such amount from the date of the jeopardy notice and demand to the date of notice and demand under section 273 (i), or, in the case of the amount collected in excess of the amount of the jeopardy assessment, interest as provided in section 292. If the amount included in the notice and demand from the collector under section 273 (i) is not paid in full within ten days after such notice and demand, then there shall be collected, as part of the tax, interest upon the unpaid amount at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date of such notice and demand until it is paid.

SEC. 298. Bankruptcy and receiverships. If the unpaid portion of the claim allowed in a bankruptcy or receivership proceeding, as provided in section 274, is not paid in full within ten days from the date of notice and demand from the collector, then there shall be collected as a part of such amount interest upon the unpaid portion thereof at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date of such notice and demand until payment.

SEC. 299. Removal of property or departure from United States. For additions to tax in case of leaving the United States or concealing property in such manner as to hinder collection of the tax, see section 146.

SUPPLEMENT N—CLAIMS AGAINST TRANSFEREES AND FIDUCIARIES

SEC. 311. Transferred assets—(a) Method of collection. The amounts of the following liabilities shall, except as hereinafter in this section provided, be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner and subject to the same provisions and limitations as in the case of a deficiency in a tax imposed by this chapter (including the provisions in case of delinquency in payment after notice and demand, the provisions authorizing distraint and proceedings in court for collection, and the provisions prohibiting claims and suits for refunds)

(1) Transferees. The liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer, in respect of the tax (including interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law) imposed upon the taxpayer by this chapter.

(2) Fiduciaries. The liability of a fiduciary under section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C. Title 31, sec. 192), in respect of the payment of any such tax from the estate of the taxpayer.

Any such liability may be either as to the amount of tax shown on the return or as to any deficiency in tax.

(b) Period of limitation. The period of limitation for assessment of any such liability of a transferee or fiduciary shall be as follows:

(1) In the case of the liability of an initial transferee of the property of the taxpayer,—within one year after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer;

(2) In the case of the liability of a transferee of a transferee of the property of the taxpayer,—within one year after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the preceding transferee, but only if within three years after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer;—

except that if before the expiration of the period of limitation for the assessment of the liability of the transferee, a court proceeding for the collection of the tax or liability in respect thereof has been begun against the taxpayer or last preceding transferee, respectively,—then the period of limitation for assessment of the liability of the transferee shall expire one year after the return of execution in the court proceeding.

(3) In the case of the liability of a fiduciary,—not later than one year after the liability arises or not later than the expiration of the period for collection of the tax in respect of which such liability arises, whichever is the later;

(4) Where before the expiration of the time prescribed in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) for the assessment of the liability, both the Commissioner and the transferee or fiduciary have consented in writing to its assessment after such time, the liability may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

(c) Period for assessment against taxpayer. For the purposes of this section, if the taxpayer is deceased, or in the case of a corporation, has terminated its existence, the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer shall be the period that would be in effect had death or termination of existence not occurred.

(d) Suspension of running of statute of limitations. The running of the statute of limitations upon the assessment of the liability of a transferee or fiduciary shall, after the mailing to the transferee or fiduciary of the notice provided for in section 272 (a), be suspended for the period during which the Commissioner is prohibited from making the assessment in respect of the liability of the transferee or fiduciary (and in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the liability is placed on the docket of the Board, until the decision of the Board becomes final), and for sixty days thereafter.

(e) Address for notice of liability. In the absence of notice to the Commissioner under section 312 (b) of the existence of a fiduciary relationship, notice of liability enforceable under this section in respect of a tax imposed by this chapter, if mailed to the person subject to the liability at his last known address, shall be sufficient for the purposes of this chapter even if such person is deceased, or is under a legal disability, or, in the case of a corporation, has terminated its existence.

(f) Definition of "transferee." As used in this section, the term "transferee" includes heir, legatee, devisee, and distributee.

§ 39.311-1 Claims in cases of transferred assets. (a) The amount for which a transferee of the property of a taxpayer is liable, at law or in equity, and the amount of the personal liability of a fiduciary under section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U. S. C. 192) in respect of any income tax imposed by chapter 1, whether shown on the return of the taxpayer or determined as a deficiency in the tax, shall be assessed against such transferee or such fiduciary, as the case may be, and collected and paid in the same manner and subject to the same provisions and limitations as in the case of a deficiency in a tax imposed by chapter 1, except as hereinafter provided. The provisions relating to delinquency in payment after notice and demand and the amount of interest attaching because of such delinquency, the authorization of distraint and proceedings in court for collection, the prohibition of claims for abatement and claims and suits for refund, the filing of a petition with The Tax Court of the United States, and the filing of a petition for review of the Tax Court's decision, are included in the sections of the Internal Revenue Code (and regulations pertaining thereto) relating to deficiencies in tax imposed by chapter 1.

(b) As used in this section, the term "transferee" includes an heir, legatee, devisee, distributee of an estate of a deceased person, the shareholder of a dissolved corporation, the assignee or donee of an insolvent person, the successor of a corporation, a party to a reorganization as defined in section 112, and all other classes of distributees.

(c) The period of limitation for assessment of the liability of a transferee or of a fiduciary, referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, is as follows:

(1) In the case of the liability of an initial transferee of the property of the taxpayer, one year after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer (see sections 275 to 277, inclusive)

(2) In the case of the liability of a transferee of the property of the taxpayer, one year after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the preceding transferee, or three years after the expiration of the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer, whichever of the two periods (the 1-year period or the 3-year period) first expires.

(3) If a court proceeding against the taxpayer or last preceding transferee for the collection of the tax or liability in respect thereof, respectively, has been begun within the period of limitation for the bringing of such proceeding, then within one year after the return of execution in such proceeding.

(4) In the case of the liability of a fiduciary, not later than one year after the liability arises or not later than the expiration of the period for collection of the tax in respect of which such liability arises, whichever is the later.

(5) If before the expiration of the time prescribed in section 311 (b) (1), (2), or (3) for the assessment of the liability of a transferee or fiduciary, both the Commissioner and the transferee or fiduciary have consented in writing to the assessment of the liability after such time, the liability may be assessed at any time prior to the expiration of the period agreed upon. The period so agreed upon may be extended by subsequent agreements in writing made before the expiration of the period previously agreed upon.

(d) For the purpose of determining the period of limitation for assessment against a transferee or a fiduciary, if the taxpayer is deceased, or, in the case of a corporation, has terminated its existence, the period of limitation for assessment against the taxpayer shall be the period that would be in effect had the death or termination of exisence not occurred.

(e) If a notice of the liability of a transferee or the liability of a fiduciary has been mailed to such transferee or to such fiduciary under the provisions of section 272 (a) then the running of the statute of limitations shall be suspended for the period during which the Commissioner is prohibited from making the assessment in respect of the liability of the transferee or fiduciary (and in any event, if a proceeding in respect of the liability is placed on the docket of The Tax Court, until the decision of The Tax Court becomes final), and for 60 days thereafter.

§ 39.312 Statutory provisions; claims against transferees and fiduciaries; notice of fiduciary relationship.

SEC. 312. Notice of fiduciary relationship—(a) Fiduciary of taxpayer. Upon notice to the Commissioner that any person is acting in a fiduciary capacity such fiduciary shall assume the powers, rights, duties, and privileges of the taxpayer in respect of a tax imposed by this chapter (except as otherwise specifically provided and except that the tax shall be collected from the estate of the taxpayer), until notice is given that the fiduciary capacity has terminated.

(b) Fiduciary of transferee. Upon notice to the Commissioner that any person is acting in a fiduciary capacity for a person subject to the liability specified in section 311, the fiduciary shall assume, on behalf of such person, the powers, rights, duties, and privileges of such person under such section (except that the liability shall be collected from the estate of such person), until notice is given that the fiduciary capacity has terminated.

(c) Manner of notice. Notice under subsection (a) or (b) shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.312-1 Fiduciaries. (a) As soon as the Commissioner receives notice that a person is acting in a fiduciary capacity, such fiduciary must, except as otherwise specifically provided, assume the powers, rights, duties, and privileges of the taxpayer with respect to income tax imposed by chapter 1. If the person is acting as a fiduciary for a transferee or other person subject to the liability specified in section 311, such fiduciary is required to assume the powers, rights, duties, and privileges of the transferee or other person under that section. The amount of the tax or liability is ordinarily not collectible from the personal estate of the fiduciary but is collectible from the estate of the taxpayer or from the estate of the transferee or other person subject to the liability specified in section 311. The "notice to the Commissioner" provided for in section 312 shall be a written notice signed by the fiduciary and filed with the Commissioner. The notice must state the name and address of the person for whom the fiduciary is acting, and the nature of the liability of such person; that is, whether it is a liability for tax, and, if so, the year or years involved, or a liability at law or in equity of a transferee of property of a taxpayer, or a liability of a fiduciary under section 3467 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U. S. C. 192) in respect of the payment of any tax from the estate of the taxpayer. Any such written notice which has been filed with the Commissioner since the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1926 (February 26, 1926) shall be considered as sufficient notice to the Commissioner within the meaning of section 312. Unless there is already on file with the Commissioner satisfactory evidence of the authority of the fiduciary to act for such person in a fiduciary capacity, such evidence must be filed with and made a part of the notice. If the fiduciary capacity exists by order of court, a certified copy of the order may be regarded as such satisfactory evidence. When the fiduciary capacity has terminated, the fiduciary in order to be relieved of any further duty or liability as such, must file with the Commissioner written notice that the fiduciary capacity has terminated as to him, accompanied by satisfactory evidence of the termination of the fiduciary capacity. The notice of termination should state the name and address of the person, if any, who has been substituted as fiduciary.

(b) If the notice of the fiduciary capacity described in paragraph (a) of this section is not filed with the Commissioner before the sending of notice of a deficiency by registered mail to the last known address of the taxpayer (see section 272 (a)) or the last known address of the transferee or other person subject to liability (see section 311), no notice of the deficiency will be sent to the fiduciary. In such a case the sending of the notice to the last known address of the taxpayer, transferee, or other person, as the case may be, will be a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code, even though such taxpayer, transferee, or other person is deceased, or is under a legal disability, or, in the case of a corporation, has terminated its existence. Under such circumstances if no petition is filed with The Tax Court of the United States within 90 days after the mailing of the notice (or within 150 days after mailing in the case of such a notice addressed to a person outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia) to the taxpayer, transferee, or other person, the tax, or liability under section 311, will be assessed immediately upon the expiration of such 90-day or 150-day period, and demand for payment will be made by the district director of internal revenue.

(c) The term "fiduciary" is defined in section 3797 (a) (6) to mean a guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, conservator, or any person acting in any fiduciary capacity for any person.

(d) This section, relating to the provisions of section 312, shall not be taken to abridge in any way the powers and duties of fiduciaries provided for in other sections of the Internal Revenue Code.

SEC. 313. Cross reference. For prohibition of suits to restrain enforcement of liability of transferee or fiduciary, see section 3653 (b).

SUPPLEMENT O—OVERPAYMENTS

SEC. 321. Overpayment of installment. If the taxpayer has paid as an installment of the tax more than the amount determined to be the correct amount of such installment, the overpayment shall be credited against the unpaid installments, if any. If the amount already paid, whether or not on the basis of installments, exceeds the amount determined to be the correct amount of the tax, the overpayment shall be credited or refunded as provided in section 322.

SEC. 322. Refunds and credits—(a) Authorization—(1) Overpayment. Where there has been an overpayment of any tax imposed by this chapter, the amount of such overpayment shall be credited against any income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax or installment thereof then due from the taxpayer, and any balance shall be refunded immediately to the taxpayer.

(2) Excessive withholding. Where the amount of the tax withheld at the source under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 exceeds the taxes imposed by this chapter against which the tax so withheld may be credited under section 35, the amount of such excess shall be considered an overpayment.

(3) Credits against estimated tax. The Commissioner is authorized to prescribe, with the approval of the Secretary, regulations providing for the crediting against the estimated tax for any taxable year of the amount determined by the taxpayer or the Commissioner to be an overpayment of the tax for a preceding taxable year.

(4) Credit for "special refunds" of employee social security tax. The Commissioner is authorized to prescribe, with the approval of the Secretary, regulations providing for the crediting against the tax imposed by this chapter for any taxable year of the amount determined by the taxpayer or the Commissioner to be allowable under section 1401 (d) as a special refund of tax imposed on wages received during the calendar year in which such taxable year begins. If more than one taxable year begins in such calendar year, such amount shall not be allowed under this section as a credit against the tax for any taxable year other than the last taxable year so beginning. The amount allowed as a credit under such regulations shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be considered an amount deducted and withheld at the source as tax under Subchapter D of Chapter 9.

(b) Limitation on allowance—(1) Period of limitation. Unless a claim for credit or refund is filed by the taxpayer within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer or within two years from the time the tax was paid, no credit or refund shall be allowed or made after the expiration of whichever of such periods expires the later. If no return is filed by the taxpayer, then no credit or refund shall be allowed or made after two years from the time the tax was paid, unless before the expiration of such period a claim therefor is filed by the taxpayer.

(2) Limit on amount of credit or refund. The amount of the credit or refund shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid—

(A) If a return was filed by the taxpayer, and the claim was filed within three years from the time the return was filed, during the three years immediately preceding the filing of the claim.

(B) If a claim was filed, and (i) no return was filed, or (ii) if the claim was not filed within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the two years immediately preceding the filing of the claim.

(C) If no claim was filed and the allowance of credit or refund is made within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the three years immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(D) If no claim was filed, and (i) no return was filed or (ii) the allowance of the credit or refund is not made within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the two years immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(3) Exceptions in the case of waivers. If both the Commissioner and the taxpayer have, within the period prescribed in paragraph (1) for the filing of a claim for credit or refund, agreed in writing under the provisions of section 276 (b) to extend beyond the period prescribed in section 275 the time within which the Commissioner may make an assessment, the period within which a claim for credit or refund may be filed, or credit or refund allowed or made if no claim is filed, shall be the period within which the Commissioner may make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, and six months thereafter, except that the provisions of paragraph (1) shall apply to any claim filed, or credit or refund allowed or made, before the execution of such agreement. The amount of the credit or refund shall not exceed the total of the portions of tax paid (A) during the two years immediately preceding the execution of such agreement, or, if such agreement was executed within three years from the time the return was filed, during the three years immediately preceding the execution of such agreement, (B) after the execution of the agreement and before the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, and (C) during six months after the expiration of such period, except that the provisions of paragraph (2) shall apply to any claim filed, or credit or refund allowed, before the execution of the agreement. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, the period within which a claim for credit or refund may be filed, or credit or refund allowed or made if no claim is filed, shall not expire prior to two years after the time the tax was paid, but if a claim is filed, or credit or refund allowed or made if no claim is filed, more than six months after the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner may make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, the amount of the credit or refund shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid during the two years immediately preceding the filing of the claim, or, if no claim is filed, immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(4) Return considered filed on due date. For the purposes of this subsection, a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof shall be considered as filed on such last day. For the purposes of paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, and for the purposes of subsection (d) of this section, an advance payment of any portion of the tax made at the time such return was filed shall be considered as made on the last day prescribed by law for the payment of the tax or, if the taxpayer elected to pay the tax in installments, on the last day prescribed for the payment of the first installment. For the purposes of this paragraph, the last day prescribed by law for filing the return or paying the tax shall be determined without regard to any extension of time granted the taxpayer.

(5) Special period of limitation with respect to bad debts and worthless securities. If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment on account of—

(A) The deductibility by the taxpayer, under section 23 (k) (1), section 23 (k) (4), or section 204 (c), of a debt as a debt which became worthless, or, under section 23 (g) (2) or (k) (2), of a loss from worthlessness of a security, or

(B) The effect that the deductibility of a debt or loss described in subparagraph (A) has on the application to the taxpayer of a carry-over, in lieu of the three-year period of limitation prescribed in paragraph (1), the period shall be 7 years from the date prescribed by law for filing the return for the year with respect to which the claim is made. If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment on account of the effect that the deductibility of such a debt or loss has on the application to the taxpayer of a carry-back, the period shall be either seven years from the date prescribed by law for filing the return for the year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit which results in such carry-back or the period prescribed in paragraph (6), whichever expires the later. In the case of a claim described in this paragraph, the amount of the credit or refund may exceed the portion of the tax paid within the period prescribed in paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable, to the extent of the amount of the overpayment attributable to the deductibility of items described in this paragraph.

(6) Special period of limitation with respect to net operating loss carry-backs and unused excess profits credit carry-backs. If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment attributable to a net operating loss carry-back or to an unused excess profits credit carry-back, in lieu of the three-year period of limitation prescribed in paragraph (1), the period shall be that period which ends with the expiration of the fifteenth day of the thirty-ninth month following the end of the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit which results in such carry-back, or the period prescribed in paragraph (3) in respect of such taxable year, whichever expires later. In the case of such a claim, the amount of the credit or refund may exceed the portion of the tax paid within the period provided in paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable, to the extent of the amount of the overpayment attributable to such carry-back.

(c) Effect of petition to Board. If the Commissioner has mailed to the taxpayer a notice of deficiency under section 272 (a) and if the taxpayer files a petition with the Board of Tax Appeals within the time prescribed in such subsection, no credit or refund in respect of the tax for the taxable year in respect of which the Commissioner has determined the deficiency shall be allowed or made and no suit by the taxpayer for the recovery of any part of such tax shall be instituted in any court except—

(1) As to overpayments determined by a decision of the Board which has become final; and

(2) As to any amount collected in excess of an amount computed in accordance with the decision of the Board which has become final; and

(3) As to any amount collected after the period of limitation upon the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection has expired; but in any such claim for credit or refund or in any such suit for refund the decision of the Board which has become final, as to whether such period has expired before the notice of deficiency was mailed, shall be conclusive.

(d) Overpayment found by Board. If the Board finds that there is no deficiency and further finds that the taxpayer has made an overpayment of tax in respect of the taxable year in respect of which the Commissioner determined the deficiency, or finds that there is a deficiency but that the taxpayer has made an overpayment of tax in respect of such taxable year, the Board shall have jurisdiction to determine the amount of such overpayment, and such amount shall, when the decision of the Board has become final, be credited or refunded to the taxpayer. No such credit or refund shall be made of any portion of the tax unless the Board determines as part of its decision (1) that such portion was paid (A) within two years before the filing of the claim, the mailing of the notice of deficiency, or the execution of an agreement by both the Commissioner and the taxpayer pursuant to section 276 (b) to extend beyond the time prescribed in section 275 the time within which the Commissioner might assess the tax, whichever is earliest, or (B) within three years before the filing of the claim, the mailing of the notice of deficiency, or the execution of the agreement, whichever is earliest, if the claim was filed, the notice of deficiency mailed, or the agreement executed within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, or (C) after the execution of such an agreement and before the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, or (D) after the mailing of the notice of deficiency; or (2), if such portion was not paid within the period described in clause (1), but the notice of deficiency was mailed within seven years from the time prescribed for the filing of the return, or a claim described in subsection (b) (5) was filed, that such portion does not exceed the amount of the overpayment attributable to the deductibility of items described in subsection (b) (5); or (3), if such portion was not paid within the period described in clause (1) but the notice of deficiency was mailed within the period prescribed in subsection (b) (6) for the filing of a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment attributable to a carry-back, or such a claim was filed, that such portion does not exceed the amount of the overpayment attributable to a carry-back.

(e) Presumption as to date of payment. For the purposes of this section, any tax actually deducted and withheld at the source during any calendar year under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 shall, in respect of the recipient of the income, be deemed to have been paid by him not earlier than the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of his taxable year with respect to which such tax is allowable as a credit under section 35. For the purposes of this section, any amount paid as estimated tax for any taxable year shall be deemed to have been paid not earlier than the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of such taxable year.

(f) Tax withheld at source. For refund or credit in case of withholding agent, see section 143 (f). For refund or credit in case of employer required to deduct and withhold tax on wages, see section 1622 (f).

(g) Overpayments attributable to net operating loss carry-backs and unused excess profits credit carry-backs. If the allowance of a credit or refund of an overpayment of tax attributable to a net operating loss carry-back or to an unused excess profits credit carry-back is otherwise prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law other than section 3761, relating to compromises, such credit or refund may be allowed or made, if claim therefor is filed within the period provided in subsection (b) (6). If the allowance of an application, credit or refund of a decrease in tax determined under section 3780 (b) is otherwise prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law other than section 3761, such application, credit or refund may be allowed or made if application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is made within the period provided in section 3780 (a). In the case of any such claim for credit or refund or any such application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, the determination by any court, including the Tax Court of the United States, in any proceeding in which the decision of the court has become final, shall be conclusive except with respect to the net operating loss deduction and the unused excess profits credit adjustment, and the effect of such deduction or adjustment, to the extent that such deduction or adjustment is affected by a carry-back which was not in issue in such proceeding.

[Sec. 322 as amended by secs. 169 and 172 (e), Rev. Act 1942; secs. 2 (b) (2) and 4 (a) and (b), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; secs. 6 (b) (9) and (10) and 14 (d), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 5 (a), (b), (c), and (d), Tax Adjustment Act 1945; sec. 122 (e) (1), Rev. Act 1945; sec. 1, Pub. Law 716 (81st Cong.); sec. 206 (b) (1), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.322–1 Authority for abatement, credit, and refund of tax. Authority for the credit and refund of any overpayment of any income tax imposed by chapter 1 is contained in section 322. Section 273 (j) prohibits the filing of claims for abatement by taxpayers with respect to assessments of income tax imposed by chapter 1.

§ 39.322–2 Credit and refund adjustments. Credits or refunds of overpayments may not be allowed or made after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation properly applicable unless, before the expiration of such period, a claim therefor has been filed by the taxpayer. The claim, together with appropriate supporting evidence, must be filed in the office of the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the tax was paid. Where an amount of tax in excess of that properly due has been paid by a withholding agent, the credit or refund of such excess amount shall be made to the withholding agent unless the amount of such tax was actually withheld by the withholding agent. See section 143 (f) As to interest in case of credits or refunds, see section 3771 and 28 U. S. C. 2411.

§ 39.322-3 Claims for refund by taxpayers. (a) Claims by the taxpayer for the refunding of taxes, interest, penalties, and additions to tax erroneously or illegally collected shall be made on Form 843, or on Form 1040 or 1040A, or an amended return, and should be filed with the district director of internal revenue. A separate claim shall be made for each taxable year or period.

(b) No refund or credit will be allowed after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation applicable to the filing of a claim therefor except upon one or more of the grounds set forth in a claim filed before the expiration of such period. The claim must set forth in detail each ground upon which a refund is claimed, and facts sufficient to apprise the Commissioner of the exact basis thereof. The statements of the grounds and facts must be verified by a written declaration that they are made under the penalties of perjury. A properly executed return on Form 1040 shall, at the election of the taxpayer, constitute a claim for refund or credit within the meaning of section 322 for the amount of the overpayment disclosed by such return. For the purposes of section 322, such claim shall be considered as filed on the date on which such return is considered as filed. An election to treat the return as a claim for refund or credit shall be evidenced by a statement on the return setting forth the amount determined as an overpayment and advising whether such amount shall be refunded to the taxpayer or shall be applied as a credit against the taxpayer's estimated tax for the taxable year immediately succeeding the taxable year for which such return is filed. If the taxpayer elects to have all or part of the overpayment shown by his return applied to his estimated tax for his succeeding taxable year, no interest shall be allowed on such portion of the overpayment credited and such amount shall be applied as a payment on account of the estimated tax for such year or the installments thereof. The filing of a properly executed return on Form 1040A shall constitute an election by the taxpayer to have the return treated as a claim for refund and such return shall constitute a claim for refund within the meaning of section 322 for the amount of the overpayment shown by the district director's computation of the tax on the basis of the return. For the purposes of section 322, such claim shall be considered as filed on the date on which such return is considered as filed. In any case in which a taxpayer elects to have an overpayment refunded to him he may not thereafter change his election to have the overpayment applied as a payment on account of his estimated tax. A claim which does not comply with this paragraph will not be considered for any purpose as a claim for refund. With respect to limitations upon the refunding or crediting of taxes, see §§ 39.322-7 to 39.322-11, inclusive.

(c) If a return is filed by an individual and, after his death, a refund claim is filed by his legal representative, certified copies of the letters testamentary, letters of administration, or other similar evidence must be annexed to the claim, to show the authority of the legal representative to file the claim. If an executor, administrator, guardian, trustee, receiver, or other fiduciary files a return and thereafter a refund claim is filed by the same fiduciary, documentary evidence to establish the legal authority of the fiduciary need not accompany the claim, provided a statement is made in the claim showing that the return was filed by the fiduciary and that the latter is still acting. In such cases, if a refund is to be paid, letters testamentary, letters of administration, or other evidence may be required, but should be submitted only upon the receipt of a specific request therefor. If a claim is filed by a fiduciary other than the one by whom the return was filed, the necessary documentary evidence should accompany the claim.

(d) A claim may be executed by an agent of the person assessed, but in such case a power of attorney must accompany the claim.

(e) Checks in payment of claims allowed will be drawn in the names of the persons entitled to the money and may be sent to such persons in care of an attorney or agent who has filed a power of attorney specifically authorizing him to receive such checks. The Commissioner may, however, send any such check direct to the claimant. In this connection, see section 3477 of the Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 203)

(f) The Commissioner has no authority to refund on equitable grounds penalties or other amounts legally collected. As to claims for refund of sums recovered by suit, see §§ 39.322-4 to 39.322-6, inclusive.

§ 39.322-4 Claim for payment of judgment obtained against district director. (a) A claim for the amount of a judgment against a district director of internal revenue for the recovery of taxes, penalties, or other sums should be made on a properly executed Form 843, and filed directly with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C. The claim must be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. Two certified copies of the final judgment and a certificate of probable cause should be attached to the claim. If the payment of court costs is claimed, an itemized bill of the court costs paid, receipted by the clerk of the court, should also accompany the claim. With respect to the certificate of probable cause, 28 U. S. C. 2006 provides:

SEC. 2006. Execution against revenue officer. Execution shall not issue against a collector or other revenue officer on a final judgment in any proceeding against him for any of his acts, or for the recovery of any money exacted by or paid to him and subsequently paid into the Treasury, in performing his official duties, if the court certifies that:

(1) Probable cause existed; or

(2) The officer acted under the directions of the Secretary of the Treasury or other proper Government officer.

When such certificate has been issued, the amount of the judgment shall be paid out of the proper appropriation by the Treasury.

If the case was appealed, two certified copies of the mandate of the appellate court should also be attached to the claim. A judgment will not be paid until the period for appeal has expired unless a stipulation, signed by both parties to the suit, waiving the right to appeal, has been filed with the clerk of the court, and two certified copies of such waiver are furnished to the Commissioner.

(b) If the judgment debtor shall have already paid the amount recovered against him, the claim should be made in his name, accompanied by two certified copies of the final judgment, and an itemized bill of the court costs paid. A certificate of the clerk of the court in which the judgment was recovered (or other satisfactory evidence) showing that the judgment has been satisfied and specifying the exact sum paid in its satisfaction, should accompany the claim. See further § 39.322-3.

§ 39.322-5 Claim for payment of judgment obtained in United States district court against the United States. A claim for the payment of a judgment rendered by a United States district court against the United States representing taxes, penalties, or other sums should be made on a properly executed Form 843 and filed directly with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C. The claim must be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. Two certified copies of the final judgment should be attached to the claim. If the judgment specifically provides for the recovery of costs, an itemized bill of such court costs paid, receipted by the clerk of the court, should also accompany the claim. If the case was appealed, two certified copies of the mandate of the appellate court should also be attached to the claim. A judgment will not be paid until the period for appeal has expired unless a stipulation, signed by both parties to the suit, waiving the right to appeal, has been filed with the clerk of the court, and two certified copies of such waiver are furnished to the Commissioner.

§ 39.322-6 Claim for payment of judgment obtained in the Court of Claims against the United States. A claim for the payment of a judgment rendered by the United States Court of Claims against the United States, representing taxes, penalties, or other sums should be made on a properly executed Form 843 and filed directly with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C. The claim must be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. The claim shall be accompanied by a certificate of judgment issued by the clerk of the court and two copies of the printed opinion of the court, if an opinion was rendered. A judgment will not be paid until the period for appeal has expired unless a stipulation, signed by both parties to the suit, waiving the right to appeal, has been filed with the clerk of the court, and two certified copies of such waiver are furnished to the Commissioner.

§ 39.322-7 Limitations upon crediting and refunding of taxes paid, general rule. (a) Unless a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment is filed within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer or within two years from the time the tax was paid, the Commissioner is prohibited from allowing or making a credit or refund of income tax imposed by chapter 1 for such year after both periods have expired. If no return is filed by the taxpayer, the Commissioner is prohibited from allowing or making a credit or refund of such tax after two years from the time the tax was paid unless, before the expiration of such 2-year period, a claim therefor is filed. The amount of the credit or refund in any case shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid—

(1) If a return was filed by the taxpayer, and the claim was filed within three years from the time the return was filed, during the three years immediately preceding the filing of the claim.

(2) If a claim was filed, and (i) no return was filed, or (ii) if the claim was not filed within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the two years immediately preceding the filing of the claim.

(3) If no claim was filed and the allowance of credit or refund is made within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the three years immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(4) If no claim was filed, and (i) no return was filed or (ii) the allowance of the credit or refund is not made within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, during the two years immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(b) For the purposes of this section and §§ 39.322-8 to 39.322-11, inclusive, a return filed before the last day prescribed by law for the filing thereof, or an advance payment of any portion of the tax made before such date, shall be considered as filed or made on the last day prescribed by law for the filing of such return or the payment of such tax. If the taxpayer elected to pay the tax in installments, such an advance payment shall be considered as made on the last day prescribed for the payment of the first installment, but in all cases the last day prescribed by law for filing the return or paying the tax shall be determined without regard to any extension of time granted the taxpayer for filing the return or paying the tax. The provisions of this section are subject to the exceptions provided in §§ 39.322-8 to 39.322-11, inclusive.

(c) In the case of a filing of a joint return under section 51 (g) the joint return shall be deemed to have been filed on the last date prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year, determined without regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse for filing the return or paying the tax. See § 39.51-1 (b) (3) (iii)

(d) For special provisions in the case of an overpayment resulting from the application of section 127 (c) (3) (relating to war loss recoveries) see section 127 (c) (5) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.322-8 Limitations upon crediting and refunding of taxes paid, in case waiver executed. (a) If the Commissioner and the taxpayer, within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer or within two years from the time the tax was paid, whichever period expires the later, have agreed in writing under the provisions of sections 276 (b) to extend beyond the period prescribed in section 275 the time within which the Commissioner may make an assessment, then the period within which a claim for credit or refund may be filed, or a credit or refund may be allowed or made if no claim is filed, is the period within which the Commissioner may make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, and for six months thereafter. The amount of the credit or refund in such case shall not, however, exceed the sum of—

(1) The portion of the tax paid during the two years immediately preceding the execution of the agreement between the Commissioner and the taxpayer, or, if such agreement was executed within three years from the time the return was filed, during the three years immediately preceding the execution of such agreement;

(2) The portion of the tax paid after the execution of the agreement between the Commissioner and the taxpayer and before the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof; and

(3) The portion of tax paid during the six months immediately following the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to the agreement between the Commissioner and the taxpayer or any extension of such agreement.

(b) If any portion of the tax is paid within six months after the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to an agreement between the Commissioner and the taxpayer or any extension thereof, and if credit or refund is allowed or made after such payment and before the end of such 6-month period, or if claim for credit or refund is filed after such payment and before the end of such 6-month period, then the provisions of paragraph (a) of this section shall apply to such credit or refund.

(c) The period within which a claim for credit or refund may be filed, or credit or refund allowed or made if no claim is filed, shall not expire before two years after the time the tax was paid, but if a claim is filed, or credit or refund allowed or made if no claim is filed, more than six months after the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner may make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, the amount of the credit or refund shall not exceed the portion of the tax paid during the two years immediately preceeding the filing of the claim, or, if no claim is filed, immediately preceding the allowance of the credit or refund.

(d) If a claim for credit or refund is filed or if credit or refund is allowed or made before the execution of any agreement between the Commissioner and the taxpayer to extend the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment, the limitations on such credit or refund shall be those specified in § 39.322-7.

(e) The agreement referred to in this section will not be considered to have been executed until the date it is signed by or for the Commissioner.

§ 39.322-9 Limitations upon crediting and refunding of taxes paid, overpayment on account of bad debts, worthless securities, etc. (a) (1) If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment on account of—

(i) The deductibility by the taxpayer, under section 23 (k) (1) section 23 (k) (4) or section 204 (c), of a debt as a debt which became worthless, or, under section 23 (g) (2) or (k) (2), of a loss from the worthlessness of a security, or

(ii) The effect that the deductibility of a debt or loss described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph has on the application to the taxpayer of a capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e), a net operating loss carry-over provided in section 122 (b), or an unused excess profits credit carry-over provided in section 432 (c)

then in lieu of the 3-year period from the date the return was filed in which claim may be filed or credit or refund allowed or made, as prescribed in § 39.322-7, the period shall be seven years from the date prescribed by law for filing the return (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing such return) for the taxable year for which the claim is made or the credit or refund allowed or made.

(2) If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment on account of the effect that the deductibility of a debt or loss described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, has on the application to the taxpayer of a net operating loss carry-back provided in section 122 (b) or an unused excess profits credit carry-back provided in section 432 (c) such period shall be whichever of the following two periods expires later:

(i) Seven years from the date prescribed by law for filing the return (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing such return) for the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit; or

(ii) The period prescribed in § 39.322-11.

(3) In the case of any claim described in this section, the amount of the credit or refund may exceed the portion of the tax paid within the period provided in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, to the extent of the amount of the overpayment attributable to the deductibility of items described in this section. Such a credit or refund cannot exceed the sum of the following:

(i) The portion, if any, of the tax paid within the period provided in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, and

(ii) The amount of overpayment due to the deductibility of items described in this section.

(4) The portion of an overpayment due to items described in this section shall be determined by treating the proper deduction of such items as the first adjustment to be made in computing such overpayment.

(b) If claim for credit or refund is not filed within the applicable period described in paragraph (a) of this section, then credit or refund may be allowed or made only if claim therefor is filed or if such credit or refund is allowed or made, within any period prescribed in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, subject to the provisions thereof limiting the amount of credit or refund in the case of a claim filed, or, if no claim was filed, in the case of credit or refund allowed or made within such applicable period as prescribed in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8.

(c) The provisions of section 322 (b) (5) do not apply to an overpayment due to the deductibility of a debt that became partially worthless during the taxable year, but only to an overpayment due to the deductibility of a debt which became entirely worthless during such year.

(d) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section with regard to an overpayment caused by the deductibility of a bad debt under section 23 (k) (1) section 23 (k) (4) or section 204 (c) or of a loss from the worthlessness of a security under section 23 (g) (2) or (k) (2) are likewise applicable to an overpayment caused by the effect that the deductibility of such a bad debt or loss has on the application to the taxpayer of a carry-over or of a carry-back.

(e) For the limitation on the allowance of interest for an overpayment where credit or refund is subject to the provisions of section 322 (b) (5) see section 3771 (d)

§ 39.322-10 Limitations upon crediting and refunding of taxes paid, overpayment determined by the Tax Court. (a) In any case where a person having a right to file a petition with The Tax Court of the United States with respect to a deficiency in income tax imposed by chapter 1 filed such petition within the prescribed time, no credit or refund of the tax for the year to which the deficiency relates shall be allowed or made, and no suit for the recovery of any part of such tax shall be instituted by the taxpayer, subject to the following exceptions:

(1) If the Tax Court finds that the person has overpaid his tax for the year to which the notice of deficiency relates, and the decision of the Tax Court as to the amount overpaid has become final (see section 1140, Internal Revenue Code) the overpayment shall be credited or refunded, but no such credit or refund shall be made of any portion of the tax unless the Tax Court determines as part of its decision—

(i) That such portion was paid—

(a) Within two years immediately preceding the filing of a claim for credit or refund thereof, the mailing of the notice of deficiency, or the execution of an agreement by both the Commissioner and the taxpayer pursuant to section 276 (b) to extend beyond the time prescribed in section 275 the time within which the Commissioner might assess the tax, whichever event occurs first in point of time, or

(b) Within three years immediately preceding the filing of the claim, the mailing of the notice of deficiency, or the execution of the agreement, whichever event occurs first in point of time, if the claim was filed, the notice of deficiency mailed, or the agreement executed within three years from the time the return was filed by the taxpayer, or

(c) After the execution of such an agreement and before the expiration of the period within which the Commissioner might make an assessment pursuant to such agreement or any extension thereof, or

(d) After the mailing of the notice of deficiency or

(ii) If such portion of the tax was not paid within the period described in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, but the notice of deficiency was mailed within seven years from the time prescribed for filing the return (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing such return), or a claim of the type described in § 39.322-9 was filed, that such portion of the tax does not exceed the amount of the overpayment attributable to the deductibility of items described in § 39.322-9, or

(iii) If such portion of the tax was not paid within the period described in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph, but the notice of deficiency was mailed within the period prescribed in § 39.322-11 for the filing of a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment attributable to a net operating loss carry-back or an unused excess profits credit carry-back, or such a claim was filed, that such portion of the tax does not exceed the amount of the overpayment attributable to the carry-back.

The amount of the overpayment attributable to the deductibility of items described in § 39.322-9 or to a carry-back shall be determined under the provisions of §§ 39.322-9 and 39.322-11, respectively. For the limitation on the allowance of interest for any portion of an overpayment described in subdivision (ii) or (iii) of this subparagraph, see section 3771 (d) or (e) whichever is applicable.

(2) In the case of a jeopardy assessment made under section 273, if the amount which should have been assessed as determined by a decision of the Tax Court which has become final is less than the amount already collected, the excess payment shall be credited or refunded subject to a determination being made by the Tax Court with respect to the time of payment as stated in paragraph (a) of this section.

(3) If the amount of the deficiency determined by the Tax Court (in a case where collection has not been stayed by the filing of a bond) is disallowed in whole or in part by the reviewing court, then the overpayment resulting from such disallowance shall be credited or refunded without the making of claim therefor subject to a determination being made by the Tax Court with respect to the time of payment as stated in paragraph (a) of this section. See section 1146, Internal Revenue Code.

(4) Where the amount collected is in excess of the amount computed in accordance with the decision of The Tax Court which has become final, the excess payment shall be credited or refunded within the period of limitation provided in section 322 (b).

(5) Where an amount is collected after the statutory period of limitation upon the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection has expired (see § 39.275-2), the taxpayer may file a claim for refund of the amount so collected within the period of limitation provided in section 322 (b) In any such case, the decision of the Tax Court as to whether the statutory period upon collection of the tax expired before notice of the deficiency was mailed shall, when the decision becomes final, be conclusive.

(b) For special provisions in the case of an overpayment resulting from the application of section 127 (c) (3) (relating to war loss recoveries) see section 127 (c) (5) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.322-11 Limitations upon crediting and refunding of taxes paid—overpayment on account of net operating loss carry-backs and unused excess profits credit carry-backs—(a) Special period of limitation. (1) If the claim for credit or refund relates to an overpayment attributable to a net operating loss carry-back, provided in section 122 (b), or to an unused excess profits credit carry-back, provided in section 432 (c) then in lieu of the 3-year period from the date the return was filed in which the claim may be filed or credit or refund allowed or made, as prescribed in § 39.322-7, the period shall be whichever of the following two periods expires later:

(i) The period which ends with the expiration of the fifteenth day of the thirty-ninth month following the end of the taxable year of the net operating loss which resulted in the carry-back; or

(ii) The period which ends with the expiration of the period prescribed in § 39.322-8 within which a claim for credit or refund may be filed with respect to the taxable year of the net operating loss which resulted in the carry-back.

(2) In the case of a claim described in subdivision (i) of this paragraph, the amount of the credit or refund may exceed the portion of the tax paid within the period prescribed in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, to the extent of the amount of the overpayment attributable to the carry-back. Such a credit or refund cannot exceed the sum of the following:

(i) The portion, if any, of the tax paid within the period provided in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, and

(ii) The amount of the overpayment attributable to the carry-back.

(3) The portion of an overpayment attributable to a carry-back shall be determined by treating the net operating loss deduction and the unused excess profits credit adjustment, to the extent that they are increased by the net operating loss carry-back or the unused excess profits credit carry-back, as the first adjustments to be made in computing such overpayment. If claim for credit or refund is not filed, and if credit or refund is not allowed or made, within the period described in this paragraph, then credit or refund may be allowed or made only if claim therefor is filed, or if such credit or refund is allowed or made, within any period prescribed in § 39.322-7 or § 39.322-8, whichever is applicable, subject to the provisions thereof limiting the amount of credit or refund in the case of a claim filed, or if no claim was filed, in case of credit or refund allowed or made within such applicable period. For the limitation on the allowance of interest for an overpayment where credit or refund is subject to the provisions of section 322 (b) (6) see section 3771 (e)

(b) Barred overpayments. If the allowance of a credit or refund of an overpayment of tax attributable to a net operating loss carry-back or to an unused excess profits credit carry-back is otherwise prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises) such credit or refund may be allowed or made under the provisions of section 322 (g) if a claim therefor is filed within the period provided by section 322 (b) (6) and paragraph (a) of this section for filing a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment attributable to a carry-back. Similarly, if the allowance of an application, credit, or refund of a decrease in tax determined under section 3780 (b) is otherwise prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law (other than section 3761) such application, credit, or refund may be allowed or made if an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is filed within the period provided in section 3780 (a) Thus, for example, even though the tax liability for a given taxable year has previously been litigated before The Tax Court of the United States, credit or refund of an overpayment may be allowed or made despite the provisions of section 322 (c) if claim for such credit or refund is filed within the period provided in section 322 (b) (6) and paragraph (a) of this section. In the case of a claim for credit or refund of an overpayment attributable to a carry-back, or in the case of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, the determination of any court, including The Tax Court of the United States in any proceeding in which the decision of the court has become final, shall be conclusive except with respect to the net operating loss deduction and the unused excess profits credit adjustment, and the effect of such deduction or adjustment, to the extent that such deduction or adjustment is affected by a carry-back which was not in issue in such proceeding.

§ 39.322-12 Crediting of accounts of district directors in cases of assessments against several persons covering same liability. If assessments have been made against several persons covering the same tax liability, and payment of such liability by one or more of such persons has been duly certified to the Commissioner, the Commissioner, for the purpose of temporarily relieving the district director of internal revenue from liability under section 3950, may authorize him to take credit temporarily with respect to the assessments not specifically paid. Such action, however, shall not constitute an abatement and shall not discharge the liability of the persons concerned.

SUPPLEMENT P—FOREIGN PERSONAL HOLDING COMPANIES

SEC. 331. Definition of foreign personal holding company—(a) General rule. For the purposes of this chapter the term "foreign personal holding company" means any foreign corporation if—

(1) Gross income requirement. At least 60 per centum of its gross income (as defined in section 334 (a)) for the taxable year is foreign personal holding company income as defined in section 332; but if the corporation is a foreign personal holding company with respect to any taxable year ending after August 26, 1937, then, for each subsequent taxable year, the minimum percentage shall be 50 per centum in lieu of 60 per centum, until a taxable year during the whole of which the stock ownership required by paragraph (2) does not exist, or until the expiration of three consecutive taxable years in each of which less than 50 per centum of the gross income is foreign personal holding company income. For the purposes of this paragraph there shall be included in the gross income the amount includible therein as a dividend by reason of the application of section 334 (c) (2)· and

(2) Stock ownership requirement. At any time during the taxable year more than 50 per centum in value of its outstanding stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for not more than five individuals who are citizens or residents of the United States, hereinafter called "United States group."

(b) Exceptions. The term "foreign personal holding company" does not include a corporation exempt from taxation under section 101.

§ 39.331-1 Definition of foreign personal holding company. (a) A foreign personal holding company is any foreign corporation (other than a corporation exempt from taxation under section 101) which for the taxable year meets (1) the gross income requirement specified in § 39.331-2, and (2) the stock ownership requirement specified in § 39.331-3. Both requirements must be satisfied and both must be met with respect to each taxable year.

(b) A foreign corporation which comes within the classification of a foreign personal holding company is not subject to taxation either under section 102 or section 500. The fact that a foreign corporation is a foreign personal holding company does not relieve the corporation from liability for the taxes imposed generally under section 231 upon foreign corporations, since such taxes apply regardless of the classification of the foreign corporation as a foreign personal holding company.

§ 39.331-2 Gross income requirement. (a) To meet the gross income requirement, it is necessary that either of the following percentages of gross income of the corporation for the taxable year (including the additions to gross income provided in section 334 (b) as required by section 334 (c) (2)) be foreign personal holding company income as defined in section 332:

(1) Sixty percent or more; or

(2) Fifty percent or more if the foreign corporation has been classified as a foreign personal holding company for any taxable year ending after August 26, 1937, unless—

(i) A taxable year has intervened since the last taxable year for which it was so classified, during no part of which the stock ownership requirement specified in section 331 (a) (2) exists; or

(ii) Three consecutive years have intervened since the last taxable year for which it was so classified, during each of which its foreign personal holding company income was less than 50 percent of its gross income.

(b) In determining whether the foreign personal holding company income is equal to the required percentage of the total gross income, the determination must not be made upon the basis of gross receipts, since gross income is not synonymous with gross receipts. For a further discussion of what constitutes "gross income," see section 22 (a) and §§ 39.22 (a)-1 to 39.22 (a)-23, inclusive.

§ 39.331-3 Stock ownership requirement. (a) To meet the stock ownership requirement, it is necessary that at some time in the taxable year more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the foreign corporation be owned, directly or indirectly, by or for not more than five individuals who are citizens or residents of the United States, hereinafter referred to as "United States group." For such purpose, the ownership of the stock must be determined as provided in section 333 and

(b) In the event of any change in the stock outstanding during the taxable year, whether in the number of shares or classes of stock, or whether in the ownership thereof, the conditions existing immediately prior and subsequent to each change must be taken into consideration, since a corporation comes within the classification if the statutory conditions with respect to stock ownership are present at any time during the taxable year.

(c) In determining whether the statutory conditions with respect to stock ownership are present at any time during the taxable year, the phrase "in value" shall, in the light of all the circumstances, be deemed the value of the corporate stock outstanding at such time (not including treasury stock) This value may be determined upon the basis of the company's net worth, earning and dividend paying capacity, appreciation of assets, together with such other factors as have a bearing upon the value of the stock. If the value of the stock which is used is greatly at variance with that reflected by the corporate books, the evidence of such value should be filed with the return. In any case where there are two or more classes of stock outstanding, the total value of all the stock should be allocated among the different classes according to the relative value of each class therein.

SEC. 332. Foreign personal holding company income. For the purposes of this chapter the term "foreign personal holding company income" means the portion of the gross income determined for the purposes of section 331 (a) (1), which consists of:

(a) Dividends, interest, royalties, annuities.

(b) Stock and securities transactions. Except in the case of regular dealers in stock or securities, gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities.

(c) Commodities transactions. Gains from futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange. This subsection shall not apply to gains by a producer, processor, merchant, or handler of the commodity which arise out of bona fide hedging transactions reasonably necessary to the conduct of its business in the manner in which such business is customarily and usually conducted by others.

(d) Estates and trusts. Amounts includible in computing the net income of the corporation under Supplement E; and gains from the sale or other disposition of any interest in an estate or trust.

(e) Personal service contracts. (1) Amounts received under a contract under which the corporation is to furnish personal services; if some person other than the corporation has the right to designate (by name or by description) the individual who is to perform the services, or if the individual who is to perform the services is designated (by name or by description) in the contract; and (2) amounts received from the sale or other disposition of such a contract. This subsection shall apply with respect to amounts received for services under a particular contract only if at some time during the taxable year 25 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual who has performed, is to perform, or may be designated (by name or by description) as the one to perform, such services.

(f) Use of corporation property by shareholder. Amounts received as compensation (however designated and from whomsoever received) for the use of, or right to use, property of the corporation in any case where, at any time during the taxable year, 25 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for an individual entitled to the use of the property; whether such right is obtained directly from the corporation or by means of a sublease or other arrangement.

(g) Rents. Rents, unless constituting 50 per centum or more of the gross income. For the purposes of this subsection the term "rents" means compensation, however designated, for the use of, or right to use, property; but does not include amounts constituting foreign personal holding company income under subsection (f).

§ 39.332-1. Foreign personal holding company income. For the purposes of Supplement P (sections 331 to 340, inclusive) and of §§ 39.331-1 to 39.339-3, inclusive, the term "foreign personal holding company income" means the portion of the gross income determined for the purposes of section 331 (a) (1) and § 39.331-2 which consists of the following:

(a) Dividends. The term "dividends" includes dividends as defined in section 115 (a) and amounts required to be included in gross income under section 334 (b) See § 39.115 (a)-1.

(b) Interest. The term "interest" means any amounts, includible in gross income, received for the use of money loaned.

(c) Royalties. The term "royalties" includes amounts received for the privilege of using patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property. It does not include rents, or overriding royalties received by an operating company. As used in this paragraph the term "overriding royalties" means amounts received from the sublessee by the operating company which originally leased and developed the natural resource property in respect of which such overriding royalties are paid.

(d) Annuities. The term "annuities" includes annuities only to the extent includible in the computation of gross income. See section 22 (b) (2)

(e) Gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities. As used in section 332 (b) the term "gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities" applies to all gains (including gains from liquidating dividends and other distributions from capital) from the sale or exchange of stock or securities includible in gross income. As used in section 332 (b) the term "stock or securities" includes shares or certificates of stock, or interest in any corporation (including any joint-stock company, insurance company, association, or other organization classified as a corporation by the Internal Revenue Code) certificates of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement, or in any oil, gas, or other mineral royalty, or lease, collateral trust certificates, voting trust certificates, stock rights or warrants, bonds, debentures, certificates of indebtedness, notes, equipment trust certificates, bills of exchange, and obligations issued by or on behalf of a Government, State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof. In the case of "regular dealers in stock or securities," the term does not include gains derived from the sale or exchange of stock or securities made in the normal course of business. As used in section 332 (b) the term "regular dealers in stock or securities" means corporations with an established place of business regularly engaged in the purchase of stock or securities and their resale to customers, but such corporations are not dealers with respect to stock or securities held for speculation or investment.

(f) Gains from futures transactions in commodities. Gains from futures transactions in commodities include gains from futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange, but do not include gains from cash transactions or gains by a producer, processor, merchant, or handler of the commodity, which arise out of bona fide hedging transactions reasonably necessary to the conduct of its business in the manner in which such business is customarily and usually conducted by others. In general, foreign personal holding company income includes gains on futures contracts which are speculative. Futures contracts representing true hedges against price fluctuations in spot goods are not speculative transactions, though not concurrent with spot transactions. Futures contracts which are not hedges against spot transactions are speculative unless they are hedges against concurrent futures or forward sales or purchases.

(g) Income from estates and trusts. The income from estates and trusts which is to be included in foreign personal holding company income consists of the income from estates and trusts which is required to be included in the gross income of the corporation under sections 161 to 169, inclusive, together with the gains derived by the corporation from the sale or other disposition of any interest in an estate or trust.

(h) Amounts received under personal service contracts. (1) Amounts includible in foreign personal holding company income as amounts received under personal service contracts consist of amounts received pursuant to a contract under which the corporation is to furnish personal services, and amounts received from a sale or other disposition of such a contract, if—

(i) Some person other than the corporation has the right to designate (by name or by description) the individual who is to perform the services, or if the individual who is to perform the services is designated (by name or by description in the contract) and

(ii) At some time during the taxable year 25 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual who has performed, is to perform, or may be designated (by name or by description) as the one to perform such services. For this purpose the stock ownership must be determined as provided in section 333 and §§ 39.333 (a)-1 to 39.333 (a)-7, inclusive, and § 39.333 (b)-1.

(2) The application of section 332 (e) and this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, whose profession is that of an actor, owns all of the outstanding capital stock of the M Corporation, a foreign corporation. The M Corporation entered into a contract with A under which A was to perform personal services for the person or persons which the M Corporation might designate, in consideration of which A was to receive $10,000 a year from the M Corporation. The M Corporation entered into a contract with the O Corporation in which A was designated to perform personal services for the O Corporation, in consideration of which the O Corporation was to pay the M Corporation $500,000 a year. The $500,000 received by the M Corporation from the O Corporation constitutes foreign personal holding company income.

Example (2). The N Corporation, a foreign corporation, the entire outstanding capital stock of which is owned by four individuals, is engaged in engineering. The N Corporation entered into a contract with the O Corporation to perform engineering services for the O Corporation, in consideration of which the O Corporation was to pay the N Corporation $50,000. The individual who was to perform the services was not designated (by name or by description) in the contract and no one but the N Corporation had the right to designate (by name or by description) such individual. The $50,000 received by the N Corporation from the O Corporation does not constitute foreign personal holding company income.

(i) Compensation for use of property. The compensation for the use of, or the right to use, property of the corporation which is to be included in foreign personal holding company income consists of amounts received as compensation (however designated and from whomsoever received) for the use of, or the right to use, property of the corporation in any case in which, at any time during the taxable year, 25 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for an individual entitled to the use of the property, whether such right is obtained directly from the corporation or by means of a sublease or other arrangement. The property may consist of a yacht, a city residence, a country house, or any other kind of property. See sections 331 (a) (2) and 333 and §§ 39.333 (a)-1 to 39,333 (a)-7, inclusive, and § 39.333 (b)-1.

(j) Rents. The rents which are to be included in foreign personal holding company income consist of compensation, however designated, including charter fees, etc., for the use of, or the right to use, real property or any other kind of property, but do not include amounts constituting foreign personal holding company income under section 332 (f) and paragraph (i) of this section. However, rents do not constitute foreign personal holding company income if constituting 50 percent or more of the gross income of the corporation.

SEC. 333. Stock ownership. (a) Constructive ownership. For the purpose of determining whether a foreign corporation is a foreign personal holding company, in so far as such determination is based on stock ownership under section 331 (a) (2), section 332 (e), or section 332 (f)—

(1) Stock not owned by individual. Stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries.

(2) Family and partnership ownership. An individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his family or by or for his partner. For the purposes of this paragraph the family of an individual includes only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants.

(3) Options. If any person has an option to acquire stock such stock shall be considered as owned by such person. For the purposes of this paragraph an option to acquire such an option, and each one of a series of such options, shall be considered as an option to acquire such stock.

(4) Application of family-partnership and option rules. Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall be applied—

(A) For the purposes of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 331 (a) (2), if, but only if, the effect is to make the corporation a foreign personal holding company;

(B) For the purposes of section 332 (e) (relating to personal service contracts), or of section 332 (f) (relating to the use of property by shareholders), if, but only if, the effect is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as foreign personal holding company income.

(5) Constructive ownership as actual ownership. Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of paragraph (1) or (3) shall, for the purpose of applying paragraph (1) or (2), be treated as actually owned by such person; but stock constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of paragraph (2) shall not be treated as owned by him for the purpose of again applying such paragraph in order to make another the constructive owner of such stock.

(6) Option rule in lieu of family and partnership rule. If stock may be considered as owned by an individual under either paragraph (2) or (3) it shall be considered as owned by him under paragraph (3).

§ 39.333 (a)-1 Stock ownership (a) For the purpose of determining whether—

(1) A foreign corporation is a foreign personal holding company, insofar as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirements specified in section 331 (a) (2) and § 39.331-3, or

(2) Amounts received under a personal service contract or from the sale of such a contract constitute foreign personal holding company income insofar as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirement specified in section 332 (e) and paragraph (h) of § 39.332-1, or

(3) Compensation for the use of property constitutes foreign personal holding company income insofar as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirement specified in section 332 (f) and paragraph (i) of § 39.332-1, stock owned by an individual includes stock constructively owned by him as provided in section 333.

(b) For the purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, constructive ownership of stock shall be determined and applied in accordance with the rules provided in section 333 and §§ 39.333 (a)-2 to 39.333 (a)-7, inclusive, and § 39.333 (b)-1. All forms and classes of stock, however denominated, which represent the interests of shareholders, members, or beneficiaries in the corporation shall be taken into consideration.

§ 39.333 (a)-2 Stock not owned by individual. In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1, stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries. For example, if A and B, two individuals, are the exclusive and equal beneficiaries of a trust or estate, and if such trust or estate owns the entire capital stock of the M Corporation, and if the M Corporation in turn owns the entire capital stock of the N Corporation, then the stock of both the M Corporation and the N Corporation shall be considered as being owned equally by A and B as the individuals owning the beneficial interest therein. See also § 39.333 (a)-6.

§ 39.333 (a)-3 Family and partnership ownership. (a) In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1, an individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his family or by or for his partner. For the purposes of such determination the family of an individual includes only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants.

(b) The application of the family and partnership rule in determining the ownership of stock for the purpose set forth in paragraph (a) (1) of § 39.333 (a)-1 is illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) The M Corporation at some time during the taxable year had 1,800 shares of outstanding stock, 450 of which were held by various individuals having no relationship to one another and none of whom were partners, and the remaining 1,350 were held by 51 shareholders as follows:

Relationships	Shares		Shares		Shares		Shares		Shares
An individual	A	100	B	20	C	20	D	20	E	20
His father	AF	10	BF	10	CF	10	DF	10	EF	10
His wife	AW	10	BW	40	CW	40	DW	40	EW	40
His brother	AB	10	BB	10	CB	10	DB	10	EB	10
His son	AS	10	BS	40	CS	40	DS	40	ES	40
His daughter by former marriage (son's half-sister)	ASHS	10	BSHS	40	CSHS	40	DSHS	40	ESHS	40
His brother's wife	ABW	10	BBW	10	CBW	10	DBW	100	EBW	10
His wife's father	AWF	10	BWF	10	CWF	110	DWF	10	EWF	10
His wife's brother	AWB	10	BWB	10	CWB	10	DWB	10	EWB	10
His wife's brother's wife	AWBW	10	BWBW	10	CWBW	10	DWBW	10	EWBW	110
Individual's partner	AP	10

(2) By applying the statutory rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) five individuals own more than 50 percent of the outstanding stock as follows:

A (including AF, AW, AB, AS, ASHS, AP)	160
B (including BF, BW, BB, BS, BSHS)	160
CW (including C, CS, CWF, CWB)	220
DB (including D, DF, DBW)	200
EWB (including EW, EWF, EWBW)	170
Total, or more than 50 percent	910

(3) Individual A represents the obvious case where the head of the family owns the bulk of the family stock and naturally is the head of the group. A's partner owns 10 shares of the stock. Individual B represents the case where he is still head of the group because of the ownership of stock by his immediate family. Individuals C and D represent cases where the individuals fall in groups headed in C's case by his wife and in D's case by his brother because of the preponderance of holdings on the part of relatives by marriage. Individual E represents the case where the preponderant holdings of others eliminate that individual from the group.

(c) The method of applying the family and partnership rule as illustrated in the foregoing example also applies in determining the ownership of stock for the purposes stated in paragraphs (a) (2) and (3) of § 39.333 (a)-1.

§ 39.333 (a)-4 Options. In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1, if any person has an option to acquire stock, such stock may be considered as owned by such person. As used in this section, the term "option" includes an option to acquire such an option and each one of a series of such options, so that the person who has an option on an option to acquire stock may be considered as the owner of the stock.

§ 39.333 (a)-5 Application of family and partnership rule and option rule. (a) The family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) and § 39.333 (a)-3 and the option rule provided in section 333 (a) (3) and § 39.333 (a)-4 shall be applied—

(1) For the purpose stated in paragraph (a) (1) of § 39.333 (a)-1, if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the foreign corporation a foreign personal holding company, or

(2) For the purpose stated in paragraph (a) (2) of § 39.333 (a)-1, if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the amounts received under a personal service contract or from the sale of such a contract foreign personal holding company income, or

(3) For the purpose stated in paragraph (a) (3) of § 39.333 (a)-1, if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the compensation for the use of property foreign personal holding company income.

(b) The family and partnership rule and the option rule must be applied independently for each of the purposes stated in § 39.333 (a)-1.

§ 39.333 (a)-6 Constructive ownership as actual ownership. (a) In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1—

(1) Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of the rule provided in section 333 (a) (1) relating to stock not owned by an individual (see § 39.333 (a)-2) shall be considered as actually owned by such person for the purpose of again applying such rule or of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) (see § 39.333 (a)-3) in order to make another person the constructive owner of such stock, and

(2) Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of the option rule provided in section 333 (a) (3) (see § 39.333 (a)-4) shall be considered as actually owned by such person for the purpose of applying either the rule provided in section 333 (a) (1) relating to stock not owned by an individual, or the family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) in order to make another person the constructive owner of such stock, but

(3) Stock constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of the family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) shall not be considered as actually owned by such individual for the purpose of again applying such rule in order to make another individual the constructive owner of such stock.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A is a United States citizen, whose wife, AW, owns all of the stock of the M Corporation, which in turn owns all the stock of the O Corporation. The O Corporation in turn owns all the stock in the P Corporation. Under the rule provided in section 333 (a) (1), relating to stock not owned by an individual, the stock in the P Corporation owned by the O Corporation is considered to be owned constructively by the M Corporation, the sole shareholder of the O Corporation. Such constructive ownership of the stock by the M Corporation is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of again applying such rule in order to make AW, the sole shareholder of the M Corporation, the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation. Similarly, the constructive ownership of the stock by AW is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) in order to make A the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation, if such application is necessary for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1. But the stock thus constructively owned by A may not be considered as actual ownership for the purpose of again applying the family and partnership rule in order to make another member of A's family, for example A's father, the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation.

Example (2). B is a United States citizen who owns all the stock of the R Corporation which has an option to acquire all the stock of the S Corporation, a foreign corporation, owned by C, an individual, who is not related to B. Under the option rule provided in section 333 (a) (3) the R Corporation may be considered as owning constructively the stock of the S Corporation owned by C. Such constructive ownership of the stock by the R Corporation is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the rule provided in section 333 (a) (1), relating to stock not owned by an individual, in order to make B, the sole shareholder of the R Corporation, the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation. The stock thus constructively owned by B by reason of the application of the rule provided in section 333 (a) (1) likewise is considered as actual ownership for the purpose, if necessary, of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2), in order to make another member of B's family, for example, B's wife, BW, the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation. However, the family and partnership rule could not again be applied so as to make still another individual the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation, that is, the stock constructively owned by BW could not be considered as actually owned by her in order to make BW's father the constructive owner of such stock by a second application of the family and partnership rule.

§ 39.333 (a)-7 Option rule in lieu of family and partnership rule. (a) If, in determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.333 (a)-1, stock may be considered as constructively owned by an individual by an application of both the family-partnership rule provided in section 333 (a) (2) (see § 39.333 (a)-3) and the option rule provided in section 333 (a) (3) (see § 39.333 (a)-4) such stock shall be considered as owned constructively by the individual by reason of the application of the option rule.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) Two brothers, A and B, each own 10 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, a foreign corporation, and A's wife, AW, also owns 10 percent of the stock of such corporation. AW's husband, A, has an option to acquire the stock owned by her at any time. It becomes necessary, for one of the purposes stated in § 39.333 (a)-1, to determine the stock ownership of B in the M Corporation.

(2) If the family and partnership rule were the only rule that applied in the case, B would be considered, under that rule, as owning 20 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, namely, his own stock plus the stock owned by his brother. In that event, B could not be considered as owning the stock held by AW since (i) AW is not a member of B's family and (ii) the constructive ownership of such stock by A through the application of the family and partnership rule in his case is not considered as actual ownership so as to make B the constructive owner by a second application of the same rule with respect to the ownership of the stock. (See § 39.333 (a)–6.)

(3) However, there is more than the family and partnership rule involved in this example. As the holder of an option upon the stock, A may be considered the constructive owner of his wife's stock by the application of the option rule and without reference to the family relationship between A and AW. If A is considered as owning the stock of his wife by application of the option rule, then under § 39.333 (a)–6, such constructive ownership by A is regarded as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the family and partnership rule so as to make another member of A's family, for example, B, the constructive owner of the stock. Hence, since A may be considered as owning his wife's stock by applying both the family-partnership rule and the option rule, the provisions of section 333 (a) (6) apply and accordingly A must be considered the constructive owner of his wife's stock under the option rule rather than the family-partnership rule. B thus becomes the constructive owner of 30 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, namely, his own 10 percent, A's 10 percent, and AW's 10 percent constructively owned by A as the holder of an option on the stock.

SEC. 333. Stock ownership. * * *

(b) Convertible securities. Outstanding securities convertible into stock (whether or not convertible during the taxable year) shall be considered as outstanding stock—

(1) For the purpose of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 331 (a) (2), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the corporation a foreign personal holding company;

(2) For the purpose of section 332 (e) (relating to personal service contracts), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as foreign personal holding company income; and

(3) For the purpose of section 332 (f) (relating to the use of property by shareholders), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as foreign personal holding company income.

The requirement in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) that all convertible securities must be included if any are to be included shall be subject to the exception that, where some of the outstanding securities are convertible only after a later date than in the case of others, the class having the earlier conversion date may be included although the others are not included, but no convertible securities shall be included unless all outstanding securities having a prior conversion date are also included.

§ 39.333 (b)–1 Convertible securities. Under section 333 (b) outstanding securities of a foreign corporation, such as bonds, debentures, or other corporate obligations, convertible into stock of the corporation (whether or not convertible during the taxable year) shall be considered as outstanding stock of the corporation for the purpose of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 331 (a) (2) but only if the effect of such consideration is to make the corporation a foreign personal holding company. Such convertible securities shall be considered as outstanding stock for the purpose of section 332 (e), relating to amounts received under personal service contracts, or of section 332 (f) relating to compensation for the use of property, but only if the effect of such consideration is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such sections as foreign personal holding company income. The consideration of convertible securities as outstanding stock is subject to the exception that, if some of the outstanding securities are convertible only after a later date than in the case of others, the class having the earlier conversion date may be considered as outstanding stock although the others are not so considered, but no convertible securities shall be considered as outstanding stock unless all outstanding securities having a prior conversion date are also so considered. For example, if outstanding securities are convertible in 1952, 1953, and 1954, those convertible in 1952 can be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1953 or 1954, and those convertible in 1952 and 1953 can be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1954. However, the securities convertible in 1953 could not be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1952 and the securities convertible in 1954 could not be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1952 and 1953.

SEC. 334. Gross income of foreign personal holding companies—(a) General rule. As used in this Supplement with respect to a foreign corporation the term "gross income" means gross income computed (without regard to the provisions of Supplement I) as if the foreign corporation were a domestic corporation.

(b) Additions to gross income. In the case of a foreign personal holding company (whether or not a United States group, as defined in section 331 (a) (2), existed with respect to such company on the last day of its taxable year) which was a shareholder in another foreign personal holding company on the day in the taxable year (whether beginning before, on, or after January 1, 1939) of the second company which was the last day on which a United States group existed with respect to the second company, there shall be included, as a dividend, in the gross income of the first company, for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the second company ends, the amount the first company would have received as a dividend if on such last day there had been distributed by the second company, and received by the shareholders, an amount which bears the same ratio to the undistributed Supplement P net income of the second company for its taxable year as the portion of such taxable year up to and including such last day bears to the entire taxable year.

(c) Application of subsection (b).—The rule provided in subsection (b)—

(1) Shall be applied in the case of a foreign personal holding company for the purpose of determining its undistributed Supplement P net income which, or a part of which, is to be included in the gross income of its shareholders, whether United States shareholders or other foreign personal holding companies;

(2) Shall be applied in the case of every foreign corporation with respect to which a United States group exists on some day of its taxable year, for the purpose of determining whether such corporation meets the gross income requirements of section 331 (a) (1).

§ 39.334–1 Gross income in general for purposes of Supplement P For all purposes of Supplement P (sections 331 to 340, inclusive) and of §§ 39.331–1 to 39.339–3, inclusive, the gross income of a foreign corporation shall be computed as if the corporation were a domestic corporation and without regard to the provisions of Supplement I (sections 231 to 238, inclusive) and §§ 39.231–1 to 39.236–1, inclusive, relating to the taxation of foreign corporations generally. Hence, for such purposes, the gross income includes income from all sources, whether within or without the United States, which is not excluded from gross income by section 22 (b) and regulations thereunder. The gross income thus includes the interest on bonds of the United States, even though owned beneficially by a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business in the United States, and even though such interest otherwise would come within the exemption provided for in section 3 of the Fourth Liberty Bond Act of July 9, 1918, as amended by section 4 of the Victory Liberty Loan Act of March 3, 1919 (31 U. S. C. 750)

§ 39.334–2 Additions to gross income for purposes of Supplement P (a) If, for any taxable year—

(1) A foreign corporation meets the stock ownership requirement specified in § 39.331–3, regardless of whatever day in its taxable year is the last day on which the required United States group exists, and

(2) Such foreign corporation is a shareholder in a foreign personal holding company on any day of a taxable year of the second company which ends with or within the taxable year of the first company and such day is the last day in the taxable year of the second company on which the United States group exists with respect to the second company, then for the purpose of—

(3) Determining whether the first company meets the gross income requirement specified in § 39.331–2, so as to come within the classification of a foreign personal holding company, and

(4) Determining the undistributed Supplement P net income of the first company which (in the event the first company is a foreign personal holding company) is to be included, in whole or in part, in the gross income of its shareholders, whether United States shareholders or other foreign personal holding companies, there shall be included as a dividend in the gross income of the first company for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the second company ends, the amount the first company would have received as a dividend, if on the last day referred to in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph there had been distributed by the second company, and received by the shareholders, an amount which bears the same ratio to the undistributed Supplement P net income of the second company for its taxable year as the portion of such taxable year up to and including such last day bears to the entire taxable year. The foregoing rules apply to any chain of foreign corporations regardless of the number of corporations included in the chain.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation is a foreign corporation whose stock is owned by A, a United States citizen. The X Corporation owns the entire stock of the Y Corporation, another foreign corporation. The taxable year of the X Corporation is the calendar year and the taxable year of the Y Corporation is the fiscal year ending June 30. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953, more than the required percentage of the Y Corporation's gross income consists of foreign personal holding company income and no part of the earnings for such year is distributed as dividends. On the basis of these facts the Y Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953. The X Corporation meets the stock ownership requirement and constitutes a foreign personal holding company for 1953, if it also meets the gross income requirement. For the purpose of determining whether the X Corporation meets the gross income requirement, the entire undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1953, must be included as a dividend in the gross income of the X Corporation for 1953, since—

(1) The X Corporation was a shareholder in the Y Corporation on a day (June 30, 1953) in the taxable year of the Y Corporation ending with or within the taxable year of the X Corporation, which day was the last day in the taxable year of the Y Corporation on which the United States group required with respect to the Y Corporation existed,

(2) Such last day was also the end of the Y Corporation's taxable year so that the portion of the taxable year of the Y Corporation up to and including such last day is equal to 100 percent of the taxable year of the Y Corporation, and, therefore, the portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation includible in the gross income of its shareholders is likewise equal to 100 percent, and

(3) The X Corporation being the sole shareholder of the Y Corporation must include such portion in its gross income for 1953, the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the Y Corporation ends.

If, after the inclusion of the presumptive dividend in its gross income, the X Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for 1953, then the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation must also be included as a dividend in the gross income of the X Corporation in determining its undistributed Supplement P net income which is to be included in the gross income of A, the sole shareholder in the X Corporation. On the other hand, if, after including such presumptive dividend, the X Corporation does not constitute a foreign personal holding company, the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation is not includible in the gross income of the X Corporation.

Example (2). The X Corporation referred to in Example (1) sold the stock in the Y Corporation to other interests on September 30, 1953, so that after that date no United States group existed with respect to the Y Corporation. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954, more than the required percentage of the gross income of the Y Corporation consists of foreign personal holding company income. The net income of the Y Corporation for such fiscal year amounts to $1,000,000, of which $900,000 is distributed in dividends after September 30, 1953. The undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation for such fiscal year amounts to $100,000. Upon the basis of these facts the Y Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954, since at one time in such fiscal year, or from July 1 to and including September 30, 1953, it meets the stock ownership requirement, and the gross income requirement is also satisfied. In determining whether the X Corporation constitutes a foreign personal holding company for 1954, a portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954 (3/12 of $100,000, or $25,000), must be included as a dividend in the gross income of the X Corporation, since—

(1) The X Corporation was a shareholder in the Y Corporation on September 30, 1953, or on a day in the taxable year of the Y Corporation ending with or within the taxable year of the X Corporation which day was the last day in the Y Corporation's taxable year on which the United States group required with respect to the Y Corporation existed,

(2) The portion of the taxable year of the Y Corporation up to and including such day is three-twelfths of the entire taxable year of the Y Corporation and, therefore, the portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation includible in the gross income of its shareholders also is equal to three-twelfths, and

(3) The X Corporation, being the sole shareholder of the Y Corporation at the time the United States group with respect to the Y Corporation last existed, must include all of such portion in its gross income for 1954, the taxable year of the X Corporation in which or with which the taxable year of the Y Corporation ends.

It is to be observed that three-twelfths of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation for the entire taxable year and not the earnings realized by the Y Corporation up to and including September 30, 1953, the last day on which the United States group with respect to the Y Corporation existed, must be included in the gross income of the X Corporation.

Example (3). The X Corporation referred to in Example (1) sold the stock in the Y Corporation to other interests on September 30, 1953, so that after that date a different United States group existed with respect to the Y Corporation Assuming that the Y Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954, no part of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation for such fiscal year would, in this instance, be includible in the gross income of the X Corporation for the year 1954, in determining whether the X Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for that year. In such case, the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation is includible in the gross income of the other foreign personal holding companies, if any, and of the United States shareholders who are shareholders in the Y Corporation the day after September 30, 1953, which was the last day in the taxable year of the Y Corporation on which the United States group with respect to the Y Corporation existed. If, however, the X Corporation sells 80 percent of its stock in the Y Corporation and thus is a minority shareholder in the Y Corporation on the last day of the taxable year of the Y Corporation on which the United States group with respect to the Y Corporation exists, the portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income allocable to the minority interest of the X Corporation would be includible in the gross income of the X Corporation, even though on such last day the United States group is not the same with respect to both corporations.

Example (4). If the Y Corporation in Example (1) owns all of the stock of the Z Corporation, another foreign corporation, there would be a chain of three foreign corporations. In such case, assuming that the Z Corporation is a foreign personal holding company for a taxable year ending with or within the taxable year of the Y Corporation, the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Z Corporation would be included in the gross income of the Y Corporation for the purpose of determining whether the Y Corporation comes within the classification of a foreign personal holding company. If, after the inclusion of such presumptive dividend, the Y Corporation is a foreign personal holding company, the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Z Corporation would be included in the gross income of the Y Corporation in determining the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Y Corporation which is includible in the gross income of its shareholder, the X Corporation. The same process would be repeated with respect to determining whether the X Corporation is a foreign personal holding company and in determining its undistributed Supplement P net income. If all three corporations are foreign personal holding companies, the undistributed Supplement P net income of each would, in this manner, be reflected as a dividend in the gross income of A, the ultimate beneficial shareholder of the chain. In the event that after the inclusion of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the Z Corporation in the gross income of the Y Corporation, the Y Corporation is not a foreign personal holding company, then no part of the income of either the Z Corporation or the Y Corporation would be includible in the gross income of the X Corporation. In that event, whether the X Corporation is a foreign personal holding company, and its undistributed Supplement P net income, would be determined independently of the income of the Y Corporation and the Z Corporation.

SEC. 335. Undistributed Supplement P net income. For the purposes of this chapter the term "undistributed Supplement P net income" means the Supplement P net income (as defined in section 336) minus the amount of the basic surtax credit provided in section 27 (b) (computed without its reduction, under section 27 (b) (1), by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations).

SEC. 336. Supplement P net income. For the purposes of this chapter the term "Supplement P net income" means the net income with the following adjustments:

(a) Additional deductions. There shall be allowed as deductions—

(1) Federal income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to the extent not allowed as a deduction under section 23; but not including the tax imposed by section 102, section 500, or a section of a prior income-tax law corresponding to either of such sections.

(2) In lieu of the deduction allowed by section 23 (q), contributions or gifts payment of which is made within the taxable year to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified, to an amount which does not exceed 15 per centum of the company's net income, computed without the benefit of this paragraph and section 23 (q), and without the deduction of the amount disallowed under subsection (b) of this section, and without the inclusion in gross income of the amounts includible therein as dividends by reason of the application of the provisions of section 334 (b) (relating to the inclusion in the gross income of a foreign personal holding company of its distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of another foreign personal holding company in which it is a shareholder). For the purposes of the preceding sentence, payment of any contribution or gift shall be considered as made within the taxable year if and only if it is considered for the purposes of section 23 (q) as made within such year.

(b) Deductions not allowed—(1) Taxes and pension trusts. The deductions provided in section 23 (d), relating to taxes of a shareholder paid by the corporation, and in section 23 (p), relating to pension trusts, shall not be allowed.

(2) Expenses and depreciation. The aggregate of the deductions allowed under section 23 (a), relating to expenses, and section 23 (l), relating to depreciation, which are allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the company, shall be allowed only in an amount equal to the rent or other compensation received for the use or right to use the property, unless it is established (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) to the satisfaction of the Commissioner:

(A) That the rent or other compensation received was the highest obtainable, or, if none was received, that none was obtainable;

(B) That the property was held in the course of a business carried on bona fide for profit; and

(C) Either that there was reasonable expectation that the operation of the property would result in a profit, or that the property was necessary to the conduct of the business.

(3) Net loss carry-over disallowed. The deduction for net operating losses provided in section 23 (s) shall not be allowed.

(c) [Not applicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951.]

(d) Income not placed on annual basis. The net income shall be computed without regard to section 47 (c).

[Sec. 336 as amended by secs. 211 (g) and 212 (c), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 135 (b) (2) and 150 (h), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 3 (b), Pub. Law 378 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.336–1 Supplement P net income. (a) The term "Supplement P net income" means the gross income as defined in section 334 less the deductions provided in section 23 (computed without regard to the provisions of Supplement I (sections 231 to 238, inclusive)) subject to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in section 336. In the case of a taxable year of less than 12 months on account of a change in the accounting period of the corporation, the net income as so computed is not placed on an annual basis under section 47 (c) In addition to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in sections 336 (a) and 336 (b) (1) a foreign personal holding company is subject to the provisions of sections 336 (b) (2) and 336 (b) (3) in the computation of its Supplement P net income. Section 336 (b) (3) provides that the net operating loss deduction provided by section 23 (s) shall not be allowed. Under section 336 (b) (2) the aggregate of the deductions allowed under section 23 (a) relating to expenses, and section 23 (l) relating to depreciation, which are allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the company shall be allowed only in an amount equal to the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property, unless it is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner—

(1) That the rent or other compensation received was the highest obtainable, or if none was received, that none was obtainable;

(2) That the property was held in the course of a business carried on bona fide for profit; and

(3) Either that there was reasonable expectation that the operation of the property would result in a profit, or that the property was necessary to the conduct of the business.

(b) The burden of proof will rest upon the taxpayer to sustain the deduction claimed. If a United States shareholder, in computing his distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company to be included in gross income in his individual return (see section 337 and § 39.337–1) claims deductions for expenses and depreciation allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the company, in an aggregate amount in excess of the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property he shall attach to his income tax return a statement setting forth his claim for allowance of the additional deductions together with a complete statement of the facts and circumstances pertinent to his claim and the arguments on which he relies. Such statement shall set forth:

(1) A description of the property;

(2) The cost or other basis to the corporation and the nature and value of the consideration paid for the property;

(3) The name and address of the person from whom acquired and the date thereof;

(4) The name and address of the person to whom leased or rented, or the person permitted to use the property, and the number of shares of stock, if any held by such person and the members of his family;

(5) The nature and gross amount of the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property during the taxable year and for each of the five preceding years and the amount of the expenses incurred with respect to, and the depreciation sustained on, the property for such years;

(6) Evidence that the rent or other compensation was the highest obtainable or, if none was received, a statement of the reasons therefor;

(7) A copy of the contract, lease, or rental agreement;

(8) The purpose for which the property was used;

(9) The business carried on by the corporation with respect to which the property was held and the gross income, expenses, and net income derived from the conduct of such business for the taxable year and for each of the five preceding years;

(10) A statement of any reasons which existed for expectation that the operation of the property would be profitable, or a statement of the necessity for the use of the property in the business of the corporation, and the reasons why the property was acquired; and

§ 39.336–2 Illustration of computation of Supplement P net income and undistributed Supplement P net income. The method of computation of the Supplement P net income and undistributed Supplement P net income may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (a) The following facts exist with respect to the M Corporation, a foreign personal holding company, for the calendar year 1952:

(1) The gross income of the corporation as defined in section 334 amounts to $300,000, of which $85,000 represents its distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of another foreign personal holding company in which it is a shareholder, $200,000 consists of dividends, $10,000 consists of interest, and the remainder ($5,000) consists of rent received from the principal shareholder of the corporation for the use of property owned by the corporation.

(2) The expenses of the corporation amount to $85,000, of which $75,000 is allocable to the maintenance and operation of the property used by the principal shareholder and $10,000 consists of ordinary and necessary office expenses allowable as a deduction. The claim for deduction for the expenses of, and depreciation on, the rented property in excess of the rent received for its use is not established as provided in section 336 (b) (2). The yearly depreciation on the rented property amounts to $30,000.

(3) Federal income tax withheld at the source on the income of the corporation from sources within the United States amounts to $59,125.

(4) No gain from the sale or exchange of stock or securities is realized during the taxable year, but losses in the amount of $10,000 are sustained from the sale of stock or securities which constitute capital assets. Such losses are not allowed as a deduction in any amount under the provisions of section 117.

(5) Contributions payment of which is made to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q), for the purposes therein specified, amount to $15,000, of which $5,000 is deductible in computing net income under section 21.

(6) Dividends paid by the corporation to its shareholders during the taxable year amount to $50,000.

(b) The net income for the purposes of computing the Supplement P net income of the corporation (including the distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of the other foreign personal holding company) is $180,000, computed as follows (assuming for the purposes of this example only that the expenses of, and depreciation on, the rented property are deductible under section 23)

INCOME (SECTION 22)

Dividends		$200,000
Interest		10,000
Rent		5,000
Gross income as defined in section 22		215,000
Add:
Distributive share of undistributed Supplement P net income of the other foreign personal holding company (considered as a dividend)		85,000
Gross income as defined in section 334		300,000

DEDUCTIONS (SECTION 23)

Expenses allocable to operation of the rented property	$75,000
Depreciation of the rented property	30,000
Ordinary and necessary expenses (office)	10,000
Contributions (within the 5 percent limitation specified in sec. 23 (q))	5,000
		120,000
Net income for purposes of computing Supplement P net income		180,000

(c) The Supplement P net income and the undistributed Supplement P net income of the corporation are $210,875 and $160,875, respectively, computed as follows:

Net income for purposes of computing Supplement P net income		$180,000
Add (see sec. 336 (b))
Contributions deductible in computing net income under sec. 21	$5,000
Excess property expenses and depreciation over amount of rent received for use of property ($105,000—$5,000)	100,000
	105,000
Deduct (see section 336 (a))
Federal income taxes	$59,125
Contributions (within the 15 percent limitation specified in sec. 336 (a) (2))	15,000
	74,125
Net additions under section 336		30,875
Supplement P net income		210,875
Less:
Basic surtax credit for dividends paid (see sec. 335)		50,000
Undistributed Supplement P net income		160,875

§ 39.337 Statutory provisions; foreign personal holding companies; income taxed to United States shareholders.

Sec. 337. Corporation income taxed to United States shareholders—(a) General rule. The undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company shall be included in the gross income of the citizens or residents of the United States, domestic corporations, domestic partnerships, and estates or trusts (other than estates or trusts the gross income of which under this chapter includes only income from sources within the United States), who are shareholders in such foreign personal holding company (hereinafter called "United States shareholders") in the manner and to the extent set forth in this Supplement.

(b) Amount included in gross income. Each United States shareholder, who was a shareholder on the day in the taxable year of the company which was the last day on which a United States group (as defined in section 331 (a) (2)) existed with respect to the company, shall include in his gross income, as a dividend, for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the company ends, the amount he would have received as a dividend if on such last day there had been distributed by the company, and received by the shareholders, an amount which bears the same ratio to the undistributed Supplement P net income of the company for the taxable year as the portion of such taxable year up to and including such last day bears to the entire taxable year.

(c) Credit for obligations of United States and its instrumentalities. Each United States shareholder shall be allowed a credit against net income, for the purpose of the tax imposed by section 11, 13, 14, 201, 204, 207, or 362, of his proportionate share of the interest specified in section 25 (a) (1) or (2) which is included in the gross income of the company otherwise than by the application of the provisions of section 334 (b) (relating to the inclusion in the gross income of a foreign personal holding company of its distributive share of the undistributed Supplement P net income of another foreign personal holding company in which it is a shareholder). If the foreign personal holding company elects under section 125 to treat the premium on bonds, the interest on which is allowable as a credit under section 25 (a) (1) or (2), as amortizable, for the purposes of the preceding sentence each United States shareholder's proportionate share of such interest received by the foreign personal holding company shall be his proportionate share of such interest (determined without regard to this sentence) reduced by so much of the deduction under section 23 (v) as is attributable to such share.

(d) Information in return. Every United States shareholder who is required under subsection (b) to include in his gross income any amount with respect to the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company and who, on the last day on which a United States group existed with respect to the company, owned 5 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of such company, shall set forth in his return in complete detail the gross income, deductions and credits, net income, Supplement P net income, and undistributed Supplement P net income of such company.

(e) Effect on capital account of foreign personal holding company. An amount which bears the same ratio to the undistributed Supplement P net income of the foreign personal holding company for its taxable year as the portion of such taxable year up to and including the last day on which a United States group existed with respect to the company bears to the entire taxable year, shall, for the purpose of determining the effect of distributions in subsequent taxable years by the corporation, be considered as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital and the accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year shall be correspondingly reduced, if such amount or any portion thereof is required to be included as a dividend, directly or indirectly, in the gross income of United States shareholders.

(f) Basis of stock in hands of shareholders. The amount required to be included in the gross income of a United States shareholder under subsection (b) shall, for the purpose of adjusting the basis of his stock with respect to which the distribution would have been made (if it had been made), to be treated as having been reinvested by the shareholder as a contribution to the capital of the corporation; but only to the extent to which such amount is included in his gross income in his return, increased or decreased by any adjustment of such amount in the last determination of the shareholder's tax liability, made before the expiration of seven years after the date prescribed by law for filing the return.

(g) Basis of stock in case of death. For basis of stock or securities in a foreign personal holding company acquired from a decedent, see section 113 (a) (5).

(h) Liquidation. For amount of gain taken into account on liquidation of foreign personal holding company, see section 115 (c).

(i) Period of limitation on assessment and collection. For period of limitation on assessment and collection without assessment, in case of failure to include in gross income the amount properly includible therein under subsection (b), see section 275 (d).

[Sec. 337 as amended by sec. 126 (g), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.337-1 Income of foreign personal holding companies taxed to United States shareholders—(a) General rule. Supplement P (sections 331 to 340, inclusive) does not impose a tax on foreign personal holding companies. The undistributed Supplement P net income of such companies, however, must be included in the manner and to the extent set forth in this section, in the gross income of their "United States shareholders," that is, the shareholders who are individual citizens or residents of the United States, domestic corporations, domestic partnerships (see section 3797 (a)) and estates or trusts other than estates or trusts the gross income of which under chapter 1 includes only income from sources within the United States.

(b) Amount includible in gross income. (1) Each United States shareholder, who was a shareholder on the day in the taxable year of the foreign personal holding company which was the last day on which a United States group (see section 331 (a) (2) and § 39.331-3) existed with respect to the company, shall include in his gross income, as a dividend, for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the company ends, the amount he would have received as a dividend if on such last day there had been distributed by the company and received by the shareholders an amount which bears the same ratio to the undistributed Supplement P net income of the company for the taxable year as the portion of such taxable year up to and including such last day bears to the entire taxable year.

(2) The undistributed Supplement P net income of the foreign personal holding company is includible only in the gross income of the United States shareholders who were shareholders in the company on the last day of its taxable year on which the United States group existed with respect to the company. Such United States shareholders, accordingly, are determined by the stock holdings as of such specified time. This rule applies to every United States shareholder who was a shareholder in the company at the specified time regardless of whether the United States shareholder is included within the United States group. For example, a domestic corporation which is a United States shareholder at the specified time must return its distributive share in the undistributed Supplement P net income even though the domestic corporation cannot be included within the United States group since, under section 333 (a) (1) and § 39.333 (a)-2, the stock it owns in the foreign corporation is considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders for the purpose of determining whether the foreign corporation is a foreign personal holding company.

(3) The United States shareholders must include in their gross income their distributive shares of that proportion of the undistributed Supplement P net income for the taxable year of the company which is equal in ratio to that which the portion of the taxable year up to and including the last day on which the United States group with respect to the company existed bears to the entire taxable year. Thus, if the last day in the taxable year on which the required United States group existed was also the end of the taxable year, the portion of the taxable year up to and including such last day would be equal to 100 percent and in such case, the United States shareholders would be required to return their distributive shares in the entire undistributed Supplement P net income. But if the last day on which the required United States group existed was September 30, and the taxable year was a calendar year, the portion of the taxable year up to and including such last day would be equal to nine-twelfths and in that case, the United States shareholders would be required to return their distributive shares in only nine-twelfths of the undistributed Supplement P net income.

(4) The amount which each United States shareholder must return is that amount which he would have received as a dividend if the above specified portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income had in fact been distributed by the foreign personal holding company as a dividend on the last day of its taxable year on which the required United States group existed. Such amount is determined, therefore, by the interest of the United States shareholder in the foreign personal holding company, that is, by the number of shares of stock owned by the United States shareholder and the relative rights of his class of stock, if there are several classes of stock outstanding. Thus, if a foreign personal holding company has both common and preferred stock outstanding and the preferred shareholders are entitled to a specified dividend before any distribution may be made to the common shareholders, then the assumed distribution of the stated portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income must first be treated as a payment of the specified dividend on the preferred stock before any part may be allocated as a dividend on the common stock.

(5) The assumed distribution of the required portion of the undistributed Supplement P net income must be returned as dividend income by the United States shareholders for their respective taxable years in which or with which the taxable year of the foreign personal holding company ends. For example, if the M Corporation whose taxable year is the calendar year is a foreign personal holding company for 1952, and if A, one of its United States shareholders, makes returns on a calendar year basis, while B, another United States shareholder, makes returns on the basis of a fiscal year ending November 30, A must return his assumed dividend as income for the taxable year 1952, and B must return his distributive share as income for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1953. In applying this rule, the date as of which the United States group last existed with respect to the company is immaterial. Thus, in the foregoing example, if September 30, 1952, was the last day on which the United States group with respect to the M Corporation existed, B would still be required to return his assumed dividend as income for the fiscal year ending November 30, 1953, even though September 30, 1952, the date as of which the distribution is assumed to have been made, does not fall within such fiscal year.

§ 39.337-2 Credit for obligations of the United States. (a) Each United States shareholder required to return his distributive share in the undistributed Supplement P net income of a foreign personal holding company for any taxable year is allowed, for purposes of the tax imposed by section 11, 13, 201, 204, 207, or 362, a credit against his net income for his proportionate share of whatever interest on obligations of the United States or its instrumentalities (as specified in section 25 (a) (1) and (2)) may be included in the gross income of the company for such taxable year, with the exception of any such interest as may be so included by reason of the application of the provisions of section 334 (b) and § 39.334-2. For reduction of credit for such interest on account of amortizable bond premium, see § 39.125 (c)-2.

(b) The rule set forth in paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The M Corporation is a foreign personal holding company which owns all the stock of the N Corporation, another foreign personal holding company. Both companies receive interest on obligations of the United States or its instrumentalities as specified in section 25 (a) (1) and (2). In applying the credit allowable under section 337 (c), the United States shareholders of the M Corporation would be entitled to a credit only for their proportionate shares of the interest received by that company and not for any part of the interest received by the N Corporation, regardless of whether the interest received by the N Corporation is included in the gross income of the M Corporation, as an actual dividend or as a constructive dividend under section 334 (b).

§ 39.337-3 Information in return. The information required by section 337 (d) in the returns of certain United States shareholders relates only to the taxable year of a foreign personal holding company for which is computed such corporation's undistributed Supplement P net income, all or part of which must be included in gross income by the United States shareholder of whom the information is required. The information shall be submitted as a part of the income tax returns required by the Internal Revenue Code of such persons, in the form of a statement attached to the return.

§ 39.337-4 Effect on capital account of foreign personal holding company and basis of stock in hands of shareholders. Sections 337 (e) and 337 (f) are designed to prevent double taxation with respect to the undistributed Supplement P net income of foreign personal holding companies. The application of such sections may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The M Corporation is a foreign personal holding company. Seventy-five percent in value of its capital stock is owned by A, a citizen of the United States, and the remainder, or 25 percent, of its stock is owned by B, a nonresident alien individual. For the calendar year 1952 the M Corporation has an undistributed Supplement P net income of $100,000. A is required to include $75,000 of such income in gross income in his return for the calendar year 1952. The $100,000 is treated as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to the capital of the M Corporation and its accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the calendar year 1952 are correspondingly reduced. If after treating such $100,000 as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, the M Corporation has no accumulated earnings and profits at the close of 1952, and if for the calendar year 1953, the M Corporation had no earnings and profits, but distributed $100,000, the amount so distributed would be tax-free in the hands of both A and B. If, however, after treating the $100,000 as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, the M Corporation had accumulated earnings and profits of $100,000 at the close of 1952, the facts otherwise being the same, the distributions in 1953 would be taxable to A, and the taxability of such distributions to B would depend upon the application of section 119 (a) (2) (B), relating to the treatment of dividends from a foreign corporation as income from sources within or without the United States.

Example (2). In Example (1) assume the basis of A's stock to be $300,000. If A includes in gross income in his return for the calendar year 1952, $75,000 as a constructive dividend from the M Corporation, the basis of his stock would be $375,000. After the $75,000 is distributed by the M Corporation tax-free the basis of A's stock, assuming no other changes, would again be $300,000. If A failed to include the $75,000 in gross income in his return as required by the Internal Revenue Code and his failure was not discovered until after the 7-year period of limitations had expired, the application of the rule would not increase the basis of A's stock. The subsequent tax-free distribution of $75,000 would reduce his basis to $225,000, thus tending to compensate for his failure to include the amount of $75,000 in his gross income. If the undistributed Supplement P net income of the M Corporation is readjusted within the statutory period of limitations, thus increasing or decreasing the amount A would have to include in his gross income, proper adjustment is required to be made to the basis of A's stock on account of such readjustment.

SEC. 338. Information returns by officers and directors—(a) Monthly returns. On the fifteenth day of each month each individual who on such day is an officer or a director of a foreign corporation which, with respect to its taxable year preceding the taxable year (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1939) in which such month occurs, was a foreign personal holding company, shall file with the Commissioner a return setting forth with respect to the preceding calendar month the name and address of each shareholder, the class and number of shares held by each, together with any changes in stockholdings during such period, the name and address of any holder of securities convertible into stock of such corporation, and such other information with respect to the stock and securities of the corporation as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe as necessary for carrying out the provisions of this title. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe, as the period with respect to which returns shall be filed, a longer period than a month. In such case the return shall be due on the fifteenth day of the succeeding period, and shall be filed by the individuals who on such day are officers and directors of the corporation.

(b) Annual returns. On the sixtieth day after the close of the taxable year of a foreign personal holding company each individual who on such sixtieth day is an officer or director of the corporation shall file with the Commissioner a return setting forth—

(1) In complete detail the gross income, deductions and credits, net income, Supplement P net income, and undistributed Supplement P net income of such foreign personal holding company for such taxable year; and

(2) The same information with respect to such taxable year as is required in subsection (a); except that if all the required returns with respect to such year have been filed under subsection (a) no information under this paragraph need be set forth in the return filed under this subsection.

§ 39.338-1 Information returns by officers and directors of certain foreign corporations—(a) Requirement for filing returns—(1) General. Under section 338 (a) on the fifteenth day of each month each individual who on such day is an officer or a director of a foreign corporation which, with respect to its taxable year preceding the taxable year in which such month occurs, was a foreign personal holding company, is required to file a monthly information return as provided in section 338 (a) and this section.

(2) Returns for a period exceeding one month. In the case of a foreign personal holding company which before the close of its taxable year distributed to its shareholders 90 percent or more of its Supplement P net income as defined in section 336, or which has no such net income for such taxable year, the following periods are prescribed with respect to which information returns on Form 957 shall be filed during the following year:

(i) The return for the last month of the preceding taxable year shall be filed on the fifteenth day of the first month following the close of such taxable year.

(ii) Subsequent returns shall be filed for each 6-month period following the close of such taxable year and shall be filed on the fifteenth day of the first month following such period.

(iii) If any change in the stock holdings or in the holdings of securities convertible into stock of the corporation occurs during such periods or if a resolution or plan (including any amendments thereof or supplements thereto) for the dissolution of the corporation or for the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock is adopted during such periods, a monthly information return must also be filed on the fifteenth day of the month following each month in which the change occurs or the resolution or plan is adopted.

(iv) In any case under this subparagraph, where the date for filing a monthly return coincides with the date for filing the return for a 6-month period, only the return for the 6-month period need be filed.

(3) Returns jointly made. If two or more officers or directors of a foreign corporation are required to file information returns for any period under section 338 (a) and this section, any two or more of such officers or directors may, in lieu of filing separate returns for such period, jointly execute and file one return.

(b) Form of return. The return under section 338 (a) and this section shall be made on Form 957, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue. Each officer or director of the corporation should carefully prepare his return so as to set forth fully and clearly the information called for therein and by the applicable regulations. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be considered as meeting the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) Contents of return. The return shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth with respect to the preceding period the following information:

(1) Name and address of corporation;

(2) Kind of business in which the corporation is engaged;

(3) Date of incorporation;

(4) The country under the laws of which the corporation is incorporated;

(5) Number of shares and par value of common stock of the corporation outstanding as of the beginning and end of the period;

(6) Number of shares and par value of preferred stock of the corporation outstanding as of the beginning and end of the period, the rate of dividend on such stock and whether such dividend is cumulative or noncumulative;

(7) A description of the convertible securities issued by the corporation, including a statement of the face value of, and rate of interest on, such securities;

(8) The name and address of each shareholder, the class and number of shares held by each, together with any changes in stock holdings during such period;

(9) The name and address of each holder of securities convertible into stock of the corporation, the class, number, and face value of the securities held by each, together with any changes in the holdings of such securities during the period;

(10) A certified copy of any resolution or plan, and any amendments thereof or supplements thereto, for or in respect of the dissolution of the corporation or the liquidation of the whole or any part of its capital stock; and

(11) Such other information as may be required by the return form.

(d) Separate return for each corporation. If a person is required to file a return under section 338 (a) and this section with respect to more than one foreign corporation, a separate return must be filed with respect to each foreign corporation.

(e) Verification of returns. Every return required by section 338 (a) and this section shall be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(f) Penalties. For criminal penalties for failure to file the returns required by section 338 (a) and this section, see section 340.

§ 39.338-2 Annual information returns by officers and directors of certain foreign corporations—(a) Requirement for filing returns—(1) General. Under section 338 (b), on the sixtieth day after the close of the taxable year of a foreign personal holding company each individual who on such sixtieth day is an officer or director of the corporation shall file an annual information return as provided in section 338 (b) and this section.

(2) Returns jointly made. If two or more officers or directors of a foreign corporation are required to file annual information returns under section 338 (b) and this section for any taxable year of the corporation, any two or more of such officers or directors may in lieu of filing separate annual returns for such taxable year, jointly execute and file one annual return.

(b) Form of return. The return under section 338 (b) and this section shall be made on Form 958, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue. Each officer or director of the corporation should carefully prepare his return so as to set forth fully and clearly the information called for therein and by the applicable regulations. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be considered as meeting the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) Contents of return. The return shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth with respect to the taxable year of the foreign personal holding company the following information:

(1) The gross income, deductions and credits, net income, Supplement P net income, and undistributed Supplement P net income of the foreign personal holding company for such taxable year, in complete detail;

(2) The same information with respect to such taxable year which is required by section 338 (a) and paragraph (c) of § 39.338-1, except that if all the required returns with respect to such year have been filed under section 338 (a) and § 39.338-1, no information under section 338 (b) (2) and this paragraph need be set forth in such annual return; and

(3) Such other information as may be required by the return form.

(d) Verification of returns. Every return required by section 338 (b) and this section shall be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(e) Penalties. For criminal penalties for failure to file the returns required by section 338 (b) and this section, see section 340.

§ 39.338-3 Time and place of filing returns. Returns required by section 338 and §§ 39.338-1 and 39.338-2 shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention Audit Service Branch, Audit Division, and will be considered filed within the time or times required by law if, within such time or times, such returns are made and placed in the mails in due course, properly addressed and postage paid, provided they are actually received in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., even though received after such time or times.

§ 39.339 Statutory provisions; foreign personal holding companies; information returns by shareholders.

SEC. 339. Information returns by shareholders—(a) Monthly returns. On the fifteenth day of each month each United States shareholder, by or for whom 50 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of a foreign corporation is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 333 (a) (2)), if such foreign corporation with respect to its taxable year preceding the taxable year (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1939) in which such month occurs was a foreign personal holding company, shall file with the Commissioner a return setting forth with respect to the preceding calendar month the name and address of each shareholder, the class and number of shares held by each, together with any changes in stockholdings during such period, the name and address of any holder of securities convertible into stock of such corporation, and such other information with respect to the stock and securities of the corporation as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe as necessary for carrying out the provisions of this title. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe, as the period with respect to which returns shall be filed, a longer period than a month. In such case the return shall be due on the fifteenth day of the succeeding period, and shall be filed by the persons who on such day are United States shareholders.

(b) Annual returns. On the sixtieth day after the close of the taxable year of a foreign personal holding company each United States shareholder by or for whom on such sixtieth day 50 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of such company is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by members of his family as defined in section 333 (a) (2)), shall file with the Commissioner a return setting forth the same information with respect to such taxable year as is required in subsection (a) except that if all the required returns with respect to such year have been filed under subsection (a) no return shall be required under this subsection.

§ 39.339-1 Information returns by shareholders of certain foreign corporations—(a) Requirement for filing returns—(1) General. On the fifteenth day of each month each United States shareholder, by or for whom 50 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of a foreign corporation is owned, directly or indirectly (including, in the case of an individual, stock owned by members of his family, as defined in section 333 (a) (2)) if such foreign corporation with respect to its taxable year preceding the taxable year in which such month occurs was a foreign personal holding company, shall file an information return as provided in section 339 (a) and this section.

(2) Returns for a period exceeding one month. In the case of a foreign personal holding company which before the close of its taxable year distributed to its shareholders 90 percent or more of its Supplement P net income, or which has no such net income for such taxable year, the periods with respect to which information returns under section 339 (a) shall be filed shall be the same as the periods prescribed in paragraph (a) (2) of § 39.338-1.

(3) Duplicate returns. If a shareholder in a foreign corporation files, as an officer or director in such corporation, the returns required by section 338 (a) and § 39.338-1, such returns shall be considered as returns filed under section 339 (a)

(b) Form of return. The return under section 339 (a) and this section shall be made on Form 957, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue. Each shareholder should carefully prepare his return so as to set forth fully and clearly the information called for therein and by the applicable regulations. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be considered as meeting the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) Contents of return. The return shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth with respect to the preceding period the same information as required to be shown on that form by section 338 (a) and paragraph (c) of § 39.338-1.

(d) Separate return for each corporation. If a person is required to file a return under section 339 (a) and this section with respect to more than one foreign corporation, a separate return must be filed with respect to each foreign corporation.

(e) Verification of returns. Every return required by section 339 (a) and this section shall be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(f) Penalties. For criminal penalties for failure to file the returns required by section 339 (a) and this section, see section 340.

§ 39.339-2 Annual information returns by shareholders of certain foreign corporations—(a) Requirement for filing returns—(1) General. Under section 339 (b) on the sixtieth day after the close of the taxable year of a foreign personal holding company, each United States shareholder, by or for whom on such sixtieth day 50 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the company is owned, directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by members of his family as defined in section 333 (a) (2)), shall file an information return as provided in section 339 (b) and this section.

(2) Duplicate returns. If a shareholder in a foreign corporation files, as an officer or director in such corporation, the returns required by section 338 (b) and § 39.338-2, such returns shall be considered as returns filed under section 339 (b)

(b) Form of return. The return under section 339 (b) and this section shall be made on Form 957, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue. Each shareholder should carefully prepare his return so as to set forth fully and clearly the information called for therein and by the applicable regulations. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be considered as meeting the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) Contents of return. The return shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth with respect to the taxable year of the foreign personal holding company the same information which is required under section 339 (a), paragraph (c) of § 39.338-1, and paragraph (c) of § 39.339-1, except that if all the required returns with respect to such year have been filed under section 339 (a) and § 39.339-1, no return under section 339 (b) and this section is required.

(d) Separate return for each corporation. If a person is required to file an annual return under section 339 (b) and this section with respect to more than one foreign personal holding company, a separate return must be filed with respect to each foreign personal holding company.

(e) Verification of returns. Every return required by section 339 (b) and this section shall be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(f) Penalties. For criminal penalties for failure to file the returns required by section 339 (b) and this section, see section 340.

§ 39.339-3 Time and place of filing returns. Returns required by section 339 and §§ 39.339-1 and 39.339-2 shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention Audit Service Branch, Audit Division and will be considered filed within the time or times required by law if, within such time or times, such returns are made and placed in the mails in due course, properly addressed and postage paid, provided they are actually received in the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., even though received after such time or times.

SEC. 340. Penalties. Any person required under section 338 or 339 to file a return, or to supply any information, who willfully fails to file such return, or supply such information, at the time or times required by law or regulations, shall, in lieu of the penalties provided in section 145 (a) for such offense, be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $2,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

SUPPLEMENT Q—REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES

SEC. 361. Definition—(a) In general. For the purposes of this chapter, the term "regulated investment company" means any domestic corporation (whether charted or created as an investment trust, or otherwise), other than a personal holding company as defined in section 501, which at all times during the taxable year is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (54 Stat. 789, 15 U. S. C., 1940 ed., secs. 80 a-1 to 80 b-2), or that act, as amended, either as a management company or as a unit investment trust, or which is a common trust fund or similar fund excluded by section 3 (c) (3) of such act from the definition of "investment company" and is not included in the definition of "common trust fund" by section 169.

(b) Limitations. Despite the provisions of subsection (a), a corporation shall not be considered a regulated investment company for any taxable year unless—

(1) At least 90 per centum of its gross income is derived from dividends, interest, and gains from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities; and

(2) Less than 30 per centum of its gross income is derived from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities held for less than three months; and

(3) At the close of each quarter of the taxable year (A) at least 50 per centum of the value of its total assets is represented by cash and cash items (including receivables), Government securities, securities of other regulated investment companies, and other securities for the purposes of this calculation limited in respect of any one issuer to an amount not greater in value than 5 per centum of the value of the total assets of the taxpayer and, except and to the extent provided in subsection (c), to not more than 10 per centum of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer, and (B) not more than 25 per centum of the value of its total assets is invested in the securities (other than Government securities or the securities of other regulated investment companies) of any one issuer, or of two or more issuers which the taxpayer controls and which are determined, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to be engaged in the same or similar trades or businesses or related trades or businesses. For the purposes of clause (B), in ascertaining the value of the taxpayer's investment in the securities of an issuer, there shall be included its proper proportion of the investment of any other corporation, a member of a controlled group, in the securities of such issuer, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner and approved by the Secretary. The term "controls," as used in this paragraph, means the ownership in a corporation of 20 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote. The term "controlled group," as used in this paragraph, means one or more chains of corporations connected through stock ownership with the taxpayer if (i) 20 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote of each of the corporations (except the taxpayer) is owned directly by one or more of the other corporations, and (ii) the taxpayer owns directly 20 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, or at least one of the other corporations. The term "value" as used in this paragraph means, with respect to securities (other than those of majority-owned subsidiaries) for which market quotations are readily available, the market value of such securities; and with respect to other securities and assets, fair value as determined in good faith by the board of directors, except that in the case of securities of majority-owned subsidiaries which are investment companies such fair value shall not exceed market value or asset value, whichever is higher. All other terms used in the preceding provisions of this paragraph shall have the same meaning as when used in the Investment Company Act of 1940, or that Act as amended. A corporation which meets the foregoing requirements of this paragraph at the close of any quarter shall not lose its status as a regulated investment company because of a discrepancy during a subsequent quarter between the value of its various investments and such requirements unless such discrepancy exists immediately after the acquisition of any security or other property and is wholly or partly the result of such acquisition. A corporation which does not meet such requirements at the close of any quarter by reason of a discrepancy existing immediately after the acquisition of any security or other property which is wholly or partly the result of such acquisition during such quarter shall not lose its status for such quarter as a regulated investment company if such discrepancy is eliminated within thirty days after the close of such quarter and in such cases it shall be considered to have met such requirements at the close of such quarter for the purposes of applying the preceding sentence. A corporation which meets such requirements at the close of its first full quarter after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1942, or eliminates any discrepancy between the value of its investments and such requirements existing at the close of such quarter within thirty days thereafter, shall be deemed to have met such requirements at all previous times; and

(4) It files with its return for the taxable year an election to be a regulated investment company or has made such election for a previous taxable year which began after December 31, 1941.

(c) Certain investment companies. If the Securities and Exchange Commission determines in accordance with regulations issued by it, and certifies to the Secretary not more than 60 days prior to the close of the taxable year of a registered management investment company, that such investment company is principally engaged in the furnishing of capital to other corporations which are principally engaged in the development or exploitation of inventions, technological improvements, new processes, or products not previously generally available, such investment company may, in the computation of 50 per centum of the value of its assets under subparagraph (A) of subsection (b) (3) for any quarter of such taxable year, include the value of any securities of an issuer, notwithstanding the fact that such investment company holds more than 10 per centum of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer, but only if the investment company has not continuously held any security of such issuer (or of any predecessor company of such issuer as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) for 10 or more years preceding such quarter of such taxable year. The provisions of this subsection shall not apply at the close of any quarter of a taxable year to an investment company if at the close of such quarter more than 25 per centum of the value of its total assets is represented by securities of issuers with respect to each of which the investment company holds more than 10 per centum of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer and in respect of each of which or any predecessor thereof the investment company has continuously held any security for 10 or more years preceding such quarter unless the value of its total assets so represented is reduced to 25 per centum or less within 30 days after the close of such quarter. The terms used in this subsection shall have the same meaning as in subsection (b) (3) of this section. For the purposes of this subsection, unless the Securities and Exchange Commission determines otherwise, a corporation shall be considered to be principally engaged in the development or exploitation of inventions, technological improvements, new processes, or products not previously generally available, for at least 10 years after the date of the first acquisition of any security in such corporation or any predecessor thereof by such investment company if at the date of such acquisition the corporation or its predecessor was principally so engaged, and an investment company shall be considered at any date to be furnishing capital to any company whose securities it holds if within 10 years prior to such date it has acquired any of such securities, or any securities surrendered in exchange therefor, from such other company or predecessor thereof. For the purposes of the certification hereunder, the Securities and Exchange Commission shall have authority to issue such rules, regulations and orders, and to conduct such investigations and hearings, either public or private, as it may deem appropriate.

§ 39.361-1 Definition of a regulated investment company—(a) Limitations upon source of income. Section 361 (b) (1) and (2) provides that at least 90 percent of the corporation's gross income for the taxable year must be derived from dividends, interest, and gains from the sale or other disposition of stocks or securities, and less than 30 percent of the corporation's gross income must have been derived from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities held for less than three months. As to the definition of the term "corporation," see section 3797 (a) (3). In determining the percentage of the corporation's gross income which has been derived from such sources, a loss from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities does not enter into the computation. A determination of the period for which stock or securities have been held shall be governed by the provisions of section 117 (h) in so far as applicable.

(b) Limitations requiring diversification of investments—(1) In general. (i) Section 361 (b) (3), with respect to diversification of investments, requires, in clause (A), that at the close of each quarter of the taxable year at least 50 percent of the value of the total assets of the corporation be represented by cash and cash items (including receivables) Government securities, securities of other regulated investment companies, and other securities. For the purpose of this calculation, investments in securities other than Government securities or securities of other regulated investment companies shall be limited in respect of any one issuer to an amount not greater than 5 percent of the value of the total assets of the corporation and, except and to the extent provided in section 361 (c) in the case of certain venture capital registered management investment companies qualifying thereunder, to not more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer. Assuming that at least 50 percent of the value of the total assets of the corporation satisfies these requirements, and that the limiting provisions of clause (B) are not violated, the corporation will satisfy the requirements of section 361 (b) (3) notwithstanding that the remaining assets do not satisfy the diversification requirements of clause (A) For example, a corporation may own all the stock of another corporation, provided it otherwise meets the requirements of clauses (A) and (B)

(ii) Clause (B) prohibits the investment at the close of each quarter of the taxable year of more than 25 percent of the value of the total assets of the corporation (including the 50 percent or more mentioned in clause (A)) in the securities (other than Government securities or the securities of other regulated investment companies) of any one issuer, or of two or more issuers, which the corporation controls and which are engaged in the same or similar trades or businesses or related trades or businesses, including such issuers that are merely a part of a unit contributing to the completion and sale of a product or the rendering of a particular service. Two or more issuers are not considered as being in the same or similar trades or businesses merely because they are engaged in the broad field of manufacturing or of any other general classification of industry but issuers shall be construed to be engaged in the same or similar trades or businesses if they are engaged in a distinct branch of business, trade, or manufacture in which they render the same kind of service or produce or deal in the same kind of product, and such service or products fulfill the same economic need. If two or more issuers produce more than one product or render more than one type of service, then the chief product or service of each shall be the basis for determining whether they are in the same trade or business. For the purposes of this paragraph, the terms "controls," "controlled group," and "value" are defined in section 361 (b) (3) All other terms used in this section have the same meaning as when used in the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U. S. C., c. 2D) or that act as amended. In determining the value of the investment company's investment in the securities of any one issuer, there shall be included its proper proportion of the investment of any other corporation, a member of a controlled group, in the securities of such issuer. With respect to the effect which certain discrepancies between the value of its various investments and the requirements of section 361 (b) (3) or the elimination of such discrepancies will have on the status of a company as a regulated investment company for the purposes of these sections, see section 361 (b) (3) A company claiming to be a regulated investment company shall keep sufficient records as to investments so as to be able to show that it has complied with the provisions of section 361 (b) (3) during the taxable year. Such records shall be kept at all times available for inspection by any authorized officer or employee of the Internal Revenue Service and shall be retained as long as the contents thereof may become material in the administration of any internal revenue law.

(iii) The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Investment Company W at the close of its first quarter of the taxable year has its assets invested as follows: 5 percent in cash, 10 percent in Government securities, 20 percent in the securities of regulated investment companies as defined in section 361, 10 percent in the securities of Corporation A, 15 percent in Corporation B, 20 percent in Corporation C, and the balance, 20 percent, in the securities of various corporations, not exceeding 5 percent of its assets in any one company. Investment Company W owns 15 percent of the voting stock of Corporation C and less than 10 percent of the voting stock of the other corporations, except that it owns all of the voting stock of Corporations A and B. None of the corporations is a member of a controlled group. Investment Company W meets the requirements at the end of its first quarter under section 361 (b) (3). It complies with clause (A) since it has 55 percent of its assets invested as provided in clause (A). It complies with clause (B) since it does not have more than 25 percent of its assets invested in the securities of any one issuer, or of two or more issuers which it controls.

Example (2). Investment Company V at the close of a particular quarter of the taxable year has its assets invested as follows: 10 percent in cash, 35 percent in Government securities, 7 percent in the securities of Corporation A, 12 percent in Corporation B, 15 percent in Corporation C, and 21 percent in Corporation D. Investment Company V fails to meet the requirements of clause (A) of section 361 (b) (3) since its assets invested in Corporations A, B, C, and D exceed in each case 5 percent of the value of the total assets of the company at the close of the particular quarter.

Example (3). Investment Company X at the close of the particular quarter of the taxable year has its assets invested as follows: 20 percent in cash and Government securities, 5 percent in Corporation A, 10 percent in Corporation B, 25 percent in Corporation C, and the other 40 percent in the securities of miscellaneous corporations, not exceeding 5 percent in any one issuer. Investment Company X owns less than 10 percent of the voting power of all of the corporations, except it owns more than 20 percent of the voting power of Corporations B and C. Corporation B manufactures radios and Corporation C acts as its distributor and also distributes radios for other companies. Investment Company X fails to meet the requirements of section 361 (b) (3) since it has 35 percent of its assets invested in the securities of two issuers which it controls and which are engaged in related trades or businesses.

Example (4). Investment Company Y at the close of the particular quarter has 15 percent of its assets invested in cash and Government securities, 30 percent in Corporation K, a regulated investment company, 10 percent in Corporation A, 20 percent in Corporation B, and the remaining 25 percent in various corporations in none of which is more than 5 percent of its assets invested. Corporation K has 20 percent of its assets invested in Corporation L, and Corporation L has 40 percent of its assets invested in Corporation B. Corporation A also has 30 percent of its assets invested in Corporation B, and owns more than 20 percent of the voting power in Corporation B. Investment Company Y owns more than 20 percent of the voting power of Corporations A and K. Corporation K owns more than 20 percent of the voting power of Corporation L, and Corporation L owns more than 20 percent of the voting power of Corporation B. Investment Company Y is disqualified under clause (B) since more than 25 percent of its assets is considered invested in Corporation B as shown by the following calculation:

	Percent
Percentage of assets invested directly in Corporation B	20.0
Percentage invested through the controlled group, Y-K-L-B (40 percent of 20 percent of 30 percent)	2.4
Percentage invested in the controlled group, Y-A-B (30 percent of 10 percent)	3.0
Total percentage of assets of Investment Company Y invested in Corporation B	25.4

Example (5). Investment Company Z, which keeps its books and makes its returns on the basis of the calendar year, at the close of the first quarter of 1952 meets the requirements of section 361 (b) (3) and has 20 percent of its assets invested in Corporation A. Later during the taxable year it makes distributions to its shareholders and because of such distributions it finds at the close of the taxable year that it has more than 25 percent of its remaining assets invested in Corporation A. Investment Company Z does not lose its status as a regulated investment company for the taxable year 1952 because of such distributions.

(2) Venture capital registered management investment companies. (i) Section 361 (c) provides that under certain conditions set forth below a registered management investment company which has been certified by the Securities and Exchange Commission for the taxable year may, in the computation of 50 percent of the value of its assets under clause (A) of section 361 (b) (3) for any quarter of such taxable year, include, with respect to securities other than Government securities or securities of other regulated investment companies, the value of any securities of an issuer, notwithstanding the fact that such registered management investment company holds more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer, but only if the investment company has not continuously held any security of such issuer or of any predecessor company of such issuer for 10 or more years preceding such quarter of such taxable year. All other provisions and requirements of section 361 and the regulations thereunder are applicable in determining whether such registered management investment company qualifies as a regulated investment company within the meaning of such section.

(ii) The provisions of section 361 (c) are applicable only to a registered management investment company which the Securities and Exchange Commission has determined, in accordance with regulations issued by it, and has certified to the Secretary, not more than 60 days before the close of the taxable year of such investment company, to be principally engaged in the furnishing of capital to other corporations which are principally engaged in the development or exploitation of inventions, technological improvements, new processes, or products not previously generally available. For the purpose of the aforementioned determination and certification, unless the Securities and Exchange Commission determines otherwise, a corporation shall be considered to be principally engaged in the development or exploitation of inventions, technological improvements, new processes, or products not previously generally available, for at least 10 years after the date of the first acquisition of any security in such corporation or any predecessor thereof by such investment company if at the date of such acquisition the corporation or its predecessor was principally so engaged, and an investment company shall be considered at any date to be furnishing capital to any company whose securities it holds if within 10 years before such date it has acquired any of such securities, or any securities surrendered in exchange therefor, from such other company or its predecessor.

(iii) Section 361 (c) does not apply in the quarterly computation of 50 percent of the value of the assets of an investment company under clause (A) of section 361 (b) (3) for any taxable year if at the close of any quarter of such taxable year more than 25 percent of the value of its total assets (including the 50 percent or more mentioned in such clause (A)) is represented by securities (other than Government securities or the securities of other regulated investment companies) of issuers as to each of which (a) such investment company holds more than 10 percent of the outstanding voting securities of such issuer and (b) such investment company has continuously held any security of such issuer (or any security of a predecessor of such issuer) for 10 or more years preceding such quarter, unless the value of its total assets so represented is reduced to 25 percent or less within 30 days after the close of such quarter.

(iv) As used in section 361 (c) and this subparagraph, the term "predecessor company" means any corporation the basis of whose securities in the hands of the investment company was, under the provisions of section 113, the same in whole or in part as the basis of any of the securities of the issuer and any corporation with respect to whose securities any of the securities of the issuer were received directly or indirectly by the investment company in a transaction or series of transactions involving nonrecognition of gain or loss in whole or in part. The other terms used in this subparagraph have the same meaning as when used in section 361 (b) (3). See subparagraph (1) of this paragraph.

(c) Requirements as to election. Even if an investment company satisfies the other requirements of section 361 for the taxable year, it will not be considered a regulated investment company for such year within the meaning of Supplement Q unless it elects to be a regulated investment company for such taxable year, or has made such an election for a previous taxable year. The election shall be made by the taxpayer by computing income as a regulated investment company in its return for the first taxable year to which it desires the election to be applicable. No other method of making such election is permitted. An election once made is irrevocable for the current taxable year and all succeeding taxable years.

SEC. 362. Tax on regulated investment companies—(a) Earnings and profits. The earnings and profits of a regulated investment company for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941 (but not its accumulated earnings and profits) shall not be reduced by any amount which is not allowable as a deduction in computing its net income for such taxable year.

(b) Method of taxation of companies and shareholders. In the case of a regulated investment company which distributes during the taxable year to its shareholders as taxable dividends other than capital gain dividends an amount not less than 90 per centum of its net income for the taxable year computed without regard to net long-term and net short-term capital gains, and complies for such year with all rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, for the purpose of ascertaining the actual ownership of its outstanding stock:

(1) Its Supplement Q net income shall be its adjusted net income (computed by excluding the excess, if any, of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss, and without the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s)) minus the basic surtax credit (excluding capital gain dividends) computed under section 27 (b) without the application of paragraphs (2) and (3). For the purposes of this paragraph, the net income shall be computed without regard to section 47 (c).

(2) Its Supplement Q surtax net income shall be its net income (computed by excluding the excess, if any, of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss, and without the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s)) minus the dividends (other than capital gain dividends) paid during the taxable year increased by the consent dividends credit provided by section 28. For the purposes of this paragraph and paragraph (5) the amount of dividends paid shall be computed in the same manner as provided in subsections (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), and (i) of section 27 for the purpose of the basic surtax credit provided in section 27. For the purposes of this paragraph the net income shall be computed without regard to section 47 (c).

(3) In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1950, and before April 1, 1951, and ending after March 31, 1951, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon its Supplement Q net income a tax equal to 23¾ per centum of the amount thereof. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon its Supplement Q net income a tax equal to 30 per centum of the amount thereof. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon its Supplement Q net income a tax equal to 25 per centum of the amount thereof.

(4) In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1950, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon its Supplement Q surtax net income a tax equal to 22 per centum of the amount thereof in excess of $25,000.

(5) There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year a tax of 25 per centum of the excess, if any, of the net long-term capital gain over the sum of the net short-term capital loss and the amount of capital gain dividends paid during the year.

(6) A capital gain dividend shall be treated by the shareholders as gains from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than 6 months.

(7) A capital gain dividend means any dividend or part thereof which is designated by the company as a capital gain dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders at any time prior to the expiration of thirty days after close of its taxable year. If the aggregate amount so designated with respect to a taxable year of the company is greater than the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss of the taxable year, the portion of each distribution which shall be a capital gain dividend shall be only that proportion of the amount so designated which such excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss bears to the aggregate amount so designated.

(8) For the purposes of this subsection, any dividend or portion thereof declared by a company after the close of the taxable year and prior to the time prescribed by law for the filing of its return for the taxable year (including the period of any extension of time granted for filing such return) shall, to the extent the company so elects in such return, be treated as having been paid during such taxable year, but only if distribution of such dividend is actually made to shareholders in the 12-month period following the close of such taxable year and not later than the date of the first regular dividend payment made after such declaration.

Act 1942; sec. 121 (c), Rev. Act 1945; secs. 121 (e) and 222, Rev. Act 1950; sec. 201 (c), Excess Profits Tax Act 1950; sec. 121 (d), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.362-1 Earnings and profits of a regulated investment company. In the determination of the earnings and profits of a regulated investment company, such earnings and profits shall not be reduced by any amount which is not allowable as a deduction in computing its net income for such taxable year. See section 362 (a). Thus, if a corporation would have had earnings and profits of $500,000 for the taxable year except for the fact that it had a net capital loss of $100,000, which amount was not deductible in determining its net income, its earnings and profits for that year if it is a regulated investment company would be

$500,000. However, in determining its accumulated earnings and profits as of the beginning of the following taxable year, the earnings and profits for the previous year to be considered in such computation would amount to $400,000 assuming that there had been no distribution from such earnings and profits. For the purpose of the earnings-and-profits concept, it is immaterial whether during the taxable year a regulated investment company is taxable under Supplement Q.

§ 39.362-2 Method of taxation of regulated investment companies. (a) If a regulated investment company distributes during the taxable year to its shareholders as taxable dividends, other than capital gain dividends, an amount not less than 90 percent of its net income for the taxable year computed without regard to net long-term and net short-term capital gains and complies for such year with the provisions of § 39.362-3 (relating to records required to be kept for the purpose of ascertaining the actual ownership of its outstanding stock) it is taxable—

(1) Upon its Supplement Q net income (as defined in section 362 (b) (1))—

(i) For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, at the rate of 30 percent of the amount thereof;

(ii) For taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954, at the rate of 25 percent of the amount thereof.

(2) Upon its Supplement Q surtax net income (as defined in section 362 (b) (2)) at the rate of 22 percent of the amount thereof in excess of $25,000.

(3) Upon the excess of any net long-term capital gain over the sum of the net short-term capital loss and the amount of capital gain dividends (as defined in section 362 (b) (7)) paid during the year, at the rate of 25 percent of such excess.

(b) If a regulated investment company does not in a particular year distribute to its shareholders as taxable dividends, other than capital gain dividends, at least 90 percent of its net income computed without regard to net long-term and net short-term capital gains, it will, in spite of being classified as a regulated investment company, be taxed in that year as an ordinary corporation (that is, it will be entitled to the dividends received credit, but will not be entitled to the basic surtax credit)

(c) The term "taxable dividends" means dividends (as defined in section 115 after the application of section 362 (a)) which are taxable in the hands of such shareholders as are subject to taxation under chapter 1.

(d) A taxable dividend is not distributed to its shareholders during the taxable year within the meaning of section 362 (b) unless the dividend is received by the shareholders during the taxable year of the company. See § 39.27 (b)-2, relating to when dividends are considered paid. For certain distributions made after the close of the taxable year which the regulated investment company may elect to treat as paid during the taxable year for purposes of section 362 (b) see § 39.362-6.

(e) Due to the provision in section 362 (a) with respect to the concept of earnings and profits of a regulated investment company, even though such a company has no accumulated earnings and profits if it makes distributions during the taxable year of an amount equal to its net income for that year, regardless of the amount of losses which are not deductible against such net income, it will be allowed a basic surtax credit equal to its net income, and thus not be liable for any income tax for the taxable year provided it otherwise satisfies the requirements of Supplement Q.

(f) The terms "Supplement Q net income," "Supplement Q surtax net income," and "capital gain dividend" are defined in section 362 (b) (1), (2) and (7) respectively.

§ 39.362-3 Records to be kept for purpose of determining whether a corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company is a personal holding company. Every regulated investment company shall maintain in the internal revenue district in which it is required to file its income-tax return permanent records showing the information relative to the actual owners of its stock contained in the written statements required by this section to be demanded from the shareholders. The actual owner of stock includes the person who is required to include in gross income in his return the dividends received on the stock. Such records shall be kept at all times available for inspection, by any authorized officer or employee of the Internal Revenue Service, and shall be retained as long as the contents thereof may become material in the administration of any internal revenue law. For the purpose of determining whether a domestic corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company is a personal holding company as defined in section 501, the permanent records of the company shall show the maximum number of shares of the corporation (including the number and face value of securities convertible into stock of the corporation) to be considered as actually or constructively owned by each of the actual owners of any of its stock at any time during the last half of the corporation's taxable year, as provided in section 503. Statements giving such information shall be demanded not later than 30 days after the close of the corporation's taxable year as follows:

(a) In the case of a corporation having 2,000 or more record owners of its stock on any dividend record date, from each record holder of 5 percent or more of its stock; or

(b) In the case of a corporation having less than 2,000 and more than 200 record owners of its stock, on any dividend record date, from each record holder of 1 percent or more of its stock; or

(c) In the case of a corporation having 200 or less record owners of its stock, on any dividend record date, from each record holder of one-half of 1 percent or more of its stock.

§ 39.362-4 Additional information required in returns of shareholders. (a) Any person who fails or refuses to comply with the demand of a regulated investment company for the written statements which § 39.362-3 requires the company to demand from its shareholders shall submit as a part of his income tax return a statement showing, to the best of his knowledge and belief—

(1) The number of shares actually owned by him at any and all times during the period for which the return is filed in any company claiming to be a regulated investment company;

(2) The dates of acquisition of any such stock during such period and the names and addresses of persons from whom it was acquired;

(3) The dates of disposition of any such stock during such period and the names and addresses of the transferees thereof;

(4) The names and addresses of the members of his family (as defined in section 503 (a) (2)) the names and addresses of his partners, if any, in any partnership; and the maximum number of shares, if any, actually owned by each in any corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company, at any time during the last half of the taxable year of such company;

(5) The names and addresses of any corporation, partnership, association, or trust in which he had a beneficial interest to the extent of at least 10 percent at any time during the period for which such return is made, and the number of shares of any corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company actually owned by each;

(6) The maximum number of shares (including the number and face value of securities convertible into stock of the corporation) in any domestic corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company to be considered as constructively owned by such individual at any time during the last half of the corporation's taxable year, as provided in section 503 and §§ 39.503 (a)-1 to 39.503 (a)-7, inclusive, and § 39.503 (b)-1; and

(7) The amount and date of receipt of each dividend received during such period from every corporation claiming to be a regulated investment company.

(b) When making demand for the written statements required of each shareholder by § 39.362-3, the company shall inform each of the shareholders of his duty to submit as a part of his income tax return the statements which are required by this section if he fails or refuses to comply with such demand. A list of the persons failing or refusing to comply in whole or in part with a company's demand shall be maintained as a part of its record required by § 39.362-3. A company which fails to keep such records to show the actual ownership of its outstanding stock as are required by § 39.362-3, or which may be required from time to time by any rule or regulation prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary for such purpose, shall not be taxable as a regulated investment company.

(c) Nothing in this section or § 39.362–3 shall be construed to relieve regulated investment companies or their shareholders from the duty of filing information returns required by regulations prescribed under sections 147 and 148.

§ 39.362–5 Method of taxation of shareholders of regulated investment companies. Shareholders who receive capital gain dividends from a regulated investment company distributed during a taxable year of the regulated investment company for which it is taxable under section 362 (b) shall treat such dividends as gains from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months. A capital gain dividend is defined in section 362 (b) (7) as any dividend or part thereof which is designated by a regulated investment company as a capital gain dividend in a written notice mailed to its shareholders at any time prior to the expiration of 30 days after the close of its taxable year. If the aggregate amount so designated with respect to the taxable year is greater than the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss of the taxable year, the portion of each distribution which shall be a capital gain dividend shall be only that proportion of the amount so designated which such excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss bears to the aggregate amount so designated. Thus, if a regulated investment company making its return on the calendar year basis advised its shareholders by written notice mailed December 30, 1952, that of a distribution of $500,000 made December 15, 1952, $200,000 constituted a capital gain dividend, amounting to $2 per share, and it was later discovered that an error had been made in determining the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss of the taxable year and that instead of such excess being $200,000 it was $100,000, then instead of each shareholder having received a capital gain dividend of $2 per share he would have received a capital gain dividend of $1 per share. For additional rules applicable to certain distributions made after the close of the taxable year which may be designated as capital gain dividends, see § 39.362–6.

§ 39.362–6 Distribution of dividends after close of taxable year (a) Section 362 (b) (8) provides that:

(1) In determining under section 362 (b) whether a regulated investment company distributes during the taxable year to its shareholders as taxable dividends (other than capital gain dividends) an amount not less than 90 percent of its net income for the taxable year computed without regard to net long-term and net short-term capital gains,

(2) In computing the Supplement Q net income and the Supplement Q surtax net income, and

(3) In determining the amount of capital gain dividends paid during the taxable year, any dividend (or portion thereof) declared by the company after the close of such taxable year and before the time prescribed by law for the filing of its return for such taxable year (including the period of any extension of time granted for filing such return) shall, to the extent the company so elects in such return, be treated as having been paid during such taxable year. This rule is applicable only if distribution of the entire amount of such dividend is actually made to shareholders in the 12-month period following the close of such taxable year and not later than the date of the first regular dividend payment made after such declaration.

(b) The election must be made in the return filed by the company for the taxable year. The election shall be made by the taxpayer by treating the dividend (or portion thereof) to which such election applies as a dividend paid during the taxable year in computing its Supplement Q net income and its Supplement Q surtax net income, or if the dividend (or portion thereof) to which such election applies is to be designated by the company as a capital gain dividend, in computing the amount of capital gain dividends paid during such taxable year. The election provided in section 362 (b) (8) may be made only to the extent that the earnings and profits of the taxable year (computed with the application of section 362 (a)) exceed the total amount of distributions out of such earnings and profits actually made during the taxable year (not including distributions with respect to which a prior election has been made under section 362 (b) (8)) The dividend or portion thereof, with respect to which the regulated investment company has made a valid election under section 362 (b) (8), shall be considered as paid out of earnings and profits of the taxable year for which such election is made, and not out of earnings and profits of the taxable year in which the distribution is actually made. However, the dividend or portion thereof subject to the election will be includible in the gross income of shareholders of the regulated investment company for the taxable year in which the dividend is received by them.

(c) The application of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). X Company, a regulated investment company, had a net income (and earnings or profits) for the calendar year 1952 of $100,000. During that year the company distributed to shareholders taxable dividends aggregating $88,000. On March 10, 1953, the company declared a dividend of $37,000 payable to shareholders on March 20, 1953. Such dividend consists of the first regular quarterly dividend for 1953 of $25,000 plus an additional $12,000 representing that part of the net income for 1952 which was not distributed in 1952. On March 15, 1953, X Company files its Federal income tax return and elects therein to treat $12,000 of the total dividend of $37,000 to be paid to shareholders on March 20, 1953, as having been paid during the taxable year 1952. Assuming that X Company actually distributes the entire amount of the dividend of $37,000 on March 20, 1953, an amount equal to $12,000 thereof will be treated for the purposes of section 362 (b) as having been paid during the taxable year 1952. Such amount ($12,000) will be considered a distribution out of the earnings and profits of the company for the taxable year 1952, and will be treated as a taxable dividend to the shareholders for the taxable year in which such distribution is received by them.

Example (2). Y Company, a regulated investment company, had a net income (and earnings or profits) for the calendar year 1952 of $100,000, and for 1953 a net income (and earnings or profits) of $125,000. On January 1, 1952, the company had a deficit in its earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, of $115,000. During the year 1952 the company distributed to shareholders taxable dividends aggregating $85,000. On March 5, 1953, the company declared a dividend of $65,000 payable to shareholders on March 31, 1953. On March 15, 1953, Y Company files its Federal income tax return in which it includes $40,000 of the total dividend of $65,000 to be paid to shareholders on March 31, 1953, as a dividend paid by it during the taxable year 1952. On March 31, 1953, Y Company distributes the entire amount of the dividend of $65,000 declared on March 5, 1953. The election under section 362 (b) (8) is valid only to the extent of $15,000, the amount of undistributed earnings and profits for 1952. The remainder ($50,000) of the dividend paid on March 31, 1953, may not be the subject of an election, but such amount will be regarded as a distribution by Y Company for the taxable year 1953. Assuming that the only other distribution by the Y Company during 1953 is a distribution of $75,000 paid as a dividend on October 31, 1953, the total amount of the distribution of $65,000 paid to shareholders on March 31, 1953, is to be treated as taxable dividends to the shareholders. Of this amount, $15,000 is to be treated as distributed out of the earnings or profits of the company for the taxable year 1952, and the remaining $50,000 as a distribution out of the earnings or profits for the year 1953. The distribution of $75,000 on October 31, 1953, is, of course, a taxable dividend out of the earnings and profits for the year 1953.

(d) A dividend (or portion thereof) with respect to which an election has been made under section 362 (b) (8) and which the company desires to designate as a capital gain dividend need not be so designated within 30 days after the close of the taxable year, but will be properly designated as a capital gain dividend if it is designated as such in a written notice mailed to the shareholders at the time of the payment of the dividend. Such designated capital gain dividends are to be aggregated with the designated capital gain dividends actually paid during such taxable year (not including such dividends with respect to which a prior election has been made under section 362 (b) (8)) for the purpose of determining whether the aggregate of the designated capital gain dividends with respect to such taxable year of the company is greater than the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss of the company.

(e) After the expiration of the time for filing the return for the taxable year for which an election is made under section 362 (b) (8), such election shall be irrevocable with respect to the dividend or portion thereof to which it applies.

SUPPLEMENT R—EXCHANGES AND DISTRIBUTIONS IN OBEDIENCE TO ORDERS OF SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION

§ 39.371 Statutory provisions; exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission, nonrecognition of gain or loss.

SEC. 371. Nonrecognition of gain or loss—(a) Exchanges of stock or securities only. No gain or loss shall be recognized to the transferor if stock or securities in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company are transferred to such corporation or to an associate company thereof which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company solely in exchange for stock or securities (other than stock or securities which are nonexempt property), and the exchange is made by the transferee corporation in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

(b) Exchanges and sales of property by corporations. No gain shall be recognized to a transferor corporation which is a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company, if such corporation, in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission transfers property in exchange for property, and such order recites that such exchange by the transferor corporation is necessary or appropriate to the integration or simplification of the holding company system of which the transferor corporation is a member. If any such property so received is nonexempt property, gain shall be recognized unless such nonexempt property or an amount equal to the fair market value of such property at the time of the transfer is, within 24 months of the transfer, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, and in accordance with an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, expended for property other than nonexempt property or is invested as a contribution to the capital, or as paid-in surplus, of another corporation, and such order recites that such expenditure or investment by the transferor corporation is necessary or appropriate to the integration or simplification of the holding company system of which the transferor corporation is a member. If the fair market value of such nonexempt property at the time of the transfer exceeds the amount expended and the amount invested, as required in the second sentence of this paragraph, the gain, if any, to the extent of such excess, shall be recognized. Any gain, to the extent that it cannot be applied in reduction of basis under section 372 (a) (2) shall be recognized. For the purposes of this subsection, a distribution in cancellation or redemption (except a distribution having the effect of a dividend) of the whole or a part of the transferor's own stock (not acquired on the transfer) and a payment in complete or partial retirement or cancellation of securities representing indebtedness of the transferor or a complete or partial retirement or cancellation of such securities which is a part of the consideration for the transfer, shall be considered an expenditure for property other than nonexempt property, and if, on the transfer, a liability of the transferor is assumed, or property of the transferor is transferred subject to a liability, the amount of such liability shall be considered to be an expenditure by the transferor for property other than nonexempt property. This subsection shall not apply unless the transferor corporation consents, at such time and in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe, to the regulations prescribed under section 372 (a) (2) in effect at the time of filing its return for the taxable year in which the transfer occurs.

(c) Distribution of stock or securities only. If there is distributed, in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to a shareholder in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company, stock or securities (other than stock or securities which are nonexempt property), without the surrender by such shareholder of stock or securities in such corporation, no gain to the distributee from the receipt of the stock or securities so distributed shall be recognized.

(d) Transfers within system groups. (1) No gain or loss shall be recognized to a corporation which is a member of a system group (A) if such corporation transfers property to another corporation which is a member of the same system group in exchange for other property, and the exchange by each corporation is made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, or (B) if there is distributed to such corporation as a shareholder in a corporation which is a member of the same system group, property, without the surrender by such shareholder of stock or securities in the corporation making the distribution, and the distribution is made and received in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission. If an exchange by or a distribution to a corporation with respect to which no gain or loss is recognized under any of the provisions of this paragraph may also be considered to be within the provisions of subsection (a), (b), or (c), then the provisions of this paragraph only shall apply.

(2) If the property received upon an exchange which is within any of the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection consists in whole or in part of stock or securities issued by the corporation from which such property was received, and if in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission such stock or securities (other than stock which is not preferred as to both dividends and assets) are sold and the proceeds derived therefrom are applied in whole or in part in the retirement or cancellation of stock or of securities of the recipient corporation outstanding at the time of such exchange, no gain or loss shall be recognized to the recipient corporation upon the sale of the stock or securities with respect to which such order was made; except that if any part of the proceeds derived from the sale of such stock or securities is not so applied, or if the amount of such proceeds is in excess of the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of such exchange, the gain, if any, shall be recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the proceeds which are not so applied, or in an amount not more than the amount by which the proceeds derived from such sale exceed such fair market value, whichever is the greater.

(e) Exchanges not solely in kind. (1) If an exchange (not within any of the provisions of subsection (d) [)] would be within the provisions of subsection (a) if it were not for the fact that property received in exchange consists not only of property permitted by such subsection to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, but also of other property or money, then the gain, if any, to the recipient shall be recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the sum of such money and the fair market value of such other property, and the loss, if any, to the recipient shall not be recognized.

(2) If an exchange is within the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection and if it includes a distribution which has the effect of the distribution of a taxable dividend, then there shall be taxed as a dividend to each distributee such an amount of the gain recognized under such paragraph (1) as is not in excess of his ratable share of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913. The remainder, if any, of the gain recognized under such paragraph (1) shall be taxed as a gain from the exchange of property.

(f) Application of section. The provisions of this section shall not apply to an exchange, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale unless (1) the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission in obedience to which such exchange, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale was made recites that such exchange, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale is necessary or appropriate to effectuate the provisions of section 11 (b) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, 49 Stat. 820 (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 79k (b)), (2) such order specifies and itemizes the stock and securities and other property which are ordered to be acquired, transferred, received, or sold upon such exchange, acquisition, expenditure, distribution, or sale, and, in the case of an investment, the investment to be made, and (3) such exchange, acquisition, expenditure, investment, distribution or sale was made in obedience to such order, and was completed within the time prescribed therefor.

(g) Non-application of other provisions. If an exchange or distribution made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission is within any of the provisions of this section and may also be considered to be within any of the provisions of section 112 (other than the provisions of paragraph (8) of subsection (b)), then the provisions of this section only shall apply.

§ 39.371-1 Terms used. The following terms, when used in this section and §§ 39.371-2 to 39.373-1, inclusive, shall have the meanings assigned to them in section 373: "Order of the Securities and Exchange Commission"; "registered holding company"; "holding-company system"; "associate company"; "majority-owned subsidiary company"; "system group"; "nonexempt property"; and "stock or securities." Any other term used in this section and §§ 39.371-2 to 39.373-1, inclusive, which is defined in the Internal Revenue Code, shall be given the respective definition contained in the Code.

§ 39.371-2 Purpose and scope of exception. (a) The general rule is that the entire amount of gain or loss from the sale or exchange of property is to be recognized (see section 112 (a)) and that the entire amount received as a dividend is to be included in gross income (see sections 22 (a) and 115) Exceptions to the general rule are provided in section 112, one of which is that made by section 112 (b) (8) with respect to exchanges, sales, and distributions specifically described in section 371. Section 371 provides the extent to which gain or loss is not to be recognized on an exchange or sale, or the receipt of a distribution, made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is issued to effectuate the provisions of section 11 (b) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79k (b)) Section 115 (c) provides that a distribution in liquidation of a corporation shall be treated as an exchange, and such a distribution is to be so treated under the provisions of Supplement R (sections 371 to 373, inclusive) The order of the Securities and Exchange Commission must be one requiring or approving action which the Commission finds to be necessary or appropriate to effect a simplification or geographical integration of a particular public utility holding-company system. For specific requirements with respect to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, see section 371 (f)

(b) The requirements for nonrecognition of gain or loss as provided in section 371 are precisely stated with respect to the following four general types of transactions:

(1) The exchange that is provided for in section 371 (a) in which stock or securities in a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company are exchanged for stock or securities.

(2) The exchange that is provided for in section 371 (b) in which a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company exchanges property for property.

(3) The distribution that is provided for in section 371 (c) in which stock or securities are distributed to a shareholder in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company.

(4) The transfer that is provided for in section 371 (d) in which a corporation which is a member of a system group transfers property to another member of the same system group.

Certain rules with respect to the receipt of nonexempt property on an exchange described in section 371 (a) are prescribed in section 371 (e)

(c) These exceptions to the general rule are to be strictly construed as in the case of the other exceptions in section 112. Unless both the purpose and the specific requirements of Supplement R (sections 371 to 373, inclusive) are clearly met, the recognition of gain or loss upon the exchange, sale, or distribution will not be postponed under Supplement R. Moreover, even though a taxable transaction occurs in connection or simultaneously with a realization of gain or loss to which nonrecognition is accorded, nevertheless, as under the various provisions of section 112, nonrecognition will not be accorded to such taxable transaction. In other words, the provisions of section 371 do not extend in any case to gain or loss other than that realized from and directly attributable to a disposition of property as such, or the receipt of a corporate distribution as such, in an exchange, sale, or distribution specifically described in section 371.

(d) The application of the provisions of Supplement R (sections 371 to 373, inclusive) is intended to result only in postponing the recognition of gain or loss until a disposition of property is made which is not covered by such provisions, and, in the case of an exchange or sale subject to the provisions of section 371 (b) in the reduction of basis of certain property. The provisions of section 372 with respect to the continuation of basis and the reduction in basis are designed to effect these results. Although the time of recognition may be shifted, there must be a true reflection of income in all cases, and it is intended that the provisions of Supplement R shall not be construed or applied in such a way as to defeat this purpose.

§ 39.371-3 Exchanges of stock or securities solely for stock or securities. The exchange, without the recognition of gain or loss, that is provided for in section 371 (a) must be one in which stock or securities in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company are exchanged solely for stock or securities other than stock or securities which constitute nonexempt property. An exchange is not within the provisions of section 371 (a), unless the stock or securities transferred and those received are stock or securities as defined by section 373 (f) The stock or securities which may be received without the recognition of gain or loss are not limited to stock or securities in the corporation from which they are received. An exchange within the provisions of section 371 (a) may be a transaction between the holder of stock or securities and the corporation which issued the stock or securities. Also the exchange may be made by a holder of stock or securities with an associate company (i. e., a corporation in the same holding-company system with the issuing corporation) which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company. In either case, the nonrecognition provisions of section 371 (a) apply only to the holder of the stock or securities. However, the transferee corporation must be acting in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directed to such corporation, if no gain or loss is to be recognized to the holder of the stock or securities who makes the exchange with such corporation. See also section 371 (b), in case the holder of the stock or securities is a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company. An exchange is not within the provisions of section 371 (a) if it is within the provisions of section 371 (d), relating to transfers within a system group. For further limitations, see section 371 (f).

§ 39.371-4 Exchanges of property for property by corporations—(a) Application of section 371 (b). Section 371 (b) applies only to the transfers specified therein with respect to which section 371 (d) is inapplicable, and deals only with such transfers if gain is realized upon the sale or other disposition effected by such transfers. If loss is realized the subsection is inapplicable and the application of other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code must be determined. See section 371 (g). If section 371 (b) is applicable, the provisions of section 112 (other than the provisions of subsection (b) (8) thereof) are inapplicable, and the conditions under, and the extent to which, the realized gain is not recognized are set forth in paragraphs (b), (c), (d) (e) and (f) of this section.

(b) Nonrecognition of gain; no nonexempt proceeds. No gain is recognized to a transferor corporation upon the sale or other disposition of property transferred by such transferor corporation in exchange solely for property other than nonexempt property, as defined in section 373 (e), but only if all of the following requirements are satisfied:

(1) The transferor corporation is, under the definition in section 373 (b) a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company·

(2) Such transfer is in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission (as defined in section 373 (a)) and such order satisfies the requirements of section 371 (f)

(3) The transferor corporation has filed the required consent to the regulations under section 372 (a) (2) (see paragraph (g) of this section) and

(4) The entire amount of the gain, as determined under section 111, can be applied in reduction of basis under section 372 (a) (2)

(c) Nonrecognition of gain; nonexempt proceeds. If the transaction would be within the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section if it were not for the fact that the property received in exchange consists in whole or in part of nonexempt property (as defined in section 373 (e)) then no gain is recognized if such nonexempt property, or an amount equal to the fair market value of such nonexempt property at the time of the transfer,

(1) Is expended within the required 24-month period for property other than nonexempt property· or

(2) Is invested within the required 24-month period as a contribution to the capital, or as paid-in surplus, of another corporation;

but only if the expenditure or investment is made

(3) In accordance with an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission (as defined in section 373 (a)) which satisfies the requirements of section 371 (f) and which recites that such expenditure or investment by the transferor corporation is necessary or appropriate to the integration or simplification of the holding-company system of which the transferor corporation is a member; and

(4) The required consent, waiver, and bond have been executed and filed. See paragraphs (g) and (h) of this section.

(d) Recognition of gain in part; insufficient expenditure or investment in case of nonexempt proceeds. If the transaction would be within the provisions of paragraph (c) of this section if it were not for the fact that the amount expended or invested is less than the fair market value of the nonexempt property received in exchange, then the gain, if any, is recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the amount by which the fair market value of such nonexempt property at the time of the transfer exceeds the amount so expended and invested.

(e) Items treated as expenditures for the purpose of paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section. For the purposes of paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section, the following are treated as expenditures for property other than nonexempt property:

(1) A distribution in cancellation or redemption (except a distribution having the effect of a dividend) of the whole or a part of the transferor's own stock (not acquired on the transfer)

(2) A payment in complete or partial retirement or cancellation of securities representing indebtedness of the transferor or a complete or partial retirement or cancellation of such securities which is a part of the consideration for the transfer; and

(3) If, on the transfer, a liability of the transferor is assumed, or property of the transferor is transferred subject to a liability, the amount of such liability.

(f) Recognition of gain in part; inability to reduce basis. If the transaction would be within the provisions of paragraph (b) or (c) of this section if it were not for the fact that an amount of gain cannot be applied in reduction of basis under section 372 (a) (2) then the gain, if any, is recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the amount which cannot be so applied in reduction of basis. If the transaction would be within the provisions of paragraph (d) of this section, if it were not for the fact that an amount of gain cannot be applied in reduction of basis under section 372 (a) (2) then the gain, if any, is recognized but in an amount not in excess of the aggregate of—

(1) The amount of gain which would be recognized under paragraph (d) of this section if there were no inability to reduce basis under section 372 (a) (2) and

(2) The amount of gain which cannot be applied in reduction of basis under section 372 (a) (2)

(g) Consent to regulations under section 372 (a) (2) To be entitled to the benefits of the provisions of section 371 (b) a corporation must file with its return for the taxable year in which the transfer occurred a consent to have the basis of its property adjusted under section 372 (a) (2) (see § 39.372-3) in accordance with the provisions of the regulations in effect at the time of filing of the return for the taxable year in which the transfer occurs. Such consent shall be made in duplicate on Form 982A in accordance with these regulations and instructions on the form or issued therewith.

(h) Requirements with respect to expenditure or investment. If the full amount of the expenditure or investment required for the application of paragraph (c) of this section has not been made by the close of the taxable year in which such transfer occurred, the taxpayer shall file with the return for such year an application for the benefit of the 24-month period for expenditure and investment, reciting the nature and time of the proposed expenditure or investment. When requested by the Commissioner, the taxpayer shall execute and file (at such time and in such form) such waiver of the statute of limitations with respect to the assessment of deficiencies (for the taxable year of the transfer and for all succeeding taxable years in any of which falls any part of the period beginning with the date of the transfer and ending 24 months thereafter) as the Commissioner may specify, and such bond with such surety as the Commissioner may require in an amount not in excess of double the estimated maximum income and excess profits taxes which would be payable if the corporation does not make the required expenditure or investment within the required 24-month period.

§ 39.371-5 Distribution solely of stock or securities. If, without any surrender of his stock or securities as defined in section 373 (f) a shareholder in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company receives stock or securities in such corporation or owned by such corporation, no gain to the shareholder will be recognized with respect to the stock or securities received by such shareholder which do not constitute nonexempt property if the distribution to such shareholder is made by the distributing corporation in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directed to such corporation. A distribution is not within the provisions of section 371 (c) if it is within the provisions of section 371 (d) relating to transfers within a system group. A distribution is also not within the provisions of section 371 (c) if it involves a surrender by the shareholder of stock or securities or a transfer by the shareholder of property in exchange for the stock or securities received by the shareholder. For further limitations, see section 371 (f)

§ 39.371-6 Transfers within system group. (a) The nonrecognition of gain or loss provided for in section 371 (d) (1) is applicable to an exchange of property for other property (including money and other nonexempt property) In order for any exchange to come within such section, all the parties to the exchange must be corporations which are members of the same system group. The term "system group" is defined in section 373 (d)

(b) Section 371 (d) (1) also provides for nonrecognition of gain to a corporation which is a member of a system group if property (including money or other nonexempt property) is distributed to such corporation as a shareholder in a corporation which is a member of the same system group, without the surrender by such shareholder of stock or securities in the distributing corporation.

(c) As stated in § 39.371-2, nonrecognition of gain or loss will not be accorded to a transaction not clearly provided for in Supplement R (sections 371 to 373, inclusive) even though such transaction occurs simultaneously or in connection with an exchange, sale, or distribution to which nonrecognition is specifically accorded. Therefore, nonrecognition will not be accorded to any gain or loss realized from the discharge, or the removal of the burden, of the pecuniary obligations of a member of a system group, even though such obligations are acquired upon a transfer or distribution specifically described in section 371 (d) (1), but the fact that the acquisition of such obligations was upon a transfer or distribution specifically described in section 371 (d) (1) will, because of the basis provisions of section 372 (d) affect the cost to the member of such discharge or its equivalent. Thus, section 371 (d) (1) does not provide for the nonrecognition of any gain or loss realized from the discharge of the indebtedness of a member of a system group as the result of the acquisition in exchange, sale, or distribution of its own bonds, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness which were acquired by another member of the same system group for a consideration less or more than the issuing price thereof (with proper adjustments for amortization of premiums or discounts)

(d) The provisions of paragraph (c) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Suppose that the A Corporation and the B Corporation are both members of the same system group; that the A Corporation holds at a cost of $900 a bond issued by the B Corporation at par, $1,000; and that the A Corporation and the B Corporation enter into an exchange subject to the provisions of section 371 (d) (1) in which the $1,000 bond of the B Corporation is transferred from the A Corporation to the B Corporation. The $900 basis reflecting the cost to the A Corporation which would have been the basis available to the B Corporation if the property transferred to it had been something other than its own securities (see § 39.372-6) will, in this type of transaction, reflect the cost to the B Corporation of effecting a retirement of its own $1,000 bond. The $100 gain of the B Corporation reflected in the retirement will therefore be recognized.

(e) No exchange or distribution may be made without the recognition of gain or loss as provided for in section 371 (d) (1) unless all the corporations which are parties to such exchange or distribution are acting in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission. If an exchange or distribution is within the provisions of section 371 (d) (1) and also may be considered to be within some other provisions of section 371, it shall be considered that only the provisions of section 371 (d) (1) apply and that the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange or distribution is by virtue of that section.

§ 39.371-7 Sale of stock or securities received upon exchange by members of system group. (a) Section 371 (d) (2) provides that to the extent that property received upon an exchange by corporations which are members of the same system group consists of stock or securities issued by the corporation from which such property was received, such stock or securities may, under certain specifically described circumstances, be sold to a party not a member of the system group, without the recognition of gain or loss to the selling corporation.

The nonrecognition of gain or loss is limited, in the case of stock, to a sale of stock which is preferred as to both dividends and assets. The stock or securities must have been received upon an exchange with respect to which section 371 (d) (1) operated to prevent recognition of gain or loss to any party to the exchange. Nonrecognition of gain or loss upon the sale of such stock or securities is permitted only if the proceeds derived from the sale are applied in retirement or cancellation of stock or securities of the selling corporation which were outstanding at the time the exchange was made. It is also essential to nonrecognition of gain or loss upon the sale that both the sale of the stock or securities and the application of the proceeds derived therefrom be made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission. If any part of the proceeds derived from the sale is not applied in making the required retirement or cancellation of stock or securities and if the sale is otherwise within the provisions of section 371 (d) (2) the gain resulting from the sale shall be recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the proceeds which are not so applied. In any event, if the proceeds derived from the sale of the stock or securities exceed the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of the exchange through which they were acquired by the selling corporation, the gain resulting from the sale is to be recognized to the extent of such excess. Section 371 (d) (2) does not provide for the nonrecognition of any gain resulting from the retirement of bonds, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness for a consideration less than the issuing price thereof. Also, that section does not provide for the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon the sale of any stock or securities received upon a distribution or otherwise than upon an exchange.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation and the Y Corporation, both of which make their income tax returns on a calendar year basis, are members of the same system group. As part of an exchange in which section 371 (d) (1) is applicable the Y Corporation on June 1, 1952, issues to the X Corporation 1,000 shares of class A stock, preferred as to both dividends and assets. The fair market value of such stock at the time of issuance is $90,000 and its basis to the X Corporation is $75,000. On December 1, 1952, in obedience to an appropriate order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the X Corporation sells all of such stock to the public for $100,000 and applied $95,000 of this amount to the retirement of its own bonds, which were outstanding on June 1, 1952. The remaining $5,000 is not used to retire any of the X Corporation's stock or securities. Of the total gain of $25,000 realized on the disposition of the Y Corporation stock only $10,000 is recognized, being the difference between the fair market value of the stock when acquired and the amount for which it was sold, since such amount is greater than the portion ($5,000) of the proceeds not applied to the retirement of the X Corporation's stock or securities. If in this example the stock acquired by the X Corporation had not been stock of the Y Corporation issued to the X Corporation or if it had been stock not preferred as to both dividends and assets, the full amount of the gain ($25,000) realized upon its disposition would have been recognized, regardless of what was done with the proceeds.

§ 39.371-8 Exchanges in which money or other nonexempt property is received. (a) Under section 371 (e) (1), if in any exchange (not within any of the provisions of section 371 (d)) in which stock or securities in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary are exchanged for stock or securities as provided for in section 371 (a) there is received by the taxpayer money or other nonexempt property (in addition to property permitted to be received without recognition of gain) then—

(1) The gain, if any, to the taxpayer is to be recognized in an amount not in excess of the sum of the money and the fair market value of the other nonexempt property, but

(2) The loss, if any, to the taxpayer from such an exchange is not to be recognized to any extent.

(b) If money or other nonexempt property is received from a corporation in an exchange described in paragraph (a) of this section and if the distribution of such money or other nonexempt property by or on behalf of such corporation has the effect of the distribution of a taxable dividend, then, as provided in section 371 (e) (2), there shall be taxed to each distributee (1) as a dividend, such an amount of the gain recognized on the exchange as is not in excess of the distributee's ratable share of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, and (2) the remainder of the gain so recognized shall be taxed as a gain from the exchange of property.

§ 39.371-9 Requirements with respect to order of Securities and Exchange Commission. The term "order of the Securities and Exchange Commission" is defined in section 373 (a) In addition to the requirements specified in that definition, section 371 (f) provides that the provisions of section 371 shall not apply to an exchange, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale unless each of the following requirements is met:

(a) The order of the Securities and Exchange Commission must recite that the exchange, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale is necessary or appropriate to effectuate the provisions of section 11 (b) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79k (b))

(b) The order shall specify and itemize the stocks and securities and other property (including money) which are ordered to be acquired, transferred, received, or sold upon such exchange, acquisition, expenditure, distribution, or sale, and, in the case of an investment, the investment to be made, so as clearly to identify such property.

(c) The exchange, acquisition, expenditure, investment, distribution, or sale shall be made in obedience to such order and shall be completed within the time prescribed in such order.

These requirements were not designed merely to simplify the administration of the provisions of section 371, and they are not to be considered as pertaining only to administrative matters. Each one of the three requirements is of the essence, and must be met if gain or loss is not to be recognized upon the transaction.

§ 39.371-10 Nonapplication of other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. The effect of section 371 (g) is that an exchange, sale, or distribution which is within section 371 shall, with respect to the nonrecognition of gain or loss and the determination of basis, be governed only by Supplement R (sections 371 to 373, inclusive) the purpose being to prevent overlapping of the provisions of such supplement and other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. In other words, if by virtue of section 371 any portion of a person's gain or loss on any particular exchange, sale, or distribution is not to be recognized, then the gain or loss of such person shall be nonrecognized only to the extent provided in section 371, regardless of what the result might have been under section 112 if Supplement R had not been enacted; and similarly, the basis in the hands of such person of the property received by him in such transaction shall be the basis provided by section 372, regardless of what the basis of such property might have been under section 113 if Supplement R had not been enacted. On the other hand, if section 371 does not provide for the nonrecognition of any portion of a person's gain or loss (whether or not such person is another party to the same transaction referred to above) then the gain or loss of such person shall be recognized or nonrecognized to the extent provided for by other provisions of the Code as if Supplement R had not been enacted; and similarly, the basis in his hands of the property received by him in such transaction shall be the basis provided by other provisions of the Code as if Supplement R had not been enacted.

§ 39.371-11 Records to be kept and information to be filed with returns. (a) Every holder of stock or securities who receives stock or securities and other property (including money) upon an exchange shall, if the exchange is made with a corporation acting in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, file as a part of his income tax return for the taxable year in which the exchange takes place a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange, including—

(1) A clear description of the stock or securities transferred in the exchange, together with a statement of the cost or other basis of such stock or securities.

(2) The name and address of the corporation from which the stock or securities were received in the exchange.

(3) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property (including money) received from the exchange. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property received shall be set forth upon the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange.

(b) Each corporation which is a party to an exchange made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directed to such corporation shall file as a part of its income tax return for its taxable year in which the exchange takes place a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange, including—

(1) A copy of the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directed to such corporation, in obedience to which the exchange was made.

(2) A certified copy of the corporate resolution authorizing the exchange.

(3) A clear description of all property, including all stock or securities, transferred in the exchange, together with a complete statement of the cost or other basis of each class of property.

(4) The date of acquisition of any stock or securities transferred in the exchange, and, if any of such stock or securities were acquired by the corporation in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a copy of such order.

(5) The name and address of all persons to whom any property was transferred in the exchange.

(6) If any property transferred in the exchange was transferred to another corporation, a copy of any order of the Securities and Exchange Commission directed to the other corporation, in obedience to which the exchange was made by such other corporation.

(7) If the corporation transfers any nonexempt property, the amount of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, to the time of the exchange.

(8) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property (including money) received upon the exchange, including a statement of all distributions or other dispositions made thereof. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property received shall be stated on the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange.

(9) A statement showing as to each class of its stock the number of shares and percentage owned by any other corporation, the voting rights and voting power, and the preference (if any) as to both dividends and assets.

(10) The term "exchange" shall, wherever occurring in this paragraph, be read as "exchange, expenditure, or investment."

(c) Each shareholder who receives stock or securities or other property (including money) upon a distribution made by a corporation in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission shall file as a part of his income tax return for the taxable year in which such distribution is received a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain upon such distribution, including—

(1) The name and address of the corporation from which the distribution is received.

(2) A statement of the amount of stock or securities or other property received upon the distribution, including (in case the shareholder is a corporation) a statement of all distributions or other disposition made of such stock or securities or other property by the shareholder. The amount of each class of stock or securities and each kind of property shall be stated on the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the distribution.

(3) If the shareholder is a corporation, a statement showing as to each class of its stock the number of shares and percentage owned by a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company of a registered holding company, the voting rights and voting power, and the preference (if any) as to both dividends and assets.

(d) Every corporation making a distribution in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission shall file as a part of its income tax return for its taxable year in which the distribution is made a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain to the distributee upon such distribution including—

(1) A copy of the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in obedience to which the distribution was made.

(2) A certified copy of the corporate resolution authorizing the distribution.

(3) A statement of the amount of stock or securities or other property (including money) distributed to each shareholder. The amount of each kind of stock or securities or other property shall be stated on the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the distribution.

(4) The date of acquisition of the stock or securities distributed, and, if any of such stock or securities were acquired by the distributing corporation in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a copy of such order.

(5) The amount of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, to the time of the distribution.

(6) A statement showing as to each class of its stock the number of shares and percentage owned by any other corporation, the voting rights and voting power, and the preference (if any) as to both dividends and assets.

(e) Each corporation which is a member of a system group and which in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission sells stock or securities received upon an exchange (made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission) and applies the proceeds derived therefrom in retirement or cancellation of its own stock or securities shall file as a part of its income tax return for the taxable year in which the sale is made a complete statement of all facts pertaining to the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such sale, including—

(1) A copy of the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission in obedience to which the sale was made.

(2) A copy of the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission in obedience to which the proceeds derived from the sale were applied in whole or in part in the retirement or cancellation of its stock or securities.

(3) A certified copy of the corporate resolutions authorizing the sale of the stock or securities and the application of the proceeds derived therefrom.

(4) A clear description of the stock or securities sold, including the name and address of the corporation by which they were issued.

(5) The date of acquisition of the stock or securities sold, together with a statement of the fair market value of such stock or securities at the date of acquisition, and a copy of all orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission in obedience to which such stock or securities were acquired.

(6) The amount of the proceeds derived from such sale.

(7) The portion of the proceeds of such sale which was applied in retirement or cancellation of its stock or securities, together with a statement showing how long such stock or securities were outstanding prior to retirement or cancellation.

(8) The issuing price of its stock or securities which were retired or canceled.

(f) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every taxpayer who participates in an exchange or distribution made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission, showing the cost or other basis of the property transferred and the amount of stock or securities and other property (including money) received, in order to facilitate the determination of gain or loss from a subsequent disposition of such stock or securities and other property received on the exchange or distribution.

§ 39.372 Statutory provisions; basis of property acquired in exchanges and distributions made in obedience to orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

SEC. 372. Basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Exchanges generally—(1) Exchanges subject to the provisions of section 371 (a). If the property was acquired upon an exchange subject to the provisions of section 371 (a) or (e), the basis shall be the same as in the case of the property exchanged, decreased in the amount of any money received by the taxpayer and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the taxpayer that was recognized upon such exchange under the law applicable to the year in which the exchange was made. If the property so acquired consisted in part of the type of property permitted by section 371 (a) to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, and in part of nonexempt property, the basis provided in this subsection shall be allocated between the properties (other than money) received, and for the purpose of the allocation there shall be assigned to such nonexempt property (other than money) an amount equivalent to its fair market value at the date of the exchange. This subsection shall not apply to property acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer of the property to it.

(2) Exchanges subject to the provisions of section 371 (b). The gain not recognized upon a transfer by reason of section 371 (b) shall be applied to reduce the basis for determining gain or loss on sale or exchange of the following categories of property in the hands of the transferor immediately after the transfer, and property acquired within 24 months after such transfer by an expenditure or investment to which section 371 (b) relates on account of the acquisition of which gain is not recognized under such subsection, in the following order:

(1) Property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l);

(2) Property (not described in paragraph (1)) with respect to which a deduction for amortization is allowable under section 23 (t);

(3) Property with respect to which a deduction for depletion is allowable under section 23 (m) but not allowable under section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4);

(4) Stock and securities of corporations not members of the system group of which the transferor is a member (other than stock or securities of a corporation of which the transferor is a subsidiary);

(5) Securities (other than stock) of corporations which are members of the system group of which the transferor is a member (other than securities of the transferor or of a corporation of which the transferor is a subsidiary);

(6) Stock of corporations which are members of the system group of which the transferor is a member (other than stock of the transferor or of a corporation of which the transferor is a subsidiary);

(7) All other remaining property of the transferor (other than stock or securities of the transferor or of a corporation of which the transferor is a subsidiary).

The manner and amount of the reduction to be applied to particular property within any of the categories described in paragraphs (1) to (7), inclusive, shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(b) Transfers to corporations. If, in connection with a transfer subject to the provisions of section 371 (a), (b), or (e), the property was acquired by a corporation, either as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, or in consideration for stock or securities issued by the corporation receiving the property (including cases where part of the consideration for the transfer of such property to the corporation consisted of property or money in addition to such stock or securities), then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the transferor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made.

(c) Distributions of stock or securities. If the stock or securities were received in a distribution subject to the provisions of section 371 (c), then the basis in the case of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made shall be apportioned, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, between such stock and the stock or securities distributed.

(d) Transfers within system group. If the property was acquired by a corporation which is a member of a system group upon a transfer or distribution described in section 371 (d) (1), then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor; except that if such property is stock or securities issued by the corporation from which such stock or securities were received and they were issued (1) as the sole consideration for the property transferred to such corporation, then the basis of such stock or securities shall be either (A) the same as in the case of the property transferred therefor, or (B) the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt, whichever is the lower; or (2) as part consideration for the property transferred to such corporation, then the basis of such stock or securities shall be either (A) an amount which bears the same ratio to the basis of the property transferred as the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt bears to the total fair market value of the entire consideration received, or (B) the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt, whichever is the lower.

§ 39.372-1 Basis for determining gain or loss. (a) Section 113 (a) (17) provides that if property is acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, in any manner described in section 372 prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942, the basis shall be that provided in such section, prior to its amendment by such act, with respect to such property. Section 171 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1942 amended section 372 (a) Prior to such amendment, section 372 (a) read as follows:

(a) Exchanges generally. If the property was acquired upon an exchange subject to the provisions of section 371 (a), (b), or (e), the basis shall be the same as in the case of the property exchanged, decreased in the amount of any money received by the taxpayer and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the taxpayer that was recognized upon such exchange under the law applicable to the year in which the exchange was made. If the property so acquired consisted in part of the type of property permitted by section 371 (a) or (b) to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, and in part of nonexempt property, the basis provided in this subsection shall be allocated between the properties (other than money) received, and for the purpose of the allocation there shall be assigned to such nonexempt property (other than money) an amount equivalent to its fair market value at the date of the exchange. This subsection shall not apply to property acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer of the property to it.

(b) If the property was acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, in any manner described in section 372 (other than subsection (a) (2)) after its amendments, the basis shall be that prescribed in such section with respect to such property.

(c) Section 372 therefore expands section 113 (a) in order to make adequate provisions with respect to the basis of property acquired in a transfer made in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission in connection with which the recognition of gain or loss is prohibited by the provisions of section 112 (b) (8) and section 371 with respect to the whole or any part of the property received. In general and except as provided in § 39.372-3, it is intended that the basis for determining gain or loss pertaining to the property prior to its transfer, as well as the basis for determining the amount of depreciation or depletion deductible and the amount of earnings or profits available for distribution, shall continue notwithstanding the nontaxable conversion of the asset in form or its change in ownership. The continuance of the basis may be reflected in a shift thereof from one asset to another in the hands of the same owner, or in its transfer with the property from one owner into the hands of another. See also § 39.371-2.

§ 39.372-2 Basis of property acquired upon exchanges under section 371 (a) 371 (b) (prior to amendment by Revenue Act of 1942) or 371 (e). (a) In the case of an exchange of stock or securities for stock or securities as described in section 371 (a) or an exchange of property for property as described in section 371 (b) prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942 and in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, if no part of the gain or loss upon such exchange was recognized under section 371, the basis of the property acquired is the same as the basis of the property transferred by the taxpayer with proper adjustments to the date of the exchange. Section 371 (b) prior to its amendment by section 171 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1942, read as follows:

Exchanges of property for property by corporations. No gain or loss shall be recognized to a transferor corporation which is a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company, if such corporation, in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission transfers property solely in exchange for property (other than nonexempt property), and such order recites that such exchange by the transferor corporation is necessary or appropriate to the integration or simplification of the holding-company system of which the transferor corporation is a member.

(b) If, in an exchange of stock or securities as described in section 371 (a) or in an exchange of property for property as described in section 371 (b) prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942 and in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, gain to the taxpayer was recognized under section 371 (e) on account of the receipt of money, the basis of the property acquired is the basis of the property transferred (adjusted to the date of the exchange) decreased by the amount of money received and increased by the amount of gain recognized upon the exchange. If, upon such exchange, there were received by the taxpayer money and other nonexempt property (not permitted to be received without the recognition of gain), and gain from the transaction was recognized under section 371 (e) the basis (adjusted to the date of the exchange) of the property transferred by the taxpayer, decreased by the amount of money received and increased by the amount of gain recognized, must be apportioned to and is the basis of the properties (other than money) received on the exchange. For the purpose of the allocation of such basis to the properties received, there must be assigned to the nonexempt property (other than money) an amount equivalent to its fair market value at the date of the exchange.

(c) Section 371 (e) provides that no loss may be recognized on an exchange of stock or securities for stock or securities as described in section 371 (a) or on an exchange of property for property as described in section 371 (b) prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942 and in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, although the taxpayer receives money or other nonexempt property from the transaction. However, the basis of the property (other than money) received by the taxpayer is the basis (adjusted to the date of the exchange) of the property transferred, decreased by the amount of money received. This basis must be apportioned to the properties received, and for this purpose there must be allocated to the nonexempt property (other than money) an amount of such basis equivalent to the fair market value of such nonexempt property at the date of the exchange.

(d) Section 372 (a) does not apply in ascertaining the basis of property acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer of the property to it. For the rule in such cases, see section 372 (b)

§ 39.372–3 Reduction of basis of property by reason of gain not recognized under section 371 (b)—(a) Introductory. In addition to the adjustments provided in section 113 (b) and the regulations relating thereto, which are required to be made with respect to the cost or other basis of property section 372 (a) (2) provides that a further adjustment shall be made in any case in which there shall have been a nonrecognition of gain under section 371 (b) realized in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941. Such further adjustment shall be made with respect to the basis of the property in the hands of the transferor immediately after the transfer and of the property acquired within 24 months after such transfer by an expenditure or investment to which section 371 (b) relates, and on account of which expenditure or investment gain is not recognized. If the property is in the hands of the transferor immediately after the transfer, the time of reduction is the day of the transfer; in all other cases the time of reduction is the date of acquisition. The effect of applying an amount in reduction of basis of property under section 371 (b) is to reduce by such amount the basis for determining gain upon sale or other disposition, the basis for determining loss upon sale or other disposition, the basis for depreciation and for depletion, and any other amount which the Internal Revenue Code prescribes shall be the same as any of such bases. For the purposes of the application of an amount in reduction of basis under section 371 (b) property is not considered as having a basis capable of reduction if

(1) It is money, or

(2) If its adjusted basis for determining gain at the time the reduction is to be made is zero, or becomes zero at any time in the application of section 371 (b)

(b) General rule. (1) Section 372 (a) (2) sets forth seven categories of property the basis of which for determining gain or loss shall be reduced in the order stated.

(2) The first category consists of all property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l) which is either in the hands of the transferor immediately after the transfer, or is acquired within 24 months after such transfer by an expenditure or investment resulting in the nonrecognition in whole or in part of gain, under section 371 (b) If any of the property in such category has a basis capable of reduction, the reduction must first be made before applying an amount in reduction of the basis of any property in the second or in a succeeding category, to each of which in turn a similar rule is applied.

(3) In the application of the rule to each category the amount of the gain not recognized shall be applied to reduce the cost or other basis of all the property in the category as follows: The cost or other basis (at the time immediately after the transfer or, if the property is not then held but is thereafter acquired, at the time of such acquisition) of each unit of property in the first category shall be decreased (but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of the adjusted basis at such time for determining gain, determined without regard to this section) in an amount equal to such proportion of the unrecognized gain as the adjusted basis (for determining gain, determined without regard to this section) at such time of each unit of property of the taxpayer in that category bears to the aggregate of the adjusted basis (for determining gain, computed without regard to this section) at such time of all the property of the taxpayer in that category. When such adjusted basis of the property in the first category has been thus reduced to zero, a similar rule shall be applied, with respect to the portion of such gain which is unabsorbed in such reduction of the basis of the property in such category in reducing the basis of the property in the second category. A similar rule with respect to the remaining unabsorbed gain shall be applied in reducing the basis of the property in the next succeeding category.

(c) Special cases. (1) With the consent of the Commissioner, the taxpayer may, however, have the basis of the various units of property within a particular category specified in section 372 (a) (2) adjusted in a manner different from the general rule set forth in paragraph (b) of this section. Variations from such general rule may, for example, involve adjusting the basis of only certain units of the taxpayer's property within a given category. A request for variations from the general rule should be filed by the taxpayer with its return for the taxable year in which the transfer of property has occurred.

(2) Agreement between the taxpayer and the Commissioner as to any variations from such general rule shall be effective only if incorporated in a closing agreement entered into under the provisions of section 3760. If no such agreement is entered into by the taxpayer and the Commissioner, then the consent filed on Form 982A shall (except as otherwise provided in this subparagraph) be deemed to be a consent to the application of such general rule, and such general rule shall apply in the determination of the basis of the taxpayer's property. If, however, the taxpayer specifically states on such form that it does not consent to the application of the general rule, then, in the absence of a closing agreement, the document filed shall not be deemed a consent within the meaning of the last sentence of section 371 (b)

§ 39.372–4 Basis of property acquired by corporation under section 371 (a), 371 (b) or 371 (e) as contribution of capital or surplus, or in consideration for its own stock or securities. If, in connection with an exchange of stock or securities for stock or securities as described in section 371 (a) or an exchange of property for property as described in section 371 (b) or an exchange as described in section 371 (e) property is acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities, the basis of such property shall be determined under section 372 (b) If the corporation issued its stock or securities as part or sole consideration for the property acquired, the basis of the property in the hands of the acquiring corporation is the basis (adjusted to the date of the exchange) which the property would have had in the hands of the transferor if the transfer had not been made, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized under section 371 to the transferor upon the transfer. If any property is acquired by a corporation from a shareholder as paid-in surplus, or from any person as a contribution to capital, the basis of the property to the corporation is the basis (adjusted to the date of acquisition) of the property in the hands of the transferor.

§ 39.372–5 Basis of stock or securities acquired by shareholder upon tax-free distribution under section 371 (c) (a) Under section 372 (c) if there was distributed to a shareholder in a corporation which is a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company stock or securities (other than stock or securities which are nonexempt property) and if by virtue of section 371 (c) no gain was recognized to the shareholder upon such distribution, then the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made must be apportioned between such stock and the stock or securities so distributed to the shareholder.

(b) The basis of the old shares and the stock or securities received upon the distribution shall be determined in accordance with the following rules:

(1) If the stock or securities received upon the distribution consist solely of stock in the distributing corporation and the stock received is all of substantially the same character and preference as the stock in respect of which the distribution is made, the basis of each share will be the quotient of the cost or other basis of the old shares of stock divided by the total number of the old and the new shares.

(2) If the stock or securities received upon the distribution are in whole or in part stock in a corporation other than the distributing corporation, or are in whole or in part stock of a character or preference materially different from the stock in respect of which the distribution is made, or if the distribution consists in whole or in part of securities other than stock, the cost or other basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution is made shall be apportioned between such stock and the stock or securities distributed in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the respective values of each class of stock or security, old and new, at the time of such distribution, and the basis of each share of stock or unit of security will be the quotient of the cost or other basis of the class of stock or security to which such share or unit belongs, divided by the number of shares or units in the class. Within the meaning of this subparagraph stocks or securities in one corporation are different in class from stocks or securities in another corporation, and, in general, any material difference in character or preference or terms sufficient to distinguish one stock or security from another stock or security so that different values may properly be assigned thereto, will constitute a difference in class.

(c) As to the basis of stock or securities distributed by one member of a system group to another member of the same system group, see section 372 (d)

§ 39.372–6 Basis of property acquired under section 371 (d) in transactions between corporations of the same system group. (a) If property was acquired by a corporation which is a member of a system group, from a corporation which is a member of the same system group, upon a transfer or distribution described in section 371 (d) (1) then as a general rule the basis of such property in the hands of the acquiring corporation is the basis which such property would have had in the hands of the transferor if the transfer or distribution had not been made. Except as otherwise indicated in this section, this rule will apply equally to cases in which the consideration for the property acquired consists of stock or securities, money, and other property, or any of them, but it is contemplated that an ultimate true reflection of income will be obtained in all cases, notwithstanding any peculiarities in form which the various transactions may assume. See the example in § 39.371–6.

(b) An exception to the general rule set forth in paragraph (a) of this section is provided for in case the property acquired consists of stock or securities issued by the corporation from which such stock or securities were received. If such stock or securities were the sole consideration for the property transferred to the corporation issuing such stock or securities, then the basis of the stock or securities shall be (1) the same as the basis (adjusted to the time of the transfer) of the property transferred for such stock or securities, or (2) the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt, whichever is the lower. If such stock or securities constituted only part consideration for the property transferred to the corporation issuing such stock or securities, then the basis shall be an amount which bears the same ratio to the basis of the property transferred as the fair market value of such stock or securities on their receipt bears to the total fair market value of the entire consideration received, except that the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt shall be the basis therefor, if such value is lower than such amount.

(c) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Suppose the A Corporation has property with an adjusted basis of $600,000 and in an exchange in which section 371 (d) (1) is applicable, transfers such property to the B Corporation in exchange for a total consideration of $1,000,000, consisting of (1) cash in the amount of $100,000, (2) tangible property having a fair market value of $400,000 and an adjusted basis in the hands of the B Corporation of $300,000, and (3) stock or securities issued by the B Corporation with a par value and a fair market value as of the date of their receipt in the amount of $500,000. The basis to the B Corporation of the property received by it is $600,000, which is the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the A Corporation. The basis to the A Corporation of the assets (other than cash) received by it is as follows: Tangible property, $300,000, the adjusted basis of such property to the B Corporation, the former owner; stock or securities issued by the B Corporation, $300,000, an amount equal to 500,000/1,000,000ths of $600,000.

Example (2). Suppose that in example (1) the property of the A Corporation transferred to the B Corporation had an adjusted basis of $1,100,000 instead of $600,000, and that all other factors in the example remain the same. In such case the basis to the A Corporation of the stock or securities in the B Corporation is $500,000, which was the fair market value of such stock or securities at the time of their receipt by the A Corporation, and not the amount established as 500,000/1,000,000ths of $1,100,000, or $550,000.

§ 39.373 Statutory provisions; exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of Securities and Exchange Commission, definitions.

SEC. 373. Definitions. As used in this supplement—

(a) The term "order of the Securities and Exchange Commission" means an order issued after May 28, 1938, by the Securities and Exchange Commission which requires, authorizes, permits, or approves transactions described in such order to effectuate the provisions of section 11 (b) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, 49 Stat. 820 (U. S. C., Title 15, sec. 79k (b)), which has become or becomes final in accordance with law.

(b) The terms "registered holding company," "holding-company system," and "associate company" shall have the meanings assigned to them by section 2 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, 49 Stat. 804 (U. S. C., Supp. III, Title 15, sec. 79 (b), (c)).

(c) The term "majority-owned subsidiary company" of a registered holding company means a corporation, stock of which, representing in the aggregate more than 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of such corporation entitled to vote (not including stock which is entitled to vote only upon default or nonpayment of dividends or other special circumstances) is owned wholly by such registered holding company, or partly by such registered holding company and partly by one or more majority-owned subsidiary companies thereof, or by one or more majority-owned subsidiary companies of such registered holding company.

(d) The term "system group" means one or more chains of corporations connected through stock ownership with a common parent corporation if—

(1) At least 90 per centum of each class of the stock (other than (A) stock which is preferred as to both dividends and assets, and (B) stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends but which is not preferred as to assets but only if the total value of such stock is less than 1 per centum of the aggregate value of all classes of stock which are not preferred as to both dividends and assets) of each of the corporations (except the common parent corporation) is owned directly by one or more of the other corporations; and

(2) The common parent corporation owns directly at least 90 per centum of each class of the stock (other than stock which is preferred as to both dividends and assets) of at least one of the other corporations; and

(3) Each of the corporations is either a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company.

(e) The term "nonexempt property" means—

(1) Any consideration in the form of evidences of indebtedness owed by the transferor or a cancellation or assumption of debts or other liabilities of the transferor (including a continuance of encumbrances subject to which the property was transferred);

(2) Short-term obligations (including notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances) having a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding twenty-four months, exclusive of days of grace;

(3) Securities issued or guaranteed as to principal or interest by a government or subdivision thereof (including those issued by a corporation which is an instrumentality of a government or subdivision thereof);

(4) Stock or securities which were acquired from a registered holding company or an associate company of a registered holding company which acquired such stock or securities after February 28, 1938, unless such stock or securities (other than obligations described as nonexempt property in paragraph (1), (2), or (3)) were acquired in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission or were acquired with the authorization or approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission under any section of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, 49 Stat. 820 (U. S. C., Title 15, sec. 79k (b));

(5) Money, and the right to receive money not evidenced by a security other than an obligation described as nonexempt property in paragraph (2) or (3).

(f) The term "stock or securities" means shares of stock in any corporation, certificates of stock or interest in any corporation, notes, bonds, debentures, and evidences of indebtedness (including any evidence of an interest in or right to subscribe to or purchase any of the foregoing).

§ 39.373-1 Definitions—(a) Order of the Securities and Exchange Commission. (1) An order of the Securities and Exchange Commission as defined in section 373 (a) must be issued after May 28, 1938 (the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1938) and must be issued under the authority of section 11 (b) or 11 (e) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79k (b) (e)) to effectuate the provisions of section 11 (b) of such Act. In all cases the order must become or have become final in accordance with law· i. e., it must be valid, outstanding, and not subject to further appeal. See further sections 373 (a) and 371 (f)

(2) Section 11 (b) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 provides:

(b) It shall be the duty of the Commission, as soon as practicable after January 1, 1938:

(1) To require by order, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that each registered holding company, and each subsidiary company thereof, shall take such action as the Commission shall find necessary to limit the operations of the holding-company system of which such company is a part to a single integrated public-utility system, and to such other businesses as are reasonably incidental, or economically necessary or appropriate to the operations of such integrated public-utility system: Provided, however, That the Commission shall permit a registered holding company to continue to control one or more additional integrated public-utility systems, if, after notice and opportunity for hearing, it finds that—

(A) Each of such additional systems cannot be operated as an independent system without the loss of substantial economies which can be secured by the retention of control by such holding company of such system;

(B) All of such additional systems are located in one State, or in adjoining States, or in a contiguous foreign country; and

(C) The continued combination of such systems under the control of such holding company is not so large (considering the state of the art and the area or region affected) as to impair the advantages of localized management, efficient operation, or the effectiveness of regulation.

The Commission may permit as reasonably incidental, or economically necessary or appropriate to the operations of one or more integrated public-utility systems the retention of an interest in any business (other than the business of a public-utility company as such) which the Commission shall find necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors or consumers and not detrimental to the proper functioning of such system or systems.

(2) To require by order, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that each registered holding company, and each subsidiary company thereof, shall take such steps as the Commission shall find necessary to ensure that the corporate structure or continued existence of any company in the holding-company system does not unduly or unnecessarily complicate the structure, or unfairly or inequitably distribute voting power among security holders, of such holding-company system. In carrying out the provisions of this paragraph the Commission shall require each registered holding company (and any company in the same holding-company system with such holding company) to take such action as the Commission shall find necessary in order that such holding company shall cease to be a holding company with respect to each of its subsidiary companies which itself has a subsidiary company which is a holding company. Except for the purpose of fairly and equitably distributing voting power among the security holders of such company, nothing in this paragraph shall authorize the Commission to require any change in the corporate structure or existence of any company which is not a holding company, or of any company whose principal business is that of a public-utility company.

The Commission may by order revoke or modify any order previously made under this subsection, if, after notice and opportunity for hearing, it finds that the conditions upon which the order was predicated do not exist. Any order made under this subsection shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 24.

(3) Section 11 (e) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 provides:

(e) In accordance with such rules and regulations or order as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors or consumers, any registered holding company or any subsidiary company of a registered holding company may, at any time after January 1, 1936, submit a plan to the Commission for the divestment of control, securities, or other assets, or for other action by such company or any subsidiary company thereof for the purpose of enabling such company or any subsidiary company thereof to comply with the provisions of subsection (b). If, after notice and opportunity for hearing, the Commission shall find such plan, as submitted or as modified, necessary to effectuate the provisions of subsection (b) and fair and equitable to the persons affected by such plan, the Commission shall make an order approving such plan; and the Commission, at the request of the company, may apply to a court, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (f) of section 18, to enforce and carry out the terms and provisions of such plan. If, upon any such application, the court, after notice and opportunity for hearing, shall approve such plan as fair and equitable and as appropriate to effectuate the provisions of section 11, the court as a court of equity may, to such extent as it deems necessary for the purpose of carrying out the terms and provisions of such plan, take exclusive jurisdiction and possession of the company or companies and the assets thereof, wherever located; and the court shall have jurisdiction to appoint a trustee, and the court may constitute and appoint the Commission as sole trustee, to hold or administer, under the direction of the court and in accordance with the plan theretofore approved by the court and the Commission, the assets so possessed.

(b) Registered holding company, holding-company system, and associate company. (1) Under section 5 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79e) any holding company may register by filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission a notification of registration, in such form as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors or consumers. A holding company shall be deemed to be registered upon receipt by the Securities and Exchange Commission of such notification of registration. As used in this part, the term "registered holding company" means a holding company whose notification of registration has been so received and whose registration is still in effect under section 5 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. Under section 2 (a) (7) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (7)), a corporation is a holding company (unless it is declared not to be such by the Securities and Exchange Commission), if such corporation directly or indirectly owns, controls, or holds with power to vote 10 percent or more of the outstanding voting securities of a public-utility company (i. e., an electric utility company or a gas utility company as defined by such act) or of any other holding company. A corporation is also a holding company if the Securities and Exchange Commission determines, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that such corporation directly or indirectly exercises (either alone or pursuant to an arrangement or understanding with one or more other persons) such a controlling influence over the management or policies of any public-utility company (i. e., an electric utility company or a gas utility company as defined by such act) or holding company as to make it necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors or consumers that such corporation be subject to the obligations, duties, and liabilities imposed upon holding companies by the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. c. 2 C) An electric utility company is defined by section 2 (a) (3) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (3)) to mean a company which owns or operates facilities used for the generation, transmission, or distribution of electrical energy for sale, other than sale to tenants or employees of the company operating such facilities for their own use and not for resale; and a gas utility company is defined by section 2 (a) (4) of such act (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (4)) to mean a company which owns or operates facilities used for the distribution at retail (other than distribution only in enclosed portable containers, or distribution to tenants or employees of the company operating such facilities for their own use and not for resale) of natural or manufactured gas for heat, light, or power. However, under certain conditions the Securities and Exchange Commission may declare a company not to be an electric utility company or a gas utility company, as the case may be, in which event the company shall not be considered an electric utility company or a gas utility company.

(2) The term "holding-company system" has the meaning assigned to it by section 2 (a) (9) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (9)) and hence means any holding company, together with all its subsidiary companies (i. e., subsidiary companies within the meaning of section 2 (a) (8) of such act (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (8)) which in general include all companies 10 percent of whose outstanding voting securities is owned directly or indirectly by such holding company and all mutual service companies of which such holding company or any subsidiary company thereof is a member company. The term "mutual service company" means a company approved as a mutual service company under section 13 of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79m) The term "member company" is defined by section 2 (a) (14) of such act (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (14)) to mean a company which is a member of an association or group of companies mutually served by a mutual service company.

(3) The term "associate company" has the meaning assigned to it by section 2 (a) (10) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (15 U. S. C. 79b (a) (10)) and hence an associate company of a company is any company in the same holding-company system with such company.

(c) "Majority-owned subsidiary company." The term "majority-owned subsidiary company" is defined in section 373 (c) Direct ownership by a registered holding company of more than 50 percent of the specified stock of another corporation is not necessary to constitute such corporation a majority-owned subsidiary company. To illustrate, if the H Corporation, a registered holding company, owns 51 percent of the common stock of the A Corporation and 31 percent of the common stock of the B Corporation, and the A Corporation owns 20 percent of the common stock of the B Corporation (the common stock in each case being the only stock entitled to vote) both the A Corporation and the B Corporation are majority-owned subsidiary companies.

(d) System group. The term "system group" is defined in section 373 (d) to mean one or more chains of corporations connected through stock ownership with a common parent corporation, if at least 90 percent of each class of stock (other than (1) stock which is preferred as to both dividends and assets, and (2) stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends but which is not preferred as to assets but only if the total value of such stock is less than 1 percent of the aggregate value of all classes of stock which are not preferred as to both dividends and assets) of each of the corporations (except the common parent corporation) is owned directly by one or more of the other corporations, and if the common parent corporation owns directly at least 90 percent of each class of stock (other than stock preferred as to both dividends and assets) of at least one of the other corporations; but no corporation is a member of a system group unless it is either a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company. While the type of stock which must, for the purpose of this definition, be at least 90 percent owned may be different from the voting stock which must be more than 50 percent owned for the purpose of the definition of a majority-owned subsidiary company under section 373 (c) as a general rule both types of ownership tests must be met under section 373 (d) since a corporation, in order to be a member of a system group, must also be a registered holding company or a majority-owned subsidiary company.

(e) Nonexempt property. The term "nonexempt property" is defined by section 373 (e) to include—

(1) The amount of any consideration in the form of a cancellation or assumption of debts or other liabilities (including a continuance of encumbrances subject to which the property was transferred and including the amount of any consideration in the form of evidences of indebtedness owned by the transferor) To illustrate, if in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission the X Corporation, a registered holding company, transfers property to the Y Corporation in exchange for property (not nonexempt property) with a fair market value of $500,000, the X Corporation receives $100,000 of nonexempt property, if for example,

(i) The Y Corporation cancels $100,000 of indebtedness owed to it by the X Corporation;

(ii) The Y Corporation assumes an indebtedness of $100,000 owed by the X Corporation to another company, the A Corporation; or

(iii) The Y Corporation takes over the property conveyed to it by the X Corporation subject to a mortgage of $100,000.

(2) Short-term obligations (including notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances) having a maturity at the time of issuance of not exceeding 24 months, exclusive of days of grace.

(3) Securities issued or guaranteed as to principal or interest by a government or subdivision thereof (including those issued by a corporation which is an instrumentality of a government or subdivision thereof)

(4) Stock or securities which were acquired from a registered holding company which acquired such stock or securities after February 28, 1938, or an associate company of a registered holding company which acquired such stock or securities after February 28, 1938, unless such stock or securities were acquired in obedience to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission (as defined in section 373 (a)) or were acquired with the authorization or approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission under any section of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, and are not non-exempt property within the meaning of section 373 (e) (1) (2) or (3)

(5) Money, and the right to receive money not evidenced by a security other than an obligation described as nonexempt property in section 373 (e) (2) or (3) The term "the right to receive money" includes, among other items, accounts receivable, claims for damages, and rights to refunds of taxes.

(f) Stock or securities. The term "stock or securities" is defined in section 373 (f) for the purposes of sections 371 to 373, inclusive. As therein defined, the term includes voting trust certificates and stock rights or warrants.

SUPPLEMENT S—TAX OF SHAREHOLDERS OF PERSONAL SERVICE CORPORATIONS

SEC. 391. Applicability of supplement. If a personal service corporation (as defined in section 449) is exempt under such section for any taxable year from the excess profits tax imposed by such subchapter, the provisions of this Supplement shall be applicable with respect to each shareholder of such corporation who was a shareholder in such corporation on the last day of such taxable year of the corporation.

[Sec. 391 as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940; amended by sec. 304 (f), Excess Profits Tax Act 1950]

§ 39.391-1 Applicability of Supplement S. If a personal service corporation elects not to be subject to the excess profits tax for any taxable year, then Supplement S shall be applicable with respect to each person who was a shareholder of such corporation at the close of the taxable year of the corporation. For definition of a personal service corporation and for method of election, see section 449 and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.392 Statutory provisions; personal service corporations; undistributed Supplement S net income.

SEC. 392. Undistributed Supplement S net income. For the purposes of this chapter, the term "undistributed Supplement S net income" means the Supplement S net income (as defined in section 393) minus the amount of the dividends paid during the taxable year. For the purposes of this section the amount of dividends paid shall be computed in the same manner as provided in subsections (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), and (i) of section 27 for the purpose of the basic surtax credit provided in section 27.

[Sec. 392 as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940]

§ 39.392-1 Undistributed Supplement S net income. The term "undistributed Supplement S net income" means Supplement S net income (as defined in section 393) minus the amount of dividends paid by the corporation during the taxable year. For the method of computing dividends paid, see subsections (d) (e) (f) (g) (h) and (i) of section 27 and the regulations thereunder.

SEC. 393. Supplement S net income. For the purposes of this chapter "Supplement S net income" means the net income, except that there shall be allowed as additional deductions—

(a) The Federal income tax payable under this chapter for the taxable year; and

(b) In lieu of the deduction allowed by section 23 (q), contributions or gifts, payment of which is made within the taxable year, to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified, to an amount which does not exceed 15 per centum of the corporation's net income, computed without the benefit of this subsection and section 23 (q). For the purposes of this section, the net income shall be computed without regard to section 47 (c).

[Sec. 393 as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940; amended by sec. 135 (b) (3), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.393–1 Supplement S net income. (a) The term "Supplement S net income" means the net income as defined in section 21, but computed without the deduction allowed under section 23 (q) minus the sum of the following:

(1) The Federal income tax payable under chapter 1 for the taxable year; and

(2) The amount of contributions or gifts made to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified, to an amount which does not exceed 15 percent of the net income of the corporation computed without the benefit of sections 23 (q) and 393 (b)

In the case of a taxable year of less than 12 months on account of a change in the accounting period of the corporation, the corporate net income, as defined in section 21, is computed on the basis of the period included in the taxable year, and is not placed on an annual basis under the provisions of section 47 (c)

(b) The deductions allowed under section 393 for contributions or gifts made to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) are in lieu of deductions otherwise allowable under section 23 (q) and are allowable only for the taxable year in which such contributions or gifts are actually paid, regardless of when pledged and regardless of the method of accounting employed by the corporation in keeping its books and records.

(c) The provisions of paragraphs (g) and (h) of § 39.23 (o)–1 relating to (1) the statement in returns of the name and address of each organization to which a contribution or gift was made and the amount and the approximate date of the actual payment of the contribution or gift, (2) the substantiation of the claims for deductions when required by the Commissioner, and (3) the basis for calculation of the amount of a contribution or gift which is other than money are equally applicable to claims for deductions of amounts of contributions or gifts by corporations under section 393.

(d) The method of computing Supplement S net income may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, a personal service corporation, has for the calendar year 1952 a net income, as computed under chapter 1, of $190,000. The Federal income tax payable under chapter 1 for that year amounts to $93,300. Contributions or gifts payment of which is made during the taxable year to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified amount to $35,000. The Supplement S net income of the corporation is $76,700, computed as follows:

Net income under chapter 1		$190,000
Add: Contributions deductible in computing net income under section 21		10,000
Net income computed without the benefit of any deduction for contributions		200,000
Less: Federal income tax on $190,000	$93,300
Contributions deductible under section 393 (b) (15 percent of $200,000)	30,000
		123,300
Supplement S net income		76,700

SEC. 394. Corporation income taxed to shareholders—(a) General rule. The undistributed Supplement S net income of a personal service corporation shall be included in the gross income of the shareholders in the manner and to the extent set forth in this Supplement.

(b) Amount included in gross income. Each shareholder who, on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, was a shareholder in such corporation shall include in his gross income, as a dividend, for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends, the amount he would have received as a dividend if on such last day there had been distributed by the corporation, and received by the shareholders, an amount equal to the undistributed Supplement S net income of the corporation for its taxable year.

(c) Credit for obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities. Each such shareholder shall be allowed a credit against net income, for the purposes of the tax imposed by section 11, 13, 14, 201, 204, 207, or 362, of his proportionate share of the interest specified in section 25 (a) (1) or (2) which is included in the gross income of the corporation. For any taxable year of the corporation beginning after December 31, 1941, each such shareholder's proportionate share of such interest received by the corporation shall be his proportionate share of such interest (determined without regard to this sentence) reduced by so much of the deduction under section 23 (v) as is attributable to such share.

(d) Effect on capital account of personal service corporation. An amount equal to the undistributed Supplement S net income of the personal service corporation for its taxable year shall be considered as paid in as of the close of such taxable year as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, and the accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of such taxable year shall be correspondingly reduced, if such amount or any portion thereof is required to be included as a dividend in the gross income of the shareholders.

(e) Basis of stock in hands of shareholders. The amount required to be included in the gross income of the shareholder under subsection (b) shall, for the purpose of adjusting the basis of his stock with respect to which the distribution would have been made (if it had been made), be treated as having been reinvested by the shareholder as a contribution to the capital of the corporation; but only to the extent to which such amount is included in his gross income in his return, increased or decreased by any adjustment of such amount in the last determination of the shareholder's tax liability, made before the expiration of seven years after the date prescribed by law for filing the return.

(f) Period of limitation on assessment and collection. For period of limitation on assessment and collection without assessment, in the case of failure to include in gross income the amount properly includible therein under subsection (b), see section 275 (d).

[Sec. 394 as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940; amended by sec. 126 (h) Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.394–1 Taxability of shareholders. If a personal service corporation is exempt from the excess profits tax imposed under subchapter D of chapter 1 for any taxable year by reason of an election under section 449, the undistributed Supplement S net income of the corporation shall be treated as a dividend received by those who, at the close of the taxable year of the corporation, were the shareholders of the corporation and as such would have been entitled to receive such income as a dividend had it been distributed at that time. Each such shareholder for his taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends, shall include in his gross income his proportionate share of such undistributed Supplement S net income as though such proportionate share had been received as a dividend on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation. Such amount is to be determined by reference to the interest of the shareholder in the corporation, that is, by reference to the number of shares of stock owned and the relative rights of each class of stock if there are several classes of stock outstanding. Thus, if a personal service corporation has both common and preferred stock outstanding and the preferred shareholders are entitled to a specified dividend before any distribution may be made to the holders of the common stock, then the assumed distribution of the undistributed Supplement S net income must first be treated as a payment of the specified dividend on the preferred stock before any part may be allocated as a dividend on the common stock.

§ 39.394–2 Credit for interest on obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities. Each shareholder of a personal service corporation who as of the last day of the taxable year of the corporation is required to include in his gross income his proportionate share of the undistributed Supplement S net income of the corporation shall, for the purposes of the tax imposed by section 11 (normal tax on individuals), section 13 (normal tax on corporations), section 201 (tax on life insurance companies), section 204 (tax on insurance companies other than life or mutual), section 207 (tax on mutual insurance companies other than life or marine) or section 362 (tax on regulated investment companies) be allowed a credit against net income of his proportionate share of the interest specified in section 25 (a) (1), interest on United States obligations, or section 25 (a) (2), interest on obligations of instrumentalities of the United States, which is included in the gross income of the corporation. For reduction of credit for such interest on account of amortizable bond premium, see § 39.125 (c)–2.

§ 39.394–3 Effect on capital account of personal service corporation. If the undistributed Supplement S net income of a personal service corporation, or any portion thereof, for any taxable year is required to be included in the gross income of the shareholders, such undistributed Supplement S net income shall, for income and excess profits tax purposes, be treated as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, paid in as of the close of such taxable year and the accumulated earnings and profits of the corporation shall be correspondingly reduced.

§ 39.394-4 Basis of stock in hands of shareholders. If a shareholder of a personal service corporation is required to include in his gross income his proportionate part of the undistributed Supplement S net income of the corporation, the amount so included shall, for the purpose of adjusting the basis of his stock with respect to such proportionate part, be treated as a distribution actually made by the corporation and as a reinvestment in the corporation by the shareholder. It shall, however, be so treated only to the extent to which such amount is included in the return of the shareholder, increased or decreased by any adjustment of such amount in the last determination of the tax liability of the shareholder made before the expiration of seven years after the date prescribed by law for the filing of his return.

§ 39.395-396 Statutory provisions; personal service corporations; nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations; payment of shareholder's tax.

SEC. 395. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations. In the case of a shareholder taxable under section 211 (a) or 231 (a), his distributive share of the undistributed Supplement S net income of the corporation required to be included in the gross income shall be considered as a dividend received by him from sources within the United States.

[Sec. 395 as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940]

SEC. 396. Shareholder's tax paid by corporation. If a personal service corporation is exempt for any taxable year under section 449 from excess profits tax, it shall, at the time of filing its return, pay to the collector an amount equal to the amount that would be required by section 143 (b) or section 144 to be deducted and withheld by the corporation if any amount required by this Supplement to be included in the gross income of the shareholder had been, on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, paid to the shareholder in cash as a dividend. Such amount shall be collected and paid in the same manner as the amount of tax due in excess of that shown by the taxpayer upon a return in the case of a mathematical error appearing in the face of the return.

[Sec. 396, as added by sec. 502, Second Rev. Act 1940; amended by sec. 304 (f), Excess Profits Tax Act 1950]

§ 39.396-1 Tax of certain shareholders paid by the corporation. Since a shareholder's proportionate share of the undistributed Supplement S net income of a corporation electing not to be subject to the excess profits tax imposed under subchapter D of chapter 1 is taxable to such shareholder, the corporation is required, at the time of filing its income tax return under chapter 1, to pay to the district director an amount equal to the amount that would be required by section 143 (b) or section 144 to be deducted and withheld by the corporation had its undistributed Supplement S net income been actually paid in cash to its shareholders as a dividend on the last day of its taxable year.

SUPPLEMENT T—INDIVIDUALS WITH ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME OF LESS THAN $5,000

SEC. 400. Imposition of tax. In lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of each individual whose adjusted gross income for such year is less than $5,000, and who has elected to pay the tax imposed by this supplement for such year, a tax as follows:

§ 39.400–1 Scope and application of Supplement T (a) (1) In lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12, an individual may elect to pay the tax imposed by section 400 if his adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, regardless of the sources from which such income is derived and regardless of whether such income is computed on the cash basis or on the accrual basis.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A is employed at a salary of $4,600 for the calendar year 1952. In the course of such employment, he incurred travel expenses of $750 for which he was reimbursed during the year. Such items constitute his sole income for 1952. In such case the gross income is $5,350 but the amount of $750 is deducted from gross income in the determination of adjusted gross income and thus A's adjusted gross income for 1952 is $4,600. Hence, the adjusted gross income being less than $5,000, he may elect to pay his tax for 1952 under Supplement T. Similarly, in the case of an individual engaged in trade or business (excluding from the term "engaged in trade or business" the performance of personal services as an employee), there may be deducted from gross income in ascertaining adjusted gross income those expenses directly relating to the carrying on of such trade or business.

(b) (1) For the purposes of determining whether a taxpayer may elect to pay the tax under Supplement T, the amount of the adjusted gross income is controlling, without reference to the number of exemptions to which the taxpayer may be entitled.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If X has, as his only income for 1952, a salary of $5,800 and his spouse has no gross income and derives her entire support from X, then X's adjusted gross income is $5,800 (not $5,800 minus $1,200 or $4,600) and he is not, for such year, entitled to pay his tax under Supplement T. If, however, X has for 1952 a salary of $6,000 and incident to his employment he incurs expenses in the amount of $1,200 for travel, meals, and lodging while away from home, the adjusted gross income is $6,000 minus $1,200, or $4,800. In such case his adjusted gross income being less than $5,000, X may elect to pay the tax under Supplement T. If, however, X's wife has adjusted gross income of $200, thus bringing the aggregate adjusted gross income to $5,000 and his wife joins in a joint return, the taxpayer cannot elect to pay the tax under Supplement T.

(c) In the case of husband and wife, if their aggregate adjusted gross income is less than $5,000 and each is required to file a return both must, or neither can, elect to pay the tax under Supplement T. If, however, one of such spouses has adjusted gross income of $5,000 or more and the other spouse has adjusted gross income of less than $5,000, the latter spouse may elect to pay the tax under Supplement T provided that the other spouse elects to take the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa) The restrictions upon the right of a married person to elect to pay the tax under Supplement T are applicable unless such person is legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance on the last day of his taxable year or, in the event of the death of his spouse during the taxable year, upon the date of such death. For rules relative to the application of these restrictions, see paragraph (c) of § 39.23 (aa)–1.

(d) (1) To determine the amount of the tax, the individual ascertains the amount of his adjusted gross income, refers to the table set forth in section 400 which is applicable to the taxable year, ascertains the income bracket into which such income falls, and, using the number of exemptions applicable to his case, finds the tax in the vertical column having at the top thereof a number corresponding to the number of exemptions to which the taxpayer is entitled.

(2) The tax tables in section 400 contain, in certain instances, double columns, in one of which is shown the tax if the taxpayer is single (and not the head of a household) or married and files a separate return, and in the other of which is shown the tax if the taxpayer is the head of a household. In other instances, such tables contain triple columns, in the first of which is shown the tax if the taxpayer is single (and not the head of a household) or married and files a separate return, in the second of which is shown the tax if the taxpayer is the head of a household, and in the third of which is shown the tax if a joint return is filed. In the case of double or triple columns, the tax shall be determined by reference to the applicable column.

(3) Since the computations of tax shown in the tables in the case of a joint return reflect the income-splitting method provided in section 12 (d) the tax shown in the joint return column may be lower than that shown in the separate return column even though the amounts of adjusted gross income and the exemptions are the same. Thus, if H, a married man, has adjusted gross income of $4,925 for the calendar year 1952 and his wife has no gross income for such year and his only exemptions under section 25 (b) are the exemptions for himself and spouse under section 25 (b) (1) (A) the tax on a joint return under Supplement T, as shown in the second column applicable to a person with two exemptions, is $718. If H should file a separate return, his tax, as shown in the first column applicable to an individual with two exemptions, would be $747.

(e) If a joint return of a husband and wife is filed under the provisions of section 51 (b) (3) if the husband and wife have different taxable years solely because of the death of either spouse, and if the taxable year of the surviving spouse covered by such joint return begins in 1953 and ends in 1954, the taxable year of the deceased spouse covered by the joint return shall, for the purpose of determining the tax under section 400 and this section in respect of such joint return, be deemed to have ended on the date of the closing of the surviving spouse's taxable year.

(f) The fact that the taxable year is a period of less than 12 months resulting by reason of the death of the taxpayer does not prevent the application of Supplement T in the determination of the tax for such period.

(g) For treatment of taxable years beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, see § 39.108-1.

SEC. 401. Definition of "exemption" As used in the table in section 400, the term "number of exemptions" means the number of the exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) as credits against net income for purpose of the normal tax and the surtax imposed by sections 11 and 12.

[Sec. 401 as added by sec. 102 (a), Rev. Act 1941; amended by sec. 104 (b), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 5 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 102 (b) (10), Rev. Act 1945]

§ 39.401-1 Rules for application of tables in section 400. (a) The term "number of exemptions" means the number of exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) as credits against net income for the purpose of the normal tax and surtax imposed by sections 11 and 12. One exemption is allowed for the taxpayer; one exemption for his spouse if a joint return is made, or if a separate return is made by the taxpayer and his spouse has no gross income for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins and is not the dependent of another taxpayer for such calendar year; and one exemption for each dependent whose gross income for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins is less than $600. Additional exemptions are allowed under section 25 (b) (1) (B) and (C) for a taxpayer or spouse who has attained the age of 65 years and for a blind taxpayer or blind spouse. See § 39.25-2. After the number of exemptions is ascertained, the tax under Supplement T for the taxable year is determined by reference to the table contained in section 400 applicable to such taxable year and by reference to the column of such table appropriate to such number of exemptions and, in certain cases, appropriate to either the status of the taxpayer (whether single, head of household, or married) or kind of return (whether separate or joint) or both. The tax is the amount in such column shown on the line appropriate to the taxpayer's adjusted gross income.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, a married man whose duties as an employee require traveling away from his home, has as his sole gross income a salary of $5,000 for the calendar year 1952. His traveling expenses, including cost of meals and lodging, amount in such year to $750, and, hence, his adjusted gross income is $4,850. His wife, B, has as her sole income dividends of $85, and thus the aggregate adjusted gross income of A and B is $4,935. A has two dependent children neither of whom has any income. A and B file a joint return for 1952 on Form 1040, electing not to use the optional return Form 1040A. In such case four exemptions are allowable. The adjusted gross income falls within the tax bracket $4,900-$4,950. By referring to such tax bracket in Table II and to the column headed "4" therein, the tax is found to be $451.

Example (2). C, a married man, has as his sole income in 1952 wages of $4,000, and has two dependent children neither of whom has any income. His wife, D, has adjusted gross income of $400. C files a separate return for 1952 and is entitled to claim three exemptions. C's income falls within the tax bracket $4,600-$4,650, and hence, with three exemptions his tax is $533. No exemption is allowed with respect to D since D has gross income and a joint return was not filed.

Example (3). D, a married man with no dependents, attains the age of 65 years on September 1, 1952. The aggregate adjusted gross income of D and his wife for 1952 is $4,840. D and his wife file a joint return for 1952 and are entitled to three exemptions, one for each taxpayer and one additional exemption for D because of his age. Since the adjusted gross income of D and his wife falls within the tax bracket $4,800-$4,850, the tax on a joint return is $564.

SEC. 402. Manner and effect of election. The election referred to in section 400 shall be exercised in the manner provided in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. For cases in which election to take the standard deduction also constitutes an election to pay the tax imposed by this supplement, see section 23 (aa) (3) (D). For cases in which election to file a return without showing tax thereon constitutes an election to pay the tax imposed by this supplement, see section 51 (f). In the case of a head of a household electing to have his tax computed by the collector pursuant to the provisions of section 51 (f), the tax imposed by section 400 shall be computed without regard to the status of the taxpayer as a head of a household.

[Sec. 402 as added by sec. 102 (a), Rev. Act 1941; amended by sec. 5 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 301 (b) (2), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.402-1 Manner of election to compute tax under Supplement T—(a) In general. The taxpayer elects to pay his income tax under Supplement T either by (1) filing a return of his gross income on Form 1040A, prescribed in § 39.51-2, or (2) by filing a return on Form 1040 and electing in such return, in the manner prescribed in paragraph (b) of § 39.23 (aa)-1, to take the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa)

(b) Husband and wife. In the case of husband and wife, if the aggregate gross income of the spouses is less than $5,000, the election may be made by the filing of a return on Form 1040A, or by the filing of a return on Form 1040 and electing thereon to take the standard deduction. If one spouse has less than $5,000 gross income and the other spouse has gross income of $5,000 or more and the latter spouse, in filing his or her return, claims the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa), then the former spouse may file on Form 1040A and such filing shall constitute an election by such spouse to pay the tax imposed under Supplement T. If, however, the spouse with gross income of $5,000 or more, in filing his or her return, does not elect to take such standard deduction, then the other spouse may not elect to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T.

(c) Head of household. In the case of a head of a household electing to make his return on Form 1040A, the tax imposed by section 400 shall be computed without regard to the status of the taxpayer as the head of a household. See § 39.51-2.

(d) Revocability of election. An election under Supplement T, or the making of a return without regard to Supplement T, for any taxable year may be changed under the same circumstances that an election to take, or not to take, the standard deduction may be changed. See § 39.23 (aa)-1 (d).

§ 39.403-404 Statutory provisions; tax under Supplement T; credits; not allowed, taxpayers ineligible.

SEC. 403. Credits not allowed. For credits against tax and against net income not allowed, in the case of a taxpayer who elects to pay the tax imposed by this supplement, because of the fact that such election constitutes an election to take the standard deduction, see section 23 (aa).

[Sec. 403 as added by sec. 102 (a), Rev. Act 1941; amended by sec. 5 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

SEC. 404. Certain taxpayers ineligible. This supplement shall not apply to a nonresident alien individual, to a citizen of the United States entitled to the benefits of section 251, to an estate or trust, or to an individual making a return for a period of less than twelve months on account of a change in the accounting period. For provisions making both husband and wife ineligible to elect to pay the tax imposed by this supplement if either does not elect to take the standard deduction, see section 23 (aa) (4).

§ 39.404-1 Taxpayers to whom Supplement T is inapplicable—(a) In general. The following taxpayers are ineligible to file a return and pay the tax under Supplement T:

(1) A nonresident alien individual;

(2) A citizen of the United States entitled to the benefits of section 251,

(3) An estate or trust;

(4) An individual who makes a return for a period of less than 12 months on account of a change in the accounting period;

(5) An individual for whom a return is required for a fractional part of a year under section 146 (a)

(b) Husband and wife. For provisions making both husband and wife ineligible to elect to pay the tax under Supplement T if either spouse does not elect to take the standard deduction, see section 23 (aa) (4)

SUPPLEMENT U—TAXATION OF BUSINESS INCOME OF CERTAIN SECTION 101 ORGANIZATIONS

§ 39.421 Statutory provisions; imposition of tax on business income of certain section 101 organizations.

SEC. 421. Imposition of tax—(a) In general. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950—

(1) Upon the supplement U net income (as defined in subsection (c)) of every organization described in subsection (b) (1), a normal tax of 25 per centum of the supplement U net income, and a surtax of 22 per centum of the amount of the supplement U net income in excess of $25,000; except that (A) in the case of taxable years beginning before April 1, 1951, and ending after March 31, 1951, the normal tax shall be 28¾ per centum of the supplement U net income, and (B) in the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, the normal tax shall be 30 per centum of the supplement U net income.

(2) Upon the supplement U net income of every trust described in subsection (b) (2), a normal tax computed at the rate and in the manner provided in section 11 and a surtax computed at the rates and in the manner provided in section 12 (b). In making such computations for the purposes of this section, the term "the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 25" as used in section 11 shall be read as "the amount of the supplement U net income" and the term "surtax net income" as used in section 12 (b) shall be read as "supplement U net income"

(b) Organizations subject to tax—(1) Organizations taxable as corporations—(A) Organizations exempt under section 101 (1), (6), (7) and (14). The taxes imposed by subsection (a) (1) shall apply in the case of any organization (other than a church, a convention or association of churches, or a trust described in paragraph (2)) which is exempt, except as provided in this supplement, from taxation under this chapter by reason of paragraph (1), (6), or (7) of section 101. Such taxes shall also apply in the case of a corporation described in section 101 (14) if the income is payable to an organization which itself is subject to the tax imposed by subsection (a) or to a church or to a convention or association of churches.

(B) State colleges and universities. The taxes imposed by subsection (a) (1) shall apply in the case of any college or university which is an agency or instrumentality of any government or any political subdivision thereof, or which is owned or operated by a government or any political subdivision thereof or by any agency or instrumentality of any one or more governments or political subdivisions. Such taxes shall also apply in the case of any corporation wholly owned by one or more such colleges or universities.

(2) Trusts taxable at individual rates. The taxes imposed by subsection (a) (2) shall apply in the case of any trust which is exempt, except as provided in this supplement, from taxation under this chapter by reason of paragraph (6) of section 101 and which, if it were not for such exemption, would be subject to the provisions of supplement E.

(c) Definition of Supplement U net income. The term "Supplement U net income" of an organization means the amount by which its unrelated business net income (as defined in section 422) exceeds $1,000.

(d) Foreign organizations. The Supplement U net income of an organization described in subsection (b) (1) or (2) which is a foreign organization shall be its Supplement U net income derived from sources within the United States determined in accordance with the rules of section 119 and sections 212, 213 (a), 231 (c) and (d), and 232 (a).

[Sec. 421 as added by sec. 8, Current Tax Payment Act 1943; amended by sec. 1, Pub. Law 367 (80th Cong.); sec. 9, Pub. Law 384 (80th Cong.); sec. 301 (a), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 201 (d), Excess Profits Tax Act 1950; secs. 121 (e), 339 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.421-1 Imposition of tax—(a) Rates of tax. Section 421 (a) imposes a tax upon the Supplement U net income of certain organizations otherwise exempt from Federal income tax by reason of section 101 (1) (6) (7) or (14) The taxes imposed by section 421 (a) also apply in the case of any college or university which is an agency or instrumentality of any government or any political subdivision thereof, or which is owned or operated by a government or any political subdivision thereof or by any agency or instrumentality of any one or more governments or political subdivisions, and to any corporation wholly owned by one or more such colleges or universities. Under section 421 (a) (1), organizations described in section 421 (b) (1) (A) and in § 39.421-2 (a) (1) and organizations described in section 421 (b) (1) (B) and in § 39.421-2 (a) (2) are subject to—

(1) A normal tax of 25 percent on their Supplement U net income except that in the case of taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, the normal tax shall be 30 percent of the Supplement U net income, and

(2) A surtax of 22 percent on the amount of such income in excess of $25,000.

Under section 421 (a) (2), trusts described in section 421 (b) (2) and paragraph (b) of § 39.421-2 are subject to tax at the individual rates prescribed in sections 11 and 12 (b) For the purpose of computing the tax imposed by section 11 and section 12 (b) the term "the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 25" as used in section 11, and the term "surtax net income" as used in section 12 (b) shall each be read as "Supplement U net income" The credit of $100 against net income provided in section 163 (a) (1) in the case of a trust taxable under Supplement E is not allowed as a credit against Supplement U net income.

(b) Definition of Supplement U net income. The term "Supplement U net income" means the amount by which the unrelated business net income (as defined in section 422) of an organization exceeds $1,000.

§ 39.421-2 Organizations subject to tax. (a) (1) The taxes imposed by section 421 (a) (1) apply in the case of any organization (other than a church, a convention or association of churches, or a trust described in section 421 (b) (2) and in paragraph (b) of this section) which is exempt, except as provided in Supplement U, from taxation under chapter 1 by reason of paragraph (1), (6) or (7) of section 101. A corporation exempt from taxation under section 101 (14), holding property for an organization which itself is subject to the tax or for a church or a convention or association of churches, is also subject to the Supplement U tax under section 421 (a) (1)

(2) The taxes imposed by section 421 (a) (1) apply in the case of any college or university which is an agency or instrumentality of any government or any political subdivision thereof, or which is owned or operated by a government or any political subdivision thereof or by any agency or instrumentality of any one or more governments or political subdivisions. Such taxes also apply in the case of any corporation wholly owned by one or more such colleges or universities. As here used, the word "government" includes any foreign government (to the extent not contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States) and all domestic governments (the United States and any of its Territories or possessions, any State, and the District of Columbia) Elementary and secondary schools operated by such governments are not subject to the Supplement U tax.

(3) Churches and associations or conventions of churches are exempt from the Supplement U tax. The exemption is applicable only to an organization which itself is a church or an association or convention of churches. Religious organizations, including religious orders, if not themselves churches or associations or conventions of churches, and all other organizations which are organized or operated under church auspices, are subject to the Supplement U tax, whether or not they carry out a religious, educational, or charitable function approved by a church. For example, an incorporated university exempt from tax under section 101 (6) is subject to the Supplement U tax whether or not it was organized by or is operated under the auspices of a church.

(b) The taxes imposed by section 421 (a) (2) shall apply in the case of any trust which is exempt, except as provided in Supplement U, from taxation under chapter 1 by reason of section 101 (6) and which, if it were not for such exemption under section 101 (6) would be subject to the provisions of Supplement E of such chapter.

§ 39.421-3 Provisions generally applicable to Supplement U tax—(a) Assessment and collections. Since the taxes imposed by section 421 are taxes imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code, all provisions of law and of the regulations in this part applicable to the taxes imposed by chapter 1 are applicable to the assessment and collection of the taxes imposed by section 421. For the requirement as to the filing of returns, see paragraph (b) of this section. Organizations subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) (1) are subject to the same provisions, including penalties, as are provided in the case of the income tax of other corporations. In the case of a trust subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) (2) the fiduciaries for such trust are subject to the same provisions, including penalties, as are applicable to fiduciaries in the case of the income tax of other trusts. See sections 52, 53, 56, and 142, and the regulations prescribed thereunder, with respect to provisions applicable to returns and payment of tax.

(b) Returns. The return of Supplement U tax shall be on Form 990-T. The return shall be filed for each taxable year by every organization, otherwise exempt from tax under section 101 (1) (6) (7) or (14) and subject to the Supplement U tax, which has gross income, included in computing unrelated business net income for such taxable year, of $1,000 or more. A return shall also be filed for each taxable year by every governmental college or university and by every corporation wholly owned by such a college or university, which is subject to the Supplement U tax and which has gross income, included in computing unrelated business net income for such taxable year, of $1,000 or more. The filing of Form 990-T does not relieve the organization of the duty of filing other returns required under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) Taxable years, method of accounting, etc. The taxable year (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) of an organization shall be determined without regard to the fact that such organization may have been exempt from tax during any prior period. See sections 41 and 48, and the regulations thereunder. Similarly, in computing unrelated business net income, the determination of the taxable year for which an item of income or expense is taken into account shall be made under the provisions of sections 41, 42, and 43, and the regulations thereunder, whether or not the item arose during a taxable year beginning before, on, or after the effective date of the provisions imposing a tax upon Supplement U net income. If a method for treating bad debts was selected in a return of income (other than an information return) for a previous taxable year, the taxpayer must follow such method in its returns under Supplement U, unless such method is changed in accordance with the provisions of § 39.23 (k)-1. A taxpayer which has not previously selected a method for treating bad debts may, in its first return under Supplement U, exercise the option granted in § 39.23 (k)-1.

(d) Foreign tax credit. See section 424 for provisions applicable to the credit for foreign taxes provided in section 131.

SEC. 422. Unrelated business net income—(a) Definition. The term "unrelated business net income" means the gross income derived by any organization from any unrelated trade or business (as defined in subsection (b)) regularly carried on by it, less the deductions allowed by section 23 which are directly connected with the carrying on of such trade or business, subject to the following exceptions, additions, and limitations:

(1) There shall be excluded all dividends, interest, and annuities, and all deductions directly connected with such income.

(2) There shall be excluded all royalties (including overriding royalties) whether measured by production or by gross or net income from the property, and all deductions directly connected with such income.

(3) There shall be excluded all rents from real property (including personal property leased with the real property), and all deductions directly connected with such rents.

(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (3), in the case of a Supplement U lease (as defined in section 423 (a)) there shall be included, as an item of gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business, the amount ascertained under section 423 (d) (1) and there shall be allowed, as a deduction, the amount ascertained under section 423 (d) (2).

(5) There shall be excluded all gains or losses from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of property other than (A) stock in trade or other property of a kind which would properly be includible in inventory if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or (B) property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the trade or business. This paragraph shall not apply with respect to the cutting of timber which is considered, upon the application of section 117 (k) (1), as a sale or exchange of such timber.

(6) The net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) shall be allowed, except that—

(A) The net operating loss for any taxable year, the amount of the net operating loss carry-back or carry-over to any taxable year, and the net operating loss deduction for any taxable year shall be determined under section 122 without taking into account any amount of income or deduction which is excluded under this supplement in computing the unrelated business net income; and

(B) The terms "preceding taxable year" and "preceding taxable years" as used in section 122 shall not include any taxable year for which the organization was not subject to the provisions of this supplement.

(7) There shall be excluded all income derived from research for (A) the United States, or any of its agencies or instrumentalities, or (B) any State or political subdivision thereof; and there shall be excluded all deductions directly connected with such income.

(8) (A) In the case of a college, university, or hospital, there shall be excluded all income derived from research performed for any person, and all deductions directly connected with such income.

(B) In the case of an organization operated primarily for the purposes of carrying on fundamental research the results of which are freely available to the general public, there shall be excluded all income derived from research performed for any person, and all deductions directly connected with such income.

(9) (A) In the case of any organization described in section 421 (b) (1), the so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (q) shall be allowed (whether or not directly connected with the carrying on of the trade or business), but shall not exceed 5 per centum of the unrelated business net income computed without the benefit of this subparagraph.

(B) In the case of any trust described in section 421 (b) (2), the so-called "charitable contribution" deduction allowed by section 23 (o) shall be allowed (whether or not directly connected with the carrying on of the trade or business), and for such purpose a distribution made by the trust to a beneficiary described in section 23 (o) shall be considered as a gift or contribution. The deduction allowed by this subparagraph shall not exceed 15 per centum of the unrelated business net income computed without the benefit of this subparagraph.

If a trade or business regularly carried on by a partnership of which an organization is a member is an unrelated trade or business with respect to such organization, such organization in computing its unrelated business net income shall, subject to the exceptions, additions and limitations contained in paragraphs (1) through (9) above, include its share (whether or not distributed) of the gross income of the partnership from such unrelated trade or business and its share of the partnership deductions directly connected with such gross income. If the taxable year of the organization is different from that of the partnership, the amounts to be so included or deducted in computing the unrelated business net income shall be based upon the income and deductions of the partnership for any taxable year of the partnership (whether beginning on, before, or after January 1, 1951) ending within or with the taxable year of the organization. In the case of an organization described in section 3813 (a) (2) which is a member of a partnership all of whose members are organizations described in section 3813 (a) (2), if a trade or business regularly carried on by such partnership is an unrelated trade or business with respect to such organization, such organization shall, for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1954, be allowed a deduction in an amount equal to the portion of the gross income of such partnership from such unrelated trade or business which such organization is required (by a provision of a written contract executed by such organization prior to January 1, 1950, which provision expressly deals with the disposition of the gross income of the partnership) to pay within the taxable year in discharge of indebtedness incurred by such organization in acquiring its share of such trade or business, or to irrevocably set aside within the taxable year for the discharge of such indebtedness (to the extent that such amount has been so paid or set aside) if (i) such partnership was formed prior to January 1, 1950, for the purpose of carrying on such trade or business, and (ii) substantially all the assets used in carrying on such trade or business were acquired by it or by its members prior to such date. As used in the preceding sentence, the word "indebtedness" does not include indebtedness incurred after January 1, 1950.

(b) Unrelated trade or business. The term "unrelated trade or business" means, in the case of any organization subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a), any trade or business the conduct of which is not substantially related (aside from the need of such organization for income or funds or the use it makes of the profits derived) to the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 101 (or, in the case of an organization described in section 421 (b) (1) (B), to the exercise or performance of any purpose or function described in section 101 (6)), except that such term shall not include any trade or business—

(1) In which substantially all the work in carrying on such trade or business is performed for the organization without compensation; or

(2) Which is carried on, in the case of an organization described in section 101 (6) or in the case of a college or university described in section 421 (b) (1) (B), by the organization primarily for the convenience of its members, students, patients, officers, or employees; or

(3) Which is the selling of merchandise, substantially all of which has been received by the organization as gifts or contributions.

The term "unrelated trade or business" means, in the case of a trust computing its unrelated business net income under this section for the purpose of section 162 (g) (1), any trade or business regularly carried on by such trust or by a partnership of which it is a member. If a publishing business carried on by an organization during a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1953, is, without regard to this sentence, an unrelated trade or business, but before the beginning of the third succeeding taxable year the business is carried on by it (or by a successor who acquired such business in a liquidation which would constitute a tax-free exchange under section 112 (b) (6)) in such manner that the conduct thereof is substantially related to the exercise or performance by such organization (or such successor) of its educational or other purpose or function described in section 101 (6), such publishing business shall not be considered, for the taxable year, as an unrelated trade or business.

[Sec. 422 as added by sec. 301 (a), Rev. Act 1950; amended by secs. 339 (b), 347, 348, Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.422-1 Definition of unrelated business net income—(a) General rule. The unrelated business net income which is subject to the Supplement U tax is the gross income, derived by any organization to which Supplement U applies, from any unrelated trade or business regularly carried on by it, less the deductions allowed by section 23 of the Code which are directly connected with the carrying on of such trade or business, subject to certain exceptions, additions, and limitations referred to below. In the case of an organization which regularly carries on two or more unrelated businesses, its unrelated business net income is the aggregate of its gross income from all such unrelated businesses, less the aggregate of the deduction allowed with respect to all such unrelated businesses. For provisions generally applicable to the Supplement U tax, see § 39.421-3, and for rules applicable to the determination of the adjusted basis of property, see paragraph (a) of § 39.423-3.

(b) Exceptions, additions, and limitations. Whether a particular item of income falls within any of the exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in section 422 shall be determined by all the facts and circumstances of each case. For example, if a payment termed "rent" by the parties is in fact a return of profits by a person operating the property for the benefit of the tax-exempt organization or is a share of the profits retained by such organization as a partner or a joint venturer, such payment is not within the exception for rent. The exceptions, additions, and limitations provided in section 422 are as follows:

(1) Dividends, interest and annuities. All dividends, interest, and annuities, and the deductions directly connected therewith, shall be excluded in computing unrelated business net income.

(2) Royalties. Royalties, including overriding royalties, and all deductions directly connected with such income shall be excluded in computing unrelated business net income. Mineral royalties shall be excluded whether measured by production or by gross or net income from the mineral property. However, where an organization owns a working interest in a mineral property, and is not relieved of its share of the development costs by the terms of any agreement with an operator, income received from such an interest shall not be excluded. In-oil payments shall be treated in the same manner as royalty payments for the purpose of computing unrelated business net income.

(3) Rents. (i) Rents from real property (including personal property leased with the real property) and the deductions directly connected therewith shall also be excluded in computing unrelated business net income, except that certain rents from, and certain deductions in connection with, a Supplement U lease (as defined in section 423 (a)) shall be included in computing unrelated business net income. See §§ 39.423-3 and 39.423-4.

(ii) Payments for the use or occupancy of rooms or other space where services are also rendered to the occupant, such as for the use or occupancy of rooms or other quarters in hotels, boarding houses, or apartment houses furnishing hotel services, or in tourist camps or tourist homes, or for the use or occupancy of space in parking lots, warehouses, or storage garages, do not constitute rentals from real estate. Generally, services are considered rendered to the occupant if they are primarily for his convenience and are other than those usually or customarily rendered in connection with the rental of rooms or other space for occupancy only. The supplying of maid service, for example, constitutes such service; whereas the furnishing of heat and light, the cleaning of public entrances, exits, stairways and lobbies, the collection of trash, etc., are not considered as services rendered to the occupant. Payments for the use or occupancy of entire private residences or living quarters in duplex or multiple housing units, of offices in an office building, etc., are generally rentals from real estate.

(4) Gains and losses from the sale, etc., of property. There shall also be excluded from the computation of unrelated business net income gains or losses from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of property other than (i) stock in trade or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the organization if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or (ii) property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the trade or business. This exclusion does not apply with respect to the cutting of timber which is considered, upon the application of section 117 (k) (1), as a sale or exchange of such timber. The exclusion under section 422 (a) (5) applies with respect to gains and losses from involuntary conversions, casualties, etc.

(5) Net operating losses. The net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) shall be allowed in computing unrelated business net income. However, the net operating loss carry-back or carry-over (from a taxable year for which the taxpayer is subject to the provisions of Supplement U) shall be determined under section 122 without taking into account any amount of income or deduction which is not included under Supplement U in computing unrelated business net income. For example, a loss attributable to an unrelated trade or business shall not be diminished by reason of the receipt of dividend income. For the purpose of computing the net operating loss deduction, the terms "preceding taxable year" and "preceding taxable years" as used in section 122 shall not include any taxable year for which the organization was not subject to the provisions of Supplement U. Thus, if the organization was not subject to the provisions of Supplement U for the immediately preceding taxable year, the net operating loss is not a carry-back to any preceding taxable year, and the net operating loss carry-over to succeeding taxable years is not reduced by the net income for any preceding taxable year. A net operating loss carry-back or carry-over shall be allowed only from a taxable year for which the taxpayer is subject to the provisions of Supplement U.

(6) Research. (i) Income derived from research for the United States or any of its agencies or instrumentalities or a State or political subdivision thereof, and all deductions directly connected with such income, shall be excluded in computing unrelated business net income.

(ii) In the case of a college, university, or hospital, all income derived from research performed for any person and all deductions directly connected with such income shall be excluded in computing unrelated business net income.

(iii) In the case of an organization operated primarily for the purpose of carrying on fundamental research (as distinguished from applied research) the results of which are freely available to the general public, all income derived from research performed for any person and all deductions directly connected with such income shall be excluded in computing unrelated business net income.

(iv) For the purpose of this section, the term "research" does not include activities of a type ordinarily carried on as an incident to commercial or industrial operations, for example, the ordinary testing or inspection of materials or products or the designing or construction of equipment, buildings, etc. The term "fundamental research" does not include research carried on for the primary purpose of commercial or industrial application.

(7) Charitable, etc., contributions. (i) In computing the unrelated business net income of a trust described in section 421 (b) (2) or of an organization described in section 421 (b) (1) there shall be deducted from gross income the amount allowed by section 23 (o) or 23 (q) whichever is applicable, whether or not the contribution is directly connected with the carrying on of the trade or business. This deduction shall be limited to 15 percent, if computed under section 23 (o) or 5 percent, if computed under section 23 (q) of the unrelated business net income computed without benefit of such deduction. In the case of a trust described in section 421 (b) (2) distributions made pursuant to the trust instrument to a beneficiary described in section 23 (o) shall be treated in the same manner as gifts or contributions.

(ii) The contribution, whether made by a trust or other exempt organization, must be paid to another organization to be allowable. For example, a university exempt from tax under section 101 (6) operating an unrelated business, shall be allowed a deduction, not in excess of 5 percent of its unrelated business net income, for gifts or contributions to another university for educational work but shall not be allowed any deduction for amounts expended in administering its own educational program.

§ 39.422-2 Organizations that are members of partnerships—(a) In general. In the event an organization to which Supplement U applies is a member of a partnership regularly engaged in a trade or business which is an unrelated trade or business with respect to such organization, the organization shall include in computing its unrelated business net income so much of its share (whether or not distributed) of the partnership gross income as is derived from that unrelated business and its share of the deductions attributable thereto. For this purpose, both the gross income and the deductions shall be computed with the necessary adjustments for the exceptions, additions, and limitations referred to in section 422 (a) and in § 39.422-1. For example, if an exempt educational institution is a partner in a partnership which operates a factory and if such partnership also holds stock in a corporation, the exempt organization shall include in computing its unrelated business net income its share of the gross income from the operation of the factory, but not its share of any dividends received by the partnership from the corporation. If the taxable year of the organization differs from that of the partnership, the amounts included or deducted in computing unrelated business net income shall be based upon the income and deductions of the partnership for each taxable year of the partnership ending within or with the taxable year of the organization.

(b) Special rule. For a special rule, applicable only with respect to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1954, with respect to unrelated trades or businesses carried on in partnership by certain educational organizations described in section 3813 (a) (2) see the last two sentences of section 422 (a).

§ 39.422-3 Definition of unrelated trade or business—(a) In general. (1) As used in section 422 (a) the term "unrelated business net income" includes only income from an unrelated trade or business regularly carried on, and the term "trade or business" has the same meaning as it has in section 23 (a) (1)

(2) The income of an exempt organization is subject to the Supplement U tax only if two conditions are present with respect to such income. The first condition is that the income must be from a trade or business which is regularly carried on by the organization. The second condition is that the trade or business must not be substantially related (aside from the need of the organization for income or funds or the use it makes of the profits derived) to the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 101, or, in the case of an organization described in section 421 (b) (1) (B) (governmental colleges, etc.) to the exercise or performance of any purpose or function described in section 101 (6) Whether or not an organization is subject to the Supplement U tax shall be determined by the application of these tests to the particular circumstances involved in each individual case. For certain exceptions from the term "unrelated trade or business", see paragraph (b) of this section.

(3) A trade or business is regularly carried on when the activity is conducted with sufficient consistency to indicate a continuing purpose of the organization to derive some of its income from such activity. An activity may be regularly carried on even though its performance is infrequent or seasonal.

(4) Ordinarily, a trade or business is substantially related to the activities for which an organization is granted exemption if the principal purpose of such trade or business is to further (other than through the production of income) the purpose for which the organization is granted exemption. In the usual case the nature and size of the trade or business must be compared with the nature and extent of the activities for which the organization is granted exemption in order to determine whether the principal purpose of such trade or business is to further (other than through the production of income) the purpose for which the organization is granted exemption. For example, the operation of a wheat farm is substantially related to the exempt activity of an agricultural college if the wheat farm is operated as a part of the educational program of the college, and is not operated on a scale disproportionately large when compared with the educational program of the college. Similarly, a university radio station or press is considered a related trade or business if operated primarily as an integral part of the educational program of the university, but is considered an unrelated trade or business if operated in substantially the same manner as a commercial radio station or publishing house. A trade or business not otherwise related does not become substantially related to an organization's exempt purpose merely because incidental use is made of the trade or business in order to further the exempt purpose. For example, the manufacture and sale of a product by an exempt college would not become substantially related merely because students as part of their educational program perform clerical or bookkeeping functions in the business. In some cases, the business may be substantially related because it is a necessary part of the exempt activity. For example, in the case of an organization exempt under section 101 (6) and engaged in the rehabilitation of handicapped persons, the business of selling articles made by such persons as a part of their rehabilitation training would not be considered an unrelated business since such business is a necessary part of the rehabilitation program.

(b) Exceptions. Section 422 (b) specifically states that the term "unrelated trade or business" does not include—

(1) Any trade or business in which substantially all the work in carrying on such trade or business is performed for the organization without compensation; or

(2) Any trade or business carried on by an organization exempt under section 101 (6) or by a governmental college or university described in section 421 (b) (1) (B) primarily for the convenience of its members, students, patients, officers, or employees; or

(3) Any trade or business which consists of selling merchandise, substantially all of which has been received by the organization as gifts or contributions.

An example of the operation of the first of the exceptions mentioned above would be an exempt orphanage operating a retail store and selling to the general public, where substantially all the work in carrying on such business is performed for the organization by volunteers without compensation. An example of the second limitation would be a laundry operated by a college for the purpose of laundering dormitory linens and the clothing of students. The third exception applies to so-called "thrift shops" operated by a tax-exempt organization where those desiring to benefit such organization contribute old clothes, books, furniture, etc., to be sold to the general public with the proceeds going to the exempt organization.

(c) Special rule respecting publishing businesses. For a special rule, applicable only with respect to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1953, with respect to publishing businesses carried on by an organization, see section 422 (b)

§ 39.423 Statutory provisions; treatment of Supplement U lease in determination of unrelated business net income.

SEC. 423. Supplement U lease—(a) Definition of supplement U lease. The term "supplement U lease" means a lease for a term of more than five years of real property by an organization (or by a partnership of which it is a member), if at the close of the lessor's taxable year there is a supplement U lease indebtedness (as defined in subsection (b)) with respect to such property. In computing the term of a lease which contains an option for renewal or extension, the term of such lease shall be considered as including any period for which such option may be exercised; and the term of any lease made pursuant to an exercise of such option shall include the period during which the prior lease was in effect. If real property is acquired subject to a lease, the term of such lease shall be considered to begin on the date of such acquisition. No lease shall be considered a supplement U lease if (A) such lease is entered into primarily for purposes which are substantially related (aside from the need of such organization for income or funds or the use it makes of the rents derived) to the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 101, or (B) the lease is of premises in a building primarily designed for occupancy, and occupied, by the organization. If a lease for more than five years to a tenant is for only a portion of the real property, and space in the real property is rented during the taxable year under a lease for not more than five years to any other tenant of the organization, leases of the real property for more than five years shall be considered as supplement U leases during the taxable year only if—

(1) The rents derived from the real property during the taxable year under such leases represent 50 per centum or more of the total rents derived during the taxable year from the real property; or the area of the premises occupied under such leases represents, at any time during the taxable year, 50 per centum or more of the total area of the real property rented at such time; or

(2) The rent derived from the real property during the taxable year from any tenant under such a lease, or from a group of tenants (under such leases) who are (A) members of an affiliated group (as defined in section 141) or (B) partners, represents more than 10 per centum of the total rents derived during the taxable year from such property; or the area of the premises occupied by any one such tenant, or by any such group of tenants, represents at any time during the taxable year more than 10 per centum of the total area of the real property rented at such time.

(b) Supplement U lease indebtedness. The term "supplement U lease indebtedness" means, with respect to any real property leased for a term of more than five years, the unpaid amount of—

(1) The indebtedness incurred by the lessor in acquiring or improving such property;

(2) The indebtedness incurred prior to the acquisition or improvement of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition or improvement; and

(3) The indebtedness incurred subsequent to the acquisition or improvement of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition or improvement and the incurrence of such indebtedness was reasonably foreseeable at the time of such acquisition or improvement.

Where real property is acquired subject to a mortgage or other similar lien, the amount of the indebtedness secured by such mortgage or lien shall be considered (whether the acquisition was by gift, devise, or purchase) as an indebtedness of the lessor incurred in acquiring such property even though the lessor did not assume or agree to pay such indebtedness, except that where real property was acquired by gift, bequest, or devise prior to July 1, 1950, subject to a mortgage or other similar lien, the amount of such mortgage or other similar lien shall not be considered as an indebtedness of the lessor incurred in acquiring such property. Where real property was acquired by gift, bequest, or devise prior to July 1, 1950, subject to a lease requiring improvements in such property upon the happening of stated contingencies, indebtedness incurred in improving such property in accordance with the terms of such lease shall not be considered as an indebtedness for purposes of this subsection. In the case of a corporation described in section 101 (14), all of the stock of which was acquired prior to July 1, 1950, by an organization described in paragraph (1), (6), or (7) of section 101 (and more than one-third of such stock was acquired by such organization by gift or bequest), any indebtedness incurred by such corporation prior to July 1, 1950, and any indebtedness incurred by such corporation on or after such date in improving real property in accordance with the terms of a lease entered into prior to such date, shall not be considered as an indebtedness with respect to such corporation or such organization for purposes of this subsection. In determining the amount of the supplement U lease indebtedness where only a portion of the real property is subject to a supplement U lease, proper allocation to the premises covered by such lease shall be made of the indebtedness incurred by the lessor with respect to the real property.

(c) Personal property leased with real property. For the purposes of this section, the term "real property" and the term "premises" include personal property of the lessor leased by it to a lessee of its real estate if the lease of such personal property is made under, or in connection with, the lease of such real estate.

(d) Treatment of Supplement U lease rents and deductions. In computing under section 422 (a) the unrelated business net income for any taxable year—

(1) Percentage of rents taken into account. There shall be included with respect to each Supplement U lease, as an item of gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business, an amount which is the same percentage (but not in excess of 100 per centum) of the total rents derived during the taxable year under such lease as (A) the Supplement U lease indebtedness, at the close of the taxable year, with respect to the premises covered by such lease is of (B) the adjusted basis, at the close of the taxable year, of such premises.

(2) Percentage of deductions taken into account. There shall be allowed with respect to each Supplement U lease, as a deduction to be taken into account in computing unrelated business net income, an amount which is the same percentage (but not in excess of 100 per centum) of the sum determined under paragraph (3) as the amount determined under clause (A) of paragraph (1) is of the amount determined under clause (B) of such paragraph.

(3) Deductions allowable. The sum referred to in paragraph (2) is the sum of the following deductions allowable under section 23:

(A) Taxes and other expenses paid or accrued during the taxable year upon or with respect to the real property subject to the Supplement U lease.

(B) Interest paid or accrued during the taxable year on the Supplement U lease indebtedness.

(C) A reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear and tear (including a reasonbale allowance for obsolescence) of the real property subject to such lease.

Where only a portion of the real property is subject to the Supplement U lease, there shall be taken into account under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) only those amounts which are properly allocable to the premises covered by such lease.

[Sec. 423 as added by sec. 301 (a), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.423-1 Definition of Supplement U lease—(a) In general. The term "Supplement U lease" means any lease, with certain exceptions discussed in paragraph (c) of this section, for a term of more than five years of real property by an organization subject to Supplement U (or by a partnership of which it is a member) if at the close of the organization's taxable year there is a Supplement U lease indebtedness as defined in section 423 (b) and § 39.423-2, with respect to such property. For the purpose of section 423, the term "real property" and the term "premises" include personal property of the lessor tax-exempt organization leased by it to a lessee of its real estate if the lease of such personal property is made under, or in connection with, the lease of such real estate. For amounts of Supplement U rents and deductions to be included in computing unrelated business net income, see § 39.423-3.

(b) Special rules. (1) In computing the term of the lease, the period for which a lease may be renewed or extended by reason of an option contained therein shall be considered as part of the term. For example, a 3-year lease with an option for renewal for another such period is considered a lease for a term of six years. Another example is the case of a 1-year lease with option of renewal for another such term, where the parties at the end of each year renew the arrangement. In this case, during the fifth year (but not during the first four years) the lease falls within the 5-year rule, since the lease then involves five years and there is an option for the sixth year. In determining the term of the lease, an option for renewal of the lease is taken into account whether or not the exercise of the option depends upon conditions or contingencies.

(2) If the property is acquired subject to a lease, the term of such lease shall be considered to begin on the date of such acquisition. For example, if an exempt organization purchases, in whole or in part with borrowed funds, real property subject to a 10-year lease which has three years left to run, and such lease contains no right of renewal or extension, the lease shall be considered a 3-year lease and hence does not meet the definition of a Supplement U lease in section 423 (a) and paragraph (a) of this section. However, if this lease contains an option to renew for a period of three years or more, it is a Supplement U lease.

(c) Exceptions. (1) A lease shall not be considered a Supplement U lease if such lease is entered into primarily for a purpose which is substantially related (aside from the need of such organization for income or funds, or the use it makes of the rents derived) to the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption. For example, where a tax-exempt hospital leases real property owned by it to an association of doctors for use as a clinic, the rents derived under such lease would not be included in computing unrelated business net income if the clinic is substantially related to the carrying on of hospital functions. See § 39.422-3 for principles applicable in determining whether there is a substantial relationship to the exempt purposes of an organization.

(2) A lease is not a Supplement U lease if the lease is of premises in a building primarily designed for occupancy and occupied by the tax-exempt organization.

(3) If a lease for more than five years to a tenant is for only a portion of the real property, and space in the real property is rented during the taxable year under a lease for not more than 5 years to any other tenant of the tax-exempt organization, leases of the real property for more than five years shall be considered as Supplement U leases during the taxable year only if—

(i) The rents derived from the real property during the taxable year under such leases represent 50 percent or more of the total rents derived during the taxable year from the real property; or the area of the premises occupied under such leases represents, at any time during the taxable year, 50 percent or more of the total area of the real property rented at such time; or

(ii) The rent derived from the real property during the taxable year from any tenant under such a lease, or from a group of tenants (under such leases) who are either members of an affiliated group (as defined in section 141) or are partners, represents more than 10 percent of the total rents derived during the taxable year from such property; or the area of the premises occupied by any one such tenant, or by any such group of tenants, represents at any time during the taxable year more than 10 percent of the total area of the real property rented at such time.

(4) The application of subparagraph (3) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1952 an educational organization, which is on the calendar year basis, begins the erection of an 11-story apartment building using funds borrowed for that purpose, and immediately leases for a 10-year term the first floor to a real estate development company to sublet for stores and shops. As fast as the new apartments are completed, they are rented on an annual basis. At the end of 1957 all except the tenth and eleventh floors are rented. These two floors are completed during 1958 and rented. Assume that for 1952 and each subsequent taxable year through 1957, and for the taxable year 1961, the gross rental for the first floor represents more than 10 percent of the total gross rents derived during the taxable year from the building. Under this set of facts the 10-year lease of the first floor would be considered to be a Supplement U lease for all except the taxable years 1959, 1960, and 1962.

§ 39.423-2 Supplement U lease indebtedness—(a) Definition. The term "Supplement U lease indebtedness" means, with respect to any real property leased by a tax-exempt organization for a term of more than five years, the unpaid amount of—

(1) The indebtedness incurred by the lessor tax-exempt organization in acquiring or improving such property;

(2) The indebtedness incurred by the lessor tax-exempt organization prior to the acquisition or improvement of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition or improvement; and

(3) The indebtedness incurred by the lessor tax-exempt organization subsequent to the acquisition or improvement of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition or improvement and the incurrence of the indebtedness was reasonably forseeable at the time of such acquisition or improvement.

See paragraph (f) of this section with respect to subsidiary corporations.

(b) Examples. The rules of paragraph (a) of this section respecting Supplement U leases also cover certain cases where the leased property itself is not subject to an indebtedness. For example, they apply to cases such as the following:

Example (1). A university pledges some of its investment securities with a bank for a loan and uses the proceeds of such loan to purchase (either directly or through a subsidiary corporation) a building, which building is subject to a lease that then has more than five years to run. This would be an example of a Supplement U lease indebtedness incurred prior to the acquisition of the property which would not have been incurred but for such acquisition.

Example (2). If the building itself in example (1) in this paragraph is later mortgaged to raise funds to release the pledged securities, the lease would continue to be a Supplement U lease.

Example (3). If a scientific organization mortgages its laboratory building to replace working capital used in remodeling another one of its buildings or a building held by its subsidiary corporation, which other building is free of indebtedness and is subject to a lease that then has more than five years to run, the lease would be a Supplement U lease inasmuch as the indebtedness though incurred subsequent to the improvement of such property would not have been incurred but for such improvement, and the incurrence of the indebtedness was reasonably forseeable when, to make such improvement, the organization reduced its working capital below the amount necessary to continue current operations.

(c) Lease of part of property. Where only a portion of the real property is subject to a Supplement U lease, proper allocation of the indebtedness applicable to the whole property must be made to the premises covered by the lease.

(d) Property acquired subject to lien. Where real property is acquired subject to a mortgage or similar lien, whether the acquisition be by gift, bequest, devise, or purchase, the amount of the indebtedness secured by such mortgage or lien is a Supplement U lease indebtedness (unless paragraph (e) (1) of this section applies) even though the lessor does not assume or agree to pay the indebedness. For example, a university pays $100,000 for real estate valued at $300,000 and subject to a $200,000 mortgage. For the purpose of the Supplement U tax, the result is the same as if $200,000 of borrowed funds had been used to buy the property.

(e) Exceptions. (1) Where real property was acquired by gift, bequest, or devise, before July 1, 1950, subject to a mortgage or other similar lien, the amount of such mortgage or other similar lien shall not be considered as an indebtedness of the lessor tax-exempt organization incurred in acquiring such property. An indebtedness not otherwise covered by this exception is not brought within the exception by reason of a transfer of the property between a parent and its subsidiary corporation.

(2) Where real property was acquired by gift, bequest, or devise, before July 1, 1950, subject to a lease requiring improvements in such property upon the happening of stated contingencies, indebtedness incurred in improving such property in accordance with the terms of such lease shall not be considered as indebtedness described in section 423 (b) and in this section. An indebtedness not otherwise covered by this exception is not brought within the exception by reason of a transfer of the property between a parent and its subsidiary corporation.

(3) In the case of a corporation described in section 101 (14) all of the stock of which was acquired before July 1, 1950, by an organization described in paragraph (1), (6) or (7) of section 101 (and more than one-third of such stock was acquired by such organization by gift or bequest), any indebtedness incurred by such corporation before July 1, 1950, and any indebtedness incurred by such corporation on or after such date in improving real property in accordance with the terms of a lease entered into before such date, with respect to either such section 101 (14) corporation or such section 101 (1) (6), or (7) organization, shall not be considered an indebtedness described in section 423 (b) and in this section.

(f) Subsidiary corporations. The provisions of section 423 are applicable whether or not a subsidiary corporation of the type exempt under section 101 (14) is availed of in making the Supplement U lease. For example, assume a parent organization borrows funds to purchase realty and sets up a separate section 101 (14) corporation as a subsidiary to hold the property. Such subsidiary corporation leases the property for a period of more than five years, collects the rents and pays over all of the income, less expenses, to the parent organization, the parent organization being liable for the indebtedness. Under these assumed facts, the lease by the section 101 (14) subsidiary corporation would be a Supplement U lease with respect to such subsidiary corporation, and the rental income would be subject to the tax, whether or not the subsidiary itself assumes the indebtedness and whether or not the property is subject to the indebtedness.

§ 39.423-3 Treatment of rent from Supplement U lease—(a) General rule. There shall be included with respect to each Supplement U lease, as an item of gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business, an amount which is the same percentage (but not in excess of 100 percent) of the total rents derived during the taxable year under such lease as—

(1) The amount of the Supplement U lease indebtedness at the close of the taxable year of the lessor tax-exempt organization, with respect to the premises covered by such lease, is of

(2) The adjusted basis of such premises at the close of such taxable year.

The basis (unadjusted) of property is determined under section 113 (a) and the adjusted basis of property is determined under section 113 (b) The determination of the adjusted basis of property is not affected by the fact that the organization was exempt from tax for prior taxable years. Proper adjustment must be made under section 113 (b) for the entire period since the acquisition of the property. Thus, adjustment must be made for depreciation for all prior taxable years whether or not the organization was exempt from tax for any of such years. Similarly for taxable years during which the organization is subject to Suplement U, the fact that only a portion of the deduction for depreciation is taken into account under section 423 (d) does not affect the amount of the adjustment for depreciation.

(b) Examples. The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples, in each of which it is assumed that the taxpayer makes its returns under Supplement U on the basis of the calendar year, and that the lease is not substantially related to the purpose for which the organization is granted exemption from tax.

Example (1). Assume that a tax-exempt educational organization purchased property in 1942 for $600,000, using borrowed funds, and leased the building for a period of 20 years. Assume further that the adjusted basis of such building at the close of 1952 is $500,000. If, at the close of 1952, $200,000 of the indebtedness incurred to acquire the property remains outstanding, since this is two-fifths of the adjusted basis of the building at the close of 1952, two-fifths of the gross rental received from the building during 1952 shall be included as an item of gross income in computing unrelated business net income. If, at the close of a subsequent taxable year, the outstanding indebtedness is $100,000 and the adjusted basis of the building is $400,000, one-fourth of the gross rental for such taxable year shall be included as an item of gross income in computing unrelated business net income for such taxable year.

Example (2). Assume that a tax-exempt organization owns a 4-story building, that in 1952 it borrows $100,000 which it uses to improve the whole building, and that it thereafter in 1952 rents the first floor of the building under a 6-year lease at a rental of $4,000 a year. The second, third, and fourth floors of the building are leased on a yearly basis during 1952. Assume, also, that the adjusted basis of the real property at the end of 1952 (after reflecting the expenditures for improving the building) is $200,000, allocable equally to each the 4 stories. Under these facts, only one-fourth of the real property is subject to a Supplement U lease. The percentage of the rent under such lease which is taken into account is determined by the ratio which the allocable part of the Supplement U lease indebtedness bears to the allocable part of the adjusted basis of the real property, that is, the ratio which one-fourth of the $100,000 of Supplement U lease indebtedness outstanding at the close of 1952, or $25,000, bears to one-fourth of the adjusted basis of the Supplement U lease premises at the close of 1952, or $50,000. The percentage of rent which is Supplement U lease income for 1952 is, therefore, one-half (the ratio of $25,000 to $50,000) of $4,000, or $2,000, and this amount of $2,000 is considered an item of gross income derived from an unrelated trade or business.

§ 39.423-4 Percentage of deductions taken into account. (a) The same percentage is used in determining both the portion of the rent and the portion of the deductions taken into account with respect to the Supplement U lease in computing unrelated business net income. See § 39.423-3 for the determination of such percentage. Such percentage is applicable only to the sum of the following deductions allowable under section 23:

(1) Taxes and other expenses paid or accrued during the taxable year upon or with respect to the real property subject to the Supplement U lease;

(2) Interest paid or accrued during the taxable year on the Supplement U lease indebtedness;

(3) A reasonable allowance for exhaustion, wear and tear (including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence) of the real property subject to such lease.

Where only a portion of the real property is subject to the Supplement U lease, there shall be taken into account only those amounts of the above-listed deductions which are properly allocable to the premises covered by such lease.

(b) The deductions allowable under section 423 (d) and under paragraph (a) of this section with respect to a Supplement U lease are not limited by the amount included in gross income with respect to the rent from such lease, but any excess of such deductions over such gross income shall be applied against other items of gross income in computing unrelated business net income taxable under section 421 (a)

(c) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume the same facts as those in example (1) in paragraph (b) of § 39.423-3. Assume also that for 1952 the organization pays taxes of $4,000 on the property, interest of $6,000 on its Supplemnt U lease indebtedness, and that the depreciation allowable for 1952 under section 23 (1) is $10,000. Under the facts set forth in such example (1) and in this example, the deductions to be taken into account for 1952 in computing unrelated business net income would be two-fifths of the total of the deductions of $20,000, that is, $8,000.

§ 39.424 Statutory provisions; credit for taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States.

SEC. 424. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States. The amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by foreign countries or possessions of the United States shall be allowed as a credit against the tax of an organization subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) to the extent provided in section 131; and in the case of the tax imposed by section 421 (a), the term "normal-tax net income" and the term "net income" as used in section 131 shall be read as "Supplement U net income"

[Sec. 424 as added by sec. 301 (a), Rev. Act 1950]

SUBPART D—TAX ON SELF-EMPLOYMENT INCOME (SUBCHAPTER E, CHAPTER 1, INTERNAL REVENUE CODE)

SEC. 480. Rate of tax. In addition to other taxes, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950, upon the self-employment income of every individual, a tax as follows:

(1) In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950, and before January 1, 1954, the tax shall be equal to 2¼ per centum of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year.

(2) In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1953, and before January 1, 1960, the tax shall be equal to 3 per centum of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year.

(3) In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1959, and before January 1, 1965, the tax shall be equal to 3¾ per centum of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year.

(4) In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1964, and before January 1, 1970, the tax shall be equal to 4½ per centum of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year.

(5) In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1969, the tax shall be equal to 4⅞ per centum of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year.

[Sec. 480 as added by sec. 208 (a), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.480-1 Tax on self-employment income. (a) There is imposed, in addition to other taxes, a tax upon the self-employment income of every individual at the rates prescribed in section 480. This tax shall be levied, assessed, and collected as part of the income tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code and, except as otherwise expressly provided, will be included with the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12 in computing any deficiency or overpayment and in computing the interest and additions to any deficiency, overpayment, or tax. Since the tax on self-employment income is part of the income tax, it is subject to the jurisdiction of The Tax Court of the United States to the same extent and in the same manner as the other taxes under chapter 1 of the Code. However, this tax is not required to be taken into account in computing any estimate of the taxes required to be declared under section 58.

(b) In general, self-employment income consists of the net earnings derived by an individual (other than a nonresident alien) from a trade or business carried on by him as sole proprietor or by a partnership of which he is a member, subject to certain exclusions, exceptions, and limitations.

§ 39.481 Statutory provisions; net earnings from self-employment, self-employment income, and trade or business; definitions.

SEC. 481. Definitions. For the purposes of this subchapter—

(a) Net earnings from self-employment. The term "net earnings from self-employment" means the gross income derived by an individual from any trade or business carried on by such individual, less the deductions allowed by this chapter which are attributable to such trade or business, plus his distributive share (whether or not distributed) of the ordinary net income or loss, as computed under section 183, from any trade or business carried on by a partnership of which he is a member; except that in computing such gross income and deductions and such distributive share of partnership ordinary net income or loss—

(1) There shall be excluded rentals from real estate (including personal property leased with the real estate) and deductions attributable thereto, unless such rentals are received in the course of a trade or business as a real estate dealer;

(2) There shall be excluded income derived from any trade or business in which, if the trade or business were carried on exclusively by employees, the major portion of the services would constitute agricultural labor as defined in section 1426 (h); and there shall be excluded all deductions attributable to such income;

(3) There shall be excluded dividends on any share of stock, and interest on any bond, debenture, note, or certificate or other evidence of indebtedness, issued with interest coupons or in registered form by any corporation (including one issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), unless such dividends and interest (other than interest described in section 25 (a)) are received in the course of a trade or business as a dealer in stocks or securities;

(4) There shall be excluded any gain or loss (A) which is considered as gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset, (B) from the cutting of timber, or the disposal of timber or coal, if section 117 (j) is applicable to such gain or loss, or (C) from the sale, exchange, involuntary conversion, or other disposition of property if such property is neither (i) stock in trade or other property of a kind which would properly be includible in inventory if on hand at the close of the taxable year, nor (ii) property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the trade or business;

(5) The deduction for net operating losses provided in section 23 (s) shall not be allowed;

(6) (A) If any of the income derived from a trade or business (other than a trade or business carried on by a partnership) is community income under community property laws applicable to such income, all of the gross income and deductions attributable to such trade or business shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the husband unless the wife exercises substantially all of the management and control of such trade or business, in which case all of such gross income and deductions shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the wife;

(B) If any portion of a partner's distributive share of the ordinary net income or loss from a trade or business carried on by a partnership is community income or loss under the community property laws applicable to such share, all of such distributive share shall be included in computing the net earnings from self-employment of such partner, and no part of such share shall be taken into account in computing the net earnings from self-employment of the spouse of such partner;

(7) (A) In the case of any taxable year beginning before the effective date specified in section 3810, the term "possession of the United States" when used in section 251 with respect to citizens of the United States shall include Puerto Rico;

(B) In the case of any taxable year beginning on or after the effective date specified in section 3810, a resident of Puerto Rico shall compute his net earnings from self-employment in the same manner as a citizen of the United States but without regard to the provisions of section 116 (l).

If the taxable year of a partner is different from that of the partnership, the distributive share which he is required to include in computing his net earnings from self-employment shall be based upon the ordinary net income or loss of the partnership for any taxable year of the partnership (even though beginning prior to January 1, 1951) ending within or with his taxable year.

(b) Self-employment income. The term "self-employment income" means the net earnings from self-employment derived by an individual (other than a nonresident alien individual) during any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1950; except that such term shall not include—

(1) That part of the net earnings from self-employment which is in excess of: (A) $3,600, minus (B) the amount of the wages paid to such individual during the taxable year; or

(2) The net earnings from self-employment, if such net earnings for the taxable year are less than $400.

For the purposes of clause (1) the term "wages" includes such remuneration paid to an employee for services included under an agreement entered into pursuant to the provisions of section 218 of the Social Security Act (relating to coverage of State employees) as would be wages under section 1426 (a) if such services constituted employment under section 1426 (b). In the case of any taxable year beginning prior to the effective date specified in section 3810, an individual who is a citizen of Puerto Rico (but not otherwise a citizen of the United States) and who is not a resident of the United States or of the Virgin Islands during such taxable year shall be considered, for the purposes of this subchapter, as a nonresident alien individual. An individual who is not a citizen of the United States but who is a resident of the Virgin Islands or (after the effective date specified in section 3810) a resident of Puerto Rico shall not, for the purposes of this subchapter, be considered to be a nonresident alien individual.

(c) Trade or business. The term "trade or business," when used with reference to self-employment income or net earnings from self-employment, shall have the same meaning as when used in section 23, except that such term shall not include—

(1) The performance of the functions of a public office;

(2) The performance of service by an individual as an employee (other than service described in section 1426 (b) (16) (B) performed by an individual who has attained the age of eighteen);

(3) The performance of service by an individual as an employee or employee representative as defined in section 1532;

(4) The performance of service by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order; or

(5) The performance of service by an individual in the exercise of his profession as a physician, lawyer, dentist, osteopath, veterinarian, chiropractor, naturopath, or optometrist, Christian Science practitioner, architect, certified public accountant, accountant registered or licensed as an accountant, under State or municipal law, full-time practicing public accountant, funeral director or professional engineer; or the performance of such service by a partnership.

(d) Employee and wages. The term "employee" and the term "wages" shall have the same meaning as when used in subchapter A of chapter 9.

[Sec. 481 as added by sec. 208 (a), Social Security Act Amendments 1950; amended by sec. 221 (j) (1), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 325 (d), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.481-1 Net earnings from self-employment—(a) Definition. Subject to the special rules discussed in paragraph (c) of this section and to the exclusions discussed in § 39.481-3, the term "net earnings from self-employment" means—

(1) The gross income derived by an individual from any trade or business carried on by such individual, less the deductions allowed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code which are attributable to such trade or business, plus

(2) His distributive share (whether or not distributed) of the ordinary net income (or minus the ordinary net loss) from any trade or business, as computed under section 183, carried on by any partnership of which he is a member.

(b) Included in net earnings. (1) The gross income and deductions of an individual attributable to a trade or business, for the purpose of ascertaining his net earnings from self-employment, are to be determined by reference to the provisions of law and regulations applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12. Thus, if an individual uses the accrual method of accounting in computing net income from a trade or business for the purpose of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12, he must use the same method in determining net earnings from self-employment. Likewise, if a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business of selling property on the installment plan elects, under the provisions of section 44, to use the installment basis in computing income for the purpose of the taxes under sections 11 and 12, he must use the same basis in determining net earnings from self-employment.

(2) The trade or business must be carried on by the individual, either personally or through agents or employees. Accordingly, income derived from a trade or business carried on by an estate or trust is not included in determining the net earnings from self-employment of the individual beneficiaries of such estate or trust.

(3) Where an individual is engaged in more than one trade or business within the meaning of section 481 (c) and § 39.481–3, his net earnings from self-employment consist of the aggregate of the net income and losses (computed subject to the special rules provided in this section) of all such trades or businesses carried on by him. Thus, a loss sustained in one trade or business carried on by an individual will operate to offset the income derived by him from another trade or business.

(4) The net earnings from self-employment of an individual include, in addition to the earnings from a trade or business carried on by him, his distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss from any trade or business carried on by each partnership of which he is a member. An individual's distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of a partnership shall be computed under section 183, subject to the special rules set forth in section 481 (a) and in this section and to the exclusions provided in section 481 (c) and in § 39.481–3.

(5) If the taxable year of a partner differs from that of the partnership, the partner shall include, in computing net earnings from self-employment, his distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of the partnership for its taxable year ending with or within the taxable year of the partner.

(6) For the purpose of determining net earnings from self-employment, a partnership is one which is recognized as such for income tax purposes. For income tax purposes, the term "partnership" includes not only a partnership as known at common law, but, also, a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization which carries on any trade or business, financial operation, or venture, which is not, within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, a trust, estate, or a corporation.

(7) The net earnings from self-employment of a partner include his distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of the partnership of which he is a member, irrespective of the nature of his membership. Thus, in determining his net earnings from self-employment, a limited or inactive partner includes his distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of the partnership.

(c) Excluded from net earnings. For the purpose of computing net earnings from self-employment, the gross income derived by an individual from a trade or business carried on by him, the allowable deductions attributable to such trade or business, and the individual's distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss from any trade or business carried on by a partnership of which he is a member shall be computed in accordance with the following special rules:

(1) Rentals from real estate. (i) Rentals from real estate (including personal property leased with the real estate) and the deductions attributable thereto, unless such rentals are received by an individual in the course of a trade or business as a real-estate dealer, are excluded. Whether or not an individual is engaged in the trade or business of a real-estate dealer is determined by the application of the principles followed in respect of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12. In general, an individual who is engaged in the business of selling real estate to customers with a view to the gains and profits that may be derived from such sales is a real-estate dealer. On the other hand, an individual who merely holds real estate for investment or speculation and receives rentals therefrom is not considered a real-estate dealer. Where a real-estate dealer holds real estate for investment or speculation in addition to real estate held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business as a real-estate dealer, only the rentals from the real estate held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business as a real-estate dealer, and the deductions attributable thereto, are included in determining net earnings from self-employment; the rentals from the real estate held for investment or speculation, and the deductions attributable thereto, are excluded.

(ii) Payments for the use or occupancy of entire private residences or living quarters in duplex or multiple-housing units are generally rentals from real estate. Except in the case of real-estate dealers, such payments are excluded in determining net earnings from self-employment even though such payments are in part attributable to personal property furnished under the lease.

(iii) Payments for the use or occupancy of rooms or other space where services are also rendered to the occupant, such as for the use or occupancy of rooms or other quarters in hotels, boarding houses, or apartment houses furnishing hotel services, or in tourist camps or tourist homes, or for the use or occupancy of space in parking lots, warehouses, or storage garages, do not constitute rentals from real estate; consequently such payments are included in determining net earnings from self-employment. Generally, services are considered rendered to the occupant if they are primarily for his convenience and are other than those usually or customarily rendered in connection with the rental of rooms or other space for occupancy only. The supplying of maid service, for example, constitutes such service; whereas, the furnishing of heat and light, the cleaning of public entrances, exits, stairways and lobbies, the collection of trash, and so forth, are not considered as services rendered to the occupant.

(iv) Except in the case of a real-estate dealer, where an individual or a partnership is engaged in a trade or business the income of which is classifiable in part as rentals from real estate, only that portion of such income which is not classifiable as rentals from real estate, and the expenses attributable to such portion, will be included in determining net earnings from self-employment.

(v) The application of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, an individual, owns a building containing four apartments. During the taxable year, he receives $1,400 from apartments numbered 1 and 2, which are rented without services rendered to the occupants, and $3,600 from apartments numbered 3 and 4, which are rented with services rendered to the occupants. His fixed expenses for the four apartments aggregate $1,200 during the taxable year. In addition, he has $500 of expenses attributable to the services rendered to the occupants of apartments 3 and 4. In determining his net earnings from self-employment, A includes the $3,600 received from apartments 3 and 4, and the expenses of $1,100 attributable thereto. The rentals and expenses attributable to apartments 1 and 2 are excluded. Therefore, A has $2,500 of net earnings from self-employment for the taxable year.

(2) Income from agricultural activity. (i) Income derived from any trade or business in which, if the trade or business were carried on exclusively by employees, the major portion of the services would constitute agricultural labor as defined in section 1426 (h), and all deductions attributable to such income, are excluded. In case the services are in part agricultural and in part nonagricultural, the time devoted to the performance of each type of service is the test to be used to determine whether the major portion of the services would constitute agricultural labor. If more than half of the time spent in performing all the services is spent in performing services which would constitute agricultural labor under section 1426 (h), all income, and the deductions attributable to the income, shall be excluded. If only half, or less, of the time spent in performing all the services is spent in performing services which would constitute agricultural labor under section 1426 (h), all income, and the deductions attributable to the income, shall be included. In every case the time spent in performing the services will be computed by adding the time spent in the trade or business during the taxable year by every individual (including the individual carrying on such trade or business and the members of his family) in performing such services. The operation of this special rule is not affected by section 1426 (c), relating to the included-excluded rule for determining employment.

(ii) This rule has no application where the nonagricultural services are performed in connection with an enterprise which constitutes a trade or business separate and distinct from the trade or business conducted as an agricultural enterprise. Thus, the operation of a roadside automobile service station on farm premises constitutes a trade or business separate and distinct from the agricultural enterprise, and the gross income derived from such service station, together with the deductions attributable thereto, are included in determining net earnings from self-employment.

(3) Dividends and interest. (i) All dividends on shares of stock are excluded unless they are received by an individual in the course of his trade or business as a dealer in stocks or securities.

(ii) Interest on any bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness, issued with interest coupons or in registered form by any corporation (including one issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), is excluded unless such interest is received in the course of a trade or business as a dealer in stocks or securities. However, interest which is exempt under section 25 (a) from the normal tax imposed by section 11, that is, interest on certain obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities, is not included in net earnings from self-employment even though received in the course of a trade or business as a dealer in stocks or securities. Only interest on bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates, or other evidence of indebtedness, issued with interest coupons or in registered form by a corporation, is excluded in the case of all persons other than dealers in stocks or securities; other interest received in the course of any trade or business (such as interest received by a pawnbroker on his loans or interest received by a merchant on his accounts or notes receivable) is not excluded.

(iii) Dividends and interest of the character excludible under the preceding subdivisions of this subparagraph received by an individual on stocks or securities held for speculation or investment are excluded whether or not the individual is a dealer in stocks or securities.

(iv) A dealer in stocks or securities is a merchant of stocks or securities with an established place of business, regularly engaged in the business of purchasing stocks or securities and reselling them to customers; that is, he is one who as a merchant buys stocks or securities and sells them to customers with a view to the gains and profits that may be derived therefrom. Persons who buy and sell or hold stocks or securities for investment or speculation, irrespective of whether such buying or selling constitutes the carrying on of a trade or business, are not dealers in stocks or securities.

(4) Gain or loss from disposition of property. (i) There is excluded any gain or loss: (a) Which is considered as gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset; (b) from the cutting of timber or the disposal of timber or the disposal of coal, even though held primarily for sale to customers, if section 117 (j) is applicable to such gain or loss; and (c) from the sale, exchange, involuntary conversion, or other disposition of property if such property is neither (1) stock in trade or other property of a kind which would properly be includible in inventory if on hand at the close of the taxable year, nor (2) property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business. For the purpose of the special rule in (c) of this subdivision, it is immaterial whether a gain or loss is treated as a capital gain or loss or as an ordinary gain or loss for purposes other than determining net earnings from self-employment. For instance, where the character of a loss is governed by the provisions of section 117 (j), such loss is excluded in determining net earnings from self-employment even though such loss is treated under section 117 (j) as an ordinary loss. For the purposes of this special rule, the term "involuntary conversion" means a compulsory or involuntary conversion of property into other property or money as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft or seizure, or an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation or the threat or imminence thereof; and, the term "other disposition" includes the destruction or loss, in whole or in part, of property by fire, storm, shipwreck, or other casualty, or by theft, even though there is no conversion of such property into other property or money.

(ii) The application of this subparagraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. During the taxable year 1952, A, who owns a grocery store, realized a net profit of $1,500 from the sale of groceries and a gain of $350 from the sale of a refrigerator case. During the same year, he sustained a loss of $2,000 as a result of damage by fire to the store building. In computing net income, all of these items are taken into account. In determining net earnings from self-employment, however, only the $1,500 of profit derived from the sale of groceries is included. The $350 gain and the $2,000 loss are excluded.

(5) Net operating loss deduction. The deduction provided by section 23 (s), relating to net operating losses sustained in years other than the taxable year, is excluded.

(6) Community income—(i) In case of an individual. If any of the income derived by an individual from a trade or business (other than a trade or business carried on by a partnership) is community income under community property laws applicable to such income, all of the gross income, and the deductions attributable to such income, shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the husband unless the wife exercises substantially all of the management and control of such trade or business, in which case all of such gross income and deductions shall be treated as the gross income and deductions of the wife. For the purpose of this special rule, the term "management and control" means management and control in fact, not the management and control imputed to the husband under the community property laws. For example, a wife who operates a beauty parlor without any appreciable collaboration on the part of her husband will be considered as having substantially all of the management and control of such business despite the provision of any community property law vesting in the husband the right of management and control of community property; and the income and deductions attributable to the operation of such beauty parlor will be considered the income and deductions of the wife.

(ii) In case of a partnership. Even though a portion of a partner's distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss from a trade or business carried on by a partnership is community income or loss under the community property laws applicable to such share, all of such distributive share shall be included in computing the net earnings from self-employment of such partner; no part of such share shall be taken into account in computing the net earnings from self-employment of the spouse of such partner. In any case in which both spouses are members of the same partnership, the distributive share of the ordinary net income or ordinary net loss of each spouse is included in computing the net earnings from self-employment of that spouse.

(7) Puerto Rico—(i) Residents. A resident of Puerto Rico, whether or not a bona fide resident thereof during the entire taxable year, and whether or not an alien, a citizen of the United States, or a citizen of Puerto Rico, shall compute his net earnings from self-employment in the same manner as would a citizen of the United States residing in the United States. For the purpose of the tax on self-employment income, the gross income of such a resident of Puerto Rico also includes income from Puerto Rican sources. Thus, under this special rule, income from Puerto Rican sources will be included in determining net earnings from self-employment of a resident of Puerto Rico engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business in Puerto Rico despite the fact that, under section 116 (l), such income may not be taken into account for the purpose of the taxes under sections 11 and 12.

(ii) Nonresidents. A citizen of Puerto Rico who is also a citizen of the United States and who is not a resident of Puerto Rico will compute his net earnings from self-employment in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law and regulations as other citizens of the United States.

§ 39.481-2 Self-employment income—(a) In general. Except for the exclusions in paragraphs (b) and (c) and the exception in paragraph (d) of this section, the term "self-employment income" means the net earnings from self-employment derived by an individual.

(b) Maximum self-employment income. The maximum self-employment income of an individual for any taxable year (whether a period of 12 months or less) is $3,600. If an individual is paid wages as defined in section 1426 (a), the maximum is the excess of $3,600 over the amount of such wages. For example, if during the taxable year no such wages are paid and the individual has $5,000 of net earnings from self-employment, he has $3,600 of self-employment income for such taxable year. If, in addition to having $5,000 of net earnings from self-employment, such individual is paid $1,000 of such wages, he has only $2,600 of self-employment income for the taxable year. For the purpose of this limitation, the term "wages" includes remuneration paid to an employee for services covered by an agreement entered into pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act (42 U. S. C. 418) which section provides for extension of the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system to State and local government employees under voluntary agreements between the States and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (Federal Security Administrator before April 11, 1953)

(c) Minimum net earnings from self-employment. Self-employment income does not include the net earnings from self-employment of an individual when the amount of such earnings for the taxable year is less than $400. Thus, an individual having only $300 of net earnings from self-employment for the taxable year would not have any self-employment income. However, an individual having net earnings from self-employment of $400 or more for the taxable year may have less than $400 of self-employment income. This would occur in a case in which the amount of the individual's net earnings from self-employment is $400 or more for a taxable year and the individual also receives more than $3,200 but less than $3,600 of wages during that taxable year. For example, if an individual has net earnings from self-employment of $1,000 for a taxable year and also receives wages of $3,400 during that taxable year, his self-employment income for that taxable year is $200.

(d) Nonresident aliens. A nonresident alien individual never has self-employment income. For the purpose of the tax on self-employment income, an individual who is not a citizen of the United States but who is a resident of the Virgin Islands or of Puerto Rico is not considered to be a nonresident alien individual. While a nonresident alien individual who derives income from a trade or business carried on within the United States, Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands (whether by agents or employees, or by a partnership of which he is a member) may be subject to the applicable income tax provisions on such income, such nonresident alien individual will not be subject to the tax on self-employment income, since any net earnings which he may have from self-employment do not constitute self-employment income.

§ 39.481–3 Trade or business—(a) In general. It is necessary for an individual to carry on a trade or business, either as an individual or as a member of a partnership, in order for him to have net earnings from self-employment. Except for the exclusions discussed in paragraphs (b) (c) (d) (e) and (f) of this section, the term "trade or business" for the purpose of the tax on self-employment income, shall have the same meaning as when used in section 23. An individual engaged in one of the excluded activities specified in this section may also be engaged in carrying on a non-excluded trade or business. Whether or not he is also engaged in an included trade or business will be dependent upon all of the facts and circumstances in the particular case.

(b) Public office. The performance of the functions of a public office does not constitute a trade or business. The term "public office" includes any elective or appointive office of the United States or any possession thereof, or of a State or its political subdivision, or of a wholly owned instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. For example, the President, the Vice President, a governor, a mayor, the Secretary of State, a member of Congress, a State representative, a county commissioner, a judge, a county or city attorney a marshal, a sheriff, a register of deeds, or a notary public performs the functions of a public office.

(c) Employees. The performance of service by an individual as an employee, as defined in the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (sections 1400 to 1432 inclusive, of the Internal Revenue Code), with one exception, does not constitute a trade or business. The exception is as follows: Service performed by an individual, who has attained the age of 18, in, and at the time of, the sale of newspapers or magazines to ultimate consumers, under an arrangement under which the newspapers or magazines are to be sold by him at a fixed price, his compensation being based on the retention of the excess of such price over the amount at which the newspapers or magazines are charged to him, whether or not he is guaranteed a minimum amount of compensation for such service, or is entitled to be credited with the unsold newspapers or magazines turned back, does constitute a trade or business. As to when an individual is an employee, see Regulations 128 (Part 408 of this chapter) relating to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act.

(d) Individuals under Railroad Retirement System. The performance of service by an individual as an employee or employee representative as defined in section 1532, that is, an individual covered under the railroad retirement system, does not constitute a trade or business. As to when an individual is an employee or employee representative under section 1532, see Regulations 114 (Part 411 of this chapter) relating to the Railroad Retirement Tax Act.

(e) Ministers or members of religious orders. The performance of service by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry or by a member of a religious order in the exercise of duties required by such order does not constitute a trade or business. The duties of ministers include the ministration of sacerdotal functions and the conduct of religious worship, and the control, conduct, and maintenance of religious organizations (including the religious boards, societies, and other integral agencies of such organizations), under the authority of a religious body constituting a church or church denomination.

(f) Members of certain professions. (1) The performance of service by an individual in the exercise of his profession as a physician, lawyer, dentist, osteopath, veterinarian, chiropractor, naturopath, optometrist, Christian Science practitioner, architect, certified public accountant, accountant registered or licensed as an accountant under State or municipal law, full-time practicing public accountant, funeral director, or professional engineer does not constitute a trade or business. This exclusion applies only if the individual meets the legal requirements, if any, for practicing his profession in the place where he performs the service. Thus, an accountant who is neither certified, registered, nor licensed but who is publicly engaged in the practice of accountancy on a full-time basis in a jurisdiction which requires that an individual engaged in such practice be certified, registered, or licensed is not within the exclusion.

(2) The designations in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph are to be given their commonly accepted meaning. Thus, the term "physician" means an individual who is legally qualified to practice medicine; the term "lawyer" means an individual who is legally qualified to practice law and the term "professional engineer" means an engineer legally qualified to practice before the public in a consulting capacity.

(3) In the case of a partnership engaged in the practice of any of the designated professions, the partnership shall not be considered as carrying on a trade or business for the purpose of the tax on self-employment income, and none of the distributive shares of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of such partnership shall be included in computing net earnings from self-employment of any member of the partnership. On the other hand, where a partnership is engaged in a trade or business not within any of the designated professions, each partner must include his distributive share of the ordinary net income or the ordinary net loss of such partnership in computing his net earnings from self-employment, irrespective of whether such partner is also engaged in the practice of one or more of such professions and contributes his professional services to the partnership.

§ 39.481–4 Employee and wages. For the purpose of the tax on self-employment income, the term "employee" and the term "wages" shall have the same meaning as when used in the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. For an explanation of these terms, see Regulations 128 (Part 408 of this chapter)

SEC. 482. Miscellaneous provisions—(a) Returns. Every individual (other than a nonresident alien individual) having net earnings from self-employment of $400 or more for the taxable year shall make a return containing such information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this subchapter as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe. Such return shall be considered a return required under section 51 (a). In the case of a husband and wife filing a joint return under section 51 (b), the tax imposed by this subchapter shall not be computed on the aggregate income but shall be the sum of the taxes computed under this subchapter on the separate self-employment income of each spouse.

(b) Title of subchapter. This subchapter may be cited as the "Self-Employment Contributions Act."

(c) Effective date in case of Puerto Rico. For effective date in case of Puerto Rico, see section 3810.

(d) Collection of taxes in Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. For provisions relating to collection of taxes in Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, see section 3811.

[Sec. 482 as added by sec. 208 (a), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.482-1 Returns—(a) In general. Every individual, other than a nonresident alien, having net earnings from self-employment of $400 or more for the taxable year shall make a return on Form 1040 in accordance with the instructions thereon, or issued therewith, and the provisions of the regulations applicable thereto. Such return shall be considered a return required under section 51 (a), and the provisions applicable to returns under section 51 (a) shall be applicable to this return. This return will be required if there is self-employment income even though the individual may not be required to make a return for the purpose of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12.

(b) Joint returns. (1) In the case of a husband and wife filing a joint return under section 51 (b) the tax on self-employment income is computed on the separate self-employment income of each spouse, and not on the aggregate of the two amounts. The requirement of section 51 (b) that in the case of a joint return the tax is computed on the aggregate income of the spouses is not applicable with respect to the tax on self-employment income. Where the husband and wife each has net earnings from self-employment of $400 or more, it will be necessary for each to complete separately a schedule C of Form 1040 with respect to such net earnings, despite the fact that a joint return is filed. If the net earnings from self-employment of either the husband or the wife are less than $400, such net earnings are not subject to the tax on self-employment income, even though they must be shown on the joint return for the purpose of the taxes imposed by sections 11 and 12.

(2) Except as otherwise expressly provided, section 51 (b) is applicable to the return of the tax on self-employment income; therefore, the liability with respect to such tax in the case of a joint return is joint and several.

(c) Social security account numbers. Every individual making a return of net earnings from self-employment is required to show thereon his social security account number, or, if he has no such account number, to make application therefor on Form SS-5 before the filing of such return. However, the failure to apply for a social security account number will not excuse the individual from the requirement that he file such return on or before the due date thereof. Form SS-5 may be obtained from any field office of the Social Security Administration or from any district director of internal revenue. The application on Form SS-5 shall be filed with the field office of the Social Security Administration nearest the legal residence or principal place of business of such individual, or if he has no legal residence or principal place of business within the United States; Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands, with the office of the Social Security Administration at Baltimore, Maryland. An individual who has previously secured a social security account number as an employee shall use that account number on his return of net earnings from self-employment.

SUBPART E—PERSONAL HOLDING COMPANIES (SUBCHAPTER A, CHAPTER 2, INTERNAL REVENUE CODE)

SEC. 500. Surtax on personal holding companies. There shall be levied, collected, and paid, for each taxable year beginning after December 31, 1938, upon the undistributed subchapter A net income of every personal holding company (in addition to the taxes imposed by chapter 1) a surtax equal to the sum of the following:

(1) 75 per centum of the amount thereof not in excess of $2,000; plus

[Sec. 500 as amended by sec. 203, Rev. Act 1940; sec. 110 (a), Rev. Act 1941; sec. 181, Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.500-1 Surtax on personal holding companies. (a) Section 500 imposes (in addition to the taxes imposed by chapter 1) a graduated income tax or surtax upon corporations classified as personal holding companies and, under the circumstances specified in section 501 (c), upon an affiliated group of railroad corporations. Corporations so classified are exempt from the surtax on corporations improperly accumulating surplus imposed by section 102, but are not exempt from the other taxes imposed by chapter 1. Unlike the surtax imposed by section 102, the surtax imposed by section 500 applies to all personal holding companies defined as such in section 501 and § 39.501-1, regardless of whether or not they were formed or availed of to accumulate earnings or profits for the purpose of avoiding surtax upon shareholders. The surtax imposed by section 500 is 75 percent of the amount of the undistributed subchapter A net income not in excess of $2,000, and 85 percent of the amount of the undistributed subchapter A net income in excess of $2,000. For the alternative tax where the net long-term gain for any taxable year exceeds the net short-term capital loss, see section 117 (c) and the regulations thereunder.

(b) A foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, which is classified as a personal holding company under section 501 (not including a foreign personal holding company as defined in section 331) is subject to the tax imposed by section 500 with respect to its income from sources within the United States even though such income is not fixed or determinable annual or periodical income specified in section 231 (a). See section 119. The term "personal holding company," as used in subchapter A of chapter 2, does not include a foreign corporation if (1) its gross income from sources within the United States for the period specified in section 119 (a) (2) (B) is less than 50 percent of its total gross income from all sources and (2) all of its stock outstanding during the last half of the taxable year is owned by nonresident alien individuals, whether directly or indirectly through other foreign corporations.

SEC. 501. Definition of personal holding company—(a) General rule. For the purposes of this subchapter and chapter 1, the term "personal holding company" means any corporation if—

(1) Gross income requirement. At least 80 per centum of its gross income for the taxable year is personal holding company income as defined in section 502; but if the corporation is a personal holding company with respect to any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1936, then, for each subsequent taxable year, the minimum percentage shall be 70 per centum in lieu of 80 per centum, until a taxable year during the whole of the last half of which the stock ownership required by paragraph (2) does not exist, or until the expiration of three consecutive taxable years in each of which less than 70 per centum of the gross income is personal holding company income; and

(2) Stock ownership requirement. At any time during the last half of the taxable year more than 50 per centum in value of its outstanding stock is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for not more than five individuals.

(b) Exceptions. The term "personal holding company" does not include—

(1) A corporation exempt from taxation under section 101.

(2) A bank as defined in section 104.

(3) A life insurance company.

(4) A surety company.

(5) A foreign personal holding company as defined in section 331.

(6) (A) A licensed personal finance company under State supervision, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest received from loans made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law if at least 60 per centum of such gross income is lawful interest (i) received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $300), and (ii) not payable in advance or compounded and computed only on unpaid balances, and if the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount; and

(B) A lending company, not otherwise excepted by section 501 (b), authorized to engage in the small loan business under one or more State statutes providing for the direct regulation of such business, 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges (i) received from loans maturing in not more than thirty-six months made to individuals in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law, and (ii) which do not, in the case of any individual loan, exceed in the aggregate an amount equal to simple interest at the rate of 3 per centum per month not payable in advance and computed only on unpaid balances, if at least 60 per centum of the gross income is lawful interest, discount or other authorized charges received from individuals each of whose indebtedness to such company did not at any time during the taxable year exceed in principal amount the limit prescribed for small loans by such law (or, if there is no such limit, $500), and if the deductions allowed to such company under section 23 (a) (relating to expenses), other than for compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders (including members of the shareholder's family as described in section 503 (a) (2)) constitute 15 per centum or more of its gross income, and the loans to a person, who is a shareholder in such company during the taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)), outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.

(7) A loan or investment corporation, a substantial part of the business of which consists of receiving funds not subject to check and evidenced by installment or fully paid certificates of indebtedness or investment, and making loans and discounts, and the loans to a person who is a shareholder in such corporation during such taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by the members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)) outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.

(8) A finance company, actively and regularly engaged in the business of purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable or installment obligations, or making loans secured by any of the foregoing or by tangible personal property, at least 80 per centum of the gross income of which is derived from such business in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law or does not constitute personal holding company income as defined in section 502, if 60 per centum of the gross income is derived from one or more of the following classes of transactions:

(A) Purchasing or discounting accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations evidenced or secured by contracts of conditional sale, chattel mortgages, or chattel lease agreements, arising out of the sale of goods or services in the course of the transferor's trade or business;

(B) Making loans, maturing in not more than thirty-six months, to, and for the business purposes of, persons engaged in trade or business, secured by—

(i) Accounts or notes receivable, or installment obligations, described in subparagraph (a) above;

(ii) Warehouse receipts, bills of lading, trust receipts, chattel mortgages, bailments, or factor's liens, covering or evidencing the borrower's inventories;

(iii) A chattel mortgage on property used in the borrower's trade or business; except loans to any single borrower which for more than ninety days in the taxable year of the company exceed 15 per centum of the average funds employed by the company during such taxable year;

(C) Making loans, in accordance with the provisions of applicable State law, secured by chattel mortgages on tangible personal property, the original amount of each of which is not less than the limit referred to in, or prescribed by, subsection (b) (6) (A) (i), and the aggregate principal amount of which owing by any one borrower to the company at any time during the taxable year of the company does not exceed $5,000; and

(D) If 30 per centum or more of the gross income of the company is derived from one or more of the classes of transactions described in subparagraphs (A), (B) and (C) of this paragraph, purchasing, discounting, or lending upon the security of, installment obligations of individuals where the transferor or borrower acquired such obligations either in transactions of the classes described in subparagraphs (A) and (C) of this paragraph or as a result of loans made by such transferor or borrower in accordance with the provisions of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph 6 (A) or of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph 6 (B) of this subsection, if the funds so supplied at all times bear an agreed ratio to the unpaid balance of the assigned installment obligations; and documents evidencing such obligations are held by the company; provided that the deductions allowable under subsection 23 (a) (relating to expenses), other than compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders (including members of the shareholder's family as described in section 503 (a) (2)), constitute 15 per centum or more of the gross income, and that loans to a person who is a shareholder in such company during such taxable year by or for whom 10 per centum or more in value of its outstanding stock is owned directly or indirectly (including in the case of an individual, stock owned by members of his family as defined in section 503 (a) (2)) outstanding at any time during such year do not exceed $5,000 in principal amount.

(c) Corporations making consolidated returns. If the common parent corporation of an affiliated group of corporations making a consolidated return under the provisions of section 141 satisfies the stock ownership requirement provided in section 501 (a) (2), and the income of such affiliated group, determined as provided in section 141, satisfies the gross income requirement provided in section 501 (a) (1), such affiliated group shall be subject to the surtax imposed by this subchapter. The preceding sentence shall apply only if the common parent corporation is a common parent of an affiliated group of railroad corporations, which would be eligible to file consolidated returns under section 141 prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942.

[Sec. 501 as amended by secs. 182 (a), 183, Rev. Act 1942; Public Law 680 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.501–1 Definition of personal holding company. (a) A personal holding company is any corporation (other than a corporation specified in section 501 (b)) which for the taxable year meets (1) the gross income requirement specified in § 39.501–2, and (2) the stock ownership requirement specified in § 39.501–3. Both requirements must be satisfied and both must be met with respect to each taxable year.

(b) Section 501 (b) provides that the term "personal holding company" does not include: (1) Corporations exempt from taxation under section 101, (2) a bank as defined in section 104, (3) a life insurance company, (4) a surety company, (5) a foreign personal holding company as defined in section 331, (6) a loan or investment corporation as defined in section 501 (b) (7), (7) a licensed personal finance company as defined in section 501 (b) (6) (A), (8) a lending company as defined in section 501 (b) (6) (B) or (9) a finance company (whether or not previously classified as a personal holding company) as defined in section 501 (b) (8)

§ 39.501–2 Gross income requirement. (a) To meet the gross income requirement, it is necessary that either of the following percentages of gross income of the corporation for the taxable year be personal holding company income as defined in section 502:

(1) 80 percent or more; or

(2) 70 percent or more if the corporation has been classified as a personal holding company for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1936, unless—

(i) A taxable year has intervened since the last taxable year for which it was so classified, during no part of the last half of which the stock ownership requirement specified in section 501 (a) (2) exists; or

(ii) Three consecutive years have intervened since the last taxable year for which it was so classified, during each of which its personal holding company income was less than 70 percent of its gross income.

(b) In determining whether the personal holding company income is equal to the required percentage of the total gross income, the determination must not be made upon the basis of gross receipts, since gross income is not synonymous with gross receipts. For a further discussion of what constitutes "gross income," see section 22 (a) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.501–3 Stock ownership requirement. (a) To meet the stock ownership requirement, it is necessary that at some time during the last half of the taxable year more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation be owned, directly or indirectly, by or for not more than five individuals. For such purpose, the ownership of the stock must be determined as provided in section 503 and the regulations thereunder.

(b) In the event of any change in the stock outstanding during the last half of the taxable year, whether in the number of shares or classes of stock, or whether in the ownership thereof, the conditions existing immediately prior and subsequent to each change must be taken into consideration.

(c) In determining whether the statutory conditions with respect to stock ownership are present at any time during the last half of the taxable year, the phrase "in value" shall, in the light of all the circumstances, be deemed the value of the corporate stock outstanding at such time (not including treasury stock) This value may be determined upon the basis of the company's net worth, earning and dividend paying capacity, appreciation of assets, together with such other factors as have a bearing upon the value of the stock. If the value of the stock is greatly at variance with that reflected by the corporate books, the evidence of such value should be filed with the return. In any case where there are two or more classes of stock outstanding, the total value of all the stock should be allocated among the different classes according to the relative value of each class therein.

(d) The rules stated in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section are equally applicable in determining the stock ownership requirement specified in section 502 (e) relating to personal service contracts, and in section 502 (f), relating to the use of corporation property by a shareholder. The stock ownership requirement specified in these sections relates, however, to the stock outstanding at any time during the entire taxable year and not merely during the last half thereof.

SEC. 502. Personal holding company income. For the purposes of this subchapter the term "personal holding company income" means the portion of the gross income which consists of:

(a) Dividends, interest (other than interest constituting rent as defined in subsection (g)), royalties (other than mineral, oil, or gas royalties), annuities.

(b) Stock and securities transactions. Except in the case of regular dealers in stock or securities, gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities.

(c) Commodities transactions. Gains from futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange. This subsection shall not apply to gains by a producer, processor, merchant, or handler of the commodity which arise out of bona fide hedging transactions reasonably necessary to the conduct of its business in the manner in which such business is customarily and usually conducted by others.

(d) Estates and trusts. Amounts includible in computing the net income of the corporation under Supplement E of chapter 1; and gains from the sale or other disposition of any interest in an estate or trust.

(e) Personal service contracts. (1) Amounts received under a contract under which the corporation is to furnish personal services; if some person other than the corporation has the right to designate (by name or by description) the individual who is to perform the services, or if the individual who is to perform the services is designated (by name or by description) in the contract; and (2) amounts received from the sale or other disposition of such a contract. This subsection shall apply with respect to amounts received for services under a particular contract only if at some time during the taxable year 25 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual who has performed, is to perform, or may be designated (by name or by description) as the one to perform, such services.

(f) Use of corporation property by shareholders. Amounts received as compensation (however designated and from whomsoever received) for the use of, or right to use, property of the corporation in any case where, at any time during the taxable year, 25 per centum or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for an individual entitled to the use of the property; whether such right is obtained directly from the corporation or by means of a sublease or other arrangement.

(g) Rents. Rents, unless constituting 50 per centum or more of the gross income. For the purposes of this subsection the term "rents" means compensation, however designated, for the use of, or right to use, property, and the interest on debts owed to the corporation, to the extent such debts represent the price for which real property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of its trade or business was sold or exchanged by the corporation; but does not include amounts constituting personal holding company income under subsection (f).

(h) Mineral, oil, or gas royalties. Mineral, oil, or gas royalties, unless (1) constituting 50 per centum or more of the gross income, and (2) the deductions allowable under section 23 (a) (relating to expenses) other than compensation for personal services rendered by shareholders, constitute 15 per centum or more of the gross income.

§ 39.502-1 Personal holding company income. The term "personal holding company income" means the portion of the gross income which consists of the following:

(a) Dividends. The term "dividends" includes dividends as defined in section 115 (a) and amounts required to be included in gross income under section 337 (b). See § 39.115 (a)-1.

(b) Interest (other than interest constituting rent). The term "interest" means any amounts, includible in gross income, received for the use of money loaned except that it does not include interest constituting rent (see paragraph (j) of this section).

(c) Royalties (other than mineral, oil, or gas royalties). The term "royalties" includes amounts received for the privilege of using patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like property. It does not include rents, or overriding royalties received by an operating company. As used in this paragraph the term "overriding royalties" means amounts received from the sublessee by the operating company which originally leased and developed the natural resource property in respect of which such overriding royalties are paid.

(d) Annuities. The term "annuities" includes annuities only to the extent includible in the computation of gross income. (See section 22 (b) (2).)

(e) Gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities. The term "gains from the sale or exchange of stock or securities" as used in section 502 (b) applies to all gains (including gains from liquidating dividends and other distributions from capital) from the sale or exchange of stock or securities includible in gross income. The term "stock or securities" as used in section 502 (b) includes shares or certificates of stock, or interest in any corporation (including any joint-stock company, insurance company, association, or other organization classified as a corporation by the Internal Revenue Code) certificates of interest or participation in any profit-sharing agreement, or in any oil, gas, or other mineral royalty, or lease, collateral trust certificates, voting trust certificates, stock rights or warrants, bonds, debentures, certificates of indebtedness, notes, car trust certificates, bills of exchange, obligations issued by or on behalf of a Government, State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof. In the case of "regular dealers in stock or securities" the term does not include gains derived from the sale or exchange of stock or securities made in the normal course of business. The term "regular dealer in stock or securities" means corporations with an established place of business regularly engaged in the purchase of stock or securities and their resale to customers, but such corporations are not dealers with respect to stock or securities held for speculation or investment.

(f) Gains from futures transactions in commodities. Gains from futures transactions in commodities include gains from futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange, but do not include gains from cash transactions or gains by a producer, processor, merchant, or handler of the commodity, which arise out of bona fide hedging transactions reasonably necessary to the conduct of its business in the manner in which such business is customarily and usually conducted by others. In general, personal holding company income includes gains on futures contracts which are speculative. Futures contracts representing true hedges against price fluctuations in spot goods are not speculative transactions, though not concurrent with spot transactions. Futures contracts which are not hedges against spot transactions are speculative unless they are hedges against concurrent futures or forward sales or purchases.

(g) Income from estates and trusts. The income from estates and trusts which is to be included in personal holding company income consists of the income from estates and trusts which is required to be included in the gross income of the corporation under sections 161 to 169, inclusive, together with the gains derived by the corporation from the sale or other disposition of any interest in an estate or trust.

(h) Amounts received under personal service contracts. (1) Amounts includible in personal holding company income as amounts received under personal service contracts consist of amounts received pursuant to a contract under which the corporation is to furnish personal services, and amounts received from a sale or other disposition of such a contract, if—

(i) Some person other than the corporation has the right to designate (by name or by description) the individual who is to perform the services, or if the individual who is to perform the services is designated (by name or by description) in the contract; and

(ii) At some time during the taxable year 25 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual who has performed, is to perform, or may be designated (by name or by description) as the one to perform, such services. For this purpose the stock ownership must be determined as provided in section 503 and the regulations thereunder and § 39.501-3 (d)

(2) The application of section 502 (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, whose profession is that of an actor, owns all of the outstanding capital stock of the M Corporation. The M Corporation entered into a contract with A under which A was to perform personal services for the person or persons whom the M Corporation might designate, in consideration of which A was to receive $10,000 a year from the M Corporation. The M Corporation entered into a contract with the O Corporation in which A was designated to perform personal services for the O Corporation in consideration of which the O Corporation was to pay the M Corporation $500,000 a year. The $500,000 received by the M Corporation from the O Corporation constitutes personal holding company income.

Example (2). The N Corporation, the entire outstanding capital stock of which is owned by four individuals, is engaged in engineering. The N Corporation entered into a contract with the O Corporation to perform engineering services for the O Corporation, in consideration of which the O Corporation was to pay the N Corporation $50,000. The individual who was to perform the services was not designated (by name or by description) in the contract and no one but the N Corporation had the right to designate (by name or by description) such individual. The $50,000 received by the N Corporation from the O Corporation does not constitute personal holding company income.

(i) Compensation for use of property. The compensation for the use of, or the right to use, property of the corporation which is to be included in personal holding company income consists of amounts received as compensation (however designated and from whomsoever received) for the use of, or the right to use, property of the corporation in any case in which, at any time during the taxable year, 25 percent or more in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation is owned, directly or indirectly by or for an individual entitled to the use of the property whether such right is obtained directly from the corporation or by means of a sublease or other arrangement. The property may consist of a yacht, a city residence, a country house, or any other kind of property. See section 503 and the regulations thereunder and § 39.501-3 (d)

(j) Rents (including interest constituting rent) The rents which are to be included in personal holding company income consist of compensation, however designated, including charter fees, etc., for the use of, or the right to use, real property, or any other kind of property and the interest on debts owed to the corporation, to the extent such debts represent the price for which real property held primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of its trade or business was sold or exchanged by the corporation, but do not include amounts constituting personal holding company income under section 502 (f) and paragraph (i) of this section. However, rents do not constitute personal holding company income if constituting 50 percent or more of the gross income of the corporation.

(k) Mineral, oil, or gas royalties. (1) The income from mineral, oil, or gas royalties is to be included as personal holding company income, unless the aggregate amount of such royalties constitutes 50 percent or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable year and the aggregate amount of deductions allowable for expenses under section 23 (a) (other than compensation for personal services rendered by the shareholders of the corporation) equals 15 percent or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable year.

(2) The term "mineral, oil, or gas royalties" means all royalties, except overriding royalties, received from any interest in mineral, oil, or gas properties. The term "mineral" includes the minerals specified in § 39.23 (m)-1 (d) As used in this subparagraph the term "overriding royalties" means amounts received from the sublessee by the operating company which originally leased and developed the natural resource property in respect of which such overriding royalties are paid.

SEC. 503. Stock ownership—(a) Constructive ownership. For the purpose of determining whether a corporation is a personal holding company, insofar as such determination is based on stock ownership under section 501 (a) (2), section 502 (e), or section 502 (f)—

(1) Stock not owned by individual. Stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries.

(2) Family and partnership ownership. An individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his family or by or for his partner. For the purposes of this paragraph the family of an individual includes only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants.

(3) Options. If any person has an option to acquire stock such stock shall be considered as owned by such person. For the purposes of this paragraph an option to acquire such an option, and each one of a series of such options, shall be considered as an option to acquire such stock.

(4) Application of family-partnership and option rules. Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall be applied:

(A) For the purposes of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 501 (a) (2), if, but only if, the effect is to make the corporation a personal holding company;

(B) For the purposes of section 502 (e) (relating to personal service contracts), or of section 502 (f) (relating to the use of property by shareholders), if, but only if, the effect is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as personal holding company income.

(5) Constructive ownership as actual ownership. Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of paragraph (1) or (3) shall, for the purpose of applying paragraph (1) or (2), be treated as actually owned by such person; but stock constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of paragraph (2) shall not be treated as owned by him for the purpose of again applying such paragraph in order to make another the constructive owner of such stock.

(6) Option rule in lieu of family and partnership rule. If stock may be considered as owned by an individual under either paragraph (2) or (3) it shall be considered as owned by him under paragraph (3).

§ 39.503 (a)-1 Stock ownership. For the purpose of determining whether—

(a) A corporation is a personal holding company, in so far as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirement specified in section 501 (a) (2) and § 39.501-3, or

(b) Amounts received under a personal service contract or from the sale of such a contract constitute personal holding company income in so far as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirement specified in section 502 (e) and paragraph (h) of § 39.502-1, or

(c) Compensation for the use of property constitutes personal holding company income in so far as such determination is based on the stock ownership requirement specified in section 502 (f) and paragraph (i) of § 39.502-1,

stock owned by an individual includes stock constructively owned by him as provided in section 503. For such purpose constructive ownership of stock shall be determined and applied in accordance with the rules provided in section 503 and the regulations thereunder. All forms and classes of stock, however denominated, which represents the interests of shareholders, members, or beneficiaries in the corporation shall be taken into consideration.

§ 39.503 (a)-2 Stock not owned by individual. In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1, stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust shall be considered as being owned proportionately by its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries. For example, if A and B, two individuals, are the exclusive and equal beneficiaries of a trust or estate, and if such trust or estate owns the entire capital stock of the M Corporation, and if the M Corporation in turn owns the entire capital stock of the N Corporation, then the stock of both the M Corporation and the N Corporation shall be considered as being owned equally by A and B as the individuals owning the beneficial interest therein. See also § 39.503 (a)-6.

§ 39.503 (a)-3 Family and partnership ownership. (a) In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1, an individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his family or by or for his partner. For the purposes of such determination the family of an individual includes only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood) spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants.

(b) The application of the family and partnership rule in determining the ownership of stock for the purpose set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1 (a) is illustrated by the following example:

Example. The M Corporation at some time during the last half of the taxable year, had 1,800 shares of outstanding stock, 450 of which were held by various individuals having no relationship to one another and none of whom were partners, and the remaining 1,350 were held by 51 shareholders as follows:

Relationships	Shares		Shares		Shares		Shares		Shares
An individual	A	100	B	20	C	20	D	20	E	20
His father	AF	10	BF	10	CF	10	DF	10	EF	10
His wife	AW	10	BW	40	CW	40	DW	40	EW	40
His brother	AB	10	BB	10	CB	10	DB	10	EB	10
His son	AS	10	BS	40	CS	40	DS	40	ES	40
His daughter by former marriage (son's half-sister)	ASHS	10	BSHS	40	CSHS	40	DSHS	40	ESHS	40
His brother's wife	ABW	10	BBW	10	CBW	10	DBW	100	EBW	10
His wife's father	AWF	10	BWF	10	CWF	110	DWF	10	EWF	10
His wife's brother	AWB	10	BWB	10	CWB	10	DWB	10	EWB	10
His wife's brother's wife	AWBW	10	BWBW	10	CWBW	10	DWBW	10	EWBW	110
Individual's partner	AP	10

By applying the statutory rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) five individuals own more than 50 percent of the outstanding stock as follows:

A (including AF, AW, AB, AS, ASHS, AP)	160
B (including BF, BW, BB, BS, BSHS)	160
CW (including C, CS, CWF, CWB)	220
DB (including D, DF, DBW)	200
EWB (including EW, EWF, EWBW)	170
Total, or more than 50 percent	910

Individual A represents the obvious case where the head of the family owns the bulk of the family stock and naturally is the head of the group. A's partner owns 10 shares of the stock. Individual B represents the case where he is still head of the group because of the ownership of stock by his immediate family. Individuals C and D represent cases where the individuals fall in groups headed in C's case by his wife and in D's case by his brother because of the preponderance of holdings on the part of relatives by marriage. Individual E represents the case where the preponderant holdings of others eliminate that individual from the group.

(c) The method of applying the family and partnership rule as illustrated in the foregoing example also applies in determining the ownership of stock for the purposes stated in § 39.503 (a)-1 (b)

§ 39.503 (a)-4 Options. In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1, if any person has an option to acquire stock, such stock may be considered as owned by such person. The term "option" as used in this section includes an option to acquire such an option and each one of a series of such options, so that the person who has an option on an option to acquire stock may be considered as the owner of the stock.

§ 39.503 (a)-5 Application of family-partnership and option rules. The family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) and § 39.503 (a)-3 and the option rule provided in section 503 (a) (3) and § 39.503 (a)-4 shall be applied—

(a) For the purpose stated in § 39.503 (a)-1 (a) if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the corporation a personal holding company, or

(b) For the purpose stated in § 39.503 (a)-1 (b) if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the amounts received under a personal service contract or from the sale of such a contract personal holding company income, or

(c) For the purpose stated in § 39.503 (a)-1 (c) if, but only if, the effect of such application is to make the compensation for the use of the property personal holding company income. The family and partnership rule and the option rule must be applied independently for each of the purposes stated in § 39.503 (a)-1.

§ 39.503 (a)-6 Constructive ownership as actual ownership. (a) In determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1—

(1) Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of the rule provided in section 503 (a) (1), relating to stock not owned by an individual (see § 39.503 (a)-2) shall be considered as actually owned by such person for the purpose of again applying such rule or of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) (see § 39.503 (a)-3) in order to make another person the constructive owner of such stock, and

(2) Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of the option rule provided in section 503 (a) (3) (see § 39.503 (a)-4) shall be considered as actually owned by such person for the purpose of applying either the rule provided in section 503 (a) (1) relating to stock not owned by an individual, or the family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) in order to make another person the constructive owner of such stock, but

(3) Stock constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of the family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) shall not be considered as actually owned by such individual for the purpose of again applying such rule in order to make another individual the constructive owner of such stock.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A's wife, AW, owns all the stock of the M Corporation, which in turn owns all the stock of the O Corporation. The O Corporation in turn owns all the stock of the P Corporation. Under the rule provided in section 503 (a) (1), relating to stock not owned by an individual, the stock in the P Corporation owned by the O Corporation is considered to be owned constructively by the M Corporation, the sole shareholder of the O Corporation. Such constructive ownership of the stock of the M Corporation is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of again applying such rule in order to make AW, the sole shareholder of the M Corporation, the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation. Similarly, the constructive ownership of the stock by AW is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) in order to make A the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation, if such application is necessary for any of the purposes set forth in §39.503 (a)-1. But the stock thus constructively owned by A may not be considered as actual ownership for the purpose of again applying the family and partnership rule in order to make another member of A's family, for example, A's father, the constructive owner of the stock of the P Corporation.

Example (2). B, an individual, owns all the stock of the R Corporation which has an option to acquire all the stock of the S Corporation, owned by C, an individual, who is not related to B. Under the option rule provided in section 503 (a) (3) the R Corporation may be considered as owning constructively the stock of the S Corporation owned by C. Such constructive ownership of the stock by the R Corporation is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the rule provided in section 503 (a) (1), relating to stock not owned by an individual, in order to make B, the sole shareholder of the R Corporation, the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation. The stock thus constructively owned by B by reason of the application of the rule provided in section 503 (a) (1) likewise is considered as actual ownership for the purpose, if necessary, of applying the family and partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2), in order to make another member of B's family, for example, B's wife, BW, the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation. However, the family and partnership rule could not again be applied so as to make still another individual the constructive owner of the stock of the S Corporation, that is, the stock constructively owned by BW could not be considered as actually owned by her in order to make BW's father the constructive owner of such stock by a second application of the family and partnership rule.

§ 39.503 (a)-7 Option rule in lieu of family and partnership rule. (a) If, in determining the ownership of stock for any of the purposes set forth in § 39.503 (a)-1, stock may be considered as constructively owned by an individual by an application of both the family-partnership rule provided in section 503 (a) (2) (see § 39.503 (a)-3) and the option rule provided in section 503 (a) (3) (see § 39.503 (a)-4) such stock shall be considered as owned constructively by the individual by reason of the application of the option rule.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Two brothers, A and B, each own 10 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, and A's wife, AW, also owns 10 percent of the stock of such corporation. AW's husband, A, has an option to acquire the stock owned by her at any time. It becomes necessary, for one of the purposes stated in section 39.503 (a)-1, to determine the stock ownership of B in the M Corporation. If the family and partnership rule were the only rule that applied in the case, B would be considered, under that rule, as owning 20 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, namely, his own stock plus the stock owned by his brother. In that event, B could not be considered as owning the stock held by AW since (1) AW is not a member of B's family and (2) the constructive ownership of such stock by A through the application of the family and partnership rule in his case is not considered as actual ownership so as to make B the constructive owner by a second application of the same rule with respect to the ownership of the stock. (See § 39.503 (a)-6.) However, there is more than the family and partnership rule involved in this example. As the holder of an option upon the stock, A may be considered the constructive owner of his wife's stock by the application of the option rule and without reference to the family relationship between A and AW. If A is considered as owning the stock of his wife by application of the option rule, then under § 39.503 (a)-6, such constructive ownership by A is regarded as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the family and partnership rule so as to make another member of A's family, for example, B, the constructive owner of the stock. Hence, since A may be considered as owning his wife's stock by applying both the family-partnership rule and the option rule, the provisions of section 503 (a) (6) apply and accordingly A must be considered the constructive owner of his wife's stock under the option rule rather than the family-partnership rule. B thus becomes the constructive owner of 30 percent of the stock of the M Corporation, namely, his own 10 percent, A's 10 percent, and AW's 10 percent constructively owned by A as the holder of an option on the stock.

SEC. 503. Stock ownership. * * *

(b) Convertible securities. Outstanding securities convertible into stock (whether or not convertible during the taxable year) shall be considered as outstanding stock—

(1) For the purpose of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 501 (a) (2), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the corporation a personal holding company;

(2) For the purpose of section 502 (e) (relating to personal service contracts), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as personal holding company income; and

(3) For the purpose of section 502 (f) (relating to the use of property by shareholders), but only if the effect of the inclusion of all such securities is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such subsection as personal holding company income.

The requirement in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) that all convertible securities must be included if any are to be included shall be subject to the exception that, where some of the outstanding securities are convertible only after a later date than in the case of others, the class having the earlier conversion date may be included although the others are not included, but no convertible securities shall be included unless all outstanding securities having a prior conversion date are also included.

§ 39.503 (b)-1 Convertible securities. Under section 503 (b) outstanding securities of a corporation, such as bonds, debentures, or other corporate obligations, convertible into stock of the corporation (whether or not convertible during the taxable year) shall be considered as outstanding stock of the corporation for the purpose of the stock ownership requirement provided in section 501 (a) (2) but only if the effect of such consideration is to make the corporation a personal holding company. Such convertible securities shall be considered as outstanding stock for the purpose of section 502 (e) relating to amounts received under personal service contracts, or of section 502 (f) relating to compensation for the use of property but only if the effect of such consideration is to make the amounts therein referred to includible under such sections as personal holding company income. The consideration of convertible securities as outstanding stock is subject to the exception that, if some of the outstanding securities are convertible only after a later date than in the case of others, the class having the earlier conversion date may be considered as outstanding stock although the others are not so considered, but no convertible securities shall be considered as outstanding stock unless all outstanding securities having a prior conversion date are also so considered. For example, if outstanding securities are convertible in 1952, 1953, and 1954, those convertible in 1952 can be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1953 or 1954, and those convertible in 1952 and 1953 can be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1954. However, the securities convertible in 1953 could not be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1952 and the securities convertible in 1954 could not be properly considered as outstanding stock without so considering those convertible in 1952 and 1953.

SEC. 504. Undistributed subchapter A net income. For the purposes of this subchapter the term "undistributed subchapter A net income" means the subchapter A net income (as defined in section 505) minus—

(a) The amount of the dividends paid credit provided in section 27 (a) without the benefit of paragraphs (3) and (4) thereof (computed without its reduction, under section 27 (b) (1), by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations) but, in the computation of the dividends paid credit for the purposes of this subchapter, the amount allowed under subsection (c) of this section or of section 405 of the Revenue Act of 1938 in the computation of the tax under this subchapter or under Title IA of the Revenue Act of 1938 for any preceding taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937, shall be considered as a dividend paid in such preceding taxable year and not in the year of distribution;

(b) Amounts used or irrevocably set aside to pay or to retire indebtedness of any kind incurred prior to January 1, 1934, if such amounts are reasonable with reference to the size and terms of such indebtedness;

(c) Dividends paid after the close of the taxable year and before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the taxable year, if claimed under this subsection in the return, but only to the extent to which such dividends would have been includible in the computation of the basic surtax credit for the taxable year if distributed during such taxable year; but the amount allowed under this subsection shall not exceed either:

(1) The undistributed Subchapter A net income for the taxable year computed without regard to this subsection; or

(2) 10 per centum of the sum of—

(A) The dividends paid during the taxable year (reduced by the amount allowed under this subsection in the computation of the tax under this subchapter for the taxable year preceding the taxable year or, in the case of a taxable year beginning in 1939, * * *); and

(e) The amount by which the undistributed subchapter A net income determined without reference to this subsection exceeds the amount which could be distributed on the last day of the taxable year as a dividend (1) without violating any action, regulation, rule, order, or proclamation taken, promulgated, made, or issued by, or pursuant to the direction of, the President or any agency that he may designate, under the Trading With the Enemy Act of October 16, 1917, as amended, or the First War Powers Act of 1941, and (2) not subject to a lien in favor of the United States.

[Sec. 504 as amended by sec. 228 (a), Rev. Act 1939; Pub. Law 18 (77th Cong.); secs. 132 (d), 184 (a), 186 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 349, Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.504-1 Undistributed subchapter A net income. The term "undistributed subchapter A net income" means the subchapter A net income (as defined in section 505 and § 39.505-1) minus (a) the amount of the dividends paid credit provided in section 27 (a) (computed without its reduction, under section 27 (b) (1), by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations) (b) amounts used or irrevocably set aside to pay or to retire indebtedness of any kind incurred prior to January 1, 1934, if such amounts are reasonable with reference to the size and the terms of such indebtedness (see § 39.504-2), and (c) dividends paid after the close of the taxable year and before the 15th day of the third month thereafter, if claimed under section 504 (c) in the return, but only to the extent and subject to the limitations contained in that section. In computing the dividends paid credit for the purposes of subchapter A of chapter 2, the amount allowed under section 504 (c) in the computation of the tax under subchapter A for any preceding taxable year is considered a dividend paid in such preceding taxable year and not in the year of distribution.

§ 39.504-2 Amounts used or irrevocably set aside to pay or to retire indebtedness of any kind incurred prior to January 1, 1934—(a) Indebtedness. (1) The term "indebtedness" means an obligation, absolute and not contingent, to pay, on demand or within a given time, in cash or other medium, a fixed amount. The term "indebtedness" does not include the obligation of a corporation on its capital stock.

(2) The indebtedness must have been incurred (or, if incurred by assumption, assumed) by the taxpayer before January 1, 1934. An indebtedness evidenced by bonds, notes, or other obligations issued by a corporation is ordinarily incurred as of the date such obligations are issued and the amount of such indebtedness is the amount represented by the face value of the obligations. In the case of refunding, renewal, or other change in the form of an indebtedness, the giving of a new promise to pay by the taxpayer will not have the effect of changing the date the indebtedness was incurred.

(b) Amounts used or irrevocably set aside. The deduction is allowable, in any taxable year, only for amounts used or irrevocably set aside in that year. The use or irrevocable setting aside must be to effect the extinguishment or discharge of indebtedness. In the case of refunding, renewal, or other change in the form of an indebtedness, the mere giving of a new promise to pay by the taxpayer will not result in an allowable deduction. If amounts are set aside in one year, no deduction is allowable for such amounts for a later year in which actually paid. As long as all other conditions are satisfied, the aggregate amount allowable as a deduction for any taxable year includes all amounts (from whatever source) used and, as well, all amounts (from whatever source) irrevocably set aside, irrespective of whether in cash or other medium. Double deductions are not permitted.

(c) Reasonableness of the amounts with reference to the size and terms of the indebtedness. (1) The reasonableness of the amounts used or irrevocably set aside must be determined by reference to the size and terms of the particular indebtedness. Hence, all the facts and circumstances with respect to the nature, scope, conditions, amount, maturity, and other terms of the particular indebtedness must be shown in each case.

(2) Ordinarily an amount used to pay or retire an indebtedness, in whole or in part, at or prior to the maturity and in accordance with the terms thereof will be considered reasonable, and may be allowable as a deduction for the year in which so used, if no adjustment is required by reason of an amount set aside in a prior year for payment or retirement of the same indebtedness.

(3) All amounts irrevocably set aside for the payment or retirement of an indebtedness in accordance with and pursuant to the terms of the obligation, for example, the annual contribution to trustees required by the provisions of a mandatory sinking fund agreement, will be considered as complying with the statutory requirement of reasonableness. To be considered reasonable it is not necessary that the plan of retirement provide for a retroactive setting aside of amounts for years prior to that in which the plan is adopted. However, if a voluntary plan was adopted before 1934, no adjustment is allowable in respect of the amounts set aside in the years prior to 1934.

(d) General. The burden of proof will rest upon the taxpayer to sustain the deduction claimed. Therefore, the taxpayer must furnish the information required by the return, and such other information as the Commissioner may require in substantiation of the deduction claimed.

§ 39.505 Statutory provisions; subchapter A net income; definition for the purpose of this subchapter.

SEC. 505. Subchapter A net income. For the purposes of this subchapter the term "Subchapter A Net Income" means the net income with the following adjustments:

(a) Additional deductions. There shall be allowed as deductions—

(1) Federal income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year to the extent not allowed as a deduction under section 23; but not including the tax imposed by section 102, section 500, or a section of a prior income-tax law corresponding to either of such sections.

(2) In lieu of the deduction allowed by section 23 (q), contributions or gifts, payment of which is made within the taxable year to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified, to an amount which does not exceed 15 per centum of the taxpayer's net income, computed without the benefit of this paragraph and section 23 (q), and without the deduction of the amount disallowed under subsection (b) of this section. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, payment of any contribution or gift shall be considered as made within the taxable year if and only if it is considered for the purposes of section 23 (q) as made within such year. For disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under this paragraph, see sections 3813 and 162 (g) (2).

(3) In the case of a corporation organized prior to January 1, 1936, to take over the assets and liabilities of the estate of a decedent, amounts paid in liquidation of any liability of the corporation based on the liability of the decedent to make contributions or gifts to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (o) for the purposes therein specified, to the extent such liability of the decedent existed prior to January 1, 1934. No deduction shall be allowed under paragraph (2) of this subsection for a taxable year for which a deduction is allowed under this paragraph.

(b) Deductions not allowed. The aggregate of the deductions allowed under section 23 (a), relating to expenses, and section 23 (l), relating to depreciation, which are allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the corporation, shall be allowed only in an amount equal to the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property, unless it is established (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) to the satisfaction of the Commissioner:

(1) That the rent or other compensation received was the highest obtainable, or, if none was received, that none was obtainable;

(2) That the property was held in the course of a business carried on bona fide for profit; and

(3) Either that there was reasonable expectation that the operation of the property would result in a profit, or that the property was necessary to the conduct of the business.

(c) Net loss carry-over disallowed. The deduction for net operating losses provided in section 23 (s) shall not be allowed.

(e) Income not placed on annual basis. The net income shall be computed without regard to section 47 (c).

[Sec. 505 as amended by secs. 211 (l), 212 (d), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 135 (b) (4), 150 (l), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 3 (b), Pub. Law 378 (81st Cong.); sec. 332 (d), Rev. Act 1950]

SEC. 11. Denial of tax deductions and exemptions [Internal Security Act of 1950]. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no deduction for Federal income-tax purposes shall be allowed in the case of a contribution to or for the use of any organization if at the time of the making of such contribution (1) such organization is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board [the Subversive Activities Control Board] requiring such organization to register under section 7.

* * * * *

§ 39.505-1 Subchapter A net income. (a) The term "subchapter A net income" means, in the case of a domestic corporation, the gross income as defined in section 22 less the deductions provided in section 23 subject to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in section 505. In the case of a foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, which files or causes a return to be filed, the "subchapter A net income" means the net income from sources within the United States (gross income from sources within the United States as defined in section 119 and the regulations thereunder less statutory deductions) subject to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in section 505. In the case of a foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, which files no return the "subchapter A net income" means the gross income from sources within the United States as defined in section 119 and the regulations thereunder less the deductions enumerated in section 505 (a) but without the benefit of any deductions under chapter 1 (see section 233). In the case of a taxable year of less than 12 months on account of a change in the accounting period of the corporation, the subchapter A net income is computed on the basis of the period included in the taxable year, and is not placed on an annual basis under section 47 (c)

(b) The "subchapter A net income" includes interest upon obligations of the United States and obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States, except as provided in section 22 (b) (4). The "subchapter A net income" does not include interest on obligations of States or Territories of the United States or any political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia or of the possessions of the United States.

(c) The foreign tax credit permitted by section 131 with respect to the taxes imposed by chapter 1 is not allowed with respect to the surtax imposed by section 500. However, the deduction of foreign taxes under section 23 (c) is permitted for the purposes of the surtax even if for the purposes of the corporate tax imposed by chapter 1 a credit for such taxes is taken.

(d) In addition to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in section 505 (a), a personal holding company is subject to the provisions of section 505 (b) and (c) in the computation of its subchapter A net income. Section 505 (c) provides that the net operating loss deduction provided by section 23 (s) shall not be allowed. Under section 505 (b) the aggregate of the deductions allowed under section 23 (a) relating to expenses, and section 23 (l) relating to depreciation, which are allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the company shall be allowed only in an amount equal to the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property, unless it is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner:

(1) That the rent or other compensation received was the highest obtainable, or if none was received, that none was obtainable;

(2) That the property was held in the course of a business carried on bona fide for profit; and

(3) Either that there was reasonable expectation that the operation of the property would result in a profit, or that the property was necessary to the conduct of the business.

(e) The burden of proof will rest upon the taxpayer to sustain the deduction claimed. If, in computing its subchapter A net income, a personal holding company claims deductions for expenses and depreciation allocable to the operation and maintenance of property owned or operated by the company, in an aggregate amount in excess of the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property, it shall attach to its income tax return a statement setting forth its claim for allowance of the additional deductions together with a complete statement of the facts and circumstances pertinent to its claim and the arguments on which it relies. Such statement shall set forth:

(1) A description of the property;

(2) The cost or other basis to the corporation and the nature and value of the consideration paid for the property;

(3) The name and address of the person from whom acquired and the date thereof;

(4) The name and address of the person to whom leased or rented, or the person permitted to use the property, and the number of shares of stock, if any, held by such person and the members of his family;

(5) The nature and gross amount of the rent or other compensation received for the use of, or the right to use, the property during the taxable year and for each of the five preceding years and the amount of the expenses incurred with respect to, and the depreciation sustained on, the property for such years;

(6) Evidence that the rent or other compensation was the highest obtainable and, if none was received, a statement of the reasons therefor;

(7) A copy of the contract, lease or rental agreement;

(8) The purpose for which the property was used;

(9) The business carried on by the corporation with respect to which the property was held and the gross income, expenses, and net income derived from the conduct of such business for the taxable year and for each of the five preceding years;

(10) A statement of any reasons which existed for expectation that the operation of the property would be profitable, or a statement of the necessity for the use of the property in the business of the corporation, and the reasons why the property was acquired, and

(11) Any other information pertinent to the taxpayer's claim.

§ 39.505-2 Illustration of computation of subchapter A net income, undistributed subchapter A net income, and surtax. The method of computation of the subchapter A net income, the undistributed subchapter A net income, and the surtax under subchapter A of chapter 2 may be illustrated as follows:

(a) The following facts exist with respect to the O Corporation, a personal holding company which is on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, for the calendar year 1952:

(1) The net income, as computed under chapter 1, amounts to $200,000.

(2) Federal income tax imposed by sections 13 and 15 (after certain credits under section 26) amounted to $73,300 and was paid in installments—$25,655 on March 15, 1952; $25,655 on June 15, 1952; $10,995 on September 15, 1952; $10,995 on December 15, 1952.

(3) Contributions or gifts payment of which is made to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (q) for the purposes therein specified amount to $36,000, of which $10,000 is deducted in arriving at the net income under chapter 1.

(4) Rent in the amount of $10,000 was received from the principal shareholder of the corporation for the use of a country estate which had been previously acquired from such shareholder in exchange for its capital stock. The expenses of the corporation allocable to the maintenance and operation of the country estate amount to $30,000. The yearly depreciation on the depreciable property of the estate amounts to $5,000. The corporation has not established its right to claim the entire amount of the expenses and depreciation applicable to the estate as provided in section 505 (b) and § 39.505-1.

(5) Dividends paid by the corporation to its shareholders during the taxable year which are allowable as a credit under section 27 (a) amount to $80,000.

(6) The amount used during the year to pay indebtedness incurred by the corporation before January 1, 1934, is $31,250.

(7) On March 1, 1953, the corporation paid its shareholders a taxable dividend of $15,000 and in its return, on Form 1120H, claimed a deduction under section 504 (c) of $8,000, that being 10 percent of the dividends paid during the taxable year 1952.

(b) The subchapter A net income, the undistributed subchapter A net income, and the surtax are computed as follows:

Net income under ch. 1		$200,000
Add:
Contributions deductible in computing net income under sec. 21		10,000
Aggregate of expenses and depreciation relating to the country estate in excess of the income derived therefrom		25,000
Net income computed without the benefit of a deduction for contributions and without the benefit of the amount disallowed under sec. 505 (b)		235,000
Less:
Federal income tax	$73,300
Contributions deductible under sec. 505 (a) (2) (15 percent of $235,000)	35,250
		108,550
Subchapter A net income		126,450
Less:
Dividends paid credit	$80,000
Amount used to pay indebtedness	31,250
		111,250
Undistributed subchapter A net income (before applying sec. 504 (c))		15,200
Dividends paid March 1, 1953 (subject to limitation in sec. 504 (c) (2))		$8,000
Undistributed subchapter A net income		7,200
Amount taxable at 75 percent (not in excess of $2,000)		2,000
Amount taxable at 85 percent ($7,200 minus $2,000)		5,200
Surtax on $2,000 at 75 percent		1,500
Surtax on $5,200 at 85 percent		4,420
Total surtax		5,920

SEC. 506. Deficiency dividends—credits and refunds—(a) Credit against unpaid deficiency. If the amount of a deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by this subchapter for any taxable year has been established—

(1) By a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals which has become final; or

(2) By a closing agreement made under section 3760; or

(3) By a final judgment in a suit to which the United States is a party; then a deficiency dividend credit shall be allowed against the amount of the deficiency so established and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law not paid on or before the date when claim for a deficiency dividend credit is filed under subsection (d). The amount of such credit shall be 65 per centum of the amount of deficiency dividends, as defined in subsection (c), not in excess of $2,000, plus 75 per centum of the amount of such dividends in excess of $2,000; but such credit shall not exceed the portion of the deficiency so established which is not paid on or before the date of the closing agreement, or the date the decision of the Board or the judgment becomes final, as the case may be. Such credit shall be allowed as of the date the claim for deficiency dividend credit is filed.

(b) Credit or refund of deficiency paid. When the Commissioner has determined that there is a deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by this subchapter and the corporation has paid any portion of such asserted deficiency and it has been established—

(1) By a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals which has become final; or

(2) By a closing agreement made under section 3760; or

(3) By a final judgment in a suit against the United States for refund—

(A) If such suit is brought within six months after the corporation became entitled to bring suit, and

(B) If claim for refund was filed within six months after the payment of such amount; that any portion of the amount so paid was the whole or a part of a deficiency at the time when paid, then there shall be credited or refunded to the corporation an amount equal to 65 per centum of the amount of deficiency dividends not in excess of $2,000, plus 75 per centum of the amount of such dividends in excess of $2,000, but such credit or refund shall not exceed the portion so paid by the corporation. Such credit or refund shall be made as provided in section 322 but without regard to subsection (b) or subsection (c) thereof. No interest shall be allowed on such credit or refund. No credit or refund shall be made under this subsection with respect to any amount of tax paid after the date of the closing agreement, or the date the decision of the Board or the judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(c) Deficiency dividends—(1) Definition. For the purposes of this subchapter, the term "deficiency dividends" means the amount of the dividends paid, on or after the date of the closing agreement or on or after the date the decision of the Board or the judgment becomes final, as the case may be, and prior to filing claim under subsection (d), which would have been includible in the computation of the basic surtax credit for the taxable year with respect to which the deficiency was asserted if distributed during such taxable year. No dividends shall be considered as deficiency dividends for the purposes of allowance of credit under subsection (a) unless (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) the corporation files, within thirty days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of the Board or judgment becomes final, as the case may be, notification (which specifies the amount of the credit intended to be claimed) of its intention to have the dividends so considered.

(2) Effect on dividends paid credit—(A) For taxable year in which paid. Deficiency dividends paid in any taxable year (to the extent of the portion thereof with respect to which the credit under subsection (a), or the credit or refund under subsection (b), or both, of this section or section 407 of the Revenue Act of 1938, are allowed) shall be subtracted from the basic surtax credit for such year, but only for the purpose of computing the tax under this subchapter for such year and succeeding years.

(B) For prior taxable year. Deficiency dividends paid in any taxable year (to the extent of the portion thereof with respect to which the credit under subsection (a), or the credit or refund under subsection (b), or both, of this section or section 407 of the Revenue Act of 1938, are allowed) shall not be allowed under section 504 (c) in the computation of the tax under this subchapter for any taxable year preceding the taxable year in which paid.

(d) Claim required. No deficiency dividends credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) and no credit or refund shall be made under subsection (b) unless (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) claim therefor is filed within sixty days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of the Board or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(e) Suspension of statute of limitations and stay of collection—(1) Suspension of running of statute. If the corporation files a notification, as provided in subsection (c), to have dividends considered as deficiency dividends, the running of the statute of limitations provided in section 275 or 276 on the making of assessments and the bringing of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection, in respect of the deficiency and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law, shall be suspended for a period of two years after the date of the filing of such notification.

(2) Stay of collection. In the case of any deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by this subchapter established as provided in subsection (a)—

(A) The collection of the deficiency and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided for by law shall, except in cases of jeopardy, be stayed until the expiration of thirty days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of the Board or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(B) If notification has been filed, as provided in subsection (c), the collection of such part of the deficiency as is not in excess of either the credit allowable under subsection (a) or the amount which, in the notification, is specified as intended to be claimed as credit, shall, except in cases of jeopardy, be stayed until the expiration of sixty days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of the Board or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(C) If claim for deficiency dividend credit is filed under subsection (d), the collection of such part of the deficiency as is not in excess of either the credit allowable under subsection (a) or the amount claimed, shall be stayed until the date the claim for credit is disallowed (in whole or in part), and if disallowed in part collection shall be made only of the part disallowed.

No distraint or proceeding in court shall be begun for the collection of an amount the collection of which is stayed under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) during the period for which the collection of such amount is stayed.

(f) Credit or refund denied if fraud, etc. No deficiency dividend credit shall be allowed under subsection (a) and no credit or refund shall be made under subsection (b) if the closing agreement, decision of the Board, or judgment contains a finding that any part of the deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade tax, or to failure to file the return under this subchapter within the time prescribed by law or prescribed by the Commissioner in pursuance of law, unless it is shown that such failure to file is due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect.

(g) Rate for taxable years 1939, 1940, and 1941. * * *

(h) Rate for taxable years after 1941. If the deficiency is established or determined for a taxable year which begins after December 31, 1941, the rates under subsections (a) and (b) used in determining the amount of the credit or refund shall be 75 per centum in lieu of 65 per centum and 85 per centum in lieu of 75 per centum.

(i) Additional credit or refund for prior taxable year. * * * [Not applicable].

[Sec. 506 as amended by sec. 1, Pub. Law 18 (77th Cong.); secs. 185, 186 (d) (1), (i), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.506-1 Purpose and scope of deficiency dividend credit. (a) Section 506 provide a method under which, by virtue of dividend distributions, a corporation may, under certain conditions (see § 39.506-3) be relieved from the payment of a deficiency in the surtax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2, or, if any portion of such deficiency has been paid, may be entitled, under certain conditions (see § 39.506-4), to a credit or refund of such portion. The deficiency must be established in the manner specified in section 506 (a) (1), (2), or (3) or section 506 (b) (1) (2), or (3) and the dividends must be paid on the date so established or within 60 days thereafter. For what constitutes payment of a dividend, see § 39.27 (b)-2.

(b) The benefit of section 506 is not extended to the satisfaction of any interest, additional amounts, or additions to the tax provided by law with respect to the deficiency and such amounts remain payable as if that section had not been enacted. The benefit is denied if the closing agreement, decision of The Tax Court of the United States, or judgment contains a finding that any part of the deficiency is due to fraud with intent to evade the tax, or to a failure to file a timely return without reasonable cause for such failure. See section 506 (f).

§ 39.506-2. Date when decision by Tax Court or court becomes final and date of closing agreement. (a) The date upon which a decision by The Tax Court of the United States becomes final is prescribed in section 1140.

(b) The date upon which a judgment of a court becomes final must be determined upon the basis of the facts in the particular case. Ordinarily, a judgment of a United States district court becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed for taking an appeal, if no such appeal is duly taken within such time; and a judgment of the United States Court of Claims becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for certiorari if no such petition is duly filed within such time.

(c) The date of the closing agreement, made under section 3760, is the date such agreement is approved by the Secretary, the Under Secretary, or an Assistant Secretary, except that a closing agreement with respect to a final determination of tax liability for past years becomes final on the date of its approval by the Commissioner.

§ 39.506-3 Credit against unpaid deficiency—(a) In general. If the amount of a deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2 has been established as provided in section 506 (a) (1), (2) or (3), the corporation, under certain circumstances, is entitled to a deficiency dividends credit which, though it may not exceed the amount of the deficiency, is to be applied against the amount of such deficiency and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law not paid on or before the date when the claim for a deficiency dividends credit is filed under section 506 (d). The amount of the deficiency dividends credit is computed at the rates prescribed in section 506 for the taxable year for which the deficiency was established, and the allowance of the credit is subject to the following conditions, qualifications, and limitations:

(1) The corporation is required under section 506 (c) within 30 days after the date of the closing agreement or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court of the United States or the judgment becomes final, to file a notice of its intention to claim a deficiency dividends credit, which notice shall specify the amount of the credit intended to be claimed;

(2) The corporation is required under section 506 (d) within 60 days after the date of the closing agreement or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court or judgment becomes final, to file a claim with respect to the credit for deficiency dividends;

(3) The deficiency dividends are required under section 506 (c) to be paid prior to the filing of the claim for a deficiency dividends credit and such dividends must be of such a nature as to constitute taxable dividends in the hands of such of the shareholders as are subject to taxation under chapter 1 for the year in which paid (see section 27 (i)) and must be nonpreferential (see section 27 (h)), and

(4) Under section 506 (a) the deficiency dividends credit shall not exceed the portion of the deficiency (not counting the interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax, provided by law) which is not paid on or before the date of the closing agreement, or the date the decision of The Tax Court or the judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(b) Form of notification. The notice of intention to have dividends considered as deficiency dividends for the purposes of the allowance of credit under section 506 (a) shall be made with the requisite declaration on Form 975, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue.

(c) Contents of notification. The notification shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth the following information:

(1) The name and address of the corporation;

(2) The place and date of incorporation;

(3) The amount of the unpaid deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2; how it was established (closing agreement, Tax Court decision or court judgment) the date thereof and the taxable year or years involved;

(4) The amount of the credit intended to be claimed as a deficiency dividends credit; and

(5) Such other information as may be required by the notification form.

(d) Time and place of filing notification. The notification required by section 506 (c) (1) and this section shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention Audit Service Branch, Audit Division, within 30 days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(e) Claim for deficiency dividends credit. For claims for deficiency dividends credits, see § 39.506-5.

§ 39.506-4 Credit or refund of deficiency paid. If the Commissioner has determined that there is a deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2 and the corporation has paid any portion of such asserted deficiency the corporation, under certain circumstances, is entitled to a credit or refund of such deficiency. The amount of the credit or refund is computed at the rates prescribed in section 506 for the taxable year for which the deficiency was established, and the allowance of the credit or refund is subject to the following conditions, qualifications, and limitations:

(a) It must be established that the amount for which credit or refund is sought was the whole or a part of a deficiency at the time when paid, and such fact must be established as provided in section 506 (b) (1) (2) or (3)

(b) The corporation is required under section 506 (d) within 60 days after the date of the closing agreement or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court of the United States or the judgment becomes final, to file a claim for credit or refund,

(c) The "deficiency dividends" are required under section 506 (c) to be paid prior to the filing of the claim for credit or refund and such dividends must be of such a nature as to constitute taxable dividends in the hands of such of the shareholders as are subject to taxation under chapter 1 for the year in which paid (see section 27 (i)) and must be nonpreferential (see section 27 (h))

(d) The credit or refund shall not exceed the portion of the deficiency (not counting the interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax, provided by law) which was paid by the corporation;

(e) The credit or refund shall be made as provided in section 322, but without regard to section 322 (b) (relating to the limitations on the allowance of refunds or credits) or section 322 (c) (relating to the effect of petitions to The Tax Court on refunds or credits)

(f) No credit or refund shall be made under section 506 (b) with respect to any amount of tax paid after the date of the closing agreement, or the date the decision of The Tax Court or the judgment becomes final, as the case may be; and

(g) No interest shall be allowed on the credit or refund.

§ 39.506-5 Claim for deficiency dividends credit or credit or refund.—(a) In general. A claim for a deficiency dividends credit under section 506 (a), relating to credit against unpaid deficiency, and under section 506 (b) relating to credit or refund of deficiency paid, must be filed within 60 days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court of the United States or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

(b) Form of claim. The claim for a deficiency dividends credit, or credit or refund, shall be made in duplicate with the requisite declaration on Form 976, copies of which, upon request, may be procured from any district director of internal revenue.

(c) Contents of claim. There shall be attached to and made a part of the claim a certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors, or other authority authorizing the payment of the dividend with respect to which the claim is filed. In addition the claim shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section and the instructions on the form, set forth the following information:

(1) The name and address of the corporation;

(2) The place and date of incorporation;

(3) The amount of the deficiency determined with respect to the tax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2 and the taxable year or years involved; the amount of the unpaid deficiency or, if the deficiency has been paid in whole or in part, the date of payment and the amount thereof; a statement as to how the deficiency was established, if unpaid, or if paid in whole or in part, how it was established that any portion of the amount paid was a deficiency at the time when paid and in either case whether it was by closing agreement, Tax Court decision or court judgment and the date thereof; if established by a final judgment in a suit against the United States for refund, the date of payment of the deficiency the date claim for refund was filed, and the date the suit was brought; if established by a Tax Court decision or court judgment a copy thereof shall be attached, together with an explanation of how the decision or judgment became final;

(4) The amount and date of payment of the dividend with respect to which the claim for deficiency dividends credit, or credit or refund, is filed;

(5) A statement setting forth the various classes of stock outstanding, the name and address of each shareholder, the class and number of shares held by each on the date of payment of the dividend with respect to which the claim is filed, and the amount of such dividend paid to each shareholder;

(6) The amount claimed as a deficiency dividends credit; and

(7) Such other information as may be required by the claim form.

(d) Time and place of filing claim. The claim required by section 506 (d) and this section shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention Audit Service Branch, Audit Division, within 60 days after the date of the closing agreement, or the date upon which the decision of The Tax Court or judgment becomes final, as the case may be.

§ 39.506-6 Effect of deficiency dividends on dividends paid credit. No duplication of credit allowances with respect to any "deficiency dividends" is permitted. If a corporation claims and receives the benefit of the provisions of section 506 of the Internal Revenue Code or section 407 of the Revenue Act of 1938 based upon a distribution of "deficiency dividends," that distribution does not become a part of the basic surtax credit for the purposes of subchapter A of chapter 2; nor is it made the basis of the 2½-month carry-back credit provided for in section 504 (c)

§ 39.506-7 Suspension of statute of limitations and stay of collection—(a) Suspension of running of statute. If a corporation files a notification of its intent to have certain dividends considered as "deficiency dividends" as provided in section 506 (c) then the running of the statute of limitations upon the assessment and collection of the established deficiency and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law, is suspended for a period of two years after the date of the filing of such notification.

(b) Stay of collection. The Internal Revenue Code provides that, except in case of jeopardy, the collection of the established deficiency and all interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax provided by law, is stayed for a period of 30 days subsequent to the final determination of the amount thereof. If within such 30-day period the corporation files with the Commissioner the prescribed notification of intention to seek the benefit of section 506, the collection of the established deficiency, to the extent of the amount of the credit specified by the corporation in such notification if not in excess of the amount allowable under section 506 (a) is, except in cases of jeopardy, stayed for a period of 60 days subsequent to the final determination of the amount thereof. The filing of a claim for a deficiency dividends credit under section 506 (d) effects a further stay of collection of that portion of the established deficiency covered by the claim if not in excess of the amount allowable under section 506 (a) until the date the claim is disallowed (in whole or in part) by the Commissioner. The Code further provides that where collection has been stayed as above indicated no distraint or proceeding in court shall be begun for the collection of the amount stayed during the period for which it is stayed. The Commissioner, notwithstanding the provisions of section 272 (b) may refrain from assessing the subchapter A deficiency (plus interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax) until the claim for the deficiency dividends credit is disposed of. After such claim is allowed or rejected, either in whole or in part, the entire amount of the deficiency (plus interest, additional amounts, and additions to the tax) will be assessed, if not already assessed. The amount of the claim for the deficiency dividends credit to the extent allowed will be credited against the amount so assessed, and the remainder of the amount assessed will be collected in the usual manner.

SEC. 507. Meaning of terms used—(a) General rule. The terms used in this subchapter shall have the same meaning as when used in chapter 1.

(b) Insurance companies other than life or mutual. Notwithstanding subsection (a), the term "gross income" as used in this subchapter, means, in the case of an insurance company other than life or mutual, the gross income, as defined in section 204 (b) (1), increased by the amount of losses incurred, as defined in section 204 (b) (6), and the amount of expenses incurred, as defined in section 204 (b) (7), and decreased by the amount deductible under section 204 (c) (7) (relating to tax-free interest).

[Sec. 507 as amended by sec. 227 (a), Rev. Act 1939]

SEC. 508. Administrative provisions. All provisions of law (including penalties) applicable in respect of the taxes imposed by chapter 1, shall insofar as not inconsistent with this subchapter, be applicable in respect of the tax imposed by this subchapter, except that the provisions of section 131 shall not be applicable.

§ 39.508–1 Return and payment of tax. A separate return is required for the surtax imposed by section 500. Such returns shall be made on Form 1120H. In the case of a personal holding company which is a domestic corporation, the return is required to be made within the time provided by section 53 and in the case of a foreign corporation within the time provided in section 235. The tax shown by the corporation on its return must be paid in the case of a domestic corporation within the time provided in section 56 and in the case of a foreign corporation within the time provided in section 236. The same provisions of law relating to the period of limitations for assessment and collection which govern the taxes imposed by chapter 1 also apply to the surtax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2. However, since the surtax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2 is a distinct and separate tax from those imposed under chapter 1, the making of a return under chapter 1 will not start the period of limitations for assessment of the surtax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2. If the corporation subject to section 500 fails to file a return the tax may be assessed at any time. If the Commissioner finds a deficiency in respect of the tax imposed by section 500, he is required to follow the same procedure which applies to deficiencies in income tax under chapter 1. The penalties applicable to the income taxes imposed under chapter 1, as well as the provisions of chapter 1 relating to interest and additions to the tax, also apply to the surtax imposed by section 500. The administrative provisions applicable to the surtax imposed by section 500 are not confined to those contained in chapter 1 but embrace all administrative provisions of law which have any application to income taxes.

§ 39.508–2 Determination of tax, assessment, collection. The determination, assessment, and collection of the tax imposed by section 500, and the examination of returns and claims in connection therewith, will be made under such procedure as may be prescribed from time to time by the Commissioner.

§ 39.509–511 Statutory provisions; improper accumulation of surplus; foreign personal holding companies; publicity of returns; cross references.

SEC. 509. Improper accumulation of surplus. For surtax on corporations which accumulate surplus to avoid surtax on shareholders, see section 102.

SEC. 510. Foreign personal holding companies. For provisions relating to foreign personal holding companies and their shareholders, see Supplement P of chapter 1.

SEC. 511. Publicity of returns. For provisions with respect to publicity of returns under this subchapter, see subsection (a) (2) of section 55.

SUBPART F—ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

DISCOVERY OF TAX LIABILITY

SEC. 3604. Returns as to formation, etc., of foreign corporations—(a) Requirement. Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, any attorney, accountant, fiduciary, bank, trust company, financial institution, or other person, who aids, assists, counsels, or advises in, or with respect to, the formation, organization, or reorganization of any foreign corporation, shall, within 30 days thereafter, file with the Commissioner a return.

(b) Form and contents of return. Such return shall be in such form, and shall set forth, under oath, in respect of each such corporation, to the full extent of the information within the possession or knowledge or under the control of the person required to file the return, such information as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary prescribes by regulations as necessary for carrying out the provisions of the income tax laws. Nothing in this section shall be construed to require the filing by an attorney-at-law of a return with respect to any advice given or information obtained through the relationship of attorney and client.

(c) Penalty. Any person required under subsection (a) to file a return, or to supply any information, who willfully fails to file such return, or supply such information, at the time or times required by law or regulations, shall, in lieu of other penalties provided by law for such offense, be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $2,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

§ 39.3604–1 Information returns—(a) General. (1) Any attorney (except as provided in paragraph (b) (4) of this section), accountant, fiduciary, bank, trust company, financial institution, or other person, who aids, assists, counsels, or advises in, or with respect to, the formation, organization, or reorganization of any foreign corporation shall file with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the return of such person must be filed under section 53 within 30 days after giving such aid, assistance, counsel, or advice, an information return as provided in this section and section 3604 (a). The return must be filed in every such case (i) regardless of the nature of the counsel or advice given, whether for or against the formation, organization, or reorganization of the foreign corporation, or the nature of the aid or assistance rendered and (ii) regardless of the action taken upon the advice or counsel, that is, whether the foreign corporation is actually formed, organized, or reorganized.

(2) If, in a particular case, the aid, assistance, counsel, or advice given by any person extends over a period of more than one day and not for more than 30 days, such person, to avoid the multiple filing of returns, may file a single return for the entire period. In such case, the return shall be filed within 30 days from the first day of such period. If, in a particular case, the aid, assistance, counsel, or advice given by any person extends over a period of more than 30 days, such person may file a return at the end of each 30 days included within such period and at the end of the fractional part of a 30-day period, if any, extending beyond the last full 30 days. In each such case, the return must disclose all the required information which was not reported on a prior return.

(b) Special provisions—(1) Employers. In the case of aid, assistance, counsel, or advice in or with respect to, the formation, organization, or reorganization of a foreign corporation given by a person in whole or in part through the medium of subordinates or employees (including, in the case of a corporation, the officers thereof) the return of the employer must set forth to the full extent all information prescribed by this section and §§ 39.3604-2 and 39.3604-3, including that which, as an incident to such employment, is within the possession or knowledge or under the control of such subordinates or employees.

(2) Employees. The obligation of a subordinate or employee (including, in the case of a corporation, the officers thereof) to file a return with respect to any aid, assistance, counsel, or advice in or with respect to the formation, organization, or reorganization of a foreign corporation, given as an incident to his employment, will be satisfied if a complete and accurate return as prescribed by this section and §§ 39.3604-2 and 39.3604-3 is duly filed by the employer setting forth all of the information within the possession or knowledge or under the control of such subordinate or employee. Clerks, stenographers, and other subordinates or employees, rendering aid or assistance solely of a clerical or mechanical character in or with respect to the formation, organization, or reorganization of a foreign corporation are not required to file returns by reason of such services.

(3) Partners. In the case of aid, assistance, counsel, or advice in or with respect to the formation, organization, or reorganization of a foreign corporation given by one or more members of a partnership in the course of its business, the obligation of each such individual member to file a return will be satisfied if a complete and accurate return, as prescribed by this section and §§ 39.3604-2 and 39.3604-3, is duly filed by the partnership, executed by all the members of the firm who gave any such aid, assistance, counsel, or advice. If, however, the partnership has been dissolved at the time the return is due, individual returns must be filed by each member of the former partnership who gave any such aid, assistance, counsel, or advice.

(4) Attorneys at law. An attorney at law is not required to file a return with respect to any advice given or information obtained through the relationship of attorney and client.

(5) Returns jointly made. If two or more persons aid, assist, counsel, or advise in or with respect to the formation, organization, or reorganization of a particular foreign corporation, any two or more of such persons may, in lieu of filing several returns, jointly execute and file one return.

(c) Penalties. For criminal penalties for failure to file the returns required by this section, §§ 39.3604-2 and 39.3604-3, and by section 3604 (a) see section 3604 (c)

§ 39.3604-2 Form of return. The returns under § 39.3604-1 shall be made on Form 959. Such forms may, upon request, be procured from any district director of internal revenue. Each person should carefully prepare his return so as to set forth fully and clearly the information called for therein. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be accepted as meeting the requirements of the Code.

§ 39.3604-3 Contents of returns and verification. (a) The return shall, in accordance with the provisions of §§ 39.3604-1, 39.3604-2, and this section and the instructions on the form, set forth the following information to the full extent such information is within the knowledge or possession or under the control of the person required to file the return:

(1) The name and address of the person (or persons) to whom and the person (or persons) for whom or on whose behalf the aid, assistance, counsel, or advice was given;

(2) A complete statement of the aid, assistance, counsel, or advice given;

(3) The name and address of the foreign corporation and the country under the laws of which it was formed, organized, or reorganized;

(4) The month and year when the foreign corporation was formed, organized, or reorganized;

(5) A statement of the manner in which the formation, organization, or reorganization of the foreign corporation was effected;

(6) A complete statement of the reasons for, and the purposes sought to be accomplished by, the formation, organization, or reorganization of the foreign corporation;

(7) A statement showing the classes and kinds of assets transferred to the foreign corporation in connection with its formation, organization, or reorganization, including a detailed list of any stock or securities included in such assets, and a statement showing the names and addresses of the persons who were the owners of such assets immediately prior to the transfer;

(8) The names and addresses of the shareholders of the foreign corporation at the time of the completion of its formation, organization, or reorganization, showing the classes of stock and number of shares held by each;

(9) The name and address of the person (or persons) having custody of the books of account and records of the foreign corporation; and

(10) Such other information as may be required by the return form.

(b) If a person aids, assists, counsels, or advises in or with respect to the formation, organization, or reorganization of more than one foreign corporation, a separate return must be filed with respect to each foreign corporation.

(c) Every return shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY

§ 39.3612 Statutory provisions; returns executed by Commissioner or district director

SEC. 3612. Returns executed by Commissioner or collector—(a) Authority of collector If any person fails to make and file a return or list at the time prescribed by law or by regulation made under authority of law, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return or list, the collector or deputy collector shall make the return or list from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise.

(b) Authority of Commissioner. In any such case the Commissioner may, from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise—

(1) To make return. Make a return, or

(2) To amend collector's return. Amend any return made by a collector or deputy collector.

(c) Legal status of returns. Any return or list so made and subscribed by the Commissioner, or by a collector or deputy collector and approved by the Commissioner, shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

(d) Additions to tax. * * *

(3) Gross reference. For additions to tax in the case of income tax, see sections 291 and 293 * * *

(e) * * *

(f) Determination and assessment. The Commissioner shall determine and assess all taxes, other than stamp taxes, as to which returns or lists are so made under the provisions of this section.

§ 39.3614-3617 Statutory provisions; examination of books and witnesses; summons from district director to produce books and give testimony; penalties; penalties and awards to informers with respect to illegally produced petroleum.

SEC. 3614. Examination of books and witnesses.—(a) To determine liability of the taxpayer. The Commissioner, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or for the purpose of making a return where none has been made, is authorized, by any officer or employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, including the field service, designated by him for that purpose, to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and may require the attendance of the person rendering the return or of any officer or employee of such person, or the attendance of any other person having knowledge in the premises, and may take his testimony with reference to the matter required by law to be included in such return, with power to administer oaths to such person or persons.

(b) To determine liability of a transferee. The Commissioner, for the purpose of determining the liability at law or in equity of a transferee of the property of any person with respect to any Federal taxes imposed upon such person, is hereby authorized, by any officer or employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, including the field service, designated by him for that purpose, to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon such liability, and may require the attendance of the transferor or transferee, or of any officer or employee of such person, or the attendance of any other person having knowledge in the premises, and may take his testimony with reference to the matter, with power to administer oaths to such person or persons.

SEC. 3615. Summons from collector to produce books and give testimony—(a) General authority. It shall be lawful for the collector, subject to the provisions of this section to summon any person to appear before him and produce books at a time and place named in the summons, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories, under oath, respecting any objects or income liable to tax or the returns thereof. The collector may summon any person residing or found within the State or Territory in which his district lies; and when the person intended to be summoned does not reside and can not be found within such State or Territory, he may enter any collection district where such person may be found and there make the examination herein authorized. And to this end he may there exercise all the authority which he might lawfully exercise in the district for which he was commissioned.

(b) Acts creating liability. Such summons may be issued—

(1) Refusal or neglect to comply with notice requiring return. If any person, on being notified or required as provided in section 3611 shall refuse or neglect to render such list or return within the time required, or

(2) Failure to render return on time. Whenever any person who is required to deliver a monthly or other return of objects subject to tax fails to do so at the time required, or

(3) Erroneous, false, or fraudulent return. Whenever any person who is required to deliver a monthly or other return of objects subject to tax delivers any return which, in the opinion of the collector, is erroneous, false, or fraudulent, or contains any undervaluation or understatement, or

(4) Refusal to permit examination of books. Whenever any person who is required to deliver a monthly or other return of objects subject to tax refuses to allow any regularly authorized Government officer to examine his books.

(c) Persons liable. Such summons may be issued to—

(1) Persons mentioned in subsection (b). Any person mentioned in subsection (b), or

(2) Persons having books. Any other person having possession, custody, or care of books of account containing entries relating to the business of any person mentioned in subsection (b), or

(3) Other persons. Any other person the collector may deem proper.

(d) Service. Such summons shall in all cases be served by a deputy collector of the district where the person to whom it is directed may be found, by an attested copy delivered to such person in hand, or left at his last and usual place of abode, allowing such person one day for each twenty-five miles he may be required to travel, computed from the place of service to the place of examination; and the certificate of service signed by such deputy shall be evidence of the facts it states on the hearing of an application for an attachment. When the summons requires the production of books, it shall be sufficient if such books are described with reasonable certainty.

(e) Enforcement. Whenever any person summoned under this section neglects or refuses to obey such summons, or to give testimony, or to answer interrogatories as required, the collector may apply to the judge of the district court or to a United States commissioner for the district within which the person so summoned resides for an attachment against him as for a contempt. It shall be the duty of the judge or commissioner to hear the application, and, if satisfactory proof is made, to issue an attachment, directed to some proper officer, for the arrest of such person, and upon his being brought before him to proceed to a hearing of the case; and upon such hearing the judge or the United States commissioner shall have power to make such order as he shall deem proper not inconsistent with the law for the punishment of contempts, to enforce obedience to the requirements of the summons and to punish such person for his default or disobedience.

SEC. 3616. Penalties. Whenever any person—

(a) False returns. Delivers or discloses to the collector or deputy any false or fraudulent list, return, account, or statement, with intent to defeat or evade the valuation, enumeration, or assessment intended to be made; or,

(b) Neglect to obey summons. Being duly summoned to appear to testify, or to appear and produce books as required under section 3615, neglects to appear or to produce said books—he shall be fined not exceeding $1,000, or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, with costs of prosecution.

(c) Cross reference. * * *

SEC. 3617. Penalties and awards to informers with respect to illegally produced petroleum—(a) Failure to file return. Any person liable for tax on any income from illegally produced petroleum, who willfully fails to make return showing such income within the time prescribed by law shall, in addition to all other penalties prescribed by law, be liable to a civil penalty of $500 plus $50 for each day during which such failure continues.

(b) Reward for information. Any person not an officer or employee of the United States who furnishes to the Commissioner or any collector original information leading to the recovery from any other person of any penalty under this section may be awarded and paid by the Commissioner a compensation of one-half the penalty so recovered, as determined by the Commissioner.

(c) Income defined. As used in this section, the term "income from illegally produced petroleum" means any income (not shown on a return made within the time prescribed by law) arising out of any sale or purchase of crude petroleum withdrawn from the ground subsequent to January 1, 1932, in violation of any State or Federal law (not including illegal withdrawal the penalties for which have been mitigated or satisfied in pursuance of law prior to May 10, 1934), or arising out of any fee derived from acting as agent for any seller or purchaser in connection with a sale or purchase of such petroleum or products thereof, or any amount illegally received by any person charged with the enforcement of law with respect to such petroleum or products thereof.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

§ 39.3631–3633 Statutory provisions; restriction on examination of taxpayers; authority to administer oaths, take testimony, and certify; jurisdiction of district courts to enforce summons, etc.

SEC. 3631. Restrictions on examination of taxpayers. No taxpayer shall be subjected to unnecessary examinations or investigations, and only one inspection of a taxpayer's books of account shall be made for each taxable year unless the taxpayer requests otherwise or unless the Commissioner, after investigation, notifies the taxpayer in writing that an additional inspection is necessary.

SEC. 3632. Authority to administer oaths, take testimony, and certify—(a) Internal revenue personnel—(1) Persons in charge of administration of internal revenue laws generally. Every collector, deputy collector, internal revenue agent, and internal revenue officer assigned to duty under an internal revenue agent, is authorized to administer oaths and to take evidence touching any part of the administration of the internal revenue laws with which he is charged, or where such oaths and evidence are authorized by law or regulation authorized by law to be taken.

(2) Persons in charge of exports and drawbacks. Every collector of internal revenue and every superintendent of exports and drawbacks is authorized to administer such oaths and to certify to such papers as may be necessary under any regulation prescribed under the authority of the internal revenue laws.

(b) Others. Any oath or affirmation required or authorized by any internal revenue law or by any regulations made under authority thereof may be administered by any person authorized to administer oaths for general purposes by the law of the United States, or of any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, wherein such oath or affirmation is administered, or by any consular officer of the United States. This subsection shall not be construed as an exclusive enumeration of the persons who may administer such oaths or affirmations.

SEC. 3633. Jurisdiction of district courts—(a) To enforce summons. If any person is summoned under the internal revenue laws to appear, to testify, or to produce books, papers, or other data, the district court of the United States for the district in which such person resides shall have jurisdiction by appropriate process to compel such attendance, testimony, or production of books, papers, or other data.

(b) To issue orders, processes, and judgments. For authority of district courts to issue orders, processes, and judgments for enforcement of internal revenue laws, see section 3799 [3800].

GENERAL COLLECTION PROVISIONS

SEC. 3653. Prohibition of suits to restrain assessment or collection—(a) Tax. Except as provided in sections 272 (a), 871 (a), and 1012 (a), no suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court.

(b) Liability of transferee or fiduciary. No suit shall be maintained in any court for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of (1) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer in respect of any income, war-profits, excess-profits, or estate tax, (2) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a donor in respect of any gift tax, or (3) the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3467 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., Title 31, sec. 192) in respect of any such tax.

SEC. 3656. Payment by check and money orders—(a) Certified, cashiers', and treasurers' checks and money order—(1) Authority to receive. It shall be lawful for collectors to receive for internal revenue taxes or in payment of stamps to be used in payment of internal revenue taxes certified, cashiers', and treasurers' checks drawn on National and State banks and trust companies, and United States postal, bank, express, and telegraph money orders, during such time and under such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe.

(2) Discharge of liability—(A) Check duly paid. No person who may be indebted to the United States on account of internal revenue taxes or stamps used or to be used in payment of internal revenue taxes who shall have tendered a certified, cashier's, or treasurer's check or money order as provisional payment therefor, in accordance with the terms of this subsection, shall be released from the obligation to make ultimate payment thereof until such certified, cashier's, or treasurer's check or money order so received has been duly paid.

(B) Check unpaid. If any such check or money order so received is not duly paid, the United States shall, in addition to its right to exact payment from the party originally indebted therefor, have a lien for the amount of such check upon all the assets of the bank on which drawn or for the amount of such money order upon all the assets of the issuer thereof; and such amount shall be paid out of its assets in preference to any or all other claims whatsoever against said bank or issuer except the necessary costs and expenses of administration and the reimbursement of the United States for the amount expended in the redemption of the circulating notes of such bank.

(b) Other checks—(1) Authority to receive. Collectors may receive checks in addition to those specified in subsection (a) in payment of taxes other than those payable by stamp during such time and under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe.

(2) Ultimate liability. If a check so received is not paid by the bank on which it is drawn the person by whom such check has been tendered shall remain liable for the payment of the tax and for all legal penalties and additions to the same extent as if such check had not been tendered.

[Sec. 3656 as amended by Pub. Law 541 (78th Cong.)]

§ 39.3656–1 Tax paid by check. District directors of internal revenue may accept uncertified checks in payment of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes, provided such checks are collectible at par, that is, for their full amount, without any deduction for exchange or other charges. The district director will stamp on the face of each check before deposit the words "This check is in payment of an obligation to the United States and must be paid at par. No protest," with his name and title. The day on which the district director receives the check will be considered the date of payment, so far as the taxpayer is concerned, unless the check is returned dishonored. If one check is remitted to cover two or more persons' taxes, the remittance must be accompanied by a letter of transmittal stating—

(a) The name of the drawer of the check;

(b) The amount of the check;

(c) The amount of any cash, money order, or other instrument included in the same remittance;

(d) The name of each person whose tax is to be paid by the remittance;

(e) The amount of the payment on account of each person; and

(f) The kind of tax paid.

§ 39.3657 Statutory provisions; payment of tax by United States notes and certificates of indebtedness.

SEC. 3657. Payment by United States notes and certificates of indebtedness. Collectors may receive, at par with an adjustment for accrued interest, notes or certificates of indebtedness issued by the United States in payment of income, war profits, and excess profits taxes, and any other taxes payable other than by stamp, during such time and under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe.

§ 39.3657–1 Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, and Treasury bills in payment of income and profits taxes. (a) Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, or Treasury bills of any series (not including interim receipts issued by Federal reserve banks in lieu of definitive certificates, notes, or bills) may be tendered at or before maturity in payment of income or profits taxes payable under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, due on the date on which the certificates, notes, or bills mature or a specified prior date, but only if such certificates, notes, or bills, according to the express terms of their issue, are made acceptable in payment of such income or profits taxes. If the taxes for which the certificates, notes, or bills are tendered in payment become due on the same date as that on which such certificates, notes, or bills mature, they will be accepted at par plus accrued interest, if any, payable with the principal (not represented by coupons attached) in payment of such taxes. If the taxes for which the certificates, notes, or bills are tendered in payment become due on a date prior to that on which the certificates, notes, or bills mature, they will be accepted at the value specified in the terms under which such certificates, notes, or bills were issued. All interest coupons attached to Treasury certificates of indebtedness or Treasury notes shall be detached by the taxpayer before such certificates or notes are tendered in payment of taxes.

(b) Receipts given by a district director of internal revenue for Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, or Treasury bills received in payment of income or profits taxes as provided in this section shall contain an adequate description of such certificates, notes, or bills, and a statement of the value, including accrued interest, if any, payable with the principal (not represented by coupons attached) at which accepted, and shall show that the certificates, notes, or bills are tendered by the taxpayer and received by the district director, subject to no condition, qualification, or reservation whatsoever, in payment of an amount of taxes no greater than such value. Any certificate, note, or bill offered in payment of income or profits taxes under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code subject to any condition, qualification, or reservation, or for any greater amount than the value at which acceptable in payment of taxes, as specified in the terms under which such certificate, note, or bill was issued, shall not be deemed to be duly tendered and shall be returned to the taxpayer.

(c) For the purpose of saving taxpayers the expense of transmitting such Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, or Treasury bills to the office of the district director of internal revenue in whose district the taxes are payable, taxpayers desiring to pay income or profits taxes with such certificates, notes, or bills acceptable in payment of taxes may deposit such certificates, notes, or bills with a Federal reserve bank or branch, subject to the condition that the Federal reserve bank or branch shall issue a receipt in the name of the district director of internal revenue, describing the certificates, notes, or bills by par or dollar face amount and stating on the face of the receipt that the certificates, notes, or bills represented thereby are held by the bank or branch for redemption at the value specified in the terms under which the certificates, notes, or bills were issued, and application of the proceeds in payment of income or profits taxes due on a specified date by the taxpayer named therein.

§ 39.3657–2 Acceptance of Treasury Savings Notes, Series A, Series B, and Series D, in payment of income (including excess profits) taxes. (a) (1) Notes of the United States designated as Treasury Savings Notes, Series A, Series B, and Series D, may be accepted in payment of income taxes (current and back personal and corporation taxes, and excess profits taxes) at par and accrued interest (but no accrual beyond the maturity date) In the case of Treasury Savings Notes, Series D, interest will be accrued to the month, inclusive, in which presented. In the case of Treasury Savings Notes, Series A and Series B, interest will be accrued to the day when the taxes are due, if such day falls on the fifteenth day of a calendar month, whether the notes are received on or before that day; if the taxes are due on any other day of the month than the fifteenth, accrued interest will be credited to the accrual date next preceding the day when the taxes are due. District directors of internal revenue are authorized and directed to accept Treasury Savings Notes, Series A and Series D, at any time and to accept Treasury Savings Notes, Series B, at any time after two months from the issue date. For example, a Treasury Savings Note, Series B, dated July 15, 1953, may be presented for credit against taxes due September 15, 1953, but a note dated August 15, 1953, may not be accepted for credit against taxes due before October 15, 1953.

(2) Such notes may be accepted only in payment of income (including excess profits) taxes (current and back) due from the original purchaser thereof or his estate. Such notes shall be in the name of the taxpayer (individual, corporation, or other entity) and may be presented for tax payment by only the taxpayer, his agent, or his estate. There is no limit upon the amount of such notes which may be accepted in payment of income (including excess profits) taxes.

(3) Such notes, inscribed in the name of a taxpayer, may be accepted in payment of income tax withheld at the source by such taxpayer and such notes inscribed in the name of a taxpayer may be accepted in payment of transferee liability assessed against such taxpayer for income (including excess profits) taxes.

(b) District directors of internal revenue shall not in any case allow credit to a taxpayer on account of such notes, or accept such notes, for an amount greater than their principal amount plus accrued interest, nor shall such notes be accepted in an amount (including accrued interest) greater than the unpaid liability of the taxpayer. Such notes shall be forwarded to the district director of internal revenue with whom the tax return is filed, at the risk and expense of the taxpayer, and, for the taxpayer's protection, should be forwarded by registered mail, if not presented in person.

SEC. 3658. Fractional parts of a cent. In the payment of any tax under this title not payable by stamp a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

SEC. 3661. Enforcement of liability for taxes collected. Whenever any person is required to collect or withhold any internal-revenue tax from any other person and to pay such tax over to the United States, the amount of tax so collected or withheld shall be held to be a special fund in trust for the United States. The amount of such fund shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner and subject to the same provisions and limitations (including penalties) as are applicable with respect to the taxes from which such fund arose.

LIEN FOR TAXES

§ 39.3670–3673 Statutory provisions; property subject to lien; period of lien, validity against mortgagees, pledgees, purchasers, and judgment creditors; release of lien.

SEC. 3670. Property subject to lien. If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same after demand, the amount (including any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to such tax, together with any costs that may accrue in addition thereto) shall be a lien in favor of the United States upon all property and rights to property, whether real or personal, belonging to such person.

SEC. 3671. Period of lien. Unless another date is specifically fixed by law, the lien shall arise at the time the assessment list was received by the collector and shall continue until the liability for such amount is satisfied or becomes unenforceable by reason of lapse of time.

SEC. 3672. Validity against mortgagees, pledgees, purchasers, and judgment creditors—(a) Invalidity of lien without notice. Such lien shall not be valid as against any mortgagee, pledgee, purchaser, or judgment creditor until notice thereof has been filed by the collector—

(1) Under State or Territorial laws. In the office in which the filing of such notice is authorized by the law of the State or Territory in which the property subject to the lien is situated, whenever the State or Territory has by law authorized the filing of such notice in an office within the State or Territory; or

(2) With clerk of district court. In the office of the clerk of the United States district court for the judicial district in which the property subject to the lien is situated, whenever the State or Territory has not by law authorized the filing of such notice in an office within the State or Territory; or

(3) With clerk of District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. In the office of the clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, if the property subject to the lien is situated in the District of Columbia.

(b) (1) Exception in case of securities. Even though notice of a lien provided in section 3670 has been filed in the manner prescribed in subsection (a) of this section, or notice of a lien provided in section 3186 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, has been filed in the manner prescribed in such section or subsection (a) of this section, the lien shall not be valid with respect to a security, as defined in paragraph (2) of this subsection, as against any mortgagee, pledgee, or purchaser, of such security, for an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, if at the time of such mortgage, pledge, or purchase such mortgagee, pledgee, or purchaser is without notice or knowledge of the existence of such lien.

(2) Definition of security. As used in this subsection the term "security" means any bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness, issued by any corporation (including one issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), with interest coupons or in registered form, share of stock, voting trust certificate, or any certificate of interest or participation in, certificate of deposit or receipt for, temporary or interim certificate for, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase, any of the foregoing; negotiable instrument; or money.

(3) Applicability of subsection. Except where the lien has been enforced by a proceeding, suit, or civil action which has become final before the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1939, this subsection shall apply regardless of the time when the mortgage, pledge, or purchase was made or the lien arose.

SEC. 3673. Release of lien. Subject to such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe, the collector charged with an assessment in respect of any tax, may issue a certificate of release of the lien if—

(a) Liability satisfied or unenforceable. The collector finds that the liability for the amount assessed, together with all interest in respect thereof, has been satisfied or has become unenforceable by reason of lapse of time; or

(b) Bond accepted. There is furnished to the collector and accepted by him a bond that is conditioned upon the payment of the amount assessed, together with all interest in respect thereof, within the time prescribed by law (including any extension of such time), and that is in accordance with such requirements relating to terms, conditions, and form of the bond and sureties thereon, as may be specified in the regulations.

§ 39.3673–1 Release of liens—(a) Liability satisfied or unenforceable. The district director of internal revenue to whom is charged an assessment in respect of any internal revenue tax shall issue a certificate of release of the tax lien whenever he finds that the liability for the amount assessed (together with all interest in respect thereof) has been satisfied or has become unenforceable. The word "unenforceable" as here used means unenforceable as a matter of law, and not merely uncollectible or unenforceable as a matter of fact. Tax liabilities frequently are unenforceable in fact for the time being, due to the temporary nonpossession by the taxpayer of discoverable property or property rights. In all cases the liability for the payment of the tax continues until satisfaction of the tax in full or until the expiration of the statutory period for collection, including such period as the taxpayer by consent in writing may agree with the Commissioner shall constitute the time within which the tax assessed may lawfully be collected. District directors should continue to investigate carefully all cases of delinquent taxpayers where notice of lien has been filed with a view of obtaining, before the expiration of the collection period, such written consent for the extension of the collection period, whenever it is reasonably possible that the taxpayer may, in the future, acquire property or property rights from which the tax liability may be satisfied.

(b) Bond accepted. The district director may in his discretion issue a certificate of release of the tax lien if he is furnished and accepts a bond that is conditioned upon the payment of the amount assessed (together with all interest in respect thereof) within the time agreed upon in the bond, but not later than 6 months before the expiration of the statutory period for collection, including any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the Commissioner and the taxpayer. The form of any bond so furnished shall be the standard form (Form 1131) entitled "Bonds for Release of Federal Tax Lien." Such bond shall be executed by a surety company holding a certificate of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury as an acceptable surety on Federal bonds, except that, when specifically authorized by the Commissioner, such bond may be executed by a surety or sureties, individual or corporate, other than a surety company.

SEC. 3674. Partial discharge of property—(a) Property double the amount of the liability. Subject to such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe, the collector charged with an assessment in respect of any tax may issue a certificate of partial discharge of any part of the property subject to the lien if the collector finds that the fair market value of that part of such property remaining subject to the lien is at least double the amount of the liability remaining unsatisfied in respect of such tax and the amount of all prior liens upon such property.

(b) Part payment. Subject to such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe, the collector charged with an assessment in respect of any tax may issue a certificate of discharge of any part of the property subject to the lien if there is paid over to the collector in part satisfaction of the liability in respect of such tax an amount determined by the Commissioner, which shall not be less than the value, as determined by him, of the interest of the United States in the part to be so discharged. In determining such value the Commissioner shall give consideration to the fair market value of the part to be so discharged and to such liens thereon as have priority to the lien of the United States.

§ 39.3674–1 Partial discharge of property—(a) Remaining property double the amount of liability. The district director may in his discretion issue a certificate of discharge of any part of the property subject to the tax lien if he finds that the fair market value of the part of the property not released from such lien is at least double the amount of the existing liability in respect of such tax plus double the amount of all liens prior to that of the tax lien. In general, fair market value is that amount which one ready and willing but not compelled to buy would pay to another ready and willing but not compelled to sell the property. District directors must be conservative in determining property values and should make careful inquiry with respect thereto.

(b) Part payment of liability. (1) In no case shall a certificate discharging property from a Federal tax lien be issued under the provisions of section 3674 (b) unless there is first made a payment in such amount as the Commissioner has determined, to be applied towards satisfaction of the tax liability which gave rise to the Federal lien. In determining the amount to be paid, the Commissioner will take into consideration all the facts and circumstances of the case, including the expenses to which the Government has been put in the matter. In no case shall the amount to be paid be less than the value of the interest of the United States in the property with respect to which the certificate of discharge is issued, as such value has been determined by the Commissioner in the light of the fair market value of the property and the amount of all liens and encumbrances thereon having priority over the Federal tax lien.

(2) Any person desiring that a certificate discharging property from a Federal tax lien be issued under the provisions of section 3674 (b) should present to the district director of internal revenue charged with the assessment in respect of the tax, a written application requesting that the certificate be issued. Such application should give the reasons for the request, and should clearly describe the property with respect to which the discharge is desired. In support of the request, the applicant must furnish the district director with proof sufficient to establish satisfactorily the fair market value of the property, the amounts, character, and dates (both of execution and of record) of all encumbrances of record prior to the Federal lien, as well as the amount and character of any unrecorded encumbrances believed to be prior to the Federal lien (including information as to how and when all such encumbrances arose) Appropriate references must be made to the pages and volumes of the recording books in which any such encumbrances have been recorded.

(3) The district director should review the proof, check the accuracy of all material statements made and forward to the Commissioner a report of the case together with his recommendation. The district director's report should include a statement of the expenses of his office incident to the placing and discharging of the lien as well as his conclusions with respect to the fair market value of the property involved and the value of the Government's interest therein, viewed in the light of such fair market value and the amount of liens and encumbrances on the property believed to have priority over the lien of the United States. Information as to the nature and amount of such encumbrances sufficient to enable a determination to be made whether, as a matter of law, they actually have priority over the Government's lien, should be included in the report.

(4) The report of the district director should also show the year or years and the dates of all assessments involved, the lists on which such assessments appear and the amounts thereof, the office or offices in which, and the dates when, notices of the Federal tax lien or liens were filed, and any payments made in partial satisfaction of the tax liability. In his discretion, the district director may submit with his report whatever documentary evidence he deems to be relevant. Upon receipt of the district director's report and recommendation, the question whether a certificate of discharge may be issued and the amount to be paid as a prerequisite to its issuance, will be considered.

(5) When so authorized by the Commissioner, the district director may issue a certificate discharging from the Federal tax lien such property as the Commissioner has authorized to be discharged, provided the amount determined by the Commissioner as a prerequisite to the issuance of the certificate is first paid to the district director to be applied by him towards satisfaction of the tax.

§ 39.3675–3676 Statutory provisions; effect of certificates of release or partial discharge; single bond covering release of lien and payment of income tax deficiency.

SEC. 3675. Effect of certificates of release or partial discharge. A certificate of release or of partial discharge issued under this subchapter [subchapter B of chapter 36] shall be held conclusive that the lien upon the property covered by the certificate is extinguished.

SEC. 3676. Single bond covering release of lien and payment of income tax deficiency. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulation provide for the acceptance of a single bond complying both with the requirements of section 272 (j) (relating to the extension of time for the payment of a deficiency) and the requirements of subsection (b) of section 3673.

§ 39.3676–1 Single bond covering release of lien and payment of deficiency. In cases where the district director issues a certificate of release of tax lien and at the same time an extension of time is granted for the payment of the deficiency in tax pursuant to the provisions of section 272 (j) a single bond may be accepted by the district director conditioned upon the payment of the amount assessed (together with all interest in respect thereof) in accordance with the terms of the extension and not later than 6 months prior to the expiration of the statutory period for collection including any period for collection agreed upon in writing by the Commissioner and the taxpayer. Form 1131 shall be used in these cases and shall be modified to meet the circumstances. Where a certificate of release of the tax lien has been issued by the district director and the bond furnished to and accepted by the district director fully protects the interests of the United States with respect to the tax assessed, no additional bond will be required by the Commissioner as a condition to the granting of an extension of time for the payment of the deficiency in tax under the provisions of section 272 (j)

§ 39.3677–3680 Statutory provisions; extended application of provisions relating to release or partial discharge; civil action to enforce lien on property; civil action to clear title to realty; cross references.

SEC. 3677. Extended application of provisions relating to release or partial discharge. Sections 3673, 3674, 3675, and 3676 shall apply to a lien in respect of any internal revenue tax, whether or not the lien is imposed by this subchapter [subchapter B of chapter 36].

SEC. 3678. Civil action to enforce lien on property—(a) Filing. In any case where there has been a refusal or neglect to pay any tax, and it has become necessary to seize and sell property and rights to property, whether real or personal, to satisfy the same, whether distraint proceedings have been commenced or not, the Attorney General at the request of the Commissioner may direct a civil action to be filed, in a district court of the United States, to enforce the lien of the United States for tax upon any property and rights to property, whether real or personal, or to subject any such property and rights to property owned by the delinquent, or in which he has any right, title, or interest, to the payment of such tax.

(b) Parties to proceedings. All persons having liens upon or claiming any interest in the property or rights to property sought to be subjected as aforesaid shall be made parties to such proceedings and be brought into court.

(c) Adjudication and decree. The said court shall, at the term next after the parties have been duly notified of the proceedings, unless otherwise ordered by the court, proceed to adjudicate all matters involved therein and finally determine the merits of all claims to and liens upon the property and rights to property in question, and, in all cases where a claim or interest of the United States therein is established, may decree a sale of such property and rights to property, by the proper officer of the court, and a distribution of the proceeds of such sale according to the findings of the court in respect to the interests of the parties and of the United States.

(d) Receivership. In any such proceeding, at the instance of the United States, the court may appoint a receiver to enforce the lien, or, upon certification by the Commissioner during the pendency of such proceedings that it is in the public interest, may appoint a receiver with all the powers of a receiver in equity.

SEC. 3679. Civil action to clear title to realty—(a) Obtaining leave to file—(1) Request for institution of proceedings by United States. Any person having a lien upon or any interest in the real estate referred to in section 3678, notice of which has been duly filed of record in the jurisdiction in which the real estate is located, prior to the filing of notice of the lien of the United States as provided in section 3672, or any person purchasing the real estate at a sale to satisfy such prior lien or interest, may make written request to the Commissioner to authorize the filing of a civil action as provided in section 3678.

(2) Petition to court. If the Commissioner fails to authorize the filing of such civil action within six months after receipt of such written request, such person or purchaser may, after giving notice to the Commissioner, file a petition in the district court of the United States for the district in which the real estate is located, praying leave to file a civil action for a final determination of all claims to or liens upon the real estate in question.

(3) Court order. After a full hearing in open court, the district court may in its discretion enter an order granting leave to file such civil action, in which the United States and all persons having liens upon or claiming any interest in the real estate shall be made parties.

(b) Service on United States. Service on the United States shall be had in the manner provided by sections 5 and 6 of the Act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An Act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," c. 359, 24 Stat. 506 (U. S. C., Title 28, secs. 762, 763), as amended.

(c) Adjudication. Upon the filing of such civil action the district court shall proceed to adjudicate the matters involved therein, in the same manner as in the case of civil actions filed under section 3678. For the purpose of such adjudication, the assessment of the tax upon which the lien of the United States is based shall be conclusively presumed to be valid.

(d) Costs. All costs of the proceedings on the petition and the civil action shall be borne by the person filing the civil action.

SEC. 3680. Cross references. * * * For provisions permitting the United States to be made party defendant in a proceeding in a State court for the foreclosure of a lien upon real estate where the United States may have a claim upon the premises involved, see Act of March 4, 1931, c. 515, 46 Stat. 1528 (U. S. C., Title 28, secs. 901-906).

DISTRAINT

§ 39.3690–3695 Statutory provisions; authority to distrain, property exempt from distraint; levy; proceedings on distraint; priority of specific tax liability on distrained property; purchase and sale of property for account of the United States.

SEC. 3690. Authority to distrain. If any person liable to pay any taxes neglects or refuses to pay the same within ten days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to collect the said taxes, with such interest and other additional amounts as are required by law, by distraint and sale, in the manner provided in this subchapter [subchapter C of chapter 36], of the goods, chattels, or effects, including stocks, securities, bank accounts, and evidences of debt, of the person delinquent as aforesaid.

SEC. 3691. Property exempt from distraint—(a) Enumeration. There shall be exempt from distraint and sale, if belonging to the head of a family—

(1) School books and wearing apparel. The school books and wearing apparel necessary for such family; also

(2) Arms. Arms for personal use;

(3) Livestock. One cow, 2 hogs, 5 sheep and the wool thereof, provided the aggregate market value of said sheep shall not exceed $50;

(4) Fodder. The necessary food for such cow, hogs, and sheep, for a period not exceeding thirty days;

(5) Fuel. Fuel to an amount not greater in value than $25;

(6) Provisions. Provisions to an amount not greater than $50;

(7) Household furniture. Household furniture kept for use to an amount not greater than $300; and

(8) Books and tools of trade or profession. The books, tools, or implements, of a trade or profession, to an amount not greater than $100.

(b) Appraisal. The officer making the distraint shall summon three disinterested householders of the vicinity, who shall appraise and set apart to the owner the amount of property herein declared to be exempt.

SEC. 3692. Levy. In case of neglect or refusal under section 3690, the collector may levy, or by warrant may authorize a deputy collector to levy, upon all property and rights to property, except such as are exempt by the preceding section, belonging to such person, or on which the lien provided in section 3670 exists, for the payment of the sum due, with interest and penalty for nonpayment, and also of such further sum as shall be sufficient for the fees, costs, and expenses of such levy.

SEC. 3693. Proceedings on distraint. When distraint is made, as provided in section 3690—

(a) Account and notice to owner. The officer charged with the collection shall make or cause to be made an account of the goods or effects distrained, a copy of which, signed by the officer making such distraint, shall be left with the owner or possessor of such goods or effects, or at his dwelling or usual place of business, with some person of suitable age and discretion, if any such can be found, with a note of the sum demanded and the time and place of sale; and

(b) Public notice. Forthwith cause a notification to be published in some newspaper within the county wherein said distraint is made, if a newspaper is published in said county, or to be publicly posted at the post office, if there be one within five miles nearest to the residence of the person whose property shall be distrained, and in not less than two other public places. Such notice shall specify the articles distrained, and the time and place for the sale thereof.

(c) Time and place of sale. The time of sale shall not be less than ten nor more than twenty days from the date of such notification to the owner or possessor of the property and the publication or posting of such notice as provided in subsection (b) and the place proposed for the sale shall not be more than five miles distant from the place of making such distraint.

(d) Adjournment of sale. Said sale may be adjourned from time to time by said officer, if he deems it advisable, but not for a time to exceed in all thirty days.

SEC. 3694. Priority of specific tax liability on distrained property. When property subject to tax, but upon which the tax has not been paid, is seized upon distraint and sold, the amount of such tax shall, after deducting the expenses of such sale, be first appropriated out of the proceeds thereof to the payment of the tax. And if no assessment of such tax has been made upon such property, the collector shall make a return thereof in the form required by law, and the Commissioner shall assess the tax thereon.

SEC. 3695. Property for account of the United States—(a) Purchase. When any personal property is advertised for sale under distraint as aforesaid, the officer making the seizure shall proceed to sell such property at a public auction, offering the same at a minimum price, including the expenses of making the levy and of advertising the sale, and if the amount bid for such property at the sale is not equal to the minimum price so fixed, the officer conducting the sale may declare the same to be purchased by him for the United States.

(b) Sale. The property so purchased may be sold by the collector within whose district the sale was made under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) Accounting. The collector shall render to the Commissioner a distinct account of all charges incurred in such sales, and, in case of resale, shall pay into the Treasury the proceeds as provided in section 3971.

§ 39.3695–1 Disposition of distrained property—(a) Sale of personal property seized under distraint. (1) When personal property is seized by an internal revenue officer under a warrant of distraint, and is to be offered for sale at public auction, such officer shall fix a minimum price for the property, including the expenses of levy and the cost of advertising, and shall not accept a bid at such sale less than such minimum price. If the amount bid for the property at the sale is not equal to such minimum price the officer conducting the sale may, in his discretion, declare the property to be purchased for the United States at such minimum price, or may adjourn the sale in accordance with section 3693. If at such sale, or adjourned sale, the property be neither sold to a bidder, nor purchased for the United States, it may again be offered for sale in accordance with the procedure outlined in section 3693, in which event the officer holding the sale may fix a new minimum price for the property.

(2) In fixing the minimum price, the officer charged with this duty must exercise the greatest care in order that a loss may be avoided if the property should be purchased for the United States and resold. The officer making the sale should likewise use extreme caution in declaring the property purchased for the United States. Only such property as appears to have a resale value at or above the minimum price fixed should be bid in for the United States.

(b) Resale after purchase for the United States. (1) When such personal property has been declared purchased for the United States, the district director for the internal revenue district in which the property was seized should make every effort to sell it at public sale. Tentative and informal bids from prospective purchasers may be procured. When the property is offered for resale, the highest of such bids should be used as an opening bid at the sale. If no such tentative bid can be procured, it is unlikely that the property would find a purchaser at a public sale. Whether under such circumstances the sale should be made rests in the discretion of the district director. If the property purchased for the United States consists of bonds or other securities of the Federal Government, these securities should not be sold but must be transmitted to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for proper disposition immediately after they have been purchased for the United States.

(2) Ordinarily the resale of personal property so purchased for the United States should be advertised merely by public posting, that is, by display of notice at the district director's office, at the postoffice nearest the place where the resale is to take place, and at the place of resale. If the property is purchased for the United States at a price considerably less than its real market value, the district director may in his discretion insert an advertisement of resale in a newspaper. The selection of the place for such resale rests with the district director. If the place selected by the district director for resale is outside of the internal revenue district where the property was seized the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue must first be obtained. In making the request for the Commissioner's approval in such case the district director should state, with full details, the reasons for his request, and the procedure he expects to follow if the approval of the Commissioner be obtained. If it appears for the best interests of the United States, the Commissioner may approve the selection of the place for resale, but may alter or modify the proposed procedure.

SEC. 3696. Redemption of property. In any case of distraint for the payment of taxes, the goods, chattels, or effects so distrained shall be restored to the owner or possessor, if, prior to the sale, payment of the amount due is made to the proper officer charged with the collection, together with the fees and other charges; but in case of nonpayment, the said officer shall proceed to sell the said goods, chattels, or effects at public auction.

SEC. 3697. Certificates of sale. In all cases of sale, as aforesaid, the certificate of such sale—

(a) As evidence. Shall be prima facie evidence of the right of the officer to make such sale, and conclusive evidence of the regularity of his proceedings in making the sale; and

(b) As conveyances. Shall transfer to the purchaser all right, title, and interest of such delinquent in and to the property sold; and

(c) As authority for transfer of corporate stock. Where such property consists of stocks, shall be notice, when received, to any corporation, company, or association of said transfer, and shall be authority to such corporation, company, or association to record the transfer on their books and records in the same manner as if the stocks were transferred or assigned by the party holding the same, in lieu of any original or prior certificates, which shall be void, whether canceled or not; and

(d) As receipts. Where the subject of sale is securities or other evidences of debt, shall be a good and valid receipt to the person holding the same, as against any person holding, or claiming to hold, possession of such securities or other evidences of debt.

§ 39.3700–3706 Statutory provisions; authority to distrain real estate; proceedings on distraint; redemption of real estate; certificates of purchase; deeds of sale; transmission of certificates and deeds to Commissioner; records of sale.

SEC. 3700. Authority to distrain. When goods, chattels, or effects sufficient to satisfy the taxes imposed upon any person are not found by the collector or deputy collector, he is authorized to collect the same by seizure and sale of real estate.

SEC. 3701. Proceedings on distraint—(a) Notice to owner. The officer making the seizure mentioned in the preceding section shall give notice to the person whose estate it is proposed to sell by giving him in hand, or leaving at his last or usual place of abode, if he has any such within the collection district where said estate is situated, a notice, in writing, stating what particular estate is to be sold, describing the same with reasonable certainty, and the time when and place where said officer proposes to sell the same.

(b) Public notice. The said officer shall also cause a notification to the same effect to be published in some newspaper within the county where such seizure is made, if any such there be, and shall also cause a like notice to be posted at the post office nearest to the estate seized, and in two other public places within the county.

(c) Time and place of sale. The time of sale shall not be less than twenty nor more than forty days from the time of giving said notice. The place of said sale shall not be more than five miles distant from the estate seized, except by special order of the Commissioner.

(d) Manner of sale. At the time and place appointed, the officer making such seizure shall proceed to sell the said estate at public auction, offering the same at a minimum price, including the expense of making such levy, and all charges for advertising. When the real estate so seized consists of several distinct tracts or parcels, the officer making sale thereof shall offer each tract or parcel for sale separately, and shall, if he deem it advisable, apportion the expenses and charges aforesaid to such several tracts or parcels, or to any of them, in estimating the minimum price.

(e) Purchasers. If no person offers for said estate the amount of said minimum price, the officer shall declare the same to be purchased by him for the United States; otherwise the same shall be declared to be sold to the highest bidder.

(f) Adjournment of sale. The said sale may be adjourned from time to time by said officer for not exceeding thirty days in all, if he shall think it advisable so to do. If the amount bid shall not be then and there paid, the officer shall forthwith proceed to again sell said estate in the same manner.

SEC. 3702. Redemption of real estate—(a) Before sale. Any person whose estate may be proceeded against as aforesaid shall have the right to pay the amount due, together with the costs and charges thereon, to the collector or deputy collector at any time prior to the sale thereof, and all further proceedings shall cease from the time of such payment.

(b) After sale—(1) Period. The owners of any real estate sold as aforesaid, their heirs, executors, or administrators, or any person having any interest therein, or a lien thereon, or any person in their behalf, shall be permitted to redeem the land sold, or any particular tract thereof, at any time within one year after the sale thereof.

(2) Price. The land or tract aforesaid shall be permitted to be redeemed upon payment to the purchaser, or in case he can not be found in the county in which the land to be redeemed is situated, then to the collector of the district in which the land is situated, for the use of the purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, the amount paid by the said purchaser and interest thereon at the rate of 20 per centum per annum.

(c) Record. When any lands sold are redeemed as provided in this section, the collector shall make entry of the fact upon the record mentioned in section 3706, and the said entry shall be evidence of such redemption.

SEC. 3703. Certificates of purchase—(a) Real estate purchased by the United States. In case the real estate sold under section 3701 shall be declared to be purchased for the United States, the officer shall immediately transmit a certificate of the purchase to the Commissioner.

(b) Real estate purchased by others. Upon any sale of real estate, as provided in section 3701, and the payment of the purchase money, the officer making the seizure and sale shall give to the purchaser a certificate of purchase, which shall set forth the real estate purchased, for whose taxes the same was sold, the name of the purchaser, and the price paid therefor.

SEC. 3704. Deeds of sale—(a) Real estate purchased by the United States. In case real estate shall be declared under section 3701 (e) to be purchased for the United States, the officer shall—

(1) Execution. At the proper time, as provided in subsection (b), execute a deed therefor after its preparation and the endorsement of approval as to its form by the United States district attorney for the district in which the property is situate, and

(2) Record and transmission. Without delay cause the same to be duly recorded in the proper registry of deeds, and immediately thereafter transmit such deed to the Commissioner.

(b) Real estate purchased by others. If the said real estate be not redeemed in the manner and within the time provided in section 3702, the said collector or deputy collector shall execute to the said purchaser, upon his surrender of said certificate, a deed of the real estate purchased by him as aforesaid, reciting the facts set forth in said certificate, and in accordance with the laws of the State in which such real estate is situate upon the subject of sales of real estate under execution.

(c) Legal effect—(1) As evidence. The deed of sale given in pursuance of this section shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated; and

(2) As conveyance of title. If the proceedings of the officer as set forth have been substantially in accordance with the provisions of law, such deed shall be considered and operate as a conveyance of all the right, title, and interest the party delinquent had in and to the real estate thus sold at the time the lien of the United States attached thereto.

SEC. 3705. Transmission of certificates and deeds to Commissioner. All certificates of purchase, and deeds of property purchased by the United States under the internal revenue laws, on sales for taxes, or under executions issued from United States courts, which may be found in the office of any collector, shall be immediately transmitted by such officer to the Commissioner.

SEC. 3706. Records of sale—(a) Requirement. It shall be the duty of every collector to keep a record of all sales of land made in his collection district, whether by himself or his deputies, or by another collector. And it shall be the duty of every deputy making sale, as aforesaid, to return a statement of all his proceedings to the collector, and to certify the record thereof.

(b) Contents. The record shall set forth the tax for which any such sale was made, the dates of seizure and sale, the name of the party assessed and all proceedings in making said sale, the amount of fees and expenses, the name of the purchaser, and the date of the deed.

(c) Certification. The said record shall be certified by the officer making the sale.

(d) Copy to Commissioner. On or before the 5th day of each succeeding month, the collector shall transmit a copy of such record of the preceding month to the Commissioner.

(e) Delivery by collector to successor. In case of the death or removal of the collector, or the expiration of his term of office from any other cause, said record shall be delivered to his successor in office.

(f) Copy as evidence. A copy of every such record, certified by the collector, shall be evidence in any court of the truth of the facts therein stated.

§ 39.3710–3716 Statutory provisions; surrender of property subject to distraint; production of books; sale of indivisible property; distraint by district director outside his district; period of limitation upon distraint; successive seizures; fees and charges in distraint and seizure cases.

SEC. 3710. Surrender of property subject to distraint—(a) Requirement. Any person in possession of property, or rights to property, subject to distraint, upon which a levy has been made, shall, upon demand by the collector or deputy collector making such levy, surrender such property or rights to such collector or deputy, unless such property or right is, at the time of such demand, subject to an attachment or execution under any judicial process.

(b) Penalty for violation. Any person who fails or refuses to so surrender any of such property or rights shall be liable in his own person and estate to the United States in a sum equal to the value of the property or rights not so surrendered, but not exceeding the amount of the taxes (including penalties and interest) for the collection of which such levy has been made, together with costs and interest from the date of such levy.

(c) Person defined. The term "person" as used in this section includes an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

SEC. 3711. Production of books. All persons, and officers of companies or corporations, are required, on demand of a collector or deputy collector about to distrain or having distrained on any property, or rights of property, to exhibit all books containing evidence or statements relating to the subject of distraint, or the property or rights of property liable to distraint for the tax due.

SEC. 3712. Sale of indivisible property. When any property liable to distraint for taxes is not divisible, so as to enable the collector by sale of a part thereof to raise the whole amount of the tax, with all costs and charges, the whole of such property shall be sold, and the surplus of the proceeds of the sale, after making allowance for the amount of the tax, interest, penalties, and additions thereto, and for the costs and charges of the distraint and sale, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as provided in section 3971.

SEC. 3713. Distraint by collector outside his district. Any collector or deputy collector may, for the collection of taxes imposed upon any person, and committed to him for collection, seize and sell any of the property, real or personal (except property exempt from distraint and sale under section 3691), or any right or interest therein, of such person situated in any other collection district within the State in which such officer resides, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b) of section 3651; and his proceedings in relation thereto shall have the same effect as if the same were had in his proper collection district.

SEC. 3714. Period of limitation upon distraint—(a) Length of period. For period within which distraint may be begun in case of—

Income tax, see sections 276 (c) and 277.

* * * * *

(b) Date of beginning distraint. In determining the running of any period of limitation in respect of distraint, the distraint shall be held to have been begun—

(1) Personal property. In the case of personal property, on the date on which the levy upon such property is made; or

(2) Real property. In the case of real property, on the date on which notice of the time and place of sale is given to the person whose estate it is proposed to sell.

[Sec. 3714 as amended by sec. 207 (b) (4), Social Security Act Amendment 1950]

SEC. 3715. Successive seizures. Whenever any property, personal or real, which is seized and sold by virtue of the foregoing provisions, is not sufficient to satisfy the claim of the United States for which distraint or seizure is made, the collector may, thereafter, and as often as the same may be necessary, proceed to seize and sell in like manner, any other property liable to seizure of the person against whom such claim exists, until the amount due from him, together with all expenses, is fully paid.

SEC. 3716. Fees and charges in distraint and seizure cases. The Commissioner shall by regulation determine the fees and charges to be allowed in all cases of distraint and other seizures; and shall have power to determine whether any expense incurred in making any distraint or seizure was necessary.

SEC. 3725. Stamping, marking, and branding seized goods. Where any whisky or tobacco, or other article of manufacture or produce, requiring brands, stamps, or marks of whatever kind to be placed thereon shall be sold upon distraint, forfeiture (except as provided in section 2805 with respect to distilled spirits), or other process provided by law, the same not having been branded, stamped, or marked, as required by law, the officer selling the same shall, upon sale thereof, fix or cause to be affixed the brands, stamps, or marks, so required.

SUITS BY UNITED STATES

SEC. 3740. Authorization to commence suit. No suit for the recovery of taxes, or of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, shall be commenced unless the Commissioner authorizes or sanctions the proceedings and the Attorney General directs that the suit be commenced.

SEC. 3743. Regulations. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, to establish such regulations, not inconsistent with law, for the observance of revenue officers, respecting suits arising under the internal revenue laws in which the United States is a party, as may be deemed necessary for the just responsibility of those officers and the prompt collection of all revenues and debts due and accruing to the United States under such laws.

§ 39.3745–3748 Statutory provisions; district director's report to district attorney of willful violation of law; suits for recovery of erroneous refunds; disposition of judgments and moneys recovered, periods of limitation.

SEC. 3745. Suits for fines, penalties, and forfeitures—(a) Collector's reports to district attorney. It shall be the duty of every collector of internal revenue having knowledge of any willful violation of any law of the United States relating to the revenue, within thirty days after coming into possession of such knowledge, to file with the district attorney of the district in which any fine, penalty, or forfeiture may be incurred, a statement of all the facts and circumstances of the case within his knowledge, together with the names of the witnesses, setting forth the provisions of law believed to be so violated on which reliance may be had for condemnation or conviction.

[Sec. 3745 as amended by sec. 142, Pub. Law 72 (81st Cong.)]

SEC. 3746. Suits for recovery of erroneous refunds—(a) Refunds after limitation period. Any portion of an internal revenue tax (or any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to such tax) refund of which is erroneously made, within the meaning of section 3774, may be recovered by suit brought in the name of the United States, but only if such suit is begun within two years after the making of such refund.

(b) Refunds otherwise erroneous. Any portion of an internal revenue tax (or any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to such tax) which has been erroneously refunded (if such refund would not be considered as erroneous under section 3774) may be recovered by suit brought in the name of the United States, but only if such suit is begun before the expiration of two years after the making of such refund.

(c) Refunds based on fraud or misrepresentation. Despite the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) such suit may be brought at any time within five years from the making of the refund if it appears that any part of the refund was induced by fraud or the misrepresentation of a material fact.

(d) Interest. Erroneous refunds recoverable by suit under this section shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the date of the payment of the refund.

SEC. 3747. Disposition of judgments and moneys recovered. All judgments and moneys recovered or received for taxes, costs, forfeitures, and penalties, shall be paid to collectors as internal revenue taxes are required to be paid.

SEC. 3748. Periods of limitation—(a) Criminal prosecutions. No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished, for any of the various offences arising under the internal revenue laws of the United States unless the indictment is found or the information instituted within three years next after the commission of the offense, except that the period of limitation shall be six years—

(1) For offenses involving the defrauding or attempting to defraud the United States or any agency thereof, whether by conspiracy or not, and in any manner,

(2) For the offense of willfully attempting in any manner to evade or defeat any tax or the payment thereof, and

(3) For the offense of willfully aiding or assisting in, or procuring, counseling, or advising, the preparation or presentation under, or in connection with any matter arising under, the internal revenue laws, of a false or fraudulent return, affidavit, claim, or document (whether or not such falsity or fraud is with the knowledge or consent of the person authorized or required to present such return, affidavit, claim, or document).

For offenses arising under section 37 of the Criminal Code, March 4, 1909, 35 Stat. 1096 (U. S. C. Title 18, sec. 88 [now sec. 371]) where the object of the conspiracy is to attempt in any manner to evade or defeat any tax or the payment thereof, the period of limitation shall also be six years. The time during which the person committing any of the offenses above mentioned is absent from the district wherein the same is committed shall not be taken as any part of the time limited by law for the commencement of such proceedings. Where a complaint is instituted before a commissioner of the United States within the period above limited, the time shall be extended until the discharge of the grand jury at its next session within the district.

(b) Scope of limitations. Subsection (a) of this section shall apply to offenses whenever committed; except that it shall not apply to offenses the prosecution of which was barred before June 6, 1932.

(c) Civil suits. For period of limitation in respect of—

Suits for fines, penalties, and forfeitures, see section 1047 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., Title 28, sec. 791 [now sec. 2462]).

Suits for erroneous refunds, see section 3746.

CLOSING AGREEMENTS AND COMPROMISES

SEC. 3760. Closing agreements—(a) Authorization. The Commissioner (or any officer or employee of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, including the field service, authorized in writing by the Commissioner) is authorized to enter into an agreement in writing with any person relating to the liability of such person (or of the person or estate for whom he acts) in respect of any internal revenue tax for any taxable period.

(b) Finality. If such agreement is approved by the Secretary, the Under Secretary, or an Assistant Secretary, within such time as may be stated in such agreement, or later agreed to, such agreement shall be final and conclusive, and, except upon a showing of fraud or malfeasance, or misrepresentation of a material fact—

(1) The case shall not be reopened as to the matters agreed upon or the agreement modified, by any officer, employee, or agent of the United States, and

(2) In any suit, action, or proceeding, such agreement, or any determination, assessment, collection, payment, abatement, refund, or credit made in accordance therewith, shall not be annulled, modified, set aside, or disregarded.

§ 39.3760-1 Closing agreements relating to tax liability in respect of internal revenue taxes. (a) Closing agreements provided for in section 3760 of the Internal Revenue Code may relate to any taxable period ending prior or subsequent to the date of the agreement. With respect to taxable periods ending prior to the date of the agreement, the matter agreed upon may relate to the total tax liability of the taxpayer or it may relate to one or more separate items affecting the tax liability of the taxpayer, as for example, the amount of gross income, deductions for losses, depreciation or depletion, or the year for which an item of income is to be included in gross income or the year for which an item of loss is to be deducted, or the value of property on a specified date. A closing agreement may also be entered into in order to provide a "determination under the income tax laws" as defined in section 3801 (a) (1) (A) of the Internal Revenue Code. With respect to taxable periods ending subsequent to the date of the agreement, the matter agreed upon may relate only to one or more separate items affecting the tax liability of the taxpayer. The following, among others, are examples of the latter type of closing agreement: (1) A taxpayer may sell a portion of his holdings in a particular stock. A closing agreement may be entered into fixing the cost or other legal factor determining the basis for computing gain or loss on such sale, and, at the same time fixing the cost or other legal factor determining the basis (unless or until the statute is changed to require the use of some other factor to determine basis) of the remaining portion of the stock still held by the taxpayer upon which gain or loss will be computed when the taxpayer sells such stock in a later year; (2) if the taxpayer is undecided whether to sell property or hold it, or as to the price at which to sell it, a closing agreement may be entered into determining the market value of the property as of March 1, 1913, for future taxable periods, prior to the consummation of the sale by the taxpayer. A closing agreement with respect to any taxable period ending subsequent to the date of the agreement is subject to any change in or modification of the law enacted subsequent to the date of the agreement and applicable to such taxable period, and each closing agreement shall so recite. Closing agreements may be executed even though under the agreement the taxpayer is not liable for any tax for the period to which the agreement relates. There may be a series of agreements relating to the tax liability for a single period. Any tax or deficiency in tax determined pursuant to a closing agreement shall be assessed and collected, and any overpayment determined pursuant thereto shall be credited or refunded in accordance with the applicable provisions of law.

(b) The procedure in the Internal Revenue Service with respect to applications for entering into closing agreements in accordance with the regulations under section 3760 will be under such rules as may be prescribed from time to time by the Commissioner.

§ 39.3761-3762 Statutory provisions; compromises; penalties for concealment of property or withholding, etc., of records.

SEC. 3761. Compromises—(a) Authorization. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, or of the Under Secretary of the Treasury, or of an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, may compromise any civil or criminal case arising under the internal revenue laws prior to reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense; and the Attorney General may compromise any such case after reference to the Department of Justice for prosecution or defense.

(b) Record. Whenever a compromise is made by the Commissioner in any case there shall be placed on file in the office of the Commissioner the opinion of the General Counsel for the Department of the Treasury, or of the officer acting as such, with his reasons therefor, with a statement of—

(1) The amount of tax assessed,

(2) The amount of additional tax or penalty imposed by law in consequence of the neglect or delinquency of the person against whom the tax is assessed, and

(3) The amount actually paid in accordance with the terms of the compromise.

(c) Cross reference. For compromises after judgment, see R. S. sec. 3469 (U. S. C., Title 31, sec. 194).

SEC. 3762. Penalties. Any person who, in connection with any compromise under section 3761, or offer of such compromise, or in connection with any closing agreement under section 3760, or offer to enter into any such agreement, willfully—

(a) Concealment of property. Conceals from any officer or employee of the United States any property belonging to the estate of a taxpayer or other person liable in respect of the tax, or

(b) Withholding, falsifying, and destroying records. Receives, destroys, mutilates, or falsifies any book, document, or record, or makes under oath any false statement, relating to the estate or financial condition of the taxpayer or other person liable in respect of the tax—

Shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

ABATEMENTS, CREDITS, AND REFUNDS

§ 39.3770-3775 Statutory provisions; authority to make abatements, credits, and refunds; interest on overpayments; suits for refund, interest on judgments; refunds after periods of limitation, credits after periods of limitation.

SEC. 3770. Authority to make abatements, credits, and refunds—(a) To taxpayers—(1) Assessments and collections generally. Except as otherwise provided by law in the case of income war-profits, excess-profits, estate, and gift taxes, the Commissioner, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary, is authorized to remit, refund, and pay back all taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, all penalties collected without authority, and all taxes that appear to be unjustly assessed or excessive in amount, or in any manner wrongfully collected.

(2) Assessments and collections after limitation period. Any tax (or any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to such tax) assessed or paid after the expiration of the period of limitation properly applicable thereto shall be considered an overpayment and shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer if claim therefor is filed within the period of limitation for filing such claim.

(3) Date of allowance. Where the Commissioner has signed a schedule of overassessments in respect of any internal revenue tax imposed by this title, the Revenue Act of 1932, or any prior revenue Act, the date on which he first signed such schedule (if after May 28, 1928) shall be considered as the date of allowance of refund or credit in respect of such tax.

(4) Credit of overpayment of one class of tax against another class of tax due. Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, in lieu of refunding an overpayment of tax imposed by any provision of this title, credit such overpayment against any tax due from the taxpayer under any other provision of this title.

(5) Delegation of authority to collectors to make refunds. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, is authorized to delegate to collectors any authority, duty, or function which the Commissioner is authorized or required to exercise or perform under paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of this subsection, or under section 322 or 1027, where the amount involved (exclusive of interest, penalties, additions to the tax, and additional amounts) does not exceed $10,000.

(6) Cross references. For limitations on refunds and credits in case of—

Income tax, see section 322.

* * * * *

(b) To collectors and officers. The Commissioner, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary, is authorized to repay—

(1) Collections recovered. To any collector or deputy collector the full amount of such sums of money as may be recovered against him in any court, for any internal revenue taxes collected by him, with the cost and expense of suit; also

(2) Damages and costs. All damages and costs recovered against any collector, deputy collector, agent, or inspector, in any suit brought against him by reason of anything done in the due performance of his official duty.

(c) Rule where no tax liability. An amount paid as tax shall not be considered not to constitute an overpayment solely by reason of the fact that there was no tax liability in respect of which such amount was paid.

[Sec. 3770 as amended by sec. 508 (b), Second Rev. Act 1940; sec. 4 (c) and (d) Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 9 (a), Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.); sec. 207 (b) (5), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

SEC. 3771. Interest on overpayments—(a) Rate. Interest shall be allowed and paid upon any overpayment in respect of any internal revenue tax at the rate of 6 per centum per annum.

(b) Period. Such interest shall be allowed and paid as follows:

(1) Credits. In the case of a credit, from the date of the overpayment to the due date of the amount against which the credit is taken, but if the amount against which the credit is taken is an additional assessment of a tax imposed by the Revenue Act of 1921, 42 Stat. 227, or any subsequent Revenue Act, then to the date of the assessment of that amount.

(2) Refunds. In the case of a refund, from the date of the overpayment to a date preceding the date of the refund check by not more than thirty days, such date to be determined by the Commissioner, whether or nor such refund check is accepted by the taxpayer after tender of such check to the taxpayer. The acceptance of such check shall be without prejudice to any right of the taxpayer to claim any additional overpayment and interest thereon.

(c) Additional assessment defined. As used in this section the term "additional assessment" means a further assessment for a tax of the same character previously paid in part, and includes the assessment of a deficiency of any income or estate tax imposed by the Revenue Act of 1924, 43 Stat. 253, or by any subsequent Revenue Act.

(d) Claims based on deduction for bad debts or worthless securities. If credit or refund of any part of an overpayment would be barred under section 322 (b), except for paragraph (5) thereof, or under section 322 (d), except for clause (2) thereof, no interest shall be allowed or paid with respect to such part of the overpayment for any period beginning after the expiration of the period of limitation provided in section 322 (b) (1) for filing claim for credit refund of such part of the overpayment and ending at the expiration of six months after the date on which the claim was filed or, in case no claim was filed and the overpayment was found by the Board, ending at the time the petition was filed with the Board.

(e) Claims based on carry-back of loss or credit. If the Commissioner determines that any part of an overpayment is attributable to the inclusion in computing the net operating loss deduction for the taxable year of any part of the net operating loss for a succeeding taxable year or to the inclusion in computing the unused excess profits credit adjustment for the taxable year of any part of the unused excess profits credit for a succeeding taxable year, no interest shall be allowed or paid with respect to such part of the overpayment for any period before the filing of a claim for credit or refund of such part of the overpayment or the filing of a petition with the Board, whichever is earlier; nor for any period beginning with the date of filing of an application under section 3780 (a) relating to such part of the overpayment and ending with the last date the Commissioner's determination is required to be made under section 3780 (b); nor, in case an application is made under section 3780 (a), for any period before the first day of the month immediately following the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for filing the return for the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit, or before the date on which the return is filed, whichever is later.

(f) Estimated tax and tax withheld at source. For date of payment in respect of estimated tax and of tax withheld at source on wages, see section 322 (e).

(g) Claims based upon relief under section 722. * * * [No longer applicable.]

[Sec. 3771 as amended by secs. 124 (c), 153 (d), 172 (f) (5), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 4 (e), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 2 (b), Pub. Law 201 (78th Cong.); sec. 6 (b), Tax Adjustment Act 1945]

SEC. 3772. Suits for refund—(a) Limitations—(1) Claim. No suit or proceeding shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected until a claim for refund or credit has been duly filed with the Commissioner, according to the provisions of law in that regard, and the regulations of the Secretary established in pursuance thereof.

(2) Time. No such suit or proceeding shall be begun before the expiration of six months from the date of filing such claim unless the Commissioner renders a decision thereon within that time, nor after the expiration of two years from the date of mailing by registered mail by the Commissioner to the taxpayer of a notice of the disallowance of the part of the claim to which such suit or proceeding relates.

(3) Reconsideration after mailing of notice. Any consideration, reconsideration, or action by the Commissioner with respect to such claim following the mailing of a notice by registered mail of disallowance shall not operate to extend the period within which suit may be begun. This paragraph shall not operate (A) to bar a suit or proceeding in respect of a claim reopened prior to June 22, 1936, if such suit or proceeding was not barred under the law in effect prior to that date, or (B) to prevent the suspension of the statute of limitations for filing suit under section 3774 (b) (2).

(b) Protests or duress. Such suit or proceeding may be maintained, whether or not such tax, penalty, or sum has been paid under protest or duress.

(c) Cross references. For provisions relating to claims for refund or credit filed with the Commissioner in respect of—

Income tax, see section 322. * * *

(d) Suits against collector a bar. A suit against a collector (or former collector) or his personal representative for the recovery of any internal revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected shall be treated as if the United States had been a party to such suit in applying the doctrine of res judicata in all suits instituted after June 15, 1942, in respect of any internal revenue tax, and in all proceedings in the Board and on review of decisions of the Board where the petition to the Board was filed after such date.

(e) Credit treated as payment. The credit of an overpayment of any tax in satisfaction of any tax liability shall, for the purpose of any suit for refund of such tax liability so satisfied, be deemed to be a payment in respect of such tax liability to the collector in office at the time such credit is allowed.

[Sec. 3772 as amended by sec. 503, Rev. Act 1942; sec. 9 (b), Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.); sec. 207 (b) (6), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

SEC. 3773. Interest on judgments. For interest on judgments, see section 177 of the Judicial Code as amended by act of May 29, 1928, c. 852, section 615, 45 Stat. 877 (U. S. C., Title 28, section 284 [now sec. 2516 (a)]).

SEC. 3774. Refunds after periods of limitation. A refund of any portion of an internal revenue tax (or any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to such tax) shall be considered erroneous—

(a) Expiration of period for filing claim. If made after the expiration of the period of limitation for filing claim therefor, unless within such period claim was filed; or

(b) Disallowance of claim and expiration of period for filing suit. In the case of a claim filed within the proper time and disallowed by the Commissioner if the refund was made after the expiration of the period of limitation for filing suits, unless—

(1) Within such period suit was begun by the taxpayer, or

(2) Within such period, the taxpayer and the Commissioner agreed in writing to suspend the running of the statute of limitations for filing suit from the date of the agreement to the date of final decision in one or more named cases then pending before the Board of Tax Appeals or the courts. If such agreement has been entered into, the running of such statute of limitations shall be suspended in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

(c) Cross reference. For procedure by the United States to recover erroneous refunds, see section 3746.

SEC. 3775. Credits after periods of limitation—(a) Period against United States. Any credit against a liability in respect of any taxable year shall be void if any payment in respect of such liability would be considered an overpayment under section 3770 (a) (2).

(b) Period against taxpayer. A credit of an overpayment in respect of any tax shall be void if a refund of such overpayment would be considered erroneous under section 3774.

SEC. 3777. Reports of refunds and credits in excess of $200,000—(a) By Commissioner to Joint Committee. No refund or credit of any income, war-profits, excess-profits, estate, or gift tax in excess of $200,000 shall be made until after the expiration of thirty days from the date upon which a report giving the name of the person to whom the refund or credit is to be made, the amount of such refund or credit, and a summary of the facts and the decision of the Commissioner is submitted to the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

(b) By Joint Committee to Congress. A report to Congress shall be made annually by such committee of such refunds and credits, including the names of all persons and corporations to whom amounts are credited or payments are made, together with the amounts credited or paid to each.

(c) Tentative adjustments. Any credit or refund allowed or made under section 3780 (b) or under section 124 (k) shall be made without regard to the provisions of subsection (a). In any such case, if the credit or refund, reduced by any deficiency in such tax thereafter assessed and by deficiencies in any other tax resulting from adjustments reflected in the determination of the credit or refund, is in excess of $200,000, there shall be submitted to such committee a report containing the matter specified in subsection (a) at such time after the making of the credit or refund as the Commissioner shall determine the correct amount of the tax.

[Sec. 3777 as amended by sec. 4 (c), Tax Adjustment Act 1945; sec. 151, Rev. Act 1945; sec. 10 (b), Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.3779 Statutory provisions; extensions of time for payment of taxes by corporations expecting carry-backs.

SEC. 3779. Extensions of time for payment of taxes by corporations expecting carry-backs—(a) In general. If a corporation, in any taxable year ending on or after September 30, 1945, files with the collector a statement, as provided in subsection (b), with respect to an expected net operating loss carry-back or unused excess profits credit carry-back from such taxable year, the time for payment of all or part of any tax imposed by chapter 1 or 2 for the taxable year immediately preceding such taxable year shall be extended, to the extent and subject to the conditions and limitations hereinafter provided in this section.

(b) Contents of statement. The statement with respect to an expected carry-back referred to in subsection (a) of this section shall be sworn to in the manner prescribed by section 52 in the case of a return and shall be filed at such time and in such manner and form as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe. Such statement shall set forth that the corporation expects to have a net operating loss carry-back, as provided in section 122 (b), or an unused excess profits credit carry-back, as provided in section 432 (c), from the taxable year in which such statement is made, and shall set forth, in such detail and with such supporting data and explanation as such regulations shall require—

(1) The estimated amount of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit;

(2) The reasons, facts, and circumstances which cause the corporation to expect such net operating loss or unused excess profits credit;

(3) The amount of the reduction, attributable to the expected carry-back, in the aggregate of the taxes previously determined for all taxable years affected by the carry-back prior to the taxable year of the expected loss or unused credit; such taxes previously determined being ascertained in accordance with the method prescribed in section 3801 (d) and such reduction being determined by applying the expected carry-back in the manner provided by law to the items on the basis of which such taxes were determined but such reduction being decreased by the amount of any credits under section 780 properly allocable to such reduction;

(4) The tax or taxes and the amount thereof the time for payment of which is to be extended; and

(5) Such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section as may be required by such regulations.

The collector shall, upon request, furnish a receipt for any statement filed, which shall set forth the date of such filing.

(c) Amount to which extension relates and installment payments. The amount the time for payment of which may be extended under subsection (a) with respect to any tax shall not exceed the amount of such tax shown on the return, increased by any amount assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or additions to the tax) prior to the date of filing the statement and decreased by any amount paid or required to be paid prior to the date of such filing, and the total amount of the taxes the time for payment of which may be extended shall not exceed the amount stated under clause (3) of subsection (b). For the purposes of this subsection, an amount shall not be considered as required to be paid unless shown on the return or assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or additions to the tax), and an amount assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or addition to the tax) shall be considered to be required to be paid prior to the date of filing of the statement if the tenth day after notice and demand for its payment occurs prior to such date. If an extension of time under this section relates to only a part of a tax, the time for payment of the remainder shall be considered to be the dates on which payments would have been required if such remainder had been the tax and the taxpayer had elected to pay the tax in installments as provided in section 56 (b).

(d) Period of extension. The extension of time for payment provided in this section shall expire—

(1) On the last day of the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for the filing of the return for the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit, or

(2) If an application for tentative carry-back adjustment provided in section 3780 with respect to such loss or unused credit is filed before the expiration of the period prescribed in clause (1), on the date on which notice is mailed by registered mail by the Commissioner to the taxpayer that such application is allowed or disallowed in whole or in part.

(e) Revised statements. Each statement filed under subsection (a) with respect to any taxable year shall be in lieu of the last statement previously filed with respect to such year. If the amount the time for payment of which is extended under a statement filed is less than the amount under the last statement previously filed the extension of time shall be terminated as to the difference between the two amounts.

(f) Termination by Commissioner. The Commissioner is not required to make any examination of the statement, but he may make such examination thereof as he deems necessary and practicable. The Commissioner shall terminate the extension as to any part of the amount to which it relates which he deems should be terminated because, upon such examination, he believes that, as of the time such examination is made, all or any part of the statement clearly is in a material respect erroneous or unreasonable.

(g) Payments on termination. If an extension of time is terminated under subsection (e) or (f) with respect to any amount, then—

(1) No further extension of time shall be made under this section with respect to such amount, and

(2) The time for payment of such amount shall be considered to be the dates on which payments would have been required if there had been no extension with respect to such amount and the taxpayer had elected to pay the tax in installments as provided in section 56 (b).

(h) Jeopardy. If the Commissioner believes that collection of the amount to which an extension under this section relates is in jeopardy, he shall immediately terminate such extension and notice and demand shall be made by the collector for payment of such amount.

(i) Interest. In the case of an amount the time for payment of which has been extended, there shall be collected as part of such amount interest from the dates on which payments would have been required if there had been no extension and the taxpayer had elected to pay the tax in installments as provided in section 56 (b)—

(1) Upon so much of such amount as is satisfied under section 3780 (b) by applying or crediting thereto, within the period of extension, a decrease in tax determined in connection with an application under section 3780 (a), interest at the rate of 3 per centum per annum to the date of such satisfaction, except that on so much of such satisfied amount as is not in excess of the amount of the deficiencies assessed under section 3780 (b) and which is not so satisfied, the rate shall be 6 per centum per annum; and

(2) Upon the remainder of the amount the time for payment of which has been extended, interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum to the date such amount is paid.

If the Commissioner determines that during the period of extension credit or refund of an overpayment has been allowed or made, or a deficiency assessed, affecting the amount to which the extension relates and that the taxpayer could not have taken such overpayment or deficiency into account in the statement or a revised statement, appropriate adjustment shall be made in the interest.

[Sec. 3779 as added by sec. 4 (a), Tax Adjustment Act 1945; amended by sec. 304 (a), Excess Profits Tax Act 1950]

§ 39.3779-1 Extensions of time for payment of taxes by corporations expecting carry-backs. (a) If a corporation files a statement with respect to an expected net operating loss carry-back or unused excess profits credit carry-back from any taxable year, such corporation may extend the time for the payment of all or any part of certain taxes to the extent and subject to the limitations provided in section 3779. A corporation may extend the time for payment with respect to only such taxes as meet the following four requirements:

(1) The tax must be one imposed by chapter 1 or chapter 2;

(2) The tax must be for the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit;

(3) The tax must be shown on the return or must be assessed within the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit; and

(4) The tax must not have been paid or required to have been paid prior to the filing of the statement.

(b) The time for payment of the tax is automatically extended under section 3779 upon the filing of a statement by the corporation with the district director of internal revenue where the tax is payable with respect to the expected net operating loss carry-back or unused excess profits credit carry-back. The period of extension is that provided in section 3779 (d) unless sooner terminated by action of either the Commissioner or the corporation.

§ 39.3779-2 Contents of statement. (a) The statement with respect to an expected carry-back which must be filed by a corporation in order to extend the time for payment of tax under section 3779 is to be filed on Form 1138. The statement must be filled out in accordance with the instructions accompanying the form, and all information required by the form and the instructions must be furnished by the taxpayer. The statement shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. The district director of internal revenue, upon request, will furnish a receipt for any statement filed. Such receipt will show the date the statement was filed.

(b) The reduction, attributable to the expected carry-back, in the aggregate of the taxes previously determined for all taxable years, affected by the carry-back, prior to the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit will be the excess of the decreases over the increases, attributable to the expected carry-back or any related adjustments, in such taxes as previously determined. The tax previously determined is to be ascertained in accordance with the method prescribed in section 3801 (d) In general, therefore, the tax previously determined will be the tax shown by the taxpayer on its return, increased by any amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies prior to the date of the filing of the statement, and decreased by any amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid prior to such date. Any items as to which the Commissioner and the taxpayer are in disagreement at the time of the filing of the statement shall be taken into account in ascertaining the tax previously determined only if, and to the extent that, they were reported in the return, or were reflected in any amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, or in any amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid, prior to the date of the filing of the statement. The tax previously determined will reflect the foreign tax credit and the credit for tax withheld at source provided in section 32.

(c) The increase or decrease, attributable to the expected carry-back or any related adjustments, in any tax previously determined is to be ascertained, except for such carry-back and related adjustments, on the basis of the items which entered into the computation of such tax as previously determined. Accordingly, as in ascertaining the tax previously determined, items must be taken into account only to the extent that such items were included in the return, or were reflected in amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, or in amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid, prior to the date of the filing of the statement. Thus, for example, if the taxpayer claimed a deduction for depreciation of $10,000 in its return and the Commissioner asserts that only $4,000 is properly deductible, no change is to be made in the $10,000 depreciation deduction as shown by the taxpayer on his return unless a deficiency has been assessed, or an amount collected without assessment, prior to the date of the filing of the statement as a result of a change in the depreciation deduction, or unless such change in the depreciation deduction was reflected in an amount abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid prior to such date. In determining the increase or decrease in any tax previously determined, any items which are affected by the carry-back must be adjusted to reflect such carry-back. Thus, any deduction limited, for example, by net income, such as the deduction for charitable contributions, is to be recomputed on the basis of the net income as affected by the carry-back. Similarly, in any case where one tax is allowable as a deduction in computing a second tax, or where the income subject to one tax is a credit in computing the income subject to the second tax, such deduction or credit must be adjusted to reflect such carry-back. In determining the net operating loss deduction, the adjustments required by sections 122 (c) and 433 (a) (1) (J) are likewise to be made.

(d) The reduction in the aggregate of the taxes previously determined is a net reduction. That is, in determining such reduction, a decrease, attributable to a carry-back, in any one tax, e. g., the income tax, will be offset by an increase in any other tax, e. g., the surtax on personal holding companies, resulting from such decrease.

§ 39.3779-3 Amount of tax the time for payment of which may be extended—(a) Total amount to which extension may relate. The total amount of one or more taxes the time for payment of which may be extended under section 3779 may not exceed the amount shown in item 4 (c) of Form 1138.

(b) Amount of any one tax to which extension may relate. (1) The taxpayer is to specify in item 5 (j) of Form 1138 the tax or taxes and the amount thereof the time for payment of which is to be extended. In case of any one tax the amount to which an extension may relate may not exceed the amount of such tax shown on the return as filed, increased by any amount assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or additions to the tax) prior to the date of filing the statement and decreased by any amount paid or required to be paid prior to such date. In determining the amount of tax required to be paid prior to the date of filing the statement, only the following amounts shall be taken into consideration:

(i) The amount of the tax shown on the return as filed; and

(ii) Any amount assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or additions to the tax) if the tenth day after notice and demand for its payment occurs prior to the date of the filing of the statement.

(2) Delinquent installments are to be considered amounts required to be paid prior to the date of filing the statement. In the case of any authorized extension of time under section 56 (c), the amount of tax the time for payment of which is so extended is not to be considered required to be paid prior to the end of such extension. Similarly, any amount assessed as a deficiency (or as interest or additions to the tax) is not to be considered required to be paid prior to the date of the filing of the statement unless the tenth day after notice and demand for its payment falls prior to the date of the filing of the statement.

(3) The taxpayer may choose to extend the time for payment of all of one or more taxes, or it may choose to extend the time for payment of portions of several taxes. The taxes chosen by the taxpayer need not be those taxes which are affected by the carry-back. The amount to which an extension may relate in the case of any one tax may not exceed the amount specified in section 3779 (c) and shown in item 5 (i) of Form 1138, and the total amount of all taxes the time for payment of which may be extended may not exceed the amount specified in section 3779 (c) and shown in item 4 (c) of Form 1138. Such amounts represent the maximum amounts the time for payment of which may be extended; the amount the time for payment of which is extended in the case of any one tax, or the total of such amounts, may be less than the maximum amounts specified in section 3779 (c) and shown in items 5 (i) and 4 (c) respectively, of Form 1138.

§ 39.3779-4 Payment of remainder of tax where extension relates to only part of the tax. (a) If an extension of time relates to only part of the tax, the time for payment of the remainder of the tax shall be considered to be the dates on which payments would have been required if such remainder had been the tax and the taxpayer had elected to pay the tax in installments as provided in section 56 (b).

(b) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation A, which keeps its books and makes its tax returns on the calendar year basis, filed its income tax return for 1952 on March 15, 1953. The corporation showed a tax of $1,000 on its return and paid 40 percent of such tax, or $400, on March 15, 1953. On June 1, 1953, Corporation A, pursuant to the provisions of section 3779, extended the time for payment of $500 of such tax. The remainder of the tax the time for payment of which was not so extended, i. e., $500, is to be considered the tax for purposes of determining when it is to be paid. Such remainder is to be paid in installments on each of the normal installment dates. Since the taxable year is the calendar year 1952, 40 percent of $500 is due on each of the first two installment dates and 10 percent of $500 is due on each of the last two installment dates. Since the corporation has already paid $400 on March 15, 1953, it will have nothing to pay on June 15, 1953, and it will pay $50 on September 15, 1953, and $50 on December 15, 1953.

§ 39.3779-5 Period of extension. If the time for the payment of any tax has been extended pursuant to section 3779, such extension shall expire:

(a) On the last day of the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for the filing of the return for the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit; or

(b) If an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment provided in section 3780 with respect to such loss or unused credit is filed before the expiration of the period specified in paragraph (a) of this section, on the date on which notice is mailed by registered mail to the taxpayer that such application is allowed or disallowed in whole or in part.

§ 39.3779-6 Revised statements. (a) A corporation may file more than one statement under section 3779 with respect to any one taxable year. Each statement is to be considered a new statement and not an amendment of any prior statement. Each such new statement is to be in lieu of the last statement previously filed with respect to the taxable year and may extend the time for payment of a greater or lesser amount of tax than was extended under the prior statement. The extension may not relate to any amount of tax which was paid or required to be paid prior to the date of filing the new statement. Any amount of tax the time for payment of which was extended under a prior statement, however, may continue to be extended under the new statement. If the amount the time for payment of which is extended under the new statement is less than the amount so extended under the last statement previously filed, the extension of time shall be terminated on the date the new statement is filed as to the difference between the two amounts. See section 3779 (g) for the dates on which such difference must be paid. If a corporation pays any amount of tax, the time for payment of which was extended, prior to the date the extension would otherwise terminate, the extension with respect to such amount shall be deemed terminated, without regard to whether a new statement is filed, on the date such amount is paid. The corporation shall indicate on each new statement filed that it has already filed one or more prior statements with respect to the taxable year. The corporation shall likewise indicate the dates each prior statement was filed and the amount of each tax the time for payment of which was extended under each prior statement.

(b) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation B, which keeps its books and makes its tax returns on the calendar year basis, filed its income tax return for 1952 on March 15, 1953, showing a tax of $100,000. At the same time it filed a statement under section 3779 in which it stated that it expected to have a net operating loss of $75,000 in 1953 and that the reduction in the tax previously determined for 1952, attributable to the expected net operating loss carry-back resulting from such expected loss, would be $39,000. The corporation accordingly extended the time for payment of $39,000 of its income tax for 1952, and paid $24,400 of such tax on March 15, 1953 (see section 3779 (c) and § 39.3779-4). As a result of its operations during the next several months, the corporation filed a second statement on June 1, 1953, in which it stated that its expected net operating loss for 1953 would amount to $150,000 and that the corresponding reduction in the tax for 1952 would amount to $78,000. Corporation B under the new statement may extend the time for payment of $39,000 of the installments due on June 15, 1953, September 15, 1953, and December 15, 1953, and the time for payment of the $39,000 extended under the first statement filed on March 15, 1953, may continue to be extended under the second statement. The $24,400 which was paid on March 15, 1953, will not be affected by the second statement filed on June 1, 1953. If the corporation had failed to pay the $24,400 on March 15, 1953, and had not secured an extension of time under section 56 (c) until at least June 1, 1953, with respect to such amount, the time for payment of such $24,400 could not be extended under the second statement filed on June 1, 1953.

(c) The corporation in paragraph (b) might file a second statement to show that it had overestimated the amount of its expected net operating loss and, accordingly, to terminate the extension with respect to part or all of the tax. The corporation might file a second statement even though its estimate of its expected net operating loss had not changed since it filed its first statement. For example, the corporation might have computed incorrectly the reduction, attributable to the expected net operating loss carry-back from 1953, in the tax previously determined for 1952. In such case, the corporation might file a second statement showing the correct computation of such reduction and increasing or decreasing the amount of tax the time for payment of which was extended to correspond to the correct computation. The corporation might file a second statement in order to change the kind of tax the time for payment of which is to be extended even though the total amount of tax the time for payment of which was extended is not to be changed.

§ 39.3779-7 Termination by Commissioner—(a) After an examination of the statement filed by the corporation is made. The Commissioner is authorized to make such examination of the statements filed as he deems necessary and practicable. If upon such examination as he may make, the Commissioner believes that, as of the time he makes the examination, all or any part of the statement is in a material respect erroneous or unreasonable, he will terminate the extension as to any part of the amount to which such extension relates which he deems should be terminated.

(b) Jeopardy. If the Commissioner believes that the collection of any amount to which an extension under section 3779 relates is in jeopardy, he will immediately terminate the extension. In the case of such a termination, notice and demand is to be made by the district director for payment of such amount, and there may be no further extension of time under section 3779 with respect to such amount.

§ 39.3779-8 Payments on termination. (a) If an extension of time under section 3779 is terminated with respect to any amount either (1) by the filing of a new statement by the taxpayer under section 3779 (e) extending the time for payment of a lesser amount than was extended in a prior statement or (2) by action of the Commissioner under section 3779 (f) after making an examination of the statement filed by the corporation, no further extension of time may be made under section 3779 with respect to such amount. The time for payment of such amount shall be the dates on which payments would have been required if there had been no extension with respect to such amount and the taxpayer had elected under section 56 (b) to pay the tax in installments.

(b) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation C, which keeps its books and makes its tax returns on a calendar year basis, filed its 1952 income tax return, showing a tax of $1,000, on March 15, 1953. At the same time the corporation filed a statement under section 3779 extending the time for payment of the entire $1,000 on the basis of an expected net operating loss carry-back from 1953. On July 1, 1953, the corporation filed a new statement indicating that the reduction, attributable to the expected net operating loss carry-back from 1953, in its income tax for 1952 would be only $600, and thus terminated the above extension to the extent of $400. The time for payment of such $400 may not be extended again, and such $400 is payable as if it were the tax for 1952 and Corporation C had elected to pay such tax in installments. That is, $160 is payable on March 15, 1953, $160 on June 15, 1953, $40 on September 15, 1953, and $40 on December 15, 1953. Interest is payable under section 3779 (i) (2) on such amounts at the rate of 6 percent per annum and is to be computed from the respective dates on which such amounts were payable. Inasmuch as the March 15 and June 15 dates had already passed when Corporation C terminated the extension with respect to the $400, $320 is payable immediately upon such termination, and $40 is payable on September 15, 1953, and $40 on December 15, 1953. The fact that the corporation did not pay the $160 on March 15, 1953, and the $160 on June 15, 1953, is not to be considered such a failure to pay an installment on or before the date fixed for its payment as would make the entire tax become due under the provisions of section 56 (b). Interest, however, will be computed upon the first $160 from March 15, 1953, and upon the second $160 from June 15, 1953. See section 3779 (i) and § 39.3779-9.

Example (2). If Corporation C in example (1) had shown a tax of $1,200 on its return, the other facts being the same, and, accordingly, had paid $80 on March 15, 1953, and $80 on June 15, 1953, then upon the termination as to the $400, $320 would be payable immediately (i. e., $160 which in the light of the termination should have been paid on March 15, 1953, and $160 which should have been paid on June 15, 1953), and two installments of $60 each would be payable on September 15, 1953, and on December 15, 1953. Interest would be computed from the same dates as in example (1).

(c) The examples in paragraph (b) of this section also would apply if the extension of time for the payment of the $400 were terminated by the Commissioner under section 3779 (f) because he believed that the statement filed by Corporation C under section 3779 extending the time for payment of tax was clearly erroneous or unreasonable in a material respect. If, however, the Commissioner on July 1, 1953, terminated the extension with respect to such $400 under section 3779 (h) because he believed the collection of such amount was in jeopardy, the entire $400 would be payable immediately upon notice and demand by the district director of internal revenue. In such case interest would be computed on $160 from March 15, 1953, on $160 from June 15, 1953, and on the remaining $80 from July 1, 1953. See section 3779 (i) and § 39.3779-9.

§ 39.3779-9. Interest. (a) Interest is payable on any amount the time for payment of which is extended under section 3779. The interest, which is to be collected as part of such amount, is to be computed at the rates indicated in subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph from the dates on which payments would have been required if there had been no extension, and the taxpayer had elected under section 56 (b) to pay the tax in installments:

(1) At the rate of 3 percent per annum on so much of such amount as is satisfied by applying or crediting thereto, within the period of extension (see section 3779 (d)) a decrease in tax determined in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, as provided in section 3780 (a) to the date of such satisfaction, except that the rate is to be 6 percent per annum upon so much of the satisfied amount as does not exceed the amount of the deficiencies assessed under section 3780 (b) in respect of such application which is not so satisfied; and

(2) At the rate of 6 percent per annum upon the remainder of the amount the time for payment of which was extended to the date such amount is paid.

(b) Interest thus will be payable at the rate of 3 percent per annum upon any amount the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779 to the extent that such amount is satisfied by applying or crediting thereto, within the period of extension, a decrease in tax determined in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment under section 3780 (a). The application for the tentative carry-back adjustment must be with respect to the same taxable year as that of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit. In determining whether an amount has been so satisfied, however, the net effect of the carry-back, including any resulting deficiencies, must be taken into account. Interest upon any amount not so satisfied will be payable at the rate of 6 percent per annum.

(c) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation D, which came into existence on January 1, 1952, and which keeps its books and makes its tax returns on the calendar year basis, extended the time for payment of $855 of its income tax for 1952 on the basis of an expected net operating loss carry-back from 1953. The corporation in fact had a net operating loss for 1953, and on March 31, 1954, it filed an application under section 3780 (a) for a tentative carry-back adjustment with respect to the net operating loss carry-back from 1953. The application showed that the corporation's income tax for 1952 was decreased by $455 as a result of the carry-back from 1953. The Commissioner allowed the application in full on June 29, 1954. The $455 decrease in the corporation's income tax for 1952 was applied against the $855 of its income tax for 1952, the time for payment of which had been extended pursuant to the statement previously filed under section 3779. Since the decrease in the corporation's income tax for 1952 was only $455, the corporation paid the remainder of $400 for 1952 in cash within ten days after notice and demand. The reduction in the corporation's income tax as previously determined for 1952, attributable to the net operating loss carry-back from 1953, was only $455, and the corporation therefore should not have extended the time for payment of more than $455 of its 1952 income tax. Inasmuch as only $455 of the amount the time for payment of which had been extended was satisfied by reason of the carry-back, interest is to be collected at the rate of 3 percent per annum on the $455 and at the rate of 6 percent per annum on the remaining $400. The interest will be computed on the $455 and on the $400 at the rates of 3 percent and 6 percent per annum, respectively, as if 40 percent of each such amount were payable on March 15, 1953, 40 percent on June 15, 1953, 10 percent on September 15, 1953, and 10 percent on December 15, 1953. Interest on the $455 will run until the date the reduction in income tax for 1952, determined in respect of the above application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, is applied against the income tax for 1952, the time for payment of which was extended, and interest on the $400 will run until the date such $400 is paid. The corporation, however, will be liable for a penalty of 5 percent of $286.25, or $14.31, for extending the time for payment of an amount substantially in excess of an amount the time for payment of which might properly have been extended. See section 294 (e) and § 39.294-2.

(d) If an extension of time under section 3779 is terminated either by action of the taxpayer (by paying an amount the time for payment of which had been extended or by filing a new statement extending the time for payment of a lesser amount than was extended in a prior statement) or by the Commissioner (because he believes the statement filed was erroneous or unreasonable in a material respect or because he believes that the collection of an amount to which the extension relates is in jeopardy) interest is payable on the amount to which such termination relates at the rate of 6 percent per annum to the date of payment. Likewise, if the taxpayer fails to file an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment prior to the last day of the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for filing the return for the taxable year of the expected net operating loss or unused excess profits credit, interest is payable on the amount to which the extension relates at the rate of 6 percent per annum to the date of payment. In such case interest will be payable at the rate of 6 percent per annum without regard to whether the taxpayer could have filed an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, which would have been allowed by the Commissioner, prior to such last date and without regard to whether the taxpayer in fact does file such an application at some time after such last date. If part of an amount the time for payment of which has been extended is satisfied by applying or crediting thereto, within the period of extension, a decrease in tax determined in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment and part is not so satisfied, interest will be payable on the first part at the rate of 3 percent per annum and on the second part at the rate of 6 percent per annum.

(e) The action of the Commissioner in allowing or disallowing an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment determines the interest payable on amounts the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779; such interest is not to be affected by a later determination by the Commissioner or any court, including The Tax Court of the United States. If, however, the Commissioner determines, either at the time of the termination of the extension or at some time thereafter, that during the period of extension a credit or refund of an overpayment has been allowed or made, or a deficiency assessed, affecting the amount to which the extension under section 3779 relates and that the corporation could not have taken such overpayment or deficiency into account in the statement or in a revised statement, an appropriate adjustment will be made in determining what part of such amount shall bear interest at the rate of 3 percent and what part at the rate of 6 percent per annum.

SEC. 3780. Tentative carry-back adjustments—(a) Application for adjustment. A taxpayer may file an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment of the taxes for prior taxable years affected by a net operating loss carry-back, provided in section 122 (b), or an unused excess profits credit carry-back, provided in section 432 (c), from any taxable year ending on or after September 30, 1945. The application shall be verified in the manner prescribed by section 51 or section 52 in the case of a return of such taxpayer, and shall be filed, on or after the date of filing of the return for the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit from which the carry-back results and within a period of twelve months from the end of such taxable year, in the manner and form required by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. The application shall set forth, in such detail and with such supporting data and explanation as such regulations shall require—

(1) The amount of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit;

(2) The amount of the tax previously determined for each prior taxable year affected by such carry-back; the tax previously determined being ascertained in accordance with the method prescribed in section 3801 (d);

(3) The amount of increase or decrease in each such tax, attributable to such carry-back; such increase or decrease being determined by applying the carry-back in the manner provided by law to the items on the basis of which such taxes were determined. If an application under section 124 (j) for tentative adjustment of tax with respect to amortization has been previously filed but such adjustment has not been previously determined, then for the purposes of this section the assessments, applications, credits, and refunds provided for in section 124 (k) shall be considered as having previously been made upon the basis of such application under section 124 (j);

(4) The amount by which the aggregate of such decreases exceeds the aggregate of such increases;

(5) The unpaid amount of each such tax, not including any amount required to be shown under paragraph (6);

(6) The amount, with respect to each tax for the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year of such loss or unused credit, as to which an extension of time for payment under section 3779 is in effect; and

(7) Such other information for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this section as may be required by such regulations.

An application under this subsection shall not constitute a claim for credit or refund.

(b) Allowance of adjustments. Within a period of ninety days from the date on which an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is filed under subsection (a), or from the last day of the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for filing the return for the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit from which such carry-back results, whichever is the later, the Commissioner shall make, to the extent he deems practicable in such period, a limited examination of the application, to discover omissions and errors of computation therein, and shall determine the amount of the increase or decrease in each tax attributable to such carry-back upon the basis of the application and the examination, except that the Commissioner may disallow, without further action, any application which he finds contains errors of computation which he deems cannot be corrected by him within such ninety-day period or material omissions. Each such increase shall be deemed determined as a deficiency and shall be assessed, without regard to the restrictions on assessment in section 272. Each such decrease shall be applied against any unpaid amount of the tax decreased (including any amount of such tax as to which an extension of time under section 3779 is in effect) and any remainder shall be credited—

(1) Against the deficiencies (and additions to the tax) assessed under this subsection,

(2) Against any unsatisfied amount of any tax for the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit the time for payment of which tax is extended under section 3779, and any remainder shall, within such ninety-day period, be either credited against any income, war profits, or excess profits tax or instalment thereof then due from the taxpayer, or refunded to the taxpayer. The application, credit or refund of a decrease determined under this subsection shall be deemed a credit or refund of an overpayment within the meaning of sections 781 (b) and 3807 (b) (1).

(c) Assessment of erroneous allowances. If the Commissioner determines that the amount applied, credited or refunded under subsection (b) is in excess of the overassessment attributable to the carry-back with respect to which such amount was applied, credited or refunded, he may assess the amount of the excess as a deficiency as if it were due to a mathematical error appearing on the face of the return, as provided in section 272 (f). Upon making such assessment, the Commissioner shall schedule as an overassessment the decrease in any other tax resulting from the adjustments reflected in the computation of the deficiency.

§ 39.3780-1 Tentative carry-back adjustments—(a) In general. Any taxpayer who claims a net operating loss or unused excess profits credit may file an application under section 3780 for a tentative carry-back adjustment of the taxes for all taxable years prior to the taxable year of the loss or unused credit which are affected by the net operating loss carry-back or the unused excess profits credit carry-back resulting from such loss or unused credit. The right to file an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is not limited to corporations, but is available to any taxpayer who has a carry-back. A corporation may file an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment even though it has not extended the time for payment of tax under section 3779. If a corporation has both a net operating loss and an unused excess profits credit, it may file an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment in respect of both the net operating loss carry-back and the unused excess profits credit carry-back resulting from such loss and unused credit.

(b) Contents of application. (1) The application for a tentative carry-back adjustment in the case of a corporation is to be filed on Form 1139, and in the case of taxpayers other than corporations on Form 1045. The applications are to be filled out in accordance with the instructions accompanying such forms, and all information required by the forms and the instructions must be furnished by the taxpayer. The application shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under penalties of perjury.

(2) An application for a tentative carry-back adjustment does not constitute a claim for credit or refund. If such application is disallowed by the Commissioner in whole or in part, no suit may be maintained in any court for the recovery of any tax based on such application. The taxpayer, however, may file a regular claim for credit or refund under section 322 at any time prior to the expiration of the applicable period of limitation, and may maintain a suit based on such claim if it is disallowed or if the Commissioner does not act on the claim within six months from the date it is filed. Such regular claim may be filed before, simultaneously with, or after the filing of the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment. The filing of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment will not constitute the filing of a claim for credit or refund within the meaning of section 322 (b) for purposes of determining whether a claim for credit or refund was filed prior to the expiration of the applicable period of limitation. A regular claim for credit or refund under section 322 filed after the filing of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is not to be considered an amendment of such application but is to be considered a new claim. Such regular claim, however, in proper cases may constitute an amendment to a prior regular claim filed under section 322.

(c) Time and place of filing application. The application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is to be filed on or after the date of the filing of the return for the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit, and must be filed within a period of 12 months from the end of such taxable year. Any application filed prior to the date the return for the taxable year of the loss or unused credit is filed shall be considered to have been filed on the date such return is filed. The application is to be filed with the district director of internal revenue where the tax was paid or the assessment was made.

§ 39.3780-2 Computation of increase or decrease in prior years' taxes affected by the carry-back. (a) The taxpayer is to determine the amount of increase or decrease, attributable to the carry-back, in each tax previously determined, which is affected by such carry-back, for each taxable year before the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit. The tax previously determined is to be ascertained in accordance with the method prescribed in section 3801 (d) In general, therefore, the tax previously determined will be the tax shown on the return as filed, increased by any amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies before the date of the filing of the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment, and decreased by any amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid prior to such date. Any items as to which the Commissioner and the taxpayer are in disagreement at the time of the filing of the application shall be taken into account in ascertaining the tax previously determined only if, and to the extent that, they were reported in the return, or were reflected in any amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, or in any amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid, before the date of filing the application. The tax previously determined, therefore, will reflect the foreign tax credit and the credit for tax withheld at source provided in section 32.

(b) The increase or decrease in each tax previously determined which is affected by the carry-back or any related adjustments, is to be determined, except for such carry-back and related adjustments, on the basis of the items which entered into the computation of such tax as previously determined; the tax previously determined being ascertained in the manner described in this section. In determining any such increase or decrease accordingly, items shall be taken into account only to the extent that they were reported in the return, or were reflected in amounts assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, or in amounts abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid, before the date of filing the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment. If the Commissioner and the taxpayer are in disagreement as to the proper treatment of any item, it shall be assumed for purposes of determining the increase or decrease in the tax previously determined that such item was correctly reported by the taxpayer unless, and to the extent that, the disagreement has resulted in the assessment of a deficiency (or the collection of an amount without an assessment) or the allowing or making of an abatement, credit, refund, or other repayment, before the date of filing the application. Thus, if the taxpayer claimed a deduction on its return of $50,000 for salaries paid its officers but the Commissioner asserts that such deduction should not exceed $20,000, and the Commissioner and the taxpayer have not agreed on the amount properly deductible before the date the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is filed, $50,000 shall be considered as the amount properly deductible for purposes of determining the increase or decrease in each tax previously determined in respect of the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment. In determining the increase or decrease in any tax previously determined, any items which are affected by the carry-back must be adjusted to reflect such carry-back. Thus, any deduction limited, for example, by net income or adjusted gross income, such as the deduction for charitable contributions, is to be recomputed on the basis of the net income or adjusted gross income as affected by the carry-back. Similarly, in any case where one tax is allowable as a deduction in computing a second tax, or where the income subject to one tax is a credit in computing the income subject to the second tax, such deduction or credit must be adjusted to reflect such carry-back. In computing the net operating loss deduction for purposes of determining any such increase or decrease, proper adjustments as required by section 122 (c) and 433 (a) (1) (J) are to be made.

§ 39.3780-3 Allowance of adjustments. (a) The Commissioner is to act upon any application for a tentative carry-back adjustment filed under section 3780 (a) within a period of 90 days from whichever of the following two dates is the later:

(1) The date the application is filed; or

(2) The last day of the month in which falls the last date prescribed by law (including any extension of time granted the taxpayer) for filing the return for the taxable year of the net operating loss or unused excess profits credit from which the carry-back results.

(b) Within the 90-day period described in paragraph (a) of this section, the Commissioner will make, to the extent he deems practicable in such period, an examination of the application to discover omissions and errors of computation. He is to determine within such period the increase or decrease in any tax previously determined, affected by the carry-back or any related adjustments, upon the basis of the application and such examination. Such increases and decreases are to be determined in the same manner as that provided in section 3780 (a) for the determination by the taxpayer of the increases and decreases in taxes previously determined which must be set forth in the application for a tentative carry-back adjustment. The Commissioner, however, may correct any errors of computation or omissions he may discover upon examination of the application. In determining the increase or decrease in each tax previously determined which is affected by the carry-back or any related adjustments, he accordingly may correct any mathematical error appearing on the application and he may likewise correct any adjustment required by the law and incorrectly made by the taxpayer in computing its net operating loss, its unused excess profits credit, the resulting carry-backs, or its net operating loss deduction or unused excess profits credit adjustment. If the required adjustment has not been made by the taxpayer and the Commissioner has available the necessary information to make such adjustment within the 90-day period, he may, in his discretion, make such adjustment. Thus, if the taxpayer's application fails to take into account certain tax-free interest which he received in the year of the net operating loss, or in a prior year the taxes for which are affected by the resulting net operating loss carry-back, the Commissioner, if he knows the amount of such tax-free interest received by the taxpayer in such year, may take such tax-free interest into account in determining the increases and decreases in the taxes previously determined which are affected by the carry-back. In determining such increases and decreases, however, the Commissioner will not, for example, change the amount claimed on the return as a deduction for depreciation because he believes that the taxpayer has claimed an excessive amount; likewise, he will not include in gross income any amount not so included by the taxpayer even though the Commissioner believes that such amount is subject to tax and properly should be included in gross income.

(c) If the Commissioner finds that an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment contains material omissions or errors of computation, he may disallow such application in whole or in part without further action. If, however, he deems that any error of computation can be corrected by him within the 90-day period, he may do so and allow the application in whole or in part. The Commissioner's determination as to whether he can correct any error of computation within the 90-day period shall be conclusive. Similarly, his action in disallowing, in whole or in part, any application for a tentative carry-back adjustment shall be final and may not be challenged in any proceeding. The taxpayer in such case, however, may file a regular claim for credit or refund under section 322, and may maintain a suit based on such claim if it is disallowed or if the Commissioner does not act upon the claim within six months from the date it is filed.

(d) In the case of any application for a tentative carry-back adjustment which the Commissioner allows in whole or in part, any increase determined by the Commissioner in any tax previously determined which is affected by the carry-back or any related adjustments shall be deemed to have been determined as a deficiency and shall be assessed without regard to the restrictions on assessment provided in section 272. Such increase may be assessed, for example, without regard to whether a notice of deficiency in respect of such increase is sent to the taxpayer and without regard to whether a prior notice of deficiency has been mailed to the taxpayer. The taxpayer will not have the right to contest the assessment before The Tax Court of the United States whether or not the Commissioner sends him a notice in respect of such increase.

(e) (1) Each decrease determined by the Commissioner in any tax previously determined which is affected by the carry-back or any related adjustments shall first be applied against any unpaid amount of the tax with respect to which such decrease was determined. Such unpaid amount of tax may include one or more of the following:

(i) An amount with respect to which the taxpayer is delinquent;

(ii) An amount the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779 which is due and payable on or after the date on which the decrease is allowed; and

(iii) An amount (including an amount the time for payment of which has been extended under section 56 (c), but not including an amount the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779) which is due and payable on or after the date on which the decrease is allowed.

(2) In case the unpaid amount of tax includes more than one of such amounts, the Commissioner, in his discretion, shall determine against which amount or amounts, and in what proportion, the decrease is to be applied. In general, however, the decrease will be applied against any amounts described in subdivisions (i), (ii), and (iii) of subparagraph (1) in the order named. If there are several amounts of the type described in subdivision (iii) any amount of the decrease which is to be applied against such amounts will be applied by assuming that the tax previously determined minus the amount of the decrease to be so applied is "the tax" and the taxpayer had elected to pay such tax in installments. The unpaid amount of tax against which a decrease may be applied may not include any amount of tax for any taxable year other than the year of the decrease. After making such application, the Commissioner will credit any remainder of the decrease as follows:

(i) Against any increase (including additions to the tax) determined in any tax which is attributable to the carry-back or any related adjustments and which has been assessed under section 3780 (b) and then

(ii) Against any unsatisfied amount of any tax for the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year of the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit the time for payment of which has been extended under section 3779.

(3) Any remainder of the decrease after such application and credits may, within the 90-day period, in the discretion of the Commissioner, be credited against any income, war profits, or excess profits tax or installment thereof then due from the taxpayer, and, if not so credited, is to be refunded to the taxpayer within such 90-day period.

§ 39.3780-4 Assessment of erroneous allowances. (a) If the Commissioner determines that any amount applied, credited, or refunded under section 3780 (b) with respect to an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment is in excess of the overassessment properly attributable to the carry-back upon which such application was based, he may assess the amount of the excess as a deficiency as if such deficiency were due to a mathematical error appearing on the face of the return. That is, the Commissioner may assess an amount equal to the excess, and such amount may be collected, without regard to the restrictions on assessment and collection imposed by section 272. Thus, the Commissioner, for example, may assess such amount without regard to whether he has mailed the taxpayer a prior notice of deficiency. Either before or after assessing such an amount, the Commissioner will notify the taxpayer that he has made, or will make, such assessment. Such notice will not constitute a notice of deficiency, and the taxpayer may not file a petition with The Tax Court of the United States based on such notice. The taxpayer, however, within the applicable period of limitation may file a regular claim for credit or refund under section 322 based on the carry-back, if he has not already filed such a claim, and may maintain a suit based on such claim if it is disallowed or if it is not acted upon by the Commissioner within six months from the date the claim was filed.

(b) Upon assessing any deficiency under section 3780 (c) the Commissioner will schedule as an overassessment the decrease in any other tax resulting from the adjustments reflected in the computation of the deficiency so assessed. In any such case the taxpayer will be required to pay only the difference between the overassessment and the deficiency in satisfaction of the deficiency.

(c) The method provided in section 3780 (c) to recover any amount applied, credited, or refunded in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment which the Commissioner later determines should not have been so applied, credited, or refunded is not an exclusive method. Two other methods are available to recover such amount: (1) by way of a deficiency notice under section 272 (a) or (2) by a suit to recover an erroneous refund under section 3746. The Commissioner, in his discretion, may proceed by way of any one or more of the three available methods to recover any amount which he determines was improperly applied, credited, or refunded in respect of an application for a tentative carry-back adjustment.

§ 39.3781 Statutory provisions; extension of time and tentative carry-back and amortization adjustments in the case of consolidated returns.

SEC. 3781. Extension of time and tentative carry-back and amortization adjustments in the case of consolidated returns. If the corporation seeking an extension of time under section 3779, a tentative carry-back adjustment under section 3780, or a tentative adjustment with respect to an amortization deduction under section 124 (j) and (k), made or was required to make a consolidated return, either for the taxable year within which the net operating loss or the unused excess profits credit arises or within which the election is made to terminate the amortization period, or for a preceding taxable year affected by such loss, credit, or election, the provisions of such sections shall apply only to such extent and subject to such conditions, limitations, and exceptions as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe.

ADDITIONAL MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

§ 39.3790-3795 Statutory provisions; prohibition of administrative review of Commissioner's decisions; rules and regulations; expenses of detection and punishment of frauds; penalties and forfeitures; interest on delinquent taxes; administration of real estate acquired by the United States.

SEC. 3790. Prohibition of administrative review of Commissioner's decisions. In the absence of fraud or mistake in mathematical calculation, the findings of facts in and the decision of the Commissioner upon (or in case the Secretary is authorized to approve the same, then after such approval) the merits of any claim presented under or authorized by the internal revenue laws shall not, except as provided in chapter 5, be subject to review by any other administrative or accounting officer, employee, or agent of the United States. In the absence of fraud or mistake in mathematical calculation, the allowance or nonallowance by the Commissioner, of interest on any credit or refund under the internal revenue laws shall not, except as provided in chapter 5, be subject to review by any other administrative or accounting officer, employee, or agent of the United States.

[Sec. 3790 as amended by sec. 4 (f), Current Tax Payment Act 1943]

SEC. 3791. Rules and regulations—(a) Authorization—(1) In general. * * * the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe and publish all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title.

(2) In case of change in law. The Commissioner may make all such regulations, not otherwise provided for, as may have become necessary by reason of any alteration of law in relation to internal revenue.

(b) Retroactivity of regulations or rulings. The Secretary, or the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe the extent, if any, to which any ruling, regulation, or Treasury Decision, relating to the internal revenue laws, shall be applied without retroactive effect.

SEC. 3792. Expenses of detection and punishment of frauds. The Commissioner, under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, is authorized to pay such sums, not exceeding in the aggregate the sum appropriated therefor, as he may deem necessary for detecting and bringing to trial and punishment persons guilty of violating the internal revenue laws, or conniving at the same, in cases where such expenses are not otherwise provided for by law.

[Sec. 3792 as amended by sec. 12, Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.)]

SEC. 3793. Penalties and forfeitures—(a) Fraudulent bonds, permits, and entries—(1) Penalty. Every person who—

(A) Simulation or execution. Simulates or falsely or fraudulently executes or signs any bond, permit, entry, or other document required by the provisions of the internal revenue laws, or by any regulation made in pursuance thereof, or

(B) Procuring execution. Procures the same to be falsely or fraudulently executed, or

(C) Aiding in execution. Advises, aids in, or connives at such execution thereof—shall be imprisoned for a term not less than one year nor more than five years, and

(2) Forfeiture. The property to which such false or fraudulent instrument relates shall be forfeited.

(b) Fraudulent returns, affidavits, and claims—(1) Assistance in preparation or presentation. Any person who willfully aids or assists in, or procures, counsels, or advises the preparation or presentation under, or in connection with any matter arising under, the internal revenue laws, of a false or fraudulent return, affidavit, claim, or document, shall (whether or not such falsity or fraud is with the knowledge or consent of the person authorized or required to present such return, affidavit, claim, or document) be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

(2) Person defined. The term "person" as used in this subsection includes an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs.

(c) Cross references. * * *

SEC. 3794. Interest on delinquent taxes. Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, interest accruing during any period of time after August 30, 1935, upon any internal-revenue tax (including amounts assessed or collected as a part thereof) not paid when due, shall be at the rate of 6 per centum per annum.

SEC. 3795. Administration of real estate acquired by the United States—(a) Person charged with. The Commissioner shall have charge of all real estate which is or shall become the property of the United States by judgment or forfeiture under the internal revenue laws, or which has been or shall be assigned, set off, or conveyed by purchase or otherwise to the United States in payment of debts or penalties arising under the laws relating to internal revenue, or which has been or shall be vested in the United States by mortgage or other security for the payment of such debts, and of all trusts created for the use of the United States in payment of such debts due them.

(b) Sale. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may, at public vendue, and upon not less than twenty days' notice, sell and dispose of all real estate owned or held by the United States as aforesaid.

(c) Lease. Until such sale the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may lease such real estate owned as aforesaid on such terms and for such period as they shall deem expedient.

(d) Release to debtor. In cases where real estate has or may become the property of the United States by conveyance or otherwise, in payment of or as security for a debt arising under the laws relating to internal revenue, and such debt shall have been paid, together with the interest thereon, at the rate of 1 per centum per month, to the United States, within two years from the date of the acquisition of such real estate, it shall be lawful for the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, to release by deed, or otherwise convey such real estate to the debtor from whom it was taken, or to his heirs or other legal representatives.

SEC. 3797. Definitions. (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(1) Person. The term "person" shall be construed to mean and include an individual, a trust, estate, partnership, company, or corporation.

(2) Partnership and partner. The term "partnership" includes a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization, through or by means of which any business, financial operation, or venture is carried on, and which is not, within the meaning of this title, a trust or estate or a corporation; and the term "partner" includes a member in such a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or organization. A person shall be recognized as a partner for income tax purposes if he owns a capital interest in a partnership in which capital is a material income-producing factor, whether or not such interest was derived by purchase or gift from any other person.

(3) Corporation. The term "corporation" includes associations, joint-stock companies, and insurance companies.

(4) Domestic. The term "domestic" when applied to a corporation or a partnership means created or organized in the United States or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory.

(5) Foreign. The term "foreign" when applied to a corporation or partnership means a corporation or partnership which is not domestic.

(6) Fiduciary. The term "fiduciary" means a guardian, trustee, executor, administrator, receiver, conservator, or any person acting in any fiduciary capacity for any person.

(7) Stock. The term "stock" includes the share in an association, joint-stock company, or insurance company.

(8) Shareholder. The term "shareholder" includes a member in an association, joint-stock company, or insurance company.

(9) United States. The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

(10) State. The word "State" shall be construed to include the Territories and the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

(11) Secretary. The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Treasury.

(12) Commissioner. The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

(13) Collector. The term "collector" means collector of internal revenue.

(14) Taxpayer. The term "taxpayer" means any person subject to a tax imposed by this title.

(15) Military or naval forces of the United States. The term "military or naval forces of the United States" includes the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, the Army Nurse Corps, Female, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, the Navy Nurse Corps, Female, and the Women's Reserve branch of the Naval Reserve.

(16) Withholding agent. The term "withholding agent" means any person required to deduct and withhold any tax under the provisions of section 143 or 144.

(17) Husband and wife. As used in sections 22 (k), 23 (u), 171, and the last sentence of section 25 (b) (3), if the husband and wife therein referred to are divorced, wherever appropriate to the meaning of such sections, the term "wife" shall be read "former wife" and the term "husband" shall be read "former husband" and, if the payments described in such sections are made by or on behalf of the wife or former wife to the husband or former husband instead of vice versa, wherever appropriate to the meaning of such sections, the term "husband" shall be read "wife" and the term "wife" shall be read "husband"

(18) International organization. The term "international organization" means a public international organization entitled to enjoy privileges, exemptions, and immunities as an international organization under the International Organizations Immunities Act.

(19) Domestic building and loan association. The term "domestic building and loan association" means a domestic building and loan association, a domestic savings and loan association, and a Federal savings and loan association, substantially all the business of which is confined to making loans to members.

(20) Employee. For the purpose of applying the provisions of chapter 1 with respect to contributions to or under a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, and with respect to distributions under such a plan or by a trust forming part of such a plan, the term "employee" shall include a full-time life insurance salesman who is considered an employee for the purpose of subchapter A of chapter 9, or, in the case of services performed before January 1, 1951, who would be considered an employee if his services were performed during 1951.

(b) Includes and including. The terms "includes" and "including" when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

(c) Cross references. For other definitions, see the following:

§ 39.3797-1 Classification of taxables. For the purpose of taxation the Internal Revenue Code makes its own classification and prescribes its own standards of classification. Local law is of no importance in this connection. Thus, a trust may be classed as a trust or as an association (and, therefore, as a corporation), depending upon its nature or its activities. See § 39.3797-3. The term "partnership" is not limited to the common law meaning of partnership, but is broader in its scope and includes groups not commonly called partnerships. See § 39.3797-4. The term "corporation" is not limited to the artificial entity usually known as a corporation, but includes also an association, a trust classed as an association because of its nature or its activities, a joint-stock company, an insurance company, and certain kinds of partnerships. See §§ 39.3797-2 and 39.3797-4. See section 191 and the regulations thereunder, for recognition as a partner of any person who owns a capital interest in a partnership in which capital is a material income-producing factor, whether or not such interest was derived by purchase or gift from any other person. The definitions, terms, and classifications, as set forth in section 3797, shall have the same respective meaning and scope in the regulations in this part.

§ 39.3797-2 Association. The term "association" is not used in the Internal Revenue Code in any narrow or technical sense. It includes any organization, created for the transaction of designated affairs, or the attainment of some object, which, like a corporation, continues notwithstanding that its members or participants change, and the affairs of which, like corporate affairs, are conducted by a single individual, a committee, a board, or some other group, acting in a representative capacity. It is immaterial whether such organization is created by an agreement, a declaration of trust, a statute, or otherwise. It includes a voluntary association, a joint-stock association or company, a "business" trust, a "Massachusetts" trust, a "common law" trust, an interinsurance exchange operating through an attorney in fact, a partnership association, and any other type of organization (by whatever name known) which is not, within the meaning of the Code, a trust or an estate, or a partnership. An "investment" trust of the type commonly known as a management trust is an association, and a trust of the type commonly known as a fixed investment trust is an association if there is power under the trust agreement to vary the investment of the certificate holders. See Commissioner v. North American Bond Trust, 122 F. (2d) 545, cert. denied 314 U. S. 701. If the conduct of the affairs of a corporation continues after the expiration of its charter, or the termination of its existence, it becomes an association.

§ 39.3797-3 Association distinguished from trust. (a) The term "trust," as used in the Internal Revenue Code, refers to an ordinary trust, namely, one created by will or by declaration of the trustees or the grantor, the trustees of which take title to the property for the purpose of protecting or conserving it as customarily required under the ordinary rules applied in chancery and probate courts. The beneficiaries of such a trust generally do no more than accept the benefits thereof and are not the voluntary planners or creators of the trust arrangement. Even though the beneficiaries do create such a trust, it is ordinarily done to conserve the trust property without undertaking any activity not strictly necessary to the attainment of that object.

(b) As distinguished from the ordinary trust described in the preceding paragraph there is an arrangement whereby the legal title to the property is conveyed to trustees (or a trustee) who, under a declaration or agreement of trust, hold and manage the property with a view to income or profit for the benefit of beneficiaries. Such an arrangement is designed (whether expressly or otherwise) to afford a medium whereby an income or profit-seeking activity may be carried on through a substitute for an organization such as a voluntary association or a joint-stock company or a corporation, thus obtaining the advantages of those forms of organization without their disadvantages. The nature and purpose of a cooperative undertaking will differentiate it from an ordinary trust. The purpose will not be considered narrower than that which is formally set forth in the instrument under which the activities of the trust are conducted.

(c) If a trust is an undertaking or arrangement conducted for income or profit, the capital or property of the trust being supplied by the beneficiaries, and if the trustees or other designated persons are, in effect, the managers of the undertaking or arrangement, whether the beneficiaries do or do not appoint or control them, the beneficiaries are to be treated as voluntarily joining or cooperating with each other in the trust, just as do members of an association, and the undertaking or arrangement is deemed to be an association classified by the Internal Revenue Code as a corporation. However, the fact that the capital or property of the trust is not supplied by the beneficiaries is not sufficient reason in itself for classifying the arrangement as an ordinary trust rather than as an association.

(d) By means of such a trust the disadvantages of an ordinary partnership are avoided, and the trust form affords the advantages of unity of management and continuity of existence which are characteristic of both associations and corporations. This trust form also affords the advantages of capacity, as a unit, to acquire, hold, and dispose of property and the ability to sue and be sued by strangers or members, which are characteristic of a corporation; and also frequently affords the limitation of liability and other advantages characteristic of a corporation. These advantages which the trust form provides are frequently referred to as resemblance to the general form, mode of procedure, or effectiveness in action, of an association or a corporation, or as "quasi-corporate form." The effectiveness in action in the case of a trust or of a corporation does not depend upon technical arrangements or devices such as the appointment or election of a president, secretary, treasurer, or other "officer," the use of a "seal," the issuance of certificates to the beneficiaries, the holding of meetings by managers or beneficiaries, the use of a "charter" or "by-laws," the existence of "control" by the beneficiaries over the affairs of the organization, or upon other minor elements. They serve to emphasize the fact that an organization possessing them should be treated as a corporation, but they are not essential to such classification, for the fundamental benefits enjoyed by a corporation, as outlined above, are attained, in the case of a trust, by the use of the trust form itself. The Internal Revenue Code disregards the technical distinction between a trust agreement (or declaration) and ordinary articles of association or a corporate charter, and all other differences of detail. It treats such a trust according to its essential nature, namely, as an association. This is true whether the beneficiaries form the trust or, by purchase or otherwise, acquire an interest in an existing trust.

(e) The mere size or amount of capital invested in the trust is of no importance. Sometimes the activity of the trust is a small venture or enterprise, such as the division and sale of a parcel of land, the erection of a building, or the care and rental of an office building or apartment house; sometimes the activity is a trade or business on a much larger scale. The distinction is that between the activity or purpose for which an ordinary strict trust of the traditional type would be created, and the activity or purpose for which a corporation for profit might have been formed.

§ 39.3797-4 Partnerships. (a) The Internal Revenue Code provides its own concept of a partnership. Under the term "partnership" it includes not only a partnership as known at common law, but, as well, a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization which carries on any business, financial operation, or venture, and which is not, within the meaning of the Code, a trust, estate, or a corporation. On the other hand the Code classifies under the term "corporation" an association or joint-stock company, the members of which may be subject to the personal liability of partners. If an organization is not interrupted by the death of a member or by a change in ownership of a participating interest during the agreed period of its existence, and its management is centralized in one or more persons in their representative capacities, such an organization is an association, taxable as a corporation. As to the characteristics of an association, see also §§ 39.3797-2 and 39.3797-3. See section 191 and the regulations thereunder, for treatment as a partner of any person who owns a capital interest in a partnership in which capital is a material income-producing factor, whether or not such interest was derived by purchase or gift from any other person.

(b) The following examples will illustrate some phases of the distinctions described in paragraph (a) of this section:

(1) If A and B buy some acreage for the purpose of subdivision, they are joint adventurers, and the joint venture is classified by the Code as a partnership.

(2) A, B, and C contribute $10,000 each for the purpose of buying and selling real estate. If A, B, C, or D, an outside party (or any combination of them as long as the approval of each participant is not required for syndicate action) takes control of the money, property, and business of the enterprise, and the syndicate is not terminated on the death of any of the participants, the syndicate is classified as an association.

§ 39.3797-5 Limited partnerships. (a) A limited partnership is classified for the purpose of the Internal Revenue Code as an ordinary partnership, or, on the other hand, as an association taxable as a corporation, depending upon its character in certain material respects. If the organization is not interrupted by the death of a general partner or by a change in the ownership of his participating interest, and if the management of its affairs is centralized in one or more persons acting in a representative capacity, it is taxable as a corporation. For want of these essential characteristics, a limited partnership is to be considered as an ordinary partnership notwithstanding other characteristics conferred upon it by local law.

(b) The Uniform Limited Partnership Act has been adopted in several States. A limited partnership organized under the provisions of that Act may be either an association or a partnership depending upon whether or not in the particular case the essential characteristics of an association exist.

§ 39.3797-6 Partnership associations. A partnership association of the type authorized by the statutes of several States, such, for instance, as those of the State of Pennsylvania (Purdon's Penna. Stat. Ann., (Perm. Ed.), Title 59, ch. 3), having by virtue of the statutory provisions under which it was organized, the characteristics essential to an association within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, is taxable as a corporation.

§ 39.3797-7 Insurance company. (a) Insurance companies include both stock and mutual companies, as well as mutual benefit insurance companies. A voluntary unincorporated association of employees formed for the purpose of relieving sick and aged members and the dependents of deceased members is an insurance company, whether the fund for such purpose is created wholly by membership dues or partly by contributions from the employer. A corporation which merely sets aside a fund for the insurance of its employees is not required to file a separate return for such fund, but the income therefrom shall be included in the return of the corporation.

(b) Though its name, charter powers, and subjection to State insurance laws are significant in determining the business which a corporation is authorized and intends to carry on, the character of the business actually done in the taxable year determines whether it is taxable as an insurance company under the Internal Revenue Code. For example, during the year 1952 the M Corporation, incorporated under the insurance laws of the State of R, carried on the business of lending money in addition to guaranteeing the payment of principal and interest of mortgage loans. Of its total income for the year, one-third was derived from its insurance business of guaranteeing the payment of principal and interest of mortgage loans and two-thirds was derived from its noninsurance business of lending money. The M Corporation is not an insurance company for the year 1952 within the meaning of the Code and the regulations in this part.

§ 39.3797-8 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons. (a) A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia, or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory, and a foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in these regulations as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in these regulations as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized. The term "nonresident alien," as used in the regulations in this part, includes a nonresident alien individual and a nonresident alien fiduciary.

§ 39.3797-9 Fiduciary. "Fiduciary" is a term which applies to persons who occupy positions of peculiar confidence toward others, such as trustees, executors, and administrators. A fiduciary for income tax purposes is a person who holds in trust an estate to which another has the beneficial title or in which another has a beneficial interest, or receives and controls income of another, as in the case of receivers. A committee or guardian of the property of an incompetent person is a fiduciary.

§ 39.3797-10 Fiduciary distinguished from agent. There may be a fiduciary relationship between an agent and a principal, but the word "agent" does not denote a fiduciary. An agent having entire charge of property, with authority to effect and execute leases with tenants entirely on his own responsibility and without consulting his principal, merely turning over the net profits from the property periodically to his principal by virtue of authority conferred upon him by a power of attorney, is not a fiduciary within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code. In cases where no legal trust has been created in the estate controlled by the agent and attorney, the liability to make a return rests with the principal.

§ 39.3797-11 Military or naval forces and armed forces of the United States. The term "military or naval forces of the United States" and the term "armed forces of the United States" each includes all regular and reserve components of the uniformed services which are subject to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy, or the Secretary of the Air Force. The terms also include the Coast Guard. The members of such forces include commissioned officers and the personnel below the grade of commissioned officer in such forces.

§ 39.3797-12 Collectors and directors. In the regulations in this part, references to collectors of internal revenue shall be construed to be references to directors of internal revenue or district directors of internal revenue, where appropriate, and references to district directors of internal revenue shall be construed to be references to collectors of internal revenue or directors of internal revenue, where appropriate. Similarly, references to deputy collectors shall be construed to be references to internal revenue agents, where appropriate, and references to internal revenue agents shall be construed to be references to deputy collectors, where appropriate.

SEC. 3798. Exemption of insolvent banks from tax. (a) Whenever and after any bank or trust company, a substantial portion of the business of which consists of receiving deposits and making loans and discounts, has ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States on account of such bank, or trust company, which shall diminish the assets thereof necessary for the full payment of all its depositors; and such tax shall be abated from such national banks as are found by the Comptroller of the Currency to be insolvent; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, when the facts shall appear to him, is authorized to remit so much of the said tax against any such insolvent banks and trust companies organized under State law as shall be found to affect the claims of their depositors.

(b) Whenever any bank or trust company, a substantial portion of the business of which consists of receiving deposits and making loans and discounts, has been released or discharged from its liability to its depositors for any part of their claims against it, and such depositors have accepted, in lieu thereof, a lien upon subsequent earnings of such bank or trust company, or claims against assets segregated by such bank or trust company or against assets transferred from it to an individual or corporate trustee or agent, no tax shall be assessed or collected, or paid into the Treasury of the United States on account of such bank, or trust company, such individual or corporate trustee or such agent, which shall diminish the assets thereof which are available for the payment of such depositor claims and which are necessary for the full payment thereof.

(c) (1) Any such tax collected, whether collected before, on, or after the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1938, shall be deemed to be erroneously collected, and shall be refunded subject to all provisions and limitations of law, so far as applicable, relating to the refunding of taxes.

(2) Any tax, the assessment, collection, or payment of which is barred under subsection (a) of this section, or any such tax which has been abated or remitted after May 28, 1938, shall be assessed or reassessed whenever it shall appear that payment of the tax will not diminish the assets as aforesaid.

(3) Any tax, the assessment, collection, or payment of which is barred under subsection (b) of this section or any such tax which has been refunded after May 28, 1938, shall be assessed or reassessed after full payment of such claims of depositors to the extent of the remaining assets segregated or transferred as described in subsection (b).

(4) The running of the statute of limitations on the making of assessment and collection shall be suspended, during, and for ninety days beyond, the period for which, pursuant to this section, assessment or collection may not be made, and a tax may be reassessed as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection, and collected, during the time within which, had there been no abatement, collection might have been made.

(d) This section shall not apply to any tax imposed by subchapter A or subchapter C of chapter 9.

[Sec. 3798 as amended by sec. 406 (a), Rev. Act 1939]

SEC. 406 (b). Insolvent banks [Revenue Act of 1939].

(b) The term "agent" as used in 3798 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code shall be deemed to include a corporation acting as a liquidating agent.

§ 39.3798-1 Banks and trust companies covered. (a) Section 3798 applies to any national bank, or bank or trust company organized under State law, a substantial portion of the business of which consists of receiving deposits and making loans and discounts, and which has—

(1) Ceased to do business by reason of insolvency or bankruptcy, or

(2) Been released or discharged from its liability to its depositors for any part of their deposit claims, and the depositors have accepted in lieu thereof a lien upon its subsequent earnings or claims against its assets either (i) segregated and held by it for benefit of the depositors or (ii) transferred to an individual or corporate trustee or agent who liquidates, holds or operates the assets for the benefit of the depositors.

(b) As used in the regulations under section 3798:

(1) The term "bank" unless otherwise indicated by the context, means any national bank, or bank or trust company organized under State law, within the scope of such section.

(2) The terms "statute of limitations" and "limitations" means all applicable provisions of law (including section 3798) which impose, change, or affect the limitations, conditions, or requirements relative to the allowance of refunds and abatements or the assessment or collection of tax, as the case may be.

(3) The term "segregated assets" includes transferred or trusteed assets, or assets set aside or earmarked, to all or a portion of which, or the proceeds of which, the depositors are absolutely or conditionally entitled.

§ 39.3798-2 Scope of section generally—(a) Purpose. Section 3798 is intended to assist depositors of a bank which had ceased to do business by reason of insolvency to recover their deposits, by prohibiting collection of taxes of the bank which would diminish the assets necessary for payment of its depositors and also assist depositors of banks which are in financial difficulties but which, in certain conditions, continue in business.

(b) Requisites of application. In order that section 3798 shall operate in a case where the bank continues business it is necessary that the depositors shall agree to accept, in lieu of all or a part of their deposit claims as such, claims against segregated assets, or a lien upon subsequent earnings of the bank, or both. When such an agreement exists, no tax diminishing such assets or earnings, or both, otherwise available and necessary for payment of depositors, may be collected therefrom. If, under such an agreement, the depositors have the right also to look to the unsegregated assets of the bank for recovery, in whole or part, the unsegregated assets are likewise, until they exceed the amount of the depositors' claims chargeable thereto, unavailable for tax collection. Any tax of such a bank, or part of any tax, which is once uncollectible under section 3798, cannot thereafter be collected except from any residue of segregated assets remaining after claims of depositors against such assets have been paid.

(c) Interest. For the purposes of section 3798, depositors' claims include bona fide interest, either on the deposits as such, or on the claims accepted in lieu of deposits as such.

(d) Limitations on immunity. Section 3798 is not primarily intended for the relief of banks as such. It does not prevent tax collection, from assets not necessary, or not available, for payment of depositors, from a bank within section 3798 (a) at any time within the statute of limitations. In other words the immunity of such a bank is not complete, but ceases whenever, within the statutory period for collection, it becomes possible to make collection without diminishing assets necessary for payment of depositors. In the case of a bank within section 3798 (b) any immunity to which the bank is entitled is absolute except as to segregated assets. Any tax coming within such immunity may never be collected. With respect to segregated assets, such a bank is subject to the same rule as a bank within section 3798 (a) that is to say after claims of depositors against segregated assets have been paid, any surplus is subject, within the statute of limitations, to collection of any tax, due at any time, the collection of which was suspended by the section. The section is not for the relief of creditors other than depositors, although it may incidentally operate for their benefit. See §§ 39.3798-4 and 39.3798-9 (b)

§ 39.3798-3 Segregated or transferred assets—(a) In general. In a case involving segregated or transferred assets, it is not necessary for application of section 3798, that the assets shall technically constitute a trust fund. It is sufficient that segregated assets be definitely separated from other assets of the bank and that transferred assets be definitely separated both from other assets of the bank and from other assets held or owned by the trustee or agent to whom assets of the bank have been transferred; that the bank be wholly or partially released from liability for repayment of deposits as such; and that the depositors have claims against the separated assets. Any excess of separated assets over the amount necessary for payment of such depositors will be available for tax collection after full payment of depositors' claims under the agreement against such assets. But see § 39.3798-9 (a)

(b) Corporate transferees. Where the segregated assets are transferred to a separate corporate trustee or corporate agent, the assets and earnings therefrom are within the protection of the section, until full payment of depositors' claims against such assets and earnings, no matter by whom the stock of such corporation is held, and no matter whether the assets be liquidated or operated or held for benefit of the depositors.

§ 39.3798-4 Unsegregated assets—(a) Depositors' claims against assets. (1) Claims of depositors, to the extent that they are to be satisfied out of segregated assets, will not be considered in determining the availability of unsegregated assets for tax collection. If depositors have agreed to accept payment out of segregated assets only, collection of tax from unsegregated assets will not diminish the assets available and necessary for payment of the depositors' claims. Thus, it may be possible to collect taxes from the unsegregated assets of a bank although the segregated assets are immune under the section.

(2) If the unsegregated assets of the bank are subject to any portion of the depositors' claims, such unsegregated assets will be within the immunity of the section only to the extent necessary to satisfy the claims to which such assets are subject. Taxes will still be collectible from the unsegregated assets to the extent of the amount by which the total value of such assets exceeds the liability to depositors to be satisfied therefrom. Therefore, if, for example, in the case of a bank having a tax liability not previously immune under the section, of $50,000, the deposit claims against the bank are in the amount of $75,000, and the assets available for satisfaction of deposit claims amount to $100,000, the $50,000 tax is collectible to the extent of the $25,000 excess of assets over deposit claims. Collection is not to be postponed until the full amount of the tax is collectible.

(b) Depositors' claims against earnings. Even though under a bona fide agreement a bank has been released from depositors' claims as to unsegregated assets, if all or a portion of its earnings are subject to depositors' claims, all assets the earnings from which, in whole or part, are charged with the payment of depositors' claims, will be immune from tax collection. But see § 39.3798-5 (a)

§ 39.3798-5 Earnings—(a) Availability for tax collection. Earnings of a bank within section 3798 (b), whether from segregated or unsegregated assets, which are necessary for, applicable to, and actually used for, payment of depositors' claims under an agreement, are within the immunity of the section. If only a portion or percentage of income from segregated or unsegregated assets is available and necessary for payment of depositors' claims, the remaining income is available for tax collection. Earnings of the bank's first fiscal year ending after the making of the agreement not applicable to payment of depositors will be assumed to be applicable for collection of any tax due prior or subsequent to execution of the agreement. Earnings of subsequent fiscal periods from unsegregated assets not applicable to depositors' claims will be assumed to be applicable to payment of taxes as to which immunity under the section has not previously attached. Earnings from segregated assets are available for collection of tax, whether previously uncollectible under the section or not, after depositors' claims against such assets have been paid in full. See §§ 39.3798-3 (a) and 39.3798-9 (a)

(b) Tax computation. The fact that earnings of a given year may be wholly or partly unavailable under section 3798 for collection of taxes does not exempt the income for that year, or any part thereof, from tax liability. The section affects collectibility only, and is not concerned with taxability. Accordingly, the taxpayer's income tax return shall correctly compute the tax liability, even though in the opinion of the taxpayer it is immune from tax collection under the section. The tax shall be determined with respect to the entire taxable income and not merely with respect to the portion of the earnings out of which tax may be collected. As to establishment of immunity from tax collection see § 39.3798-7.

Example. (1) An agreement, executed in the year 1952 between a bank and its depositors, provides (1) that certain assets are to be segregated for the benefit of the depositors who have waived (as claims against unsegregated assets of the bank) a percentage of their deposits; (2) that 40 percent of the bank's net earnings, for fiscal years beginning with the fiscal year ending December 31, 1952, from unsegregated assets, shall be paid to the depositors until the portion of their claims waived with respect to unsegregated assets of the bank has been paid; and (3) that the unsegregated assets shall not be subject to depositors' claims. The net income of the bank for the calendar year 1952 is $10,000, $4,000 produced by the segregated, and $6,000 produced by the unsegregated assets. Such amount shall be considered the net earnings for the purpose of section 3798 in computing the portion of the earnings to be paid to depositors. The bank has an outstanding tax liability for prior years of $7,000. The income tax liability of the bank for 1952 is 30 percent of $10,000, or $3,000, making a total outstanding tax liability of $10,000. The portion of the earnings of the bank for 1952 remaining after provision for depositors is $3,600 ($6,000 less 40 percent thereof, or $2,400). It will be assumed that of the total outstanding tax liability of $10,000, $3,600 may be assessed and collected, leaving $6,400 to be collected from any excess of the segregated assets after claims of depositors against such segregated assets have been paid in full. No part of the $6,400 immune from collection from 1952 earnings may be collected thereafter from unsegregated assets of the bank or earnings therefrom, so that except for any possible surplus of the segregated assets the $6,400 is uncollectible.

(2) In the year 1953, the earnings are again $10,000, $4,000 from segregated and $6,000 from unsegregated assets, as in 1952. However, the return filed shows income of $5,000 and a tax liability of $1,500. An investigation shows the true income to be $10,000, on which the tax is $3,000. The full $3,000 will be assumed to be collectible. The $600 difference between $3,600 (the excess of earnings from unsegregated assets over the amount going to the depositors), and the $3,000 tax for 1953, is not available for collection of the tax for prior years, which became immune as described above, but may be available for collection of tax for subsequent years.

(c) No significance attaches to the selection of the years 1952 and 1953 in the example set forth in paragraph (b) of this section. The rules indicated by the example are equally applicable to subsequent or prior years not excluded by limitations.

§ 39.3798-6 Abatement and refund. (a) An assessment or collection, no matter when made, if contrary to section 3798, is subject to abatement or refund within the applicable statutory period of limitations.

(b) Collection from a bank within section 3798 (b) which diminished assets necessary for payment of depositors, if made prior to agreement with depositors, is not contrary to the section, and affords no ground for refund.

(c) Any abatement or refund is subject to existing statutory periods of limitation, which periods are not suspended or extended by section 3798. In order to secure refund of any taxes paid for any taxable year during the period of immunity the bank must file claim therefor.

§ 39.3798-7 Establishment of immunity. (a) The mere allegation of insolvency, or that depositors have claims against segregated or other assets or earnings, will not of itself secure immunity from tax collection. It must be affirmatively established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that collection of tax will be contrary to section 3798. See also § 39.3798-8.

(b) Any claim, by a bank, of immunity under section 3798 (b) shall be supported by a statement, under oath or affirmation, which shall show: (1) The total of depositors' claims outstanding, and (2) separately and in detail, the amount of each of the following, and the amount of depositors' claims properly chargeable against each: (i) Segregated or transferred assets; (ii) unsegregated assets; (iii) estimated future average annual earnings and profits; (iv) amount collectible from shareholders; and (v) any other resources available for payment of depositors' claims. The detail shall show the full amount of depositors' claims chargeable against each of the items in subdivisions (i) to (v), inclusive, of this paragraph even though part or all of the amount chargeable against a particular item is also chargeable against some other item or items. There shall also be filed a copy of any agreement between the bank and its depositors, and any other agreement or document bearing on the claim of immunity. The statement shall show the basis, as "book," "market," etc., of valuation of the assets.

§ 39.3798-8 Procedure during immunity—(a) Statements to be filed. As long as complete or partial immunity is claimed, a bank within section 3798 (b) shall file with each income tax return a statement as required by § 39.3798-7, in duplicate, and shall also file such additional statements as the Commissioner may require. Whether or not additional statements shall be required, and the frequency thereof, will depend on the circumstances, including the financial status and apparent prospects of the bank, and the time which is available for assessment and collection. If a copy of an agreement or document has once been filed, a copy of the same agreement or document need not again be filed with a subsequent statement, if it is shown by the subsequent statement, when and where and with what return the copy was filed. In case of amendment a copy of the amendment must be filed with the return for the taxable year in which the amendment is made.

(b) Failure to file. Failure of a bank to file any required statement will be treated as indicating that the bank is not entitled to immunity.

§ 39.3798-9 Termination of immunity—(a) In general. (1) In the case of a bank within section 3798 (a), immunity will end whenever, and to the extent that, taxes may be assessed and collected, within the applicable limitation periods as extended by section 3798, without diminishing the assets available and necessary for payment of depositors. Immunity of a bank within section 3798 (b) is terminated, as to segregated assets, whenever claims of depositors against such assets have been paid in full. See § 39.3798-3. As to segregated assets, the termination of immunity is complete, and any balance remaining after payment of depositors is available, within statutory limitations, for collection of tax due at any time. However, taxes of the bank will be collectible from segregated assets only to the extent that the bank has a legal or equitable interest therein. Assets as to which there has been a complete conveyance for benefit of depositors, and the bank has bona fide been divested of all legal and equitable interest, are not available for collection of the bank's tax liability.

(2) As to unsegregated assets of a bank within section 3798 (b), immunity terminates only as to taxes thereafter becoming due. When taxes are once immune from collection, the immunity as to unsegregated assets is absolute. But see § 39.3798-4 (a).

(b) General creditors. While the immunity from tax collection is for protection of depositors, and not for benefit of general creditors, in some cases the immunity will not end until the assets are sufficient to cover indebtedness of creditors generally. This situation will exist where under applicable law the claims of general creditors are on a parity with those of depositors, so that to pay depositors in full it is necessary to pay all creditors in full.

(c) Shareholder liability. In determining the sufficiency of the assets to satisfy the depositors' claims, shareholders' liability to the extent collectible shall be treated as available assets. See § 39.3798-7.

(d) Deposit insurance. Deposit insurance payable to depositors shall not be treated as an asset of the bank and shall be disregarded in determining the sufficiency of the assets to meet the claims of depositors.

(e) Notice by bank. A bank within section 3798 (b) upon termination of immunity with respect to (1) earnings, (2) segregated or transferred assets, or (3) unsegregated assets, shall immediately notify the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the taxpayer's returns were filed of such termination of immunity. See § 39.3798-8 (b).

(f) Payment by bank. As immunity terminates with respect to any assets, it will be the duty of the bank, without notice from the district director of internal revenue, to make payment of taxes collectible from such assets.

§ 39.3798-10 Collection of tax after termination of immunity. If, in the case of a bank within section 3798 (b) segregated assets (including earnings therefrom) in excess of those necessary for payment of outstanding deposits become available, such excess of segregated assets shall be applied toward satisfaction of accumulated outstanding taxes previously immune under the section, and not barred by the statute of limitations. But see § 39.3798-3. Where sufficient segregated or unsegregated assets are available, statutory interest shall be collected with the tax. When unsegregated assets or earnings therefrom previously immune become available for tax collection, they will be available only for collection of taxes (including interest and other additions) becoming due after immunity ceases. See the example in § 39.3798-5 (c).

§ 39.3798-11 Social security taxes. The regulations under section 3798 do not relate to social security taxes, since the immunity granted by the section does not apply to taxes imposed by the Social Security Act.

§ 39.3799-3800 Statutory provisions; income from obligations and mortgages issued by joint-stock land banks; jurisdiction of District Courts to issue orders, processes, and judgments.

SEC. 3799. Income from obligations and mortgages issued by joint-stock land banks. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 26 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, 39 Stat. 380 (U. S. C., Title 12, section 931-3), as amended, in the case of mortgages made or obligations issued by any joint-stock land bank after May 28, 1938, all income, except interest, derived therefrom shall be included in gross income and shall not be exempt from Federal income taxation.

SEC. 3800. Jurisdiction of district courts to issue orders, processes, and judgments. The district courts of the United States at the instance of the United States shall have such jurisdiction to make and issue, both in actions at law and suits in equity, writs and orders of injunction, and of ne exeat republica, orders appointing receivers, and such other orders and process, and to render such judgments and decrees, granting in proper cases both legal and equitable relief together, as may be necessary or appropriate for the enforcement of the internal revenue laws. The remedies hereby provided are in addition to and not exclusive of any and all other remedies of the United States in such courts or otherwise to enforce such laws.

§ 39.3801 (a) (1) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; definition of determination.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases—(a) Definitions. For the purpose of this section—

(1) Determination. The term "determination under the income tax laws" means—

(A) A closing agreement made under section 3760:

(B) A decision by the Board of Tax Appeals or a judgment, decree, or other order by any court of competent jurisdiction, which has become final; or

(C) A final disposition by the Commissioner of a claim for refund. For the purposes of this section a claim for refund shall be deemed finally disposed of by the Commissioner—

(i) As to items with respect to which the claim was allowed, upon the date of allowance of refund or credit or upon the date of mailing notice of disallowance (by reason of offsetting items) of the claim for refund, and

(ii) As to items with respect to which the claim was disallowed, in whole or in part, or as to items applied by the Commissioner in reduction of the refund or credit, upon expiration of the time for instituting suit with respect thereto (unless suit is instituted prior to the expiration of such time).

Such term shall not include any such agreement made, or decision, judgment, decree, or order which became final, or claim for refund finally disposed of, prior to August 27, 1938.

§ 39.3801 (a) (1)-1 Purpose and scope of section 3801. Section 3801 provides for correction of the effect of certain types of errors specified in section 3801 (b) and §§ 39.3801 (b)-1 to 39.3801 (b)-5, inclusive, when one or more provisions of the internal revenue laws, such as the statute of limitations, would otherwise prevent such correction. Corrections are authorized under section 3801 only when the Commissioner, if the correction would result in an allowance of a refund or credit for the year with respect to which the error was made, or the taxpayer, if the correction would result in an additional assessment for such year, has maintained a position inconsistent with the error. No correction is permissible unless the inconsistent position is adopted by a determination made on or after August 27, 1938. The provisions of section 3801 and of the regulations promulgated under such section shall not apply to any tax imposed by chapter 9, relating to employment taxes.

§ 39.3801 (a) (1)-2 Closing agreement as a determination. For the purposes of section 3801, a determination may take the form of a closing agreement authorized by section 3760. Such an agreement may relate to the total tax liability of the taxpayer for a particular taxable year or years or to one or more separate items affecting such liability. If it becomes necessary or desirable to effect a determination in order to obtain or accelerate an adjustment authorized by section 3801, a closing agreement may be used for such purpose whenever a taxpayer and the Government have concurred in the disposition of an item or items. A closing agreement becomes final within the meaning of section 3801 on the date of its approval by the Secretary, the Under Secretary, or an Assistant Secretary, except that a closing agreement with respect to a final determination of tax liability for past years becomes final on the date of its approval by the Commissioner.

§ 39.3801 (a) (1)-3 Decision by Tax Court or court as a determination. (a) A determination may take the form of a decision by The Tax Court of the United States or a judgment, decree, or other order by any court of competent jurisdiction, which has become final.

(b) The date upon which a decision by the Tax Court becomes final is prescribed in section 1140.

(c) The date upon which a judgment of a court becomes final must be determined upon the basis of the facts in the particular case. Ordinarily a judgment of a United States district court becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed for taking an appeal, if no such appeal is duly taken within such time; and a judgment of the United States Court of Claims becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for certiorari if no such petition is duly filed within such time.

§ 39.3801 (a) (1)-4 Final disposition of claim for refund as a determination. (a) A determination may take the form of a final disposition of a claim for refund. Such disposition may result in a determination with respect to two classes of items, i. e., items included by the taxpayer in a claim for refund and items applied by the Commissioner to offset the alleged overpayment. The time at which a dispositon in respect of a particular item becomes final may depend not only upon what action is taken with respect to that item but also upon whether the claim for refund is allowed or disallowed.

(b) Items with respect to which the taxpayer's claim is allowed. (1) The disposition with respect to an item as to which the taxpayer's contention in the claim for refund is sustained becomes final on the date of allowance of the refund or credit if—

(i) The taxpayer's claim for refund is unqualifiedly allowed; or

(ii) The taxpayer's contention with respect to an item is sustained and with respect to other items is denied, so that the net result is an allowance of refund or credit; or

(iii) The taxpayer's contention with respect to an item is sustained, but the Commissioner applies other items to offset the amount of the alleged overpayment and the items so applied do not completely offset such amount but merely reduce it so that the net result is an allowance of refund or credit.

(2) If the taxpayer's contention in the claim for refund with respect to an item is sustained but the Commissioner applies other items to offset the amount of the alleged overpayment so that the net result is a disallowance of the claim for refund, the date of mailing, by registered mail, of the notice of disallowance (see section 3772) is the date of the final disposition as to the item with respect to which the taxpayer's contention is sustained.

(c) Items with respect to which the taxpayer's claim is disallowed. The disposition with respect to an item as to which the taxpayer's contention in the claim for refund is denied becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed by section 3772 for instituting suit on the claim for refund, unless suit is instituted prior to the expiration of such period, if—

(1) The taxpayer's claim for refund is unqualifiedly disallowed, or

(2) The taxpayer's contention with respect to an item is denied and with respect to other items is sustained so that the net result is an allowance of refund or credit; or

(3) The taxpayer's contention with respect to an item is sustained in part and denied in part. For example, if the taxpayer claims a deductible loss of $10,000 and a consequent overpayment of $2,500 and the Commissioner concedes that a deductible loss was sustained but in the amount of $5,000 only, or that a deductible loss of $10,000 was sustained, but under the Commissioner's computation the consequent ovepayment is only $2,000, the disposition of the claim for refund with respect to both the allowance of the $5,000 and the disallowance of the remaining $5,000, or the allowance of the $2,000 overpayment and the denial of the $500, becomes final upon the expiration of the time for instituting suit on the claim for refund unless suit is instituted prior to the expiration of such period.

(d) Items applied by the Commissioner in reduction of the refund or credit. If the Commissioner applies an item in reduction of the overpayment alleged in the claim for refund, and the net result is an allowance of refund or credit, the disposition with respect to the item so applied by the Commissioner becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed by section 3772 for instituting suit on the claim for refund, unless suit is instituted prior to the expiration of such period. If such application of the item results in the assertion of a deficiency, such action does not constitute a final disposition by the Commissioner of a claim for refund within the meaning of section 3801 (a) (1) (C) (ii), but subsequent action taken with respect to such deficiency may result in a determination under section 3801 (a) (1) (A) or (B)

(e) The necessity of waiting for the expiration of the 2-year period of limitations provided in section 3772 may be avoided in such cases as are described under paragraph (c) or (d) of this section by the use of a closing agreement to effect a determination.

§ 39.3801 (a) (2)-(3) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; definitions of taxpayer and related taxpayer

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases—(a) Definitions. For the purpose of this section * * *

(2) Taxpayer. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 3797 the term "taxpayer" means any person subject to a tax under the applicable Revenue Act.

(3) Related taxpayer. The term "related taxpayer" means a taxpayer who, with the taxpayer with respect to whom a determination specified in subsection (b) (1), (2), (3), or (4) is made, stood, in the taxable year with respect to which the erroneous inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, or disallowance therein referred to was made, in one of the following relationships: (A) Husband and wife; (B) grantor and fiduciary; (C) grantor and beneficiary; (D) fiduciary and beneficiary, legatee, or heir; (E) decedent and decedent's estate; or (F) partner.

§ 39.3801 (a) (3)-1 Related taxpayer An adjustment in the case of the taxpayer with respect to whom the error was made may be authorized under section 3801 although the determination is made with respect to a different taxpayer, provided that such taxpayers stand in one of the relationships specified in section 3801 (a) (3) The concept of "related taxpayer" has application only to section 3801 (b) (1) (2) (3) or (4) and does not apply to section 3801 (b) (5) If such relationship exists, it is not essential that the error be with respect to a transaction possible only by reason of the existence of the relationship. For example, if the error with respect to which an adjustment is sought under section 3801 grew out of an assignment of rents between taxpayer A and taxpayer B, who are partners, and the determination is with respect to taxpayer A, an adjustment with respect to taxpayer B may be permissible despite the fact that the assignment had nothing to do with the business of the partnership. The relationship need not exist throughout the entire taxable year with respect to which the error was made, but only at some time during that taxable year. For example, if a taxpayer on February 15 assigns to his fiancee the net rents of a building which the taxpayer owns, and the two are married before the end of the taxable year, an adjustment may be permissible if the determination relates to such rents despite the fact that they were not husband and wife at the time of the assignment. See § 39.3801 (b)-8 for the requirement in certain cases that the relationship exist at the time an inconsistent position is first maintained.

§ 39.3801 (b) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; circumstances of adjustment.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases. * * *

(b) Circumstances of adjustment. When a determination under the income tax laws—

(1) Requires the inclusion in gross income of an item which was erroneously included in the gross income of the taxpayer for another taxable year or in the gross income of a related taxpayer; or

(2) Allows a deduction or credit which was erroneously allowed to the taxpayer for another taxable year or to a related taxpayer; or

(3) Requires the exclusion from gross income of an item with respect to which tax was paid and which was erroneously excluded or omitted from the gross income of the taxpayer for another taxable year or from the gross income of a related taxpayer; or

(4) Allows or disallows any of the additional deductions allowable in computing the net income of estates or trusts, or requires or denies any of the inclusions in the computation of net income of beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees, specified in section 162 (b) and (c) of chapter 1, and corresponding sections of prior revenue Acts, and the correlative inclusion or deduction, as the case may be, has been erroneously excluded, omitted, or included, or disallowed, omitted, or allowed, as the case may be, in respect of the related taxpayer; or

(5) Determines the basis of property for depletion, exhaustion, wear and tear, or obsolescence, or for gain or loss on a sale or exchange, and in respect of any transaction upon which such basis depends there was an erroneous inclusion in or omission from the gross income of, or an erroneous recognition or nonrecognition of gain or loss to, the taxpayer or any person who acquired title to such property in such transaction and from whom mediately or immediately the taxpayer derived title subsequent to such transaction—and, on the date the determination becomes final, correction of the effect of the error is prevented by the operation (whether before, on or after May 28, 1938) of any provision of the internal-revenue laws other than this section and other than section 3761 (relating to compromises), then the effect of the error shall be corrected by an adjustment made under this section. Such adjustment shall be made only if there is adopted in the determination a position maintained by the Commissioner (in case the amount of the adjustment would be refunded or credited in the same manner as an overpayment under subsection (c)) or by the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made (in case the amount of the adjustment would be assessed and collected in the same manner as a deficiency under subsection (c)), which position is inconsistent with the erroneous inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be. In case the amount of the adjustment would be assessed and collected in the same manner as a deficiency, the adjustment shall not be made with respect to a related taxpayer unless he stands in such relationship to the taxpayer at the time the latter first maintains the inconsistent position in a return, claim for refund, or petition (or amended petition) to the Board of Tax Appeals for the taxable year with respect to which the determination is made, or if such position is not so maintained, then at the time of the determination.

§ 39.3801 (b)-0 Circumstances of adjustment. (a) Section 3801 may be applied to correct the effect of an error if, on the date of the determination, correction of the effect of the error is prevented by the operation of any provision of the internal revenue laws other than section 3801 and other than section 3761 of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts (relating to compromises) Examples of such provisions are: Sections 275, 311 (b) and (c) 322 (b) and (d) 1117 (e), 3746, and 3772 of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts (relating to periods of limitation) sections 272 (f) and 322 (c) of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts (relating to effect of petition to The Tax Court of the United States on further deficiency letters and on credits or refunds) section 3760 of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts (relating to closing agreements) and sections 3770 (a) (2) 3774, and 3775 of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts (relating to payments, refunds, or credits after the period of limitation has expired)

(b) If the tax liability for the year with respect to which the error was made has been compromised under section 3761 of the Internal Revenue Code or the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts, no adjustment may be made under section 3801 with respect to that year.

(c) Section 3801 is not applicable if, on the date of the determination, correction of the effect of the error is permissible without recourse to such section.

(d) The determination may be with respect to the tax imposed by chapter 1 and subchapters A, B, D, and E of chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, by the corresponding provisions of any prior revenue acts, or by more than one of such provisions. Section 3801 may be applied to correct the effect of the error only as to the tax or taxes for the year with respect to which the error was made which correspond to the tax or taxes to which the determination relates. Thus, if the determination relates to the tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code, the adjustment may be only with respect to the tax imposed by such chapter or by the corresponding provisions of the revenue act applicable to the year with respect to which the error was made; if the determination relates to subchapter B of chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, the adjustment may be only with respect to the tax imposed by such subchapter or by the corresponding provisions of the revenue act applicable to the year with respect to which the error was made.

§ 39.3801 (b)-1 Double inclusion of item of gross income. (a) Section 3801 (b) (1) applies if the determination requires the inclusion, in a taxpayer's gross income, of an item which was erroneously included in the gross income of the same taxpayer for another taxable year or of a related taxpayer for the same or another taxable year.

(b) The application of section 3801 (b) (1) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A taxpayer who keeps his books on the cash basis erroneously included in his return for 1944 an item of accrued rent. In 1949, after the period of limitations on refunds for 1944 has expired, the Commissioner discovers that the taxpayer received this rent in 1945 and asserts a deficiency for the year 1945, which is sustained by The Tax Court of the United States in 1952. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1944. If the taxpayer had returned the rent for both 1944 and 1945 and by a determination was denied a refund claimed for 1945 on account of the rent item, a similar adjustment is authorized.

Example (2). A husband assigned to his wife salary to be earned by him in the year 1950. The wife included such salary in her separate return for that year and the husband omitted it. The Commissioner asserted a deficiency against the wife for 1950 with respect to a different item and she contested that deficiency before the Tax Court. The wife would therefore be barred by section 322 (c) from filing a claim for refund for 1950. Thereafter, the Commissioner asserts a deficiency against the husband on account of the omission of such salary from his return for 1950. The husband unsuccessfully contests the deficiency before the Tax Court in 1952. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the wife's tax for 1950.

§ 39.3801 (b)-2 Double allowance of a deduction or credit. (a) Section 3801 (b) (2) applies if the determination allows the taxpayer a deduction or credit which was erroneously allowed the same taxpayer for another taxable year or a related taxpayer for the same or another taxable year.

(b) The application of section 3801 (b) (2) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A taxpayer in his return for 1947 claimed and was allowed a deduction for destruction of timber by a forest fire. Subsequently it was discovered that the forest fire occurred in 1948 rather than in 1947. After the expiration of the period of limitations for the assessment of a deficiency for 1947, the taxpayer files a claim for refund for 1948 based upon a deduction for the fire loss in that year. The Commissioner in 1952 allows the claim for refund. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1947.

Example (2). The beneficiary of a testamentary trust in his return for 1946 claimed, and was allowed, a deduction for depreciation of the trust property. The Commissioner asserted a deficiency against the beneficiary for 1946 with respect to a different item and final decision of The Tax Court of the United States was rendered in 1948, so that the Commissioner was thereafter barred by section 272 (f) of the Internal Revenue Code from asserting a further deficiency against the beneficiary for 1946. The trustee thereafter filed a timely refund claim contending that, under the terms of the will, the trust, and not the beneficiary, was entitled to the allowance for depreciation. The court in 1952 sustains the refund claim. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the beneficiary's tax for 1946.

§ 39.3801 (b)-3 Erroneous exclusion of item of gross income with respect to which tax was paid. (a) Section 3801 (b) (3) applies if the determination requires the exclusion, from a taxpayer's gross income, of an item with respect to which tax was paid and which was erroneously excluded or omitted from the gross income of the same taxpayer for another taxable year or of a related taxpayer for the same or another taxable year.

(b) The application of section 3801 (b) (3) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A taxpayer received payments in 1949 under a contract for the performance of services and included the payments in his return for that year. A closing agreement was thereafter made with respect to the tax liability of the taxpayer for 1948. The taxpayer subsequently filed a claim for refund for the year 1949, asserting that he kept his books on the accrual basis and that, as the payments had accrued in 1948, they were properly taxable in that year. The claim for refund is allowed in 1952. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1948. If the taxpayer had not included the payments in any return and the Commissioner had asserted a deficiency for 1949 with respect to the payments, and the deficiency was not sustained by The Tax Court of the United States in its final decision in 1953, no adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1948. Although the determination requires the exclusion of the item from gross income, no tax had been paid with respect thereto. If the taxpayer, however, had paid the deficiency and thereafter successfully sued for refund in court, an adjustment is authorized.

Example (2). A father and son conducted a partnership business, each being entitled to one-half of the net profits. The father included the entire net income of the partnership in his return for 1945, and the son included no portion of this income in his return for that year. Shortly before the expiration of the period of limitations with respect to deficiency assessments and refund claims for both father and son for 1945, the father filed a claim for refund of that portion of his 1945 tax attributable to the half of the partnership income which should have been included in the son's return. The court sustains the claim for refund in 1952. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the son's tax for 1945.

§ 39.3801 (b)-4 Correlative deductions and inclusions specified in section 162 (b) and (c) and corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts. (a) Section 3801 (b) (4) applies if the determination relates to the additional deduction specified in section 162 (b) and (c) of the Internal Revenue Code, or the corresponding provisions of a prior revenue act, for amounts distributable to the beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees of an estate or trust, and such determination requires:

(1) The allowance to the estate or trust of such additional deduction when such amounts have been erroneously omitted or excluded from the income of the beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees;

(2) The inclusion of such amounts in the income of the beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees when such additional deduction has been erroneously disallowed to or omitted by the estate or trust;

(3) The disallowance to an estate or trust of such additional deduction when such amounts have been erroneously included in the income of the beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees; or

(4) The exclusion of such amounts from the income of the beneficiaries, heirs, or legatees when such additional deduction has been erroneously allowed to the estate or trust.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) (1) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. For the taxable year 1946, a trustee, directed by the trust instrument to accumulate the trust income, made no distribution to the beneficiary and returned the entire net income as taxable to the trust. Accordingly, the beneficiary did not include the trust income in his return for the year 1946. In 1948, a State court held invalid the clause directing accumulation. In 1950, the trustee, relying upon the court decision, files a claim for refund of the tax paid on behalf of the trust for the year 1946. The claim is sustained by the court in 1952 after the expiration of the period of limitations upon deficiency assessments against the beneficiary for the year 1946. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the beneficiary's tax for the year 1946.

(c) The application of paragraph (a) (2) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume the same facts as in the example in paragraph (b) of this section, except that, instead of the trustee's filing a refund claim, the Commissioner, relying upon the decision of the State court, asserts a deficiency against the beneficiary for 1946. The deficiency is sustained by final decision of The Tax Court of the United States in 1952, after the expiration of the period for filing claim for refund on behalf of the trust for 1946. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the trust for the year 1946.

(d) The application of paragraph (a) (3) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A trustee claimed in the return for 1946 a deduction for income distributed to the beneficiary. The income was included by the beneficiary in his return for 1946. In 1950, the Commissioner asserts a deficiency against the trust on the ground that the amount distributed to the beneficiary represented a charge against the corpus of the trust and did not constitute a distribution of income. The deficiency is sustained by final decision of the Tax Court in 1952, after the expiration of the period for filing claims for refund by the beneficiary for 1946. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the beneficiary's tax for the year 1946.

(e) The application of paragraph (a) (4) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Assume the same facts as in the example in paragraph (d) of this section, except that, instead of the Commissioner's asserting a deficiency, the beneficiary files a refund claim for 1946 on the same ground. The claim is sustained by the court in 1952 after the expiration of the period of limitations upon deficiency assessments against the trust for 1946. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the trust for the year 1946.

§ 39.3801 (b)-5 Determination of basis of property in case of erroneous treatment of transaction relating to acquisition thereof. (a) Section 3801 (b) (5) applies if the determination establishes the basis of property for income tax purposes and in respect of the transaction upon which such basis depends there was an erroneous inclusion in or omission from gross income or an erroneous recognition or nonrecognition of gain or loss with respect to (1) the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made, or (2) any person who acquired title to such property in such transaction and the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made mediately or immediately derived title from such person subsequent to such transaction. Section 3801 (b) (5) applies with respect to the person who acquired the property and any subsequent transferees or donees who have a substituted basis ascertained by reference to the basis in the hands of such person. No adjustment is authorized with respect to the transferor of the property in the transaction upon which the basis of the property depends, when the determination is with respect to the original transferee or a subsequent transferee of such original transferee.

(b) The application of section 3801 (b) (5) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1946 taxpayer A transferred property which had cost him $5,000 to the X Corporation in exchange for an original issue of shares of its stock having a fair market value of $10,000. In his return for 1946 taxpayer A treated the exchange as one in which gain or loss was not recognizable:

(i) In 1952 the X Corporation claims that gain should have been recognized on the exchange in 1946 and therefore the property it received had a $10,000 basis for depreciation. Its contention is confirmed by a closing agreement. No adjustment is authorized with respect to the tax of the X Corporation for 1946, as there was no "erroneous inclusion in or omission from the gross income of, or an erroneous recognition or nonrecognition of gain or loss to" the X Corporation with respect to the exchange in 1946. Moreover no adjustment is authorized with respect to taxpayer A, as he is not the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made, nor does the determination relate to the property which taxpayer A acquired in the exchange in 1946, but, rather, to the property which he transferred in such exchange.

(ii) In 1952 the X Corporation transfers the property to the Y Corporation in a tax-free exchange. In 1953 the Y Corporation sells the property and computes its profit on the basis of $10,000, which basis is sustained by The Tax Court of the United States. No adjustment is authorized with respect to the Y Corporation or with respect to taxpayer A, for the reason stated in (i).

(iii) In 1954 taxpayer A sells the stock which he had received in 1946 and claims that, as gain should have been recognized on the exchange in 1946 the basis for computing the profit on the sale is $10,000. His contention is confirmed in a closing agreement. An adjustment is authorized with respect to his tax for the year 1946, as the basis for computing gain on the sale depends upon the transaction in 1946 and in respect of that transaction there was an erroneous nonrecognition of gain to taxpayer A, "the taxpayer" with respect to whom the determination is made.

(iv) Taxpayer A does not sell the stock, but makes a gift of it to taxpayer B, who later sells the stock and claims the $10,000 basis, which contention is confirmed in a closing agreement. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the tax of taxpayer A for 1946, as the basis for computing gain on the sale by taxpayer B depends upon the transaction in 1946 and in respect of that transaction there was erroneous nonrecognition of gain to taxpayer A, the "person who acquired title to such property in such transaction and from whom * * * immediately" taxpayer B, with respect to whom the determination is made, "derived title subsequent to such transaction."

Example (2). In 1947, taxpayer A sold property acquired at a cost of $5,000 to taxpayer B for $10,000. In his return for 1947 taxpayer A failed to include the profit on such sale. In 1952 taxpayer B sells the property for $12,000 and in his return for 1952 reports a gain of $2,000 upon the sale, which is confirmed in a closing agreement. No adjustment is authorized with respect to the tax of taxpayer A for 1947, as taxpayer A is not the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made; nor does the determination relate to property which taxpayer A acquired in the transaction in 1947 but rather to property which he transferred in such transaction.

Example (3). In 1946 a taxpayer received as additional compensation shares of stock in a corporation but did not include any amount in his return for that year on account of the receipt of such stock. In 1952, after the expiration of the period of limitations on deficiency assessments for 1946, he sells the stock for $15,000 and reports $5,000 in his return for 1952 as profit on the sale. A deficiency is asserted by the Commissioner on the theory that the basis is zero and the recognized gain is $15,000. The Tax Court sustains the taxpayer's contention that the transaction was erroneously treated in 1946 in that the property then had a fair market value of $10,000. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1946.

Example (4). In 1943 a taxpayer received 100 shares of stock of the X Corporation having a fair market value of $5,000, in exchange for shares of stock in the Y Corporation which he had acquired at a cost of $12,000. In his return for 1943 the taxpayer treated the exchange as one in which gain or loss was not recognizable. The taxpayer sold 50 shares of the X Corporation stock in 1944 and in his return for that year treated such shares as having a $6,000 basis. In 1949 the taxpayer sells the remaining 50 shares of stock of the X Corporation for $7,500 and reports $1,500 gain in his return for 1949. After the expiration of the period of limitations on deficiency assessments and on refund claims for 1943 and 1944, the Commissioner asserts a deficiency for 1949 on the ground that the loss realized on the exchange in 1943 was erroneously treated as nonrecognizable, and that the basis for computing gain upon the sale in 1949 is $2,500, resulting in a gain of $5,000. The deficiency is sustained by the Tax Court in 1953. An adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1943 as to the entire $7,000 loss realized on the exchange. No adjustment is authorized with respect to the year 1944 as the basis for computing gain upon the sale of the 50 shares in 1949 does not depend upon the transaction in 1944.

§ 39.3801 (b)-6 Law applicable in determination of error. The question whether there was an erroneous inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition is determined under the provisions of the internal revenue laws applicable with respect to the year as to which the inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be, was made. The fact that the inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be, was in pursuance of an interpretation, either judicial or administrative, accorded such provisions of the internal revenue laws at the time of such action is not necessarily determinative of this question. For example, if a later judicial decision authoritatively alters such interpretation so that such action was contrary to such provisions of the internal revenue laws as later interpreted, the inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be, is erroneous within the meaning of section 3801.

§ 39.3801 (b)-7 Operation dependent upon maintenance of inconsistent position—(a) Adjustments resulting in additional assessments. (1) An adjustment which would result in an additional assessment is authorized only if (i) the taxpayer, with respect to whom the determination is made, has, in connection therewith, maintained a position which is inconsistent with the erroneous inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be, and (ii) such inconsistent position is adopted in the determination.

Example. A taxpayer in his return for 1947 claimed and was allowed a deduction for a loss arising from a casualty. After the taxpayer had filed his return for 1948 and after the period of limitations upon the assessment of a deficiency for 1947 had expired, it was discovered that the loss actually occurred in 1948. The taxpayer, therefore, filed a claim for refund for the year 1948 based upon the allowance of a deduction for the loss in that year, and the claim was allowed by the Commissioner in 1952. The taxpayer thus has maintained a position inconsistent with the allowance of the deduction for 1947 by filing a claim for refund for 1948 based upon the same deduction. As the determination—the allowance by the Commissioner of the claim for refund—adopts such inconsistent position, an adjustment is authorized for the year 1947.

(2) An adjustment which would result in an additional assessment is not authorized if the Commissioner, and not the taxpayer, has maintained such inconsistent position.

Example. In the example in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, assume that the taxpayer did not file a claim for refund for 1948 but the Commissioner issued a notice of deficiency for 1948 based upon other items. The taxpayer filed a petition with The Tax Court of the United States and the Commissioner in his answer voluntarily proposed the allowance of a deduction for the loss previously allowed for 1947. The Tax Court took the deduction into account in its redetermination in 1952 of the tax for the year 1948. In such case no adjustment would be authorized for the year 1947 as the Commissioner, and not the taxpayer, has maintained a position inconsistent with the allowance of a deduction for the loss in that year.

(b) Adjustments resulting in refund or credit. (1) An adjustment which would result in the allowance of a refund or credit is authorized only if (i) the Commissioner, in connection with a determination, has maintained a position which is inconsistent with the erroneous inclusion, exclusion, omission, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, as the case may be, and (ii) such inconsistent position is adopted in the determination.

Example. A taxpayer who keeps his books on the cash basis erroneously included in his return for 1946 an item of accrued interest. After the period of limitations on refunds for 1946 had expired, the Commissioner asserted a deficiency for the year 1947 on the ground that the item of interest was received in 1947, and, therefore, was properly includible in gross income for that year. The taxpayer appealed to the Tax Court which in 1952 sustained the deficiency. By asserting a deficiency for 1947 based upon the inclusion of the interest item in that year, the Commissioner has maintained a position inconsistent with the inclusion of the interest item in 1946. As the determination—the decision of the Tax Court sustaining the deficiency—adopted such inconsistent position, an adjustment is authorized for the year 1946.

(2) An adjustment which would result in the allowance of a refund or credit is not authorized if the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made, and not the Commissioner, has maintained such inconsistent position.

Example. In the example in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, assume that the Commissioner asserted a deficiency for 1947 based upon other items for that year, but in computing the net income upon which such deficiency was based did not include the item of interest. The taxpayer appealed to the Tax Court and in his petition asserted that the interest item should be included in gross income for 1947. The Tax Court in 1952 included the item of interest in its redetermination of the tax for the year 1947. In such case no adjustment would be authorized for 1946 as the taxpayer, and not the Commissioner, has maintained a position inconsistent with the erroneous inclusion of the item of interest in the gross income of the taxpayer for that year.

§ 39.3801 (b)-8 Existence of status of related taxpayer at time of the first maintenance of an inconsistent position. (a) No adjustment by way of a deficiency assessment shall be made with respect to a related taxpayer unless the relationship existed both in the taxable year with respect to which the error was made and at the time the taxpayer with respect to whom the determination is made first maintained, in the manner described in this section, the inconsistent position with respect to the taxable year to which the determination relates.

(b) If the inconsistent position is maintained in a return, claim for refund, or petition (or amended petition) to The Tax Court of the United States for the taxable year in respect of which the determination is made, the requisite relationship must exist on the date of filing such document. If the inconsistent position is maintained in more than one of such documents, the requisite date is the date of filing of the document in which it was first maintained. If the inconsistent position was not thus maintained then the relationship must exist on the date of the determination, as, for example, where at the instance of the taxpayer a deduction is allowed, the right to which was not asserted in a return, claim for refund, or petition to The Tax Court, and a determination is effected by means of a closing agreement.

§ 39.3801 (c) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; method of adjustment.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases. * * *

(c) Method of adjustment. The adjustment authorized in subsection (b) shall be made by assessing and collecting, or refunding or crediting, the amount thereof, to be ascertained as provided in subsection (d), in the same manner as if it were a deficiency determined by the Commissioner with respect to the taxpayer as to whom the error was made or an overpayment claimed by such taxpayer, as the case may be, for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made, and as if on the date of the determination specified in subsection (b) one year remained before the expiration of the periods of limitation upon assessment or filing claim for refund for such taxable year.

§ 39.3801 (c)-1 Method of adjustment. (a) If the amount of the adjustment ascertained pursuant to section 3801 (d) represents an increase in tax, it is to be treated as if it were a deficiency determined by the Commissioner with respect to the taxpayer as to whom the error was made and for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made. The amount of the adjustment is thus to be assessed and collected under the law and regulations applicable to the assessment and collection of deficiencies, subject, however, to the limitations imposed by section 3801 (e) Notice of deficiency, unless waived, must be issued with respect to such amount and the taxpayer may contest the deficiency before The Tax Court of the United States or, if he chooses, may pay the deficiency and later file claim for refund. If the amount of the adjustment ascertained pursuant to section 3801 (d) represents a decrease in tax, it is to be treated as if it were an overpayment claimed by the taxpayer with respect to whom the error was made for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made. Such amount may be recovered under the law and regulations applicable to overpayments of tax, subject, however, to the limitations imposed by section 3801 (e) The taxpayer must file a claim for refund thereof, unless the overpayment is refunded without such claim, and if the claim is denied or not acted upon by the Commissioner within the prescribed time, the taxpayer may then file suit for refund. The amount of the adjustment treated as if it were a deficiency or an overpayment, as the case may be, will bear interest and be subject to additions to the tax to the extent provided by the internal revenue laws applicable to deficiencies and overpayments for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made.

(b) For the purpose of the adjustment authorized by section 3801, the period of limitation upon the making of an assessment or upon refund or credit for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made, as the case may be, shall be considered as if, on the date of the determination, one year remained before the expiration of such period, regardless of whether or not such period had expired prior to the date of the determination. The Commissioner thus has one year from the date of the determination within which to mail a notice of deficiency in respect of the amount of the adjustment where such amount is treated as if it were a deficiency. The issuance of such notice of deficiency, in accordance with the law and regulations applicable to the assessment of deficiencies, will suspend the running of the 1-year period of limitations provided by section 3801 (c) In accordance with the applicable law and regulations governing the collection of deficiencies (see section 276 (c) of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts) the period of limitation for collection of the amount of the adjustment will commence to run from the date of assessment of such amount. Similarly the taxpayer has a period of one year from the date of the determination within which to file a claim for refund in respect of the amount of the adjustment where such adjustment is treated as if it were an overpayment. Where the amount of the adjustment is treated as if it were a deficiency and the taxpayer chooses to pay such deficiency and contest it by way of claim for refund, the period of limitation upon filing claim for refund will commence to run from the date of such payment (see section 322 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts)

§ 39.3801 (d) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; ascertainment of amount of adjustment.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases. * * *

(d) Ascertainment of amount of adjustment. In computing the amount of an adjustment under this section there shall first be ascertained the tax previously determined for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made. The amount of the tax previously determined shall be the excess of—

(1) The sum of (A) the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return (determined as provided in section 271 (b) (1) and (3)), if a return was made by the taxpayer and an amount was shown as the tax by the taxpayer thereon, plus (B) the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, over—

(2) The amount of rebates, as defined in section 271 (b) (2), made.

There shall then be ascertained the increase or decrease in the tax previously determined which results solely from the correct exclusion, inclusion, allowance, disallowance, recognition, or nonrecognition, of the item, inclusion, deduction, credit, gain or loss, which was the subject of the error. The amount so ascertained (together with any amounts wrongfully collected, as additions to the tax or interest, as a result of such error) shall be the amount of the adjustment under this section.

[Sec. 3801 (d) as amended by sec. 14 (b), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.3801 (d)-1 Ascertainment of amount of adjustment. (a) In computing the amount of the adjustment under section 3801 there must first be ascertained the amount of the tax previously determined for the taxpayer as to whom the error was made for the taxable year with respect to which the error was made. The tax previously determined for any taxable year may be the amount of tax shown on the taxpayer's return, but if any changes in that amount have been made they must be taken into account. In such cases, the tax previously determined will be ascertained as follows:

(1) For taxable years beginning before January 1, 1943, the tax previously determined will be the tax shown on the return, increased by any amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, and decreased by any amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax. If no amount was shown as the tax upon the return, or if no return was made, the tax previously determined will be the sum of the amounts previously assessed, or collected without assessment, as deficiencies, decreased by any amounts previously abated, credited, refunded, or otherwise repaid in respect of such tax.

(2) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1942, the tax previously determined will be the sum of the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return and the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as deficiencies, reduced by the amount of any rebates made. The amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return and the amount of any rebates shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of section 271 and the regulations thereunder.

(b) (1) The tax previously determined may consist of tax for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1931, imposed by chapter 1 and subchapters A, B, D, and E of chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code, by the corresponding provisions of prior Revenue Acts, or by any one or more of such provisions.

(2) After the tax previously determined has been ascertained, a recomputation must then be made to ascertain the increase or decrease in tax, if any, resulting from the correction of the error. The difference between the tax previously determined and the tax as recomputed after correction of the error will be the amount of the adjustment.

(c) With the exception of the items upon which the tax previously determined was based and the item or items with respect to which the error was made, no other item shall be considered in computing the amount of the adjustment. If the treatment of any item upon which the tax previously determined was based, or if the application of any provisions of the internal revenue laws with respect to such tax, depends upon the amount of income (e. g., charitable contributions, foreign tax credit, earned income credit) readjustment in these particulars will be necessary as part of the recomputation in conformity with the change in the amount of the income which results from the correct treatment of the item or items in respect of which the error was made.

(d) Any interest or additions to the tax collected as a result of the error shall be taken into account in determining the amount of the adjustment.

(e) The application of section 3801 (d) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) For the taxable year 1946 a married man with no dependents, who kept his books on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, filed a return (claiming two exemptions) disclosing adjusted gross income of $42,000, deductions amounting to $12,000, and a net income of $30,000. Included among other items in the gross income were salary in the amount of $15,000 and rents accrued but not yet paid in the amount of $5,000. During the taxable year he donated $10,000 to the American Red Cross and in his return claimed a deduction of $6,300 on account thereof, representing the maximum deduction allowable under the 15 percent limitation imposed by section 23 (o) of the Internal Revenue Code for the year 1946. In computing his net income he omitted interest income amounting to $6,000 and neglected to take a deduction for interest paid in the amount of $4,500. The return disclosed a tax liability of $11,970, which was assessed and paid. After the expiration of the period of limitations upon the assessment of a deficiency or the allowance of a refund for 1946 the Commissioner included the item of rental income amounting to $5,000 in the taxpayer's gross income for the year 1947 and asserted a deficiency for that year. As a result of a final decision of The Tax Court of the United States in 1952 sustaining the deficiency for 1947, an adjustment is authorized for the year 1946.

(2) The amount of the adjustment is computed as follows:

Tax previously determined for 1946	$11,970.00
Net income for 1946 upon which tax previously determined was based	30,000.00
Less: Rents erroneously included	5,000.00
Balance	25,000.00
Adjustment for contributions (add 15 percent of $5,000)	750.00
Net income as adjusted	25,750.00
Tax as recomputed	9,502.38
Tax previously determined	11,970.00
Difference	2,467.62
Amount of adjustment to be refunded or credited	2,467.62

(3) In accordance with the provisions of section 3801 (d), the recomputation to determine the amount of the adjustment does not take into consideration the item of $6,000 representing interest received, which was omitted from gross income, or the item of $4,500 representing interest paid, for which no deduction was allowed.

§ 39.3801 (e) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; adjustment unaffected by other items.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases. * * *

(e) Adjustment unaffected by other items, etc. The amount to be assessed and collected in the same manner as a deficiency, or to be refunded or credited in the same manner as an overpayment, under this section, shall not be diminished by any credit or set-off based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss other than the one which was the subject of the error. Such amount, if paid, shall not be recovered by a claim or suit for refund or suit for erroneous refund based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss other than the one which was the subject of the error.

§ 39.3801 (e)-1 Effect of other items on amount of adjustment. (a) The amount of the adjustment ascertained under section 3801 (d) shall not be diminished by any credit or set-off based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, or gain or loss with respect to the year as to which the error was made.

(b) The application of section 3801 (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In the example set forth in § 39.3801 (d)-1, if, after the amount of the adjustment has been ascertained, the taxpayer filed a refund claim for the amount thereof, the Commissioner could not diminish the amount of that claim by offsetting against it the amount of tax which should have been paid with respect to the $6,000 interest item omitted from gross income for the year 1946; nor could the court, if suit were brought on such claim for refund, offset against the amount of the adjustment the amount of tax which should have been paid with respect to such interest.

Example (2). Assume that a taxpayer included in his gross income for the year 1953 an item which should have been included in gross income for the year 1952. After expiration of the period of limitations upon the assessment of a deficiency or the allowance of a refund for 1952 the taxpayer filed a claim for refund for the year 1953 on the ground that such item was not properly includible in gross income for that year. The claim for refund was allowed by the Commissioner and as a result of such determination an adjustment was authorized under section 3801 with respect to the tax for 1952. If, in such case, the Commissioner issued a notice of deficiency for the amount of the adjustment and the taxpayer contested the deficiency before The Tax Court of the United States, the taxpayer could not in such proceeding claim an offset based upon his failure to take an allowable deduction for the year 1952; nor could the Tax Court in its decision offset against the amount of the adjustment any overpayment for the year 1952 resulting from the failure to take such deduction.

(c) If the Commissioner has refunded the amount of an adjustment under section 3801, the amount so refunded may not subsequently be recovered by the Commissioner in a suit for erroneous refund based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss (other than the one which was the subject of the error) with respect to the year as to which the error was made.

Example. In the example set forth in § 39.3801 (d)-1, if the Commissioner had refunded the amount of the adjustment, no part of the amount so refunded could subsequently be recovered by the Commissioner by a suit for erroneous refund based on the ground that there was no overpayment for 1946, as the taxpayer had failed to include in gross income the $6,000 item of interest received in that year.

(d) If the Commissioner has assessed and collected the amount of an adjustment, no part thereof may be recovered by the taxpayer in any suit for refund based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss (other than the one which was the subject of the error) with respect to the year as to which the error was made.

Example. In example (2) of paragraph (b) of this section, if the taxpayer had paid the amount of the adjustment, he could not subsequently recover any part of such payment in a suit for refund based upon his failure to take an allowable deduction for the year 1952.

(e) If the amount of the adjustment is considered as an overpayment, it may be credited, under the applicable law and regulations thereunder, against any income or excess-profits tax, or installment thereof, due from the taxpayer. Likewise, if the amount of the adjustment is considered as a deficiency, any overpayment by the taxpayer of income or excess-profits tax may be credited against the amount of such adjustment in accordance with the applicable law and regulations thereunder. See section 322 of the Internal Revenue Code and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts. Accordingly, it may be possible in one transaction between the Commissioner and the taxpayer to settle the taxpayer's tax liability for the year with respect to which the determination is made and to make the adjustment under section 3801 for the year with respect to which the error was made.

§ 39.3801 (f)–(g) Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases; no adjustment for years prior to 1932; not applicable to taxes imposed by chapter 9.

SEC. 3801. Mitigation of effect of limitation and other provisions in income tax cases. * * *

(f) No adjustment for years prior to 1932. No adjustment shall be made under this section in respect of any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1932.

(g) Taxes imposed by chapter 9. The provisions of this section shall not be construed to apply to any tax imposed by chapter 9.

[Sec. 3801 (g) as added by sec. 208 (c), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.3804 Statutory provisions; time for performing certain acts postponed by reason of war

SEC. 3804. Time for performing certain acts postponed by reason of war—(a) Individuals. The period of time after December 6, 1941, during which an individual is continuously outside the Americas (if such period is longer than ninety days), and the next ninety days thereafter, shall be disregarded in determining, under the internal revenue laws, in respect of any tax liability (including any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to the tax) of such individual—

(1) Whether any of the following acts was performed within the time prescribed therefor:

(A) Filing any return of income, estate, or gift tax (except income tax withheld at source an income tax imposed by Chapter 9 or any law superseded thereby);

(B) Payment of any income, estate, or gift tax (except income tax withheld at source and income tax imposed by Chapter 9 or any law superseded thereby) or any installment thereof or of any other liability to the United States in respect thereof;

(C) Filing a petition with the Board of Tax Appeals for redetermination of a deficiency, or for review of a decision rendered by the Board;

(D) Allowance of a credit or refund of any tax;

(E) Filing a claim for credit or refund of any tax;

(F) Bringing a suit upon any such claim for credit or refund;

(G) Assessment of any tax;

(H) Giving or making any notice or demand, for the payment of any tax, or with respect to any liability to the United States in respect of any tax;

(I) Collection, by the Commissioner or the collector, by distraint or otherwise, of the amount of any liability in respect of any tax;

(J) Bringing suit by the United States, or any officer on its behalf, in respect of any liability in respect of any tax; and

(K) Any other act required or permitted under the internal revenue laws specified in regulations prescribed under this section by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary;

(2) The amount of any credit or refund (including interest).

(b) Other taxpayers and other circumstances. In any case to which subsection (a) does not apply in which it is determined by the Commissioner, under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, that—

(1) By reason of an individual being outside the Americas, or

(2) By reason of any locality (within or without the Americas) being an area of enemy action or being an area under the control of the enemy, as determined by the Commissioner, or

(3) By reason of an individual in the military or naval forces of the United States being outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia, it is impossible or impracticable to perform any one or more of the acts specified in subsection (a), then in determining, under the internal-revenue laws whether such act was performed within the time prescribed therefor, in respect of any tax liability (including any interest, penalty, additional amount, or addition to tax) affected by the failure to perform such act within such time, and in determining the amount of any credit or refund (including interest) affected by such failure, there shall be disregarded such period after December 6, 1941, as may be prescribed by such regulations.

(c) Limitation on time to be disregarded. The period of time disregarded under this section shall not extend beyond the date specified in clause (1) or clause (2) of this subsection, whichever is the earlier:

(1) December 31, 1947, or such date later than December 31, 1947, as the Commissioner may fix in any case in which he makes a determination under subsection (b) if such determination is made after the date this subsection as amended takes effect and is based on the existence prior to January 1, 1948, of one or more of the circumstances specified in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (b); or

(2) In the case of an individual with respect to whom a period of time is disregarded under this section, the fifteenth day of the third month following the month in which an executor, administrator, or a conservator of the estate of such individual qualifies.

(d) Exceptions—(1) Tax in jeopardy; bankruptcy and receiverships; and transferred assets. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) or (b), any action or proceeding authorized by section 146 (regardless of the taxable year for which the tax arose), 273, 274, 311, 872, 900, 1013, 1015, 1025, or 3660, as well as any other action or proceeding authorized by law in connection therewith, may be taken, begun, or prosecuted. In any other case in which the Commissioner determines that collection of the amount of any assessment would be jeopardized by delay, the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) shall not operate to stay collection of such amount by distraint or otherwise as authorized by law. There shall be excluded from any amount assessed or collected pursuant to this paragraph the amount of interest, penalty, additional amount, and addition to the tax, if any, in respect of the period disregarded under subsection (a) or (b). In any case to which this paragraph relates, if the Commissioner or collector is required to give any notice to or make any demand upon any person, such requirement shall be deemed to be satisfied if the notice or demand is prepared and signed, in any case in which the address of such person last known to the Commissioner or collector is in an area for which United States post offices under instructions of the Postmaster General are not, by reason of the war, accepting mail for delivery at the time the notice or demand is signed. In such case the notice or demand shall be deemed to have been given or made upon the date it is signed.

(2) Action taken before ascertainment of right to benefits. The assessment or collection of any internal revenue tax or of any liability to the United States in respect of any internal revenue tax, or any action or proceeding by or on behalf of the United States in connection therewith, may be made, taken, begun, or prosecuted in accordance with law, without regard to the provisions of subsection (a) or (b), unless prior to such assessment, collection, action, or proceeding it is ascertained that the person concerned is entitled to the benefits of subsection (a) or (b).

(3) Expiration of period of limitations prior to enactment of this section. This section shall not operate to extend the time for performing any act specified in subsection (a) (1) (G), (H), (I), or (J) if such time under the law in force prior to the date of enactment of this section expired prior to such date.

(e) Definitions. For purposes of this section—

(1) Americas. The term "Americas" means North, Central, and South America (including the West Indies but not Greenland), and the Hawaiian Islands.

(2) When individual ceases to be outside Americas or within an area of enemy action. For the purpose of determining whether any act specified in subsection (a) (1) (G), (H), (I), or (J) was performed within the time prescribed therefor, if any period of time is disregarded under this section by reason of any individual being outside the Americas or within an area of enemy action or control, such individual shall not, if he returns to the Americas or leaves such area after the date of enactment of this section, be deemed to have returned to the Americas or ceased to be within such area before the date upon which the Commissioner receives from such individual a notice thereof in such form as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall by regulations prescribe. A similar rule shall be applied in the case of a member of the military or naval forces of the United States with respect to whom a period of time is disregarded under this section by reason of being outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia.

(3) When executor, administrator, or conservator qualifies. For the purpose of determining whether any act specified in subsection (a) (1) (G), (H), (I), or (J) was performed within the time prescribed therefor, the month in which an executor, administrator, or conservator qualifies, if he qualifies after the date of enactment of this section, shall be deemed to be the month in which the Commissioner receives from him a notice thereof in such form as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall by regulations prescribe.

(f) Additional time to be disregarded. In the case of an individual serving in the Armed Forces of the United States, or serving in support of such Armed Forces, in an area designated by the President of the United States by Executive order as a "combat zone" for the purposes of section 22 (b) (13), at any time during the period designated by the President by Executive order as the period of combatant activities in such zone for the purposes of such section, or hospitalized outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia as a result of injury received while serving in such an area during such time, the period of time disregarded under this section, notwithstanding the limitations of subsections (a) and (c), shall include the period of service in such area, plus the period of continuous hospitalization outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia attributable to such injury, and the next one hundred and eighty days thereafter.

§ 39.3805 Statutory provisions; income tax due dates postponed in case of China Trade Act corporations.

SEC. 3805. Income tax due dates postponed in case of China Trade Act corporations. In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1948, and ending before October 1, 1953, no Federal income tax return of, or payment of any Federal income tax by, any corporation organized under the China Trade Act of 1922 (42 Stat. 849, U. S. C., Title 15, chapter 4), as amended, shall become due until December 31, 1953, but only with respect to any such corporation and any such taxable year which the Secretary may determine reasonable under the circumstances in China pursuant to such regulations as he may prescribe. Such due date shall be subject to the power of the Secretary to extend the time for filing such return or paying such tax, as in other cases.

[Sec. 3805 as added by sec. 507 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 14, Pub. Law 384 (80th Cong.); sec. 614, Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.3805-1 China Trade Act corporations. (a) with respect to a taxable year ending before October 1, 1953, the Federal income tax return of, or the payment of Federal income tax by, a corporation organized under the China Trade Act of 1922 (15 U. S. C., c. 4) shall not become due until December 31, 1953, if, in the case of any such taxable year of any such corporation, the application of such posponed due date is determined by the Secretary under regulations to be reasonable in view of the circumstances in China.

(b) The due date thus prescribed is expressly subject to the power of the Commissioner to extend, as in other cases, the time for filing the income tax return or paying the income tax. See sections 53 (a) (2) and 56 (c) (1) and the regulations thereunder. See also section 3804 and the regulations thereunder.

(c) The postponement of the due date to December 31, 1953, permitted by section 3805 shall apply with respect to—

(1) A taxable year ending before October 1, 1953, of any corporation organized under the China Trade Act of 1922 if during such taxable year conditions in China have been generally so unsettled as to militate against the normal commercial operations and corporate activities of such corporation, except—

(i) In the case of any such taxable year of any such corporation in respect to which the situation is such that, despite such unsettled conditions, the books of account and business records are available so as to permit the filing of a proper return and the corporation has otherwise been in a position to carry on its commercial operations and corporate activities and to make a proper distribution of its earnings or profits, if any, so as to permit the certification required by section 262 (b), or

(ii) In the case of any such taxable year of any such corporation during which all the commercial operations and corporate activities of such corporation have been carried on in Hong Kong, Macao, or Taiwan; and

(2) Any such taxable year of any such corporation excepted under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph in respect of which the corporation satisfies the Commissioner that special circumstances exist, related to the unsettled conditions in China, which warrant such postponement.

§ 39.3806 Statutory provisions; mitigation of effect of renegotiation of war contracts or disallowance of reimbursement.

SEC. 3806. Mitigation of effect of renegotiation of war contracts or disallowance of reimbursement—(a) Reduction for prior taxable year—(1) Excessive profits eliminated for prior taxable year. In the case of a contract with the United States or any agency thereof, or any subcontract thereunder, which is made by the taxpayer, if a renegotiation is made in respect of such contract or subcontract and an amount of excessive profits received or accrued under such contract or subcontract for a taxable year (hereinafter referred to as "prior taxable year") is eliminated and, in a taxable year ending after December 31, 1941, the taxpayer is required to pay or repay to the United States or any agency thereof the amount of excessive profits eliminated or the amount of excessive profits eliminated is applied as an offset against other amounts due the taxpayer, the part of the contract or subcontract price which was received or was accrued for the prior taxable year shall be reduced by the amount of excessive profits eliminated. For the purposes of this section—

(A) The term "renegotiation" includes any transaction which is a renegotiation within the meaning of the Federal renegotiation act applicable to such transaction, any modification of one or more contracts with the United States or any agency thereof, and any agreement with the United States or any agency thereof in respect of one or more such contracts or subcontracts thereunder.

(B) The term "excessive profits" includes any amount which constitutes excessive profits within the meaning assigned to such term by the applicable Federal renegotiation act, any part of the contract price of a contract with the United States or any agency thereof, any part of the subcontract price of a subcontract under such a contract, and any profits derived from one or more such contracts or subcontracts.

(C) The term "subcontract" includes any purchase order or agreement which is a subcontract within the meaning assigned to such term by the applicable Federal renegotiation act.

(D) The term "Federal renegotiation act" includes section 403 of the Sixth Supplemental National Defense Appropriation Act (Public 528, 77th Cong., 2d Sess.), as amended or supplemented, the Renegotiation Act of 1948, as amended or supplemented, and the Renegotiation Act of 1951, as amended or supplemented.

(2) Reduction of reimbursement for prior taxable year. In the case of a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract between the United States or any agency thereof and the taxpayer, if an item for which the taxpayer has been reimbursed is disallowed as an item of cost chargeable to such contract and, in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, the taxpayer is required to repay the United States or any agency thereof the amount disallowed or the amount disallowed is applied as an offset against other amounts due the taxpayer, the amount of the reimbursement of the taxpayer under the contract for the taxable year in which the reimbursement for such item was received or was accrued (hereinafter referred to as "prior taxable year") shall be reduced by the amount disallowed.

(3) Deduction disallowed. The amount of the payment, repayment, or offset described in paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) shall not constitute a deduction for the year in which paid or incurred.

(4) Exception. The foregoing provisions of this subsection shall not apply in respect of any contract if the taxpayer shows to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that a different method of accounting for the amount of the payment, repayment, or disallowance clearly reflects income, and in such case the payment, repayment, or disallowance shall be accounted for with respect to the taxable year provided for under such method, which for the purposes of subsections (b) and (c) shall be considered a prior taxable year.

(b) Credit against repayment on account of renegotiation or allowance—(1) General rule. There shall be credited against the amount of excessive profits eliminated the amount by which the tax for the prior taxable year under Chapter 1, Chapter 2A, Chapter 2B, Chapter 2D, and Chapter 2E, is decreased by reason of the application of paragraph (1) of subsection (a); and there shall be credited against the amount disallowed the amount by which the tax for the prior taxable year under Chapter 1, Chapter 2A, Chapter 2B, Chapter 2D, and Chapter 2E, is decreased by reason of the application of paragraph (2) of subsection (a).

(2) Special rules as to individuals for 1942 and 1943. * * * [Not applicable]

(3) Credit for barred year. If at the time of the payment, repayment, or offset described in paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (a), refund or credit of tax under Chapter 1, Chapter 2A, Chapter 2B, Chapter 2D, or Chapter 2E, for the prior taxable year, is prevented (except for the provisions of section 3801) by any provision of the internal-revenue laws other than section 3761, or by rule of law, the amount by which the tax for such year under such chapters is decreased by the application of paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (a) shall be computed under this paragraph. There shall first be ascertained the tax previously determined for the prior taxable year. The amount of the tax previously determined shall be the excess of—

(1) The sum of (A) the amount shown as the tax by the taxpayer upon his return (determined as provided in section 271 (b) (1) and (3)), if a return was made by the taxpayer and an amount was shown as the tax by the taxpayer thereon, plus (B) the amounts previously assessed (or collected without assessment) as a deficiency, over—

(2) The amount of rebates, as defined in section 271 (b) (2), made.

There shall then be ascertained the decrease in tax previously determined which results solely from the application of paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of the prior taxable year. The amount so ascertained, together with any amounts collected as additions to the tax or interest, as a result of paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (a) not having been applied to the prior taxable year shall be the amount by which such tax is decreased.

(4) Interest. In determining the amount of credit under this subsection no interest shall be allowed with respect to the amount ascertained under paragraph (1) or paragraph (2); except that if interest is charged by the United States or the agency thereof on account of the disallowance for any period before the date of the payment, repayment, or offset, the credit shall be increased by an amount equal to interest on the amount ascertained under either such paragraph at the same rate and for the period (prior to the date of the payment, repayment, or offset) as interest is so charged.

(c) Credit in lieu of other credit or refund. If a credit is allowed under subsection (b) with respect to a prior taxable year no other credit or refund under the internal-revenue laws founded on the application of subsection (a) shall be made on account of the amount allowed with respect to such taxable year. If the amount allowable as a credit under subsection (b) exceeds the amount allowed under such subsection, the excess shall, for the purposes of the internal-revenue laws relating to credit or refund of tax, be treated as an overpayment for the prior taxable year which was made at the time the payment, repayment, or offset was made.

§ 39.3809 Statutory provisions; verification of returns; penalties of perjury.

SEC. 3809. Verification of returns; penalties of perjury—(a) Penalties. Any person who willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains or is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and which he does not believe to be true and correct as to every material matter, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

(b) Signature presumed correct. The fact that an individual's name is signed to a return, statement, or other document filed shall be prima facie evidence for all purposes that the return, statement, or other document was actually signed by him.

(c) Verification in lieu of oath. The Commissioner, under regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary, may require that any return, statement, or other document required to be filed under any provision of the internal revenue laws shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and such declaration shall be in lieu of any oath otherwise required.

[Sec. 3809 as added by sec. 4 (a), Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.3809-1 Verification by declaration in lieu of oath. If the form officially prescribed for any internal revenue return, statement, or other document contains therein provisions for verification by a written declaration that such return, statement, or other document is made under penalties of perjury, such return, statement, or other document shall be verified by the execution of such declaration, and such declaration so executed shall be in lieu of any oath otherwise required for verification by law or by regulations (including Treasury decisions) prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.3810 Statutory provisions; effective date of self-employment tax in Puerto Rico.

SEC. 3810. Effective date in case of Puerto Rico. If the Governor of Puerto Rico certifies to the President of the United States that the legislature of Puerto Rico has, by concurrent resolution, resolved that it desires the extension to Puerto Rico of the provisions of Title II of the Social Security Act, the effective date referred to in sections 1426 (e), 481 (a) (7), and 481 (b) shall be January 1 of the first calendar year which begins more than ninety days after the date on which the President receives such certification.

[Sec. 3810 as added by sec. 208 (b), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.3810-1 Effective date of self-employment tax in Puerto Rico. Since the Governor of Puerto Rico has certified to the President of the United States that the Legislature of Puerto Rico has, by concurrent resolution, resolved that it desires the extension to Puerto Rico of the provisions of Title II of the Social Security Act, the certificate having been received by the President on September 28, 1950, the effective date specified in section 3810 is January 1, 1951. See § 39.481-1 (c) (7)

§ 39.3811-3812 Statutory provisions; collection of taxes in Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands; mitigation of effect of statute of limitations and other provisions in case of related taxes under different chapters.

SEC. 3811. Collection of taxes in Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands—(a) Puerto Rico. Notwithstanding any other provision of law respecting taxation in Puerto Rico, all taxes imposed by chapter 1, and by subchapters A and D of chapter 9, shall be collected under the direction of the Secretary and shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as internal revenue collections. All provisions of the laws of the United States applicable to the administration, collection, and enforcement of any tax imposed upon the incomes of individuals, estates, and trusts by chapter 1 (including the provisions relating to The Tax Court of the United States), and of any tax imposed by subchapter A or by subchapter D of chapter 9, shall, in respect to such tax, extend to and be applicable in Puerto Rico in the same manner and to the same extent as if Puerto Rico were a State, and as if the term "United States" when used in a geographical sense included Puerto Rico.

(b) Virgin Islands. Notwithstanding any other provision of law respecting taxation in the Virgin Islands, all taxes imposed by subchapter E of chapter 1, and by subchapter A of chapter 9, shall be collected under the direction of the Secretary and shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States as internal revenue collections. All provisions of the laws of the United States applicable to the administration, collection, and enforcement of the tax imposed by subchapter E of chapter 1 (including the provisions relating to The Tax Court of the United States), and of any tax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 9, shall, in respect to such tax, extend to and be applicable in the Virgin Islands in the same manner and to the same extent as if the Virgin Islands were a State, and as if the term "United States" when used in a geographical sense included the Virgin Islands.

(c) Definition. As used in this section, the term "tax" includes any penalty with respect to the tax, any addition to the tax, and any additional amount with respect to the tax, provided for by any law of the United States.

[Sec. 3811 as added by sec. 208 (b), Social Security Act Amendments 1950; as amended by sec. 221 (i), Rev. Act 1950]

SEC. 3812. Mitigation of effect of statute of limitations and other provisions in case of related taxes under different chapters—(a) Self-employment tax and tax on wages. In the case of the tax imposed by subchapter E of chapter 1 (relating to tax on self-employment income) and the tax imposed by section 1400 of subchapter A of chapter 9 (relating to tax on employees under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act)—

(1) (i) If an amount is erroneously treated as self-employment income, or

(ii) If an amount is erroneously treated as wages, and

(2) If the correction of the error would require an assessment of one such tax and the refund or credit of the other tax, and

(3) If at any time the correction of the error is authorized as to one such tax but is prevented as to the other tax by any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises), then, if the correction authorized is made, the amount of the assessment, or the amount of the credit or refund, as the case may be, authorized as to the one tax shall be reduced by the amount of the credit or refund, or the amount of the assessment, as the case may be, which would be required with respect to such other tax for the correction of the error if such credit or refund, or such assessment, of such other tax were not prevented by any law or rule of law (other than section 3761, relating to compromises).

(b) Definitions. For the purposes of subsection (a) of this section, the terms "self-employment income" and "wages" shall have the same meaning as when used in section 481 (b).

[Sec. 3812 as added by sec. 208 (b), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.3812-1 Application of section. (a) Section 3812 may be applied in the correction of a certain type of error involving both the tax on self-employment income and the employee tax under section 1400 if the correction of the error as to one tax is, on the date the correction is authorized, prevented in whole or in part by the operation of any law or rule of law other than section 3761, relating to compromises. Examples of such law are sections 275, 311 (b) and (c) 332 (b) and (d), 1117 (e), 1635, 1636, 3746, and 3772; sections 272 (f) and 322 (c), section 3760; and sections 3770 (a) (2) 3774, and 3775.

(b) If the liability for either tax with respect to which the error was made has been compromised under section 3761, the provisions of section 3812 limiting the correction with respect to the other tax do not apply.

(c) Section 3812 is not applicable if, on the date of the authorization, correction of the effect of the error is permissible as to both taxes without recourse to such section.

(d) If, because an amount of wages (as defined in section 1426 (a)) is erroneously treated as self-employment income (as defined in section 481 (b)), or an amount of self-employment income is erroneously treated as wages, it is necessary in correcting the error to assess the correct tax and give a credit or refund for the amount of the tax erroneously paid, and either, but not both, of such adjustments is prevented by any law or rule of law (other than section 3761) the amount of the assessment or of the credit or refund authorized shall reflect the adjustment which would be made in respect of the other tax (either the tax on self-employment income under section 480 or the employee tax under section 1400) but for the operation of such law or rule of law. For example, assume that during 1952 A paid $10 as tax on an amount erroneously treated as "wages" when such amount was actually self-employment income, and that credit or refund of the $10 is not barred. A should have paid a self-employment tax of $15 on the amount. If the assessment of the correct tax, that is, $15, is barred by the statute of limitations, no credit or refund of the $10 shall be made without offsetting against such $10 the $15, assessment of which is barred. Thus, no credit or refund in respect of the $10 can be made.

(e) As another example, assume that during 1952 a taxpayer reports wages of $3,600 and net earnings from self-employment of $900. By reason of the limitations of section 481 (b) he shows no self-employment income. Assume further that by reason of a final decision by The Tax Court of the United States, further adjustments to his income tax liability are barred. The question of the amount of his wages, as defined in section 1426, was not in issue in the Tax Court litigation, but it is subsequently determined (within the period of limitations applicable under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act) that $700 of the $3,600 reported as wages were not for employment as defined in section 1426 (b) and he is entitled to the allowance of a refund of the $10.50 tax paid on such remuneration under section 1400. The reduction of his wages from $3,600 to $2,900 would result in the determination of $700 self-employment income, the tax on which is $15.75 for the year. The overpayment of $10.50 would be offset under section 3812 by the barred deficiency of $15.75, thus eliminating the refund otherwise allowable. If the facts were changed so that the taxpayer erroneously paid tax on self-employment income of $700, having been taxed on only $2,900 as wages, and within the period of limitations applicable under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, it is determined that his wages were $3,600, the tax of $10.50 under section 1400, otherwise collectible, would be eliminated by offsetting under section 3812 the barred overpayment of $15.75. The balance of the barred overpayment, $5.25, cannot be credited or refunded.

(b) Another illustration of the operation of this section is the case of a taxpayer who, for 1952, is erroneously taxed on $2,500 as wages, the tax on which is $37.50, and who reports no self-employment income. After the statute of limitations has run on the refund of the tax under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, it is determined that the amount treated as wages should have been reported as net earnings from self-employment. The taxpayer's self-employment income would then be $2,500 and the tax thereon would be $56.25. Assume that the period of limitations under chapter 1 has not expired, and that a notice of deficiency may properly be issued. Under section 3812, the amount of the deficiency of $56.25 must be reduced by the barred overpayment of $37.50.

§ 39.3812-2 Law applicable in determination of error The question of whether there was an erroneous treatment of self-employment income or of wages is determined under the provisions of law and regulations applicable with respect to the year or other taxable period as to which the error was made. The fact that the error was in pursuance of an interpretation, either judicial or administrative, accorded such provisions of law and regulations at the time of such action is not necessarily determinative of this question. For example, if a later judicial decision authoritatively alters such interpretation so that such action was contrary to such provisions of the law and regulations as later interpreted, the error is within the meaning of section 3812.

§ 39.3813 Statutory provisions; requirements for exemption of certain organizations under section 101 (6) and for deductibility of contributions made to such organizations.

SEC. 3813. Requirements for exemption of certain organizations under section 101 (6) and for deductibility of contributions made to such organizations—(a) Organizations to which section applies. This section shall apply to any organization described in section 101 (6) except—

(1) A religious organization (other than a trust);

(2) An educational organization which normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly enrolled body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on;

(3) An organization which normally receives a substantial part of its support (exclusive of income received in the exercise or performance by such organization of its charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for its exemption under section 101 (6)) from the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof or from direct or indirect contributions from the general public;

(4) An organization which is operated, supervised, controlled, or principally supported by a religious organization (other than a trust) which is itself not subject to the provisions of this section; and

(5) An organization the principal purposes or functions of which are the providing of medical or hospital care or medical education or medical research.

(b) Prohibited transactions. For the purposes of this section, the term "prohibited transaction" means any transaction in which an organization subject to the provisions of this section—

(1) Lends any part of its income or corpus, without the receipt of adequate security and a reasonable rate of interest, to;

(2) Pays any compensation, in excess of a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered, to;

(3) Makes any part of its services available on a preferential basis to;

(4) Makes any substantial purchase of securities or any other property, for more than adequate consideration in money or money's worth, from;

(5) Sells any substantial part of its securities or other property, for less than an adequate consideration in money or money's worth, to; or

(6) Engages in any other transaction which results in a substantial diversion of its income or corpus to;

the creator of such organization (if a trust); a person who has made a substantial contribution to such organization; a member of the family (as defined in section 24 (b) (2) (D)) of an individual who is the creator of such trust or who has made a substantial contribution to such organization; or a corporation controlled by such creator or person through the ownership, directly or indirectly, of 50 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 per centum or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

(c) Denial of exemption to organizations engaged in prohibited transactions—(1) General rule. No organization subject to the provisions of this section which has engaged in a prohibited transaction after July 1, 1950, shall be exempt from taxation under section 101 (6).

(2) Taxable years affected. An organization shall be denied exemption from taxation under section 101 (6) by reason of paragraph (1) only for taxable years subsequent to the taxable year during which it is notified by the Secretary that it has engaged in a prohibited transaction, unless such organization entered into such prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting corpus or income of the organization from its exempt purposes, and such transaction involved a substantial part of the corpus or income of such organization.

(d) Future status of organization denied exemption. Any organization denied exemption under section 101 (6) by reason of the provisions of subsection (c), with respect to any taxable year following the taxable year in which notice of denial of exemption was received, may, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, file claim for exemption, and if the Secretary, pursuant to such regulations, is satisfied that such organization will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction, such organization shall be exempt with respect to taxable years subsequent to the year in which such claim is filed.

(e) Disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions. No gift or bequest for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes (including the encouragement of art and the prevention of cruelty to children or animals), otherwise allowable as a deduction under section 23 (o) (2), 23 (q) (2), 162 (a), 505 (a) (2), * * * shall be allowed as a deduction if made to an organization which, in the taxable year of the organization in which the gift or bequest is made, is not exempt under section 101 (6) by reason of the provisions of this section. With respect to any taxable year of the organization for which the organization is not exempt pursuant to the provisions of subsection (c) by reason of having engaged in a prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting the corpus or income of such organization from its exempt purposes and such transaction involved a substantial part of such corpus or income, and which taxable year is the same, or prior to the, taxable year of the organization in which such transaction occurred, such deduction shall be disallowed the donor only if such donor or (if such donor is an individual) any member of his family (as defined in section 24 (b) (2) (D)) was a party to such prohibited transaction.

(f) Definition. For the purposes of this section, the term "gift or bequest" means any gift, contribution, bequest, devise, legacy, or transfer.

[Sec. 3813 as added by sec. 331, Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.3813-1 Denial of exemption to organizations engaged in prohibited transactions. (a) The prohibited transactions enumerated in section 3813 (b) are in addition to and not in limitation of the restrictions contained in section 101 (6) Even though an organization has not engaged in any of the prohibited transactions referred to in section 3813 (b) it still may not qualify for tax exemption in view of the general provisions of section 101 (6) Thus, if a trustee or other fiduciary of the organization (whether or not he is also a creator of such organization) enters into a transaction with the organization, such transaction will be closely scrutinized in the light of the fiduciary principle requiring undivided loyalty to ascertain whether the organization is in fact being operated for the stated exempt purposes.

(b) An organization described in section 101 (6) other than an organization excepted by section 3813 (a), which has engaged in any prohibited transaction (as described in section 3813 (b)) after July 1, 1950, shall not be exempt from taxation under section 101 (6) for any taxable year subsequent to the taxable year in which there is mailed to it a notice in writing by the Commissioner that it has engaged in such prohibited transaction. Such notification by the Commissioner shall be by registered mail to the last known address of the organization. However, notwithstanding the requirement of notification by the Commissioner, exemption shall be denied with respect to any taxable year if such organization during or prior to such taxable year commenced the prohibited transaction with the purpose of diverting income or corpus from its exempt purposes and such transaction involved a substantial part of the income or corpus of such organization. For the purpose of this section, the term "taxable year" means the established annual accounting period of the organization; or, if the organization has no such established annual accounting period, the "taxable year" of the organization means the calendar year.

(c) The application of section 3813 (b) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A creates a foundation in 1949 ostensibly for educational purposes. B, as trustee, accumulates the foundation's income from 1952 until 1955 and then uses a substantial part of this accumulated income to send A's children to college. The foundation would lose its exemption for the taxable years 1952 through 1955 and for subsequent taxable years until it regains its exempt status.

Example (2). If under the facts in example (1) such private benefit was the purpose of the foundation from its inception, such foundation is not exempt by reason of the general provisions of section 101 (6), without regard to the provisions of section 3813, for all years since its inception, that is, for the taxable years 1949 through 1955 and subsequent taxable years, since under section 101 (6) the organization must be organized and operated exclusively for exempt purposes. See § 39.101 (6)-1. See also § 39.3814-1 for loss of exemption in the case of certain organizations accumulating income.

§ 39.3813-2 Future status of organization denied exemption. (a) Any organization denied exemption under section 101 (6) by reason of the provisions of section 3813 (c) may file, in any taxable year following the taxable year in which notice of denial of exemption was issued, a claim for exemption with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization. Form 1023, the exemption application, a copy of which may be obtained from any district director of internal revenue, shall be used for this purpose. The claim must contain or have attached to it, in addition to the information generally required of an organization claiming exemption under section 101 (6) an affidavit, by a principal officer of such organization authorized to make such affidavit, that the organization will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction. See § 39.101-1 for proof of exemption requirements in general.

(b) If the Commissioner is satisfied that such organization will not knowingly again engage in a prohibited transaction and that the organization also satisfies all other requirements under section 101 (6) he shall so notify the organization in writing. In such case the organization will be exempt (subject to the provisions of sections 101 (6) 3813, and 3814) with respect to the taxable years subsequent to the taxable year in which such claim is filed. Section 3813 contemplates that an organization denied exemption because of the terms of such section will be subject to taxation for at least one full taxable year. For the purpose of this section, the term "taxable year" means the established annual accounting period of the organization; or, if the organization has no such established annual accounting period, the "taxable year" of the organization means the calendar year.

§ 39.3813-3 Disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions. (a) No gift or contribution which would otherwise be allowable as a charitable or other deduction under section 23 (o) (2) 23 (q) (2) 162 (a) or 505 (a) (2) shall be allowed as a deduction if made to an organization which at the time the gift or contribution is made is not exempt under section 101 (6) by reason of the provisions of section 3813.

(b) If an organization, which receives a gift or contribution, is not exempt under section 101 (6) because it engaged in a prohibited transaction involving a substantial part of its income or corpus with the purpose of diverting its income or corpus from its exempt purposes, and if the taxable year of the organization during which such gift or contribution is made is the same as, or is prior to, the taxable year of the organization in which such transaction occurred, then a deduction by the donor with respect to the gift or contribution shall not be disallowed under paragraph (a) of this section unless the donor (or any member of his family if the donor is an individual) is a party to such prohibited transaction. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the members of an individual donor's family include only his brothers and sisters, whether by whole or half blood, spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants.

(c) The application of section 3813 (e) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1952, corporation A, which files its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, creates a foundation purportedly for charitable purposes and deducts from its gross income for that year the amount of the gift to the foundation. Corporation A makes additional gifts to this foundation in 1953, 1954, and 1955, and takes charitable deductions for such years. B, an individual, also contributes to the foundation in 1953, 1954, and 1955, and takes charitable deductions for such years. In 1953, the foundation commences purposely to divert its corpus to the benefit of corporation A, and a substantial amount of such corpus is so diverted by the close of the taxable year 1954. For 1953 and subsequent taxable years, the exemption allowed the foundation under section 101 (6) is denied by reason of the provisions of section 3813 (c). Both corporation A and individual B would be disallowed any deduction for the contributions made during 1955 to the foundation. Moreover, the charitable deductions taken by corporation A for contributions to the foundation in the years 1953 and 1954 would also be disallowed since corporation A was a party to the prohibited transaction. If the facts and surrounding circumstances indicate that the contribution in 1952 by corporation A was for the purpose of the prohibited transaction, then the charitable deduction for the year 1952 shall also be disallowed with respect to corporation A, since the prohibited transaction would then have commenced with the making of such contribution and the exemption allowed the foundation under section 101 (6) would then be denied for 1952 by reason of provisions of section 3813 (e).

§ 39.3814 Statutory provisions; denial of exemption under section 101 (6) in the case of certain organizations accumulating income.

SEC. 3814. Denial of exemption under section 101 (6) in the case of certain organizations accumulating income. In the case of any organization described in section 101 (6) to which section 3813 is applicable, if the amounts accumulated out of income during the taxable year or any prior taxable year and not actually paid out by the end of the taxable year—

(1) Are unreasonable in amount or duration in order to carry out the charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for such organization's exemption under section 101 (6); or

(2) Are used to a substantial degree for purposes or functions other than those constituting the basis for such organization's exemption under section 101 (6); or

(3) Are invested in such a manner as to jeopardize the carrying out of the charitable, educational, or other purpose or function constituting the basis for such organization's exemption under section 101 (6), exemption under section 101 (6) shall be denied for the taxable year.

[Sec. 3814 as added by sec. 331, Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.3814-1 Denial of exemption under section 101 (6) in the case of certain organizations accumulating income. (a) The restrictions enumerated in section 3814 are in addition to and not in limitation of the restrictions contained in section 101 (6) Even though an organization has not violated any of the terms of section 3814, it still may not qualify for tax exemption in view of the general provisions of section 101 (6) Thus, if a trustee or other fiduciary of the organization (whether or not he is also a creator of such organization) enters into a transaction with the organization, such transaction will be closely scrutinized in the light of the fiduciary principle requiring undivided loyalty to ascertain whether the organization is in fact being operated for the stated exempt purposes.

(b) Any organization described in section 101 (6) other than an organization described in section 3813 (a) (1) through (5) inclusive, shall not be exempt under section 101 (6) if the amounts accumulated out of income during the taxable year, or any prior taxable year, and not actually paid out for exempt purposes by the end of the taxable year, are unreasonable. Amounts accumulated out of income become unreasonable when more income is accumulated than is needed, or when the duration of the accumulation is longer than is needed, in order to carry out the purpose constituting the basis for the organization's exemption. Furthermore, an organization shall not be exempt under section 101 (6) if amounts accumulated out of income are used to a substantial degree for purposes or functions other than those constituting the basis for the organization's exemption, or if such amounts are invested in such a manner as to jeopardize the carrying out of the purpose or function constituting the basis for the organization's exemption.

(c) For the purpose of section 3814, the term "income" means gains, profits, and income determined under the principles applicable in determining the earnings or profits of a corporation. The amount accumulated out of income during the taxable year or any prior taxable year shall be determined under the principles applicable in determining the accumulated earnings or profits of a corporation. In determining the reasonableness of an accumulation out of income, there will be disregarded the following: (1) The accumulation of gain upon the sale or exchange of a donated asset to the extent that such gain represents the excess of the fair market value of such assets when acquired by the organization over its substituted basis in the hands of the organization; (2) the accumulation of gain upon the sale or exchange of property held for the production of investment income, such as dividends, interest, and rents, where the proceeds of such sale or exchange are within a reasonable time reinvested in property acquired and held in good faith for the production of investment income.

(d) Whether the conditions specified in paragraphs (1) (2) and (3) of section 3814 are present in any case must be determined from all the facts. The conditions specified in section 3814 (1) (2) and (3) may result from the use of only one organization or of a chain of two or more organizations.

(e) An organization that has lost its exempt status by reason of the provisions of section 3814 may, in order to reestablish its exemption, file a claim for exemption with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization. Form 1023, the exemption application, a copy of which may be obtained from any district director of internal revenue, shall be used for this purpose. The claim for exemption must contain or be accompanied by information or evidence showing that the circumstances that caused the loss of exemption under section 3814 no longer exist, and an affidavit, by a principal officer of such organization authorized to make such affidavit, that the organization will not knowingly again violate the terms of section 3814. See § 39.101-1 for proof of exemption requirements in general. The provisions of section 3814 contemplate that an organization denied exemption thereunder will be subject to taxation for at least one full taxable year. For the purpose of this section, the term "taxable year" means the established annual accounting period of the organization; or, if the organization has no such established annual accounting period, the "taxable year" of the organization means the calendar year.

(f) In the case of an organization denied exemption under section 101 (6) solely by reason of the provisions of section 3814, deductions otherwise allowable under section 23 (o) (2) 23 (q) (2), 162 (a), or 505 (a) (2) for gifts or contributions to such organization shall not be disallowed.

§ 39.4041 Statutory provisions; issue of instructions, regulations, and forms.

SEC. 4041. Issue of instructions, regulations, and forms—(a) In general. The Secretary shall prescribe forms of entries, oaths, bonds, and other papers, and rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law, to be used under and in the execution and enforcement of the various provisions of the internal revenue laws; and he shall give such directions to collectors and prescribe such rules and forms to be observed by them as may be necessary for the proper execution of the law.

§ 39.4047 (a) Statutory provisions; penalties for disclosure of information by officers and employees of the United States.

SEC. 4047. Penalties—(a) Disclosure of information by officers and employees of the United States—(1) Operations of manufacturer or producer. It shall be unlawful for any collector, deputy collector, agent, clerk, or other officer or employee of the United States to divulge or to make known in any manner whatever not provided by law to any person the operations, style of work, or apparatus of any manufacturer or producer visited by him in the discharge of his official duties; and any offense against the foregoing provision shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court; and the offender shall be dismissed from office or discharged from employment. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply to internal revenue agents as fully as to internal revenue officers.

(2) Income tax data. For penalty for disclosing income tax data, see section 55 (f) (1).

SUBPART G—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

§ 39.6000-1 Extension of time for making certain elections. (a) If in the regulations in this part a time is fixed on or before which an election or an application for relief may be made by the taxpayer and such time is not expressly provided in the law, the Commissioner in his discretion may, for good cause shown, except as provided in the next paragraph, grant a reasonable extension of time for the making of such election or application if request for such extension is filed with the Commissioner before the time fixed for making such election or application or within such time thereafter as the Commissioner may consider reasonable under the circumstances and it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the granting of the extension will not jeopardize the interests of the Government.

(b) The time fixed in the regulations in this part will not be extended by the Commissioner in such cases as the following: (1) An election required to be made in or with the taxpayer's original income tax return; (2) an election required to be exercised by the filing of a claim for credit or refund unless such election is required to be exercised at a time fixed by the regulations in this part, which time is before the date of the expiration of the period of limitations provided in section 322, or an election required to be filed a petition to the Tax Court; (3) an application for permission to change a previous election; or (4) an application for permission to change an accounting method as described in §§ 39.41-2 and 39.123-1, an application for permission to change an accounting period as described in § 39.46-1, or an application for permission to change the method of treating bad debts as described in § 39.23 (k)-1.

In pursuance of the Internal Revenue Code, the regulations in this part (Regulations 118) are hereby prescribed, applicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951. Such regulations include those provisions contained in Part 29, 26 CFR, 1949 ed., supps. (Regulations 111) which have application to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951. Because the provisions of the regulations in this part are provisions which have heretofore been prescribed pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act, approved June 11, 1946, it is found unnecessary to issue such regulations with notice and public procedure thereon under section 4 (a) of the Administrative Procedure Act or subject to the effective date limitation of section 4 (c) of that Act. The regulations in Part 29 (Regulations 111) insofar as they relate to income taxes for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951, are hereby superseded.

[SEAL] T. COLEMAN ANDREWS,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved: September 23, 1953.

G. M. HUMPHREY,
Secretary of the Treasury.
