AUTHORITY: §§ 39.1 to 39.6000-1 issued under 53 Stat. 32, 457; 26 U. S. C. 62, 3791.

SUBPART A—INTRODUCTORY PROVISIONS (CHAPTER I, INTERNAL REVENUE CODE)

SEC. 1. Application of chapter. The provisions of this chapter shall apply only to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1938. Income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes for taxable years beginning prior to January 1, 1939, shall not be affected by the provisions of this chapter, but shall remain subject to the applicable provisions of the Revenue Act of 1938 and prior revenue acts, except as such provisions are modified by legislation enacted subsequent to the Revenue Act of 1938.

§ 39.1-1 Scope and applicability of regulations. (a) The regulations in this part deal with (1) the taxes imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code, except the excess profits tax imposed under subchapter D, (2) the surtax imposed by subchapter A of chapter 2 (sections 500 to 511, inclusive) upon the undistributed subchapter A net income of personal holding companies, and (3) administrative provisions relating to such taxes.

(b) The regulations in this part are applicable only with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951.

§ 39.2-3 Statutory provisions; cross references in Chapter 1, classification of provisions in Chapter 1.

SEC. 2. Cross references. The cross references in this chapter to other portions of the chapter, where the word "see" is used, are made only for convenience, and shall be given no legal effect.

SEC. 3. Classification of provisions. The provisions of this chapter are herein classified and designated as—

Subchapter A—Introductory provisions,
Subchapter B—General provisions, divided into Parts and sections,
Subchapter C—Supplemental provisions, divided into Supplements and sections.
Subchapter E—Tax on Self-Employment Income (the Self-Employment Contributions Act), divided into sections.

[Sec. 3 as amended by sec. 172 (b), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 6 (b), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 208 (d), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.3-1 Division of regulations. These regulations, which constitute Part 39 of Title 26 of the Code of Federal Regulations, are divided into seven subparts. Subpart A relates to Introductory Provisions of Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Subpart B relates to General Provisions of Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Subpart C relates to Supplemental Provisions of Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Subpart D relates to Tax on Self-Employment Income. Subpart E relates to Surtax on Personal Holding Companies. Subpart F relates to Administrative and General Provisions. Subpart G relates to Miscellaneous Provisions.

SEC. 4. Special classes of taxpayers. The application of the General Provisions and of Supplements A to D, inclusive, to each of the following special classes of taxpayers, shall be subject to the exceptions and additional provisions found in the Supplement applicable to such class, as follows:

(c) Insurance companies—Supplement G.
(d) Nonresident alien individuals—Supplement H.

Tax-exempt organizations with taxable business income under Supplement U—sections 421 to 424, inclusive.

SUBPART B—GENERAL PROVISIONS (CHAPTER I, INTERNAL REVENUE CODE)

RATES OF TAX

SEC. 11. Normal tax on individuals—(a) Taxable years beginning after September 30, 1950. In case of taxable years beginning after September 30, 1950, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual a normal tax of 3 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits against net income provided in section 25. For alternative tax which may be elected if adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, see supplement T.

§ 39.11-1 Income tax on individuals. Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes an income tax on individuals consisting of a normal tax (section 11) and a surtax (section 12) For optional tax in the case of taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes of less than $5,000, see section 400 and § 39.400-1. The normal tax on individuals is at the rate of 3 percent and is upon net income (determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from the gross income) reduced by the amount of the credits against net income provided in section 25. In certain cases credits are allowed against the amount of the tax (sections 31, 32, 35, and 131). For computation of tax in the case of a joint return of husband and wife, see § 39.12-4. For treatment of taxable years beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, see § 39.108-1. In general, the tax is payable upon the basis of returns rendered by persons liable therefor (sections 51, 53, 142, and 217) or at the source of the income. Exceptions and additional provisions applicable to certain special classes of taxpayers are listed in § 39.4-1. See Supplement P (sections 331 to 340, inclusive) as to shareholders of foreign personal holding companies. See section 117 as to the treatment of capital gains and capital losses.

§ 39.11-2 Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax. In general, citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the tax, and it makes no difference that they may own no assets within the United States and may receive no income from sources within the United States. Every resident alien individual is liable to the tax, even though his income is wholly from sources outside the United States. A nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year is, in general, liable to the tax in the same manner as a resident alien individual. See sections 116 (l) and 220. As to nonresident alien individuals, see sections 211 to 221, inclusive.

§ 39.11-3 Who is a citizen. Every person born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to its jurisdiction, is a citizen. For rules governing the expatriation of citizens by birth and naturalized citizens, see sections 349 to 357, inclusive, of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 1952 (8 U. S. C. 1481-1489). A foreigner who has filed his declaration of intention of becoming a citizen but who has not yet been admitted to citizenship by a final order of a naturalization court is an alien. See §§ 39.211-2 to 39.211-5, inclusive, for distinction between a resident alien individual and a nonresident alien individual.

Over $6,000 but not over $8,000	$1,336, plus 31 percent of excess over $6,000.
Over $8,000 but not over $10,000	$1,956, plus 35 percent of excess over $8,000.
Over $10,000 but not over $12,000	$2,656, plus 39 percent of excess over $10,000.
Over $12,000 but not over $14,000	$3,436, plus 45 percent of excess over $12,000.
Over $14,000 but not over $16,000	$4,336, plus 50 percent of excess over $14,000.
Over $16,000 but not over $18,000	$5,336, plus 53 percent of excess over $16,000.
Over $18,000 but not over $20,000	$6,396, plus 56 percent of excess over $18,000.
Over $20,000 but not over $22,000	$7,516, plus 59 percent of excess over $20,000.
Over $22,000 but not over $26,000	$8,696, plus 63 percent of excess over $22,000.
Over $26,000 but not over $32,000	$11,216, plus 64 percent of excess over $26,000.
Over $32,000 but not over $38,000	$15,056, plus 65 percent of excess over $32,000.
Over $38,000 but not over $44,000	$18,956, plus 69 percent of excess over $38,000.
Over $44,000 but not over $50,000	$23,096, plus 72 percent of excess over $44,000.
Over $50,000 but not over $60,000	$27,416, plus 74 percent of excess over $50,000.
Over $60,000 but not over $70,000	$34,816, plus 77 percent of excess over $60,000.
Over $70,000 but not over $80,000	$42,516, plus 80 percent of excess over $70,000.
Over $80,000 but not over $90,000	$50,516, plus 82 percent of excess over $80,000.
Over $90,000 but not over $100,000	$58,716, plus 85 percent of excess over $90,000.
Over $100,000 but not over $150,000	$67,216, plus 87 percent of excess over $100,000.
Over $150,000 but not over $200,000	$110,716, plus 88 percent of excess over $150,000.
Over $200,000	$154,716, plus 89 percent of excess over $200,000.

(3) Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953. In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the surtax net income of every individual (other than a head of a household to whom subsection (c) applies) the surtax shown in the following table:

If the surtax net income is—	The surtax shall be—
Not over $2,000	17 percent of the surtax net income.
Over $2,000 but not over $4,000	$340, plus 19 percent of excess over $2,000.
Over $4,000 but not over $6,000	$720, plus 23 percent of excess over $4,000.
Over $6,000 but not over $8,000	$1,180, plus 27 percent of excess over $6,000
Over $8,000 but not over $10,000	$1,720, plus 31 percent of excess over $8,000.
Over $10,000 but not over $12,000	$2,340, plus 35 percent of excess over $10,000.
Over $12,000 but not over $14,000	$3,040, plus 40 percent of excess over $12,000.
Over $14,000 but not over $16,000	$3,840, plus 44 percent of excess over $14,000.
Over $16,000 but not over $18,000	$4,720, plus 47 percent of excess over $16,000.
Over $18,000 but not over $20,000	$5,660, plus 50 percent of excess over $18,000.
Over $20,000 but not over $22,000	$6,660, plus 53 percent of excess over $20,000.
Over $22,000 but not over $26,000	$7,720, plus 56 percent of excess over $22,000.
Over $26,000 but not over $32,000	$9,960, plus 59 percent of excess over $26,000.
Over $32,000 but not over $38,000	$13,500, plus 62 percent of excess over $32,000.
Over $38,000 but not over $44,000	$17,220, plus 66 percent of excess over $38,000.
Over $44,000 but not over $50,000	$21,180, plus 69 percent of excess over $44,000.
Over $50,000 but not over $60,000	$25,320, plus 72 percent of excess over $50,000.
Over $60,000 but not over $70,000	$32,520, plus 75 percent of excess over $60,000.
Over $70,000 but not over $80,000	$40,020, plus 78 percent of excess over $70,000.
Over $80,000 but not over $90,000	$47,820, plus 81 percent of excess over $80,000.
Over $90,000 but not over $100,000	$55,920, plus 84 percent of excess over $90,000.
Over $100,000 but not over $150,000	$64,320, plus 86 percent of excess over $100,000.
Over $150,000 but not over $200,000	$107,320, plus 87 percent of excess over $150,000.

Over $300,000	$232,512, plus 89 percent of excess over $300,000.

(2) Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953. In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953, there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the surtax net income of every individual who is the head of a household the surtax shown in the following table:

If the surtax net income is—	The surtax shall be—
Not over $2,000	17 percent of the surtax net income.
Over $2,000 but not over $4,000	$340, plus 18 percent of excess over $2,000.
Over $4,000 but not over $6,000	$700, plus 21 percent of excess over $4,000.
Over $6,000 but not over $8,000	$1,120, plus 23 percent of excess over $6,000.
Over $8,000 but not over $10,000	$1,580, plus 27 percent of excess over $8,000.
Over $10,000 but not over $12,000	$2,120, plus 29 percent of excess over $10,000.
Over $12,000 but not over $14,000	$2,700, plus 33 percent of excess over $12,000.
Over $14,000 but not over $16,000	$3,360, plus 36 percent of excess over $14,000.
Over $16,000 but not over $18,000	$4,080, plus 39 percent of excess over $16,000.
Over $18,000 but not over $20,000	$4,860, plus 40 percent of excess over $18,000.
Over $20,000 but not over $22,000	$5,660, plus 44 percent of excess over $20,000.
Over $22,000 but not over $24,000	$6,540, plus 46 percent of excess over $22,000.
Over $24,000 but not over $28,000	$7,460, plus 49 percent of excess over $24,000.
Over $28,000 but not over $32,000	$9,420, plus 51 percent of excess over $28,000.
Over $32,000 but not over $38,000	$11,460, plus 55 percent of excess over $32,000.
Over $38,000 but not over $44,000	$14,760, plus 59 percent of excess over $38,000.
Over $44,000 but not over $50,000	$18,300, plus 63 percent of excess over $44,000.
Over $50,000 but not over $60,000	$22,080, plus 65 percent of excess over $50,000.
Over $60,000 but not over $70,000	$28,580, plus 68 percent of excess over $60,000.
Over $70,000 but not over $80,000	$35,380, plus 71 percent of excess over $70,000.
Over $80,000 but not over $90,000	$42,480, plus 73 percent of excess over $80,000.
Over $90,000 but not over $100,000	$49,780, plus 77 percent of excess over $90,000.
Over $100,000 but not over $150,000	$57,480, plus 80 percent of excess over $100,000.
Over $150,000 but not over $200,000	$97,480, plus 84 percent of excess over $150,000.
Over $200,000 but not over $300,000	$139,480, plus 87 percent of excess over $200,000.
Over $300,000	$226,480, plus 88 percent of excess over $300,000.

(3) Definition of head of household. For the purposes of this chapter, an individual shall be considered a head of a household if, and only if, such individual is not married at the close of his taxable year and maintains as his home a household which constitutes for such taxable year the principal place of abode, as a member of such household, of:

(A) A son, stepson, daughter, or stepdaughter of the taxpayer, or a descendant of a son or daughter of the taxpayer, but if such son, stepson, daughter, stepdaughter, or descendant is married at the close of the taxpayer's taxable year, only if the taxpayer is entitled to an exemption for the taxable year for such person under section 25 (b); or

(B) Any other person who is a dependent of the taxpayer, if the taxpayer is entitled to an exemption for the taxable year for such person under section 25 (b).

An individual shall be considered as maintaining a household only if over half of the cost of maintaining the household during the taxable year is furnished by such individual.

(4) Determination of status. For the purposes of this subsection—

(A) A legally adopted child of a person shall be considered a child of such person by blood;

(B) An individual who is legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married;

(C) A taxpayer shall be considered as not married at the close of his taxable year if at any time during the taxable year his spouse is a nonresident alien; and

(D) A taxpayer shall be considered as married at the close of his taxable year if his spouse (other than a spouse described in subparagraph (C)) died during the taxable year.

(5) Nonresident alien. For the purposes of this chapter a taxpayer shall in no case be considered a head of a household if at any time during the taxable year he is a nonresident alien.

(d) Tax in case of joint return. In the case of a joint return of husband and wife under section 51 (b), the combined normal tax and surtax under section 11 and subsection (b) of this section shall be twice the combined normal tax and surtax that would be determined if the net income and the applicable credits against net income provided by section 25 were reduced by one-half.

(e) Computation of tax without regard to credits against tax. In the application of this section, the combined normal tax and surtax shall be computed without regard to the credits provided in sections 31, 32, and 35.

(f) Limitation on tax—(1) Calendar year 1951. * * * [Not applicable.]

(2) Taxable years beginning after October 31, 1951, and before January 1, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after October 31, 1951, and before January 1, 1954, the combined normal tax and surtax shall in no event exceed 88 per centum of the net income of the taxable year.

(3) Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953. In the case of taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953, the combined normal tax and surtax shall in no event exceed 87 per centum of the net income for the taxable year.

(g) Cross references—(1) Alternative tax. For alternative tax which may be elected if adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, see Supplement T.

(2) Tax in case of capital gains. For rate and computation of alternative tax in lieu of normal tax and surtax in the case of capital gain from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than 6 months, see section 117 (c).

(3) Tax on personal holding companies. For surtax on personal holding companies, see section 500.

(4) Avoidance of surtaxes by incorporation. For surtax on corporations which accumulate surplus to avoid surtax on shareholders, see section 102.

(5) Sale of oil or gas properties. For limitation of surtax attributable to the sale of oil or gas properties, see section 105.

§ 39.12–1 Surtax on individuals. (a) There is imposed, in addition to the normal tax imposed by section 11, a surtax determined as specified in section 12 upon the surtax net income of every individual, resident or nonresident, except nonresident alien individuals subject to the tax imposed by section 211 (a) The surtax net income is the net income minus the credits provided in section 25 (b) The surtax shall be determined in accordance with the applicable surtax table contained in section 12 (b) (2) or (3) For treatment of taxable years beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, see § 39.108–1.

(b) The surtax for any amount of surtax net income is computed by adding to the surtax for the bracket in which that amount falls in the table in section 12 (b) the surtax upon the excess of that amount over the bottom of the bracket at the rate indicated in the table. Accordingly, the surtax for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1953, upon a surtax net income of $63,128 would be $34,866, computed as follows:

Surtax on $60,000 from table	$32,520
Surtax on $3,128 at 75 percent	2,346

(c) For computation of tax in the case of a joint return of husband and wife, see § 39.12–3.

§ 39.12–2 Limitation on amount of tax. The combined normal tax and surtax computed before the application thereto of the credit provided in section 31 (relating to the credit for foreign income tax) section 32 (relating to the credit for tax withheld at the source under section 143 or 144) and section 35 (relating to the credit for tax withheld on wages) shall not exceed an amount equal to the following percent of the taxpayer's net income for the taxable year:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before Jan. 1, 1954	88
For taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1953	87

For treatment of taxable years beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, see § 39.108–1.

§ 39.12–3 Combined normal tax and surtax in case of joint return of husband and wife. (a) In the case of a joint return of husband and wife (see section 51 (b)) the combined normal tax and surtax under section 11 and section 12 (b) shall be twice the combined normal tax and surtax that would be determined if the net income and the applicable credits against net income provided by section 25 were reduced by one-half. Section 12 (d) For method of computing gross income and adjusted gross income on a joint return, see § 39.51–1.

(b) The method of computing, under section 12 (d) the tax of husband and wife in the case of a joint return is as follows:

(1) First, the net income and applicable credits against net income are reduced by one-half. Second, the normal tax and surtax are determined as provided in sections 11 and 12 (b) by using the net income and applicable credits so reduced. Third, the normal tax and surtax so determined are aggregated. Fourth, this aggregate, which is the combined normal tax and surtax that would be determined if the net income and the applicable credits against net income provided by section 25 were reduced by one-half, is then multiplied by two, to produce the tax imposed in the case of the joint return.

(2) The limitation under section 12 (f) of the combined normal tax and surtax to an amount not in excess of a specified percent of the net income for the taxable year is to be applied before the fourth step above, that is, the limitation to be applied upon the combined normal tax and surtax is determined under section 12 (f) as the applicable specified percent of one-half of the net income for the taxable year (such one-half of the net income being the actual aggregate net income of the spouses reduced by one-half) For the percent applicable in determining the limitation under section 12 (f) of the combined normal tax and surtax, see § 39.12-2. After such limitation is applied, then the combined normal tax and surtax so limited is multiplied by two as provided in section 12 (d)

(3) The following computation illustrates the method of application of section 12 (d) in the determination of the tax of a husband and wife filing a joint return for the calendar year 1952. If the joint net income is $8,200 and the only allowable credits under section 25 are the two exemptions of the taxpayers under section 25 (b) (1) (A) the tax on the joint return for 1952 is $1,626, determined as follows:

1. Net income	$8,200
2. Net income reduced by one-half	4,100
3. Credits against net income under sec. 25 (2 exemptions under sec. 25 (b) (1) (A))	1,200
4. Credits in item 3 reduced by one-half	600
5. Net income reduced by one-half (item 2) minus credits reduced by one-half (item 4)	3,500
6. Normal tax computed under sec. 11 on amount in item 5 (3 percent of $3,500)	105
7. Surtax computed under sec. 12 (b) on amount in item 5 ($384 plus 21.6 percent of excess of $3,500 over $2,000)	708
8. Combined normal tax and surtax computed on net income and credits reduced by one-half	813
9. Twice the combined normal tax and surtax determined in item 8	1,626

(c) If the alternative tax is computed under section 117 (c) (2), relating to the alternative tax where a taxpayer (other than a corporation) has a net long-term capital gain in excess of a net short-term capital loss, the partial tax shall be computed under sections 11 and 12 as stated above but without inclusion of 50 percent of such excess in net income, and the total tax shall be such partial tax plus a specified percent of such excess (26 percent for taxable years beginning before November 1, 1953, and 25 percent for all other taxable years) as provided in such section 117 (c) (2)

(d) If a joint return of a husband and wife is filed under the provisions of section 51 (b) (3) if the husband and wife have different taxable years solely because of the death of either spouse, and if the taxable year of the surviving spouse covered by such joint return begins in 1953 and ends in 1954, the taxable year of the deceased spouse covered by the joint return shall, for the purpose of the computation under section 12 (d) and this section of the combined normal tax and surtax in respect of such joint return, be deemed to have ended on the date of the closing of the surviving spouse's taxable year.

(e) For computation of tax under Supplement T in the case of a joint return, see §§ 39.400-1 and 39.401-1.

§ 39.12-4 Surtax in case of head of household—(a) General rule. An individual who is the head of a household under the rules prescribed in section 12 (c) is subject to the surtax imposed by that section instead of the surtax imposed by section 12 (b) (2) and section 12 (b) (3)

(b) Definition of head of household. (1) For the purpose of section 12 (c), the taxpayer shall be considered the head of a household if, and only if, he is not married at the close of his taxable year and maintains as his home a household which constitutes for such taxable year the principal place of abode, as a member of such household, of at least one of the individuals specified in section 12 (c) (3) (A) or provided for in section 12 (c) (3) (B). Under no circumstances shall the same individual be used to qualify more than one taxpayer as the head of a household in the same taxable year.

(2) Section 12 (c) (3) (A) specifies that any of the following persons may be used to qualify the taxpayer as the head of a household: a son, stepson, daughter, stepdaughter, or a descendant of a son or daughter of the taxpayer. If, however, such person is married at the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer, the taxpayer may qualify as the head of a household by reason of such person only if the taxpayer is entitled to an exemption for his taxable year under section 25 (b) for such person, that is, only if such person has a gross income of less than $600 for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, if the taxpayer supplies more than one-half of the support of such person for such calendar year, and if such person does not make a joint return with his spouse for the taxable year beginning in such calendar year. For example, if such person is an unmarried son of the taxpayer, the taxpayer is not deprived of his status as the head of a household because the son has income of $600 or more for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins; if, however, such son is married at the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer, the taxpayer still may qualify as the head of a household, but only if the gross income of the son is less than $600 for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins and the other conditions for allowance of the dependency credit under section 25 (b) are met.

(3) Section 12 (c) (3) (B) provides that a person for whom the taxpayer is entitled to an exemption under section 25 (b) for the taxable year may be used to qualify the taxpayer as the head of a household. Section 25 (b) provides that the taxpayer may be entitled to an exemption for any of the following persons:

(i) His brother, sister, stepbrother, or stepsister;

(ii) His father or mother, or an ancestor of either;

(iii) His stepfather or stepmother;

(iv) A son or a daughter of his brother or sister;

(v) A brother or sister of his father or mother; or

(vi) His son-in-law, daughter-in-law, mother-in-law, father-in-law, sister-in-law, or brother-in-law,

if such person has a gross income of less than $600 for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, if the taxpayer supplies more than one-half of the support of such person for such calendar year and if such person does not make a joint return with his spouse for the taxable year beginning in such calendar year. For example, an unmarried taxpayer who maintains a home for himself and his widowed mother may not qualify as the head of a household by reason of his maintenance of a home for his mother if his mother has income of $600 or more in the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, or if he does not furnish more than one-half of the support of his mother for such calendar year.

(4) For the purposes of this section, a taxpayer shall be considered as not married if at the close of his taxable year he is legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, or if at any time during the taxable year the spouse to whom the taxpayer is married at the close of his taxable year was a nonresident alien. A taxpayer shall be considered married at the close of his taxable year if his spouse (other than a spouse who is a nonresident alien) dies during such year.

(c) Household. Section 12 (c) is applicable only where the household actually constitutes the home of the taxpayer for his taxable year and also constitutes the principal place of abode of at least one other person specified in section 12 (c) (3) (A) or provided for in section 12 (c) (3) (B) for such taxable year, without regard to the fact that the physical location of such household may have changed during such taxable year. It is not sufficient that the taxpayer maintain the household without being its occupant. The taxpayer and such other person must occupy the household for the entire taxable year of the taxpayer. They will be considered as occupying the household for such entire taxable year notwithstanding temporary absences from the household due to special circumstances. A nonpermanent failure to occupy the common abode by reason of illness, education, business, vacation, military service, or a custody agreement under which a child or stepchild is absent for less than six months in the taxable year of the taxpayer, shall be considered a temporary absence due to special circumstances. Such absence will not prevent the taxpayer from qualifying as the head of a household if (1) it is reasonable to assume that the taxpayer or such other person will return to the household, and (2) the taxpayer continues to maintain such household or a substantially equivalent household in anticipation of such return. The taxpayer will not be deprived of the benefits of section 12 (c) because such other person dies during the taxable year of the taxpayer if the household constitutes the principal place of abode of such other person during that part of such taxable year preceding death.

(d) Cost of maintaining a household. The taxpayer shall be considered as maintaining a household only if he pays more than one-half the cost thereof for his taxable year. The cost of maintaining a household shall be the expenses incurred for the mutual benefit of the occupants thereof by reason of its operation as the principal place of abode of such occupants for such taxable year. Such expenses include property taxes, mortgage interest, rent, utility charges, upkeep and repairs, property insurance, and food consumed on the premises. The cost of maintaining a household shall not include expenses otherwise incurred. Thus, such cost does not include expenses incurred for clothing, education, medical treatment, vacations, life insurance, and transportation. In addition, the cost of maintaining a household shall not include any amount which represents the value of services rendered in the household by the taxpayer or by a person specified in section 12 (c) (3) (A) or provided for in section 12 (c) (3) (B)

SEC. 13. Normal tax on corporations—(a) Definitions. For the purposes of this chapter—

(1) Adjusted net income. The term "adjusted net income" means the net income minus the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations.

(2) Normal-tax net income. The term "normal-tax net income" means the adjusted net income minus the sum of the following credits:

(A) The credit for dividends received provided in section 26 (b);

(B) In the case of a public utility, the credit for dividends paid on its preferred stock provided in section 26 (h); and

(C) In the case of a western hemisphere trade corporation (as defined in section 109), the credit provided in section 26 (i).

(b) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the normal-tax net income of every corporation (except a corporation subject to a tax imposed by section 231 (a), Supplement G, or Supplement Q)—

(1) Calendar year 1951. * * * [Not applicable.]

(2) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, a tax of 30 per centum of the normal-tax income.

(3) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954, a tax of 25 per centum of the normal-tax net income.

(c) Exempt corporations. For corporations exempt from taxation under this chapter, see section 101.

(e) Improper accumulation of surplus. For surtax on corporations which accumulate surplus to avoid surtax on shareholders, see section 102.

(f) Mutual savings banks conducting life insurance business. For special tax, in lieu of the taxes imposed by this section and section 15, in the case of a mutual savings bank conducting a life insurance business, see section 110.

§ 39.13–1 Tax on corporations in general. (a) Section 13 imposes an income tax on corporations generally. Every corporation is liable to the tax imposed by such section, except (1) corporations expressly exempt from all taxation under chapter 1 (see section 101) (2) corporations subject to tax under Supplement U (see section 421) (3) foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business within the United States (see section 231 (a)) (4) insurance companies (see Supplement G) and (5) regulated investment companies (see Supplement Q)

(b) It makes no difference that a domestic corporation subject to any tax imposed by section 13 may derive no income from sources within the United States. The tax imposed by section 13 for a taxable year is computed upon the "normal-tax net income" for the taxable year, that is, the adjusted net income for such year minus (1) the credit for dividends received provided in section 26 (b) for such year, (2) in the case of a public utility, the credit for dividends paid on its preferred stock provided in section 26 (h) for such year, and (3) in the case of a Western Hemisphere trade corporation (see section 109) the credit provided in section 26 (i) for such year. For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108–2. The "adjusted net income" of a corporation is the net income as defined in section 21 minus the credit provided in section 26 (a) relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities.

(c) The tax imposed by section 13 is payable upon the basis of returns rendered by the corporations liable thereto, except that in some cases a tax is to be paid at the source of the income (see also sections 47, 52, 53, 144, and 235) For what the term "corporation" includes and for the difference between domestic and foreign corporations, see section 3797 (a) For treatment of the tax imposed on foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, see § 39.231–1 (c) In the case of foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business within the United States, the tax is as provided in section 231 (a) In the case of insurance companies, the tax is as provided in Supplement G (sections 201 to 207, inclusive) In the case of regulated investment companies, the tax is as provided in Supplement Q (sections 361 and 362) In the case of corporations subject to tax under Supplement U, the tax is as provided in sections 421 to 424, inclusive. For surtax on corporations generally, see § 39.15–1. For surtax on personal holding companies, see sections 500 to 511, inclusive. For surtax on corporations improperly accumulating surplus, see section 102. For treatment of capital gains and losses, see section 117. For treatment of mutual savings banks conducting life insurance business, see section 110.

(d) (1) The tax imposed by section 13 is computed by applying to the "normal-tax net income" the rate in effect for the taxable year. The rates of tax under section 13 applicable for the respective taxable years are as follows:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954	30
For taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954	25

(2) The computation of the tax under section 13 may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The A Corporation, a domestic corporation (which is neither a public utility referred to in section 26 (h) nor a Western Hemisphere trade corporation referred to in section 26 (i)), has for the calendar year 1952 a net income of $130,000, including interest on United States obligations (allowable as a credit under section 26 (a)) in the amount of $10,000 and cash dividends received (allowable as a credit under section 26 (b) (1)) in the amount of $10,000. The corporation's tax under section 13 for the calendar year 1952 is $32,050.25, computed as follows:

Net income	$130,000
Less credit for interest on United States obligations	10,000
Adjusted net income	120,000
Less credit for dividends received (85 percent of $10,000)	8,500
Normal-tax net income	111,500
Tax under sec. 13 (b) (2) (30 percent of $111,500)	33,450

SEC. 14. Tax on special classes of corporations in case of taxable years (other than the calendar year 1950) beginning before July 1, 1950.

[Repealed by sec. 121 (g), Rev. Act 1951.]

SEC. 15. Surtax on corporations—(a) Corporation surtax net income. For the purposes of this chapter, the term "corporation surtax net income" means the net income minus the sum of the following credits:

(1) The credit for dividends received provided in section 26 (b);

(2) In the case of a public utility, the credit for dividends paid on its preferred stock provided in section 26 (h);

(3) In the case of a western hemisphere trade corporation (as defined in section 109), the credit provided in section 26 (i).

(b) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the corporation surtax net income of every corporation (except a corporation subject to a tax imposed by section 231 (a), Supplement G, or Supplement Q) a surtax of 22 per centum of the amount of the corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000.

(c) Disallowance of surtax exemption and minimum excess profits credit. If any corporation transfers, on or after January 1, 1951, all or part of its property (other than money) to another corporation which was created for the purpose of acquiring such property or which was not actively engaged in business at the time of such acquisition, and if after such transfer the transferor corporation or its stockholders, or both, are in control of such transferee corporation during any part of the taxable year of such transferee corporation, then such transferee corporation shall not for such taxable year (except as may be otherwise determined under section 129 (b)) be allowed either the $25,000 exemption from surtax provided in subsection (b) or the $25,000 minimum excess profits credit provided in the last sentence of section 431, unless such transferee corporation shall establish by the clear preponderance of the evidence that the securing of such exemption or credit was not a major purpose of such transfer. For the purposes of this subsection, control means the ownership of stock possessing at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 80 per centum of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation. In determining the ownership of stock for the purpose of this subsection, the ownership of stock shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of section 503, except that constructive ownership under section 503 (a) (2) shall be determined only with respect to the individual's spouse and minor children. The provisions of section 129 (b), and the authority of the Secretary under such section, shall, to the extent not inconsistent with the provisions of this subsection, be applicable to this subsection. This subsection shall not apply to any taxable year with respect to which the tax imposed by subchapter D of this chapter is not in effect.

§ 39.15-1 Surtax on corporations. (a) Section 15 imposes a surtax upon the corporation surtax net income of every corporation, except (1) corporations expressly exempt from all taxation under chapter 1 (see section 101) (2) corporations subject to tax under Supplement U (see section 421) (3) foreign corporations not engaged in trade or business within the United States (see section 231 (a)) (4) insurance companies (see Supplement G) and (5) regulated investment companies (see Supplement Q) For surtax on personal holding companies, see sections 500 to 511, inclusive. For surtax on corporations improperly accumulating surplus, see section 102. For treatment of capital gains and losses, see section 117. For treatment of mutual savings banks conducting life insurance business, see section 110.

(b) The "corporation surtax net income" of a corporation is its net income for the taxable year minus (1) the credit for dividends received provided in section 26 (b) for such year, (2) in the case of a public utility, the credit for dividends paid on its preferred stock provided in section 26 (h) for such year, and (3) in the case of a Western Hemisphere trade corporation (see section 109) the credit provided in section 26 (i) for such year. The credit provided in section 26 (a) for interest received on obligations of the United States or its instrumentalities is not allowable in computing corporation surtax net income for any taxable year.

(c) The surtax on corporations is at the rate of 22 percent and is upon corporation surtax net income in excess of $25,000. See, however, § 39.15-2, as to the circumstances under which the $25,000 exemption from surtax for certain taxable years may be disallowed in whole or in part.

(d) For treatment of taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108-2.

(e) The computation of the surtax on corporations may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The A Corporation, a domestic corporation (which is neither a public utility referred to in section 26 (h) nor a Western Hemisphere trade corporation referred to in section 26 (i)), has for the calendar year 1952 a net income of $86,000. The net income includes cash dividends received from a corporation (allowable as a credit under section 26 (b) (1)) in the amount of $10,000, and interest on United States obligations (allowable as a credit under section 26 (a) in determining adjusted net income for purposes of corporation normal tax) in the amount of $10,000. The A Corporation's surtax for the calendar year 1952 is $11,550, computed as follows:

Net income	$86,000
Less credit for dividends received (85 percent of $10,000)	8,500
Corporation surtax net income	77,500
Surtax (22 percent of $52,500, the excess of $77,500 over $25,000)	11,550

§ 39.15-2 Disallowance of surtax exemption and minimum excess profits credit—(a) In general. If one corporation transfers after December 31, 1950, all or part of its property (other than money) to another corporation, neither the $25,000 exemption from surtax provided in section 15 (b) nor the $25,000 minimum excess profits credit provided in section 431 shall be allowed the transferee if:

(1) The transferee was created for the purpose of acquiring such property, or

(2) The transferee was not actively engaged in business at the time of the acquisition, and

(3) After such transfer the transferor or its stockholders, or both, are in control of the transferee during any part of the taxable year of the transferee, unless—

(4) The transferee establishes by the clear preponderance of the evidence that the securing of either such exemption or such credit or both was not a major purpose of such transfer, or

(5) The Commissioner allows such exemption or such credit pursuant to the authority provided in section 15 (c) and section 129 (b).

(b) Purpose of section 15 (c) (1) The purpose of section 15 (c) is to prevent avoidance or evasion of the surtax on corporation surtax net income imposed by section 15 (b) or of the excess profits tax imposed by section 430. It is not intended, however, that section 15 (c) be interpreted as delimiting or abrogating any principle of law established by judicial decision, or any existing provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, such as sections 45 and 129, which have the effect of preventing the avoidance or evasion of income or excess profits taxes. Such principles of law and such provisions of the Code, including section 15 (c) are not mutually exclusive, and in appropriate cases they may operate together or they may operate separately.

(2) The provisions of section 129 (b) and the authority of the Commissioner thereunder, to the extent not inconsistent with the provisions of section 15 (c), are applicable to cases covered by section 15 (c). Pursuant to the authority provided in section 129 (b) the Commissioner may allow to the transferee any part of a surtax exemption or minimum excess profits credit for a taxable year for which such exemption or credit would otherwise be disallowed under section 15 (c), or he may apportion such exemption or credit among the corporations involved (see § 39.129-4). For example, Corporation A transfers on January 1, 1952, all its property to Corporations B and C in exchange for all the stock of such corporations. Immediately thereafter, Corporation A is dissolved and its stockholders become the sole stockholders of Corporations B and C. Assuming that Corporations B and C are unable to establish by the clear preponderance of the evidence that the securing of the surtax exemption provided in section 15 (b) or the minimum excess profits credit provided in section 431, or both, was not a major purpose of the transfer, the Commissioner, nevertheless, has authority under sections 15 (c) and 129 (b) to allow one such exemption and credit and to apportion such exemption and credit between Corporations B and C.

(3) For the purpose of section 15 (c) and this section, a corporation maintaining an office for the purpose of preserving its corporate existence is not considered to be "actively engaged in business" even though such corporation may be deemed to be "doing business" for other purposes. Similarly, for the purpose of section 15 (c) and this section, a corporation engaged in winding up its affairs, prior to an acquisition to which section 15 (c) is applicable, is not considered to be "actively engaged in business"

(c) Meaning and application of the term "control" For the purpose of section 15 (c) and this section, the term "control" means the ownership of stock possessing either (1) at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote, or (2) at least 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation. In determining whether stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote is owned, all classes of such stock shall be considered together; it is not necessary that 80 percent of each class of voting stock be owned. Likewise, in determining whether stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock is owned, all classes of stock of the corporation shall be considered together; it is not necessary that 80 percent of the value of shares of each class be owned. The fair market value of a share shall be considered as the value to be used for the purpose of this computation. The ownership of stock shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of section 503 and the regulations thereunder, except that constructive ownership under section 503 (a) (2) shall be determined only with respect to the individual's spouse and minor children. For example, in addition to stock held directly or under an option to purchase, an individual is deemed to own stock held directly or indirectly by or for his spouse or minor children, and also to own a proportionate part of the stock owned by a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust in which he holds an interest as a shareholder, partner, or beneficiary.

Disallowance of the exemption and credit under section 15 (c) is not limited to the taxable year of the transferee corporation in which the transfer of property occurs. Section 15 (c) provides for the disallowance of the exemption and credit for any taxable year whether the taxable year in which the transfer of property occurs or any subsequent taxable year of the transferee corporation, if, during any part of such year, the transferor corporation or its stockholders, or both, are in control of the transferee corporation. Thus, if Corporation D on January 1, 1952, transfers a part of its property to Corporation E, a corporation not actively engaged in business at the time of the acquisition of such property, in exchange for 60 percent of the voting stock of Corporation E, and; thereafter, during a later taxable year with respect to which section 15 (c) is applicable, acquires an additional 20 percent of the voting stock of Corporation E, Corporation D, by reason of such later acquisition, is considered to be in control of Corporation E as of the time of such acquisition for the purpose of section 15 (c) Accordingly, Corporation E will be disallowed the surtax exemption and minimum excess profits credit for the taxable year in which the later acquisition of stock occurred and for each taxable year thereafter in which the requisite control continues, unless Corporation E establishes by the clear preponderance of the evidence that the securing of such exemption or credit, or both, was not a major purpose of the transfer of the property in 1952.

In determining, for the purpose of section 15 (c) whether a corporation, its stockholders, or both, are in control of a transferee corporation, it is not necessary that the stock be acquired on or after January 1, 1951. Thus, if Corporation F on June 1, 1950, owns 70 percent of the voting stock of Corporation G, and, thereafter, on January 2, 1952, Corporation F acquires an additional 10 percent of such stock, control within the meaning of section 15 (c) is acquired by Corporation F on January 2, 1952.

(d) Nature of transfer A transfer made by any corporation of all or part of its assets, whether or not such transfer qualifies as a reorganization under section 112 (g) is within the scope of section 15 (c) except that section 15 (c) does not apply to a transfer of money only. For example, the transfer of cash for the purpose of expanding the business of the transferor corporation through the formation of a new corporation is not a transfer within the scope of section 15 (c) irrespective of whether the new corporation uses the cash to purchase from the transferor corporation stock in trade or similar property.

(e) Purpose of transfer In determining, for the purpose of section 15 (c) whether the securing of the exemption from surtax or the minimum excess profits credit constituted "a major purpose" of the transfer, all circumstances relevant to the transfer shall be considered. For disallowance of the surtax exemption and minimum excess profits credit under section 15 (c) it is not necessary that the obtaining of either such credit or exemption or both have been the sole or principal purpose of the transfer of the property. It is sufficient if it appears, in the light of all the facts and circumstances, that the obtaining of such exemption or credit, or both, was one of the major considerations that prompted the transfer. Thus, the securing of the surtax exemption or the minimum excess profits credit may constitute "a major purpose" of the transfer, notwithstanding that such transfer was effected for a valid business purpose and qualified as a reorganization within the meaning of section 112 (g) The taxpayer's burden of establishing by the clear preponderance of the evidence that the securing of either such exemption or credit or both was not "a major purpose" of the transfer may be met, for example, by a showing that the obtaining of such exemption, or credit, or both, was not a major factor in relationship to the other consideration or considerations which prompted the transfer.

(f) Taxable years to which applicable. Section 15 (c) and this section do not apply to any taxable year with respect to which the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code is not in effect. For treatment of taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108-2. For computation of the excess profits tax for certain fiscal years, see § 40.430-2 (b) (2) and (c) of Regulations 130 (Part 40 of this chapter)

COMPUTATION OF NET INCOME

SEC. 21. Net income—(a) Definition. "Net income" means the gross income computed under section 22, less the deductions allowed by section 23.

(b) Cross references. For definition of "adjusted net income" and "normal-tax net income," see section 13.

§ 39.21-1 Meaning of net income. (a) The tax imposed by chapter 1 is upon income. Neither income exempted by statute or fundamental law, nor expenses incurred in connection therewith, other than interest, enter into the computation of net income as defined by section 21. (See section 24 (a) (5).) In the computation of the tax various classes of income must be considered:

(1) Income (in the broad sense), meaning all wealth which flows in to the taxpayer other than as a mere return of capital. It includes the forms of income specifically described as gains and profits, including gains derived from the sale or other disposition of capital assets. Cash receipts alone do not always accurately reflect income, for the Internal Revenue Code recognizes as income-determining factors other items, among which are inventories, accounts receivable, property exhaustion, and accounts payable for expenses incurred. (See sections 22, 23, 24, and 117.)

(2) Gross income, meaning income (in the broad sense) less income which is by statutory provision or otherwise exempt from the tax imposed by chapter 1. (See section 22.)

(3) Net income, meaning gross income less statutory deductions. The statutory deductions are in general, though not exclusively, expenditures, other than capital expenditures, connected with the production of income. (See sections 23 and 24.)

(4) Net income less certain credits. (See sections 25, 26, 27, and 28.)

(b) The normal taxes and surtaxes imposed on individuals and on corporations are computed upon net income less certain credits. Although taxable net income is a statutory conception, it follows, subject to certain modifications as to exemptions and as to deductions for partial losses in some cases, the lines of commercial usage. Subject to these modifications, statutory net income is commercial net income. This appears from the fact that ordinarily it is to be computed in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of the taxpayer. (See section 41.)

(c) The net income of corporations is determined in general in the same manner as the net income of individuals, but the deductions allowed corporations are not precisely the same as those allowed individuals. (See sections 23, 24, 102, 118, 121, 122, 203, 204, 207, 232, and 336, and sections 500 to 511, inclusive.)

SEC. 22. Gross income—(a) General definition. "Gross income" includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including personal service as an officer or employee of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever. In the case of Presidents of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office after June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income; and all Acts fixing the compensation of such Presidents and judges are hereby amended accordingly. In the case of judges of courts of the United States who took office on or before June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income.

§ 39.22 (a)-1 What included in gross income. (a) Gross income includes in general compensation for personal and professional services, business income, profits from sales of and dealings in property, interest, rent, dividends, and gains, profits, and income derived from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law. See sections 22 (b) and 116. In general, income is the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined, provided it be understood to include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets. Profits of citizens, residents, or domestic corporations derived from sales in foreign commerce must be included in their gross income; but special provisions are made for nonresident aliens and foreign corporations by sections 211 to 238, inclusive, and, in certain cases, by section 251, for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the United States. Income may be in the form of cash or of property.

(b) If property is transferred by a corporation to a shareholder, for an amount less than its fair market value, regardless of whether the transfer is in the form of a sale or exchange, such shareholder shall include in gross income the difference between the amount paid for the property and the amount of its fair market value to the extent that such difference is in the nature of a distribution of earnings or profits taxable as a dividend. In computing the gain or loss from the subsequent sale of such property its basis shall be the amount paid for the property, increased by the amount of such difference included in gross income. This paragraph does not apply, however, to the issuance by a corporation to its shareholders of the right to subscribe to its stock, as to which see § 39.22 (a)-8.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in section 130A, if property is transferred by an employer to an employee for an amount less than its fair market value, regardless of whether the transfer is in the form of a sale or exchange, the difference between the amount paid for the property and the amount of its fair market value is in the nature of compensation and shall be included in the gross income of the employee. In computing the gain or loss from the subsequent sale of such property its basis shall be the amount paid for the property, increased by the amount of such difference included in gross income. See section 130A and the regulations prescribed thereunder for special rules with respect to stock transferred from an employer to an employee pursuant to the timely exercise of a restricted stock option.

(d) The fact that a dividend is declared shortly after the sale of corporate stock and the sale price is influenced by the expectation of the payment of a dividend, does not make such dividend when paid taxable to the vendor as a dividend. The amount advanced by the vendee to the vendor in contemplation of the next dividend payment is an investment of capital and may not be claimed as a deduction from gross income.

(e) As to the amount of income tax paid for a bondholder by the obligor pursuant to a so-called tax-free covenant, see section 143 (a) (3). As to the determination of gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, see sections 111 to 113, inclusive. As to amounts received as loans from the Commodity Credit Corporation, see section 123. As to income upon a recovery in respect of war losses, see section 127 (c). As to insurance companies and foreign corporations, see sections 201 to 207, inclusive, and section 231.

§ 39.22 (a)-2 Compensation for personal services. (a) Commissions paid salesmen, compensation for services on the basis of a percentage of profits, commissions on insurance premiums, tips, pay of persons in the military or naval forces of the United States, retired pay of Federal and other officers, and pensions or retiring allowances paid by the United States (unless expressly exempt) or by private persons are income to the recipients; as are also marriage fees, baptismal offerings, sums paid for saying masses for the dead, and other contributions received by a clergyman, evangelist, or religious worker for services rendered. However, so-called pensions awarded by one to whom no services have been rendered are mere gifts or gratuities and are not taxable.

(b) The salaries of Federal officers and employees are subject to tax. Amounts deducted and withheld pursuant to the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930 (5 U. S. C., c. 14), from the basic salary, pay, or compensation of the employees in the civil service of the United States are includible in gross income for the year in which deducted and withheld. As used in this section, the term "Federal officers and employees" includes all judges of courts of the United States irrespective of when they took office. Compensation received for services rendered as an officer or employee (including a member of a legislative body and a judge or officer of a court) of a State or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, is to be included in gross income, regardless of the nature of the office or employment.

(c) The value of services need not be included in gross income when rendered directly and gratuitously to an organization described in section 23 (o) Where, however, pursuant to an agreement or understanding services are rendered to a person for the benefit of an organization described in section 23 (o) and an amount for such services is paid to such organization by the person to whom the services are rendered, the amount so paid constitutes income to the person performing the services even though at the time of the agreement or understanding the person making the payment acknowledges his liability to make payment to such organization.

§ 39.22 (a)-3 Compensation paid other than in cash. If services are paid for with something other than money, the fair market value of the thing taken in payment is the amount to be included as income. If the services were rendered at a stipulated price, in the absence of evidence to the contrary such price will be presumed to be the fair value of the compensation received. If a corporation transfers to its employees its own stock as compensation for services rendered by the employee, the amount of such compensation to be included in the gross income of the employee is the fair market value of the stock at the time of the transfer. If a person receives as compensation for services rendered a salary and in addition thereto living quarters or meals, the value to such person of the quarters and meals so furnished constitutes income subject to tax. If, however, living quarters or meals are furnished to employees for the convenience of the employer, the value thereof need not be computed and added to the compensation otherwise received by the employees. The value of quarters furnished to the commissioned officers, chief warrant officers, warrant officers, and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service, or amounts received by them as commutation of quarters, are to be excluded from gross income. See also section 22 (b) (6) Premiums paid by an employer on policies of group life insurance covering the lives of his employees, the beneficiaries of which are designated by the employees, are not income to the employees. See § 39.24 (a)-3.

§ 39.22 (a)-4 Compensation paid in notes. Notes or other evidences of indebtedness received in payment for services constitute income to the amount of their fair market value. A taxpayer receiving as compensation a note regarded as good for its face value at maturity, but not bearing interest, shall treat as income as of the time of receipt the fair discounted value of the note at such time. Thus, if it appears that such a note is or could be discounted on a 6 percent basis, the recipient shall include such note in his gross income to the amount of its face value less discount computed at the prevailing rate for such transactions. If the payments due on a note so accounted for are met as they become due, there should be included as income in respect of each such payment so much thereof as represents recovery for the discount originally deducted.

§ 39.22 (a)-5 Gross income from business. In the case of a manufacturing, merchandising, or mining business, "gross income" means the total sales, less the cost of goods sold, plus any income from investments and from incidental or outside operations or sources. In determining gross income, subtractions should not be made for depletion allowances based on discovery value or percentage of income, selling expenses, or losses, or for other items not ordinarily used in computing cost of goods sold. But see § 39.23 (m)-1 (e)

§ 39.22 (a)-6 State contracts. The profit from a contract with a State or political subdivision thereof must be included in gross income. If warrants are issued by a city, town, or other political subdivision of a State, and are accepted by the contractor in payment for public work done, the fair market value of such warrants should be returned as income. If for any reason the contractor upon conversion of the warrants into cash does not receive and cannot recover the full value of the warrants so returned, he may deduct from gross income for the year in which the warrants are converted into cash any loss sustained, and if he realizes more than the value of the warrants so returned he should include the excess in his gross income for the year in which realized.

§ 39.22 (a)-7 Gross income of farmers. (a) A farmer reporting on the basis of receipts and disbursements (in which no inventory to determine profits is used) shall include in his gross income for the taxable year (1) the amount of cash or the value of merchandise or other property received during the taxable year from the sale of livestock and produce which were raised during the taxable year or prior years, (2) the profits from the sale of any livestock or other items which were purchased, and (3) gross income from all other sources. The profit from the sale of livestock or other items which were purchased after February 28, 1913, is to be ascertained by deducting the cost from the sales price in the year in which the sale occurs, except that in the case of the sale of animals purchased as draft or work animals or solely for breeding or dairy purposes and not for resale, the profit shall be the amount of any excess of the sales price over the amount representing the difference between the cost and the depreciation theretofore allowed (but not less than the amount allowable) in respect of such property as a deduction in computing net income.

(b) In the case of a farmer reporting on the accrual basis (in which an inventory is used to determine profits), his gross profits are ascertained by adding to the inventory value of livestock and products on hand at the end of the year the amount received from the sale of livestock and products, and miscellaneous receipts for hire of teams, machinery, and the like, during the year, and deducting from this sum the inventory value of livestock and products on hand at the beginning of the year and the cost of livestock and products purchased during the year. In such cases all livestock raised or purchased for sale shall be included in the inventory at their proper valuation determined in accordance with the method authorized and adopted for the purpose. Also livestock acquired, for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes and not for sale, may be included in the inventory, instead of being treated as capital assets subject to depreciation, provided such practice is followed consistently by the taxpayer. In case of the sale of any livestock included in an inventory their cost must not be taken as an additional deduction in the return of income, as such deduction will be reflected in the inventory. See § 39.22 (c)-6.

(c) In the case of the sale of machinery, farm equipment, or any other property (except stock in trade of the taxpayer, or property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business) any excess of the proceeds of the sale over the adjusted basis of such property determined under section 113 and the regulations thereunder shall be included in the taxpayer's gross income for the taxable year in which such sale is made. If farm produce is exchanged for merchandise, groceries, or the like, the market value of the article received in exchange is to be included in gross income. Rents received in crop shares shall be returned as of the year in which the crop shares are reduced to money or the equivalent of money. Proceeds of insurance, such as hail and fire insurance on growing crops, should be included in gross income to the amount received in cash or its equivalent for the crop injured or destroyed. If a farmer is engaged in producing crops which take more than a year from the time of planting to the time of gathering and disposing, the income therefrom may, with the consent of the Commissioner (see § 39.41-2) be computed upon the crop basis; but in any such cases the entire cost of producing the crop, must be taken as a deduction for the year in which the gross income from the crop is realized.

(d) As used in this section, the term "farm" embraces the farm in the ordinarily accepted sense, and includes stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, and truck farms; also plantations, ranches, and all land used for farming operations. All individuals, partnerships, or corporations that cultivate, operate, or manage farms for gain or profit, either as owners or tenants, are designated as farmers. A person cultivating or operating a farm for recreation or pleasure, the result of which is a continual loss from year to year, is not regarded as a farmer.

(e) Form 1040F should be filled in and attached to his income tax return by every farmer who either keeps no records or only records of cash receipts and disbursements; its use is optional with other farmers. (See further §§ 39.23 (a)-11, 39.23 (e)-5, and 39.23 (l)-10.)

§ 39.22 (a)-8 Sale of stock and rights. (a) If shares of stock in a corporation are sold from lots purchased at different dates or at different prices and the identity of the lots cannot be determined, the stock sold shall be charged against the earliest purchases of such stock. In the determination of the earliest purchases of stock the rules prescribed in section 117 (h) (relating to the period for which property has been held) shall be applied. The excess of the amount realized on the sale over the cost or other basis of the stock will constitute gain. With respect to the basis for determining gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of stock acquired as a stock dividend or the stock with respect to which the stock dividend was acquired, see §§ 39.113 (a) (19)-1 and 39.113 (a) (19)-2. If common stock is received as a bonus with the purchase of preferred stock or bonds, the total purchase price shall be fairly apportioned between such common stock and the securities purchased for the purpose of determining the portion of the cost attributable to each class of stock or securities, but if that should be impracticable in any case, no profit on any subsequent sale of any part of the stock or securities will be realized until out of the proceeds of sales shall have been recovered the total cost.

(b) Although the issuance by a corporation to its shareholders of rights to subscribe to its stock may not under section 115 (f) give rise to taxable income, gain may be derived or loss sustained by the shareholder from the sale of such rights. In the case of stock in respect of which were acquired stock subscription rights which did not constitute income to the shareholders within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, and in the case of such rights, the following rules are to be applied:

(1) If the shareholder does not exercise, but sells, his rights to subscribe, the cost or other basis, properly adjusted, of the stock in respect of which the rights are acquired shall be apportioned between the rights and the stock in proportion to the respective values thereof at the time the rights are issued, and the basis for determining gain or loss from the sale of a right on one hand or a share of stock on the other will be the quotient of the cost or other basis, properly adjusted, assigned to the rights or the stock, divided, as the case may be, by the number of rights acquired or by the number of shares held.

Example. A taxpayer in 1947 purchased 500 shares of common stock at $125 a share, and in 1952, by reason of the ownership of such stock, acquired 500 rights entitling him to subscribe to 100 additional shares of such stock at $100 a share. Upon the issuance of the rights each of the shares of stock in respect of which the rights were acquired had a fair market value of $120, and the rights had a fair market value of $3 each. Instead of subscribing to the additional shares, he sold the rights at $4 each. The profit is computed at follows:

500 (shares) ×$125=$62,500, cost of old stock (stock in respect of which the rights were acquired).

500 (shares) ×$120=$60,000, market value of old stock.

500 (rights) ×$3 =$1,500, market value of rights.

$2,000 (proceeds of sale of rights) less $1,524.39 (cost of old stock apportioned to rights)=$475.61, profit.

For the purpose of determining the gain or loss from the subsequent sale of the stock in respect of which the rights were acquired, the adjusted cost of each share is $121.95 (that is, $60,975.61−500).

(2) If the shareholder exercises his rights to subscribe, the basis for determining gain or loss from a subsequent sale of a share of the stock in respect of which the rights were acquired shall be determined as in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph. The basis for determining gain or loss from a subsequent sale of a share of the stock obtained through exercising the rights, shall be determined by dividing the part of the cost or other basis, properly adjusted, of the old shares assigned to the rights, plus the subscription price of the new shares, by the number of new shares acquired.

Example. A taxpayer in 1949 purchased 500 shares of common stock at $125 a share, and in 1952, by reason of the ownership of such stock, acquired 500 rights entitling him to subscribe to 100 additional shares of such stock at $100 a share. Upon the issuance of the rights each of the shares of stock in respect of which the rights were acquired had a fair market value of $120, and the rights had a fair market value of $3 each. The taxpayer exercised his rights to subscribe to the additional shares and later sold one of such shares for $140. The profit is computed as follows:

$1,524.39 (cost of old stock apportioned to rights pursuant to the computation in the example under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph)+$10,000 (subscription price of additional shares)=$11,524.39, basis for determining gain or loss from sale of additional shares.

$11,524.39−100=$115.24, basis for determining gain or loss from sale of each share of additional stock.

The basis for determining the gain or loss from subsequent sale of the stock in respect of which the rights were acquired is $60,975.61—500, or $121.95 a share.

(3) If the stock in respect of which the rights are acquired was purchased at different times or at different prices and the identity of the lots cannot be determined, or if the stock in respect of which the rights are acquired was purchased at different times or at different prices and the stock rights acquired in respect of such stock cannot be identified as having been acquired in respect of any particular lot of such stock, the basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of the old shares, or the rights in cases in which the rights are sold, or from the sale or other disposition of the old or new shares in cases in which the rights are exercised, shall be ascertained in accordance with the principles laid down in § 39.113 (a) (12)-1.

(c) As to deductions for losses from sales or exchanges of stocks or bonds, including losses from sales or exchanges of rights to subscribe to stock, see § 39.23 (e)-1.

§ 39.22 (a)-9 Sale of patents and copyrights. A taxpayer disposing of patents or coprights by sale should determine the gain or loss arising therefrom by computing the difference between the selling price and the cost or other basis, with proper adjustment for depreciation, as provided in §§ 39.111-1, 39.113 (a) (14)-1, and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive.

§ 39.22(a)-10 Sale of good will. Gain or loss from a sale of good will results only when the business, or a part of it, to which the good will attaches is sold, in which case the gain or loss will be determined by comparing the sale price with the cost or other basis of the assets, including good will. (See §§ 39.111-1, 39.113 (a) (14)-1, and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive.) If specific payment was not made for good will, there can be no deductible loss with respect thereto, but gain may be realized from the sale of good will built up through expenditures which have been currently deducted. It is immaterial that good will may never have been carried on the books as an asset, but the burden of proof is on the taxpayer to establish the cost or other basis of the good will sold.

§ 39.22 (a)-11 Sale of real property in lots. If a tract of land is purchased with a view to dividing it into lots or parcels of ground to be sold as such, the cost or other basis shall be equitably apportioned to the several lots or parcels and made a matter of record on the books of the taxpayer, to the end that any gain derived from the sale of any such lots or parcels which constitutes taxable income may be returned as income for the year in which the sale is made. This rule contemplates that there will be gain or loss on every lot or parcel sold, and not that the capital in the entire tract may be recovered before any taxable income shall be returned. The sale of each lot or parcel will be treated as a separate transaction, and gain or loss computed accordingly.

§ 39.22 (a)-12 Annuities and insurance policies. Annuities paid by religious, charitable, and educational corporations under an annuity contract are, in general, subject to tax to the same extent as annuities from other sources paid under similar contracts. See section 22 (b) (2) and § 39.22 (b) (2)-2. An annuity charged upon devised land is taxable to the donee-annuitant to the extent it becomes payable out of the rents or other income of the land, whether or not it is a charge upon the income of the land. See section 22 (b) (3) and § 39.22 (b) (3)-1. As to certain cases in which an annuity charged upon devised land is taxable in full to a spouse upon divorce or legal separation, see section 22 (k). In such case the devisee is not required to return as gross income the amount of rent or other income paid to the annuitant, and he is not entitled to deduct from his gross income any sums paid to the annuitant. Amounts received as a return of premiums paid under life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts, and the so-called "dividend" of a mutual insurance company which may be credited against the current premium, are not subject to tax.

§ 39.22 (a)-13 Cancellation of indebtedness—(a) In general. The cancellation of indebtedness, in whole or in part, may result in the realization of income. If, for example, an individual performs services for a creditor, who in consideration thereof cancels the debt, income in the amount of the debt is realized by the debtor as compensation for his services. A taxpayer realizes income by the payment or purchase of his obligations at less than their face value. See § 39.22 (a)-17. In general, if a shareholder in a corporation which is indebted to him gratuitously forgives the debt, the transaction amounts to a contribution to the capital of the corporation to the extent of the principal of the debt. For exclusion from gross income of income attributable to discharge of indebtedness of certain corporations, see § 39.22 (b) (9)-1. For exclusion from gross income of income attributable to discharge of indebtedness of railroad corporations in certain judicial proceedings, see § 39.22 (b) (10)-1. For exclusion from gross income of income attributable to the forgiveness or discharge of a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, critical and strategic minerals or metals, see § 39.22 (b) (15)-1.

(b) Proceedings under Bankruptcy Act. Income is not realized by a taxpayer by virtue of the discharge, under section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 32), of his indebtedness as the result of an adjudication in bankruptcy, or by virtue of an agreement among his creditors not consummated under any provision of the Bankruptcy Act, if immediately thereafter the taxpayer's liabilities exceed the value of his assets. Furthermore, income is not realized in any case by a taxpayer in the case of a cancellation or reduction of his indebtedness under:

(1) a plan of corporate reorganization confirmed under Chapter X of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C., c. 10)

(2) an "arrangement" or a "real property arrangement" confirmed under Chapter XI or XII, respectively, of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C., c. 11, 12) or

If, however, such plan of corporate reorganization or arrangement or wage earner's plan referred to in subparagraphs (1) to (3) of this paragraph had for one of its principal purposes the avoidance of income tax, the cancellation or reduction of indebtedness, under such plan, confirmed under Chapter X, XI, XII, or XIII of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C., c. 10–13) may result in the realization of income.

(c) Cross references. For adjustment of basis of certain property in the case of cancellation or reduction of indebtedness resulting from a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act, see §§ 39.113 (b) (1)–2 and 39.113 (b) (1)–3.

§ 39.22 (a)–14 Creation of sinking fund by corporation. If a corporation, in order solely to secure the payment of its bonds or other indebtedness, places property in trust or sets aside certain amounts in a sinking fund under the control of a trustee who may be authorized to invest and reinvest such sums from time to time, the property or fund thus set aside by the corporation and held by the trustee is an asset of the corporation, and any gain arising therefrom is income of the corporation and shall be included as such in its gross income.

§ 39.22 (a)–15 Acquisition or disposition by a corporation of its own capital stock. (a) Whether the acquisition or disposition by a corporation of shares of its own capital stock gives rise to taxable gain or deductible loss depends upon the real nature of the transaction, which is to be ascertained from all its facts and circumstances. The receipt by a corporation of the subscription price of shares of its capital stock upon their original issuance gives rise to neither taxable gain nor deductible loss, whether the subscription or issue price be in excess of, or less than, the par or stated value of such stock.

(b) However, if a corporation deals in its own shares as it might in the shares of another corporation, the resulting gain or loss is to be computed in the same manner as though the corporation were dealing in the shares of another. So also if the corporation receives its own stock as consideration upon the sale of property by it, or in satisfaction of indebtedness to it, the gain or loss resulting is to be computed in the same manner as though the payment had been made in any other property. Any gain derived from such transactions is subject to tax, and any loss sustained is allowable as a deduction where permitted by the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

§ 39.22 (a)–16 Contributions to corporation by shareholders. If a corporation requires additional funds for conducting its business and obtains such needed money through voluntary pro rata payments by its shareholders, the amounts so received being credited to its surplus account or to a special capital account, such amounts will not be considered income, although there is no increase in the outstanding shares of stock of the corporation. The payments under such circumstances are in the nature of voluntary assessments upon, and represent an additional price paid for, the shares of stock held by the individual shareholders, and will be treated as an addition to and as a part of the operating capital of the company. (See §§ 39.22 (a)–13 and 39.24 (a)–2.)

§ 39.22 (a)–17 Sale and purchase by corporation of its bonds. (a) If bonds are issued by a corporation at their face value, the corporation realizes no gain or loss. If the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price in excess of the issuing price or face value, the excess of the purchase price over the issuing price or face value is a deductible expense for the taxable year. If, however, the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price less than the issuing price or face value, the excess of the issuing price or face value over the purchase price is gain or income for the taxable year.

(b) If, subsequent to February 28, 1913, bonds are issued by a corporation at a premium, the net amount of such premium is gain or income which should be prorated or amortized over the life of the bonds. If the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price in excess of the issuing price minus any amount of premium already returned as income, the excess of the purchase price over the issuing price minus any amount of premium already returned as income (or over the face value plus any amount of premium not yet returned as income) is a deductible expense for the taxable year. If, however, the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price less than the issuing price minus any amount of premium already returned as income, the excess of the issuing price, minus any amount of premium already returned as income (or of the face value plus any amount of premium not yet returned as income) over the purchase price is gain or income for the taxable year.

(c) If bonds are issued by a corporation at a discount, the net amount of such discount is deductible and should be prorated or amortized over the life of the bonds. If the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price in excess of the issuing price plus any amount of discount already deducted, the excess of the purchase price over the issuing price plus any amount of discount already deducted (or over the face value minus any amount of discount not yet deducted) is a deductible expense for the taxable year. If, however, the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price less than the issuing price plus any amount of discount already deducted, the excess of the issuing price, plus any amount of discount already deducted (or of the face value minus any amount of discount not yet deducted) over the purchase price is gain or income for the taxable year.

(d) If bonds were issued by a corporation prior to March 1, 1913, at a premium, the net amount of such premium was gain or income for the year in which the bonds were issued and should not be prorated or amortized over the life of the bonds. If the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price in excess of the face value of the bonds, the excess of the purchase price over the face value is a deductible expense for the taxable year. If, however, the corporation purchases any of such bonds at a price less than the face value, the excess of the face value over the purchase price is gain or income for the taxable year.

(e) For exclusion from gross income of income attributable to discharge of indebtedness of certain corporations, see § 39.22 (b) (9)–1. For exclusion from gross income of income attributable to discharge of indebtedness of railroad corporations in certain judicial proceedings, see § 39.22 (b) (10)–1.

§ 39.22(a)–18 Sale of capital assets by corporation. If property is acquired and later sold for an amount in excess of the cost or other basis, the gain on the sale is income. If, then, a corporation sells its capital assets in whole or in part, it shall include in its gross income for the year in which the sale was made the gain from such sale, computed as provided in sections 111 to 113, inclusive. If the purchaser takes over all the assets and assumes the liabilities, the amount so assumed is part of the selling price.

§ 39.22(a)–19 Income to lessor corporation from leased property. If a corporation has leased its property in consideration that the lessee shall pay in lieu of other rental an amount equivalent to a certain rate of dividend on the lessor's capital stock or the interest on the lessor's outstanding indebtedness, together with taxes, insurance, or other fixed charges, such payments shall be considered rental payments and shall be returned by the lessor corporation as income, notwithstanding the fact that the dividends and interest are paid by the lessee directly to the shareholders and bondholders of the lessor. The fact that a corporation has conveyed or leased its property and has parted with its management and control, or has ceased to engage in the business for which it was originally organized, will not relieve it from liability for the tax. While the payments made by the lessee directly to the bondholders or shareholders of the lessor are rentals as to both the lessee and lessor (rentals paid in one case and rentals received in the other), to the bondholders and the shareholders such amounts are interest and dividend payments received as from the lessor and as such shall be accounted for in their returns.

their acquisition. But see section 44(d) and § 39.44-5. (See also § 39.52-2.)

§ 39.22 (a)-21 Trust income taxable to the grantor as substantial owner thereof—(a) Introduction. Income of a trust is taxable to the grantor under section 22 (a) although not payable to the grantor himself and not to be applied in satisfaction of his legal obligations if he has retained a control of the trust so complete that he is still in practical effect the owner of its income. (Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U. S. 331.) In the absence of precise guides supplied by an appropriate regulation, the application of this principle to varying and diversified factual situations has led to considerable uncertainty and confusion. The provisions of this section accordingly resolve the present difficulties of application by defining and specifying those factors which demonstrate the retention by the grantor of such complete control of the trust that he is taxable on the income therefrom under section 22 (a) Such factors are set forth in general in paragraph (b) of this section and in detail in paragraphs (c) (d) and (e) of this section.

(b) In general. In conformity with the principle stated in paragraph (a) of this section, the income of a trust is attributable to the grantor (except where such income is taxable to the grantor's spouse or former spouse under section 22 (k) or 171) if:

(1) The corpus or the income therefrom will or may return after a relatively short term of years (see paragraph (c) of this section)

(2) The beneficial enjoyment of the corpus or the income therefrom is subject to a power of disposition (other than certain excepted powers) whether by revocation, alteration, or otherwise, exercisable by the grantor, or another person lacking a substantial adverse interest in such disposition, or both (see paragraph (d) of this section) or

(3) The corpus or the income therefrom is subject to administrative control, exercisable primarily for the benefit of the grantor (see paragraph (e) of this section)

(c) Reversionary interest after a relatively short term. (1) Income of a trust is taxable to the grantor where the grantor has a reversionary interest in the corpus or the income therefrom which will or may reasonably be expected to take effect in possession or enjoyment:

(i) Within 10 years commencing with the date of the transfer, or

(ii) Within 15 years commencing with the date of the transfer if the income is or may be payable to a beneficiary other than a donee described in section 23 (o) and if any one or more of the following powers of administration over the trust corpus or income are exercisable solely by the grantor, or spouse (living with the grantor, and not having a substantial adverse interest in the corpus or income of the trust) or both, whether or not exercisable as trustee: a power to vote or direct the voting of stock or other securities, a power to control the investment of the trust funds either by directing investments or reinvestments or by vetoing proposed investments or reinvestments, and a power to reacquire the trust corpus by substituting other property, whether or not of an equivalent value.

(2) Where the grantor's reversionary interest is to take effect in possession or enjoyment by reason of some event other than the expiration of a specific term of years, the trust income is nevertheless attributable to him if such event is the practical equivalent of the expiration of a period less than 10 or 15 years, as the case may be. For example, a grantor is taxable on the income of a trust if the corpus is to return to him or his estate on the graduation from college or prior death of his son, who is 18 years of age at the date of the transfer in trust. Trust income is, however, not attributable to the grantor where such reversionary interest is to take effect in possession or enjoyment at the death of the person or persons to whom the income is payable.

(3) In general, a reversionary interest may reasonably be expected to take effect in possession or enjoyment within 10 or 15 years, as the case may be, where the corpus or the income therefrom is to be reacquired if the grantor survives any stated contingency which is of an insubstantial character. Thus, the grantor is taxable where the trust income is to be paid to the grantor's wife for three years, and the corpus is then to be returned to the grantor if he survives such period, or to be paid to the grantor's wife is he is already deceased.

(4) Any postponement of the date specified for the reacquisition of possession or enjoyment of the reversionary interest is considered a new transfer in trust commencing with the date on which the postponement is effected and terminating with the date prescribed by the postponement. But income for any period shall not be taxable to the grantor by reason of the preceding sentence if such income would not be taxable to him in the absence of such postponement. This may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A places property in trust for the benefit of his son B. Upon the expiration of 12 years or the earlier death of B the property is to be paid over to A or his estate. Neither A nor his wife has any power of administration over the trust corpus or income. After the expiration of nine years A extends the term of the trust for an additional two years. A is considered to have made a new transfer in trust for a term of five years. He is not taxable on the income for the first three years of such term because he would not be taxable thereon if the term of the trust had not been extended. A is taxable, however, on the income for the remaining two years.

(d) Power to determine or control beneficial enjoyment of income or corpus. (1) Income of a trust is taxable to the grantor where, whatever the duration of the trust, the beneficial enjoyment of the corpus or the income therefrom is subject to a power of disposition (except as provided in section 167 (c) and as hereafter provided in subdivisions (i) to (iv), inclusive, of subparagraph (2) of this paragraph) whether by revocation, alteration, or otherwise, exercisable (in any capacity and regardless of whether such exercise is subject to a precedent giving of notice or is limited to some future date) by the grantor, or any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the beneficial enjoyment of the corpus or income, whichever is subject to the power, or both. The grantor is not taxable, however, if the power, whether exercisable with respect to corpus or income, may only affect the beneficial enjoyment of the income for a period commencing 10 years from the date of the transfer (or 15 years where any power of administration specified in paragraph (c) of this section is exercisable solely by the grantor, or spouse living with the grantor and not having a substantial adverse interest, or both, whether or not as trustee) For example, if a trust created on January 1, 1945, provides for the payment of income to the grantor's wife, and the grantor does not reserve any such administrative power but reserves the power to substitute other beneficiaries in lieu of his wife on or after January 1, 1955, the grantor is not taxable on the trust income for the period before January 1, 1955. But the income will be attributable to the grantor for the period beginning on such date unless the power is relinquished. If the beginning of such period is postponed, such postponement is considered a new transfer in trust commencing with the date on which the postponement is effected and terminating with the date prescribed by the postponement. But income for any period shall not be taxable to the grantor by reason of the preceding sentence if such income would not be taxable to him in the absence of such postponement. Where the income affected by the power is for a period beginning by reason of some event other than the expiration of a specific term of years, the grantor will be taxable if such event is the practical equivalent of the expiration of a period less than 10 or 15 years, as the case may be, in accordance with the criteria stated in paragraph (c) of this section.

(2) The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall not apply to any one or more of the following powers:

(i) To a power exercisable only by will, other than a power in the grantor to appoint the income of the trust where the income is accumulated for such disposition by the grantor, or may be so accumulated in the discretion of the grantor, or any person not having a substantial adverse interest in the disposition of such income, or both. For example, if a trust provides that the income is to be accumulated during the grantor's life and that the grantor may appoint the accumulated income by will, the grantor is taxable on the trust income;

(ii) To a power to determine the beneficial enjoyment of the corpus or the income therefrom if such corpus or income, as the case may be, is irrevocably payable for the purposes and in the manner specified in section 23 (o)

(iii) To a power if such power is exercisable by a trustee or trustees, none of whom is the grantor, spouse living with the grantor, or a related or subordinate trustee of the type and under all the conditions referred to in subdivision (iv) (b) of this subparagraph, and the exercise of the power is not subject to the approval or consent of any person other than such trustee or trustees, and if such power is one:

(a) To distribute, apportion, or accumulate income to or for a beneficiary or beneficiaries, or to, for, or within a class of beneficiaries,

(b) To pay out corpus to or for a beneficiary or beneficiaries or to or for a class of beneficiaries (whether or not income beneficiaries).

The powers herein described include all the powers described in subdivision (iv) of this subparagraph, since the latter powers are more limited than those herein described.

(iv) To a power,

(1) By the grantor or spouse living with the grantor, or both, whether or not as trustee; or

(2) (i) Solely by a trustee or trustees who include the father, mother, issue, brother, sister or employee of the grantor, or a subordinate employee of a corporation in which the grantor is an executive or in which the stock holdings of the grantor and the trust are significant from the viewpoint of voting control and (ii) in a manner which may affect the interests of beneficiaries which include the spouse or any child of the grantor (see subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph for a power exercisable by a related or subordinate trustee of the class hereinabove described where the exercise of the power does not affect the interest of the spouse or a child of the grantor or where the power is exercisable only with the concurrence of an unrelated and nonsubordinate trustee) or

(3) By any person or persons other than as trustee; or

(4) By any trustee or trustees, and the exercise of the power is subject to the approval or consent of any person or persons (other than such trustee or trustees) or of the grantor or spouse living with the grantor, or both, in the capacity of trustee—and

(b) If such power is one:

(1) To pay out corpus to or for a beneficiary or beneficiaries or to or for a class of beneficiaries (whether or not income beneficiaries) provided that the power is limited by a reasonably definite external standard. Such standard must be set forth in the trust instrument and must consist of needs and circumstances of the beneficiaries;

(2) To pay out corpus to or for any current income beneficiary, if the power is not limited by a reasonably definite external standard, provided that any such payment of corpus must be chargeable against the proportionate share of corpus held in trust for the payment of income to such beneficiary as if such corpus constitutes a separate trust;

(3) To distribute or apply income to or for any current income beneficiary or to accumulate such income for him, provided that any accumulated income must ultimately be payable to the beneficiary from whom distribution or application is withheld, to his estate or to his appointees (or persons named as alternate takers in default of appointment) provided that such beneficiary possesses a power of appointment which does not exclude from the class of possible appointees any person other than the beneficiary, his estate, his creditors or the creditors of his estate; or, if payable upon the termination of the trust or in conjunction with a distribution of corpus which distribution is augmented by such accumulated income, is ultimately payable to the current income beneficiaries in shares which have been irrevocably specified in the trust instrument. Accumulated income shall be considered so payable although it is provided that if any beneficiary does not survive a date of distribution which may reasonably be expected to occur within the beneficiary's lifetime, the share of such deceased beneficiary is to be paid to such persons as the beneficiary may appoint, or is to be paid to one or more designated alternate takers (other than the grantor or the grantor's estate) if the share of such alternate taker or the shares of such alternate takers have been irrevocably specified in the trust instrument;

(4) Exercisable only during (i) the existence of a legal disability of any current income beneficiary, or (ii) the period in which any income beneficiary shall be under the age of 21 years, to distribute or apply income to or for such beneficiary or to accumulate and add such income to corpus;

(5) In a case falling under (a) (2) of this subdivision, to distribute, apportion, or accumulate income to or for a beneficiary or beneficiaries, or to, for, or within a class of beneficiaries, whether or not the conditions in (b) (3) or (b) (4) of this subdivision are satisfied, provided that such power is limited by a reasonably definite external standard. For the requirements of such standard, see (b) (1) of this subdivision.

A power does not fall within the powers described in subdivisions (iii) and (iv) of this subparagraph if the trustee is enabled to add to the class of beneficiaries designated to receive the income or corpus, except insofar as provision may be made for after-born or after-adopted children. A mere power to allocate receipts as between corpus and income, even though expressed in broad language, is not deemed a power over beneficial enjoyment with respect to income or corpus.

(e) Administrative control. (1) Income of a trust, whatever its duration, is taxable to the grantor where, under the terms of the trust or the circumstances attendant on its operation, administrative control is exercisable primarily for the benfit of the grantor rather than the benficiaries of the trust. Administrative control is exercisable primarily for the benefit of the grantor where:

(i) A power exercisable by the grantor, or any person not having a substantial adverse interest in its exercise, or both, whether or not in the capacity of trustee, enables the grantor or any person to purchase, exchange or otherwise deal with or dispose of the corpus or the income therefrom for less than an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth; or

(ii) A power exercisable by the grantor, or any person not having a substantial adverse interest in its exercise, or both, whether or not in the capacity of trustee, enables the grantor to borrow the corpus or income, directly or indirectly, without adequate interest in any case, or without adequate security except where a trustee (other than the grantor or spouse living with the grantor) is authorized under a general lending power to make loans without security to the grantor and other persons and corporations upon the same terms and conditions; or

(iii) The grantor has directly or indirectly borrowed the corpus or income and has not completely repaid the loan, including any interest, before the beginning of the taxable year; or

(iv) Any one of the following powers of administration over the trust corpus or income is exercisable in a nonfiduciary capacity by the grantor, or any person not having a substantial adverse interest in its exercise, or both: a power to vote or direct the voting of stock or other securities, a power to control the investment of the trust funds either by directing investments or reinvestments or by vetoing proposed investments or reinvestments, and a power to reacquire the trust corpus by substituting other property of an equivalent value.

(2) If a power is exercisable by a person as trustee, it is presumed that the power is exercisable in a fiduciary capacity primarily in the interests of the beneficiaries. Such presumption may be rebutted only by clear and convincing proof that the power is not exercisable primarily in the interests of the beneficiaries. If a power is not exercisable by a person as trustee, the determination of whether such power is exercisable in a fiduciary or a nonfiduciary capacity depends on all the terms of the trust and the circumstances surrounding its creation and administration. For example, where the trust corpus consists of diversified stocks or securities of corporations the stock of which is not closely held and in which the holdings of the trust, either by themselves or in conjunction with the holdings of the grantor, are of no significance from the viewpoint of voting control, a power with respect to such stocks or securities held by a person who is not a trustee will be regarded as exercisable in a fiduciary capacity primarily in the interests of the beneficiaries. Where the trust corpus consists of stock or securities of a closely held corporation, such a power may or may not, depending upon all the facts, be considered exercisable in a fiduciary capacity.

(3) The mere fact that a power exercisable by the trustee is described in broad language does not indicate that the trustee is authorized to purchase, exchange, or otherwise deal with or dispose of the trust property or income for less than an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, or is authorized to lend the trust property or income to the grantor without adequate interest. On the other hand, such authority may be indicated by the actual administration of the trust.

(f) Limitations of section. Despite the limitations of this section, the grantor of a trust directing the payment or application of the income therefrom in satisfaction of the grantor's legal obligations shall continue to be taxable on the income. The grantor may also be taxable on the income of a trust on the ground that such income is attributable to him in a capacity unrelated to dominion and control over the trust as such as defined in paragraphs (c) (d) and (e) of this section. Thus, the provisions of this section do not affect the principles governing the taxability of future income to the assignor thereof whether or not the assignment is by means of a trust. Nor, for example, do the provisions of this section affect the applicability of section 22 (a) to the creator of a family partnership. See also sections 166 and 167.

§ 39.22 (a)-22 Trust income taxable to person other than grantor Where a person other than the grantor of property transferred in trust has a power exercisable solely by himself to vest the corpus or the income therefrom in himself, the income therefrom shall be included in computing the net income of such person. Even though such a power has been partially released or otherwise modified so that the person holding it can no longer vest the corpus or the income of the trust in himself, the income shall continue to be taxable to such person, if after such release or modification, he has retained such control of the trust as would, within the principles of § 39.22 (a)-21, subject a grantor of such a trust to tax on the income thereof. This section shall not apply with respect to a power over income, as originally granted or thereafter modified, if the grantor is otherwise taxable under § 39.22 (a)-21. See also § 39.166-1.

§ 39.22 (a)-23 Allocations by cooperative associations; tax treatment as to patrons—(a) In general. Amounts allocated on the basis of the business done with or for a patron by a cooperative association, whether or not entitled to tax treatment under section 101 (12) (B) in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice or in some other manner disclosing to the patron the dollar amount allocated shall be included in the computation of the gross income of such patron for the taxable year in which received to the extent prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section, regardless of whether the amount allocated is deemed, for the purpose of section 101 (12) (B) to be made at the close of a preceding taxable year of the cooperative association. The determination of the extent of taxability of such amounts is in no way dependent upon the method of accounting employed by the patron or upon the basis, cash, accrual or otherwise, upon which the net income of such patron is computed.

(b) Extent of taxability. (1) Amounts allocated to a patron on a patronage basis by a cooperative association with respect to products marketed for such patron, or with respect to supplies, equipment, or services the cost of which was deductible by the patron under section 23, shall be included in the computation of the gross income of such patron to the following extent:

(i) If the allocation is in cash, in the amount of cash received.

(ii) If the allocation is in merchandise, to the extent of the fair market value of such merchandise at the time of receipt by the patron.

(iii) If the allocation is in the form of capital stock, revolving fund certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, retain certificates or similar documents—

(a) To the extent of the face amount of such documents, if the allocation was made in fulfillment and satisfaction of a valid obligation of such association to the patron, which obligation was in existence prior to the receipt by the cooperative association of the amount allocated. For this purpose, it is immaterial whether such allocation was made within the time required by § 39.101 (12)-4 (a) (2)

(b) To the extent of the face amount of such documents, if the allocation was made with respect to patronage of a year preceding the taxable year from amounts retained as "reasonable reserves" under § 39.101-4 (a).

(c) To the extent of the cash or merchandise received in redemption or satisfaction of such documents (except those which are negotiable instruments) at the time of receipt of such cash or merchandise by the patron, where such allocation was not made in pursuance of the valid obligation referred to in subdivision (a) of this subparagraph, or from amounts retained as "reasonable reserves" under § 39.101 (12)-4 (a), referred to in subdivision (b) of this subparagraph. Where, in such case, the documents allocated are negotiable instruments, such documents shall be includible in the income of the patron to the extent of their fair market value at the time of their receipt.

(2) Amounts which are allocated on a patronage basis by a cooperative association with respect to supplies, equipment, or services the cost of which was not deductible by the patron under section 23, are not includible in the computation of the gross income of such patron; however, in the case of such amounts which are allocated with respect to capital assets (as defined in section 117 (a) (1)) or property used in the trade or business within the meaning of section 117 (j), shall, to the extent set forth in subdivisions (i), (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, be taken into account in determining under section 113 the cost or other basis of the assets or property purchased for the patron.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

§ 39.22 (b)-1 Exemptions; exclusions from gross income. Certain items of income specified in section 22 (b) are exempt from tax and may be excluded from gross income. These items, however, are exempt only to the extent and in the amount specified. No other items may be excluded from gross income except (a) those items of income which are, under the Constitution, not taxable by the Federal Government; (b) those items of income which are exempt from tax on income under the provisions of any act of Congress still in effect; and (c) the income excluded under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code (see particularly section 116) Since the tax is imposed on net income, the exemption referred to above is not to be confused with the deductions allowed by section 23 and other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code to be made from gross income in computing net income. As to other items not to be included in gross income, see sections 22 (k) 112, 119, 127 (c), 165, and 171 and Supplements G, H, I, and J (sections 201 to 252, inclusive) Section 607 (h) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, (46 U. S. C. 1177 (h)) reads as follows:

(h) The earnings of any contractor receiving an operating-differential subsidy under authority of this act, which are deposited in the contractor's reserve funds as provided in this section, except earnings withdrawn from the special reserve funds and paid into the contractor's general funds or distributed as dividends or bonuses as provided in paragraph 4 of subsection (c) of this section, shall be exempt from all Federal taxes. Earnings withdrawn from such special reserve fund shall be taxable as if earned during the year of withdrawal from such fund.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter:

(1) Life insurance, etc., amounts received:

(A) Under a life insurance contract, paid by reason of the death of the insured; or

(B) Under a contract of an employer providing for the payment of such amounts to the beneficiaries of an employee, paid by reason of the death of the employee; whether in a single sum or otherwise (but if such amounts are held by the insurer, or the employer, under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payments shall be included in gross income). The aggregate of the amounts excludible under subparagraph (B) by all the beneficiaries of the employee under all such contracts of any one employer may not exceed $5,000.

ance policies, paid by reason of the death of an insured to his estate or to a beneficiary (individual, partnership, or corporation) directly or in trust, are excluded from the gross income of the beneficiary, except in the case of certain transferees as provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-3 and in the case of a spouse to whom such payments are income under section 22 (k) It is immaterial whether the proceeds are received in a single sum or otherwise. If, however, such proceeds are held by the insurer under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payments must be included in gross income.

§ 39.22 (b) (1)-2 Death payment by employer· amounts paid by reason of the death of an employee. (a) (1) Amounts, not in excess of $5,000, paid by an employer in pursuance of an express contract to the estate or to a beneficiary (individual, partnership, trust, or corporation) of an employee, including a former employee, by reason of the employee's death shall be excluded from the gross income of such beneficiary. Where such death payments are made by more than one employer, including former employers of the decedent, a $5,000 exclusion applies separately to amounts receivable from each employer or former employer of the decedent. Where the aggregate payments by an employer, under an express contract, to the beneficiaries of the deceased employee exceed $5,000, the $5,000 exclusion shall be proportioned among the beneficiaries in the same proportion as the amount payable to or received by each under such contract bears to the total death payment the employer is contractually obligated to make. It is immaterial whether the proceeds are received in a single sum or otherwise. If, however, the proceeds are held by an employer under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payment must be included in gross income.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The M Corporation, the employer of A, who died on November 30, 1952, was liable under an express contract to pay a death payment of $15,000 to the beneficiaries of A, to be distributed as follows: $5,000 to the widow of A; $2,500 each to the parents of A; and $1,000 each to the five children of A. Each of the beneficiaries of A, except his widow, received such payment in a lump sum in January 1953. The widow of A elected to receive her share of the death payment in monthly installments of $100 beginning with the month of January 1953. All of the beneficiaries filed income tax returns on a calendar year basis. Apportioning the $5,000 exclusion in the same proportions as the total death payments the employer is contractually obligated to make, the widow of A shall exclude $1,666.67 of the monthly payments made to her (one-third of $5,000); each of A's parents shall exclude $833.33 of his or her death payment (one-sixth of $5,000)· and each of the five children shall exclude $333.33 (one-fifteenth of $5,000. In the case of the widow, $1,200 of her monthly payments shall be excluded from her income tax return for the year 1953 and the balance of $466.67 from her return for the year 1954.

Example (2). H died on July 1, 1953. At the time of his death he was employed by the A Corporation, which was liable under an express contract to pay a death payment of $2,500 to W, his widow. The B Corporation, a former employer of H, was also liable under an express contract to pay a death payment of $5,000 to W. The $7,500 receivable by W from the A and B Corporations is excludable from her gross income.

(b) Where a payment is made on account of the death of an employee by a welfare fund or a trust, including a pension trust exempt under section 165 (a) in pursuance of an agreement entered into by an employer of the deceased employee, the payment shall be considered to have been made by the employer for the purpose of this section. Any part of death payment which is attributable to the contributions of the employee shall be disregarded in determining the amount paid by an employer.

(c) An express contract requiring payment by an employer to the beneficiaries of a deceased employee by reason of the latter's death shall be deemed to exist only if (1) the employer and employee had entered into a written contract, not revoked before the employee's death, which required such payment or (2) the employer had an established plan (or program having the effect of a plan) making provision for such payments in the case of his employees generally, or for a class or classes of his employees. In the latter case, the contract will be deemed to exist between the employer and the members of the class or classes of employees to whom the plan applies, provided such plan had been communicated to such employees and had not been rescinded before the death of the employee to whom the particular death payment relates. Communication of an employer's plan or program to his employees may be made in different ways, such as by publicizing or distributing to the employees concerned notice of the resolution approved by the board of directors which created the plan, or by distributing to the employees a booklet containing an explanation of the plan and the rights of their beneficiaries thereunder.

(d) (1) The exclusion from gross income provided by this section is limited solely to those amounts paid by or on behalf of an employer which, by the terms of the contract with the employee or by the provisions of the plan providing for such payments, are specifically designated and intended as a death payment, paid only by reason of the death of the employee. The exclusion does not apply to amounts with respect to which the deceased employee possessed, immediately prior to his death, a nonforfeitable right to receive the amounts while living. See § 39.165-7. Amounts to which the exclusion is not applicable include, among others, such items as uncollected salary, payments for unused leave, and amounts paid by or on behalf of an employer to the survivor of a deceased retired employee as a survivor's annuity, as to which see § 39.22 (b) (2)-2.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, who was a participant under the B Company pension plan, retired on December 31, 1951. He had made no contributions to the plan. Upon his retirement he became entitled to a monthly income of $100 payable for life, 120 months certain. A died in October 1952 having received 10 monthly payments of $100 each. His widow became entitled to 110 monthly payments representing the balance of the payments certain. No exclusion from gross income may be made by A's widow under this section since the employee's right to the monthly payments was nonforfeitable from the date of his retirement.

Example (2). The trustee of the C Corporation profit-sharing plan was required under the provisions of the plan to pay to the beneficiary of B, an employee of the C Corporation who died on July 1, 1952, the benefit due on account of the death of B. The provisions of the profit-sharing plan gave each participating employee in case of voluntary termination of employment a 10 percent vested interest in the amount accumulated in his account for each year of participation in the plan but, in case of death, the entire credit to the participant's account would be paid to his beneficiary. At the time of the death of B he had been a participant for three years and the accumulation in his account was $8,000. After his death this amount was paid to his beneficiary. At the time of the death of B the amount distributable to him on account of voluntary termination of employment was $2,400 (30 percent of $8,000). The difference of $5,600 ($8,000 minus $2,400), payable to the beneficiary of B only by reason of the death of B, is considered an amount payable solely by reason of B's death. Accordingly, $5,000 may be excluded from the gross income of the beneficiary receiving such payment.

Example (3). The X Corporation instituted a retirement plan for its employees, the cost thereof being borne entirely by the corporation. The plan provided, in part, as follows: If, after 10 years of service, an employee left the employ of the corporation, either voluntarily or involuntarily, before retirement, a percentage of the reserve provided for the employee in the pension trust fund would be paid the employee as follows: 10 to 15 years of service, 25 percent; 15 to 20 years of service, 50 percent; 20 to 25 years of service, 75 percent; 25 years of service or over, 100 percent. The plan further provided that if an employee died before reaching retirement age, his beneficiary would receive a percentage of the reserve provided for the employee in the retirement fund, on the same basis as shown in the preceding sentence. Y, an employee of the X Corporation for 17 years, died while in the employ of the corporation before retirement. His beneficiary received $7,500, an amount equal to 50 percent of the reserve provided for Y's retirement. No exclusion from gross income may be made by the beneficiary with respect to such payment since Y, prior to his death, had a nonforfeitable right to the payment.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(2) Annuities, etc.—(A) In general. Amounts received (other than amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured and interest payments on such amounts and other than amounts received as annuities) under a life insurance or endowment contract, but if such amounts (when added to amounts received before the taxable year under such contract) exceed the aggregate premiums or consideration paid (whether or not paid during the taxable year) then the excess shall be included in gross income. Amounts received as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract shall be included in gross income; except that there shall be excluded from gross income the excess of the amount received in the taxable year over an amount equal to 3 per centum of the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity (whether or not paid during such year), until the aggregate amount excluded from gross income under this chapter or prior income tax laws in respect of such annuity equals the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity. In the case of a transfer for a valuable consideration, by assignment or otherwise, of a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract, or any interest therein, only the actual value of such consideration and the amount of the premiums and other sums subsequently paid by the transferee shall be exempt from taxation under paragraph (1) or this paragraph. The preceding sentence shall not apply in the case of such a transfer if such contract or interest therein has a basis for determining gain or loss in the hands of a transferee determined in whole or in part by reference to such basis of such contract or interest therein in the hands of the transferor. This subparagraph and paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to so much of a payment under a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract, or any interest therein, as, under section 22 (k), is includible in gross income;

(B) Employees' annuities. If an annuity contract is purchased by an employer for an employee under a plan with respect to which the employer's contribution is deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (B), or if an annuity contract is purchased for an employee by an employer exempt under section 101 (6), the employee shall include in his income the amounts received under such contract for the year received except that if the employee paid any of the consideration for the annuity, the annuity shall be included in his income as provided in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the consideration for such annuity being considered the amount contributed by the employee. In all other cases, if the employee's rights under the contract are nonforfeitable except for failure to pay future premiums, the amount contributed by the employer for such annuity contract on or after such rights become nonforfeitable shall be included in the income of the employee in the year in which the amount is contributed, which amount together with any amounts contributed by the employee shall constitute the consideration paid for the annuity contract in determining the amount of the annuity required to be included in the income of the employee under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

(C) Joint and survivor annuities. For purposes of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of this paragraph, where amounts are received by a surviving annuitant under a joint and survivor's annuity contract and the basis of such survivor annuitant's interest is determined under section 113 (a) (5) the consideration paid for such survivor's annuity shall be considered to be an amount equal to such basis.

§ 39.22 (b) (2)-1 Life insurance; endowment contracts; amounts paid other than by reason of the death of the insured. Amounts received under a life insurance or endowment policy (other than amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured, interest payments on such amounts, amounts received as annuities, and amounts of periodic payments included in gross income under section 22 (k)) are not taxable until the aggregate of the amounts so received (when added to the amounts received before the taxable year under such policy) exceeds the aggregate premiums or consideration paid, whether or not paid during the taxable year. For the purposes of this rule, the term "amounts received before the taxable year under such policy" shall not be construed to include so much of any payments as were included in gross income as amounts received as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract for taxable years ending before but not on December 31, 1948. Appropriate adjustment will be required with respect to such payments, or portion thereof, so included as form the basis of a pending or successful claim or suit for refund. For definition of "annuity" see § 39.22 (b) (2)-2.

§ 39.22 (b) (2)-2 Annuities. (a) (1) As used in section 22 (b) (2) (A), "amounts received as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract" means amounts (based on a computation with reference to life expectancy and mortality tables and payable over a period longer than one year) received in periodical installments, whether annually, semiannually quarterly, monthly, or otherwise. For adjustment in the case of amounts received in periodical installments for a fixed period and included in gross income for taxable years ending before but not on December 31, 1948, as an annuity under an annuity or endowment contract, see § 39.22 (b) (2)-1. Such portion of each installment payment of an annuity (where the whole payment is not required to be included in income under section 22 (k)) shall be included in gross income as is not in excess of 3 percent of the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity, whether or not paid during the taxable year, divided by 12 and multiplied by the number of months in respect of which the installment is paid. As soon as the aggregate of the amounts received and excluded from gross income equals the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity, the entire amount received thereafter in each taxable year must be included in gross income. Annuities paid to retired employees pursuant to the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended (5 U. S. C., c. 14) are subject to section 22 (b) (2), the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuities being the total of the amounts previously withheld from the compensation of the employees.

(2) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A bought in 1949, for $50,000 consideration, a life annuity, payable in annual installments of $5,000. For the calendar year 1952, he would be required to include in gross income $1,500 of the $5,000 received during that year (3 percent of $50,000), $3,500 being exempt. If A should live long enough to receive exempt amounts totaling $50,000, then all amounts he receives thereafter under the annuity contract would be included in gross income.

Example (2). A bought an annuity on October 1, 1952, paying $100,000 as consideration therefor. The annuity amounts to $7,824 a year, payable in semiannual installments of $3,912, and on December 1, 1952, A received $1,304, the first payment under the contract being for a 2-month period. A shall include in his gross income for the calendar year 1952 the sum of $500, being 3 percent of $100,000 (the consideration paid) divided by 12 and multiplied by 2 (the number of months in respect of which the installment was paid).

Example (3). A bought an increasing annuity on August 1, 1952, paying $40,000 as consideration therefor. The annuity amounts to $1,000 a year for the first year, $2,000 a year for the second year, and $3,000 a year thereafter, payable in quarterly installments. A received the first quarterly installment on November 1, 1952, amounting to $250. A shall include in his gross income for the calendar year 1952 the sum of $250, being such portion of the installment as is not in excess of 3 percent of $40,000 (the consideration paid) divided by 12 and multiplied by 3 (the number of months in respect of which the installment was paid).

(b) (1) If, in the case of amounts received under a joint and survivor's annuity, the value of any part of the survivor's interest is required to be included in the gross estate of a decedent annuitant dying after December 31, 1950, under the provisions of section 811 (whether or not such estate exceeds $60,000 so as to require the filing of an estate-tax return under section 937, the basis of such interest to the survivor annuitant is considered to be the value of the life annuity to the survivor at the time of the decedent's death as determined under section 113 (a) (5) Such valuation shall be substituted, effective upon the date of death of the first annuitant, in lieu of the consideration previously used, if any, for purposes of determining the taxable amounts of the annuity payments received after such date of death. Likewise, the amount of consideration determined in accordance with this rule shall, with respect to survivor annuity payments made after the death of the first annuitant, be substituted for the amount of consideration, if any, that may be recovered without inclusion in gross income.

(2) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). H and W on August 1, 1947, each contributed $30,000 toward the purchase of a joint and survivor's annuity of $12,000 a year, payable in monthly installments. On August 15, 1952, H died. There is includible in his estate under the provisions of section 811 the amount of $30,000 attributable to the decedant's interest in the annuity contract. The value of the annuity payments to be received by W subsequent to H's death (i. e., the cost of providing an annuity of $12,000 a year during the remaining life of W) is determined, under the provisions of section 113 (a) (5), to be $60,000. This amount is deemed to be the consideration paid by W, effective August 15, 1952, for the annuity payments to be received by her subsequent to that date. Therefore, of the monthly payments made to W following H's death, W shall include the sum of $150, being such portion of the installment as is not in excess of 3 percent of $60,000 (the consideration deemed to have been paid) divided by 12. The full amount of the annuity will not become includible in gross income until $60,000 shall have been recovered.

Example (2). H, an employee of the M Corporation, retired on January 1, 1952. Under the company's retirement plan H was entitled, upon retirement, to elect to receive a life annuity of $2,400 annually or a reduced annuity with a provision that his wife would receive $1,200 annually during her lifetime if he should predecease her. The M Corporation inaugurated its retirement plan in 1949 and paid the entire cost of all annuities. H elected to take the reduced annuity. He died on November 1, 1952, and thereafter his wife W received $1,200 annually in equal monthly installments. By reason of H's election to accept a reduced annuity with survivor payments for his widow, there is includible in his estate under the provisions of section 811 the amount of $12,000. This is the same valuation, as determined under section 113 (a) (5), placed on the annuity payments receivable by W subsequent to H's death. Therefore, W shall include in her gross income with respect to each monthly annuity payment received subsequent to November 1, 1952, the sum of $30, being such portion of the installment as is not in excess of 3 percent of $12,000 (the consideration deemed to have been paid) divided by 12. The full amount of the annuity payments will not become includible in gross income until $12,000 of the annuity payments received after H's death shall have been excluded from income. It is immaterial that H had no cost basis with respect to his annuity and had to include the full amount thereof in his gross income.

§ 39.22 (b) (2)-3 Transfers of life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts. (a) In the case of a transfer for a valuable consideration, by assignment or otherwise, of a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract, or any interest therein, to which section 22 (b) (1) or (2) (A) applies, only the actual value of the consideration given for such transfer and the amount of the premiums and other sums subsequently paid by the transferee shall be excluded from gross income, in lieu of the amounts provided in §§ 39.22 (b) (1)-1, 39.22 (b) (2)-1, or 39.22 (b) (2)-2 to be excluded with respect to payments under such life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract. In the event of such a transfer (other than to the insured) the rule stated in the preceding sentence transforms the exemption applicable under section 22 (b) (1) or (2) (A) from that determined as in the case of the insured or person to whom the policy was originally issued to an exemption determined as in the case of a transferee for a valuable consideration. The exemption applicable in the case of a transferee without valuable consideration or a donee beneficiary is determined in accordance with the rule applicable in the case of its last transferor or last owner of the policy. For the purpose of determining gross income in the case of a transfer of a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract or any interest therein, if such contract or interest therein has a basis for determining gain or loss in the hands of the transferee determined, in whole or in part, by reference to such basis of such contract or interest therein in the hands of the transferor, the rule stated in the first sentence of this section shall not apply as to such transfer, and the rule applicable under section 22 (b) (1) or (2) (A) to a transferee without valuable consideration (as stated in the preceding sentence) shall apply as if the transfer from such transferor to such transferee were without valuable consideration. Thus, where a corporation acquires a life insurance policy from a predecessor corporation in a tax-free reorganization, if the proceeds received under the policy by reason of the death of the insured would be exempt from taxation in the hands of the transferor, such proceeds received by reason of the death of the insured will be exempt from taxation in the hands of the transferee, because the basis is determined with reference to the basis in the hands of the transferor.

(b) The following examples illustrate the application of the provisions of paragraph (a)

Example (1). The A Corporation procures, for a single premium of $500, an insurance policy in the face amount of $1,000 upon the life of X, one of its officers, naming the A Corporation as beneficiary. If X dies during the time the policy is held by the corporation, the proceeds of the policy paid by reason of the death of X will be tax-free to the corporation. If the A Corporation transfers the policy to the B Corporation for a valuable consideration (for example, $600 in cash, and not pursuant to a tax-free exchange or reorganization), the proceeds paid to the B Corporation by reason of the death of X would be taxable to the extent of $400 ($1,000 minus $600). Similarly, if, before the death of X, the B Corporation had transferred the policy to the C Corporation in a tax-free reorganization, the proceeds in the hands of the C Corporation would be taxable to the extent of $400, since $600, the consideration paid by Corporation B for the transfer, would be exempt.

Example (2). In 1932, Y took out an annual premium 20-year endowment policy having a maturity value of $20,000. After payment of premiums totaling $5,500, Y assigned the policy to the M Corporation for a consideration of $4,000. If the M Corporation held the policy and paid the premiums thereon, the $20,000 received upon maturity of the policy (while A is still alive) would be includible in the income of the M Corporation, except to the extent of the $4,000 consideration paid by it and the premiums which it paid after the transfer. If, prior to the maturity of the policy, the M Corporation transferred its assets, including the policy, to the N Corporation in a tax-free exchange for the stock of the N Corporation and the N Corporation held the policy until maturity (1952), paying all premiums due thereon after such transfer, the $20,000 received by the N Corporation would be includible in its gross income, except to the extent of the $4,000 consideration paid by the M Corporation for the transfer of the policy from Y and the aggregate premiums paid by the M and N Corporations upon the policy.

§ 39.22 (b) (2)-4 Annuity, etc., payments in discharge of alimony obligation. The full amount of any periodic payment received under a life insurance, endowment, or annuity contract by a spouse or former spouse is required to be included in her gross income if certain conditions specified in section 22 (k) exist. See § 39.22 (k)-1. Paragraphs 1 and 2 (A) of section 22 (b) do not apply (except the last sentence of section 22 (b) (2) (A)) with respect to so much of a payment as under section 22 (k) is includible in gross income. For example, upon the divorce of a husband and wife, the decree may require the husband to provide the wife with an annuity of $2,000 for her life. The wife, being desirous of a greater assured income, may pay with the husband to an insurance company a consideration which, when added to the amount paid by the husband, purchases an annuity paying $3,000. For each taxable year, $2,000 is to be included in her income under section 22 (k) and such portion of $1,000 is to be included in her income as is required under § 39.22 (b) (2)-2 on the basis of the consideration paid by her to the company.

§ 39.22 (b) (2)-5 Employees' annuities. (a) If an employer purchases an annuity contract on behalf of an employee, including a retired or former employee, under a plan with respect to which his contribution is deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (B) (see § 39.23 (p)-9) the employee is not required to include such amount in his income in the taxable year during which such contribution is made. The amount received or made available to such employee under such annuity contract shall be included in gross income of the employee in the taxable year in which received or made available, except that if the employee contributed any of the consideration for the annuity, the annuity shall be included in his income as provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-2, the consideration for the annuity being considered the amount contributed by the employee. Except as provided in section 165 (d), if an employer purchases an annuity contract which is not under a plan with respect to which his contribution is deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (B), the amount of such contribution shall be included in the income of the employee in the taxable year during which such contribution is made, if the employee's rights under the annuity contract are nonforfeitable, except for failure to pay future premiums; at the time the contribution is made. In such case, the total amount of such contributions required to be included in the income of the employee together with any amounts contributed by him will constitute the consideration paid for the annuity contract in determining the amount of the annuity required to be included in the income of the employee under section 22 (b) (2) (A) If the employee's rights under the annuity contract in such a case were forfeitable at the time the employer's contribution was made for the annuity contract, even though they become nonforfeitable later, the amount of such contribution is not required to be included in the income of the employee, but any amount received or made available to the employee under the annuity contract shall be includible in the gross income of the employee in the taxable year in which received or made available, except that if the employee contributed any of the consideration for the annuity, the annuity shall be included in his income to the extent provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-2. The fact that an employee may not live a sufficient length of time to enjoy any benefits under the annuity contract, or that no payments will be made under any circumstances to his estate or other beneficiary, will not make the annuity contract forfeitable.

(b) If an employer has purchased annuity contracts and transferred the same to a trust or if an employer has made contributions to a trust for the purpose of providing annuity contracts for his employees as provided in section 165 (d) (see § 39.165-7) the amount so paid or contributed is not required to be included in the income of the employee, but any amount received or made available to the employee under the annuity contract shall be includible in the gross income of the employee in the taxable year in which received or made available. In such case the amount paid or contributed by the employer shall not constitute consideration paid by the employee for such annuity contract in determining the amount of annuity payments required to be included in his gross income under section 22 (b) (2) unless the employee has paid income tax for any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1949, with respect to such payment or contribution by the employer for such year and such tax is not credited or refunded to the employee. In the event such tax has been paid and not credited or refunded the amount paid or contributed by the employer for such year shall constitute consideration paid by the employee for the annuity contract in determining the amount of the annuity required to be included in the income of the employee under section 22 (b) (2) (A) For example, an employer in 1945 purchased and transferred to a trust meeting the requirements of section 165 (d) a life annuity contract (payable in annual installments of $5,000) for an employee at a cost to the employer of $50,000. If the employee included the $50,000 in his gross income for 1945 and paid a tax with respect thereto and if it be assumed that such year is closed so that the amount so paid cannot be credited or refunded, only $1,500 of each $5,000 yearly annuity payment to the employee will be required to be included in his gross income (3 percent of $50,000) $3,500 being exempt. If the employee should live long enough to receive exempt amounts totaling $50,000, then all amounts he receives thereafter under the annuity contract would be included in gross income. If, in the foregoing case, the employee's taxable year 1945 was not closed and the employee secured a refund or credit of the tax previously paid with respect to the $50,000 premium payment made by his employer, then all amounts received under the annuity contract will be required to be included in his gross income.

(c) Except as provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-2 with respect to joint and survivor annuity payments received subsequent to the death of an annuitant who died after December 31, 1950, if upon the death of a retired employee, the widow or other beneficiary of such retired employee is paid, in accordance with the terms of the annuity contract relating to the deceased employee, an annuity or other death benefit, the amounts received by or made available to her shall be included in her income to the extent that they would have been included in the income of the deceased employee had he lived and received such payments. See also section 126 (a) As to taxation of life insurance benefits in connection with annuity contracts, see § 39.165-6.

(d) If the employer is an organization which is exempt under section 101 (6), the employee is not required to include in his income the amount paid by the employer for an annuity contract, regardless of whether the annuity plan satisfies the requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (4) (5) and (6) and whether the employee's rights are nonforfeitable.

(e) As to taxation of annuities purchased by a trustee under a pension or profit-sharing trust, see §§ 39.165-6 and 39.165-7.

(f) As to inclusion of full-time life insurance salesmen within the class of persons considered to be employees, see section 3797 (a) (20).

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(3) Gifts, bequests, devises, and inheritances. The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance. There shall not be excluded from gross income under this paragraph, the income from such property, or, in case the gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance is of income from property, the amount of such income. For the purposes of this paragraph, if, under the terms of the gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance, payment, crediting, or distribution thereof is to be made at intervals, to the extent that it is paid or credited or to be distributed out of income from property, it shall be considered a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance of income from property;

§ 39.22 (b) (3)-1 Gifts and bequests. (a) Property received as a gift, or received under a will or under statutes of descent and distribution, is not includible in gross income, although the income from such property is includible in gross income. If the gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance is of income from property, it is not to be excluded from gross income. An amount of principal paid under a marriage settlement is a gift. As to alimony or an allowance paid upon divorce or legal separation, see § 39.22 (k)-1.

(b) Section 22 (b) (3) provides a special rule for the treatment of gifts, bequests, devises, or inheritances which by their terms are to be paid, credited, or to be distributed at intervals. To the extent any such gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance is paid, credited, or to be distributed out of income from property, it shall be considered a gift, bequest, devise, or inheritance of income from property. Section 22 (b) (3) is designed to provide the same treatment for amounts of income from property, which income is paid, credited, or to be distributed under a gift or bequest, whether the gift or bequest is in terms of a right to payments at intervals (regardless of income) or is in terms of a right to income. To the extent the amounts in either case are paid, credited, or to be distributed at intervals out of income they are not to be excluded under section 22 (b) (3) from the taxpayer's gross income. As to the extent such amounts are paid, credited, or to be distributed out of income from property in cases in which the payment, crediting, or distribution thereof is to be made by an estate or trust, see section 162 and the regulations thereunder.

(c) The operation of the last sentence of section 22 (b) (3) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, by his will, gave his wife an annuity of $50,000 to be paid in advance in quarterly payments. By another clause of his will, A bequeathed the residue of his property in trust with directions to the trustees to collect the income from the property and to pay the annuity of $50,000 out of such income (after payment of expenses), or out of corpus to the extent such income is insufficient. Under the provisions of section 22 (b) (3), the $50,000 will be included in the wife's income each year and, under the provisions of section 162 (b), will be deducted from the income of the trust to the extent of the income of the trust for its taxable year which is considered under section 162 (d) to be distributed in satisfaction of the annuity.

(d) The last sentence of section 22 (b) (3), however, applies only to such amounts as are to be paid or credited at intervals. Thus, a bequest of money or property (other than income) intended to be paid in a lump sum or at one time is not to be included in the legatee's gross income, even though the executor may for reasons of convenience or necessity arrange to pay such amount in installments or pay it out of funds traceable as the income of property. However, payments at intervals do not need to be at regular intervals to come within the rule stated in the last sentence of section 22 (b) (3). Thus, in case of a direction in a testamentary trust to pay $5,000 a year to John for his life but to pay the $5,000 a year to Mary instead of John for any year in which Mary becomes 18, graduates from college, or marries, the $5,000 a year is income to John and Mary, respectively, in the years in which each is to receive it, to the extent it is paid or credited in such years out of income from the trust property.

(e) Section 22 (b) (3) is not intended to tax a donee upon the same income which is taxed to the grantor of a trust or assignor of earnings or other income under section 22 (a), section 166, or section 167.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(4) Tax-free interest. Interest upon (A) the obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia; or (B) obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States; or (C) the obligations of the United States or its possessions. Every person owning any of the obligations enumerated in clause (A), (B), or (C) shall, when so required by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, submit in the return required by this chapter a statement showing the number and amount of such obligations owned by him and the income received therefrom, in such form and with such information as such regulations may prescribe. In the case of obligations of the United States issued after September 1, 1917 (other than postal savings certificates of deposit to the extent they represent deposits made before March 1, 1941) and in the case of obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, the interest shall be exempt only if and to the extent provided in the respective Acts authorizing the issue thereof as amended and supplemented, and shall be excluded from gross income only if and to the extent it is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter;

SEC. 4. [Public Debt Act of 1941.]

(a) Interest upon, and gain from the sale or other disposition of, obligations issued on or after the effective date of this Act by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof shall not have any exemption, as such, and loss from the sale or other disposition of such obligations shall not have any special treatment, as such, under Federal tax Acts now or hereafter enacted; except that any such obligations which the United States Maritime Commission or the Federal Housing Administration has, prior to the effective date of this Act, contracted to issue at a future date, shall when issued bear such tax-exemption privileges as were, at the time of such contract, provided in the law authorizing their issuance. For the purposes of this subsection a Territory, a possession of the United States, and the District of Columbia, and any political subdivision thereof, and any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, shall not be considered as an agency or instrumentality of the United States.

(b) The provisions of this section shall, with respect to such obligations, be considered as amendatory of and supplementary to the respective Acts or parts of Acts authorizing the issuance of such obligations, as amended and supplemented.

SEC. 5. This Act, except sections 2 (b) and (c), shall become effective on the first day of the month following the date of its enactment [February 19, 1941].

SEC. 6. [PUBLIC DEBT ACT OF 1942.]

Section 4 of the Public Debt Act of 1941 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 4 (a) Interest upon obligations, and dividends, earnings, or other income from shares, certificates, stock, or other evidences of ownership, and gain from the sale or other disposition of such obligations and evidences of ownership issued on or after the effective date of the Public Debt Act of 1942 [March 28, 1942] by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof shall not have any exemption, as such, and loss from the sale or other disposition of such obligations or evidences of ownership shall not have any special treatment, as such, under Federal tax Acts now or hereafter enacted; except that any such obligations which the United States Maritime Commission or the Federal Housing Administration had, prior to March 1, 1941, contracted to issue at a future date, shall when issued bear such tax-exemption privileges as were, at the time of such contract, provided in the law authorizing their issuance. For the purposes of this subsection a Territory, a possession of the United States, and the District of Columbia, and any political subdivision thereof, and any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, shall not be considered as an agency or instrumentality of the United States. * * *"

SEC. 11. [Organic Act of Guam, 1950.]

* * * All bonds issued by the government of Guam or by its authority shall be exempt, as to principal and interest, from taxation by the Government of the United States or by the government of Guam, or by any State or Territory or any political subdivision thereof, or by the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. [Puerto Rican Federal Relations Act.]

* * * and all bonds issued by the Government of Puerto Rico, or by its authority, shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of the United States, or by the Government of Puerto Rico or of any political or municipal subdivision thereof, or by any State, Territory, or possession, or by any county, municipality, or other municipal subdivision of any State, Territory, or possession of the United States, or by the District of Columbia. * * *

[Sec. 3 as amended by sec. 2, Pub. Law 301 (64th Cong.); Pub. Law 391 (75th Cong.).]

SEC. 1. [Pub. Law 418 (81st Cong.).] * * * All bonds issued by the government of the Virgin Islands or any municipality thereof, including specifically interest thereon, shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of the United States, or by the government of the Virgin Islands or any political subdivision thereof, or by any State, Territory, or possession or by any political subdivision of any State, Territory, or possession, or by the District of Columbia: * * *

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-1 Interest upon state obligations. Interest upon the obligations of a State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia is exempt from the income tax. Obligations issued by or on behalf of the State or Territory or a duly organized political subdivision acting by constituted authorities empowered to issue such obligations, are the obligations of a State or Territory or a political subdivision thereof. The term "political subdivision," within the meaning of the exemption, denotes any division of the State or Territory which is a municipal corporation, or to which has been delegated the right to exercise part of the sovereign power of the State or Territory. As thus defined, a political subdivision of a State or Territory may or may not, for the purpose of exemption, include special assessment districts so created, such as road, water, sewer, gas, light, reclamation, drainage, irrigation, levee, school, harbor, port improvement, and similar districts and divisions of a State or Territory.

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-2 Dividends from shares and stock of Federal agencies or instrumentalities—(a) Issued before March 28, 1942. (1) Section 26 of the Federal Farm Loan Act of July 17, 1916 (12 U. S. C. 931) provides that Federal land banks and national farm-loan associations, including the capital and reserve or surplus therein and the income derived therefrom, shall be exempt from taxation, except taxes upon real estate. Section 7 of the Federal Reserve Act of December 23, 1913 (12 U. S. C. 531), provides that Federal reserve banks, including the capital stock and surplus therein and the income derived therefrom, shall be exempt from taxation, except taxes upon real estate. Section 13 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U. S. C. 1433) provides that the Federal Home Loan Bank including its franchise, its capital, reserves, and surplus, its advances, and its income shall be exempt from all taxation, except taxes upon real estate. Section 5 (h) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933 (12 U. S. C. 1464 (h)) provides that shares of Federal savings and loan associations shall, both as to their value and the income therefrom, be exempt from all taxation (except surtaxes, estate, inheritance, and gift taxes) imposed by the United States. Under the above-mentioned provisions, income consisting of dividends on stock of Federal land banks, national farm-loan associations, Federal home loan banks, and Federal reserve banks is not, in the case of stock issued before March 28, 1942, subject to the income tax; and income consisting of dividends on share accounts of Federal savings and loan associations is not, in the case of shares issued before March 28, 1942, subject to the normal tax on income. For taxability of such income in the case of such stock or shares issued on or after March 28, 1942, see section 6 of the Public Debt Act of 1942 (31 U. S. C. 742a) and paragraph (b) of this section. For the time at which a stock or share is issued within the meaning of this section, see paragraph (b) of this section.

(2) Regardless of the exemption from income tax of dividends paid on the stock of Federal reserve banks, dividends paid by member banks are treated like dividends of ordinary corporations.

(3) Dividends on the stock of the central bank for cooperatives, the production credit corporations, production credit associations, and banks for cooperatives, organized under the provisions of the Farm Credit Act of 1933, constitute income to the recipients, subject to both the normal tax and surtax (see section 63 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933 (12 U. S. C. 1138c))

(b) Issued on or after March 28, 1942. (1) By virtue of the provisions of section 6 of the Public Debt Act of 1942, the tax exemption provisions set forth in paragraph (a) of this section with respect to income consisting of dividends on stock of the Federal land banks, national farm-loan associations, and Federal reserve banks, or on share accounts of Federal savings and loan associations, are not applicable in the case of dividends on such stock or shares issued on or after March 28, 1942.

(2) For the purposes of this section, a stock or share is deemed to be issued at the time and to the extent that payment therefor is made to the agency or instrumentality. The date of issuance of the certificate or other evidence of ownership of such stock or share is not determinative if payment is made at an earlier or later date. Where old stock is retired in exchange for new stock of a different character or preference, the new stock shall be deemed to have been issued at the time of the exchange rather than when the old stock was paid for. These rules may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, the owner of an investment share account, consisting of 10 shares, in a Federal savings and loan association, has a single certificate issued before March 28, 1942, evidencing such ownership. In order that A may dispose of half of such shares, the association at his request issues, after March 27, 1942, two 5-share certificates in substitution for the 10-share certificate. The shares evidenced by the two new certificates are deemed to have been issued before March 28, 1942, the shares having been paid for before such date.

Example (2). The X Bank, a member of a Federal reserve bank, owns 50 shares of Federal reserve bank stock, evidenced by a single stock certificate issued before March 28, 1942. On December 31, 1942, the X Bank reduces the amount of its capital stock, as a result of which it is required to reduce the amount of its Federal reserve bank stock to 40 shares. It surrenders the 50-share certificate to the Federal reserve bank and receives a new 40-share certificate. The 40 shares evidenced by such certificate are deemed to have been issued before March 28, 1942. On December 31, 1943, the X Bank increases the amount of its capital stock, as a result of which it is required to purchase 10 additional shares of the Federal reserve bank stock. The Federal reserve bank issues a 10-share certificate evidencing ownership of the new shares. Of the 50 shares then owned by the X Bank, 40 were issued prior to March 28, 1942, and 10 were issued after March 27, 1942.

Example (3). A, the owner of a savings share account, in the amount of $100, in a Federal savings and loan association, has a passbook containing a certificate issued prior to March 28, 1942, evidencing such ownership. Subsequent to March 27, 1942, A deposits $10,000 in the account. With respect to the $10,000 deposit, the share is deemed to have been issued after March 27, 1942.

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-3 Interest upon notes secured by mortgages executed to Federal agencies or instrumentalities. Section 26 of the Federal Farm Loan Act of July 17, 1916 (12 U. S. C. 931) and section 210 of such act, as added by section 2 of the act of March 4, 1923 (12 U. S. C. 1111) provide that first mortgages executed to Federal land banks, joint-stock land banks, or Federal intermediate credit banks, and the income derived therefrom, shall be exempt from taxation. Accordingly, income consisting of interest on promissory notes held by such banks and secured by such first mortgages is not subject to the income tax.

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-4 Interest upon United States obligations—(a) Issued before March 1, 1941. (1) Although interest upon the obligations of the United States and its possessions and upon obligations of a corporation organized under act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States, is generally exempt from tax, in the case of obligations issued by the United States after September 1, 1917, which include Treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury bonds, and Treasury notes, and in the case of obligations of a corporation organized under act of Congress, the interest is exempt from tax only if and to the extent provided in the acts authorizing the issue thereof, as amended and supplemented.

(2) Interest on Treasury certificates of indebtedness is entirely exempt from Federal income taxes. Interest upon Treasury notes is exempt only to the extent provided in the terms of the issue. Interest (discount at which issued) on Treasury bills and any gain from the sale or other disposition of such bills are also entirely exempt from Federal income taxes. With respect to the nondeductibility of losses from the sale or other disposition of such bills, see § 39.23 (e)-1.

(3) Interest on Treasury bonds is exempt from Federal income taxes except surtaxes imposed upon the income or profits of individuals, associations, or corporations. However, interest on an aggregate of not exceeding $5,000 principal amount of such bonds is also exempt from surtaxes. Interest in excess of the interest on an aggregate of not exceeding $5,000 principal amount of such bonds is subject to surtax and must be included in gross income.

(4) Section 26 of the Federal Farm Loan Act of July 17, 1916 (12 U. S. C. 931) and section 210 of such act, as added by section 2 of the act of March 4, 1923 (12 U. S. C. 1111), provide that farm-loan bonds issued by Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks and debentures issued by Federal intermediate credit banks, with the income therefrom, shall be exempt from taxation. Accordingly, interest from such farm-loan bonds or debentures is not subject to the income tax.

(5) Interest credited to postal savings accounts upon moneys deposited before March 1, 1941, in postal savings banks is wholly exempt from income tax.

(b) Issued on or after March 1, 1941. (1) By virtue of the provisions of sections 4 and 5 of the Public Debt Act of 1941, the exemption prescribed in paragraph (a) of this section is limited to such bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates of indebtedness as have been issued before March 1, 1941. Under such provisions interest upon obligations issued on or after March 1, 1941, by the United States, or any agency or instrumentality thereof, shall not have any exemption, as such, from Federal tax except in respect of any such obligations which the United States Maritime Commission or the Federal Housing Administration has, before March 1, 1941, contracted to issue at a future date. The interest on such obligations so contracted to be issued shall bear such tax-exemption privileges as were at the time of such contract provided in the law authorizing their issuance. For the purposes hereof, under section 4 (a) of the Public Debt Act of 1941, a Territory, a possession of the United States, and the District of Columbia and any political subdivisions thereof, and any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, shall not be considered as an agency or instrumentality of the United States.

(2) In the case of obligations issued as the result of a refunding operation, as, for example, where a corporation exchanges bonds for previously issued bonds, the refunding obligations are deemed, for the purposes of this section, to have been issued at the time of the exchange rather than at the time the original bonds were issued.

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-5 Treasury bond exemption in the case of trusts or partnerships. (a) When the income of a trust is taxable to beneficiaries, as in the case of a trust the income of which is to be distributed to the beneficiaries currently, each beneficiary is entitled to exemption as if he owned directly a proportionate part of the Treasury bonds held in trust. When, on the other hand, income is taxable to the trustee, as in the case of a trust the income of which is accumulated for the benefit of unborn or unascertained persons, the trust, as the owner of the bonds held in trust, is entitled to the exemption on account of such ownership.

(b) As the income of a partnership is taxable to the individual partners, each partner is entitled to exemption as if he owned directly a proportionate part of the bonds held by the partnership.

§ 39.22 (b) (4)-6 Interest upon United States obligations in the case of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations, not engaged in business in the United States. By virtue of section 4 of the Victory Liberty Loan Act of March 3, 1919 (31 U. S. C. 750) amending section 3 of the Fourth Liberty Bond Act of July 9, 1918 (31 U. S. C. 750) the interest received on and after March 3, 1919, on bonds, notes, and certificates of indebtedness of the United States while beneficially owned by a nonresident alien individual, or a foreign corporation, partnership, or association, if such individual, corporation, partnership, or association is not engaged in business in the United States, is exempt from income taxes. Such exemption applies only to such bonds, notes, or certificates as have been issued before March 1, 1941. Interest derived by a nonresident alien individual, or by a foreign corporation, partnership, or association on such bonds, notes, or certificates issued on or after March 1, 1941, is subject to tax as in the case of taxpayers generally as provided in § 39.22 (b) (4)-4 (b).

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(5) Compensation for injuries or sickness. Except in the case of amounts attributable to (and not in excess of) deductions allowed under section 23 (x) in any prior taxable year, amounts received, through accident or health insurance or under workmen's compensation acts, as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, plus the amount of any damages received whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness, and amounts received as a pension, annuity, or similar allowance for personal injuries or sickness resulting from active service in the armed forces of any country;

SEC. 402. [Career Compensation Act of 1949.] * * *

(h). That part of the disability retirement pay computed on the basis of years of active service which is in excess of the disability retirement pay that a member would receive if such disability pay were computed on the basis of percentage of disability shall not be deemed to be a pension, annuity, or similar allowance for personal injuries or sickness resulting from active service in the armed forces of any country within the meaning of section 22 (b) (5) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended. * * *

§ 39.22 (b) (6)–(9) Statutory provisions; exclusions from gross income; ministers; income exempt under treaty; miscellaneous; income from discharge of indebtedness.

Sec. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(6) Ministers. The rental value of a dwelling house and appurtenances thereof furnished to a minister of the gospel as part of his compensation;

(7) Income exempt under treaty. Income of any kind, to the extent required by any treaty obligation of the United States;

(8) Miscellaneous items. The following items, to the extent provided in section 116:

Earned income from sources without the United States;

Salaries of certain Territorial employees;

The income of foreign governments;

Income of States, municipalities, and other political subdivisions;

Receipts of shipowners' mutual protection and indemnity associations;

Dividends from China Trade Act corporations;

Compensation of employees of foreign governments.

(9) Income from discharge of indebtedness. In the case of a corporation, the amount of any income of the taxpayer attributable to the discharge, within the taxable year, of any indebtedness of the taxpayer or for which the taxpayer is liable evidenced by a security (as hereinafter in this paragraph defined) if the taxpayer, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary by regulations prescribes, makes and files its consent to the regulations prescribed under section 113 (b) (3) then in effect. In such case the amount of any income of the taxpayer attributable to any unamortized premium (computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which such discharge occurred) with respect to such indebtedness shall not be included in gross income and the amount of the deduction attributable to any unamortized discount (computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which such discharge occurred) with respect to such indebtedness shall not be allowed as a deduction. As used in this paragraph the term "security" means any bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness, issued by any corporation.

[Sec. 22 (b) (9) as added by sec. 215 (a), Rev. Act 1939; amended by sec. 114 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 152, Rev. Act 1945; sec. 1, Pub. Law 578 (79th Cong.); sec. 3, Pub. Law 112 (80th Cong.); sec. 3, Pub. Law 271 (81st Cong.); sec. 201, Rev. Act 1950; sec. 304 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.22 (b) (9)–1 Income from discharge of indebtedness. (a) Section 22 (b) (9) provides a method whereby a corporation may elect to have excluded from its gross income the amount of the income attributable to a discharge, within the taxable year, of its indebtedness or of indebtedness for which it is liable as, for example, in the case of a debt arising from an assumption of liability of another corporation. To be entitled to the benefits of section 22 (b) (9) a corporation must file with its return for the taxable year a consent to the provisions of the regulations, in effect at the time of the filing of the return, prescribed under section 113 (b) (3) (see §§ 39.113 (b) (3)–1 and 39.113 (b) (3)–2, relating to adjustment of basis) except that the consent may be filed with an amended return or claim for credit or refund, where the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner reasonable cause for failure to file the consent with its original return.

(b) As used in this section, the term "indebtedness" means indebtedness evidenced by a security, that is, by a bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness issued by either the taxpayer corporation or any other corporation regardless of when issued.

(c) If as a result of the discharge of indebtedness there remains unamortized premium or unamortized discount, the amount of the income attributable to such premium is to be excluded from gross income and the amount of the deduction attributable to such discount shall be disallowed as a deduction. The unamortized premium and unamortized discount, as the case may be, is in each instance to be computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which the discharge of indebtedness occurred.

(d) Section 22 (b) (9) and this section are inapplicable in the case of any discharge occurring in any proceeding under Chapter X or XI of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C., c. 10, 11) if the proceeding under such chapter was initiated by a petition filed on or before July 31, 1940, and with respect to any discharge of indebtedness to which section 22 (b) (10) applies.

§ 39.22 (b) (9)–2 Making and filing of consent. A consent to have the basis of its property adjusted in accordance with the provisions of the regulations, in effect at the time of filing of the return, prescribed under section 113 (b) (3) (see §§ 39.113 (b) (3)–1 and 39.113 (b) (3)–2) shall be made by or on behalf of the taxpayer corporation in duplicate on Form 982, in accordance with these regulations and the instructions on the form or issued therewith. The original and duplicate shall be filed with the return. In a case where a consent is permitted (under § 39.22 (b) (9)–1) after the original return has been filed, the original and duplicate of Form 982 shall be filed with the amended return or claim for credit or refund, as the case may be, and the consent shall be to the regulations which, at the time of the filing of the consent, are applicable to the taxable year for which such consent is filed.

Sec. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(10) Income from discharge of indebtedness of a railroad corporation. The amount of any income attributable to the discharge, within the taxable year, of any indebtedness of a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, to the extent that such income is deemed to have been realized by reason of a modification in or cancellation in whole or in part of such indebtedness pursuant to an order of a court in a receivership proceeding or in a proceeding under section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended. In such case the amount of any income of the taxpayer attributable to any unamortized premium (computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which such discharge occurred) with respect to such indebtedness shall not be included in gross income and the amount of the deduction attributable to any unamortized discount (computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which such discharge occurred) with respect to such indebtedness shall not be allowed as a deduction. Paragraph (9) shall not apply with respect to any discharge of indebtedness to which this paragraph applies. This paragraph shall not apply to any discharge occurring in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1954.

§ 39.22 (b) (10)–1 Income from discharge of indebtedness of railroad corporations. (a) Under section 22 (b) (10) the amount of any income attributable to the discharge, within the taxable year, of any indebtedness of a railroad corporation as a result of an order of a court in a receivership proceeding, or in a railroad reorganization proceeding under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 205) is, for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1955, excluded from the gross income of the railroad corporation. The section is applicable only in a case where income accrues to a taxpayer from the modification or cancellation of the corporate indebtedness (whether in whole or in part) pursuant to a court order.

(b) The railroad corporations to which this section and section 22 (b) (10) apply are those defined in section 77 (m) of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 205 (m)) namely, any common carrier by railroad engaged in the transportation of persons or property in interstate commerce, except a street, a suburban, or interurban electric railway which is not operated as a part of a general railroad system of transportation or which does not derive more than 50 percent of its operating revenues from the transportation of freight in standard steam railroad freight equipment.

(c) As used in section 22 (b) (10) and this section, the term "indebtedness" means an obligation, absolute and not contingent, to pay on demand or within a given time, in cash or another medium, a fixed amount.

(d) If, as a result of the discharge of indebtedness, there remains unamortized premium or unamortized discount, the amount of the income attributable to such premium is to be excluded from gross income and the amount of the deduction attributable to such discount shall be disallowed as a deduction. The unamortized premium and unamortized discount, as the case may be, is in each instance to be computed as of the first day of the taxable year in which the discharge of indebtedness occurred.

(e) The provisions of section 22 (b) (10) and this section are applicable with respect to any discharge occurring in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1955.

§ 39.22 (b) (11) Statutory provisions; exclusions from gross income; improvements by lessee on lessor's property.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(11) Improvements by lessee on lessor's property. Income, other than rent, derived by a lessor of real property upon the termination of a lease, representing the value of such property attributable to buildings erected or other improvements made by the lessee.

§ 39.22 (b) (11)-1 Exclusion from gross income of lessor of real property of value of improvements erected by lessee. (a) Income derived by a lessor of real property upon the termination, through forfeiture or otherwise, of the lease of such property and attributable to buildings erected or other improvements made by the lessee upon the leased property is excluded from gross income. However, where the facts disclose that such buildings or improvements represent in whole or in part a liquidation in kind of lease rentals, the exclusion from gross income shall not apply to the extent that such buildings or improvements represent such liquidation. The exclusion applies only with respect to the income realized by the lessor upon the termination of the lease and has no application to income, if any, in the form of rent, which may be derived by a lessor during the period of the lease and attributable to buildings erected or other improvements made by the lessee. It has no application to income which may be realized by the lessor upon the termination of the lease but not attributable to the value of such buildings or improvements. Neither does it apply to income derived by the lessor subsequent to the termination of the lease incident to the ownership of such buildings or improvements.

(b) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The A Corporation leased in 1945 for a period of 50 years unimproved real property to the B Corporation under a lease providing that the B Corporation erect on the leased premises an office building costing $500,000, in addition to paying the A Corporation a lease rental of $10,000 per annum beginning on the date of completion of the improvements, the sum of $100,000 being placed in escrow for the payment of the rental. The building was completed on January 1, 1947. The lease provided that all improvements made by the lessee on the leased property would become the absolute property of the A Corporation on the termination of the lease by forfeiture or otherwise and that the lessor would become entitled on such termination to the remainder of the sum, if any, remaining in the escrow fund. The B Corporation forfeited its lease on January 1, 1952, when the improvements had a value of $100,000. Under the provisions of section 22 (b) (11), the $100,000 is excluded from gross income. The amount of $50,000 representing the remainder in the escrow fund is forfeited to the A Corporation and is included in the gross income of that taxpayer. As to the basis of the property in the hands of the A Corporation, see § 39.113 (c)-1.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(12) Recovery of bad debts, prior taxes, and delinquency amounts. Income attributable to the recovery during the taxable year of a bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount, to the extent of the amount of the recovery exclusion with respect to such debt, tax, or amount. For the purposes of this paragraph:

(A) Definition of bad debt. The term "bad debt" means a debt on account of worthlessness or partial worthlessness of which a deduction was allowed for a prior taxable year.

(B) Definition of prior tax. The term "prior tax" means a tax on account of which a deduction or credit was allowed for a prior taxable year.

(C) Definition of delinquency amount. The term "delinquency amount" means an amount paid or accrued on account of which a deduction or credit was allowed for a prior taxable year and which is attributable to failure to file return with respect to a tax, or pay a tax, within the time required by the law under which the tax is imposed, or to failure to file return with respect to a tax or pay a tax.

(D) Definition of recovery exclusion. The term "recovery exclusion" with respect to a bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount, means the amount, determined in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, of the deductions or credits allowed, on account of such bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount, which did not result in a reduction of the taxpayer's tax under this chapter (not including the tax under section 102) or corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws, reduced by the amount excludible in previous taxable years with respect to such debt, tax, or amount under this paragraph.

(E) Special rules in case of section 102 tax and personal holding company tax. In the application of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) in determining the tax under section 102 or Subchapter A of Chapter 2, a recovery exclusion allowed for the purposes of Chapter 1 shall be allowed for the purpose of such section or subchapter whether or not the bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount resulted in a reduction of the section 102 tax or Subchapter A tax for the prior taxable year; and in the case of a bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount not allowable as a deduction or credit for the prior taxable year under Chapter 1 (except section 102) but allowable for the same taxable year under such section or subchapter a recovery exclusion shall be allowable for the purposes of such section or subchapter if such bad debt, prior tax, or delinquency amount did not result in a reduction of the tax under such section 102 or such Subchapter A. As used in this subparagraph references to Chapter 1, section 102, and Subchapter A in the case of taxable years not subject to the Internal Revenue Code, shall be held to be made to corresponding provisions of prior revenue Acts.

§ 39.22 (b) (12)-1 Recovery of certain items previously deducted—(a) In general. Section 22 (b) (12) provides that income attributable to the recovery during any taxable year of bad debts, prior taxes, and delinquency amounts shall be excluded from gross income to the extent of the "recovery exclusion" with respect to such items. The rule of exclusion so prescribed by statute applies equally with respect to all other losses, expenditures, and accruals made the basis of deductions from gross income for prior taxable years, including war losses referred to in section 127, but not including deductions with respect to depreciation, depletion, amortization, or amortizable bond premiums. See Dobson v. Commissioner, 320 U. S. 489. The term "recovery exclusion" as used in this section means accordingly an amount equal to the portion of the bad debts, prior taxes, and delinquency amounts (the items specifically referred to in section 22 (b) (12)) and of all other items subject to the rule of exclusion which, when deducted or credited for a prior taxable year, did not result in a reduction of any tax of the taxpayer under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code (other than a tax under section 102) or under corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws.

(1) Section 22 (b) (12) items. The term "section 22 (b) (12) items" as used in this section means those bad debts, prior taxes, delinquency amounts, and all other items subject to the rule of exclusion, for which a deduction or credit was allowed for a prior taxable year. If a bad debt was previously charged against a reserve by a taxpayer on the reserve method of treating bad debts, it was not deducted, and it is therefore not considered a section 22 (b) (12) item. Bad debts, prior taxes, and delinquency amounts are defined in section 22 (b) (12) (A) (B), and (C) respectively. A typical example of a delinquency amount described in that section is interest upon delinquent taxes. A typical example of the other items not expressly referred to in section 22 (b) (12) but nevertheless subject to the rule of exclusion is a loss sustained upon the sale of stock and later recovered, in whole or in part, through an action against the party from whom such stock had been purchased.

(2) Definition of "recovery." Recoveries result from the receipt of amounts in respect of the previously deducted or credited section 22 (b) (12) items, such as from the collection or sale of a bad debt, refund or credit of taxes paid, or cancellation of taxes accrued. Care should be taken in the case of bad debts which were treated as only partially worthless in prior years to distinguish between the item described in section 22 (b) (12), that is, the part of such debt which was deducted, and the part not previously deducted, which is not a section 22 (b) (12) item and is considered the first part collected. The collection of the part not deducted is not considered a "recovery." Furthermore, the term "recovery" does not include the gain resulting from the receipt of an amount on account of a section 22 (b) (12) item which, together with previous such receipts, exceeds the deduction or credit previously allowed for such item. For instance, a $100 corporate bond purchased for $40 and later deducted as worthless is subsequently collected to the extent of $50. The $10 gain (excess of $50 collection over $40 cost) is not a recovery of a section 22 (b) (12) item. Such gain is in no case excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (12) regardless of whether the $40 recovery is or is not excluded.

(3) Treatment of debt deducted in more than one year by reason of partial worthlessness. In the case of a bad debt deducted in part for two or more prior years, each such deduction of a part of the debt is considered a separate section 22 (b) (12) item. A recovery with respect to such debt is considered first a recovery of those items (or portions thereof) resutling from such debt, for which there are recovery exclusions. If there are recovery exclusions for two or more items resulting from the same bad debt, such items are considered recovered in the order of the taxable years for which they were deducted, beginning with the latest. The recovery exclusion for any such item is determined by considering the recovery exclusion with respect to the prior year for which such item was deducted as being first used to offset all other applicable recoveries in the year in which the bad debt is recovered.

(4) Special provisions as to worthless bonds, etc., which are treated as capital losses. Bad debts on account of certain worthless securities and certain nonbusiness bad debts are treated as losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets. See section 23 (k) The amounts of the deductions allowed for any year under section 117 (d) on account of such losses for such year are considered to be section 22 (b) (12) items. Any part of such losses which, under section 117 (d) is a deduction for a subsequent year through the capital loss carry-over (any later receipt of an amount with respect to such deducted loss is a recovery) is considered a section 22 (b) (12) item for the year in which such loss was sustained.

(b) Computation of recovery exclusion—(1) Amount of recovery exclusion allowable for year of recovery. For the year of any recovery the section 22 (b) (12) items which were deducted or credited for one prior year are considered as a group and the recovery thereon is considered separately from recoveries of any items which were deducted or credited for other years. This recovery is excluded from gross income to the extent of the recovery exclusion with respect to this group of items as (i) determined for the original year for which such items were deducted or credited (see subparagraph (2) of this paragraph) and (ii) reduced by the excludible recoveries in intervening years on account of all section 22 (b) (12) items for such original year. A taxpayer claiming a recovery exclusion shall submit, at the time the exclusion is claimed, the computation of the recovery exclusion claimed for the original year for which the items were deducted or credited, and computations showing the amount recovered in intervening years on account of the section 22 (b) (12) items deducted or credited for the original year.

(2) Determination of recovery exclusion for original year for which items were deducted or credited. (i) The recovery exclusion for the taxable year for which section 22 (b) (12) items were deducted or credited (that is, the "original taxable year") is the portion of the aggregate amount of such deductions and credits which could be disallowed without causing an increase in any tax of the taxpayer imposed under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code (such as the normal tax and surtax) other than the tax imposed on corporations by section 102 for the improper accumulation of surplus, or in any tax imposed under corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws. For the purpose of such recovery exclusion, consideration must be given to the effect of net operating loss carry-overs and carry-backs or capital loss carry-overs.

(ii) This rule shall be applied by determining the recovery exclusion as the aggregate amount of the section 22 (b) (12) items for the original year for which such items were deducted or credited reduced by whichever of the following amounts is the greatest:

(a) The difference between (1) the income subject to normal tax (net income reduced by credits allowable for normal tax purposes) for such original year and (2) the income subject to normal tax computed without regard to the section 22 (b) (12) items for such original year.

(b) The difference between (1) the net income subject to surtax for such original year and (2) the net income subject to surtax computed without regard to section 22 (b) (12) items for such original year.

(c) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1942, and before January 1, 1944, in the case of taxpayers other than corporations, the difference between (1) the income subject to victory tax (the victory tax net income reduced by the specific exemption) for such original year and (2) the income subject to victory tax computed without regard to the section 22 (b) (12) items for such original year. See sections 450 to 476, inclusive, Internal Revenue Code as applicable to such taxable year.

(d) In the case of a taxpayer subject to any income tax in lieu of normal tax or surtax or both (except the alternative tax on capital gains imposed by section 117 (c) which is disregarded) the difference between (1) the income subject to such tax for such original year and (2) the income subject to such tax computed without regard to the section 22 (b) (12) items for such original year. (Neither the amount determined under (1) nor the amount under (2) of (a), (b), (c) or (d) of this subdivision shall in any case be considered less than zero.) For this determination of the recovery exclusion, the aggregate of the section 22 (b) (12) items must be further decreased by the portion thereof which caused a reduction in tax in preceding or succeeding taxable years through any net operating loss carry-overs or carry-backs or capital loss carry-overs affected by such items. This decrease is the aggregate of the largest amount determined for each of such preceding and succeeding years under (a) (b), (c), and (d) of this subdivision, the computation of each carry-over or carry-back to the preceding or succeeding year being made under (1) of (a), (b), (c), and (d) of this subdivision with regard to the section 22 (b) (12) items for the original year and such computation being made under (2) of (a), (b) (c), and (d) of this subdivision without regard to such items. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, the computations under both (1) and (2) of (a) (b), (c) and (d) of this subdivision shall be made without regard to any section 22 (b) (12) items for such preceding or succeeding year and the carry-overs and carry-backs to such year shall be determined without regard to any section 22 (b) (12) items for years subsequent to the original year.

(3) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A single individual, who has no dependents, has for 1952 $2,800 gross income, a depreciation deduction of $2,000, and a deduction of $900 for bad debts and of $700 for property taxes. His income and deductions for 1951 are set out below. His recovery exclusion on account of the section 22 (b) (12) items for 1952 (the debts and taxes) is $600, determined by reducing the $1,600 aggregate of the section 22 (b) (12) items by the $200 difference between the surtax net income for 1952 computed with and without regard to such aggregate, since this difference is greater than such difference between the incomes subject to normal tax, ascertained as follows:

	With deduction of sec. 22 (b) (12) items	Without deduction of sec. 22 (b) (12) items
Gross income	$2,800	$2,800
Less: Depreciation	2,000	2,000
Remainder	800	800
Less: Bad debts and taxes	1,600	....
Net income or (loss)	(800)	800
Exemption under sec. 25 (b) (1) (A)	600	600
Surtax net income	0	200
Interest on U. S. obligations exempt from normal tax	0	80
Net income subject to normal tax	0	120
Difference between surtax net incomes ($200-$0)	....	200
Difference between incomes subject to normal tax ($120-$0)	....	120

The taxpayer had no items which would cause section 122 (d) adjustments for 1952 or 1951. For 1951 he had $6,000 gross income and his only deduction was a net operating loss deduction of $800 based on his loss for 1952. There would be no net operating loss deduction for 1951 if the carry-back to 1951 was computed without regard to the section 22 (b) (12) items for 1952. Accordingly, $800 of such items for 1952 resulted, by way of carry-back to 1951, in a reduction of tax for 1951, since net income subject to normal tax and surtax net income for 1951 were reduced to the extent of the carry-back (computed in the manner set forth in the table above). The $1,600 aggregate of the section 22 (b) (12) items for 1952 is further reduced by the $800 which caused the reduction in tax through the carry-back. Therefore, the recovery exclusion for the items for 1952 is $600, that is, the $1,600 aggregate of such items reduced by the $200 and by the $800. If in 1956 the taxpayer recovers $400 of the property taxes, all of the recovery is excluded from the income by reason of the recovery exclusion of $600 determined for the original year 1952. If in 1957 he recovers all the bad debt of $900, $200 is excluded from gross income. That is, the recovery exclusion of $600 determined for the original year 1952 is reduced by the $400 recovery in 1956 on account of the section 22 (b) (12) items deducted for such original year.

(c) Provisions as to taxes imposed by section 102 and subchapter A of chapter 2. Section 22 (b) (12) (E) provides special rules for determining the recovery exclusion in the case of the tax imposed on corporations by section 102 for the improper accumulation of surplus and the tax imposed on personal holding companies by subchapter A of chapter 2 of the Internal Revenue Code. Such taxpayers have, for the purposes of such taxes, the recovery exclusion described in the preceding paragraphs of this section. This recovery exclusion is used for the purposes of the taxes imposed by section 102 and subchapter A of chapter 2 regardless of what particular effect the section 22 (b) (12) items had on such taxes, that is, regardless of whether the section 22 (b) (12) items did or did not cause a reduction of such taxes. Furthermore, a recovery exclusion is granted for certain other items which are described in section 22 (b) (12) (E). The recovery exclusion on account of such other items shall be determined under the principles set forth in this section with respect to section 22 (b) (12) items.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(13) Additional allowance for certain members of the armed forces—(A) Enlisted personnel. Compensation received for active service as a member below the grade of commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such member—

(i) Served in a combat zone after June 24, 1950, and prior to January 1, 1954, or

(ii) Was hospitalized as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while serving in a combat zone prior to January 1, 1954; but this clause shall not apply for any month during any part of which there are no combatant activities in any combat zone as determined under subparagraph (C) (iii) of this paragraph.

(B) Commissioned officers. So much of the compensation as does not exceed $200 received for active service as a commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such officer—

(i) Served in a combat zone after June 24, 1950, and prior to January 1, 1954, or

(ii) Was hospitalized as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while serving in a combat zone prior to January 1, 1954; but this clause shall not apply for any month during any part of which there are no combatant activities in any combat zone as determined under subparagraph (C) (iii) of this paragraph.

(C) Definitions. For the purposes of this paragraph—

(i) The term "commissioned officer" does not include a commissioned warrant officer;

(ii) The term "combat zone" means any area which the President of the United States by Executive Order designates, for the purposes of this paragraph, as an area in which armed forces of the United States are or have (after June 24, 1950) engaged in combat;

(iii) Service is performed in a combat zone only if performed on or after the date designated by the President by Executive Order as the date of the commencing of combatant activities in such zone, and on or before the date designated by the President by Executive Order as the date of the termination of combatant activities in such zone, except that June 25, 1950, shall be considered the date of the commencing of combatant activities in the combat zone designated in Executive Order 10195; and

(iv) The term "compensation" does not include pensions and retirement pay.

§ 39.22 (b) (13)-1 Compensation of members of the armed forces of the United States for service in a combat zone before January 1, 1954, or for service while hospitalized as a result of such combat-zone service. (a) In addition to the exemptions and credits otherwise applicable, section 22 (b) (13) provides that there shall be excluded from gross income:

(1) Compensation received for active service as a member below the grade of commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such member (i) served in a combat zone before January 1, 1954, or (ii) was hospitalized at any place as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while so serving provided that during all of such month there are combatant activities in some combat zone.

(2) In the case of compensation received for active service as a commissioned officer in the armed forces of the United States for any month during any part of which such officer (i) served in a combat zone before January 1, 1954, or (ii) was hospitalized at any place as a result of wounds, disease, or injury incurred while so serving provided that during all of such month there are combatant activities in some combat zone, so much of such compensation as does not exceed $200.

(b) The exclusions under section 22 (b) (13) and this section are applicable only if active service is performed in a combat zone before January 1, 1954. Compensation is subject to exclusion whether or not it is received outside a combat zone or while the recipient is hospitalized or in a year (including a year after 1953) different from that in which the service was rendered for which the compensation is paid. Service is performed in a combat zone only if it is performed in an area which the President of the United States has designated by Executive order, for the purpose of section 22 (b) (13), as an area in which armed forces of the United States are or have engaged in combat, and only if it is performed on or after the date designated by the President by Executive order as the date of the commencing of combatant activities in such zone (except that the date June 25, 1950, in the combat zone designated in Executive Order 10195, shall be considered the date of the commencing of combatant activities in such zone) and on or before the date designated by the President by Executive order as the date of the termination of combatant activities in such zone. If a member of the armed forces serves in a combat zone or is hospitalized for any part of a month, he is entitled to the exclusion for such month to the same extent as if he had served in such zone, or had been hospitalized, for the entire month.

(c) If an individual is hospitalized for a wound, disease, or injury while serving in a combat zone, the wound, disease, or injury will, unless the contrary clearly appears, be presumed to have been incurred while serving in a combat zone. In certain cases, however, a wound, disease, or injury may have been incurred while serving in a combat zone even though the individual was not hospitalized for it while so serving. And, in exceptional cases, a wound, disease, or injury will not have been incurred while serving in a combat zone even though the individual was hospitalized for it while so serving.

(d) These principles may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). An individual is hospitalized in a combat zone for a specific disease after having served in such zone for three weeks. The incubation period of such disease is from two to four weeks. Such disease was incurred while serving in the combat zone.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that the incubation period is one year. Such disease was not incurred while serving in the combat zone.

Example (3). A member of the Air Force, stationed outside the combat zone, is shot while participating in an aerial flight over the combat zone, but is not hospitalized until he returns to his home base. Such injury was incurred while serving in a combat zone.

Example (4). An individual is hospitalized for a specific disease three weeks after having departed from a combat zone. The incubation period of such disease is from two to four weeks. Such disease was incurred while serving in a combat zone.

(e) An individual is hospitalized only until such time as his status as a hospital patient ceases by reason of his discharge from the hospital.

(f) The term "commissioned officer" does not include a commissioned warrant officer, and, accordingly, a commissioned warrant officer is entitled to the exclusion allowed to enlisted personnel under section 22 (b) (13) (A) The term "compensation", for the purpose of this section, does not include pensions and retirement pay. As to who are members of the armed forces, see § 39.3797-11.

(g) These exclusions are applicable without regard to the marital status of the recipient of the compensation, and if a husband and wife both meet the requirements of the statute, then each is entitled to the benefit of an exclusion. In the case of a husband and wife domiciled in a State recognized for Federal income tax purposes as a community property State, any exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (13) operates before apportionment of the gross income of the spouses in accordance with community property law. For example, a man and his wife are domiciled in a community property State and he is entitled, as a commissioned officer, to the benefit of the exclusion of $200 for each month under section 22 (b) (13) (B) He receives $1,000 as compensation for active service for three months in a combat zone. Of such amount, $600 is excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (13) (B) and only $400 is taken into account in determining the gross income of both husband and wife.

(h) A member of the armed forces is in active service if he is actually serving in the armed forces. Periods during which a member of the armed forces is absent from duty on account of sickness, wounds, leave, internment by the enemy, or other lawful cause are periods of active service. A member of the armed forces in active service in a combat zone who there becomes a prisoner of war or missing in action is deemed, for the purpose of section 22 (b) (13) and this section, to continue in active service in the combat zone for the period for which he is entitled to such status for military pay purposes. These exclusions apply to compensation received by a member of the armed forces for services rendered while in active service even though payment is received subsequent to discharge or release from active service. Compensation credited to a decedent's account for a period subsequent to the established date of his death and received by his estate will be excluded under section 22 (b) (13) from the gross income of the estate to the same extent that it would have been excluded from the gross income of the decedent if he had lived and received such compensation.

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

§ 39.22 (b) (14)-1 Mustering-out payments of military and naval forces. For the purposes of the exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (14) of mustering-out payments with respect to service in the military or naval forces, mustering-out payments are payments made to any recipients pursuant to the provisions of the Mustering-Out Payment Act of 1944 (38 U. S. C. 691e)

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(15) Payments to encourage exploration, development, and mining for defense purposes. An amount paid to a taxpayer by the United States (or any agency or instrumentality thereof), whether by grant or loan, and whether or not repayable, for the encouragement of exploration, development or mining of critical and strategic minerals or metals pursuant to or in connection with any undertaking approved by the United States (or any of its agencies or instrumentalities) and for which an accounting is made or required to be made to an appropriate governmental agency, and the forgiveness or discharge of any of such amount. Any expenditures (other than expenditures made after the repayment of such grant or loan) attributable to such grant, or loan shall not be deductible by the taxpayer as an expense nor increase the basis of the taxpayer's property either for determining gain or loss on sale, exchange, or other disposition or for computing depletion or depreciation, but upon the repayment of any portion of any such grant or loan which has been expended in accordance with the terms thereof such deductions and such increase in basis shall to the extent of such repayment be allowed as if made at the time of such repayment.

§ 39.22 (b) (15)-1 Payments to encourage exploration, development, and mining for defense purposes—(a) Applicability of section 22 (b) (15) Section 22 (b) (15) is applicable only to amounts (1) which are paid to a taxpayer (i) by the United States or by an agency or instrumentality of the United States; (ii) as a grant, gift, bounty, bonus, premium, incentive, subsidy, loan, or advance; (iii) for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, a critical and strategic mineral or metal; and (iv) pursuant to or in connection with an undertaking by the taxpayer to explore for, or develop or produce, such mineral or metal and to expend or use any amounts so received for the purpose and in accordance with the terms and conditions upon which such amounts are paid, which undertaking has been approved by the United States or by an agency or instrumentality of the United States; and (2) for which the taxpayer has accounted, or is required to account, to an appropriate agency of the United States Government for the expenditure or use thereof for the purpose and in accordance with the terms and conditions upon which such amounts are paid. Section 22 (b) (15) is applicable only to an amount which meets each test or requirement set forth above. The section is applicable whether or not the payee is obligated to repay to the United States any portion or all of the amount so received. However, section 22 (b) (15) is not applicable to any loan or advance for the repayment of which the borrower's liability is unconditional and legally enforceable. Nor is section 22 (b) (15) applicable to any part of the purchase price of a critical and strategic mineral or metal received, whether before, on, or after delivery, by the seller from the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, irrespective of whether such purchase price is below, at, or above the established ceiling or currently prevailing market price. A payment of a separate and specific amount for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, a critical and strategic mineral or metal shall not be considered to be a part of the purchase price of such mineral or metal merely because such payment is added to, or included with, the payment of such purchase price. As used in section 22 (b) (15) and this section, the term "critical and strategic minerals or metals" means those minerals and metals listed in section 450 (b), as well as such other minerals and metals as are certified pursuant to such section as being essential to the defense effort of the United States and as not having been normally produced in appreciable quantities within the United States, and such other minerals and metals as are considered by those departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the United States charged with the encouragement of exploration for, and development and mining of, critical and strategic minerals and metals to constitute critical and strategic minerals and metals for that purpose. See, for example, section 7 of Order-1 of the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration, March 7, 1952, 17 F R. 2090.

(b) Exclusion from gross income. Any amount to which section 22 (b) (15) is applicable is, by the terms of such section, excluded from gross income. Section 22 (b) (15) also excludes from gross income any income attributable to the forgiveness or discharge of any indebtedness to which such section is applicable.

(c) Expense deduction, basis for gain or loss, depletion, or depreciation. Except as hereinafter provided, any expenditure attributable to an amount received by a taxpayer to which section 22 (b) (15) is applicable shall not be deductible by the taxpayer as an expense under section 23, nor shall any such expenditure increase the basis under section 113 of the taxpayer's property either for determining gain or loss on sale, exchange, or other disposition or for computing depletion or depreciation (including amortization under section 124A) Upon the repayment of any portion of any amount to which section 22 (b) (15) is applicable and which has been expended for the purpose and in accordance with the terms and conditions upon which it was paid to the taxpayer, any expenditures attributable to such amount made by the taxpayer shall, as provided in section 23, be allowed to the taxpayer as a deduction, and any such expenditures shall, as provided in section 113, increase the basis of the taxpayer's property, to the extent of such repayment as if such expenditures had been made at the time of such repayment. Such expenditures shall to the extent of the repayment be expensed or capitalized, as the case may be, in the order in which they were actually made or in such other manner as may be adopted by the taxpayer with the approval of the Commissioner.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(b) Exclusions from gross income. The following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter: * * *

(16) Sports programs conducted for the American National Red Cross. In the case of a taxpayer which is a corporation primarily engaged in the furnishing of sports programs, amounts received as proceeds from a sports program conducted by the taxpayer if—

(A) The taxpayer agrees in writing with the American National Red Cross to conduct such sports program exclusively for the benefit of the American National Red Cross;

(B) The taxpayer turns over to the American National Red Cross the proceeds from such sports program, minus the expenses paid or incurred by the taxpayer (i) which would not have been so paid or incurred but for such sports program, and (ii) which would be allowable as deductions under section 23 (a) (1) (A) but for the last sentence thereof; and

(C) The facilities used for such program are not regularly used during the taxable year for the conduct of sports programs to which this paragraph applies.

As used in this paragraph, the term "proceeds from such sports program" includes all amounts paid for admission to the sports program, plus all proceeds received by the taxpayer from such program or activities carried on in connection therewith.

SEC. 22 Gross income. * * *

(c) Inventories. Whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner the use of inventories is necessary in order clearly to determine the income of any taxpayer, inventories shall be taken by such taxpayer upon such basis as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe as conforming as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and as most clearly reflecting the income.

§ 39.22 (c)-1 Need of inventories. In order to reflect the net income correctly, inventories at the beginning and end of each taxable year are necessary in every case in which the production, purchase, or sale of merchandise is an income-producing factor. The inventory should include all finished or partly finished goods and, in the case of raw materials and supplies, only those which have been acquired for sale or which will physically become a part of merchandise intended for sale, in which class fall containers, such as kegs, bottles, and cases, whether returnable or not, if title thereto will pass to the purchaser of the product to be sold therein. Merchandise should be included in the inventory only if title thereto is vested in the taxpayer. Accordingly, the seller should include in his inventory goods under contract for sale but not yet segregated and applied to the contract and goods out upon consignment, but should exclude from inventory goods sold (including containers) title to which has passed to the purchaser. A purchaser should include in inventory merchandise purchased (including containers), title to which has passed to him, although such merchandise is in transit or for other reasons has not been reduced to physical possession, but should not include goods ordered for future delivery, transfer of title to which has not yet been effected. (But see § 39.22 (d)-1.)

§ 39.22 (c)-2 Valuation of inventories. (a) Section 22 (c) provides two tests to which each inventory must conform:

(1) It must conform as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business, and

(2) It must clearly reflect the income.

(b) It follows, therefore, that inventory rules cannot be uniform but must give effect to trade customs which come within the scope of the best accounting practice in the particular trade or business. In order clearly to reflect income, the inventory practice of a taxpayer should be consistent from year to year, and greater weight is to be given to consistency than to any particular method of inventorying or basis of valuation so long as the method or basis used is substantially in accord with these regulations. An inventory that can be used under the best accounting practice in a balance sheet showing the financial position of the taxpayer can, as a general rule, be regarded as clearly reflecting his income.

(c) The bases of valuation most commonly used by business concerns and which meet the requirements of section 22 (c) are (1) cost and (2) cost or market, whichever is lower. (For inventories by dealers in securities, see § 39.22 (c)-5.) Any goods in an inventory which are unsalable at normal prices or unusable in the normal way because of damage, imperfections, shop wear, changes of style, odd or broken lots, or other similar causes, including second-hand goods taken in exchange, should be valued at bona fide selling prices less direct cost of disposition, whether basis (1) or (2) is used, or if such goods consist of raw materials or partly finished goods held for use or consumption, they shall be valued upon a reasonable basis, taking into consideration the usability and the condition of the goods, but in no case shall such value be less than the scrap value. Bona fide selling price means actual offering of goods during a period ending not later than 30 days after inventory date. The burden of proof will rest upon the taxpayer to show that such exceptional goods as are valued upon such selling basis come within the classifications indicated above, and he shall maintain such records of the disposition of the goods as will enable a verification of the inventory to be made.

(d) In respect of normal goods, whichever basis is adopted must be applied with reasonable consistency to the entire inventory except as to those goods inventoried under the last-in first-out method authorized by section 22 (d) or to animals inventoried under the elective "unit-livestock-price method" authorized by § 39.22 (c)-6. Taxpayers were given an option to adopt the basis of either (1) cost or (2) cost or market, whichever is lower, for their 1920 inventories. The basis properly adopted for that year or any subsequent year is controlling, and a change can now be made only after permission is secured from the Commissioner. Application for permission to change the basis of valuing inventories shall be made in writing and filed with the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2. Goods taken in the inventory which have been so intermingled that they cannot be identified with specific invoices will be deemed to be the goods most recently purchased or produced, and the cost thereof will be the actual cost of the goods purchased or produced during the period in which the quantity of goods in the inventory has been acquired. But see section 22 (d) as to last-in first-out inventories. Where the taxpayer maintains book inventories in accordance with a sound accounting system in which the respective inventory accounts are charged with the actual cost of the goods purchased or produced and credited with the value of goods used, transferred, or sold, calculated upon the basis of the actual cost of the goods acquired during the taxable year (including the inventory at the beginning of the year), the net value as shown by such inventory accounts will be deemed to be the cost of the goods on hand. The balances shown by such book inventories should be verified by physical inventories at reasonable intervals and adjusted to conform therewith.

(e) Inventories should be recorded in a legible manner, properly computed and summarized, and should be preserved as a part of the accounting records of the taxpayer. The inventories of taxpayers on whatever basis taken will be subject to investigation by the Commissioner, and the taxpayer must satisfy the Commissioner of the correctness of the prices adopted.

(f) The following methods, among others, are sometimes used in taking or valuing inventories, but are not in accord with the regulations in this part, viz:

(1) Deducting from the inventory a reserve for price changes, or an estimated depreciation in the value thereof.

(2) Taking work in process, or other parts of the inventory, at a nominal price or at less than its proper value.

(3) Omitting portions of the stock on hand.

(4) Using a constant price or nominal value for so-called normal quantity of materials or goods in stock.

(5) Including stock in transit, shipped either to or from the taxpayer, the title to which is not vested in the taxpayer.

§ 39.22 (c)-3 Inventories at cost. Cost means: (a) In the case of merchandise on hand at the beginning of the taxable year, the inventory price of such goods.

(b) In the case of merchandise purchased since the beginning of the taxable year, the invoice price less trade or other discounts, except strictly cash discounts approximating a fair interest rate, which may be deducted or not at the option of the taxpayer, provided a consistent course is followed. To this net invoice price should be added transportation or other necessary charges incurred in acquiring possession of the goods.

(c) In the case of merchandise produced by the taxpayer since the beginning of the taxable year, (1) the cost of raw materials and supplies entering into or consumed in connection with the product, (2) expenditures for direct labor, (3) indirect expenses incident to and necessary for the production of the particular article, including in such indirect expenses a reasonable proportion of management expenses, but not including any cost of selling or return on capital, whether by way of interest or profit.

(d) In any industry in which the usual rules for computation of cost of production are inapplicable, costs may be approximated upon such basis as may be reasonable and in conformity with established trade practice in the particular industry. Among such cases are (1) farmers and raisers of livestock (see § 39.22 (c)-6) (2) miners and manufacturers who by a single process or uniform series of processes derive a product of two or more kinds, sizes, or grades, the unit cost of which is substantially alike (see § 39.22 (c)-7) and (3) retail merchants who use what is known as the "retail method" in ascertaining approximate cost (see § 39.22 (c)-8)

§ 39.22 (c)-4 Inventories at cost or market, whichever is lower (a) Under ordinary circumstances and for normal goods in an inventory "market" means the current bid price prevailing at the date of the inventory for the particular merchandise in the volume in which usually purchased by the taxpayer, and is applicable in the cases—

(1) Of goods purchased and on hand, and

(2) Of basic elements of cost (materials, labor, and burden) in goods in process of manufacture and in finished goods on hand; exclusive, however, of goods on hand or in process of manufacture for delivery upon firm sales contracts (i. e., those not legally subject to cancellation by either party) at fixed prices entered into before the date of the inventory, under which the taxpayer is protected against actual loss, which goods must be inventoried at cost.

(b) Where no open market exists or where quotations are nominal, due to stagnant market conditions, the taxpayer must use such evidence of a fair market price at the date or dates nearest the inventory as may be available, such as specific purchases or sales by the taxpayer or others in reasonable volume and made in good faith, or compensation paid for cancellation of contracts for purchase commitments. Where the taxpayer in the regular course of business has offered for sale such merchandise at prices lower than the current price as above defined, the inventory may be valued at such prices less direct cost of disposition, and the correctness of such prices will be determined by reference to the actual sales of the taxpayer for a reasonable period before and after the date of the inventory. Prices which vary materially from the actual prices so ascertained will not be accepted as reflecting the market.

(c) Where the inventory is valued upon the basis of cost or market, whichever is lower, the market value of each article on hand at the inventory date shall be compared with the cost of the article, and the lower of such values shall be taken as the inventory value of the article.

§ 39.22 (c)-5 Inventories by dealers in securities. A dealer in securities who in his books of account regularly inventories unsold securities on hand either—

(a) At cost,

(b) At cost or market, whichever is lower, or may make his return upon the basis upon which his accounts are kept; provided that a description of the method employed shall be included in or attached to the return, that all the securities must be inventoried by the same method, and that such method must be adhered to in subsequent years, unless another method be authorized by the Commissioner pursuant to a written application therefor filed with the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2. A dealer in securities in whose books of account separate computations of the gain or loss from the sale of the various lots of securities sold are made on the basis of the cost of each lot shall be regarded, for the purposes of this section, as regularly inventorying his securities at cost. For the purpose of this rule, a dealer in securities is a merchant of securities, whether an individual, partnership, or corporation, with an established place of business, regularly engaged in the purchase of securities and their resale to customers; that is, one who as a merchant buys securities and sells them to customers with a view to the gains and profits that may be derived therefrom. If such business is simply a branch of the activities carried on by such person, the securities inventoried as here provided may include only those held for purposes of resale and not for investment. Taxpayers who buy and sell or hold securities for investment or speculation, irrespective of whether such buying or selling constitutes the carrying on of a trade or business, and officers of corporations and members of partnerships who in their individual capacities buy and sell securities, are not dealers in securities within the meaning of this rule.

§ 39.22 (c)-6 Inventories of livestock raisers and other farmers. (a) A farmer may make his return upon an inventory basis instead of the cash receipts and disbursements basis. It is optional with the taxpayer which of these methods of accounting is used, but, having elected one method, the option so exercised will be binding upon the taxpayer for the year for which the option is exercised and for subsequent years unless another method is authorized by the Commissioner as provided in section 39.41-2.

(b) In any change of accounting from the cash receipts and disbursements basis to an inventory basis, adjustments shall be made, at the option of the taxpayer, in accordance with one or the other of the two methods outlined in (1) and (2) below.

(1) Opening and closing inventories shall be used for the year in which the change is made. There should be included in the opening inventory all farm products (including livestock) purchased or raised which were on hand at the date of the inventory, and there must be submitted with the return for the current taxable year an adjustment sheet for the preceding taxable year based on the inventory method, upon the amount of which adjustment the tax shall be assessed and paid (if any be due) at the rate of tax in effect for that year. Ordinarily an adjustment sheet for the preceding year will be sufficient, but if, in the opinion of the Commissioner, such adjustment is not sufficient clearly to reflect income, adjustments for earlier years may be accepted or required. If it is impossible to render complete inventories for the preceding year or years, the Commissioner will accept estimates which, in his opinion, substantially reflect the income on the inventory basis for such preceding year or years; but inventories must not include real estate, buildings, permanent improvements, or any other assets subject to depreciation.

(2) No adjustment sheets will be required, but the net income for the taxable year in which the change is made must be computed without deducting from the sum of the closing inventory and the sales and other receipts, the inventory of livestock, crops, and products at the beginning of the year; provided, however—

(i) That if any livestock, grain, or other property on hand at the beginning of the taxable year had been purchased and the cost thereof not charged to expense, only the difference between the cost and the selling price should be reported as income for the year in which sold;

(ii) But if the cost of such property had been charged to expense for a previous year, the entire amount received must be reported as income for the year in which sold.

(c) Because of the difficulty of ascertaining actual cost of livestock and other farm products, farmers who render their returns upon an inventory basis may value their inventories according to the "farm-price method," and farmers raising livestock may value their inventories of animals according to either the "farm-price method" or the "unit-livestock-price method."

(d) The "farm-price method" provides for the valuation of inventories at market price less direct cost of disposition. If this method of valuing inventories is used, it must be applied to the entire inventory except as to livestock inventoried, at the taxpayer's election, under the "unit-livestock-price method." If the use of the "farm-price method" of valuing inventories for any taxable year involves a change in method of valuing inventories from that employed in prior years, permission for such change shall first be secured from the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2.

(e) The "unit-livestock-price method" provides for the valuation of the different classes of animals in the inventory at a standard unit price for each animal within a class. A livestock raiser electing this method of valuing his animals must adopt a reasonable classification of the animals in his inventory with respect to the age and kind included so that the unit prices assigned to the several classes will reasonably account for the normal costs incurred in producing the animals within such classes. Thus, if a cattle raiser determines that it costs approximately $15 to produce a calf, and $7.50 each year to raise the calf to maturity, his classifications and unit prices would be as follows: calves, $15; yearlings, $22.50; 2-year olds, $30; mature animals, $37.50. The classification selected by the livestock raiser, and the unit prices assigned to the several classes, are subject to approval by the Commissioner upon examination of the taxpayer's return.

(f) A taxpayer who elects to use the "unit-livestock-price method" must apply it to all livestock raised, whether for sale or for breeding, draft, or dairy purposes. Once established, the unit prices and classifications selected by the taxpayer must be consistently applied in all subsequent years in the valuation of livestock inventories. No changes in the classification of animals or unit prices will be made without the approval of the Commissioner.

(g) A livestock raiser who uses the "unit-livestock-price method" must include in his inventory at cost any livestock purchased, except that animals purchased for breeding, dairy, or draft purposes can, at the election of the livestock raiser, be included in inventory or be treated as capital assets subject to depreciation after maturity. If the animals purchased are not mature at the time of purchase, the cost should be increased at the end of each accounting year in accordance with the established unit prices, except that no increase is to be made in the year of purchase if the animal is acquired during the last six months of that year. If the records maintained permit identification of a purchased animal, the cost of such animal will be eliminated from the closing inventory in the event of its sale or loss. Otherwise, the first-in first-out method of valuing inventories must be applied.

(h) If a taxpayer using the "farm-price method" desires to adopt the "unit-livestock-price method" in valuing his inventories of livestock, permission for the change shall first be secured from the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2. However, a taxpayer who has filed returns on the basis of inventories at cost, or cost or market whichever is lower, may adopt the "unit-livestock-price method" for valuing his inventories of livestock without formal application for permission, but the classifications and unit prices selected are subject to approval by the Commissioner upon examination of the taxpayer's return. A livestock raiser who has adopted a constant unit price method of valuing livestock inventories and filed returns on that basis will be considered as having elected the "unit-livestock-price method."

(i) If returns have been made in which the taxable net income has been computed upon incomplete inventories, the abnormality should be corrected by submitting with the return for the current taxable year a statement for the preceding year. In this statement such adjustments shall be made as are necessary to bring the closing inventory for the preceding year into agreement with the opening complete inventory for the current taxable year. If necessary clearly to reflect income, similar adjustments may be made as at the beginning of the preceding year or years, and the tax, if any be due, shall be assessed and paid at the rate of tax in effect for such year or years.

§ 39.22 (c)-7 Inventories of miners and manufacturers. A taxpayer engaged in mining or manufacturing who by a single process or uniform series of processes derives a product of two or more kinds, sizes, or grades, the unit cost of which is substantially alike, and who in conformity to a recognized trade practice allocates an amount of cost to each kind, size, or grade of product, which in the aggregate will absorb the total cost of production, may, with the consent of the Commissioner, use such allocated cost as a basis for pricing inventories, provided such allocation bears a reasonable relation to the respective selling values of the different kinds, sizes, or grades of product. See section 22 (d) as to last-in first-out inventories.

§ 39.22 (c)-8 Inventories of retail merchants. (a) Retail merchants who employ what is known as the "retail method" of pricing inventories may make their returns upon that basis, provided that the use of such method is designated upon the return, that accurate accounts are kept, and that such method is consistently adhered to unless a change is authorized by the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2. Under this method the total of the retail selling prices of the goods on hand at the end of the year in each department or of each class of goods is reduced to approximate cost by deducting therefrom an amount which bears the same ratio to such total as—

(1) The total of the retail selling prices of the goods included in the opening inventory plus the retail selling prices of the goods purchased during the year, with proper adjustment to such selling prices for all mark-ups and mark-downs, less

(2) The cost of the goods included in the opening inventory plus the cost of the goods purchased during the year, bears to (1).

The result should represent as accurately as may be the amounts added to the cost price of the goods to cover selling and other expenses of doing business and for the margin of profit.

(b) For further adjustments to be made in the case of a retail merchant using the last-in first-out inventory method authorized by section 22 (d), see § 39.22 (d)-1.

(c) A taxpayer maintaining more than one department in his store or dealing in classes of goods carrying different percentages of gross profit should not use a percentage of profit based upon an average of his entire business, but should compute and use in valuing his inventory the proper percentages for the respective departments or classes of goods.

(d) A taxpayer (other than one using the last-in first-out inventory method) who previously has determined inventories in accordance with the foregoing, except that, to obtain a basis of approximate cost or market, whichever is lower, the practice has been followed, consistently and uniformly, of adjusting the retail selling prices of the goods included in the opening inventory and purchased during the year for mark-ups but not for mark-downs, may continue such practice subject to the conditions prescribed in this section. The adjustments must be bona fide and consistent and uniform. Where mark-downs are not included in the adjustments, mark-ups made to cancel or correct mark-downs shall not be included; and the mark-ups included must be reduced by the mark-downs made to cancel or correct such mark-ups.

(e) In no event shall mark-downs not based on actual reduction of retail sale prices, such as mark-downs based on depreciation and obsolescence, be recognized in determining the retail selling prices of the goods on hand at the end of the year.

(f) A taxpayer (other than one using the last-in first-out inventory method) who previously has determined inventories without following the practice of eliminating mark-downs in making adjustments to retail selling prices, may adopt such practice, provided permission to do so is obtained in accordance with, and subject to the terms provided by, § 39.41-2. A taxpayer filing a first return of income may adopt such practice subject to approval by the Commissioner upon examination of the return.

(g) A taxpayer using the last-in first-out inventory method in conjunction with retail computations must adjust retail selling prices for mark-downs as well as mark-ups, in order that there may be reflected the approximate cost of the goods on hand at the end of the year regardless of market values.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(d) [Last-in first-out inventory method.] (1) A taxpayer may use the following method (whether or not such method has been prescribed under subsection (c)) in inventorying goods specified in the application required under paragraph (2)

(A) Inventory them at cost;

(B) Treat those remaining on hand at the close of the taxable year as being: First, those included in the opening inventory of the taxable year (in the order of acquisition) to the extent thereof, and second, those acquired in the taxable year; and

(C) Treat those included in the opening inventory of the taxable year in which such method is first used as having been acquired at the same time and determine their cost by the average cost method.

(2) The method described in paragraph (1) may be used—

(A) Only in inventorying goods (required under subsection (c) to be inventoried) specified in an application to use such method filed at such time and in such manner as the Commissioner may prescribe; and

(B) Only if the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the taxpayer has used no procedure other than that specified in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1) in inventorying such goods to ascertain the income, profit, or loss of the first taxable year for which the method described in paragraph (1) is to be used, for the purpose of a report or statement covering such taxable year (i) to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or to beneficiaries, or (ii) for credit purposes.

(3) The change to, and the use of, such method shall be in accordance with such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe as necessary in order that the use of such method may clearly reflect income.

(4) In determining income for the taxable year preceding the taxable year for which such method is first used, the closing inventory of such preceding year of the goods specified in such application shall be at cost.

(5) If a taxpayer, having complied with paragraph (2), uses the method described in paragraph (1) for any taxable year, then such method shall be used in all subsequent taxable years unless—

(A) With the approval of the Commissioner a change to a different method is authorized; or

(B) The Commissioner determines that the taxpayer has used for any such subsequent taxable year some procedure other than that specified in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) in inventorying the goods specified in the application to ascertain the income, profit, or loss of such subsequent taxable year for the purpose of a report or statement covering such taxable year (i) to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or beneficiaries, or (ii) for credit purposes; and requires a change to a method different from that prescribed in paragraph (1) beginning with such subsequent taxable year or any taxable year thereafter.

In either of the above cases, the change to, and the use of, the different method shall be in accordance with such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe as necessary in order that the use of such method may clearly reflect income.

(6) Involuntary liquidation and replacement of inventory—(A) Adjustment of net income and resulting tax; years beginning prior to January 1, 1948. If, for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1940, and prior to January 1, 1948, the closing inventory of a taxpayer inventorying goods under the method provided in this subsection reflects a decrease from the opening inventory of such goods for such year, and if the taxpayer elects at such time and in such manner and subject to such regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe, to have the provisions of this paragraph apply, and if it [is] established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, in accordance with such regulations, that such decrease is attributable to the involuntary liquidation of such inventory as defined in subparagraph (B), and if the closing inventory of a subsequent taxable year, ending prior to January 1, 1953, reflects a replacement, in whole or in part, of the goods so previously liquidated, the net income of the taxpayer otherwise determined for the year of such involuntary liquidation shall be adjusted as follows:

(i) Increased by an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the aggregate cost of such goods reflected in the opening inventory of the year of involuntary liquidation over the aggregate replacement cost; or

(ii) Decreased by an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the aggregate replacement cost of such goods over the aggregate cost thereof reflected in the opening inventory of the year of the involuntary liquidation.

The taxes imposed by this chapter and by chapter 2 for the year of such liquidation, for preceding taxable years, and for all taxable years intervening between the year of liquidation and the year of replacement shall be redetermined, giving effect to such adjustments. Any increase in such taxes resulting from such adjustments shall be assessed and collected as a deficiency but without interest, and any overpayment so resulting shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer without interest.

(B) Definition of involuntary liquidation. The term "involuntary liquidation" as used in this paragraph, means the sale or other disposition of goods inventoried under the method described in this subsection, either voluntary or involuntary, coupled with a failure on the part of the taxpayer to purchase, manufacture, or otherwise produce and have on hand at the close of the taxable year in which such sale or other disposition occurred such goods as would, if on hand at the close of such taxable year, be subject to the application of the provisions of this subsection, if such failure on the part of the taxpayer is due, directly and exclusively, (i) to enemy capture or control of sources of limited foreign supply; (ii) to shipping or other transportation shortages; (iii) to material shortages resulting from priorities or allocations; (iv) to labor shortages; or (v) to other prevailing war conditions beyond the control of the taxpayer.

(C) Replacements. If, in the case of any taxpayer subject to the provisions of subparagraph (A), the closing inventory of the taxpayer for a taxable year, subsequent to the year of involuntary liquidation but prior to the complete replacement of the goods so liquidated, reflects an increase over the opening inventory of such goods for the taxable year, the goods reflecting such increase shall be considered, in the order of their acquisition, as having been acquired in replacement of the goods most recently liquidated (whether or not in a year of involuntary liquidation) and not previously replaced, and if the liquidation was an involuntary liquidation shall be taken into purchases and included in the closing inventory of the taxpayer for the year of replacement at the inventory cost basis of the goods replaced.

(D) Election irrevocable. An election by the taxpayer to have the provisions of this paragraph apply, once made, shall be irrevocable and shall be binding for the year of the involuntary liquidation and for all determinations for prior and subsequent taxable years insofar as they are related to the year of liquidation or replacement.

(E) Adjustment in certain cases. If the adjustments specified in subparagraph (A) are, with respect to any taxable year, prevented, on the date of the filing of the income tax return of the taxpayer for the year of the replacement, or within three years from such date, by any provision or rule of law (other than this subparagraph and other than section 3761, relating to compromises), such adjustments shall nevertheless be made if, in respect of the taxable year for which the adjustment is sought, a notice of deficiency is mailed or a claim for refund is filed, as the case may be, within three years after the date of the filing of the income tax return for the year of replacement. If, at the time of the mailing of such notice of deficiency or the filing of such claim for refund, the adjustment is so prevented, then the amount of the adjustment authorized by this paragraph shall be limited to the increase or decrease of the tax imposed by this chapter and Chapter 2 previously determined for such taxable year which results solely from the effect of subparagraph (A), and such amount shall be assessed and collected, or credited or refunded, in the same manner as if it were a deficiency or an overpayment, as the case may be, for such taxable year and as if, on the date of the filing of the income tax return for the year of the replacement, three years remain before the expiration of the periods of limitation upon assessment or the filing of claim for refund for the taxable year. The tax previously determined shall be ascertained in accordance with section 734 (d). The amount to be assessed and collected under this paragraph in the same manner as if it were a deficiency or to be credited or refunded in the same manner as if it were an overpayment shall not be diminished by any credit or set-off based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss, other than one resulting from the effect of subparagraph (A). Such amount, if paid, shall not be recovered by a claim or suit for refund, or suit for erroneous refund based upon any item, inclusion, deduction, credit, exemption, gain, or loss, other than one resulting from the effect of subparagraph (A).

(F) Years ending after June 30, 1950, and prior to January 1, 1954—(i) Adjustment of net income and resulting tax. If, for any taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, and prior to January 1, 1954, the closing inventory of a taxpayer inventorying goods under the method provided in this subsection reflects a decrease from the opening inventory of such goods for such year, and if the taxpayer elects, at such time and in such manner and subject to such regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe, to have the provisions of this paragraph apply, and if it is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, in accordance with such regulations, that such decrease is attributable to the involuntary liquidation of such inventory as defined in subparagraph (B) (as modified by clause (ii) of this subparagraph), and if the closing inventory of a subsequent taxable year, ending prior to January 1, 1956, reflects a replacement in whole or in part, of the goods so previously liquidated, the net income of the taxpayer otherwise determined for the year of such involuntary liquidations shall be increased by an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the aggregate cost of such goods reflected in the opening inventory of the year of involuntary liquidation over the aggregate replacement cost, or decreased by an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the aggregate replacement cost of such goods over the aggregate cost thereof reflected in the opening inventory of the year of the involuntary liquidation. The taxes imposed by this chapter and by chapter 2 for the year of such liquidation, for preceding taxable years, and for all taxable years intervening between the year of liquidation and the year of replacement shall be redetermined, giving effect to such adjustments. Any increase in such taxes resulting from such adjustments shall be assessed and collected as a deficiency but without interest, and any overpayment so resulting shall be credited or refunded to the taxpayer without interest.

(ii) Definition of involuntary liquidation. ›r the purposes of this subparagraph the rm "involuntary liquidation" shall have ıe meaning given to it in subparagraph (B) ıd, in addition, it shall mean a failure, as ferred to in that subparagraph, on the part the taxpayer due, directly and exclusively, disruption of normal trade relations beveen countries. For the purposes of this ıbparagraph the words "enemy" and "war" used in subparagraph (B), shall be inter:eted, pursuant to regulations prescribed by ıe Secretary, in such a way as to apply to rcumstances, occurrences and conditions, cking a state of war, which are similar, by ason of a state of national preparedness, to ıose which would exist under a state of war.

(iii) Application of subparagraphs (C) and E). Subparagraphs (C) and (E), to the ktent that they refer to any taxpayer sub:ct to the provisions of subparagraph (A) or the adjustments specified in or resulting om the effect of subparagraph (A), shall be applicable to a taxpayer subject to the proisions of this subparagraph or to adjustıents specified in or resulting from the effect f this subparagraph as though they specifically referred to this subparagraph. If, for ny taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, nd prior to January 1, 1953, subparagraph C) is applicable with respect to involuntary quidations of goods of the same class sub:ct to the provisions of both subparagraph A) and this subparagraph, the involuntary quidations of such goods subject to the rovisions of this subparagraph shall be conidered for the purpose of subparagraph (C) s having occurred prior to the involuntary quidations of such goods subject to the proisions of subparagraph (A). For the purıose of this clause, and with respect to the axable years covered by this subparagraph, he reference in subparagraph (E) to section 34 (d) shall be taken as a reference to secion 452 (d).

Sec. 22 (d) as amended by sec. 219 (a), Rev. ıct 1939; sec. 118, sec. 119, Rev. Act 1942; ec. 110, Rev. Act 1943; Sec. 8, Pub. Law 384 80th Cong.); Pub. Law 756 (81st Cong.); ?ub. Law 919 (81st Cong.); sec. 306 (a), Rev. ıct 1951]

§ 39.22 (d)-1 Last-in first-out inventories. (a) Any taxpayer permitted or required to take inventories pursuant to the provisions of section 22 (c) and pursuant to the provisions of §§ 39.22 (c)-1 to 39.22 (c)-8, inclusive, may elect with respect to those goods specified in his application and properly subject to inventory to compute his opening and closing inventories in accordance with the method provided by section 22 (d). Under this last-in first-out inventory method, the taxpayer is permitted to treat those goods remaining on hand at the close of the taxable year as being:

(1) Those included in the opening inventory of the taxable year, in the order of acquisition and to the extent thereof, and

This last-in first-out inventory method is not dependent upon the character of the business in which the taxpayer is engaged, or upon the identity or want of identity through commingling of any of the goods on hand, and may be adopted by the taxpayer as of the close of any taxable year.

(b) If the last-in first-out inventory method is used by a taxpayer who regularly and consistently, in a manner similar to hedging on a futures market, matches purchases with sales, then firm purchases and sales contracts (i. e., those not legally subject to cancellation by either party) entered into at fixed prices on or before the date of the inventory may be included in purchases or sales, as the case may be, for the purpose of determining the cost of goods sold and the resulting profit or loss, provided that this practice is regularly and consistently adhered to by the taxpayer and that, in the opinion of the Commissioner, income is clearly reflected thereby.

(c) A manufacturer or processor who has adopted the last-in first-out inventory method as to a class of goods may elect to have such method apply to the raw materials only (including those included in goods in process and in finished goods) expressed in terms of appropriate units. If such method is adopted, the adjustments are confined to costs of the raw material in the inventory and the cost of the raw material in goods in process and in finished goods produced by such manufacturer or processor and reflected in the inventory.

Example (1). Assume the opening inventory had 10 units of raw material, 10 units of goods in process, and 10 units of finished goods and the raw material cost was 6 cents a unit, the processing cost 2 cents a unit, and overhead cost 1 cent a unit. For the purposes of this example, it is assumed that the entire amount of goods in process was 50 percent processed.

OPENING INVENTORY

	Raw material	Goods in process	Finished goods
Raw material	$0.60	$0.60	$0.60
Processing cost		.10	.20
Overhead		.05	.10

In the closing inventory there are 20 units of raw material, 6 units of goods in process, and 8 units of finished goods and the costs were—raw material 10 cents, processing cost 4 cents, and overhead 1 cent.

CLOSING INVENTORY

[Based on cost and prior to adjustment]

	Raw material	Goods in process	Finished goods
Raw material	$2.00	$0.60	$0.80
Processing costs		.12	.32
Overhead		.03	.08
Total	2.00	.75	1.20

There were 30 units of raw material in the opening inventory and 34 units in the closing inventory. The adjustment to the closing inventory would be as follows:

CLOSING INVENTORY AS ADJUSTED

	Raw material	Goods in process	Finished goods
Raw material:
20 at 6 cents	$1.20
6 at 6 cents		$0.36
4 at 6 cents			$0.24
4 at 10 cents[1]			.40
Processing costs		.12	.32
Overhead		.03	.08
Total	1.20	.51	1.04

[1] This excess is subject to determination of price under section 22 (d) (1) (B) and § 39.22(d)-2. If the excess falls in goods in process, the same adjustment is applicable.

The only adjustment to the closing inventory is the cost of the raw material; the processing costs and overhead cost are not changed.

Example (2). Assume the opening inventory had 5 units of raw material, 10 units of goods in process, and 20 units of finished goods with the same prices as in example (1) and the closing inventory had 20 units of raw material, 20 units of goods in process, and 10 units of finished goods, with raw material costs as in the closing inventory in example (1). The adjusted closing inventory would be as follows in so far as the raw material is concerned:

Raw material, 20 at 6 cents	$1.20
Goods in process:
15 at 6 cents	.90
5 at 10 cents[1]	.50
Finished goods:
None at 6 cents	.00
10 at 10 cents[1]	1.00

The 20 units of raw material in the raw state plus 15 units of raw material in goods in process make up the 35 units of raw material that were contained in the opening inventory.

(d) For the purposes of this section, raw material in the opening inventory must be compared with similar raw material in the closing inventory. There may be several types of raw materials, depending upon the character, quality or price, and each type of raw material in the opening inventory must be compared with a similar type in the closing inventory.

(e) In the cotton textile industry there may be different raw materials depending upon marked differences in length of staple, in color or grade of the cotton. But where different staple lengths or grades of cotton are being used at different times in the same mill to produce the same class of goods, such differences would not necessarily require the classification into different raw materials.

(f) As to the pork packing industry a live hog is considered as being composed of various raw materials, different cuts of a hog varying markedly in price and use. Generally a hog is processed into approximately 10 primal cuts and several miscellaneous articles. However, due to similarity in price and use, these may be grouped into fewer classifications, each group being classed as one raw material.

(g) When the finished product contains two or more different raw materials as in the case of cotton and rayon mixtures, each raw material is treated separately and adjustments made accordingly.

(h) Upon written notice addressed to the Commissioner by the taxpayer, a taxpayer who has heretofore adopted the last-in first-out inventory method in respect of any goods may adopt the method authorized in this section and limit the election to the raw material including raw materials entering into goods in process and in finished goods. If this method is adopted as to any specific goods, it must be used exclusively for such goods for any previous year (not closed by agreement) to which the previous election applies and all subsequent years, unless permission to change is granted by the Commissioner.

(i) The election may also be limited to that phase in the manufacturing process where a product is produced that is recognized generally as a salable product, as for example, in the textile industry where one phase of the process is the production of yarn. Since yarn is generally recognized as a salable product the election may be limited to that portion of the process when yarn is produced. In the case of copper and brass processors, the election may be limited to the production of bars, plates, sheets, etc., although these may be further processed into other products.

(j) The election may also apply to any one raw material, when two or more raw materials enter into the composition of the finished product, for example, in the case of cotton and rayon yarn the taxpayer may elect to inventory the cotton only. However, a taxpayer who has previously made an election to use the last-in first-out inventory method may not now elect to exclude any raw materials that were covered by such previous election.

(k) If a taxpayer using the retail method of pricing inventories, authorized by § 39.22 (c)-8, elects to use in connection therewith the last-in first-out inventory method authorized by section 22 (d) the apparent cost of the goods on hand at the end of the year, determined pursuant to § 39.22 (c)-8, shall be adjusted to the extent of price changes therein taking place subsequent to the close of the preceding taxable year. The amount of any apparent inventory increase or decrease to be eliminated in this adjustment shall be determined by reference to acceptable price indices established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner. Price indices prepared by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics which are applicable to the goods in question will be considered acceptable to the Commissioner. Price indices which are based upon inadequate records, or which are not subject to complete and detailed audit within the Internal Revenue Service, will not be approved.

(l) If a taxpayer uses consistently the so-called "dollar-value" method of pricing inventories, or any other method of computation established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner as reasonably adaptable to the purpose and intent of section 22 (d) and if such taxpayer elects under section 22 (d) to use the last-in first-out inventory method authorized by such section, the taxpayer's opening and closing inventories shall be determined under section 22 (d) by the use of the appropriate adaptation.

§ 39.22 (d)-2 Requirements incident to adoption and use of last-in first-out inventory method. Except as otherwise provided in § 39.22 (d)-1 with respect to raw material computations, with respect to retail inventory computations, and with respect to "dollar-value" and other methods of computation established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner as reasonably adapted to the purpose and intent of section 22 (d) the adoption and use of the last-in first-out inventory method is, by section 22 (d) and the regulations thereunder, made subject to the following requirements:

(a) The taxpayer shall file an application to use such method specifying with particularity the goods to which it is to be applied.

(c) Goods of the specified type included in the opening inventory of the taxable year for which the method is first used shall be considered as having been acquired at the same time and at a unit cost equal to the actual cost of the aggregate divided by the number of units on hand. The actual cost of the aggregate shall be determined pursuant to the inventory method employed by the taxpayer under the regulations applicable to the preceding taxable year with the exception that restoration shall be made with respect to any write-down to market values resulting from the pricing of former inventories.

(d) Goods of the specified type on hand as of the close of the taxable year in excess of what were on hand as of the beginning of the taxable year shall be included in the closing inventory, regardless of identification with specific invoices and regardless of specific cost accounting records, at costs determined pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1 or Rule 2, dependent upon the character of the transactions in which the taxpayer is engaged:

(1) Rule 1. In the case of a taxpayer engaged in the purchase and sale of merchandise, such as a retail grocer or druggist, or engaged in the initial production of merchandise and its sale without processing, such as a miner selling his ore output without smelting or refining, such costs shall be determined—

(i) By reference to the actual cost of the goods most recently purchased or produced;

(ii) By reference to the actual cost of the goods purchased or produced during the taxable year in the order of acquisition;

(iii) By application of an average unit cost equal to the aggregate cost of all of the goods purchased or produced throughout the taxable year divided by the total number of units so purchased or produced, the goods reflected in such inventory increase being considered for the purposes of section 22 (d) as having been acquired all at the same time; or

(iv) Pursuant to any other proper method which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, clearly reflects income.

Whichever of the several methods of valuing the inventory increase is adopted by the taxpayer and approved by the Commissioner shall be consistently adhered to in all subsequent taxable years so long as the last-in first-out inventory method is used by the taxpayer.

The application of Rule 1 may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Suppose that the taxpayer adopts the last-in first-out inventory method for the taxable year 1952 with an opening inventory of 10 units at 10 cents per unit, that it makes 1952 purchases of 10 units as follows:

	Units		Price		Amount
January	1	at	$0.11	=	$0.11
April	2	at	.12	=	.24
July	3	at	.13	=	.39
October	4	at	14	=	.56
Totals	10				1.30

and that it has a 1952 closing inventory of 15 units. This closing inventory, depending upon the taxpayer's method of valuing inventory increases, will be computed as follows:

(a) Most recent purchases—

	Units		Price			Amount
	10	at	$0.10		=	$1.00
	4	at	.14	(October)	=	.56
	1	at	.13	(July)	=	.13
Totals	15					1.69

or

(b) In order of acquisition—

	Units		Price			Amount
	10	at	$0.10		=	$1.00
	1	at	.11	(January)	=	.11
	2	at	.12	(April)	=	.24
	2	at	.13	(July)	=	.26
Totals	15					1.61

or

(c) At an annual average—

	Units		Price			Amount
	10	at	$0.10		=	$1.00
Totals	15					1.65

Example (2). Suppose that the taxpayer's closing inventory for 1953, the year following that involved in example (1), reflects an inventory decrease for the year, and not an increase; suppose that there is, accordingly, a 1953 closing inventory of 13 units. Inasmuch as the decreased closing inventory will be determined wholly by reference to the 15 units reflected in the opening inventory for the year, and will be taken "in the order of acquisition" pursuant to section 22 (d) (1) (B), and inasmuch as the character of the taxpayer's opening inventory for the year will be dependent upon its method of valuing its 5-unit inventory increase for the preceding year, the closing inventory for 1953 will be computed as follows:

(a) In case the increase for the preceding taxable year was taken by reference to the most recent purchases—

	Units		Price			Amount
	10	at	$0.10	(from 1951)	=	$1.00
	1	at	.13	(July 1952)	=	.13
	2	at	.14	(October 1952)	=	.28
Totals	13					1.41

or

(b) In case the increase for the preceding taxable year was taken in the order of acquisition—

10 at $0.10 (from 1951)	=	$1.00
1 at .11 (January 1952)	=	.11
2 at .12 (April 1952)	=	.24
Totals 13		1.35

(c) In case the increase for the preceding taxable year was taken on the basis of an average—

10 at $0.10 (from 1951)	=	$1.00
3 at .13 (from 1952)	=	.39
Totals 13		1.39

(2) Rule 2. In the case of a taxpayer engaged in manufacturing, fabricating, processing, or otherwise producing merchandise, such costs shall be determined —

(i) In the case of raw materials purchased or initially produced by the taxpayer, in the manner elected by the taxpayer under Rule 1 to the same extent as if the taxpayer were engaged in purchase and sale transactions;

and

(ii) In the case of goods in process, regardless of the stage to which the manufacture, fabricating, or processing may have advanced, and in the case of finished goods, pursuant to any proper method which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, clearly reflects income.

(e) The taxpayer shall establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the taxpayer, in ascertaining income, profit, or loss for the taxable year for which the last-in first-out inventory method is first used or for any subsequent taxable year, for credit purposes or for the purpose of reports to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or to beneficiaries, has not used any inventory method other than that referred to in § 39.22 (d)-1 or at variance with the requirement referred to in paragraph (c) of this section, the taxpayer's use of market value in lieu of cost or his issuance of reports or credit statements covering a period of operations less than the whole of the taxable year not being considered at variance with this requirement.

(f) Goods of the specified type on hand as of the close of the taxable year preceding the taxable year for which this inventory method is first used shall be included in the taxpayer's closing inventory for such preceding taxable year at cost determined in the manner prescribed in paragraph (c) of this section.

(g) The last-in first-out inventory method, once adopted by the taxpayer with the approval of the Commissioner, shall be adhered to in all subsequent taxable years unless—

(1) A change to a different method is approved by the Commissioner; or

(2) The Commissioner determines that the taxpayer, in ascertaining income, profit, or loss for the whole of any taxable year subsequent to his adoption of the last-in first-out inventory method, for credit purposes or for the purpose of reports to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or to beneficiaries, has used any inventory method at variance with that referred to in § 39.22 (d)-1 and requires of the taxpayer a change to a different method for such subsequent taxable year or any taxable year thereafter.

(h) The records and accounts employed by the taxpayer in keeping his books shall be maintained in conformity with the inventory method referred to in § 39.22 (d)-1, and such supplemental and detailed inventory records shall be maintained as will enable the Commissioner readily to verify the taxpayer's inventory computations as well as his compliance with these several requirements.

§ 39.22 (d)-3 Time and manner of making election. (a) The last-in first-out inventory method may be adopted and used only if the taxpayer files with his return for the taxable year as of the close of which the method is first to be used, in triplicate on Form 970, and pursuant to the instructions printed thereon and to the requirements of this section, a statement of his election to use such inventory method. Such statement shall be accompanied by an analysis of all inventories of the taxpayer as of the beginning and as of the end of the taxable year for which the last-in first-out inventory method is proposed first to be used, and also as of the beginning of the preceding taxable year. In the case of a manufacturer, this analysis shall show in detail the manner in which costs are computed with respect to raw materials, goods in process, and finished goods, segregating the products (whether in process or finished goods) into natural groups on the basis of either (1) similarity in factory processes through which they pass, or (2) similarity of raw materials used, or (3) similarity in style, shape, or use finished products. Each group of products shall be clearly described.

(b) The taxpayer shall submit for the consideration of the Commissioner in connection with the taxpayer's adoption or use of the last-in first-out inventory method such other detailed information with respect to his business or accounting system as may be at any time requested by the Commissioner.

(c) As a condition to the taxpayer's use of the last-in first-out inventory method, the Commissioner may require that the method be used with respect to goods other than those specified in the taxpayer's statement of election if, in the opinion of the Commissioner, the use of such method with respect to such other goods is essential to a clear reflection of income.

(d) Whether or not the taxpayer's application for the adoption and use of the last-in first-out inventory method should be approved, and whether or not such method, once adopted, may be continued, and the propriety of all computations incidental to the use of such method will be determined by the Commissioner in connection with the examination of the taxpayer's returns.

§ 39.22 (d)-4 Adjustments to be made by taxpayer A taxpayer may not change to the last-in first-out method of taking inventories unless, at the time he files his application for the adoption of such method, he agrees to such adjustments incident to the change to or from such method, or incident to the use of such method, in the inventories of prior taxable years or otherwise, as the Commissioner upon the examination of the taxpayer's returns may deem necessary in order that the true income of the taxpayer will be clearly reflected for the years involved.

§ 39.22 (d)-5 Revocation of election. An election made to adopt and use the last-in first-out inventory method is irrevocable, and the method once adopted shall be used in all subsequent taxable years, unless the use of another method be required by the Commissioner, or authorized by him pursuant to a written application therefor filed with him as provided in § 39.41-2.

§ 39.22 (d)-6 Change from last-in first-out inventory method. If the taxpayer is granted permission by the Commissioner to discontinue the use of last-in first-out method of taking inventories, and thereafter to pursue some other method, or if the taxpayer is required by the Commissioner to discontinue the use of the last-in first-out method by reason of the taxpayer's failure to conform to the requirements detailed in § 39.22 (d)-2, the inventory of the specified goods for the first taxable year affected by the change and for each taxable year thereafter shall be taken—

(a) In conformity with the method used by the taxpayer under section 22 (c) in inventorying goods not included in his last-in first-out inventory computations; or

(b) If the last-in first-out inventory method was used by the taxpayer with respect to all of his goods subject to inventory, then in conformity with the inventory method used by the taxpayer prior to his adoption of the last-in first-out inventory method; or

(c) If the taxpayer had not used inventories prior to his adoption of the last-in first-out inventory method and had no goods currently subject to inventory by a method other than the last-in first-out inventory method, then in conformity with such inventory method as may be selected by the taxpayer and approved by the Commissioner as resulting in a clear reflection of income; or

(d) In any event, in conformity with any inventory method to which the taxpayer may change pursuant to application approved by the Commissioner.

§ 39.22 (d)-7 Involuntary liquidation and replacement. (a) If prevailing war conditions beyond the control of the taxpayer, or certain prescribed post-war conditions beyond his control, should render it impossible either during the period of the war or within the prescribed post-war period for a taxpayer using the last-in first-out inventory method to have on hand at the close of the taxable year a stock of merchandise in kind and description like that included in the opening inventory for the year, or in a quantity equal to that of the opening inventory, the resulting inventory decrease for the year will be regarded, at the election of the taxpayer, as reflecting an involuntary liquidation subject to replacement. If the taxpayer notifies the Commissioner at any time not later than six months after the time of filing his income tax return for the year of the liquidation, or at any time not later than December 15, 1952, in the case of the year of liquidation being a taxable year ending before March 1, 1952, that he intends to effect a replacement of the liquidated stock, in whole or in part, and that he desires to have applied in his case the involuntary liquidation and replacement provisions of section 22 (d) (6) and if he establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner the involuntary character of the liquidation to which his stock has been subjected, effect shall be given, when replacement has been made, to an adjustment of net income for the year of liquidation to the extent of the difference between the replacement costs incurred and the original inventory cost of the base stock inventory liquidated. For extensions of time, see Subpart G of the regulations in this part. If the replacement costs exceed such inventory costs, the net income of the taxpayer otherwise computed shall be reduced by an amount equal to such excess. If the replacement costs are less than the inventory costs, net income otherwise computed shall be increased to the extent of such difference. Any deficiency in the income or excess profits tax of the taxpayer, or any overpayment of such taxes, attributable to such adjustment shall be assessed and collected by the Commissioner or credited or refunded to the taxpayer without interest.

(b) The statutory provisions affording recognition to the involuntary character of inventory decreases which become apparent in war years and authorizing for tax purposes a replacement of the items of merchandise so liquidated are limited in their application to liquidations occurring in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1948, and to inventory replacements effected in taxable years ending before January 1, 1953. The statutory provisions affording recognition to the involuntary character of inventory decreases which become apparent in post-war taxable years and authorizing for tax purposes a replacement of the items of merchandise so liquidated are limited in their application to liquidations occurring in taxable years ending after June 30, 1950, and before January 1, 1954, and to inventory replacements effected in taxable years ending before January 1, 1956.

(c) With respect to inventory decreases occurring during the period of the war, a failure on the part of the taxpayer to have on hand in his closing inventory for the taxable year merchandise of the kind, description, and quantity of that reflected in his opening inventory will be considered as an involuntary liquidation only if it is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such failure is due wholly to his inability to purchase, manufacture, or otherwise produce and procure delivery of such merchandise during the taxable year of liquidation by reason of prevailing war conditions, such as (1) enemy capture or control of sources of limited foreign supply (2) shipping or other transportation shortages; (3) material shortages resulting from priorities or allocations; (4) labor shortages; and (5) similar war conditions beyond the control of the taxpayer. A voluntary shift by the taxpayer, in the exercise of business judgment, to merchandise of a different character, description, or use, or to merchandise processed out of a substantially different kind of raw materials while raw materials of the type originally used are still available will not be considered as an involuntary liquidation notwithstanding the fact that such a shift in merchandise stocked was prompted by a shifting market demand attributable to war conditions. The term "involuntary liquidation" presupposes a physical inability to maintain a normal inventory as distinguished from a financial or business disinclination on the part of the taxpayer to do so.

(d) With respect to inventory decreases occurring in taxable years ending after June 30, 1950, and before January 1, 1954, the rules prescribed in paragraph (c) of this section shall apply. For the purpose of such rules, the words "enemy" and "war" shall be interpreted to apply to circumstances, occurrences, and conditions lacking a state of war, which are similar, by reason of a state of national preparedness, to those which would exist under a state of war. The various directives, orders, regulations, and allotments issued by the Federal Government in connection with national preparedness are among such circumstances and conditions. Likewise, a voluntary compliance with a request of an authorized representative of the Federal Government made upon an industry or an important segment thereof, or a voluntary allocation of materials by an industry or important segment thereof sanctioned by the Federal Government, if made in connection with the national preparedness program, might be considered as such a circumstance or condition. Similarly, so much of an inventory decrease as is directly and exclusively attributable to the Federal Government's stockpiling program for periods during which an item is not subject to allotment shall also be considered as subject to the provisions of section 22 (d) (6) Thus, so much of an inventory decrease as is due wholly to the effect of directives, orders, regulations, or allotments issued pursuant to the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended (50 U. S. C. App. 2061) or to any other circumstance or condition which is solely dependent upon other action taken by the Federal Government in furtherance of the national preparedness program, ordinarily shall be considered as an involuntary liquidation under section 22 (d) (6) and this section; however, to the extent that such a decrease is due to the disposition of goods acquired in violation of such directives, orders, regulations, or allotments, such decrease shall not be considered as such an involuntary liquidation. With respect to an inventory decrease in a taxable year ending after June 30, 1950, and before January 1, 1954, due directly and exclusively to a disruption of normal trade relations between countries, such an inventory decrease shall be considered as an involuntary liquidation subject to the rules and requirements prescribed in the preceding paragraphs, including the requirement that the taxpayer establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner the cause of the involuntary liquidation. A disruption of normal trade relations between countries may be reflected by unusual export limitations imposed by a foreign government, by unusual exchange restrictions, or by other unusual circumstances or conditions beyond the control of the taxpayer.

(e) If the taxpayer would have the involuntary liquidation and replacement provisions applicable with respect to any inventory decrease, he musts so elect within the time prescribed by the regulations in this part. In making such election, the taxpayer shall attach to his return and make a part thereof, or he shall furnish separately to the Commissioner, a statement setting forth the following matters: (1) The wish of the taxpayer to invoke the involuntary liquidation and replacement provisions; (2) a detailed list or other identifying description of the items of merchandise claimed to have been subjected to involuntary liquidation and the extent to which replacement is intended; (3) the circumstances relied upon as rendering the taxpayer unable to maintain throughout the taxable year a normal inventory of the items involved, including evidence of the applicable National Production Authority inventory control figures for the beginning and the close of the taxable year (or if none, a statement to that effect), allotments applied for, allotments received, and reason for failure to place allotments received; (4) detailed proof of such circumstances to the extent that they may not be the subject-matter of common knowledge; (5) a full description of what efforts were made on the part of the taxpayer to effect replacement during the taxable year and the result of such efforts; and (6) in the case of an election made pursuant to an extension of time sought under Subpart G of the regulations in this part more than six months after the filing of the return for the year of liquidation, the circumstances relied upon as justifying the election at such time, together with a disclosure of the extent, if any to which replacements have already been made.

(f) The election of the taxpayer to treat an involuntary decrease of inventory as subject to the replacement adjustments is to be exercised separately for each taxable year reflecting such a decrease, and the election, once exercised with respect to a given year, shall be irrevocable with respect to the particular decrease involved and its replacement, and shall be binding for the year of liquidation, the year of replacement, and all prior, intervening, and subsequent years to the extent that such prior, intervening, and subsequent years are affected by the adjustments authorized. The ultimate replacement and the resulting adjustment for the year of liquidation may have consequences, among others, in the earnings and profits of intervening years and the inventory accounts of subsequent years. They may have consequences in the prior years by reason of adjustments in net operating loss or unused excess profits credit carry-backs, and in intervening and subsequent taxable years by reason of adjustments in carry-overs. Adjustments are to be made for the several years affected consistent with the adjustments made for the year of liquidation. Detailed records shall be maintained such as will enable the Commissioner, in his examination of the taxpayer's returns for the year of replacement, readily to verify the extent of the inventory decrease claimed to be involuntary in character and the facts upon which such claim is based, all subsequent inventory increases and decreases, and all other facts material to the replacement adjustment authorized.

(g) Notwithstanding the ultimate purchase price or the cost of production ultimately incurred by the taxpayer in effecting replacement of a stock involuntarily liquidated, the merchandise reflecting the replacement shall be taken into purchases and included in the closing inventory for the year of replacement, and shall be included in the inventories of subsequent taxable years, at the inventory cost figure of the merchandise replaced.

(h) The goods reflected in any inventory increase in a year subsequent to a year of involuntary liquidation, to the extent that they constitute items of the kind and description liquidated in prior years, whether or not in a year of involuntary liquidation, shall be deemed, in the order of their acquisition, as having been acquired by the taxpayer in replacement of like goods most recently liquidated and not previously replaced; however, in a case involving involuntary liquidations of goods of the same class subject to the provisions of both section 22 (d) (6) (A) and section 22 (d) (6) (F) the involuntary liquidations of such goods subject to the provisions of section 22 (d) (6) (F) shall, for the purpose of replacements made in taxable years ending before January 1, 1953, be considered as having occurred prior to the involuntary liquidations of such goods subject to the provisions of section 22 (d) (6) (A) To the extent that the items of increase are allocated to items liquidated voluntarily, no adjustment will be required or permitted. Such replacement merchandise will be carried in the inventory at its actual cost of acquisition. To the extent that replacements are allocated to items involuntarily liquidated, however, the provisions of this section shall apply, both with respect to adjustments for the year of liquidation and other taxable years affected and with respect to inventory computations for the year of replacement and all subsequent taxable years.

(i) In some cases it may appear that, at the time of the filing of the income tax return for the year of replacement, or within three years thereafter, an adjustment with respect to the income or excess profits taxes for the year of the involuntary liquidation, or for some prior, intervening, or subsequent taxable year, is prevented by the running of the statute of limitations, by the execution of a closing agreement, by virtue of a court decision which has become final, or by reason of some other provision or rule of law other than section 3761 (relating to compromises) and other than the inventory replacement provisions. The adjustments provided for in connection with the involuntary liquidation and replacement of inventory shall nevertheless be made, but only if, within a period of three years after the date of the filing of the income tax return for the year of replacement, a notice of deficiency is mailed or a claim for refund is filed. No credit or refund will be allowed under such circumstances, whether within or without such three-year period, in the absence of a claim for refund duly filed; nor will a resulting deficiency be assessed or collected under section 272 (d) relating to waivers of restrictions. The issuance of the statutory notice of deficiency or the filing of a claim for refund are statutory conditions upon which depend the provisions of section 22 (d) (6) (E) The adjustment authorized by section 22 (d) (6) (E) is limited further to the tax attributable solely to the replacement adjustments. The amount of the adjustment shall be computed by reference to the amount of the tax previously determined, and without regard to factors affecting the taxable year involved to which no effect was given in such prior determination. The tax previously determined shall be ascertained in accordance with the principles stated in sections 452 (d) and 734 (d) § 40.452-4 of Regulations 130 (Part 40 of this chapter) and § 35.734-4 of Regulations 112 (26 CFR, 1943 Cum. Supp., Part 35) Any deficiency paid or any overpayment credited or refunded under these circumstances shall not be subject to recovery on a claim for refund or a suit for the recovery of an erroneous refund in any case in which such claim or suit is based upon factors other than those giving rise to the adjustments made.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(e) Distributions by corporations. Distributions by corporations shall be taxable to the shareholders as provided in section 115.

(f) Determination of gain or loss. In the case of a sale or other disposition of property, the gain or loss shall be computed as provided in section 111.

(g) Gross income from sources within and without United States. For computation of gross income from sources within and without the United States, see section 119.

(h) Foreign personal holding companies. For provisions relating to gross income of foreign personal holding companies and of their shareholders, see section 334.

(i) Consent dividends. For inclusion in gross income of amounts specified in shareholders' consents, see section 28.

(j) Income from mortgages made or obligations issued by joint stock land banks. For taxable status of income derived from mortgages made or obligations issued by joint stock land banks, see section 3799.

(k) Alimony, etc., income. In the case of a wife who is divorced or legally separated from her husband under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance, periodic payments (whether or not made at regular intervals) received subsequent to such decree in discharge of, or attributable to property transferred (in trust or otherwise) in discharge of, a legal obligation which, because of the marital or family relationship, is imposed upon or incurred by such husband under such decree or under a written instrument incident to such divorce or separation shall be includible in the gross income of such wife, and such amounts received as are attributable to property so transferred shall not be includible in the gross income of such husband. This subsection shall not apply to that part of any such periodic payment which the terms of the decree or written instrument fix, in terms of an amount of money or a portion of the payment, as a sum which is payable for the support of minor children of such husband. In case any such periodic payment is less than the amount specified in the decree or written instrument, for the purpose of applying the preceding sentence, such payment, to the extent of such sum payable for such support, shall be considered a payment for such support. Installment payments discharging a part of an obligation the principal sum of which is, in terms of money or property, specified in the decree or instrument shall not be considered periodic payments for the purposes of this subsection; except that an installment payment shall be considered a periodic payment for the purposes of this subsection if such principal sum, by the terms of the decree or instrument, may be or is to be paid within a period ending more than 10 years from the date of such decree or instrument, but only to the extent that such installment payment for the taxable year of the wife (or if more than one such installment payment for such taxable year is received during such taxable year, the aggregate of such installment payments) does not exceed 10 per centum of such principal sum. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of a payment of the principal sum which is allocable to a period after the taxable year of the wife in which it is received shall be considered an installment payment for the taxable year in which it is received. (In cases where such periodic payments are attributable to property of an estate or property held in trust, see section 171 (b).)

§ 39.22 (k)-1 Alimony and separate maintenance payments; income to former wife—(a) In general. (1) Section 22 (k) provides rules for treatment in certain cases of payments in the nature of or in lieu of alimony or an allowance for support as between spouses who are divorced or legally separated under a court order or decree. For convenience, the payee spouse will hereafter in this section be referred to as the "wife" and the spouse from whom she is divorced or legally separated as the "husband." See section 3797 (a) (17)

(2) Section 22 (k) requires the inclusion in the gross income of the wife of periodic payments (whether or not made at regular intervals) received by her after the decree of divorce or of separate maintenance. Such periodic payments may be received from either of the two following sources:

(i) In discharge of a legal obligation which, because of the marital or family relationship, is imposed upon or incurred by the husband, or

(ii) Attributable to property transferred (in trust or otherwise) in discharge of a legal obligation which, because of the marital or family relationship, is imposed upon or incurred by the husband.

(3) The obligation of the husband must be imposed upon him or assumed by him (or made specific) under either of the following:

(i) A court order or decree divorcing or legally separating the husband and wife, or

(ii) A written instrument incident to such divorce or legal separation.

The periodic payments received by the wife attributable to property so transferred and includible in her income are not to be included in the gross income of the husband. See also § 39.171-1 in cases where such periodic payments are attributable to property held in trust.

(4) The purpose and effect of section 22 (k) may be illustrated, in general, by the following examples, in which it is assumed that the husband and wife make their income tax returns on the calendar year basis:

Example (1). W sues H for divorce in 1952. The court awards W temporary alimony of $25 a week pending the final decree. On September 1, 1952, the court grants W a divorce and awards her $200 a month permanent alimony. No part of the $25 a week temporary alimony received prior to the decree is includible in W's income under section 22 (k), but the $200 a month received during the balance of 1952 by W is includible in her income for 1952. Under section 23 (u), H is entitled to deduct such $200 payments from his income.

Example (2). W files suit for divorce from H. In consideration of W's promise to relinquish all marital rights and not to make public H's financial affairs, H makes a legally binding promise in writing to W to pay to her $200 a month if a final decree of divorce is granted without any provision for alimony. Accordingly, W does not request alimony and no provision for alimony is made under a final decree of divorce. During 1952, H pays W $200 a month, pursuant to the promise. The $2,400 thus received by W is includible in her gross income under the provisions of section 22 (k). Under section 23 (u), H is entitled to a deduction of $2,400 from his gross income.

Example (3). H and W enter into an antenuptial agreement, under which, in consideration of W's relinquishment of all marital rights (including dower) in H's property, and, in order to provide for W's support and household expenses, H promises to pay W $200 a month for her life. Ten years after their marriage, W sues H for divorce but does not ask for or obtain alimony because of the provision already made for her support in the antenuptial agreement. Likewise, the divorce decree is silent as to such agreement and H's obligation to support W. Section 22 (k) does not apply to such a case. If, however, the decree were modified so as to refer to the antenuptial agreement, or if, at the time of the divorce, reference had been made to the antenuptial agreement in the court's decree or in a written instrument incident to the divorce, section 22 (k) would require the inclusion of the payments received by W after the decree in her income. (As to including such payments in the wife's income, if made by a trust created under the antenuptial agreement, regardless of whether referred to in the decree or a later instrument, see § 39.171-1.)

(5) Section 22 (k) applies only where the legal obligation being discharged arises out of the family or marital relationship in recognition of the general obligation to support, which is made specific by the instrument or decree. Thus, section 22 (k) does not apply to that part of any periodic payment which is attributable to the repayment by the husband of, for example, a bona fide loan previously made to him by the wife, the satisfaction of which is specified in the divorce decree as a part of the general settlement between the husband and wife.

(6) Periodic payments are includible in the wife's income under section 22 (k) only for the taxable year in which received by her. As to such amounts, the wife is to be treated as if she makes her income tax returns on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, regardless of whether she normally makes such returns on the accrual basis. However, if the periodic payments described in section 22 (k) are to be made by an estate or trust, such periodic payments are to be included in the wife's taxable year in which they are includible according to the rules as to income of estates and trusts provided in sections 162, 164, and 171 (b) whether or not such payments are made out of the income of such estates or trusts.

(b) Alimony income attributable to property. (1) The full amount of periodic payments received under the circumstances described in section 22 (k) is required to be included in the gross income of the recipient whether such amounts are derived, in whole or in part, from income received or accrued by the source to which such payments are attributable. Thus, it matters not that such payments are attributable to property in trust, to life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts, or to any other interest in property, or are paid directly or indirectly by the obligor husband from his income or capital. For example, if in order to meet an alimony obligation of $500 a month, the husband purchases or assigns for the benefit of his former wife a commercial annuity contract paying such amount, the full $500 a month received by the wife is includible in her income, and no part of such amount is includible in the husband's income or deductible by him. See section 22 (b) (2) (A) and § 39.22 (b) (2)-4. Likewise, if property is transferred by the husband, subject to an annual charge of $5,000, payable to his former wife in discharge of his alimony obligation under the divorce decree, the $5,000 received annually is, under section 22 (k) includible in the wife's income, regardless of whether such amount is paid out of income or principal of the property.

(2) The same rule applies to periodic payments attributable to property in trust. The full amount of periodic payments to which section 22 (k) applies is includible in the wife's income, regardless of whether such payments are made out of trust income. Such periodic payments are to be included in the wife's income under section 22 (k) and are to be excluded from the husband's income, even though the income of the trust would otherwise be includible in his income under section 22 (a), section 166, section 167, or any other section of the Code or the regulations in this part. As to periodic payments received by a former wife attributable to property in trust in cases to which section 22 (k) does not apply because the husband's obligation is not specified in the decree or an instrument incident thereto, see section 171 (a) and §39.171-1.

(3) Section 22 (k) does not apply to that part of any periodic payment attributable to that portion of any interest in property transferred in discharge of the husband's obligation under the decree or instrument incident thereto which interest originally belonged to the wife. It will apply, however, if she received such interest from her husband in contemplation of or as an incident to the divorce or separation without adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth, other than the release of the husband or his property from marital obligations. An example of the first rule is a case where the husband and wife transfer securities, which were owned by them jointly in trust to pay an annuity to the wife. In this case, the full amount of that part of the annuity received by the wife in discharge of the husband's obligation under the decree, or instrument incident thereto, is taxable to her under section 22 (k), while that portion of the annuity attributable to the wife's interest in the securities so transferred is taxable to her only to the extent it is out of trust income as provided in section 162. If, however, the husband's transfer of an interest in his property to his wife, preliminary to a transfer of such property in discharge of his obligation, is made in an attempt to avoid the application of section 22 (k) to part of such payments received by his wife, such transfers will be considered as a part of the same transfer by the husband of his property in discharge of his obligation. In such a case, section 22 (k) will be applied to the full amount received by the wife. As to periodic payments received under a joint purchase of a commercial annuity contract, see § 39.22 (b) (2)-4.

(c) Alimony installment payments. (1) In general, installment payments discharging a part of an obligation the principal sum of which is, in terms of money or property specified in the decree of divorce or legal separation, or in an instrument incident thereto, are not considered "periodic payments" and therefore are not to be included under section 22 (k) in the wife's income. An exception to this general rule is provided, however, in cases where such principal sum, by the terms of the decree or such instrument, may be or is to be paid within a period ending more than 10 years from the date of such decree or instrument. In such cases, the installment payment is considered a periodic payment for the purposes of section 22 (k) but only to the extent that the installment payment, or sum of the installment payments, received during the wife's taxable year does not exceed 10 percent of the principal sum. This 10 percent limitation applies to installment payments made in advance but does not apply to delinquent installment payments for a prior taxable year of the wife made during her taxable year.

(2) The rule as to installment payments may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Under the terms of a divorce decree, H is to pay W a gross sum of $100,000 in four annual installments. No part of the $100,000 is includible in W's income under section 22 (k) nor deductible by H.

Example (2). A divorce decree in 1952 provides that H is to pay W $20,000 each year for the next five years, beginning with the date of the decree, and then $5,000 each year for the next ten years. Assuming the wife makes her returns on the calendar year basis, each payment received in the years 1952–1956, inclusive, is a periodic payment under section 22 (k), but only to the extent of 10 percent of the principal sum of $150,000. Thus for such taxable years, only $15,000 of the $20,000 received is includible under section 22 (k) in the wife's income and is deductible by the husband under section 23 (u). For the years 1957–1966, inclusive, the full $5,000 received each year by the wife is includible in her income and is deductible from the husband's income.

Example (3). Under the terms of a separation agreement incident to divorce granted in December 1951, H agrees to pay W $500 on the first day of each month, beginning with the month after the decree, for 12 years. W makes her income tax returns on the calendar year basis while H makes his returns on the basis of the fiscal year ending June 30. H makes the promised payments in 1952 and, in addition, on December 31, 1952, pays W $1,500 as an advance payment of installments for the next three months. In the calendar year 1953, H makes no payments at all because of financial straits. On January 1, 1954, H inherits $15,000, which he immediately pays to W in satisfaction of not only his back alimony installments for the last nine months of 1953 but also his alimony installments for the next 21 months. The results as to H and W are as follows:

As to W: In the calendar year 1952, W received $7,500. Since 10 percent of $72,000 (the principal sum) is $7,200, only $7,200 of the $7,500 so received is includible in her income for 1952. For 1953 nothing is includible in her income under section 22 (k). In 1954, W received $15,000. Of this amount $4,500 is in payment of back installments and, therefore, is includible without limitation in her income for 1954. Of the balance of $10,500, only $7,200 is includible in her income for 1954.

As to H: For the taxable year ended June 30, 1952, H paid $3,000, all of which is deductible by H. In the taxable year ended June 30, 1953, H paid W $4,500, which, not being in excess of 10 percent of the principal sum, is deductible for such year. In his taxable year ended June 30, 1954, H paid $15,000, of which $11,700 (the sum of $4,500 and $7,200) is deductible.

(d) Payments for support of minor children. Section 22 (k) does not apply to that part of any periodic payment which, by the terms of the decree or the written instrument under section 22 (k) is specifically designated as a sum payable for the support of minor children of the husband. The statute prescribes the treatment in cases where an amount or portion is so fixed but the amount of any periodic payment is less than the amount of the periodic payment specified to be made. In such cases, to the extent of the amount which would be payable for the support of such children out of the originally specified periodic payment, such periodic payment is considered a payment for such support. For example, if the husband is by terms of the decree required to pay $200 a month to his divorced wife, $100 of which is designated by the decree to be for the support of their minor children, and the husband pays only $150 to his wife, $100 is nevertheless considered to be a payment by the husband for the support of the children. If, however, the periodic payments are received by the wife for the support and maintenance of herself and of minor children of the husband without such specific designation of the portion for the support of such children, then the whole of such amounts is includible in the income of the wife as provided in section 22 (k). Except in cases of a designated amount or portion for the support of the husband's minor children, periodic payments described in section 22 (k) received by the wife for herself and any other person or persons are includible in whole in the wife's income, whether or not the amount or portion for such other person or persons is designated.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(l) Income of decedents. For inclusion in gross income of certain amounts which constituted gross income in respect of a decedent, see section 126.

(m) Services of child. (1) Amounts received in respect of the services of a child shall be included in his gross income and not in the gross income of the parent, even though such amounts are not received by the child.

(2) All expenditures by the parent or the child attributable to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the child and not of the parent solely by reason of paragraph (1) shall be deemed to have been paid or incurred by the child.

(3) For the purposes of this subsection, the term "parent" includes an individual who is entitled to the services of a child by reason of having parental rights and duties in respect of the child.

(4) Any tax assessed against the child, to the extent attributable to amounts includible in the gross income of the child and not of the parent solely by reason of paragraph (1), shall, if not paid by the child, for all purposes be considered as having also been properly assessed against the parent.

[Sec. 22 (m) as added by sec. 7, Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.22 (m)–1 Services of child. (a) Compensation for personal services of a child shall, regardless of the provisions of State law relating to who is entitled to the earnings of the child, and regardless of whether the income is in fact received by the child, be deemed to be the gross income of the child and not the gross income of the parent of the child. Such compensation, therefore, shall be included in the gross income of the child and shall be reflected in the return rendered by or for such child if the gross income for the taxable year amounts to $600 or more. The income of a minor child is not required to be included in the gross income of the parent for income tax purposes. For requirements for making the return by such child, or for such child by his guardian, or other person charged with the care of his person or property, see § 39.51–3. Any tax assessed against the child, to the extent of the amount attributable to income included in the gross income of the child solely by reason of section 22 (m) (1), if not paid by the child, shall, for the purposes of all provisions of law relating to the assesment and collection of the tax imposed by chapter 1, be considered as having also been properly assessed against the parent. In any case in which the earnings of the child are included in the gross income of the child solely by reason of section 22 (m) (1) the parent's liability is an amount equal to the amount by which the tax assessed against the child (and not paid by him) has been increased by reason of the inclusion of such earnings in the gross income of the child. Thus, if for 1952 the child has income of $1,000 from investments and of $3,000 for services rendered, and the latter amount is includible in gross income of the child under section 22 (m) (1) and the child has no wife or dependents, the tax liability determined under Supplement T is $696. If the child had only the investment income of $1,000, his tax liability would be $69. If the tax of $696 is assessed against the child, the difference between $696 and $69, or $627, is the amount of such tax which is considered to have been properly assessed against the parent.

(b) In the determination of net income or adjusted gross income, as the case may be, all expenditures made by the parent or the child attributable to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the child and not of the parent solely by reason of section 22 (m) (1) are deemed to have been paid and incurred by the child. In such determination, the child is entitled to take deductions not only for expenditures made on his behalf by his parent which would be commonly considered as business expenses, but also for other expenditures such as charitable contributions made by the parent in the name of the child and out of the child's earnings.

(c) For the purposes of section 22 (m) the term "parent" includes any individual who is entitled to the services of the child by reason of having parental rights and duties in respect of the child.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(n) Definition of "adjusted gross income" As used in this chapter the term "adjusted gross income" means the gross income minus—

(1) Trade and business deductions. The deductions allowed by section 23 which are attributable to a trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, if such trade or business does not consist of the performance of services by the taxpayer as an employee;

(2) Expenses of travel and lodging in connection with employment. The deductions allowed by section 23 which consist of expenses of travel, meals, and lodging while away from home, paid or incurred by the taxpayer in connection with the performance by him of services as an employee;

(3) Reimbursed expenses in connection with employment. The deductions allowed by section 23 (other than expenses of travel, meals, and lodging while away from home) which consist of expenses paid or incurred by the taxpayer, in connection with the performance by him of services as an employee, under a reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement with his employer;

(4) Deductions attributable to rents and royalties. The deductions (other than those provided in paragraph (1), (5), or (6)) allowed by section 23 which are attributable to property held for the production of rents or royalties;

(5) Certain deductions of life tenants and income beneficiaries of property. The deductions (other than those provided in paragraph (1)) for depreciation and depletion, allowed by section 23 (l) and (m) to a life tenant of property or to an income beneficiary of property held in trust;

(6) Losses from sales or exchange of property. The deductions (other than those provided in paragraph (1)) allowed by section 23 as losses from the sale or exchange of property; and

[Sec. 22 (n) as added by sec. 8 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; amended by sec. 322 (c), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.22 (n)-1 Adjusted gross income. (a) The term "adjusted gross income" means the gross income computed under section 22 minus such of the deductions allowable under section 23 as are specified in section 22 (n) Adjusted gross income is used as the basis for the determination of the following: The tax under Supplement T; the amount of the standard deduction; the amount of the deduction for charitable contributions under section 23 (o) and the amount of the deduction for medical and dental expenses under section 23 (x)

(b) Section 22 (n) does not create any new deductions, but merely specifies which of the deductions provided in section 23 shall be allowed in computing adjusted gross income. The circumstance that a particular item is specified in one of the clauses under section 22 (n) and is also embraced within the terms of another of such clauses does not permit the item to be twice deducted in computing adjusted gross income.

(c) The deductions specified in section 22 (n) for the purpose of computing adjusted gross income are: (1) Deductions allowable under section 23, which are attributable to a trade or business carried on by the taxpayer not consisting of services performed as an employee; (2) deductions allowable by section 23 which constitute expenses of travel, meals, and lodging while away from home, paid or incurred by the taxpayer in connection with the performance by him of services as an employee; (3) deductions allowable by section 23 (other than expenses of travel, meals, and lodging while away from home) which consist of expenses paid or incurred in connection with the performance of services as an employe under a reimbursement or other expense-allowance arrangement with his employer; (4) deductions allowable under section 23 which are attributable to rents and royalties; (5) deductions for depreciation and depletion allowable under section 23 (l) and (m) to a life tenant of property or to an income beneficiary of property held in trust; (6) deductions which are allowable under section 23 as losses from the sale or exchange of property and (7) the deductions for long-term capital gains allowed by sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b)

(d) For the purpose of the deductions specified in section 22 (n) the performance of personal services as an employee does not constitute the carrying on of a trade or business. The practice of a profession, not as an employee, is considered the conduct of a trade or business within the meaning of such section. To be deductible for the purposes of determining adjusted gross income, expenses must be those directly, and not those merely remotely, connected with the conduct of the trade or business. For example, taxes are deductible in arriving at adjusted gross income only if they constitute expenditures directly attributable to the trade or business or to property from which rents or royalties are derived. Thus, property taxes paid or incurred on real property used in the trade or business are deductible but State income taxes are not deductible even though the taxpayer's income is derived from the conduct of a trade or business.

(e) Traveling expenses paid or incurred by an employee in connection with his employment while away from home which are deductible from gross income in computing net income may be deducted from gross income in computing adjusted gross income. Among the items included in traveling expenses are charges for transportation of persons or baggage, expenditures for meals and lodging, and payments for the use of sample rooms for the display of goods. See § 39.23 (a)-2.

(f) Expenses, other than traveling expenses, paid or incurred by an employee which are deductible from gross income in computing net income and for which he is reimbursed by the employer under an express agreement for reimbursement or pursuant to an expense allowance arrangement may also be deducted from gross income in computing adjusted gross income.

SEC. 22. Gross income. * * *

(o) Dealers in tax-exempt securities—(1) Adjustment for bond premium. In computing the gross income of a taxpayer who holds during the taxable year a short-term municipal bond (as defined in paragraph (2) (A)) primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business—

(A) If the gross income of the taxpayer from such trade or business is computed by the use of inventories and his inventories are valued on any basis other than cost, the cost of securities sold (as defined in paragraph (2) (B)) during such year shall be reduced by an amount equal to the amortizable bond premium that would be disallowed as a deduction for such year pursuant to section 125 (a) (2) if the definition in section 125 (d) of the term "bond" did not exclude such short-term municipal bond; or

(B) If the gross income of the taxpayer from such trade or business is computed without the use of inventories, or by use of inventories valued at cost, and the short-term municipal bond is sold or otherwise disposed of during such year, the adjusted basis (computed without regard to this subparagraph) of the short-term municipal bond shall be reduced by the amount of the adjustment that would be required under section 113 (b) (1) (H) if the definition in section 125 (d) of the term "bond" did not exclude such short-term municipal bond.

(2) Definitions. For the purposes of paragraph (1)—

(A) The term "short-term municipal bond" means any obligation issued by a government or political subdivision thereof if the interest on such obligation is excludible from gross income; but such term does not include such an obligation if (i) it is sold or otherwise disposed of by the taxpayer within thirty days after the date of its acquisition by him, or (ii) its earliest maturity or call date is a date more than five years from the date on which it was acquired by the taxpayer.

(B) The term "cost of securities sold" means the amount ascertained by subtracting the inventory value of the closing inventory of a taxable year from the sum of (i) the inventory value of the opening inventory for such year and (ii) the cost of securities and other property purchased during such year which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year.

§ 39.22 (o)-1 Treatment of bond premiums in case of dealers in tax-exempt securities—(a) In general. (1) Section 22 (o) requires certain adjustments to be made by dealers in securities with respect to premiums paid on short-term municipal bonds which are held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the trade or business. The adjustments depend upon the method of accounting used by the taxpayer in computing the gross income from the trade or business. See paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section.

(2) The term "short-term municipal bond" under section 22 (o) means any obligation issued by a government or political subdivision thereof if the interest on the obligation is excludable from gross income under section 22 (b) (4) Such term, however, does not include an obligation the maturity or earliest call date of which is a date more than five years from the date of acquisition by the taxpayer, or an obligation sold or otherwise disposed of by the taxpayer within 30 days after the date of acquisition by him. A bond which is otherwise within the definition of "short-term municipal bond" is subject to the provisions of section 22 (o) if held by the taxpayer for a period of more than 30 days, whether or not such period is entirely within one taxable year.

(b) Inventories not valued at cost. (1) In the case of a dealer in securities who computes gross income from his trade or business by the use of inventories and values such inventories on any basis other than cost, the adjustment required by section 22 (o) is the reduction of "cost of securities sold" by the amount equal to the amortizable bond premium which would be disallowed as a deduction under section 125 (a) (2) if the dealer were an ordinary investor holding such bond. Such amortizable bond premium is computed under section 125 (b) by reference to the cost or other original basis of the bond on the date of acquisition (determined without regard to section 113 (a) (1) relating to inventory value on a subsequent date) If the date of acquisition precedes July 1, 1950, then, in computing under section 125 (b) the amount of such amortizable bond premium, there shall be made adjustments to bond premium proper to reflect unamortized bond premium on such bond for the period including the holding period (as determined under section 117 (h)) prior to the date as of which section 22 (o) first becomes applicable to the bond in the hands of the taxpayer. See § 39.125 (b)-1.

(2) Subparagraph (1) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. X, a dealer in securities who values his inventories on a basis other than cost, makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis. On January 1, 1949, he bought, for $1,060 each, three short-term municipal bonds (A, B, and C) having a face obligation of $1,000, and maturing on January 1, 1954. On July 1, 1952, he buys, for $1,018 each, three more bonds (X, Y, and Z) of the same issue. Bonds A and X are sold on December 31, 1952. Bonds B and Y are sold on June 30, 1953. Bonds C and Z are sold on December 31, 1953. The adjustment for the years 1952 and 1953 is as follows:

Bond	Date acquired	Date sold	Adjustment for—
			1952	1953
A	Jan. 1, 1949	Dec. 31, 1952	$12.00	------
B	do	June 30, 1953	12.00	$6.00
C	do	Dec. 31, 1953	12.00	12.00
X	July 1, 1952	Dec. 31, 1952	6.00	------
Y	do	June 30, 1953	6.00	6.00
Z	do	Dec. 31, 1953	6.00	12.00
Total			54.00	36.00

For the purpose of determining such adjustment, the amortizable bond premium is computed under section 125 (b) as follows:

	Bond A, B, or C	Bond X, Y, or Z
Bond premium	$60.00	$18.00
Adjustment for period prior to first date of application of sec. 22 (o):
Applicable Jan. 1, 1951	24.00	------
Amortizable bond premium to maturity	[1] 36.00	[2] 18.00
Amortizable bond premium per month	1.00	1.00

(3) The term "cost of securities sold" means the amount ascertained by subtracting the inventory value of the closing inventory of a taxable year from the sum of the inventory value of the opening inventory for such year and the cost of securities and other property purchased during such year which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year.

(c) Inventories not used or inventories valued at cost. (1) In the case of a dealer in securities who computes gross income from his trade or business without the use of inventories or by use of inventories valued at cost, the adjustment required by section 22 (o) is a reduction of the adjusted basis of each short-term municipal bond sold or otherwise disposed of during the taxable year. The amount of such reduction is the amount by which the adjusted basis of such bond would be required to be reduced under section 113 (b) (1) (H) were such bond subject to the amortizable bond premium provisions of section 125, that is, the amount of the amortizable bond premium which would be disallowed as a deduction under section 125 (a) (2) if the taxpayer were an ordinary investor.

(2) If the bond was acquired before July 1, 1950, the amount of the reduction shall not include the amount of such amortizable bond premium which would be disallowed as a deduction under section 125 (a) (2) if the taxpayer were an ordinary investor, for any taxable year beginning before July 1, 1950. In the case of such bond, the amortizable bond premium which would be disallowed as a deduction under section 125 (a) (2) is determined after making adjustments to bond premium proper to reflect unamortized bond premium on such bond for the period including the holding period (as determined under section 117 (h)) prior to the date as of which section 22 (o) first becomes applicable to the bond in the hands of the taxpayer. See § 39.125 (b)-1.

(3) The application of subparagraph (2) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Y, a dealer in securities who values his inventories on the basis of cost, makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis. On January 1, 1949, he buys, for $1,060 each, three short-term municipal bonds (D, E, and F) having a face obligation of $1,000, and maturing on January 1, 1954. On July 1, 1952, he buys, for $1,018 each, three more bonds (U, V, and W) of the same issue. Bonds D and U are sold on December 31, 1952. Bonds E and V are sold on June 30, 1953. Bonds F and W are sold on December 31, 1953.

			1952	1953
D	Jan. 1, 1949	Dec. 31, 1952	$24.00	------
E	do	June 30, 1953	None	$30.00
F	do	Dec. 31, 1953	None	36.00
U	July 1, 1952	Dec. 31, 1952	6.00	------
V	do	June 30, 1953	None	12.00
W	do	Dec. 31, 1953	None	18.00

For the purpose of determining such adjustments, the amortizable bond premium is computed under section 125 (b) as follows:

	Bond D, E, or F	Bond U, V, or W
Bond premium	$60.00	$18.00
Adjustment for period prior to first date of application of sec. 22 (o):
Applicable Jan. 1, 1951	24.00	------
Amortizable bond premium to maturity	[1] 36.00	[2] 18.00
Amortizable bond premium per month	1.00	1.00

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions:

(a) Expenses—(1) Trade or business expenses—(A) In general. All the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered; traveling expenses (including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging) while away from home in the pursuit of a trade or business; and rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession, for purposes of the trade or business, of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which he has no equity. In the case of any sports program conducted for the benefit of the American National Red Cross, expenses described in section 22 (b) (16) (B) shall be allowable under this subparagraph only to the extent that such expenses exceed the amount excluded from gross income by section 22 (b) (16).

(B) Corporate charitable contributions. No deduction shall be allowable under subparagraph (A) to a corporation for any contribution or gift which would be allowable as a deduction under subsection (q) were it not for the 5 per centum limitation therein contained and for the requirement therein that payment must be made within the taxable year.

(C) Expenditures for advertising and good will. If a corporation has, for the purpose of computing its excess profits credit under Chapter 2E, or subchapter D of this Chapter, claimed the benefits of the election provided in section 733 or section 451, as the case may be, no deduction shall be allowable under subparagraph (A) to such corporation for expenditures for advertising or the promotion of good will which, under the rules and regulations prescribed under section 733 or section 451, as the case may be, may be regarded as capital investments.

(2) Non-trade or non-business expenses. In the case of an individual, all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year for the production or collection of income, or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income.

* * * for the two taxable years beginning after December 31, 1952, the place of residence of a Member of Congress (including any Delegate and Resident Commissioner) within the State, congressional district, Territory, or possession which he represents in Congress shall be considered to be his home for the purposes of section 23 (a) (1) (A) of the Internal Revenue Code, but amounts expended by such Member within each such taxable year for living expenses shall not be deductible for income tax purposes in excess of $3,000.

[Pub. Law 471 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.23 (a)-1 Business expenses. Business expenses deductible from gross income include the ordinary and necessary expenditures directly connected with or pertaining to the taxpayer's trade or business, except items which are used as the basis for a deduction or a credit under provisions of law other than subsection (a) of section 23. Double deductions are not permitted. Amounts deducted under one provision of the Internal Revenue Code cannot again be deducted under any other provision thereof. As to charitable contributions by corporations not deductible under section 23 (a) see § 39.23 (a)-13. The cost of goods purchased for resale, with proper adjustment for opening and closing inventories, is deducted from gross sales in computing gross income. See § 39.22 (a)-5. Among the items included in business expenses are management expenses, commissions (but see § 39.24 (a)-2), labor, supplies, incidental repairs, operating expenses of automobiles used in the trade or business, traveling expenses while away from home solely in the pursuit of a trade or business (see § 39.23 (a)-2) advertising and other selling expenses, together with insurance premiums against fire, storm, theft, accident, or other similar losses in the case of a business, and rental for the use of business property. No such item shall be included in business expenses, however, to the extent that it is used by the taxpayer in computing the cost of property included in its inventory or used in determining the gain or loss basis of its plant, equipment, or other property. Penalty payments with respect to Federal taxes, whether on account of negligence, delinquency, or fraud, are not deductible from gross income. The full amount of the allowable deduction for ordinary and necessary expenses in carrying on a business is nevertheless deductible, even though such expenses exceed the gross income derived during the taxable year from such business. As to items not deductible under any provision of section 23, see section 24. As to the deductibility of expenditures attributable to a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, critical and strategic minerals or metals, see section 22 (b) (15) and § 39.22 (b) (15)-1.

§ 39.23 (a)-2 Traveling expenses. (a) Traveling expenses, as ordinarily understood, include railroad fares and meals and lodging. If the trip is undertaken for other than business purposes, the railroad fares are personal expenses and the meals and lodging are living expenses. If the trip is solely on business, the reasonable and necessary traveling expenses, including railroad fares, meals, and lodging, are business expenses.

(b) If, then, an individual, whose business requires him to travel, receives a salary as full compensation for his services, without reimbursement for traveling expenses, or is employed on a commission basis with no expense allowance, his traveling expenses, including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging, are deductible from gross income.

(c) If an individual receives a salary and is also paid his actual traveling expenses, he shall include in gross income the amount so repaid and may deduct such expenses.

(d) If an individual receives a salary and also an allowance for meals and lodging, as, for example, a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence, the amount of the allowance should be included in gross income and the cost of such meals and lodging may be deducted therefrom.

(f) Only such expenses as are reasonable and necessary in the conduct of the business and directly attributable to it may be deducted.

(g) A taxpayer claiming the benefit of the deductions referred to in this section must attach to his return a statement showing (1) the nature of the business in which engaged; (2) the number of days away from home during the taxable year on account of business; (3) the total amount of expenses incident to meals and lodging while absent from home on business during the taxable year; and (4) the total amount of other expenses incident to travel and claimed as a deduction.

(h) Claim for the deductions referred to in this section must be substantiated, when required by the Commissioner, by evidence showing in detail the amount and nature of the expenses incurred.

§ 39.23 (a)-3 Cost of materials. Taxpayers carrying materials and supplies on hand should include in expenses the charges for materials and supplies only to the amount that they are actually consumed and used in operation during the year for which the return is made, provided that the cost of such materials and supplies has not been deducted in determining the net income for any previous year. If a taxpayer carries incidental materials or supplies on hand for which no record of consumption is kept or of which physical inventories at the beginning and end of the year are not taken, it will be permissible for the taxpayer to include in his expenses and deduct from gross income the total cost of such supplies and materials as were purchased during the year for which the return is made, provided the net income is clearly reflected by this method.

§ 39.23 (a)-4 Repairs. The cost of incidental repairs which neither materially add to the value of the property nor appreciably prolong its life, but keep it in an ordinarily efficient operating condition, may be deducted as expense, provided the cost of acquisition or production or the gain or loss basis of the taxpayer's plant, equipment, or other property, as the case may be, is not increased by the amount of such expenditures. Repairs in the nature of replacements, to the extent that they arrest deterioration and appreciably prolong the life of the property, should be charged against the depreciation reserve if such account is kept.

§ 39.23 (a)-5 Professional expenses. A professional man may claim as deductions the cost of supplies used by him in the practice of his profession, expenses paid in the operation and repair of an automobile used in making professional calls, dues to professional societies and subscriptions to professional journals, the rent paid for office rooms, the cost of the fuel, light, water, telephone, etc., used in such offices, and the hire of office assistants. Amounts currently expended for books, furniture, and professional instruments and equipment, the useful life of which is short, may be deducted.

§ 39.23 (a)-6 Compensation for personal services. (a) There may be included among the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in carrying on any trade or business a reasonable allowance for salaries or other compensation for personal services actually rendered. The test of deductibility in the case of compensation payments is whether they are reasonable and are in fact payments purely for services.

(b) The test set forth in paragraph (a) of this section and its practical application may be further stated and illustrated as follows:

(1) Any amount paid in the form of compensation, but not in fact as the purchase price of services, is not deductible. An ostensible salary paid by a corporation may be a distribution of a dividend on stock. This is likely to occur in the case of a corporation having few shareholders, practically all of whom draw salaries. If in such a case the salaries are in excess of those ordinarily paid for similar services, and the excessive payments correspond or bear a close relationship to the stockholdings of the officers or employees, it would seem likely that the salaries are not paid wholly for services rendered, but that the excessive payments are a distribution of earnings upon the stock. An ostensible salary may be in part payment for property. This may occur, for example, where a partnership sells out to a corporation, the former partners agreeing to continue in the service of the corporation. In such a case it may be found that the salaries of the former partners are not merely for services, but in part constitute payment for the transfer of their business.

(2) The form or method of fixing compensation is not decisive as to deductibility. While any form of contingent compensation invites scrutiny as a possible distribution of earnings of the enterprise, it does not follow that payments on a contingent basis are to be treated fundamentally on any basis different from that applying to compensation at a flat rate. Generally speaking, if contingent compensation is paid pursuant to a free bargain between the employer and the individual made before the services are rendered, not influenced by any consideration on the part of the employer other than that of securing on fair and advantageous terms the services of the individual, it should be allowed as a deduction even though in the actual working out of the contract it may prove to be greater than the amount which would ordinarily be paid.

(3) In any event the allowance for the compensation paid may not exceed what is reasonable under all the circumstances. It is in general just to assume that reasonable and true compensation is only such amount as would ordinarily be paid for like services by like enterprises under like circumstances. The circumstances to be taken into consideration are those existing at the date when the contract for services was made, not those existing at the date when the contract is questioned.

§ 39.23 (a)-7 Treatment of excessive compensation. The income tax liability of the recipient in respect of an amount ostensibly paid to him as compensation, but not allowed to be deducted as such by the payor, will depend upon the circumstances of each case. Thus, in the case of excessive payments by corporations, if such payments correspond or bear a close relationship to stock holdings, and are found to be a distribution of earnings or profits, the excessive payments will be treated as a dividend. If such payments constitute payment for property, they should be treated by the payor as a capital expenditure and by the recipient as part of the purchase price. In the absence of evidence to justify other treatment, excessive payments for salaries or other compensation for personal services will be included in gross income of the recipient and subjected to both normal tax and surtax.

§ 39.23 (a)-8 Bonuses to employees. Bonuses to employees will constitute allowable deductions from gross income when such payments are made in good faith and as additional compensation for the services actually rendered by the employees, provided such payments, when added to the stipulated salaries, do not exceed a reasonable compensation for the services rendered. It is immaterial whether such bonuses are paid in cash or in kind or partly in cash and partly in kind. Donations made to employees and others, which do not have in them the element of compensation or are in excess of reasonable compensation for services, are not deductible from gross income.

§ 39.23 (a)-9 Pensions; compensation for injuries. Amounts paid by a taxpayer for pensions to retired employees or to their families or others dependent upon them, or on account of injuries received by employees, and lump-sum amounts paid or accrued as compensation for injuries, are proper deductions as ordinary and necessary expenses. Such deductions are limited to the amount not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. When the amount of the salary of an officer or employee is paid for a limited period after his death to his widow or heirs, in recognition of the services rendered by the individual, such payments may be deducted. As to deductions for payments to employees' pension trusts, see section 23 (p)

§ 39.23 (a)-10 Rentals. (a) If a leasehold is acquired for business purposes for a specified sum, the purchaser may take as a deduction in his return an aliquot part of such sum each year, based on the number of years the lease has to run. Taxes paid by a tenant to or for a landlord for business property are additional rent and constitute a deductible item to the tenant and taxable income to the landlord, the amount of the tax being deductible by the latter.

(b) The cost borne by a lessee in erecting buildings or making permanent improvements on ground of which he is lessee is held to be a capital investment and not deductible as a business expense. In order to return to such taxpayer his investment of capital, an annual deduction may be made from gross income of an amount equal to the total cost of such improvements divided by the number of years remaining of the term of lease, and such deduction shall be in lieu of a deduction for depreciation. If the remainder of the term of lease is greater than the probable life of the buildings erected, or of the improvements made, this deduction shall take the form of an allowance for depreciation. In cases in which the lease contains an unexercised option of renewal, the matter of spreading such depreciation or amortization over the term of the original lease, together with the renewal period or periods, depends upon the facts in the particular case. As a general rule, unless the lease has been renewed or the facts show with reasonable certainty that the lease will be renewed, the cost or other basis of the lease or the cost of improvements shall be spread only over the number of years the lease has to run, without taking into account any right of renewal.

§ 39.23 (a)-11 Expenses of farmers. A farmer who operates a farm for profit is entitled to deduct from gross income as necessary expenses all amounts actually expended in the carrying on of the business of farming. The cost of ordinary tools of short life or small cost, such as hand tools, including shovels, rakes, etc., may be deducted. The cost of feeding and raising livestock may be treated as an expense deduction, in so far as such cost represents actual outlay, but not including the value of farm produce grown upon the farm or the labor of the taxpayer. Where a farmer is engaged in producing crops which take more than a year from the time of planting to the process of gathering and disposal, expenses deducted may, with the consent of the Commissioner (see § 39.41-2) be determined upon the crop basis, and such deductions must be taken in the year in which the gross income from the crop has been realized. The cost of farm machinery, equipment, and farm buildings represents a capital investment and is not an allowable deduction as an item of expense. Amounts expended in the development of farms, orchards, and ranches prior to the time when the productive state is reached may be regarded as investments of capital. Amounts expended in purchasing work, breeding, or dairy animals are regarded as investments of capital, and may be depreciated unless such animals are included in an inventory in accordance with § 39.22 (a)-7. The purchase price of an automobile, even when wholly used in carrying on farming operations, is not deductible, but is regarded as an investment of capital. The cost of gasoline, repairs, and upkeep of an automobile if used wholly in the business of farming is deductible as an expense; if used partly for business purposes and partly for the pleasure or convenience of the taxpayer or his family, such cost may be apportioned according to the extent of the use for purposes of business and pleasure or convenience, and only the proportion of such cost justly attributable to business purposes is deductible as a necessary expense. If a farm is operated for recreation or pleasure and not on a commercial basis, and if the expenses incurred in connection with the farm are in excess of the receipts therefrom, the entire receipts from the sale of products may be ignored in rendering a return of income, and the expenses incurred, being regarded as personal expenses, will not constitute allowable deductions. (See also §§ 39.22 (a)-7, 39.23 (e)-5, and 39.23 (l)-10.)

§ 39.23 (a)-12 Depositors' guaranty fund. Banking corporations which pursuant to the laws of the States in which they are doing business are required to set apart, keep, and maintain in their banks the amount levied and assessed against them by the State authorities as a "Depositors' guaranty fund," may deduct from their gross income the amount so set apart each year to this fund, provided that such fund, when set aside and carried to the credit of the State banking board or duly authorized State officer, ceases to be an asset of the bank and may be withdrawn in whole or in part upon demand by such board or State officer to meet the needs of these officers in reimbursing depositors in insolvent banks, and provided further that no portion of the amount thus set aside and credited is returnable under the laws of the State to the assets of the banking corporation. If, however, such amount is simply set up on the books of the bank as a reserve to meet a contingent liability and remains an asset of the bank, it will not be deductible except as it is actually paid out as required by law and upon demand of the proper State officers.

§ 39.23 (a)-13 Corporate contributions. (a) No deduction is allowable under section 23 (a) for a contribution or gift by a corporation if any part thereof is deductible under section 23 (q) Thus, for example, if a corporation makes a contribution of $5,000, only $4,000 of which is deductible under section 23 (q) (whether because of the 5 percent limitation or requirement of actual payment, or both) no deduction is allowable under section 23 (a) for the remaining $1,000.

(b) The limitations provided in section 23 (a) (1) and this section apply only to payments which are in fact contributions or gifts to organizations described in section 23 (q) For example, payments by a street railway corporation to a local hospital (which is a charitable organization within the meaning of section 23 (q)) in consideration of a binding obligation on the part of the hospital to provide hospital services and facilities for the corporation's employees are not contributions or gifts within the meaning of section 23 (q) and may be deductible under section 23 (a) if the requirements of that section are otherwise satisfied. Donations to organizations other than those described in section 23 (q) which bear a direct relationship to the corporation's business and are made with a reasonable expectation of a financial return commensurate with the amount of the donation may constitute allowable deductions as business expenses. For example, a street railway corporation may donate a sum of money to an organization (of a class not referred to in section 23 (q)) intending to hold a convention in the city in which it operates, with a reasonable expectation that the holding of such convention will augment its income through a greater number of people using its cars.

§ 39.23 (a)-14 Expenditures for advertising or promotion of good will. A corporation which has, for the purpose of computing its excess profits credit, elected under section 451 (applicable to the excess profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1) to charge to capital account for taxable years in its base period expenditures for advertising or the promotion of good will which may be regarded as capital investments may not deduct similar expenditures for the taxable year. Such a taxpayer has the burden of proving that expenditures for advertising or the promotion of good will which it seeks to deduct for such later taxable years may not be regarded as capital investments under the provisions of the regulations prescribed under section 451. For rules for determining what expenditures for advertising or the promotion of good will may be regarded as capital investments, and for information required to be submitted with respect to such expenditures, see § 40.451-2 of Regulations 130 (Part 40 of this chapter) (applicable to the excess profits tax imposed under subchapter D of chapter 1)

§ 39.23 (a)-15 Nontrade or nonbusiness expenses. (a) Subject to the qualifications and limitations in chapter 1 and particularly in section 24, an expense may be deducted under section 23 (a) (2) only upon the condition that:

(1) It has been paid or incurred by the taxpayer during the taxable year (i) for the production or collection of income which, if and when realized, will be required to be included in income for Federal income tax purposes, or (ii) for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of such income; and

(2) It is an ordinary and necessary expense for either or both of the purposes stated in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph.

(b) The term "income" for the purpose of section 23 (a) (2) comprehends not merely income of the taxable year but also income which the taxpayer has realized in a prior taxable year or may realize in subsequent taxable years; and is not confined to recurring income but applies as well to gains from the disposition of property. For example, if defaulted bonds, the interest from which if received would be includible in income, are purchased with the expectation of realizing capital gain on their resale, even though no current yield thereon is anticipated, ordinary and necessary expenses thereafter incurred in connection therewith are deductible. Similarly, ordinary and necessary expenses incurred in the management, conservation, or maintenance of a building devoted to rental purposes are deductible notwithstanding that there is actually no income therefrom in the taxable year, and regardless of the manner in which or the purpose for which the property in question was acquired. Expenses incurred in managing, conserving, or maintaining property held for investment may be deductible under this provision even though the property is not currently productive and there is no likelihood that the property will be sold at a profit or will otherwise be productive of income and even though the property is held merely to minimize a loss with respect thereto. The expenses, however, of carrying on transactions, which do not constitute a trade or business of the taxpayer and are not carried on for the production or collection of income or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income, but which are carried on primarily as a sport, hobby, or recreation are not allowable as nontrade or nonbusiness expenses.

(c) Expenses, to be deductible under section 23 (a) (2) must be "ordinary and necessary" which presupposes that they must be reasonable in amount and must bear a reasonable and proximate relation to the production or collection of taxable income or to the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income.

(d) Except for the requirement of being incurred in connection with a trade or business, a deduction under this section is subject to all the restrictions and limitations that apply in the case of the deduction under section 23 (a) (1) (A) of an expense paid or incurred in carrying on any trade or business. This includes restrictions and limitations contained in section 24. Section 24 (a) (5) disallows any amount otherwise allowable as a deduction (whether under section 23 (a) (2) or otherwise) which is allocable to one or more classes of tax-exempt income, other than interest, and, in addition, disallows a deduction under section 23 (a) (2) for amounts otherwise allowable under that section which are allocable to tax-exempt interest. Thus, any amount allocable to the production or collection of one or more classes of income which is not includible in gross income or to the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of such income is not deductible under section 23 (a) (2) Nor does section 23 (a) (2) allow any expenses which are disallowed by any of the provisions of chapter 1.

(e) Capital expenditures, and expenses of carrying on transactions which do not constitute a trade or business of the taxpayer and are not carried on for the production or collection of income or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income, but which are carried on primarily as a sport, hobby, or recreation are not allowable as nontrade or nonbusiness expenses. The question whether or not a transaction is carried on primarily for the production of income or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production or collection of income, rather than primarily as a sport, hobby, or recreation, is not to be determined solely from the intention of the taxpayer but rather from all the circumstances of the case, including the record of prior gain or loss of the taxpayer in the activity, the relation between the type of activity and the principal occupation of the taxpayer, and the uses to which the property or what it produces is put by the taxpayer.

(f) Among expenditures not allowable under section 23 (a) (2) are the following: Commuter's expenses; expenses of taking special courses or training; expenses for improving personal appearance; the cost of rental of a safe-deposit box for storing jewelry and other personal effects; and expenses such as expenses in seeking employment or in placing oneself in a position to begin rendering personal services for compensation, campaign expenses of a candidate for public office, bar examination fees and other expenses incurred in securing admission to the bar, and corresponding fees and expenses incurred by physicians, dentists, accountants, and other taxpayers for securing the right to practice their respective professions.

(g) Fees for services of investment counsel, custodian fees, clerical help, office rent, and similar expenses paid or incurred by a taxpayer in connection with investments held by him are deductible under section 23 (a) (2) only if (1) they are paid or incurred by the taxpayer for the production or collection of income, or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of investments held by him for the production of income; and (2) they are ordinary and necessary under all the circumstances, having regard to the type of investment and to the relation of the taxpayer to such investment.

(h) Ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in connection with the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for use as a residence by the taxpayer are not deductible. However, ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred in connection with the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held by the taxpayer as rental property are deductible even though such property was formerly held by the taxpayer for use as a home.

(i) Reasonable amounts paid or incurred by the fiduciary of an estate or trust on account of administration expenses, including fiduciaries' fees and expenses of litigation, which are ordinary and necessary in connection with the performance of the duties of administration are deductible under this section, notwithstanding that the estate or trust is not engaged in a trade or business, except to the extent that such expenses are allocable to the production or collection of tax-exempt income. But see § 39.162-1 for disallowance of such deductions to an estate where such items are claimed as a deduction under section 812 (b) in computing the net estate subject to the estate tax.

(j) Reasonable amounts paid or incurred for the services of a guardian or committee for a ward or minor, and other expenses of guardians and committees which are ordinary and necessary in connection with the production or collection of income inuring to the ward or minor, or in connection with the management, conservation, or maintenance of property, held for the production of income, belonging to the ward or minor, are deductible.

(k) Expenditures incurred in defending or perfecting title to property, in recovering property (other than investment property and amounts of income which, if and when recovered, must be included in income) or in developing or improving property, constitute a part of the cost of the property and are not deductible expenses. Attorneys' fees paid in a suit to quiet title to lands are not deductible; but if the suit is also to collect accrued rents thereon, that portion of such fees is deductible which is properly allocable to the services rendered in collecting such rents. Expenditures incurred in protecting or asserting one's rights to property of a decedent as heir or legatee, or as beneficiary under a testamentary trust, are not deductible. Expenses paid or incurred by an individual in the determination of liability for taxes upon his income are deductible. If property is held by an individual for the production of income, amounts expended in determining a property tax imposed with respect to such property during the period when so held are deductible. Expenses paid or incurred by an individual in determining or contesting any liability asserted against him do not become deductible, however, by reason of the fact that property held by him for the production of income may be required to be used or sold for the purpose of satisfying such liability. Thus, expenses paid or incurred by an individual in the determination of gift tax liability, except to the extent that such expenses are allocable to interest on a refund of gift taxes, are not deductible, even though property held by him for the production of income must be sold to satisfy an assessment for such tax liability or even though, in the event of a claim for refund, the amount received will be held by him for the production of income.

(l) The deduction of an item otherwise allowable under section 23 (a) (2) will not be disallowed simply because the taxpayer also had an election under chapter 1 to treat it as a capital expenditure, rather than to deduct it as an expense. (See section 24 (a) (7).) Where, however, the item may properly be treated only as a capital expenditure or where it was properly so treated under an option granted in chapter 1, no deduction is allowable under this section; and this is true regardless of whether any basis adjustment is allowed under section 113.

(m) The provisions of section 23 (a) (2) are not intended in any way to disallow expenses which would otherwise be allowable under section 23 (a) (1) or the regulations applicable thereto, or under any other section of the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations applicable thereto. Double deductions are not permitted. Amounts deducted under one provision of the Code cannot again be deducted under any other provision thereof.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(b) Interest. All interest paid or accrued within the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the taxpayer) the interest upon which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter.

§ 39.23 (b)-1 Interest. (a) Interest paid or accrued within the year on indebtedness may be deducted from gross income, except that interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations, such as municipal bonds, Panama Canal loan 3 percent bonds, or (in case of a taxpayer not an original subscriber) obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, the interest upon which is wholly exempt from tax, is not deductible. Interest paid or accrued within the year on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry (1) obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, the interest upon which is not wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1, or (2) (in the case of an original subscriber) obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, the interest upon which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1, is deductible in accordance with the general rule.

(b) Interest paid by the taxpayer on a mortgage upon real estate of which he is the legal or equitable owner, even though the taxpayer is not directly liable upon the bond or note secured by such mortgage, may be deducted as interest on his indebtedness. Payments of Maryland or Pennsylvania ground rents are deductible as interest if the ground rent is redeemable, but are treated as rent if the ground rent is irredeemable and in such case are deductible only to the extent they constitute a proper business expense.

(c) Interest calculated for cost-keeping or other purposes on account of capital or surplus invested in the business which does not represent a charge arising under an interest-bearing obligation, is not an allowable deduction from gross income. Interest paid by a corporation on scrip dividends is an allowable deduction. So-called interest on preferred stock, which is in reality a dividend thereon, cannot be deducted in computing net income. (See, however, section 121.) In the case of banks and loan or trust companies, interest paid within the year on deposits such as interest paid on moneys received for investment and secured by interest-bearing certificates of indebtedness issued by such bank or loan or trust company may be deducted from gross income. As to other amounts of interest not deductible under section 23 (b), see section 24 (c).

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(c) Taxes generally—(1) Allowance in general. Taxes paid or accrued within the taxable year, except—

(A) Federal income taxes;

(B) War-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917, Title III of the Revenue Act of 1918, Title III of the Revenue Act of 1921, section 216 of the National Industrial Recovery Act, or section 702 of the Revenue Act of 1934, or Subchapter E of Chapter 2, or by any such provisions as amended or supplemented;

(C) Income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of any foreign country or possession of the United States, if the taxpayer chooses to take to any extent the benefits of section 131;

(D) Estate, inheritance, legacy, succession, and gift taxes;

(E) Taxes assessed against local benefits of a kind tending to increase the value of the property assessed; but this paragraph shall not exclude the allowance as a deduction of so much of such taxes as is properly allocable to maintenance or interest charges; and

(F) Federal import duties, and Federal excise and stamp taxes (not described in subparagraph (A), (B), (D), or (E)), but this subsection shall not prevent such duties and taxes from being deducted under subsection (a).

(2) [Repealed by sec. 105 (c) (2), Rev. Act 1942.]

(3) Gasoline and retail sales taxes. In the case of a tax imposed by any State, Territory, District, or possession of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof, upon persons engaged in selling tangible personal property at retail, or upon persons selling gasoline or other motor vehicle fuels either at wholesale or retail, which is measured by the gross sales price or the gross receipts from the sale or which is a stated sum per unit of such property sold, or upon persons engaged in furnishing services at retail, which is measured by the gross receipts for furnishing such services, if the amount of such tax is separately stated, then to the extent that the amount so stated is paid by the consumer (otherwise than in connection with the consumer's trade or business) to his vendor such amount shall be allowed as a deduction in computing the net income of such consumer as if such amount constituted a tax imposed upon and paid by such consumer.

§ 39.23 (c)–1 Taxes—(a) In general. Subject to the exceptions stated in this section and §§ 39.23 (c)–2 and 39.23 (c)–3, taxes imposed by the United States, any State or Territory, or political subdivision of either, possessions of the United States, or foreign countries, are deductible from gross income for the year in which paid or accrued (see section 43) Estate, inheritance, legacy, succession, and gift taxes, the employment taxes imposed by sections 1400, 1500, and 1510, and Federal income taxes (including the tax withheld at source under section 1622) are not deductible from gross income. The Federal war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917, Title III of the Revenue Act of 1918, Title III of the Revenue Act of 1921, section 216 of the National Industrial Recovery Act, section 702 of the Revenue Act of 1934, and subchapter E of chapter 2 are not deductible from gross income. Income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by the authority of any foreign country or possession of the United States are deductible from gross income in cases where the taxpayer does not choose to take to any extent for the taxable year the benefits of section 131 (relating to credit for taxes of foreign countries or possessions of the United States) See the last sentence of section 131 (a) Postage is not a tax. Amounts paid to States or Territories under secured debts laws in order to render securities tax exempt are deductible. Automobile license fees are ordinarily taxes. In general taxes are deductible only by the person upon whom they are imposed. As to tax paid at the source on interest from tax-free covenant bonds, see section 143 (a) (3)

(b) State and local sales and gasoline taxes. (1) Amounts representing sales or gasoline taxes paid by a consumer of services or tangible personal property are deductible by such consumer as taxes, provided they are not paid in connection with his trade or business. The fact that, under the law imposing it, the incidence of the sales or gasoline tax does not fall on the consumer is immaterial. The requirement of section 23 (c) (3) that the amount of the tax must be separately stated will be deemed complied with where it clearly appears that, at the time of sale to the consumer, the tax was added to the sales price and collected or charged as a separate item. It is not necessary, for the purposes of this section, that the consumer be furnished with a sales slip, bill, invoice, or other statement on which the tax is separately stated. Where the law imposing the sales or gasoline tax for which the taxpayer seeks a deduction contains a prohibition against the seller absorbing the tax, or a provision requiring a posted notice stating that the tax will be added to the quoted price, or a requirement that the tax be separately shown in advertisements or separately stated on all bills and invoices, it is presumed that the amount of the sales or gasoline tax was separately stated at the time paid by the consumer; except that such presumption shall have no application to a gasoline tax imposed upon a wholesaler unless such provisions of law apply with respect to both the sale at wholesale and the sale at retail.

(2) As used in this section the term "sales tax" means a tax imposed by any State, Territory, District, or possession of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof upon persons engaged in selling tangible personal property at retail, which is measured by the gross sales price or the gross receipts from the sale, or which is a stated sum per unit of such property sold. The term also includes a tax imposed by such authorities upon persons engaged in furnishing services at retail, which is measured by the gross receipts for furnishing such services.

(3) The term "gasoline tax" means, for the purpose of this section, a tax imposed by such authorities upon persons selling gasoline or other motor vehicle fuels either at wholesale or retail, which is measured by the gross sales price or the gross receipts from the sale, or which is a stated sum per unit of the gasoline or fuel sold.

(4) In general, the term "consumer" means the ultimate user or purchaser; it does not include a purchaser who acquires the property for resale, such as a retailer.

§ 39.23 (c)–2 Federal duties and excise taxes. Federal import or tariff duties, business, license, privilege, excise, and stamp taxes (not described in subparagraph (A) (B) (D) or (E) of section 23 (c) (1)) paid or accrued within the taxable year are not deductible as taxes. The fact that any such tax is not deductible as a tax under section 23 (c) does not prevent (a) a deduction therefor under section 23 (a) provided it represents an ordinary and necessary expense paid or incurred during the taxable year by a corporation or an individual in carrying on any trade or business, or, in the case of an individual, for the production or collection of income, or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income, or (b) the inclusion of such tax paid or incurred during the taxable year by a corporation or an individual as a part of the cost of acquisition or production in the trade or business, or, in the case of an individual, as a part of the cost of property held for the production of income with respect to which such tax is paid or incurred.

§ 39.23 (c)–3 Taxes for local benefits. So-called taxes, more properly assessments, paid for local benefits, such as street, sidewalk, and other like improvements, imposed because of and measured by some benefit inuring directly to the property against which the assessment is levied, do not constitute an allowable deduction from gross income. A tax is considered assessed against local benefits when the property subject to the tax is limited to property benefited. Special assessments are not deductible, even though an incidental benefit may inure to the public welfare. The real property taxes deductible are those levied for the general public welfare by the proper taxing authorities at a like rate against all property in the territory over which such authorities have jurisdiction. Assessments under the statutes of California relating to irrigation and of Iowa relating to drainage, and under certain statutes of Tennessee relating to levees, are limited to property benefited, and if the assessments are so limited, the amounts paid thereunder are not deductible as taxes. The above statements are subject to the exception that in so far as assessments against local benefits are made for the purpose of maintenance or repair or for the purpose of meeting interest charges with respect to such benefits, they are deductible. In such cases the burden is on the taxpayer to show the allocation of the amounts assessed to the different purposes. If the allocation cannot be made, none of the amounts so paid is deductible.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(d) Taxes of shareholder paid by corporation. The deduction for taxes allowed by subsection (c) shall be allowed to a corporation in the case of taxes imposed upon a shareholder of the corporation upon his interest as shareholder which are paid by the corporation without reimbursement from the shareholder, but in such cases no deduction shall be allowed the shareholder for the amount of such taxes.

§ 39.23 (d)–1 Tax on bank or other stock. Banks or other corporations paying taxes assessed against their shareholders on account of their ownership of the shares of stock issued by such corporations without reimbursement from such shareholders may deduct the amount of taxes so paid. The Internal Revenue Code specifically provides, however, that in such cases the shareholders may not deduct the amount of the taxes. The amount so paid should not be included in the income of the shareholder.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(e) Losses by individuals. In the case of an individual, losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise—

(1) If incurred in trade or business; or

(2) If incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, though not connected with the trade or business; or

(3) Of property not connected with the trade or business, if the loss arises from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or from theft. No loss shall be allowed as a deduction under this paragraph if at the time of the filing of the return such loss has been claimed as a deduction for estate tax purposes in the estate tax return.

§ 39.23 (e)-1 Losses by individuals. (a) Losses sustained by individual citizens or residents of the United States and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise are fully deductible if (1) incurred in the taxpayer's trade or business, or (2) incurred in any transaction entered into for profit, or (3) arising from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualty, or theft, and a deduction therefor has not prior to the filing of the return been claimed for estate tax purposes in the estate tax return, or (4) if not prohibited or limited by any of the following sections of the Internal Revenue Code: Sections 23 (g) and 117, relating to capital losses; section 23 (h) relating to wagering losses; section 24 (b) relating to losses from sales or exchanges of property between persons designated therein; section 112, relating to recognition of gain or loss upon sales or exchanges of property; section 118, relating to losses on wash sales of stock or securities; section 251, relating to income from sources within possessions of the United States; and section 252, relating to citizens of possessions of the United States. See sections 211, 213, and 220 as to limitation upon losses sustained by nonresident aliens.

(b) In general losses for which an amount may be deducted from gross income must be evidenced by closed and completed transactions, fixed by identifiable events, bona fide and actually sustained during the taxable period for which allowed. Substance and not mere form will govern in determining deductible losses. Full consideration must be given to any salvage value and to any insurance or other compensation received in determining the amount of losses actually sustained. See section 113 (b) For special provisions with respect to war losses, see section 127.

(c) A loss occasioned by damage to an automobile maintained for pleasure, where such damage results from the faulty driving of the taxpayer or other person operating the automobile, but is not due to the willful act or negligence of the taxpayer, is a deductible loss in the computation of net income. If damage to a taxpayer's automobile results from the faulty driving of the operator of an automobile with which the automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned to the taxpayer by such damage is likewise deductible.

(d) No loss is realized by the transfer of property by gift or by death. But see section 44 (d)

(e) A loss on the sale of residential property purchased or constructed by the taxpayer for use as his personal residence and so used by him up to the time of the sale is not deductible. If, however, property so purchased or constructed is prior to its sale rented or otherwise appropriated to income-producing purposes and is used for such purposes up to the time of its sale, a loss from the sale of the property, computed as provided in section 111, is, subject to the limitations provided in section 117, an allowable deduction in an amount not to exceed the excess of the value of the property at the time it was appropriated to income-producing purposes (with proper adjustment for depreciation) over the amount realized from the sale.

Example (1). Residential property was purchased by a taxpayer in 1940 for use as his personal residence at a cost of $25,000, of which $15,000 was allocable to the building. The property was so used by the taxpayer until January 1, 1949. From that date to January 1, 1952, when the property was sold, it was rented by the taxpayer. The fair market value of the property at the time it was rented on January 1, 1949, was $22,000, of which $12,000 was allocable to the building. The building had an estimated life of 20 years on January 1, 1949. The property was sold on January 1, 1952, for $16,000. The loss from the sale allowable as a deduction, except as limited by section 117, is $4,200, computed as follows:

Cost of property in 1940	$25,000
Less depreciation allowed (not less than amount allowable) in respect of the building (depreciation for 3 years at 5 percent based on $12,000, value of building when converted to business use)	1,800
	23,200
Selling price of property	16,000
Loss computed as provided in section 111	7,200
Value of property at time it was rented on January 1, 1949	22,000
Less proper adjustment for depreciation	1,800
	20,200
Selling price of property	16,000
Portion of $7,200 loss which is deductible except as limited by section 117	4,200

Example (2). If, under the circumstances set forth in example (1), the property had been purchased at a cost of $20,000, of which $10,000 was allocable to the building, but otherwise the facts assumed are the same, the deductible loss, except as limited by section 117, is $2,500, computed as follows:

Cost of property in 1940	$20,000
Less depreciation allowed (not less than amount allowable) in respect of the building (depreciation for 3 years at 5 percent based on $10,000, cost of building)	1,500
	18,500
Selling price of property	16,000
Loss computed as provided in section 111	2,500
Deductible loss, except as limited by section 117	2,500

§ 39.23 (e)-2 Voluntary removal of buildings. Loss due to the voluntary removal or demolition of old buildings, the scrapping of old machinery, equipment, etc., incident to renewals and replacements is deductible from gross income. When a taxpayer buys real estate upon which is located a building, which he proceeds to raze with a view to erecting thereon another building, it will be considered that the taxpayer has sustained no deductible loss by reason of the demolition of the old building, and no deductible expense on account of the cost of such removal, the value of the real estate, exclusive of old improvements, being presumably equal to the purchase price of the land and building plus the cost of removing the useless building.

§ 39.23 (e)-3 Loss of useful value. (a) When, through some change in business conditions, the usefulness in the business of some or all of the assets is suddenly terminated, so that the taxpayer discontinues the business or discards such assets permanently from use in such business, he may claim as a loss for the year in which he takes such action the difference between the basis (adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (a) (14)-1 and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive) and the salvage value of the property. This exception to the rule requiring a sale or other disposition of property in order to establish a loss requires proof of some unforeseen cause by reason of which the property has been prematurely discarded, as, for example, where an increase in the cost or change in the manufacture of any product makes it necessary to abandon such manufacture, to which special machinery is exclusively devoted, or where new legislation directly or indirectly makes the continued profitable use of the property impossible. This exception does not extend to a case where the useful life of property terminates solely as a result of those gradual processes for which depreciation allowances are authorized. It does not apply to inventories. The exception applies to buildings only when they are permanently abandoned or permanently devoted to a radically different use, and to machinery only when its use as such is permanently abandoned. Any loss to be deductible under this exception must be fully explained in the return of income. The limitations provided in section 117 with respect to the sale or exchange of capital assets have no application to losses due to the discarding of capital assets.

(b) If the depreciable assets of a taxpayer consist of more than one item and depreciation, whether in respect of items or groups of items, is based upon the average lives of such assets, losses claimed on the normal retirement of such assets are not allowable, inasmuch as the use of an average rate contemplates a normal retirement of assets both before and after the average life has been reached and there is, therefore, no possibility of ascertaining any actual loss under such circumstances until all assets contained in the group have been retired. In order to account properly for such retirement the entire cost or other basis of assets retired, adjusted for salvage, will be charged to the depreciation reserve account, which will enable the full cost or other basis of the property to be recovered.

(c) In cases in which depreciable property is disposed of due to causes other than exhaustion, wear and tear, and normal obsolescence, such as casualty, obsolescence other than normal, or sale, a deduction for the difference between the basis of the property (adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (a) (14)-1 and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive) and its salvage value and/or amount realized upon its disposition may be allowed subject to the limitations provided in the Internal Revenue Code upon deductions for losses, but only if it is clearly evident that such disposition was not contemplated in the rate of depreciation.

(d) In the case of classified accounts, if it is the consistent practice of the taxpayer to base the rate of depreciation on the expected life of the longest lived asset contained in the account, or in the case of single item accounts if the rate of depreciation is based on the maximum expected life of the asset, a deduction for the basis of the asset (adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (a) (14)-1 and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive) less its salvage value is allowable upon its retirement.

§ 39.23 (e)-4 Shrinkage in value of stocks. A person possessing stock of a corporation cannot deduct from gross income any amount claimed as a loss merely on account of shrinkage in value of such stock through fluctuation of the market or otherwise. The loss allowable in such cases is that actually suffered when the stock is disposed of. If stock of a corporation becomes worthless, its cost or other basis as determined and adjusted under section 113 is deductible by the owner for the taxable year in which the stock became worthless, provided a satisfactory showing is made of its worthlessness. Federal or State authorities incident to the regulation of banks and certain other corporations may require that stock be charged off as worthless or written down to a nominal value. If, in any such case, the basis of the requirement is the worthlessness of the stock, such charging off or writing down will, for income tax purposes, be considered prima facie evidence of worthlessness; but if the charging off or writing down is due to market fluctuations, or if no reasonable attempt has been made to determine worthlessness, no deduction for income tax purposes of the amount so charged off or written down can be allowed. For dealers in securities, see § 39.22 (c)-5. For limitations on deductions for losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets generally including stocks and bonds, see section 117.

§ 39.23 (e)-5 Losses of farmers. Losses incurred in the operation of farms as business enterprises are deductible from gross income. If farm products are held for favorable markets, no deduction on account of shrinkage in weight or physical value or by reason of deterioration in storage shall be allowed, except as such shrinkage may be reflected in an inventory if used to determine profits. The total loss by frost, storm, flood, or fire of a prospective crop is not a deductible loss in computing net income. A farmer engaged in raising and selling stock, such as cattle, sheep, horses, etc., is not entitled to claim as a loss the value of animals that perish from among those animals that were raised on the farm, except as such loss is reflected in an inventory if used. If livestock has been purchased for any purpose, and afterwards dies from disease, exposure, or injury, or is killed by order of the authorities of a State or the United States, the actual purchase price of such livestock, less any depreciation allowable as a deduction in respect of such perished livestock, may be deducted as a loss if the loss is not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The actual cost of other property (with proper adjustment for depreciation) which is destroyed by order of the authorities of a State or of the United States, may in like manner be claimed as a loss. If reimbursement is made by a State or the United States in whole or in part on account of stock killed or other property destroyed in respect of which a loss was claimed for a prior year, the amount received shall be reported as income for the year in which reimbursement is made. The cost of any feed, pasture, or care which has been deducted as an expense of operation shall not be included as part of the cost of the stock for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of a deductible loss. If gross income is ascertained by inventories, no deduction can be made for livestock or products lost during the year, whether purchased for resale or produced on the farm, as such losses will be reflected in the inventory by reducing the amount of livestock or products on hand at the close of the year. If an individual owns and operates a farm, in addition to being engaged in another trade, business, or calling, and sustains a loss from such operation of the farm, then the amount of loss sustained may be deducted from gross income received from all sources, provided the farm is not operated for recreation or pleasure. As to losses claimed as deductions for estate tax purposes, see § 39.23 (e)-1. See also §§ 39.22 (a)-7, 39.23 (a)-11, and 39.23 (l)-10.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(f) Losses by corporations. In the case of a corporation, losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

§ 39.23 (f)-1 Losses by corporations. Losses sustained by domestic corporations during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise are deductible in so far as not prohibited or limited by sections 23 (g) 23 (h) 24 (b) 112, 117, 118, and 251. The provisions of §§ 39.23 (e)-1 to 39.23 (e)-5, inclusive, and §39.23 (i)-1 are in general applicable to corporations as well as individuals. See section 232 as to deductions by foreign corporations. For special provisions with respect to war losses, see section 127.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(g) Capital losses—(1) Limitation. Losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent provided in section 117.

(2) Securities becoming worthless. If any securities (as defined in paragraph (3) of this subsection) become worthless during the taxable year and are capital assets, the loss resulting therefrom shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be considered as a loss from the sale or exchange, on the last day of such taxable year, of capital assets.

(3) Definition of securities. As used in this paragraph (2) of [this] subsection the term "securities" means (A) shares of stock in a corporation, and (B) rights to subscribe for or to receive such shares.

(4) Stock in affiliated corporation. For the purposes of paragraph (2) stock in a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer shall not be deemed a capital asset. For the purposes of this paragraph a corporation shall be deemed to be affiliated with the taxpayer only if:

(A) At least 95 per centum of each class of its stock is owned directly by the taxpayer; and

(B) More than 90 per centum of the aggregate of its gross incomes for all taxable years has been from sources other than royalties, rents (except rents derived from rental of properties to employees of the company in the ordinary course of its operating business), dividends, interest (except interest received on deferred purchase price of operating assets sold), annuities, or gains from sales or exchanges of stocks and securities; and

(C) The taxpayer is a domestic corporation.

§ 39.23 (g)-1 Capital losses. (a) Section 23 (g) provides that deductions allowed to individuals under section 23 (e) and to corporations under section 23 (f) for losses sustained on the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be limited to the extent provided in section 117. Losses sustained by virtue of securities becoming worthless during the taxable year are, under section 23 (g) made subject to the limitations provided in section 117 with respect to sales or exchanges, provided the securities are "capital assets" as that term is defined in section 117 (a) (1). For purposes of computing the net income of any taxpayer, such losses are to be considered as being sustained from the sale or exchange of the securities on the last day of the taxable year, irrespective of when during the taxable year such securities actually became worthless. Section 23 (g) does not apply to securities which are deemed destroyed or seized under section 127, relating to war losses.

(b) As used in section 23 (g) and this section, the term "securities" means shares of stock in a domestic or foreign corporation and rights to subscribe for or to receive such shares.

§ 39.23 (g)-2 Loss on stock of affiliate. (a) If a taxpayer is a domestic corporation and is affiliated, within the definition in section 23 (g) (4), with another corporation, the stock in such affiliated corporation owned by the taxpayer is not considered to be a "capital asset" of the taxpayer for the purpose of determining the loss from the worthlessness of such stock within the provisions of section 23 (g) (2) and § 39.23

(g)-1. For the purposes of section 23 (g) (2) section 23 (g) (4) § 39.23 (g)-1, and this section, a corporation shall be deemed to be affiliated with the taxpayer only if all the following factors are present:

(1) The taxpayer owns directly at least 95 percent of each class of the stock of such corporation,

(2) More than 90 percent of the aggregate of the gross incomes of such corporation for all the taxable years during which it has been in existence has been from sources other than royalties, rents (except rents derived from rental of properties to employees of the company in the ordinary course of its operating business) dividends, interest (except interest received on deferred purchase price of operating assets sold) annuities, or gains from sales or exchanges of stocks and securities, and

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation P, a domestic manufacturing corporation which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owns 100 percent of each class of the stock of Corporation S, and, in addition, 4 percent of the common stock (the only class of stock) of Corporation R which it acquired in 1944. Corporation S, a domestic manufacturing corporation which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owns 96 percent of the common stock of Corporation R which it acquired in 1942. It is established that the stock of Corporation R which has from its inception derived all its gross income from manufacturing operations, became worthless during 1952. Since Corporation P does not own directly at least 95 percent of the stock of Corporation R, and therefore for the purposes of section 23 (g) (4) and this section is not affiliated with Corporation R, the stock of such corporation is a capital asset. Any loss upon such stock, under section 23 (g) (2), will be considered to be a loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset. Since such stock was held for more than six months, such loss shall be considered a long-term capital loss under section 117. (See also section 117 (d).) Since Corporation R is deemed to be affiliated with Corporation S for the purposes of section 23 (g) (4) and this section, the stock of Corporation R is not a "capital asset" in the hands of Corporation S for the purposes of section 23 (g) (2) and § 39.23 (g)-1. Consequently, in computing the net income of Corporation S for 1952 any loss upon such stock, under section 23 (f), will be deducted as an ordinary loss and will not be circumscribed by the provisions of section 23 (g) or section 117.

(c) With respect to losses on bonds and similar securities, as defined in section 23 (k) (5) of a corporation affiliated with the taxpayer, as provided in such section, see § 39.23 (k)-4.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(h) Wagering losses. Losses from wagering transactions shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such transactions.

§ 39.23 (h)-1 Wagering losses. Deductions for losses from wagering transactions are allowed only to the extent of gains from such transactions. In the case of a husband and wife making a joint return, the combined losses of the spouses as a result of wagering transactions shall be allowed to the extent of the combined gains of the spouses from such transactions.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(i) Basis for determining loss. The basis for determining the amount of deduction for losses sustained, to be allowed under subsection (e) or (f), and for bad debts, to be allowed under subsection (k), shall be the adjusted basis provided in section 113 (b) for determining the loss from the sale or other disposition of property.

§ 39.23 (i)-1 Basis for determining loss. The basis for determining the amount of the deduction for losses allowed to individuals under section 23 (e) and to corporations under section 23 (f) or of the amount of the deduction for bad debts allowed to both individuals and corporations under section 23 (k) is the same as is provided in section 113 for determining the loss from the sale or other disposition of property. Proper adjustment must be made in each case for any expenditure, receipt, loss, or other item properly chargeable to capital account, and for depreciation, obsolescence, amortization, or depletion.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(j) Loss on wash sales of stock or securities. For disallowance of loss deduction in the case of sales of stock or securities where within thirty days before or after the date of the sale the taxpayer has acquired substantially identical property, see section 118.

(k) Bad debts—(1) General rule. Debts which become worthless within the taxable year; or (in the discretion of the Commissioner) a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts; and when satisfied that a debt is recoverable only in part, the Commissioner may allow such debt, in an amount not in excess of the part charged off within the taxable year, as a deduction. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of a taxpayer, other than a bank, as defined in section 104, with respect to a debt evidenced by a security as defined in paragraph (3) of this subsection. This paragraph shall not apply in the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, with respect to a non-business debt, as defined in paragraph (4) of this subsection. In the case of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, and a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, the reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts shall be determined with due regard to the amount of the taxpayer's surplus or bad debt reserves existing at the close of December 31, 1951. In the case of a taxpayer described in the preceding sentence, the reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts for any taxable year shall in no case be less than the amount determined by the taxpayer as the reasonable addition for such year; except that the amount determined by the taxpayer under this sentence shall not be greater than the lesser of (A) the amount of its net income for the taxable year, computed without regard to this subsection, or (B) the amount by which 12 per centum of the total deposits or withdrawable accounts of its depositors at the close of such year exceeds the sum of its surplus, undivided profits, and reserves at the beginning of the taxable year.

(2) Securities becoming worthless. If any securities (as defined in paragraph (3) of this subsection) become worthless within the taxable year and are capital assets, the loss resulting therefrom shall, in the case of a taxpayer other than a bank, as defined in section 104, for the purposes of this chapter, be considered as a loss from the sale or exchange, on the last day of such taxable year, of capital assets.

(3) Definition of securities. As used in paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of this subsection the term "securities" means bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates, or other evidences of indebtedness, issued by any corporation (including those issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), with interest coupons or in registered form.

(4) Non-business debts. In the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation if a non-business debt becomes worthless within the taxable year, the loss resulting therefrom shall be considered a loss from the sale or exchange, during the taxable year, of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months. The term "non-business debt" means a debt other than a debt evidenced by a security as defined in paragraph (3) and other than a debt the loss from the worthlessness of which is incurred in the taxpayer's trade or business.

(5) Securities of affiliated corporations. Bonds, debentures, notes or certificates or other evidences of indebtedness issued with interest coupons or in registered form by any corporation affiliated with the taxpayer shall not be deemed capital assets for the purposes of paragraph (2) and paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to such debt except that no such deduction shall be allowed under such paragraph with respect to any such debt which is recoverable only in part. For the purposes of this paragraph a corporation shall be deemed to be affiliated with the taxpayer only if:

(A) At least 95 per centum of each class of its stock is owned directly by the taxpayer; and

(B) More than 90 per centum of the aggregate of its gross income for all taxable years has been from sources other than royalties, rents (except rents derived from rental of properties to employees of the company in the ordinary course of its operating business), dividends, interest (except interest received on deferred purchase price of operating assets sold), annuities, or gains from sales or exchanges of stocks and securities; and

(C) The taxpayer is a domestic corporation.

(6) Exception. This subsection shall not apply in the case of a taxpayer, other than a bank, as defined in section 104, with respect to debts owed by (A) any political party, (B) any national, state, or local committee of any political party, or (C) any committee, association, or organization which accepts contributions or makes expenditures for the purpose of influencing or attempting to influence the election of Presidential or Vice Presidential electors or of any individual whose name is presented for election to any Federal, State, or local elective public office, whether or not such individual is elected. For the purpose of this paragraph, the terms "contributions" and "expenditure" shall have the meanings prescribed for such terms in section 591 of title 18 of the United States Code.

§ 39.23 (k)-1 Bad debts. (a) Bad debts may be treated in either of two ways—

(1) By a deduction from income in respect of debts which become worthless in whole or in part, or

(2) By a deduction from income of an addition to a reserve for bad debts.

(b) Taxpayers were given a similar option for 1921 to select either of the methods mentioned for treating such debts. (See article 151, Regulations 62.) While ascertainment of worthlessness and charge-off during the taxable year (which were prerequisite to deduction of a bad debt under the law at that time) are no longer required for the allowance of a debt which becomes wholly worthless, the method used in the return for 1921 must be used in returns for all subsequent years unless permission is granted by the Commissioner to change to the other method. A taxpayer filing a first return of income may select either of the two methods subject to approval by the Commissioner upon examination of the return. If the method selected is approved, it must be followed in returns for subsequent years, except as permission may be granted by the Commissioner to change to another method. Application for permission to change the method of treating bad debts shall be made at least 30 days prior to the close of the taxable year for which the change is to be effective. (See also § 39.23 (k)-5.)

(c) If, from all the surrounding and attending circumstances, the Commissioner is satisfied that a debt is partially worthless, the amount which has become worthless, to the extent charged off during the taxable year, shall be allowed as a deduction in computing net income. If a taxpayer claims a deduction for a part of a debt for the taxable year within which such part of the debt is charged off and such deduction is disallowed for such year and the debt becomes partially worthless subsequent to such year, a deduction may be allowed for a subsequent taxable year, not in excess of the amount charged off in the prior year plus any amount charged off in the subsequent year, the charge-off in the prior year, if consistently maintained as such, being sufficient to that extent to meet the charge-off requirement. Before a taxpayer may deduct a debt in part, he must be able to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Commissioner the amount thereof which is uncollectible and the part thereof which was charged off. If a debt becomes wholly worthless during the taxable year, the amount thereof which has not been allowed as a deduction for any prior taxable year shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable year. There should accompany the return a statement of facts substantiating any deduction claimed for bad debts. Any amount subsequently received on account of a bad debt or on account of a part of such debt previously allowed as a deduction for income tax purposes must be included in gross income for the taxable year in which received, except to the extent excludible from gross income under the provisions of section 22 (b) (12) In determining whether a debt is worthless in whole or in part the Commissioner will consider all pertinent evidence, including the value of the collateral, if any, securing the debt and the financial condition of the debtor. Partial deductions will be allowed with respect to specific debts only.

(d) Where the surrounding circumstances indicate that a debt is worthless and uncollectible and that legal action to enforce payment would in all probability not result in the satisfaction of execution on a judgment, a showing of these facts will be sufficient evidence of the worthlessness of the debt for the purpose of deduction. Bankruptcy is generally an indication of the worthlessness of at least a part of an unsecured and unpreferred debt. In bankruptcy cases a debt may become worthless before settlement in some instances, and in others only when a settlement in bankruptcy shall have been had. In either case the mere fact that bankruptcy proceedings instituted against the debtor are terminated in a later year, confirming the conclusion that the debt is worthless, will not authorize shifting the deductions to such later year. If a taxpayer computes his income upon the basis of valuing his notes or accounts receivable at their fair market value when received, which may be less than their face value, the amount deductible for bad debts in any case is limited to such original valuation.

(e) Where banks or other corporations which are subject to supervision by Federal authorities (or by State authorities maintaining substantially equivalent standards) in obedience to the specific orders of such supervisory officers charge off debts in whole or in part, such debts shall, to the extent charged off during the taxable year, be conclusively presumed, for income tax purposes, to have become worthless or worthless only in part during the taxable year, as the case may be. But no such debt shall be so conclusively presumed to be worthless or worthless only in part, as the case may be, if the amount so charged off is not claimed as a deduction by the taxpayer at the time of filing the return for the taxable year in which such charge-off takes place. If a taxpayer does not claim a deduction in its return for such a totally or partially worthless debt for the year in which such charge-off takes place, but claims such deduction for a later year, then such charge-off in the prior year will be deemed to have been involuntary and the deduction shall be allowed for the year for which claimed, if the taxpayer produces sufficient evidence to show (1) that the debt became wholly worthless in such later year or became recoverable only in part subsequent to the year of such involuntary charge-off, as the case may be, and (2) that, to the extent that the deduction claimed in the later year for a debt partially worthless was not involuntarily charged off in prior years, it was charged off in the later year.

(f) The provisions of paragraphs (a) to (d) inclusive, of this section apply generally to all taxpayers. However, they do not apply in the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, with respect to a nonbusiness debt as defined in section 23 (k) (4) Nor shall any deduction be allowed on account of the worthlessness of any debt of the type enumerated in section 23 (k) (5) which is recoverable only in part. In the case of taxpayers other than banks as defined in section 104, the term "debts" as used in paragraphs (a) to (d), inclusive, of this section means obligations to pay fixed or determinable sums of money which are not evidenced by securities as defined in § 39.23 (k)-4.

§ 39.23 (k)-2 Examples of bad debts. Worthless debts arising from unpaid wages, salaries, rents, and similar items of taxable income will not be allowed as a deduction unless the income such items represent has been included in the return of income for the year for which the deduction as a bad debt is sought to be made or for a previous year. Only the difference between the amount received in distribution of the assets of a bankrupt and the amount of the claim may be deducted as a bad debt. The difference between the amount received by a creditor of a decedent in distribution of the assets of the decedent's estate and the amount of his claim may be considered a worthless debt. A purchaser of accounts receivable which become worthless is entitled to deduct them, the amount of deduction to be based upon the price he paid for them and not upon their face value.

§ 39.23 (k)-3 Uncollectible deficiency upon sale of mortgaged or pledged property. (a) If mortgaged or pledged property is lawfully sold (whether to the creditor or another purchaser) for less than the amount of the debt, and the portion of the indebtedness remaining unsatisfied after such sale is wholly or partially uncollectible, the mortgagee or pledgee may deduct such amount (to the extent that it constitutes capital or represents an item the income from which has been returned by him) as a bad debt for the taxable year in which it has become wholly worthless or is charged off as partially worthless. In addition, if the creditor buys in the mortgaged or pledged property, loss or gain is realized measured by the difference between the amount of those obligations of the debtor which are applied to the purchase or bid price of the property (to the extent that such obligations constitute capital or represent an item the income from which has been returned by him) and the fair market value of the property. The fair market value of the property shall be presumed to be the amount for which it is bid in by the taxpayer in the absence of clear and convincing proof to the contrary. If the creditor subsequently sells the property so acquired, the basis for determining gain or loss is the fair market value of the property at the date of acquisition.

(b) Accrued interest may be included as part of the deduction only if it has previously been returned as income.

§ 39.23 (k)-4 Worthless bonds and similar obligations. (a) Except as otherwise provided in section 23 (k) (5) no deduction is allowable under section 23 (k) (1) to any taxpayer (other than a bank as defined in section 104) with respect to a debt evidenced by a security which has become worthless in whole or in part. If a security is a capital asset and becomes worthless during the taxable year, a deduction for the loss resulting therefrom is allowable under section 23 (k) (2) to a taxpayer other than a bank. Such a loss, however, is made subject to the limitations provided in section 117 with respect to sales or exchanges. For the purposes of computing the net income of any taxpayer, other than a bank as defined in section 104, such a loss is to be considered as being sustained from the sale or exchange of the security on the last day of the taxable year, irrespective of when during the taxable year such security actually became worthless. Except in the case of a bank as defined in section 104, no deduction is allowable under section 23 (k) with respect to a debt evidenced by a security, as defined in section 23 (k) (3) which is recoverable only in part. Section 23 (k) (2) does not apply to securities which are deemed destroyed or seized under section 127, relating to war losses.

(b) As used in section 23 (k) (2) the term "security" means a bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness to pay a fixed or determinable sum of money, which has been issued at any time by a domestic or foreign corporation (including that issued by any government or political subdivision thereof) either in registered form or accompanied by interest coupons.

(c) A bond issued by an individual, if it has become worthless, may be treated as a bad debt. A bond (whether or not a security) of an insolvent corporation secured only by a mortgage from which on foreclosure nothing is realized for the bondholders is regarded as having become worthless not later than the year of the foreclosure sale, and no deduction is allowable in computing a bondholder's income for a subsequent year.

(d) A taxpayer (other than a dealer in bonds or other similar obligations) possessing debts evidenced by bonds or other similar obligations cannot deduct from gross income any amount merely on account of market fluctuation. If, however, due, for instance, to the financial condition of the debtor, or conditions other than market fluctuation, the taxpayer will recover upon maturity none or only a part of the debt evidenced by the bonds or other similar obligations (which bonds or other obligations are not securities as defined in this section) and he so demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, and if he has made a proper charge-off with respect to the debt partially uncollectible, he may deduct in computing net income the uncollectible part of the debt evidenced by the bonds or other similar obligations. A bank as defined in section 104 may deduct such uncollectible part of the debt even though the evidence of the debt is a security as defined in this section.

(e) Under section 23 (k) (5) bonds, debentures, notes or certificates, or other evidences of indebtedness to pay a fixed or determinable sum of money, issued with interest coupons or in registered form by any corporation affiliated with the taxpayer, shall not be deemed capital assets of the taxpayer for the purposes of section 23 (k) (2) or as a debt (evidenced by a security) for the purposes of this section; and the provisions of section 23 (k) (1) and of paragraphs (a) to (d) inclusive, of § 39.23 (k)-1 shall apply with respect to such debts except that no deduction shall be allowed to the taxpayer with respect to any such debt which is recoverable only in part. For the purposes of this section, a corporation is deemed to be affiliated with the taxpayer only if the taxpayer owns at least 95 percent of each class of the stock of such corporation, if more than 90 percent of the aggregate of the gross incomes of such corporation for all taxable years has been from sources other than royalties, rents (except rents derived from rental of properties to employees of the company in the ordinary course of its operating business) dividends, interest (except interest received on deferred purchase price of operating assets sold) annuities, or gains from the sales or exchanges of stocks and securities, and if the taxpayer is a domestic corporation.

§ 39.23 (k)-5 Reserve for bad debts—(a) Taxpayer other than mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks. (1) Taxpayers who have established the reserve method of treating bad debts and maintained proper reserve accounts for bad debts, or who, in accordance with § 39.23 (k)-1, adopt the reserve method of treating bad debts, may deduct from gross income a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts in lieu of a deduction for specific bad debt items.

(2) What constitutes a reasonable addition to a reserve for bad debts must be determined in the light of the facts, and will vary as between classes of business and with conditions of business prosperity. It will depend primarily upon the total amount of debts outstanding as of the close of the taxable year, those arising currently as well as those arising in prior taxable years, and the total amount of the existing reserve. In case subsequent realizations upon outstanding debts prove to be more or less than estimated at the time of the creation of the existing reserve, the amount of the excess or inadequacy in the existing reserve should be reflected in the determination of the reasonable addition necessary in the taxable year. A taxpayer using the reserve method should make a statement in his return showing the volume of his charge sales (or other business transactions) for the year and the percentage of the reserve to such amount, the total amount of notes and accounts receivable at the beginning and close of the taxable year, and the amount of the debts which have become wholly or partially worthless and have been charged against the reserve account.

(b) Mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks—(1) In general. A mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, and a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit may, as an alternative to a deduction from gross income for specific debts which become worthless in whole or in part, deduct amounts credited to a reserve for bad debts in the manner and under the circumstances prescribed in this section. In the case of such an institution the selection of either of the alternative methods for treating bad debts may be made by the taxpayer in the return for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951. The method selected shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon examination of the return. Any change in the method so selected and approved may be made only if permission is granted as provided in § 39.23 (k)-1 (b)

(2) Definitions. When used in this paragraph—

(i) The term "institution" means either a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association as defined in section 3797 (a) (19) or a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit.

(ii) "Surplus, undivided profits, and reserves" means the amount by which the total assets of an institution exceed the amount of the total liabilities of such an institution. For this purpose the term "total assets" means the sum of money, plus the aggregate of the adjusted basis of the property other than money held by an institution. Such adjusted basis for any asset is its adjusted basis for determining gain upon sale or exchange for Federal income tax purposes. (See, in general, section 113 and the regulations prescribed thereunder. For special rules with respect to adjustments to basis for prior taxable years during which the institution was exempt from tax, see § 39.113 (b) (1)-4.) The determination of the total assets of any taxpayer shall conform to the method of accounting employed by such taxpayer in determining net income and to the rules applicable in determining its earnings and profits. The term "total liabilities" means all liabilities of the taxpayer, which are fixed and determined, absolute and not contingent, and includes those items which constitute liabilities in the sense of debts or obligations. The total deposits or withdrawable accounts, as defined in subdivision (iv) of this subparagraph, shall be considered a liability. In the case of a building and loan association having permanent nonwithdrawable capital stock represented by shares, the paid-in amount of such stock shall also be considered a liability. Reserves for contingencies and other reserves, however, which are mere appropriations of surplus are not liabilities.

(iii) The term "surplus or bad debt reserves existing at the close of December 31, 1951" means the amount of surplus, undivided profits, and reserves accumulated by the institution prior to January 1, 1952, and in existence at the close of December 31, 1951.

(iv) The term "total deposits or withdrawable accounts" means the aggregate of (a) amounts placed with an institution for deposit or investment and (b) earnings outstanding on the books of account of the institution at the close of the taxable year which have been credited as dividends upon such accounts prior to the close of the taxable year, except that in the case of a building and loan association, such term does not include permanent nonwithdrawable capital stock represented by shares, or earnings credited thereon.

(3) Institutions with surplus, reserves, and undivided profits in an amount less than 12 percent of total deposits or withdrawable accounts. Where 12 percent of the total deposits or withdrawable accounts of an institution at the close of the taxable year exceeds the sum of its surplus, undivided profits, and reserves at the bginning of the taxable year, there is allowable as a deduction from gross income as an addition to a reserve for bad debts any amount determined by the taxpayer not exceeding the lesser of:

(i) The amount of the net income of such institution for the taxable year computed without regard to section 23 (k) (1) or,

(ii) The amount by which 12 percent of the total deposits or withdrawable accounts at the close of the taxable year exceeds the sum of the institution's surplus, undivided profits, and reserves at the beginning of the taxable year.

Bad debt losses sustained during the taxable year shall be charged against the bad debt reserve. Recoveries of debts charged against the bad debt reserve during a prior taxable year in which the institution was subject to tax under this chapter shall be credited to the bad debt reserve. The establishment of such reserve and all adjustments made thereto must be reflected on the regular books of account of the institution at the close of the taxable year, or as soon as practicable thereafter. For the purpose of this paragraph minimum amounts credited in compliance with Federal or State statutes, regulations, or supervisory orders, to reserve or similar accounts, or additional amounts credited to such reserve or similar accounts and permissive under such statutes, regulations, or orders, against which charges may be made for the purpose of absorbing losses sustained by an institution will be deemed to have been credited to the bad debt reserve authorized under this paragraph.

Example (1). On January 1, 1952, and on December 31, 1952, Institution A, which keeps its books on the basis of the calendar year, has total deposits or withdrawable accounts of $10,000,000, all of which amount is insured by an agency of the Federal government. The surplus, reserves, and undivided profits of Institution A at the opening of business on January 1, 1952, total $800,000. A regulation of a Federal agency requires that at the close of the taxable year an amount equal to 0.3 percent of the value of the insured accounts at the beginning of the year be credited by Institution A to a Federal insurance reserve for the sole purpose of absorbing losses. A statute of the State having jurisdiction over Institution A requires that not less than 5 percent of the net profits of Institution A, computed before provisions for dividends, be credited at the close of the year to a "reserve fund" for the purpose of absorbing losses. The credit to such reserve fund of additional amounts in excess of 5 percent of net profits is permissive under such statute, provided that the total amounts credited do not exceed 25 percent of net profits. It is assumed for the purpose of determining the amount to be credited to the State reserve fund that "not less than 5 percent of the net profits" of Institution A, computed under State law before provisions for dividends for the taxable year 1952 amounts to $17,500.

Prior to the taxable year Institution A did not maintain a reserve for bad debts. During 1952 Institution A sustained bad debt losses of $5,000. The net income of Institution A for the taxable year 1952, computed under chapter 1 after taking into account all applicable deductions (including the deduction for dividends provided in section 23 (r) (1)) except the deduction provided in section 23 (k) (1) is $200,000.

The books of account of Institution A show credits for the taxable year 1952 to the following reserves:

Federal insurance reserve	$30,000
State reserve fund	25,000
Bad debt reserve	45,000
Miscellaneous reserves	15,000

There is allowable as a deduction under section 23 (k) (1) $100,000 ($45,000 credited to the bad debt reserve, $30,000 credited to the Federal insurance reserve, and $25,000 representing a permissive amount less than 25 percent of net profits under the State statute, credited to the State reserve fund).

Assuming that Federal income taxes for 1952 amount to $46,500 on the net income of $100,000, the amount credited to the surplus account for 1952 will be $38,500, that is, $53,500 ($100,000 minus $46,500) less the $15,000 credited to miscellaneous reserves for which no bad debt deduction is allowable. Consequently, the surplus, undivided profits, and reserves of Institution A, amounting to $800,000 at the close of December 31, 1951, as increased by amounts credited to these accounts for 1952 will total $948,500 at the close of December 31, 1952, computed as follows:

Surplus, reserves, and undivided profits at close of Dec. 31, 1951		$800,000
Amount credited to miscellaneous reserve accounts for 1952		15,000
Amount credited to State reserve fund for 1952		25,000
Amount credited to Federal insurance reserve for 1952		30,000
Amount credited to surplus for 1952		38,500
Bad debt reserve at close of Dec. 31, 1951		0
Amount credited to reserve for bad debts for 1952	$45,000
Less: Bad debt losses sustained during 1952	5,000
Bad debt reserve at close of Dec. 31, 1952		40,000
Surplus, undivided profits and reserves existing at close of Dec. 31, 1952		948,500

Example (2). The net income of Institution B for the taxable year 1952, computed under chapter 1 after all deductions including the deduction for dividends, but before the deduction provided in section 23 (k) (1), is determined to be $250,000. Such $250,000 is credited by Institution B to the bad debt reserve as provided in secton 23 (k) (1) and § 39.23 (k)-5 (b) (3). The amount by which 12 percent of the total deposits or withdrawable accounts of Institution B at the close of the taxable year exceeds the sum of such institution's surplus, undivided profits and reserves at the beginning of the taxable year is $500,000.

During 1954, upon examination of the return of income filed by Institution B for 1952, it is determined that the net income of such institution, properly computed, without regard to section 23 (k) (1) is $275,000. Assuming that Institution B credits the additional $25,000 to its bad debt reserve, there is allowable as a deduction from gross income for such institution for the taxable year 1952, $275,000.

(4) Institutions with surplus, reserves, and undivided profits equal to or in excess of 12 percent of deposits or withdrawable accounts. Where 12 percent of the total deposits or withdrawable accounts of an institution at the close of the taxable year is equal to or less than the sum of such institution's surplus, undivided profits and reserves at the beginning of the taxable year, there may be allowable as a deduction from gross income a reasonable addition to the reserve for bad debts determined under the general provisions of paragraph (a) of this section. In making such determination there will be taken into account (i) surplus, or bad debt reserves existing at the close of December 31, 1951, and (ii) changes in the surplus, undivided profits, and reserves of the institution from December 31, 1951, until the beginning of the taxable year. Deductions for additions to the reserve for bad debts, in addition to the deductions allowed, if any, under subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, will be authorized in those cases where the institution proves to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the bad debt experience of the institution warrants the maintenance of a bad debt reserve in excess of that provided in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph.

§ 39.23 (k)-6 Nonbusiness bad debts. (a) In the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, if a nonbusiness bad debt becomes entirely worthless within the taxable year, the loss resulting therefrom shall be treated as a loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than six months. Such a loss is subject to the limitations provided in section 117 with respect to gains and losses from the sale and exchange of capital assets. A loss with respect to such a debt will be treated as sustained only if and when the debt has become totally worthless, and no deduction shall be allowed for a nonbusiness debt which is recoverable in part during the taxable year. Nor are the provisions of this section applicable in the case of a loss resulting from a security as defined in section 23 (k) (3) A nonbusiness debt is a debt, other than a debt the loss from the worthlessness of which is incurred in the taxpayer's trade or business and other than a debt evidenced by a security as that term is defined in section 23 (k) (3) The question whether a debt is one the loss from the worthlessness of which is incurred in the taxpayer's trade or business is a question of fact in each particular case. The determination of this question is substantially the same as that which is made for the purpose of ascertaining whether a loss from the type of transaction covered by section 23 (e) is "incurred in trade or business" under section 23 (e) (1)

(b) The character of the debt for this purpose is not controlled by the circumstances attending its creation or its subsequent acquisition by the taxpayer or by the use to which the borrowed funds are put by the recipient, but is to be determined rather by the relation which the loss resulting from the debt's becoming worthless bears to the trade or business of the taxpayer. If that relation is a proximate one in the conduct of the trade or business in which the taxpayer is engaged at the time the debt becomes worthless, the debt is not a nonbusiness debt for the purposes of this section.

(c) To illustrate: A, an individual engaged in the grocery business and who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis, extends credit on an open account to B in 1951.

(1) In 1952 A sells the business but retains the claim against B. The claim becomes worthless in A's hands in 1953. A's loss is controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions. While the original consideration was advanced by A in his trade or business, the loss was not sustained as a proximate incident to the conduct of any trade or business in which he was engaged at the time the claim became worthless.

(2) In 1952 A sells the business to C but sells the claim against B to the taxpayer, D. The claim becomes worthless in D's hands in 1953, at a time when D is not engaged in a trade or business incident to the conduct of which a loss from the worthlessness of such a claim would be a proximate result. D's loss is controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions, even though the original consideration was advanced by A in his trade or business.

(3) In 1952 A dies, leaving the business, including the accounts receivable, to his son, C, the taxpayer. The claim against B becomes worthless in C's hands in 1953. C's loss is not controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions. While C did not advance any consideration for the claim or acquire it in carrying on his trade or business, the loss was sustained as a proximate incident to the conduct of the trade or business in which he was engaged at the time the debt became worthless.

(4) In 1952 A dies, leaving the business to his son, C, but the claim against B to his son, D, the taxpayer. The claim against B becomes worthless in D's hands in 1953, at a time when D is not engaged in a trade or business incident to the conduct of which a loss from the worthlessness of such a claim would be a proximate result. D's loss is controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions, even though the original consideration was advanced by A in his trade or business.

(5) In 1952 A dies and while his executor, C, is carrying on the business, the claim against B becomes worthless in 1952. The loss sustained by A's estate is not controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions. While C did not advance any consideration for the claim on behalf of the estate or acquire it in carrying on a trade or business in which the estate was engaged, the loss was sustained as a proximate incident to the conduct of the trade or business in which the estate was engaged at the time the debt became worthless.

(6) In 1952, A, in liquidating the business, attempts to collect the claim against B but finds that it has become worthless. A's loss is not controlled by the nonbusiness debt provisions, since a loss incurred in liquidating a trade or business is a proximate incident to the conduct thereof.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(l) Depreciation. A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear (including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence)—

(1) Of property used in the trade or business, or

(2) Of property held for the production of income.

In the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person, the deduction shall be computed as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the property and shall be allowed to the life tenant. In the case of property held in trust the allowable deduction shall be apportioned between the income beneficiaries and the trustee in accordance with the pertinent provisions of the instrument creating the trust, or, in the absence of such provisions, on the basis of the trust income allocable to each.

§ 39.23 (l)-1 Depreciation. A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence of property used in the trade or business, or treated under § 39.23 (a)-15 as held by the taxpayer for the production of income, may be deducted from gross income. For convenience such an allowance will usually be referred to as depreciation, excluding from the term any idea of a mere reduction in market value not resulting from exhaustion, wear and tear, or obsolescence. The proper allowance for such depreciation is that amount which should be set aside for the taxable year in accordance with a reasonably consistent plan (not necessarily at a uniform rate), whereby the aggregate of the amounts so set aside, plus the salvage value, will, at the end of the useful life of the depreciable property, equal the cost or other basis of the property determined in accordance with section 113. Due regard must also be given to expenditures for current upkeep. In the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person, the deduction for depreciation shall be computed as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the property so that he will be entitled to the deduction during his life, and thereafter the deduction, if any, will be allowed to the remainderman. In the case of property held in trust, the allowable deduction is to be apportioned between the income beneficiaries and the trustee in accordance with the pertinent provisions of the will, deed, or other instrument creating the trust, or, in the absence of such provisions, on the basis of the trust income which is allocable to the trustee and the beneficiaries, respectively. For example, if the trust instrument provides that the income of the trust computed without regard to depreciation shall be distributed to a named beneficiary, such beneficiary will be entitled to the depreciation allowance to the exclusion of the trustee, while if the instrument provides that the trustee in determining the distributable income shall first make due allowance for keeping the trust corpus intact by retaining a reasonable amount of the current income for that purpose, the allowable deduction will be granted in full to the trustee. For deduction with respect to the amortization of emergency facilities, in lieu of the deduction for depreciation, see sections 23 (t) and 124A.

§ 39.23 (l)-2 Depreciable property. The necessity for a depreciation allowance arises from the fact that certain property used in the business, or treated under § 39.23 (a)-15 as held by the taxpayer for the production of income, gradually approaches a point where its usefulness is exhausted. The allowance should be confined to property of this nature. In the case of tangible property, it applies to that which is subject to wear and tear, to decay or decline from natural causes, to exhaustion, and to obsolescence due to the normal progress of the art, as where machinery or other property must be replaced by a new invention, or due to the inadequacy of the property to the growing needs of the business. It does not apply to inventories or to stock in trade, or to land apart from the improvements or physical development added to it. It does not apply to bodies of minerals which through the process of removal suffer depletion, other provisions for this being made in the Internal Revenue Code. (See sections 23 (m) and 114.) Property kept in repair may, nevertheless, be the subject of a depreciation allowance. (See § 39.23 (a)-4.) The deduction of an allowance for depreciation is limited to property used in the taxpayer's trade or business, or treated under § 39.23 (a)-15 as held by the taxpayer for the production of income. No such allowance may be made in respect of automobiles or other vehicles used solely for pleasure, a building used by the taxpayer solely as his residence, or in respect of furniture or furnishings therein, personal effects, or clothing; but properties and costumes used exclusively in a business, such as a theatrical business, may be the subject of a depreciation allowance.

§ 39.23 (l)-3 Depreciation of intangible property. Intangibles, the use of which in the trade or business or in the production of income is definitely limited in duration, may be the subject of a depreciation allowance. Examples are patents and copyrights, licenses, and franchises. Intangibles, the use of which in the business or trade or in the production of income is not so limited, will not usually be a proper subject of such an allowance. If, however, an intangible asset acquired through capital outlay is known from experience to be of value in the business or in the production of income for only a limited period, the length of which can be estimated from experience with reasonable certainty, such intangible asset may be the subject of a depreciation allowance, provided the facts are fully shown in the return or prior thereto to the satisfaction of the Commissioner. No deduction for depreciation, including obsolescence, is allowable in respect of good will.

§ 39.23 (l)-4 Capital sum recoverable through depreciation allowances. The capital sum to be replaced by depreciation allowances is the cost or other basis of the property in respect of which the allowance is made. (See sections 113 (a) and 114.) To this amount should be added from time to time the cost of improvements, additions, and betterments, and from it should be deducted from time to time the amount of any definite loss or damage sustained by the property through casualty as distinguished from the gradual exhaustion of its utility which is the basis of the depreciation allowance. (See section 113 (b).) In the case of the acquisition on or after March 1, 1913, of a combination of depreciable and nondepreciable property for a lump price, as, for example, buildings and land, the capital sum to be replaced is limited to an amount which bears the same proportion to the lump price as the value of the depreciable property at the time of acquisition bears to the value of the entire property at that time. In the case of property which has been the subject of deductions for amortization under sections 214 (a) (9) and 234 (a) (8) of the Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921, depreciation deductions will be computed after the close of the amortization period upon the cost or other basis of such property after the amortization allowance has been deducted. No depreciation deduction will be allowed in the case of property which has been amortized to its scrap value and is no longer in use.

§ 39.23 (l)-5 Method of computing depreciation allowance. (a) The capital sum to be recovered shall be charged off over the useful life of the property, either in equal annual installments or in accordance with any other recognized trade practice, such as an apportionment of the capital sum over units of production. Whatever plan or method of apportionment is adopted must be reasonable and must have due regard to operating conditions during the taxable period. The reasonableness of any claim for depreciation shall be determined upon the conditions known to exist at the end of the period for which the return is made. If the cost or other basis of the property has been recovered through depreciation or other allowances no further deduction for depreciation shall be allowed. The deduction for depreciation in respect of any depreciable property for any taxable year shall be limited to such ratable amount as may reasonably be considered necessary to recover during the remaining useful life of the property the unrecovered cost or other basis. The burden of proof will rest upon the taxpayer to sustain the deduction claimed. Therefore, taxpayers must furnish full and complete information with respect to the cost or other basis of the assets in respect of which depreciation is claimed, their age, condition, and remaining useful life, the portion of their cost or other basis which has been recovered through depreciation allowances for prior taxable years, and such other information as the Commissioner may require in substantiation of the deduction claimed.

(b) A taxpayer is not permitted under the law to take advantage in later years of his prior failure to take any depreciation allowance or of his action in taking an allowance plainly inadequate under the known facts in prior years. This provision may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. An asset was purchased January 1, 1947, at a cost of $10,000. The useful life of the asset is 10 years. It has no salvage value. Depreciation was deducted and allowed for 1947 to 1951 as follows:

1948	-----
1949	1,000
1950	1,000
1951	1,000
Total amount allowed	3,500

The correct reserve as of December 31, 1951, is computed as follows:

Dec. 31—
1947 ($10,000−10)	$1,000
1948 ($9,000−9)	1,000
1949 ($8,000−8)	1,000
1950 ($7,000−7)	1,000
1951 ($6,000−6)	1,000
Reserve Dec. 31, 1951	5,000

Depreciation for 1952 is computed as follows:

Cost	$10,000
Reserve as of December 31, 1951	5,000
Unrecovered cost	5,000
Depreciation allowable for 1952 ($5,000—5)	1,000

§ 39.23 (l)-6 Obsolescence. With respect to physical property the whole or any portion of which is clearly shown by the taxpayer as being affected by economic conditions that will result in its being abandoned at a future date prior to the end of its normal useful life, so that depreciation deductions alone are insufficient to return the cost or other basis at the end of its economic term of usefulness, a reasonable deduction for obsolescence, in addition to depreciation, may be allowed in accordance with the facts obtaining with respect to each item of property concerning which a claim for obsolescence is made. No deduction for obsolescence will be permitted merely because, in the opinion of a taxpayer, the property may become obsolete at some later date. This allowance will be confined to such portion of the property on which obsolescence is definitely shown to be sustained and cannot be held applicable to an entire property unless all portions thereof are affected by the conditions to which obsolescence is found to be due.

§ 39.23 (l)-7 Depreciation of patent or copyright. In computing a depreciation allowance in the case of a patent or copyright, the capital sum to be replaced is the cost or other basis of the patent or copyright. The allowance should be computed by an apportionment of the cost or other basis of the patent or copyright over the life of the patent or copyright since its grant, or since its acquisition by the taxpayer, or in the case of a copyright, since March 1, 1913, as the case may be. If the patent or copyright was acquired from the Government, its cost consists of the various Government fees, cost of drawings, experimental models, attorneys' fees, development or experimental expenses, etc., actually paid. Depreciation of a copyright can be taken on the basis of the fair market value as of March 1, 1913, only when affirmative and satisfactory evidence of such value is offered. Such evidence should whenever practicable be submitted with the return. If the patent becomes obsolete prior to its expiration, such proportion of the amount on which its depreciation may be based as the number of years of its remaining life bears to the whole number of years intervening between the basic date and the date when it legally expires may be deducted. The fact that depreciation has not been taken in prior years does not entitle the taxpayer to deduct in any taxable year a greater amount for depreciation than would otherwise be allowable.

§ 39.23 (l)-8 Depreciation of drawings and models. If a taxpayer has incurred expenditures in his business for designs, drawings, patterns, models, or work of an experimental nature calculated to result in improvement of his facilities or his product, and if the period of usefulness of any such asset may be estimated from experience with reasonable accuracy, it may be the subject of depreciation allowances spread over such estimated period of usefulness. The facts must be fully shown in the return or prior thereto to the satisfaction of the Commissioner. Except for such depreciation allowances no deduction shall be made by the taxpayer against any sum so set up as an asset except on the sale or other disposition of such asset at a loss or on proof of a total loss thereof.

§ 39.23 (l)-9 Records of depreciable property. In order that the verification of depreciation allowances claimed by the taxpayer may be facilitated, depreciation shall be recorded on the taxpayer's books, the amount measuring a reasonable allowance for depreciation either being deducted directly from the book value of the assets or preferably being credited to a depreciation reserve account, which should be reflected in the annual balance sheet. For the same reason the allowances shall be computed and recorded with express reference to specific items, units, or groups of property, each item or unit being considered separately or specifically included in a group with others to which the same factors apply. Also, the taxpayer's books shall show the basis of the depreciable property and any adjustments thereto, and, in cases where the basis of the property is other than cost, or value on March 1, 1913, or value at date of acquisition (as, for example, if the property was acquired by gift or transfer in trust after December 31, 1920) or through a reorganization or a tax-free exchange (see particularly section 113 (a)) the books shall show the data used in ascertaining such basis and the adjustments thereto. If a taxpayer does not desire to have his regular books of account show all of the factors entering into the computation of depreciation allowances, such factors shall be recorded in permanent auxiliary records which shall be kept with and reconciled with the regular books of account.

§ 39.23 (l)-10 Depreciation in case of farmers. A reasonable allowance for depreciation may be claimed on farm buildings (other than a dwelling occupied by the owner), farm machinery, and other physical property. A reasonable allowance for depreciation may also be claimed on livestock acquired for work, breeding, or dairy purposes, unless they are included in an inventory used to determine profits in accordance with § 39.22 (a)-7. Such depreciation should be based on the cost or other basis and the estimated life of the livestock. If such livestock be included in an inventory no depreciation thereof will be allowed, as the corresponding reduction in their value will be reflected in the inventory. (See also §§ 39.23 (a)-11 and 39.23 (e)-5.)

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(m) Depletion. In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, a reasonable allowance for depletion and for depreciation of improvements, according to the peculiar conditions in each case; such reasonable allowance in all cases to be made under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary. In any case in which it is ascertained as a result of operations or of development work that the recoverable units are greater or less than the prior estimate thereof, then such prior estimate (but not the basis for depletion) shall be revised and the allowance under this subsection for subsequent taxable years shall be based upon such revised estimate. In the case of leases the deductions shall be equitably apportioned between the lessor and lessee. In the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person, the deduction shall be computed as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the property and shall be allowed to the life tenant. In the case of property held in trust the allowable deductions shall be apportioned between the income beneficiaries and the trustee in accordance with the pertinent provisions of the instrument creating the trust, or, in the absence of such provisions, on the basis of the trust income allocable to each.

For percentage depletion allowable under this subsection, see section 114 (b), (3) and (4).

§ 39.23 (m)-1 Depletion of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber; depreciation of improvements. (a) Section 23 (m) provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction in computing net income in the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, a reasonable allowance for depletion and for depreciation of improvements. Section 114 prescribes the bases upon which depreciation and depletion are to be allowed.

(b) Under such provisions, the owner of an economic interest in mineral deposits or standing timber is allowed annual depletion deductions. However, no depletion deduction shall be allowed the owner with respect to any timber or coal which such owner has disposed of under any form of contract by virtue of which he retains an economic interest in such timber or coal, if such disposal is considered a sale of timber or coal under section 117 (k) (2) An economic interest is possessed in every case in which the taxpayer has acquired, by investment, any interest in mineral in place or standing timber and secures, by any form of legal relationship, income derived from the severance and sale of the mineral or timber, to which he must look for a return of his capital. But a person who has no capital investment in the mineral deposit or standing timber does not possess an economic interest merely because, through a contractual relation to the owner, he possesses a mere economic advantage derived from production. Thus, an agreement between the owner of an economic interest and another entitling the latter to purchase the product upon production or to share in the net income derived from the interest of such owner does not convey a depletable economic interest.

(c) The adjusted basis of depreciable property is returnable through annual depreciation deductions. Depreciation and depletion deductions on the property of a corporation are allowed to the corporation and not to its shareholders. The principles governing the apportionment of depreciation in the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person and in the case of property held in trust are also applicable to depletion. (See § 39.23 (l)-1.)

(d) When used in §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive—

(1) The "fair market value" of a property is that amount which would induce a willing seller to sell and a willing buyer to purchase.

(2) A "mineral property" is the mineral deposit, the development and plant necessary for its extraction, and so much of the surface of the land only as is necessary for purposes of mineral extraction. The value of a mineral property is the combined value of its component parts.

(3) The term "mineral deposit" refers to minerals in place. The cost of a mineral deposit is that proportion of the total cost of the mineral property which the value of the deposit bears to the value of the property at the time of its purchase.

(4) The term "minerals" includes ores of the metals, coal, oil, gas, and such nonmetallic substances as abrasives, asbestos, asphaltum, barite, bauxite, bentonite, beryl, borax, building stone, cement rock, china clay, clay, crushed stone, feldspar, fluorspar, fuller's earth, gilsonite, graphite, gravel, gypsum, lepidolite, limestone, magnesite, marl, mica, mineral pigments, peat, potash, precious stones, pyrophyllite, refractories, rock phosphate, salt, sand, silica, slate, soapstone, soda, spodumene, sulfur, talc, thenardite, trona, and vermiculite.

(e) As used in sections 114 (b) (3) and 114 (b) (4) (A) and §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive, the term "gross income from the property" means the following:

(1) In the case of oil and gas wells, "gross income from the property," as used in section 114 (b) (3) means the amount for which the taxpayer sells the oil and gas in the immediate vicinity of the well. If the oil and gas are not sold on the property but are manufactured or converted into a refined product prior to sale, or are transported from the property prior to sale, the gross income from the property shall be assumed to be equivalent to the representative market or field price (as of the date of sale) of the oil and gas before conversion or transportation.

(2) In the case of a crude mineral product other than oil and gas, "gross income from the property," as used in section 114 (b) (4) (A) means the gross income from mining. The term "mining" as used herein includes not only the extraction of ores or minerals from the ground but also the ordinary treatment processes which are normally applied by the mine owners or operators to the crude mineral product after extraction in order to obtain the commercially marketable mineral product or products. The term "mining" as used herein also includes so much of the transportation of ores or minerals (whether or not by common carrier) from the point of extraction from the ground to the plants or mills in which the ordinary treatment processes are applied thereto as is not in excess of 50 miles, and, if the Commissioner finds that both the physical and other requirements are such that the ore or mineral must be transported a greater distance to such plants or mills, the transportation over such greater distance. The taxpayer shall file an original and one copy of an application for the inclusion of such greater distance in the computation of his gross income from mining with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention of the Special Technical Services Division, Engineering and Valuation Branch. The application must include a statement setting forth in detail such facts concerning the physical and other requirements for the construction and operation of a treatment plant at a place nearer to the point of extraction from the ground as are sufficient to apprise the Commissioner of the exact basis of the application. If the taxpayer's return is filed prior to receipt of notice of the Commissioner's action upon the application, a copy of such application shall be attached to the return. If, after an application is approved by the Commissioner, there is a material change in any of the facts relied upon in such application, a new application must be submitted by the taxpayer.

(3) If the taxpayer sells the crude mineral product of the property in the immediate vicinity of the mine, "gross income from the property" means the amount for which such product was sold; but, if the product is transported or processed (other than by the ordinary treatment processes described below) before sale, "gross income from the property" means the representative market or field price (as of the date of sale) of a mineral product of like kind and grade as beneficiated by the ordinary treatment processes actually applied, before transportation of such product (other than transportation treated, for the taxable year, as mining) If there is no such representative market or field price (as of the date of sale) then there shall be used in lieu thereof the representative market or field price of the first marketable product resulting from any process or processes (or, if the product in its crude mineral state is merely transported, the price for which sold) minus the costs and proportionate profits attributable to the transportation (other than transportation treated, for the taxable year, as mining) and the processes beyond the ordinary treatment processes. If the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that another method of computation, other than the computation of profits proportionate to costs, clearly reflects the gross income from the property, then such gross income shall be computed by the use of such other method.

(4) In case any of the ordinary treatment processes are not applied in the immediate vicinity of the mining district in which the mine is located, costs incurred for transportation to the processing location and, if transported by the taxpayer, the proportionate profits attributable to transportation, should be subtracted from the sale price of the product to determine "gross income from the property." In determining "gross income from the property" the sale price of the product shall not be reduced by the costs and proportionate profits attributable to the transportation which is treated for such taxable year as mining, that is, so much of the transportation of ores or minerals (whether or not by common carrier) from the point of extraction from the ground to the plants or mills in which the ordinary treatment processes are applied thereto as is not in excess of 50 miles (or, if the Commissioner finds that both the physical and other requirements are such that the ore or mineral must be transported a greater distance to such plants or mills, such greater distance) Where such plants or mills are in excess of 50 miles (or of such greater distance) from the point of extraction from the ground, then costs incurred for transportation in excess of 50 miles (or of such greater distance) to the treatment plant and, if transported by the taxpayer, the proportionate profits attributable to such excess transportation should be subtracted from the sale price of the product to determine "gross income from the property" In the absence of methods which will clearly reflect costs of the various phases of transportation, the costs attributable to such excess transportation shall be an amount which is in the same ratio to the costs incurred for the total transportation to the treatment plant as the transportation included within the term "mining" is to such total transportation. If the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that another method of computation other than the computation of profits proportionate to cost clearly reflects the gross income from the property then such gross income shall be computed by the use of such other method.

(5) In all cases there shall be excluded in determining the "gross income from the property" an amount equal to any rents or royalties which were paid or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of the property and are not otherwise excluded from the "gross income from the property." If royalties in the form of bonus payments have been paid in respect of the property in the taxable year or any prior years, or if advanced royalties have been paid in respect of the property in any taxable year ending prior to December 31, 1939, the amount excluded from "gross income from the property" for the current taxable year on account of such payments shall be an amount equal to that part of such payments which is allocable to the product sold during the current taxable year. If advanced royalties have been paid in respect of the property in any taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1939, the amount excluded from "gross income from the property" for the current taxable year on account of such payments shall be an amount equal to the deduction for such taxable year taken on account of such payments pursuant to § 39.23 (m)-10 (e)

(6) Rents and royalties paid or incurred by a taxpayer with respect to coal shall be excluded from the "gross income from the property" without regard to the treatment under section 117 (k) (2) of such rents and royalties in the hands of the recipient.

(f) (1) The term "ordinary treatment processes," as used in §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive, shall include the following:

(i) In the case of coal—cleaning, breaking, sizing, and loading for shipment;

(ii) In the case of sulfur—pumping to vats, cooling, breaking, and loading for shipment;

(iii) In the case of iron ore, bauxite, ball and sagger clay, rock asphalt, and minerals which are customarily sold in the form of a crude mineral product—sorting, concentrating, and sintering (agglomerating by incipient fusion) to bring to shipping grade and form, and loading for shipment;

(iv) In the case of lead, zinc, copper, gold, silver, or fluorspar ores, potash, and minerals which are not customarily sold in the form of the crude mineral product—crushing, grinding, and beneficiation by concentration (gravity, flotation, amalgamation, electrostatic, or magnetic) cyanidation, leaching, crystallization, precipitation, or by substantially equivalent processes or combination of processes used in the separation or extraction of the product or products from the mineral. The furnacing of quicksilver ores is included in the term "ordinary treatment processes." The following processes are not included in the term "ordinary treatment processes": electrolytic deposition, roasting, thermal or electric smelting, refining, or substantially equivalent processes.

(2) In addition, a treatment effecting a chemical change, the blending with other material, a thermal action, and the fine pulverization, pressing into shape or molding, are not included in the term "ordinary treatment processes" unless such processes are (i) otherwise provided for in subdivisions (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv) of subparagraph (1) (ii) necessary or incidental to the processes provided for in subdivisions (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv) of subparagraph (1), or (iii) necessary to bring the ores or minerals into condition or form suitable for shipment (for example, the agglomeration of concentrates)

(3) For the purposes of subdivisions (iii) and (iv) of subparagraph (1) the terms "concentration" or "concentrating" mean the process of eliminating waste or of separating two or more minerals or ores.

(g) "Net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property," as used in section 114 (b) (2) (3) and (4) and §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive, means the "gross income from the property," as defined in paragraph (e) of this section, less the allowable deductions attributable to the mineral property upon which the depletion is claimed and the allowable deductions attributable to the processes listed in paragraph (f) of this section in so far as they relate to the product of such property, including overhead and operating expenses, development costs properly charged to expense or allowable as deductions under section 23 (cc) depreciation, taxes, losses sustained, etc., but excluding any allowance for depletion. Deductions not directly attributable to particular properties or processes shall be fairly allocated. To illustrate: In cases where the taxpayer engages in activities in addition to mineral extraction and to the processes listed in paragraph (f) of this section, deductions for depreciation, taxes, general expenses, and overhead, which cannot be directly attributed to any specific activity, shall be fairly apportioned between (1) the mineral extraction and the processes listed in paragraph (f) of this section and (2) the additional activities, taking into account the ratio which the operating expenses directly attributable to the mineral extraction and the processes listed in paragraph (f) of this section bear to the operating expenses directly attributable to the additional activities. If more than one mineral property is involved, the deductions apportioned to the mineral extraction and the processes listed in paragraph (f) of this section shall, in turn, be fairly apportioned to the several properties, taking into account their relative production.

(h) As used in paragraphs (e) and (f) of this section, the term "crude mineral product" means the product in the form in which it emerges from the mine or well.

(i) "The property," as used in section 114 (b) (2) (3) and (4) and §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive, means the interest owned by the taxpayer in any mineral property. The taxpayer's interest in each separate mineral property is a separate "property" but, where two or more mineral properties are included in a single tract or parcel of land, the taxpayer's interest in such mineral properties may be considered to be a single "property," provided such treatment is consistently followed.

§ 39.23 (m)-2 Computation of depletion of mines, oil and gas wells, and other natural deposits without reference to discovery value or percentage depletion. (a) The basis upon which depletion, other than discovery depletion or percentage depletion, is to be alowed in respect of any property is the basis provided for in section 113 (a) adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) for the purpose of determining the gain upon the sale or other disposition of such property, except that the amount of expenditures treated as deferred expenses under sections 23 (cc) (2) and 23 (ff) (2) shall be disregarded in determining such adjusted basis (see §§ 39.113 (a)-1 to 39.114-1, inclusive, and §§ 39.23 (cc)-1 and 39.23 (ff)-1) and if the amount of the basis as adjusted applicable to the mineral deposit has been determined for the taxable year, the depletion for that year shall be computed by dividing that amount by the number of units of mineral remaining as of the taxable year, and by multiplying the depletion unit, so determined, by the number of units of mineral sold within the taxable year. In the selection of a unit of mineral for depletion, preference shall be given to the principal or customary unit or units paid for in the products sold, such as tons of ore, barrels of oil, or thousands of cubic feet of natural gas.

(b) As used in this section, the phrase "number of units sold within the taxable year," in the case of a taxpayer reporting income on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, includes units for which payments were received within the taxable year although produced or sold prior to the taxable year, and excludes units sold but not paid for in the taxable year. The phrase does not include units with respect to which depletion deductions were allowed or allowable prior to the taxable year.

(c) "The number of units of mineral remaining as of the taxable year" is the number of units of mineral remaining at the end of the year to be recovered from the property (including units recovered but not sold) plus the "number of units sold within the taxable year" as defined in this section.

(d) In determining the amount of the basis as adjusted applicable to the mineral deposit there shall be excluded (1) amounts representing the cost or value of the land for purposes other than mineral production, (2) the amount recoverable through depreciation, through deferred expenses, and through deductions other than depletion, and (3) the residual value of other property at the end of operations, but there shall be included, in the case of oil and gas wells, those amounts of capitalized drilling and development costs which, as provided in § 39.23 (m)-16, are recoverable through depletion.

(e) In the case of a natural gas well where the annual production is not metered and is not capable of being estimated with reasonable accuracy, the taxpayer may compute the depletion allowance (without reference to percentage depletion) in respect of such property for the taxable year by multiplying the adjusted basis of the property by a fraction, the numerator of which is equal to the decline in closed or rock pressure during the taxable year and the denominator of which is equal to the expected total decline in closed or rock pressure from the taxable year to the economic limit of production. Taxpayers computing depletion by this method must keep accurate records of periodical pressure determinations.

§ 39.23 (m)-3 Computation of depletion of mines and other natural deposits (other than those in respect of which percentage depletion is allowable) on basis of discovery value. (a) The basis on which depletion is to be computed in the case of mines and other natural deposits (other than those in respect of which depletion is allowed on the basis of percentage of income under § 39.23 (m)-5) discovered by the taxpayer after February 28, 1913, is the fair market value of the property at the date of discovery or within 30 days thereafter, if such mines or deposits were not acquired as the result of purchase of a proven tract or lease, and if the fair market value of the property is materially disproportionate to cost. Such basis may not be used in the case of the mines or deposits listed under § 39.23 (m)-5 for any period in respect to which depletion on the basis of percentage of income is allowable. The value must be equitably apportioned between the owners of the economic interests therein. For the method of determining whether a discovery has been made, see § 39.23 (m)-14. For the method of determining the fair market value, see § 39.23 (m)-7.

(b) With respect to any property for which discovery value is the taxpayer's basis for depletion, the depletion for any taxable year shall be computed by (1) adding to the discovery value of the mineral deposit in the property any subsequent allowable capital additions made by the taxpayer, (2) subtracting the aggregate of depletion deductions with respect to the property which would previously have been allowable to the taxpayer without the application of any net income limitation, (3) dividing the remainder by the number of units of mineral remaining as of the taxable year, and (4) multiplying the depletion unit, thus determined, by the number of units of mineral sold within the taxable year.

(c) The depletion allowance based on discovery value under this section shall not exceed 50 percent of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property upon which the discovery was made, except that in no case shall the depletion be less than it would be if computed without reference to discovery value. For definition of "net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property," see § 39.23 (m)-1 (g)

(d) As used in this section, the phrase "the number of units of mineral remaining as of the taxable year" is the number of units of mineral remaining at the end of the year to be recovered from the property (including units recovered but not sold) plus the "number of units sold within the taxable year" as defined in this section.

(e) As used in this section, the phrase "number of units sold within the taxable year," in the case of a taxpayer reporting income on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, includes units for which payments were received within the taxable year although produced and sold prior to the taxable year, and excludes units sold but not paid for in the taxable year. The phrase does not include units with respect to which depletion deductions were allowed or allowable prior to the taxable year.

§ 39.23 (m)-4 Computation of depletion based on a percentage of income in case of oil and gas wells. Under section 114 (b) (3) in the case of oil and gas wells, a taxpayer may deduct for depletion an amount equal to 27½ percent of the gross income from the property during the taxable year, but such deduction shall not exceed 50 percent of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property. (For definitions of "gross income from the property" and "net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property," see § 39.23 (m)-1 (e) and (g).) In no case shall the deduction computed under this section be less than it would be if computed upon the cost or other basis of the property provided in section 113.

§ 39.23 (m)-5 Computation of depletion based on percentage of income in case of certain mines or other natural deposits. (a) In the case of the mines or other natural deposits listed hereinafter, a taxpayer may deduct for depletion under section 114 (b) (4) (A) amounts equal to the following percentages of the gross income from the property:

Mine or deposit:	Percent
Aplite	15
Asbestos	10
Barite	15
Bauxite	15
Bentonite	15
Beryl	15
Borax	15
Bromine	5
Brucite	10
Calcium carbonates	10
Calcium chloride	5
Clam shell	5
Clay:
Ball	15
Brick and tile	5
China	15
Refractory and fire	15
Sagger	15
Coal	10
Diatomaceous earth	15
Dolomite	10
Feldspar	15
Fluorspar	15
Fullers earth	15
Garnet	15
Gilsonite	15
Granite	5
Graphite, flake	15
Gravel	5
Lepidolite	15
Limestone:
Chemical grade	15
Metallurgical grade	15
Magnesite	10
Magnesium carbonates	10
Magnesium chloride	5
Marble	5
Metal mines	15
Mica	15
Oyster shells	5
Perlite	10
Phosphate rock	15
Potash	15
Pumice	5
Pyrophillite	15
Quartzite	15
Rock asphalt	15
Sand	5
Scoria	5
Shale	5
Slate	5
Sodium chloride	5
Spodumene	15
Stone	5
Sulfur	23
Talc	15
Thenardite	15
Tripoli	15
Trona	15
Vermiculite	15
Wollastonite	10

Such deduction shall not in any case exceed 50 percent of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowances for depletion) from the property. (For definitions of "gross income from the property" and "net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property," see § 39.23 (m)-1 (e) and (g).) In no case shall the deduction computed under this section be less than it would be if computed upon the cost or other basis of the property provided in section 113.

(b) For the purposes of this section, the minerals indicated below shall have the following meanings:

Borax	Any boron material including that contained in brines.
Bromine	Bromine if obtained from brine wells.
Calcium carbonates	Miscellaneous limestones and other calcium carbonate rocks (not specifically provided for at a 5 percent or 15 percent rate of percentage allowance) such as cement rock and limestone used or sold for use in soil treatment. This classification does not include rock or minerals used or sold for use as ballast, road making, concrete aggregates, or other purposes for which chemical composition is not a major requirement.
Calcium chloride	Calcium chloride if produced from brine wells.
Clay, brick and tile	Clay used or sold for use in the manufacture of common brick, drain and roofing tile, sewer pipe, flower pots and kindred products (other than clay specifically identified as a clay for which a 15 percent rate of percentage allowance is provided).
Coal	All coal including lignite.
Limestone, chemical grade	Limestone used or sold for use in the chemical trades.
Limestone, metallurgical grade	Limestone used or sold for use in the production of metals.
Magnesium chloride	Magnesium chlorides if produced from brine wells.
Phosphate rock	Any phosphate ore.
Pumice	All pumice including pumicite.
Scoria	All scoria produced from natural deposits.
Stone	All common dimension, crushed or broken stone within the ordinary meaning of these terms.
Thenardite	All sodium sulphate minerals, including those contained in brine.
Trona	All sodium carbonate minerals, including those contained in brine.

(c) A taxpayer may compute the depletion allowance provided in this section, or in § 39.23 (m)-2, without regard to any election previously made in respect of computation of the allowances.

(d) Percentage depletion is not allowable with respect to any disposal of coal to the extent that such disposal is treated as a sale of coal under section 117 (k) (2)

§ 39.23 (m)-6 Determination of cost of deposits. In any case in which a depletion or depreciation deduction is computed on the basis of the cost or price at which any interest in any mineral property was acquired, the taxpayer will be required to show that the cost or price at which such interest was bought was fixed for the purpose of a bona fide purchase and sale, by which the interest passed in fact as well as in form to an owner other than the vendor. No fictitious or inflated cost or price will be permitted to form the basis of any calculation of a depletion or depreciation deduction, and in determining whether the price or cost at which any purchase or sale was made represented the actual market value of the interest sold, due weight will be given to the relationship or connection existing between the person selling the interest and the buyer thereof.

§ 39.23 (m)-7 Determination of fair market value of mineral properties, including oil and gas properties. (a) If the fair market value of the property at a specified date is to be determined for the purpose of ascertaining the basis for depletion and depreciation deductions, such value must be determined, subject to approval or revision by the Commissioner, by the owner of the property in the light of the conditions and circumstances known at that date, regardless of later discoveries or developments in the property or subsequent improvements in methods of extraction and treatment of the mineral product. The value sought should be that established assuming a transfer between a willing seller and a willing buyer as of that particular date. The Commissioner will give due weight and consideration to any and all factors and evidence having a bearing on the market value, such as cost, actual sales and transfers of similar properties, market value of stock or shares, royalties and rentals, value fixed by the owner for purpose of a capital stock tax, valuation for local or State taxation, partnership accountings, records of litigation in which the value of the property was in question, the amount at which the property may have been inventoried in probate court, and, in the absence of better evidence, disinterested appraisals by approved methods. Valuations by analytic appraisal methods, such as the present value method, are not entitled to great weight, (1) if the value of a mineral deposit can be determined upon the basis of cost or replacement value, (2) if the knowledge of the presence of the mineral has not greatly enhanced the value of the mineral property, (3) if the removal of the mineral does not materially reduce the value of the property from which it is taken, or (4) if the profits arising from the exploitation of the mineral deposit are wholly or in great part due to the manufacturing or marketing ability of the taxpayer or to extrinsic causes other than the possession of the mineral itself. If the fair market value must be ascertained as of a certain date, analytic appraisal methods will not be used if the fair market value can reasonably be determined by any other method.

(b) To determine the fair market value of a mineral property by the present value method, the essential factors must be determined for each deposit included in the property. The factors essential in the case of all mineral deposits are (1) the total expected profit, (2) the rate at which this profit will be obtained, and (3) the rate of interest commensurate with the risk for the particular deposit. In case of oil and gas properties the additional factors are (4) the total quantity of oil and gas in terms of the principal or customary unit (or units) paid for in the product marketed, (5) the quantity of oil and gas expected to be recovered during each operating period, (6) the average quality or grade of the oil and gas reserves, (7) the allocation of the total expected profit to the several processes or operations necessary for the preparation of the oil and gas for market, (8) the probable operating life of the deposit in years, (9) the development cost, and (10) the operating cost. In order to estimate the total expected profit from the operation of mines it is necessary to determine the quantity, quality, and recoverable mineral content of the developed, probable, and prospective ore reserves in all cases. For mines with a prior operating record the "spread of profit" per unit of recoverable mineral, or the percentage of net profit to gross proceeds from mineral production is the other factor required in estimates of the total expected profit. For mines with no prior operating record the future sales price and future production cost per unit of mineral must be estimated in order to determine the "spread of profit" per unit of recoverable mineral.

(c) If the deposit has been sufficiently developed the valuation factors specified in paragraph (b) of this section may be determined from past operating experience. In the application of factors derived from past experience full allowance should be made for probable future variations in the rate of exhaustion, quality or grade of the mineral, percentage of recovery, cost of development, production, interest rate, and selling price of the product marketed during the expected operating life of the mineral deposit. Mineral deposits for which these factors may not be determined with reasonable accuracy from past operating experience may also, with the approval of the Commissioner, be valued by the present value method; but the factors must be deduced from concurrent evidence, such as the general type of the deposit, the characteristics of the district in which it occurs, the habit of the mineral deposits in the property itself, the intensity of mineralization, the oil-gas ratio, the rate at which additional mineral has been disclosed by exploitation, the stage of the operating life of the property, and any other evidence tending to establish a reasonable estimate of the required factors.

(d) Mineral deposits of different grades, locations, and probable dates of extraction in a mineral property should be valued separately. The mineral content of a deposit shall be determined in accordance with § 39.23 (m)-9. In estimating the average grade of the developed and prospective mineral, account should be taken of probable increases or decreases as indicated by the operating history. The rate of exhaustion of a mineral deposit should be determined with due regard to the limitations imposed by plant capacity, by the character of the deposit, by the ability to market the mineral product, by labor conditions, and by the operating program in force or reasonably to be expected for future operations. The operating life of a mineral deposit is that number of years necessary for the exhaustion of both the developed and prospective mineral content at the rate determined as above. The operating life of oil and gas wells is influenced by the natural decline in pressure and flow, and also by voluntary or enforced curtailment of production. The operating cost includes all current expense of producing, preparing, and marketing the mineral product sold (due consideration being given to taxes) exclusive of allowable capital additions, as defined in §§ 39.23 (m)-15 and 39.23 (m)-16, and deductions for depreciation and depletion, but including cost of repairs. For definitions of "development expenses" and "operating expenses" in the case of oil and gas wells, see § 39.23 (m)-16. This cost of repairs is not to be confused with the depreciation deduction by which the cost or value of plant and equipment is returned to the taxpayer free from tax. In general, no estimates of these factors will be approved by the Commissioner which are not supported by the operating experience of the property or which are derived from different and arbitrarily selected periods.

(e) The value of each mineral deposit is measured by the expected gross income (the number of units of mineral recoverable in marketable form multiplied by the estimated market price per unit) less the estimated operating cost, reduced to a present value as of the date as of which the valuation is made at the rate of interest commensurate with the risk for the operating life, and further reduced by the value at that date of the depreciable assets and of the capital additions, if any, necessary to realize the profits. The degree of risk is generally lowest in cases where the factors of valuation are fully supported by the operating record of the mineral property prior to the date as of which the valuation is made; relatively higher risks attach to appraisals upon any other basis.

(f) If, for the purpose of the equitable apportionment of depletion among the several owners of economic interests, the value of any mineral property must be ascertained as of any specific date for the determination of the basis for depletion, the values of the several interests therein may be determined separately, but, when determined as of the same date, shall together never exceed the value at that date of the mineral property in fee simple.

§ 39.23 (m)-8 Revaluation of mineral deposits not allowed. No revaluation of a property whose value as of any specific date has been determined and approved will be made or allowed during the continuance of the ownership under which the value was so determined and approved, except in the case of a subsequent discovery of nonmetallic minerals in respect to which depletion is not allowed on the basis of percentage of income under § 39.23 (m)-4 or § 39.23 (m)-5, or of misrepresentation or fraud or gross error as to any facts known on the date as of which the valuation was made. Revaluation on account of misrepresentation or fraud or such gross error will be made only with the written approval of the Commissioner. The value should, however, be corrected when a virtual change of ownership of part of the property results as the outcome of litigation. The value should be redistributed:

(a) If a revision of the number of remaining recoverable units of mineral in the property has been made in accordance with section 23 (m) and § 39.23 (m)-9, and

§ 39.23 (m)-9 Determination of mineral contents of mines and of oil or gas wells. (a) If it is necessary to estimate or determine with respect to any property as of any specific date the total recoverable units (tons, pounds, ounces, barrels, thousands of cubic feet, or other measure) of mineral products reasonably known, or on good evidence believed, to have existed in the ground as of that date, the estimate or determination must be made according to the method current in the industry and in the light of the most accurate and reliable information obtainable. In the selection of a unit of estimate, preference shall be given to the principal unit (or units) paid for in the product marketed. The estimate of the recoverable units of the mineral products in the property for the purposes of valuation and depletion shall include as to both quantity and grade:

(1) The ores and minerals "in sight," "blocked out," "developed," or "assured," in the usual or conventional meaning of these terms with respect to the type of the deposit, and

(2) "Probable" or "prospective" ores and minerals (in the corresponding sense), that is, ores and minerals that are believed to exist on the basis of good evidence although not actually known to occur on the basis of existing development; but "probable" or "prospective" ores and minerals may be estimated (i) as to quantity, only in case they are extensions of known deposits or are new bodies or masses whose existence is indicated by geological or other evidence to a high degree of probability, and (ii) as to grade, only as accords with the best indications available as to richness.

(b) If the number of recoverable units of mineral in the property has been previously estimated for the prior year or years, and if there has been no known change in the facts upon which the prior estimate was based, the number of recoverable units of mineral in the property as of the taxable year will be the number remaining from the prior estimate, but in any case in which it is ascertained either by the taxpayer or the Commissioner as the result of operations or development work prior to the close of the taxable year that the remaining recoverable mineral units as of the taxable year are materially greater or less than the number remaining from the prior estimate, then the estimate of the remaining recoverable units shall be revised and the annual depletion allowance with respect to the property for the taxable year and for subsequent taxable years will be based upon the revised estimate unless a change in the facts requires another revision. Such revised estimate will not, however, affect the basis for depletion.

§ 39.23 (m)-10 Depletion, adjustments of accounts based on bonus or advanced royalty. (a) If a bonus in addition to royalties is received upon the grant of rights in mineral property, there shall be allowed to the payee as a depletion deduction in respect of the bonus an amount equal to that proportion of the basis for depletion as provided in section 114 (b) (1) or (2) which the amount of the bonus bears to the sum of the bonus and the royalties expected to be received. Such allowance shall be deducted from the payee's basis for depletion, and the remainder is recoverable through depletion deductions on the basis of royalties thereafter received. In the case of the payor any payment made for the acquisition of an economic interest in a mineral deposit or standing timber constitutes a capital investment in the property recoverable only through the depletion allowance.

(b) If the owner of operating rights in mineral property for a term of years is required to extract and pay for, annually a specified number of tons, or other agreed units of measurement, of such mineral, or to pay, annually, a specified sum of money which shall be applied in payment of the purchase price or royalty per unit of such mineral whenever the same shall thereafter be extracted and removed from the premises, the payee shall treat an amount equal to that part of the basis for depletion allocable to the number of units so paid for in advance of extraction as an allowable deduction from the gross income of the year in which such payment or payments shall be made; but no deduction for depletion by such payee shall be claimed or allowed in any subsequent year on account of the extraction or removal in such year of any mineral so paid for in advance and for which deduction has once been made.

(c) If for any reason any grant of mineral rights expires or terminates or is abandoned before the mineral which has been paid for in advance has been extracted and removed, the grantor shall adjust his capital account by restoring thereto the depletion deductions made in prior years on account of royalties on mineral paid for but not removed, and a corresponding amount must be returned as income for the year in which such expiration, termination, or abandonment occurs.

(d) In lieu of the treatment provided for in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, the owner of an economic interest in minerals in respect of which depletion is allowed on the basis of percentage of income under § 39.23 (m)-4 or § 39.23 (m)-5 may take as a depletion deduction in respect of any bonus or advanced royalty from the property for the taxable year or period for which such deduction is allowable under such section an amount computed on the basis of the percentages applicable as indicated in such sections; but the deduction shall not in any case exceed 50 percent of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property

(e) If a lessee or other owner of operating rights in one or more mineral properties is required to pay royalties on a specified number of units of mineral annually, whether or not extracted within the year, and may apply any amounts paid on account of units not extracted within the year against the royalty on mineral thereafter extracted, he may at his option treat the advanced royalties so paid or accrued in either one of the following manners:

(1) As deductions from gross income for the year the advanced royalties are paid or accrue; or

(2) As deductions from gross income for the year the mineral product in respect of which the advanced royalties were paid is sold.

The option contained in this paragraph shall apply only to advanced royalties paid or accrued in taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1939. Every taxpayer must make an election as to the treatment of all such advanced royalties in his return for the first taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1939, in which such amounts are paid or accrue. A taxpayer will be considered to have made an election in accordance with the manner in which such items are treated in the return. A failure to deduct any such items for the year paid or accrued will constitute an election to have all such items treated in accordance with subparagraph (2) of this paragraph. Any election made under this section is binding for all subsequent years and the taxpayer must treat all advanced royalties paid or accrued in such subsequent years in the same manner.

§ 39.23 (m)-11 Depletion and depreciation accounts on books. (a) Every taxpayer claiming and making a deduction for depletion and depreciation of mineral property shall keep accurate accounts in which shall be recorded the cost or other basis provided by section 113 (a) as the case may be, of the mineral deposit and of the plant and equipment, together with subsequent allowable capital additions to each account and all of the other adjustments required by section 113 (b)

(b) If the plan or method of depletion and depreciation accounting adopted by the taxpayer has once been approved by the Commissioner, it cannot be changed by the taxpayer without the consent of the Commissioner. These accounts shall thereafter be credited annually with the amounts of the depletion and depreciation computed in accordance with §§ 39.23 (m)-2, 39.23 (m)-3, 39.23 (m)-4, or 39.23 (m)-5; or the amounts of the depletion and depreciation so computed shall be credited to depletion and depreciation reserve accounts, to the end that when the sum of the credits for depletion and depreciation equals the cost or other basis of the property, plus subsequent allowable capital additions, no further deductions for depletion and depreciation with respect to the property shall be allowed, except such depletion deductions as may thereafter be allowable under section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4) and §§ 39.23 (m)-3, 39.23 (m)-4, or 39.23 (m)-5.

(c) Every taxpayer to whom section 114 (b) (2) and § 39.23 (m)-3 are applicable shall keep similar accounts with respect to discovery value.

§ 39.23 (m)-12 Statement to be attached to return when valuation, depletion, or depreciation of mineral property is claimed. (a) Except as provided in § 39.23 (m)-13, there shall be attached to the return of every taxpayer asserting a value for any mineral property as of specific date or claiming a deduction for depletion or depreciation a statement setting forth with respect to each mineral property (including oil and gas property)

(1) The name, description, location, and identifying number, if any, of the property·

(2) The nature of the taxpayer's interest in the property, accompanied by a certified copy of the instrument or instruments by which it was acquired;

(3) The date of acquisition and, if under lease, the exact terms and date of expiration of the lease;

(4) The cost of the property, stating the amount paid to each vendor, with his name and address;

(5) The date as of which the property is valued, if a valuation is necessary to establish the basis as provided by section 113 (a)

(6) The value of the property on that date with a statement of the precise method by which it was determined;

(7) An allocation of the cost or value as between the mineral deposit and other assets such as plant, equipment, or the surface of the land for purposes other than mineral production;

(8) The estimated number of units of each kind of mineral at the end of the taxable year, and also at the date of acquisition, if acquired during the taxable year or at the date as of which any valuation is made, together with an explanation of the method used in the estimation, the name and address of the person making the estimate, and an average analysis which will indicate the quality of the mineral valued, including the grade or gravity in the case of oil;

(9) The number of units sold and the number of units for which payment was received during the year for which the return is made (in the case of newly developed oil and gas properties it is desirable that this information be furnished by month),

(10) The gross amount received from the sale of mineral;

(11) The amount of depreciation for the taxable year and the amount of depletion for the taxable year computed without reference to percentage depletion or discovery value;

(12) The amounts of depletion and depreciation, stated separately, which for each and every prior year (i) were allowed, (ii) were allowable, and (iii) would have been allowable without reference to percentage depletion or discovery value; and

(13) Any other data which will be helpful in determining the reasonableness of the valuation asserted or of the deduction claimed.

(b) To the return of every taxpayer claiming a deduction for depletion in respect of (1) property in which he owns a fractional interest only, or (2) a leasehold, or (3) property subject to lease, there shall also be attached a statement setting forth the fraction of the gross production to which the taxpayer is entitled, the name and address and the precise nature of the holding of each person interested in the property, and, in the case of a lessor, whether the lease involved was still in effect at the close of the taxable year, and, if not, when it was terminated and for what reason, and whether the lessor repossessed the property. Any taxpayer who is the assignor of a lease with respect to any property, or the holder of an interest purporting to be an overriding royalty interest, or of any interest other than that of a lessor or an operating lessee, and who claims depletion with respect to such property or interest, shall state the exact nature of the interest held and shall furnish a certified copy of the instrument or instruments by which it was acquired.

(c) In the case of oil and gas properties the statement attached to the return shall contain, in addition to the foregoing, the following information with respect to each property:

(1) The number of acres of producing oil or gas land and, if additional acreage is claimed to be proven, the amount of such acreage and the reasons for believing it to be proven;

(2) The number of wells producing at the beginning and end of the taxable year;

(3) The date of completion of wells finished during the taxable year;

(4) The date of abandonment of all wells abandoned during the taxable year;

(5) A property map showing the location of the property and of the producing and abandoned wells, dry holes, and proven oil and gas lands (the map should show depth, initial production, and date of completion of each well, to the extent that such data are available)

(6) The number of pay sands and average thickness of each pay sand or zone on the property;

(7) The average depth to the top of each of the different pay sands;

(8) Annual production of the tract or of the individual wells, if the latter information is available, from the beginning of its productivity to the end of the taxable year, the average number of wells producing during each year, and the initial daily production of each well (the extent to which oil or gas is used for fuel on the property should be stated with reasonable accuracy),

(9) All available data regarding change in operating conditions, such as unit operation, proration, flooding, use of air-gas lift, vacuum, shooting, etc., which have a direct effect on the production of the property; and

(10) Available geological information having a probable bearing on the oil and gas content; information with respect to edge water, water drive, bottom hole pressures, oil-gas ratio, porosity of reservoir rock, percentage of recovery, expected date of cessation of natural flow, decline in estimated potential, and characteristics similar to characteristics of other known fields.

(d) All of the foregoing information shall be furnished in a single statement, should be summarized, and shall be deemed to be a part of the income tax return to which it relates.

(e) Any of the information required by this section which has been previously filed by the taxpayer need not be filed again but the statement attached to the return must indicate clearly when and in what form the information was previously filed. When a taxpayer has filed adequate maps with the Commissioner he may be relieved of filing further maps of the same properties, provided all additional information necessary for keeping the maps up to date is filed each year. This includes records of dry holes, as well as producing wells, together with logs, depth and thickness of sands, location of new wells, etc.

§ 39.23 (m)-13 Statement to be attached to return when depletion is claimed on percentage basis. (a) There shall be attached to the return of every taxpayer who claims depletion on the basis of percentage of income under § 39.23 (m)-4 or § 39.23 (m)-5, a statement containing the following information with respect to every property for which percentage depletion is allowable:

(1) All data necessary for the determination of the "gross income from the property," as defined in § 39.23 (m)-1 (e) including the amounts paid to lessors as rents or royalties, the amounts paid to holders of other interests in the mineral property and the price per unit at which royalties were paid;

(2) All additional data necessary for the determination of the "net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property," as defined in § 39.23 (m)-1 (g), and

(3) The information required by paragraphs (a) (1), (a) (2), (a) (3), and (b) of § 39.23 (m)-12. The other information required by § 39.23 (m)-12 shall also be furnished if necessary in determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of the property during the taxable year or if a valuation of the property is necessary for any purpose. The taxpayer may find it desirable to furnish such information in all cases.

(b) All of the foregoing information shall be furnished in a single statement, should be summarized, and shall be deemed to be a part of the income tax return to which it relates.

§ 39.23 (m)-14 Discovery of mines or other natural deposits (except those in respect of which percentage depletion is allowable under § 39.23 (m)-5) (a) To entitle a taxpayer to a valuation of his property, for the purposes of depletion allowances, by reason of the discovery of a mine or minerals (other than those in respect of which percentage depletion is allowable under § 39.23 (m)-4 or § 39.23 (m)-5) it must appear that the mine or minerals were not acquired as the result of the purchase of a proven tract or lease; also the discovery must be made by the taxpayer after February 28, 1913, and must result in the fair market value of the property becoming disproportionate to cost. For the purposes of this section, mines or minerals shall not be entitled to valuation upon the basis of discovery for any taxable year or period in respect to which percentage depletion is allowable under § 39.23 (m)-4 or § 39.23 (m)-5. The fair market value of the property will be deemed to have become disproportionate to the cost when the newly discovered minerals are of such quantity and of such quality as to afford a reasonable expectation of return to the taxpayer of an amount materially in excess of the capital expended in making such discovery plus the cost of future development, equipment, and exploitation.

(b) A mine or minerals of a kind not excepted by this section may be said to be discovered when (1) there is found a natural deposit of mineral, or (2) there is disclosed by drilling or exploration, conducted above or below ground, a mineral deposit not previously known to exist and the existence of which was so improbable that such deposit had not and could not have been included in any previous valuation for the purpose of depletion, and which in either case exists in quantity and grades sufficient to justify commercial exploitation.

(c) In determining whether a discovery entitling the taxpayer to a valuation has been made, the Commissioner will take into account the peculiar conditions of each case; but no discovery, for the purposes of depletion, can be allowed as to minerals which constitute merely uninterrupted extensions of continuing commercial veins or deposits already known to exist, which have been or should have been included in "probable" or "prospective" mineral, or which were in any other way comprehended in a prior valuation, nor can a discovery, for purposes of depletion, be allowed as of a date subsequent to that when, in fact, discovery was evident, when delay by the taxpayer in making claim therefor has resulted or will result in excessive allowances for depletion.

(d) Discoveries include minerals in commercial quantities contained within a vein or deposit discovered in an existing mine or mining tract by the taxpayer after February 28, 1913, but such vein or deposit must not be merely the uninterrupted extension of a continuing commercial vein or deposit already known to exist, and the newly discovered minerals must be of sufficient value and quantity that they could be separately mined and marketed at a profit.

(e) The value of property claimed as the result of a discovery must be the fair market value, as defined in § 39.23 (m)-7, based on what is evident within 30 days after the commercially valuable character and extent of the discovered deposits of mineral have with reasonable certainty been established, determined, or proved.

§ 39.23 (m)–15 Allowable capital additions in case of mines—(a) General rules. (1) All expenditures in excess of net receipts from minerals sold shall be be charged to capital account recoverable through depletion while the mine is in the development stage. The mine will be considered to have passed from a development to a producing status when the major portion of the mineral production is obtained from workings other than those opened for the purpose of development, or when the principal activity of the mine becomes the production of developed ore rather than the development of additional ores for mining.

(2) Expenditures for plant and equipment and for replacements, not including expenditures for maintenance and for ordinary and necessary repairs, shall ordinarily be charged to capital account recoverable through depreciation. Expenditures for equipment (including its installation and housing) and for replacements thereof, which are necessary to maintain the normal output solely because of the recession of the working faces of the mine, and which (i) do not increase the value of the mine, or (ii) do not decrease the cost of production of mineral units, or (iii) do not represent an amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made, shall be deducted as ordinary and necessary business expenses.

(b) Special rules. Sections 23 (cc) and 23 (ff) contain special provisions for treatment of expenditures for certain exploration and development costs (other than for acquisition or improvement of depreciable property) with respect to ores and minerals other than oil or gas. See §§ 39.23 (cc)–1 and 39.23 (ff)–1.

§ 39.23 (m)–16 Charges to capital and to expense in case of oil and gas wells. (a) Items chargeable to capital or to expense at taxpayer's option:

(1) Option with respect to intangible drilling and development costs incurred by an operator (one who holds a working or operating interest in any tract or parcel of land either as a fee owner or under a lease or any other form of contract granting working or operating rights) in the development of oil and gas properties: All expenditures made by an operator for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil or gas, may at the option of the operator, be deducted from gross income as an expense or charged to capital account. Such expenditures have for convenience been termed intangible drilling and development costs. They include the cost to operators of any drilling or development work (excluding amounts payable only out of production or the gross proceeds from production, and amounts properly allocable to cost of depreciable property) done for them by contractors under any form of contract, including turnkey contracts. Examples of items to which this option applies are, all amounts paid for labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, and supplies, or any of them, which are used (i) in the drilling, shooting, and cleaning of wells; (ii) in such clearing of ground, draining, road making, surveying, and geological works as are necessary in preparation for the drilling of wells; and (iii) in the construction of such derricks, tanks, pipelines, and other physical structures as are necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil or gas. In general, this option applies only to expenditures for those drilling and developing items which in themselves do not have a salvage value. For the purpose of this option, labor, fuel, repairs, hauling; supplies, etc., are not considered as having a salvage value, even though used in connection with the installation of physical property which has a salvage value. Included in this option are all costs of drilling and development undertaken (directly or through a contract) by an operator of an oil and gas property whether incurred by him prior or subsequent to the formal grant or assignment to him of operating rights (a leasehold interest, or other form of operating rights, or working interest) except that in any case where any drilling or development project is undertaken for the grant or assignment of a fraction of the operating rights, only that part of the costs thereof which is attributable to such fractional interest is within this option. In the excepted cases, costs of the project undertaken, including depreciable equipment furnished, to the extent allocable to fractions of the operating rights held by others, must be capitalized as the depletable capital cost of the fractional interest thus acquired.

(2) If deductions for depreciation or depletion have either on the books of the taxpayer or in his returns of net income been included in the past in expense or other accounts, rather than specifically as depreciation or depletion, or if capital expenditures have been charged to expense in lieu of depreciation or depletion, a statement indicating the extent to which this practice has been carried should accompany the return.

(b) Recovery of optional items, if capitalized:

(1) Items returnable through depletion: If the taxpayer charges such expenditures as fall within the option to capital account, the amounts so capitalized and not deducted as a loss are returnable through depletion insofar as they are not represented by physical property. For the purposes of this section the expenditures for clearing ground, draining, road making, surveying, geological work, excavation, grading, and the drilling, shooting, and cleaning of wells, are considered not to be represented by physical property, and when charged to capital account are returnable through depletion.

(2) Items returnable through depreciation: If the taxpayer charges such expenditures as fall within the option to capital account, the amounts so capitalized and not deducted as a loss are returnable through depreciation insofar as they are represented by physical property. Such expenditures are amounts paid for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., used in the installation of casing and equipment and in the construction on the property of derricks and other physical structures.

(3) In the case of capitalized intangible drilling and development costs incurred under a contract, such costs shall be allocated between the foregoing classes of items for the purpose of determining the depletion and depreciation allowances.

(4) Option with respect to cost of nonproductive wells: If the operator has elected to capitalize intangible drilling and development costs, then an additional option is accorded with respect to intangible drilling and development costs incurred in drilling a nonproductive well. Such costs incurred in drilling a nonproductive well may be deducted by the taxpaper as an ordinary loss provided a proper election is made in the return for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1942, in which such a nonproductive well is completed. Such election with respect to intangible drilling and development costs of nonproductive wells is a new election, and, when made, shall be binding for all subsequent years. Any taxpayer who incurs optional drilling and development costs in drilling a nonproductive well must make a clear statement of election under this option in the return for the first taxable year begining after December 31, 1942, in which such nonproductive well is completed. The absence of a clear indication in such return of an election to deduct as ordinary losses intangible drilling and development costs of nonproductive wells shall be deemed to be an election to recover such costs through depletion to the extent that they are not represented by physical property, and through depreciation to the extent that they are represented by physical property.

(c) Nonoptional items distinguished:

(1) Capital items: The option with respect to intangible drilling and development costs does not apply to expenditures by which the taxpayer acquires tangible property ordinarily considered as having a salvage value. Examples of such items are the costs of the actual materials in those structures which are constructed in the wells and on the property and the cost of drilling tools, pipe, casing, tubing, tanks, engines, boilers, machines, etc. The option does not apply to any expenditure for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., in connection with equipment, facilities, or structures, not incident to or necessary for the drilling of wells, such as structures for storing or treating oil or gas. These are capital items and are returnable through depreciation.

(2) Expense items: Expenditures which must be charged off as expense, regardless of the option provided by this section, are those for labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., in connection with the operation of the wells and of other facilities on the property for the production of oil or gas.

(d) This section does not grant a new option or election. Any taxpayer who made an election under paragraph (b) of § 29.23 (m)-16 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.) is, by such election, bound with respect to all optional expenditures (whether made before January 1, 1952, or after December 31, 1951) in connection with oil and gas properties. Any taxpayer who has never made expenditures for the development of oil and gas properties prior to his first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, must make an election with respect to intangible drilling and development costs in general in the return for the first taxable year in which the taxpayer makes such expenditures.

§ 39.23 (m)-17 Depreciation in case of mines. (a) The Internal Revenue Code provides that deductions for depreciation of improvements on mining property may be taken "according to the peculiar conditions in each case." This is deemed to include exhaustion and wear and tear of the property used in mining of deposits, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence. (See §§ 39.23 (l)-1 to 39.23 (l)-10, inclusive, as to deduction for depreciation and obsolescence generally. See particularly § 39.23 (l)-5 with regard to information which must be furnished in substantiation of deductions claimed for depreciation and obsolescence.)

(b) It shall be optional with the taxpayer, subject to the approval of the Commissioner, whether the cost or other basis of the plant and equipment plus allowable capital additions but minus estimated salvage value shall be recovered (1) at a rate established by current exhaustion of mineral, or (2) by reasonable charges for depreciation (see § 39.23 (l)-1) at a rate determined by the physical life or the economic life of such plant and equipment, or, (3) according to the peculiar conditions of the case, by a method satisfactory to the Commissioner.

(c) The estimated physical life of a plant or unit thereof (including buildings, machinery, apparatus, roads, railroads, and other equipment and improvements whose principal use is in connection with the mining or treatment or other necessary handling of mineral products) may be defined as the estimated time such plant, or unit, when given proper care and repair, can be continued in use despite physical deterioration, decay, and wear and tear.

(d) The estimated economic life of a plant or unit thereof is the estimated time during which the plant or unit may be utilized effectively and economically for its intended purposes and may be limited by the life of the property or of that portion of the mineral deposits which it serves but can never exceed the physical life.

(e) Any difference between the salvage value of plant and equipment and the basis provided in section 113 (a) adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) remaining at the termination of mining operations shall be returned as profit or loss in the year in which it is realized.

(f) Nothing in this section shall be interpreted as meaning (1) that the cost or other basis of a mining plant and equipment may be reduced by depreciation deductions to a sum below the value of the salvage when the property shall have become obsolete or shall have been abandoned for the purpose of mining, or (2) that proper deductions for depreciation on account of obsolescence and decay shall not be made during periods when the mine is idle or is producing at a rate below its normal capacity. In estimating the salvage value of the equipment at the end of its estimated economic life due consideration may be given to its specialized character and the cost of dismounting and dismantling and transporting it to market.

(g) Nothing in §§ 39.23 (m)-1 to 39.23 (m)-19, inclusive, shall be interpreted to permit expenditures charged to expense in any taxable year or any part of the value of land for purposes other than mining to be recovered through depletion or depreciation.

(h) Sections 23 (cc) and 23 (ff) provide special rules for treatment of depreciation allowances with respect to the exploration and development of a mine or other natural deposit other than oil or gas. See §§ 39.23 (cc)-1 and 39.23 (ff)-1.

§ 39.23 (m)-18 Depreciation of improvements in case of oil and gas wells. Taxpayers operating oil or gas properties will, in addition to and apart from the deduction allowable for depletion as hereinbefore provided, be permitted to deduct a reasonable allowance for depreciation of physical property, such as machinery, tools, equipment, pipes, etc., so far as not in conflict with the option exercised by the taxpayer under § 39.23 (m)-16. The amount deductible on this account shall be such an amount based upon its cost or other basis equitably distributed over its useful life as will bring such property to its true salvage value when no longer useful for the purpose for which such property was acquired. Accordingly, where it can be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the reasonable expectation of the economic life of the oil or gas deposit with which the property is connected is shorter than the normal useful life of the physical property, the amount annually deductible for depreciation on such property may be based upon the length of life of the deposit. (See §§ 39.23 (l)-1 to 39.23 (l)-10, inclusive, as to deductions for depreciation and obsolescence generally. See particularly § 39.23 (l)-5 with regard to information which must be furnished in substantiation of deductions claimed for depreciation and obsolescence.)

§ 39.23 (m)-19 Depletion and depreciation of oil and gas wells in years before 1916. If upon examination it is found that in respect of the entire drilling cost of wells, including physical property and incidental expenses, between March 1, 1913, and December 31, 1915, a taxpayer has been allowed a reasonable deduction sufficient to provide for the elements of exhaustion, wear and tear, and depletion, it will not be necessary to reopen the returns for years prior to 1916 in order to show separately in these years the portions of such deduction representing depletion and depreciation, respectively. Such separation will be required to be made of the reserves for depreciation at January 1, 1916, and proper allocation between depreciation and depletion must be maintained after that date.

§ 39.23 (m)-20 Capital recoverable through depletion allowance in case of timber. In general, the capital remaining in any year recoverable through depletion allowances is the basis provided by section 113 (a) adjusted as provided by section 113 (b) For capitalization of carrying charges, see § 39.113 (b) (1)-1. The apportionment of deductions between the several owners of economic interests in timber properties will be made as specified in § 39.23 (m)-7 (f) The cost of timber properties shall be determined in accordance with the principles indicated in § 39.23 (m)-6. For method of determining fair market value and quantity of timber, see §§ 39.23 (m)-25 to 39.23 (m)-27, inclusive. For depletion purposes the cost of the timber shall not include any part of the cost of the land.

§ 39.23 (m)-21 Computation of allowance for depletion of timber for given year. (a) The allowance for depletion of timber in any taxable year shall be based upon the number of units of timber felled during the year and the depletion unit of the timber in the timber account or accounts pertaining to the timber cut. The depletion unit of the timber for a given timber account in a given year shall be the quotient obtained by dividing (1) the basis provided by section 113 (a) and adjusted as provided by section 113 (b) of the timber on hand at the beginning of the year plus the cost of the number of units acquired during the year plus proper additions to capital, by (2) the total number of units of timber on hand in the given account at the beginning of the year plus the number of units acquired during the year plus (or minus) the number of units required to be added (or deducted) by way of correcting the estimate of the number of units remaining available in the account. The amount of the deduction for depletion in any taxable year with respect to a given timber account shall be the product of the number of units of timber cut from the given account during the year multiplied by the depletion unit of the timber for the given account for the year. Those taxpayers who keep their accounts on a monthly basis may, at their option, keep their depletion accounts on a monthly basis, in which case the amount deductible on account of depletion for a given month will be determined in the manner outlined above for a given year. The total amount of the deduction for depletion in any taxable year shall be the sum of the amounts deductible for the several timber accounts. For description of timber accounts, see §§ 39.23 (m)-27 and 39.23 (m)-28.

(b) Where a taxpayer elects to treat the cutting of timber as a sale or exchange of such timber under the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) the allowable depletion shall be the fair market value of the timber cut during the taxable year. Such fair market value shall be the fair market value of such timber as of the first day of the taxable year in which such timber is cut.

(c) The depletion of timber takes place at the time the timber is felled. Since, however, it is not ordinarily practicable to determine the quantity of timber immediately after felling, depletion for purposes of accounting will be treated as taking place at the time when, in the process of exploitation, the quantity of timber felled is first definitely determined.

§ 39.23 (m)-22 Revaluation of timber not allowed. No revaluation of a timber property whose value as of any specific date has been determined and approved will be made or allowed during the continuance of the ownership under which the value was so determined and approved, except in the case of misrepresentation or fraud or gross error as to any facts known on the date as of which the valuation was made. Revaluation on account of misrepresentation or fraud or such gross error will be made only with the written appproval of the Commissioner. The depletion unit should be charged when a revision of the remaining number of units of recoverable timber in the property has been made in accordance with § 39.23 (m)-26.

§ 39.23 (m)-23 Depreciation of improvements in case of timber (a) The cost or other basis of development not represented by physical property having an inventory value shall be recoverable through depreciation. It shall be optional with the taxpayer, subject to the approval of the Commissioner:

(1) Whether the cost or other basis of the property subject to depreciation shall be recovered at a rate established by current exhaustion of stumpage, or

(2) Whether the cost or other basis shall be recovered by appropriate charges for depreciation calculated by the usual rules for depreciation or according to the peculiar conditions of the taxpayer's case by a method satisfactory to the Commissioner.

(b) In no case may charges for depreciation be based on a rate which will extinguish the cost or other basis of the property prior to the termination of its useful life. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted to mean that the value of a timber plant and equipment may be reduced by depreciation deductions to a sum below the value of the salvage when the plant and equipment shall have become obsolete or worn out or shall have been abandoned, or that any part of the value of cut-over land may be recoverable through depreciation. (See §§ 39.23 (l)-1 to 39.23 (l)-10, inclusive, as to deductions for depreciation and obsolescence generally. See particularly § 39.23 (l)-5 with regard to information which must be furnished in substantiation of deductions claimed for depreciation and obsolescence.)

§ 39.23 (m)-24 Information to be furnished by taxpayer claiming depletion of timber. To the income tax return of the taxpayer claiming a deduction for depletion or depreciation or both there shall be attached a map and statement (Form T—Timber) for the taxable year covered by the income tax return. Form T—Timber requires the following:

(a) Map showing timber and land acquired, timber cut, and timber and land sold;

(b) Description of, cost of, and terms of purchase or lease of, timber and land acquired;

(c) Proof of profit or loss from sale of capital assets;

(d) Description of timber with respect to which claim for loss, if any, is made;

(e) Record of timber cut;

(f) Changes in each timber account as the result of purchase, sale, cutting, reestimate, or loss;

(g) Changes in physical property accounts as the result of additions to or deductions from capital and depreciation;

(h) Operation data with respect to raw and finished material handled and inventoried;

(i) Unit production costs; and

(j) Any other data which will be helpful in determining the reasonableness of the depletion or depreciation deductions claimed in the return.

§ 39.23 (m)-25 Determination of fair market value of timber (a) If the fair market value of the property at a specified date is the basis for depletion and depreciation deductions, such value shall be determined, subject to approval or revision by the Commissioner upon audit, by the owner of the property in the light of the most reliable and accurate information available with reference to the condition of the property as it existed at that date, regardless of all subsequent changes, such as changes in surrounding circumstances, in methods of exploitation, in degree of utilization, etc. The value sought will be the selling price, assuming a transfer between a willing seller and a willing buyer, as of the particular date. Such factors as the following will be given due consideration:

(1) Character and quality of the timber as determined by species, age, size, condition, etc.,

(2) The quantity of timber per acre, the total quantity under consideration, and the location of the timber in question with reference to other timber;

(3) Accessibility of the timber (location with reference to distance from a common carrier, the topography and other features of the ground upon which the timber stands and over which it must be transported in process of exploitation, the probable cost of exploitation, and the climate and the state of industrial development of the locality), and

(b) The timber in each particular case will be valued on its own merits and not on the basis of general averages for regions; however, the value placed upon it, taking into consideration such factors as those mentioned above, will be consistent with that of the other timber in the region. The Commissioner will give due weight and consideration to any and all facts and evidence having a bearing on the market value, such as cost, actual sales and transfers of similar properties, the margin between the cost of production and the price realized for timber products, market value of stock or shares, royalties and rentals, value fixed by the owner for the purpose of the capital stock tax, valuation for local or State taxation, partnership accountings, records of litigation in which the value of the property has been involved, the amount at which the property may have been inventoried or appraised in probate or similar proceedings, disinterested appraisals by approved methods, and other factors. For depletion purposes the fair market value at a specified date shall not include any part of the value of the land.

(c) If, for the purpose of the equitable apportionment of depletion among the several owners of economic interests, the value of any timber property must be ascertained as of any specific date for the determination of the basis for depletion, the values of the several interests therein may be determined separately, but, when determined as of the same date, shall together never exceed the value at that date of the timber property in fee simple.

§ 39.23 (m)-26 Determination of quantity of timber Each taxpayer claiming or expecting to claim a deduction for depletion is required to estimate with respect to each separate timber account the total units (feet board measure, log scale, cords, or other units) of timber reasonably known, or on good evidence believed, to have existed on the ground on March 1, 1913, or on the date of acquisition of the property, as the case may be. This estimate shall state as nearly as possible the number of units which would have been found present by a careful estimate made on the specified date with the object of determining 100 percent of the quantity of timber which the area would have produced on that date if all of the merchantable timber had been cut and utilized in accordance with the standards of utilization prevailing in that region at that time. If subsequently during the ownership of the taxpayer making the return, as the result of the growth of the timber, of changes in standards of utilization, of losses not otherwise accounted for, of abandonment of timber, or of operations or development work, it is ascertained either by the taxpayer or the Commissioner that there remain on the ground, available for utilization, more or less units of timber than remain in the timber account or accounts on the basis of the original estimate, then the original estimate (but not the basis for depletion) shall be revised and the annual depletion allowance with respect to the property for subsequent taxable years shall be based upon the revised estimate.

§ 39.23 (m)-27 Aggregating timber and land for purposes of valuation and accounting. (a) With a view to logical and reasonable valuation of timber, the taxpayer shall include his timber in one or more accounts. In general, each such account shall include all of the taxpayer's timber which is located in one "block," a block being an operation unit which includes all of the taxpayer's timber which would logically go to a single given point of manufacture. In those cases in which the point of manufacture is at a considerable distance, or in which the logs or other products will probably be sold in a log or other market, the block may be a logging unit which includes all of the taxpayer's timber which would logically be removed by a single logging development. In exceptional cases, provided there are good and substantial reasons, and subject to approval or revision by the Commissioner on audit, the taxpayer may divide the timber in a given block into two or more accounts, e. g., timber owned on February 28, 1913, and that purchased subsequently may be kept in separate accounts, or timber owned on February 28, 1913, and the timber purchased since that date in several distinct transactions may be kept in several distinct accounts, or individual tree species or groups of tree species may be carried in distinct accounts, or special timber products may be carried in distinct accounts, or blocks may be divided into two or more accounts based on the character of the timber or its accessibility, or scattered tracts may be included in separate accounts. If such a division is made, a proper portion of the total value or cost, as the case may be, shall be allocated to each account.

(b) The timber accounts mentioned in paragraph (a) of this section shall not include any part of the value or cost, as the case may be, of the land. In a manner similar to that prescribed in paragraph (a) of this section, the land in a given "block" may be carried in a single land account or may be divided into two or more accounts on the basis of its character or accessibility. When such a division is made, a proper portion of the total value or cost, as the case may be, shall be allocated to each account.

(c) The total value or total cost, as the case may be, of land and timber shall be equitably allocated to the timber and land accounts, respectively.

(d) Each of the several land and timber accounts carried on the books of the taxpayer shall be definitely described as to their location on the ground either by maps or by legal descriptions.

(e) For good and substantial reasons satisfactory to the Commissoner, or as required by the Commissioner, the timber or the land accounts may be readjusted by dividing individual accounts, by combining two or more accounts, or by dividing and recombining accounts.

§ 39.23 (m)-28 Timber depletion and depreciation accounts on books. (a) Every taxpayer claiming or expecting to claim a deduction for depletion or depreciation of timber property (including plants, improvements, and equipment used in connection therewith) shall keep accurate ledger accounts in which shall be recorded the cost or other basis provided by section 113 (a) as the case may be, of the property, and the plants, improvements, and equipment, together with subsequent allowable capital additions to each account and all of the other adjustments provided by section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (a) (14)-1 and 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive.

(b) In such accounts there shall be set up separately the quantity of timber, the quantity of land, and the quantity of other resources, if any, and a proper part of the total cost or value shall be allocated to each. (See § 39.23 (m)-27.) These accounts shall be credited with the amount of the depreciation and depletion deductions computed in accordance with § 39.23 (m)-20 each year, or the amount of the depreciation and depletion shall be credited to depreciation and depletion reserve accounts, to the end that when the sum of the credits for depreciation and depletion equals the cost or other basis of the property, plus subsequent allowable capital additions, no further deduction for depreciation and depletion will be allowed.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(n) Basis for depreciation and depletion. The basis upon which depletion, exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence are to be allowed in respect of any property shall be as provided in section 114.

(o) Charitable and other contributions. In the case of an individual, contributions or gifts payment of which is made within the taxable year to or for the use of:

(1) The United States, any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia, or any possession of the United States, for exclusively public purposes;

(2) A corporation, trust or community chest, fund, or foundation, created or organized in the United States or in any possession thereof or under the law of the United States or of any State or Territory or of any possession of the United States, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation. For disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under this paragraph, see sections 3813 and 162 (g) (2);

(3) The special fund for vocational rehabilitation authorized by section 12 of the World War Veterans' Act, 1924, 43 Stat. 611 (U. S. C., Title 38, sec. 440);

(4) Posts or organizations of war veterans, or auxiliary units or societies of any such posts or organizations, if such posts, organizations, units, or societies are organized in the United States or any of its possessions, and if no part of their net earnings inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual;

(5) A domestic fraternal society, order, or association, operating under the lodge system, but only if such contributions or gifts are to be used exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals; or to an amount which in all the above cases combined does not exceed 20 per centum of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income. Such contributions or gifts shall be allowable as deductions only if verified under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary.

For unlimited deductions if contributions and gifts exceed 90 per centum of the net income, see section 120.

[Sec. 23 (o) as amended by sec. 224 (a), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 127 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 8 (b), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 1, Pub. Law 7 (80th Cong.); sec. 332 (a) Rev. Act 1950; sec. 4 (a), Pub. Law 465 (82d Cong.)]

SEC. 11. Denial of Tax Deductions and Exemptions [Internal Security Act of 1950]. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no deduction for Federal income-tax purposes shall be allowed in the case of a contribution to or for the use of any organization if at the time of the making of such contribution (1) such organization is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board [the Subversive Activities Control Board] requiring such organization to register under section 7. * * *

§ 39.23 (o)-1 Contributions or gifts by individuals. (a) A deduction is allowable under section 23 (o) only with respect to contributions or gifts which are actually paid during the taxable year, regardless of when pledged and regardless of the method of accounting employed by the taxpayer in keeping his books and records. A contribution or gift to an organization described in section 23 (o) is deductible even though some portion of the funds of such organization is or may be used in foreign countries for charitable and educational purposes. This section does not apply to contributions or gifts by estates and trusts (see section 162) For disallowance of certain charitable deductions otherwise allowable under section 23 (o) (2) see sections 3813 and 162 (g) (2) and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto.

(b) A contribution or gift to the United States, any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any possession of the United States, exclusively for public purposes, is deductible.

(c) No deduction is allowed in computing the net income of a common trust fund or a partnership for contributions or gifts made to organizations described in section 23 (o). See sections 169 and 183. However, a partner's proportionate share of contributions or gifts actually paid by a partnership during its taxable year to such organizations may be allowed as a deduction in his individual personal return for his taxable year with or within which the taxable year of the partnership ends, to an amount which, when added to the amount of contributions made by the partner individually and claimed as a deduction, is not in excess of 20 percent of his adjusted gross income. In the case of a nonresident alien individual or a citizen of the United States entitled to the benefits of section 251, see sections 213 (c) 220, and 251.

For contributions or gifts by corporations, see § 39.23 (q)-1.

(d) In the case of husband and wife making a joint return, the deduction for contributions or gifts is the aggregate of such contributions or gifts made by the spouses, and is limited to 20 percent of the aggregate adjusted gross income of the spouses.

(e) A donation made by an individual to an organization other than one referred to in section 23 (o) which bears a direct relationship to his business and is made with a reasonable expectation of a financial return commensurate with the amount of the donation may constitute an allowable deduction as business expense.

(f) Sums of money expended for lobbying purposes, the promotion or defeat of legislation, the exploitation of propaganda, including advertising other than trade advertising, and contributions for campaign expenses, are not deductible from gross income.

(g) If the contribution or gift is other than money the basis for calculation of the amount thereof shall be the fair market value of the property at the time of the contribution or gift.

(h) In connecion with claims for deduction under section 23 (o) there shall be stated in returns of income the name and address of each organization to which a contribution or gift was made and the amount and the approximate date of the actual payment of the contribution or gift in each case. Claims for deductions under section 23 (o) must be substantiated, when required by the Commissioner, by a statement from the organization to which the contribution or gift was made showing whether the organization is a domestic organization, the name and address of the contributor or donor, the amount of the contribution or gift and the date of the actual payment thereof, and by such other information as the Commissioner may deem necessary.

(i) For unlimited deduction if contributions or gifts and taxes in the taxable year and in each of the 10 preceding taxable years exceed 90 percent of the taxpayer's net income, see section 120.

§ 39.23 (p) Statutory provisions; deductions from gross income; contributions of an employer to an employees' trust or annuity plan and compensation under a deferred-payment plan.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(p) Contributions of an Employer to an Employees' Trust or Annuity Plan and Compensation Under a Deferred-Payment Plan. (1) General rule. If contributions are paid by an employer to or under a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or if compensation is paid or accrued on account of any employee under a plan deferring the receipt of such compensation, such contributions or compensation shall not be deductible under subsection (a) but shall be deductible, if deductible under subsection (a) without regard to this subsection, under this subsection but only to the following extent:

(A) In the taxable year when paid, if the contributions are paid into a pension trust, and if such taxable year ends within or with a taxable year of the trust for which the trust is exempt under section 165 (a), in an amount determined as follows:

(i) An amount not in excess of 5 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all the employees under the trust, but such amount may be reduced for future years if found by the Commissioner upon periodical examinations at not less than five-year intervals to be more than the amount reasonably necessary to provide the remaining unfunded cost of past and current service credits of all employees under the plan, plus

(ii) Any excess over the amount allowable under clause (i) necessary to provide with respect to all of the employees under the trust the remaining unfunded cost of their past and current service credits distributed as a level amount, or a level percentage of compensation, over the remaining future service of each such employee, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, but if such remaining unfunded cost with respect to any three individuals is more than 50 per centum of such remaining unfunded cost, the amount of such unfunded cost attributable to such individuals shall be distributed over a period of at least 5 taxable years, or

(iii) In lieu of the amounts allowable under (i) and (ii) above, an amount equal to the normal cost of the plan, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, plus, if past service or other supplementary pension or annuity credits are provided by the plan, an amount not in excess of 10 per centum of the cost which would be required to completely fund or purchase such pension or annuity credits as of the date when they are included in the plan, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, except that in no case shall a deduction be allowed for any amount (other than the normal cost) paid in after such pension or annuity credits are completely funded or purchased.

(iv) Any amount paid in a taxable year in excess of the amount deductible in such year under the foregoing limitations shall be deductible in the succeeding taxable years in order of time to the extent of the difference between the amount paid and deductible in each such succeeding year and the maximum amount deductible for such year in accordance with the foregoing limitations.

(B) In the taxable year when paid, in an amount determined in accordance with subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, if the contributions are paid toward the purchase of retirement annuities and such purchase is a part of a plan which meets the requirements of section 165 (a), (3), (4), (5), and (6), and if refunds of premiums, if any, are applied within the current taxable year or next succeeding taxable year towards the purchase of such retirement annuities.

(C) In the taxable year when paid, if the contributions are paid into a stock bonus or profit-sharing trust, and if such taxable year ends within or with a taxable year of the trust with respect to which the trust is exempt under section 165 (a), in an amount not in excess of 15 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all employees under the stock bonus or profit-sharing plan. If in any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, there is paid into the trust, or a similar trust then in effect, amounts less than the amounts deductible under the preceding sentence, the excess, or if no amount is paid, the amounts deductible, shall be carried forward and be deductible when paid in the succeeding taxable years in order of time, but the amount so deductible under this sentence in any such succeeding taxable year shall not exceed 15 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such succeeding taxable year to the beneficiaries under the plan. In addition, any amount paid into the trust in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, in excess of the amount allowable with respect to such year under the preceding provisions of this subparagraph shall be deductible in the succeeding taxable years in order of time, but the amounts so deductible under this sentence in any one such succeeding taxable year together with the amount allowable under the first sentence of this subparagraph shall not exceed 15 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such taxable year to the beneficiaries under the plan. The term "stock bonus or profit-sharing trust" as used in this subparagraph, shall not include any trust designed to provide benefits upon retirement and covering a period of years, if under the plan the amounts to be contributed by the employer can be determined actuarially as provided in subparagraph (A). If the contributions are made to two or more stock bonus or profit-sharing trusts, such trusts shall be considered a single trust for the purposes of applying the lim ations in this subparagraph.

(D) In the taxable year when paid, if the plan is not one included in paragraphs (A), (B), or (C), if the employees' rights to or derived from such employer's contribution or such compensation are nonforfeitable at the time the contribution or compensation is paid.

(E) For the purposes of subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), a taxpayer on the accrual basis shall be deemed to have made a payment on the last day of the year of accrual if the payment is on account of such taxable year and is made within sixty days after the close of the taxable year of accrual.

(F) If amounts are deductible under subparagraphs (A) and (C), or (B) and (C), or (A), (B), and (C), in connection with two or more trusts, or one or more trusts and an annuity plan, the total amount deductible in a taxable year under such trusts and plans shall not exceed 25 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to the persons who are the beneficiaries of the trusts or plans. In addition, any amount paid into such trust or under such annuity plans in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, in excess of the amount allowable with respect to such year under the preceding provisions of this subparagraph shall be deductible in the succeeding taxable years in order of time, but the amount so deductible under this sentence in any one such succeeding taxable year together with the amount allowable under the first sentence of this subparagraph shall not exceed 30 per centum of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such taxable years to the beneficiaries under the trusts or plans. This subparagraph shall not have the effect of reducing the amount otherwise deductible under subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), if no employee is a beneficiary under more than one trust, or a trust and an annuity plan.

If there is no plan but a method of employer contributions or compensation has the effect of a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or similar plan deferring the receipt of compensation, this paragraph shall apply as if there were such a plan.

(2) Deductions under prior income tax acts. * * * [Not applicable.]

payment plan; in general. (a) Section 23 (p) prescribes limitations upon deductions for amounts contributed by an employer under a pension, annuity, stock bonus, or profit-sharing plan, or under any plan of deferred compensation. It is immaterial whether the plan covers present employees only, or present and former employees, or only former employees. As to inclusion of full-time life insurance salesmen within the class of persons considered to be employees, see section 3797 (a) (20) Section 23 (p) does not apply to a plan which does not defer the receipt of compensation. Nor does section 23 (p) apply to deductions for contributions under a plan which is primarily a dismissal wage, or unemployment benefit plan or a sickness, accident, hospitalization, medical expense, recreational, welfare, or similar benefit plan, or a combination thereof. Section 23 (p) is, however, applicable to all contributions (including contributions to provide incidental benefits such as life insurance protection) under a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, whether or not the employees' rights in such contributions are nonforfeitable, but deductions under section 23 (p) are subject to conditions and limitations under section 23 (a) as well as those particularly provided in section 23 (p)

(b) In order to be deductible under section 23 (p) contributions must be expenses which would be deductible under section 23 (a) if it were not for the provision in section 23 (p) (1) that they are deductible, if at all, only under section 23 (p) Contributions may therefore be deducted under section 23 (p) only to the extent that they are ordinary and necessary expenses during the taxable year in carrying on trade or business and are compensation for personal services actually rendered. In no case is a deduction allowable under section 23 (p) for the amount of any contribution for the benefit of an employee in excess of the amount which, together with other deductions allowed for compensation for such employee's services, constitutes a reasonable allowance for compensation for the services actually rendered. What constitutes a reasonable allowance depends upon the facts in the particular case. Among the elements to be considered in determining this are the personal services actually rendered in prior years as well as the current year and all compensation and contributions paid to or for such employee in prior years as well as in the current year. Thus, a contribution which is in the nature of additional compensation for services performed in prior years may be deductible, even if the total of such contributions and other compensation for the current year would be in excess of reasonable compensation for services performed in the current year, provided that such total plus all compensation and contributions paid to or for such employee in prior years represents a reasonable allowance for all services rendered by the employee by the end of the current year. A contribution under a plan which is primarily for the benefit of shareholders of the employer is not deductible. Such a contribution may constitute a dividend within the meaning of section 115 (a) See also §§ 39.23 (a)-6 and 39.23 (a)-8. In addition to the limitations referred to above, deductions under section 23 (p) are also subject to further conditions and limitations particularly provided therein.

(c) Section 23 (p) is not confined to formal stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, and annuity plans, or deferred compensation plans, but it includes any method of contributions or compensation having the effect of a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or similar plan deferring the receipt of compensation. Thus, where a corporation pays pensions to such of its retired employees and in such amounts as may be determined from time to time by the board of directors or responsible officers of the company, or where a corporation is under an obligation, whether funded or unfunded, to pay a pension or other deferred compensation to an employee, there is a method having the effect of a plan deferring the receipt of compensation for which deductions are governed by section 23 (p) If an employer on the accrual basis defers paying any compensation to an employee until a later year or years under an arrangement having the effect of a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or similar plan deferring the receipt of compensation, he shall not be allowed a deduction until the year in which the compensation is paid. This provision is not intended to cover the case where an employer on the accrual basis defers payment of compensation after the year of accrual merely because of inability to pay such compensation in the year of accrual, as, for example, where the funds of the company are not sufficient to enable payment of the compensation without jeopardizing the solvency of the company, or where the liability accrues in the earlier year, but the amount payable cannot be exactly determined until the later year.

(d) Deductions under section 23 (p) are generally allowable only for the year for which the contribution or compensation is paid, regardless of the fact that the taxpayer may make his return on the accrual basis. Exceptions are made in the case of overpayments as provided in subparagraphs (A), (C) and (F) of section 23 (p) (1) and, as provided by section 23 (p) (1) (E) in the case of payments made by a taxpayer on the accrual basis within 60 days after the close of the taxable year of accrual. This latter provision is intended to permit a taxpayer on the accrual basis to deduct such accrued contribution or compensation, provided payment is actually made within 60 days after the close of the year of accrual.

§ 39.23 (p)-2 Information to be furnished by employer claiming deductions. (a) If a deduction from gross income is claimed under section 23 (p) (1) (A), (B) (C) or (F), the employer, except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this section, must file the following information for each plan involved to establish that it meets the requirements of section 165 (a) or 23 (p) (1) (B), and that the deductions claimed do not exceed the amount allowable under subparagraphs (A) (B) (C) and (F) of section 23 (p) (1), as the case may be:

(1) Verified copies of all the instruments constituting or evidencing the plan, including trust indentures, group annuity contracts, specimen copy of each type of individual contract, and specimen copy of formal announcement and comprehensive detailed description to employees, with all amendments to any such instruments.

(2) A statement describing the plan which identifies it and which sets forth the name or names of the employers, the effective date of the plan and of any amendments thereto, the method of distribution or of disbursing benefits (whether by trustee, insurance company, or otherwise) the dates when the instruments or amendments were executed, the date of formal announcement and the dates when comprehensive detailed description of the plan and of each amendment thereto were made available to employees generally, the dates when the plan and when the trust or the contract evidencing the plan and of any amendments thereto were put into effect so that contributions thereunder were irrevocable and a summary of the provisions and rules relating to—

(i) Employee eligibility requirements for participation in the plan,

(ii) Employee contributions,

(iii) Employer contributions,

(iv) The basis or formula for determining the amount of each type of benefit and the requirements for obtaining such benefits and the vesting conditions,

(v) The medium of funding (e. g., self-insured, unit purchase group annuity contract, individual level annual premium retirement endowment insurance contracts, etc.) and, if not wholly insured, the medium of contributions and the kind of investments, and

(vi) The discontinuance or modification of the plan and distributions or benefit payments upon liquidation or termination.

(3) A tabulation in columnar form showing the information specified below with respect to each of the 25 highest paid employees covered by the plan in the taxable year, listed in order of their nondeferred compensation (where there are several plans of deferred compensation, the information for each of the plans may be shown on a single tabulation without repetition of the information common to the several plans)

(iii) Percentage of each class of stock owned directly or indirectly by the employee or members of his family.

(iv) Whether the principal duties consist in supervising the work of other employees.

(vi) Length of service for employer to the close of the year.

(vii) Total nondeferred compensation paid or accrued during the taxable year with a breakdown of such compensation into the following components:

(a) Basic compensation and overtime pay,

(b) Other direct payments, such as bonuses and commissions,

(c) Compensation paid other than in cash, such as goods, services, insurance not directly related to the benefits or provided from funds under the plan, etc.

(viii) Amount allocated during the year for the benefit of the employee or his beneficiary (including any insurance provided thereby or directly related thereto) less the employee's contributions during the year, under each other plan of deferred compensation.

(ix) Amount allocated during the year for the benefit of the employee or his beneficiary (including any insurance provided thereby or directly related thereto) less the employee's contributions during the year, under the plan. If a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, also a breakdown of such amounts into the following components:

(a) Amounts originally allocated in the year, and

(xi) If a pension or annuity plan,

(a) the retirement age and date and the form of the retirement benefit,

(b) the annual rate or amount of the retirement benefit, and

(c) the aggregate of all of the employee's contributions under the plan, all based, in the case of an employee who is not on retirement benefit under the plan, upon the assumption of his continued employment at his current rate of compensation until his normal retirement age (or the end of the current year if later) and retirement on such date with the normal form of retirement benefit under the plan.

(4) The following totals:

(i) Total nondeferred compensation paid or accrued during the taxable year for all employees covered under the plan and also for all employees of the employer.

(ii) Total amount allocated during the year for the benefit of employees, former or retired employees, or their beneficiaries (including any insurance provided thereby or directly related thereto) less employee contributions during the year under the plan and, if a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, also a breakdown of such total into the following components:

(a) Amount originally allocated in the year, and

(5) A schedule showing the total number of employees as of the close of the year for each of the following groups, based on reasonable estimates:

(i) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan because of requirements as to employment classification, specifying the reasons applicable to the group (as, for example, temporary, seasonal, part time, hourly pay basis, etc.)

(ii) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan because of requirements as to length of service and not included in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph.

(iii) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan because of requirements as to minimum age and not included in subdivision (i) or (ii) of this subparagraph.

(iv) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan solely because of requirements as to minimum rate of compensation.

(v) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan other than those employees included in subdivision (i) (ii) (iii) or (iv) of this subparagraph, specifying the reasons applicable to the group.

(vi) All employees ineligible for coverage under the plan for any reasons, which should be the sum of subdivisions (i) to (v) inclusive, of this subparagraph.

(vii) All employees eligible for coverage but not covered under the plan.

(ix) All employees of the employer, which should be the sum of subdivisions (vi) (vii) and (viii) of this subparagraph.

If it is claimed that the requirements of section 165 (a) (3) (A) are satisfied, also the data and computations necessary to show that such requirements are satisfied.

(6) In the case of a trust, a detailed balance sheet and a detailed statement of receipts and disbursements during the year; in the case of a nontrusteed annuity plan, a detailed statement of the names of the insurers, the contributions paid by the employer and by the employees, and a statement as to the amounts and kinds of premium refunds or similar credits made available and the disposition of such credits in the year.

(7) If a pension or annuity plan, a detailed description of all the methods, factors, and assumptions used in determining costs and in adjusting the costs for actual experience under the plan (including any loadings, contingency reserves, or special factors and the basis of any insured costs or liabilities involved therein) explaining their source and application in sufficient detail to permit ready analysis and verification thereof, and, in the case of a trust, a detailed description of the basis used in valuing the investments held. Also a summary of the resulting costs or liabilities and adjustments for the year under the pension or annuity plan in sufficient detail to permit ready verification of the reasonableness thereof.

(8) A statement of the applicable limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) (C) or (F) and an explanation of the method of determining such limitations and a summary of the data and computations necessary to determine the allowable deductions for the taxable year.

(9) A statement of the contributions paid in the taxable year, showing the date and amount of each payment. Also a summary of the deductions claimed for the taxable year for the plan with a breakdown of the deductions claimed into the following components:

(i) Under section 23 (p) (1) for contributions paid in the taxable year before giving effect to the provisions of subparagraph (F) thereof.

(ii) Under section 23 (p) (1) for contributions paid in prior taxable years beginning after December 31, 1941, in accordance with the carry-over provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (C) thereof before giving effect to the provisions of subparagraph (F) thereof.

(iii) Any reductions or increases in the deductions in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (F) thereof.

(iv) Under section 23 (p) (2) for contributions paid to a pension trust in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942.

(b) If there is any change in the plan, instruments, methods, factors, or assumptions upon which the data and information specified in subparagraph (1), (2) or (7) of paragraph (a) are based, a detailed statement explaining the change and its effect must be filed with the information otherwise required for the taxable year in which the change is put into effect and, insofar as there is no such change, after the data and information specified in those subparagraphs has been filed in connection with a tax return, unless otherwise requested by the Commissioner, a statement that there is no such change may be filed in lieu of repeated filing of the information. After the information specified in subparagraph (3) of paragraph (a) has been filed for two consecutive years, unless otherwise requested by the Commissioner, so long as the plan and the method and basis of allocations are not changed, the tabulation need show such information only with respect to employees who, at any time in the taxable year, own, directly or indirectly, more than 5 percent of the voting stock, considering stock so owned by an individual's spouse or minor lineal descendant as owned by the individual for this purpose.

(c) If a deduction is claimed under section 23 (p) (1) (D) for the taxable year, the taxpayer shall furnish such information as is necessary to show that the deduction is not allowable under the other subparagraphs of section 23 (p) (1) that the amount paid is an ordinary and necessary expense, and that the employees' rights to, or derived from, such employer's contribution or such compensation were nonforfeitable at the time the contribution or compensation was paid.

(d) For the purpose of the above information, contributions paid in a taxable year should include those deemed to be so paid in accordance with the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (E) and exclude those deemed to be paid in the prior taxable year in accordance with such provisions. As used in this section, "taxable year" refers to the taxable year of the employer and, unless otherwise requested by the Commissioner, a "year" which is not specified as a "taxable year" may be taken as the taxable year of the employer or as the plan, trust, valuation, or group contract year beginning in the taxable year of the employer provided the same rule is followed consistently so that there is no gap or overlap in the information furnished for each item. In any case the date or period to which each item of information furnished relates should be clearly shown. All the information required by this section should be filed with the tax return for the taxable year in which the deduction is claimed except that, unless sooner requested by the Commissioner, such information, other than that specified in subparagraphs (4) (i) and (9) of paragraph (a) may be filed within 12 months after the close of the taxable year provided there is filed with the tax return a statement that the information cannot reasonably be filed therewith, setting forth the reasons therefor.

(e) In any case all the information and data required by this section must be filed in the office of the district director of internal revenue in which the employer files his tax returns and identified for association with the appropriate returns and must be filed independently of any information and data otherwise submitted in connection with a determination of the qualification of the trust or plan under section 165 (a). The Commissioner may, in addition, require any further information that he considers necessary to determine allowable deductions under section 23 (p) or qualification under section 165 (a) and may waive the filing of such information required herein which he finds unnecessary in a particular case.

(f) Records substantiating all data and information required by this section to be filed must be kept at all times available for inspection by internal revenue officers at the main office or place of business of the employer.

§ 39.23 (p)-3 Effect of section 162 (d) of the Revenue Act of 1942 upon deductions for contributions paid before September 1, 1942, and carried over to succeeding years. The amount of deductions allowable under the carry-over provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) (see § 39.23 (p)-8) the third sentence of section 23 (p) (1) (C) (see § 39.23 (p)-10) or the second sentence of section 23 (p) (1) (F) (see § 39.23 (p)-12) for contributions paid in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, depends in part upon the deductions allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) (C) or (F) for the year in which the contributions were paid. In certain cases where the contributions were paid before September 1, 1942, deductions for the taxable year beginning in 1942 were subject to a special provision for alternative limitations in section 162 (d) (1) (C) of the Revenue Act of 1942 (see § 29.23 (p)-3 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.)).

§ 39.23 (p)-4 Contributions of an employer to or under an employees' pension trust or annuity plan that meets the requirements of section 165 (a) application of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (a) If contributions are paid by an employer to or under a pension trust or annuity plan for employees and the general conditions and limitations applicable to deductions for such contributions are satisfied (see § 39.23 (p)-1) the contributions are deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) if the further conditions provided therein are also satisfied. As used here, a "pension trust" means a trust forming part of a pension plan and an "annuity plan" means a pension plan under which retirement benefits are provided under annuity or insurance contracts without a trust. For the meaning of "pension plan" as used here, see § 39.165-1 (a) Where disability, withdrawal, insurance, or survivorship benefits incidental and directly related to the retirement benefits under a pension or annuity plan are provided for the employees or their beneficiaries by contributions under the plan, deductions on account of such incidental benefits are also covered under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B). See § 39.165-6 as to taxability to employees of cost of incidental insurance protection. In order to be deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (A) contributions to a pension trust must be paid in a taxable year of the employer which ends with or within a year of the trust for which it is exempt under section 165 (a). In order that contributions carried over may be deducted in a succeeding taxable year of the employer in accordance with section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv), the succeeding year also must end with or within a taxable year of the trust for which it is exempt under section 165 (a) See § 39.23 (p)-9 as to conditions for deductions under section 23 (p) (1) (B) in the case of an annuity plan. In either case, the deductions are also subject to further limitations provided in section 23 (p) (1) (A) The limitations provided in section 23 (p) (1) (A) with an exception provided for certain years under clause (i) thereof (see § 39.23 (p)-5) are based on the actuarial costs of the plan and section 23 (p) (1) (A) requires that the costs and the limitations based on costs under that section shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary (or, in certain cases under sections 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) in accordance with a finding of the Commissioner)

(b) In determining costs for the purpose of limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A), the effects of expected mortality and interest must be discounted and the effects of expected withdrawals, changes in compensation, retirements at various ages, and other pertinent factors may be discounted or otherwise reasonably recognized. A properly weighted retirement age based on adequate analyses of representative experience may be used as an assumed retirement age. Different basic assumptions or rates may be used for different classes of risks or different groups where justified by conditions or required by contract. In no event shall costs for the purpose of section 23 (p) (1) (A) exceed costs based on assumptions and methods all of which are reasonable in view of the provisions and coverage of the plan, funding medium, reasonable expectations as to the effects of mortality and interest, reasonable and adequate regard for other factors such as withdrawal and deferred retirement, whether or not discounted, which can be expected to reduce costs materially, reasonable expenses of operation, and all other relevant conditions and circumstances. In any case, in determining the costs and limitations, an adjustment shall be made on account of any experience more favorable than that assumed in the basis of limitations for prior years, and, unless such adjustments are consistently made every year by reducing the limitations otherwise determined by any decrease in liability or cost arising from experience in the next preceding taxable year more favorable than the assumed experience on which the costs and limitations were based, the adjustment shall be made by some other method approved by the Commissioner.

(c) Any expenses incurred by the employer in connection with the plan, such as trustee's and actuary's fees, which are not provided for by contributions under it are deductible under section 23 (a) to the extent that they are ordinary and necessary.

(d) In case deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (C) as well as under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) the limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) and (C) are determined and applied without giving effect to the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F) but the amounts allowable as deductions are subject to the further limitations provided in section 23 (p) (1) (F) See § 39.23 (p)-12.

§ 39.23 (p)-5 Pension and annuity plans; limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) (a) Subject to the applicable general conditions and limitations (see § 39.23 (p)-4) the initial limitation under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) is 5 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all employees under the pension or annuity plan. This initial 5-percent limitation applies to the first taxable year for which a deduction is allowed for contributions to or under such a plan and also applies to any subsequent year for which the 5-percent figure is not reduced by the Commissioner as provided below. For years to which the initial 5-percent limitation applies, no adjustment on account of prior experience is required. If the contributions do not exceed the initial 5-percent limitation in the first taxable year to which this limitation applies, the taxpayer need not submit actuarial data for such year.

(b) For the first taxable year following the first year to which the initial 5-percent limitation applies, and for every fifth year thereafter, or more frequently where preferable to the taxpayer, the taxpayer shall submit with his return a certification by a qualified actuary, or by the company underwriting a nontrusteed annuity plan, of the amount reasonably necessary to provide the remaining unfunded cost of past and current service credits of all employees under the plan with a statement explaining all the methods, factors, and assumptions used in determining such amount. This amount may be determined as the sum of (1) the unfunded past service cost as of the beginning of the year, and (2) the normal cost for the year, all determined by methods, factors, and assumptions appropriate as a basis of limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) Whenever requested by the Commissioner, a similar certification and statement shall be submitted for the year or years specified in such request. The Commissioner will make periodical examinations of such data at not less than 5-year intervals and will reduce the limitation under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) below the 5-percent limitation for the years with respect to which he finds that the 5-percent limitation exceeds the amount reasonably necessary to provide the remaining unfunded cost of past and current service credits of all employees under the plan. Where the limitation is so reduced, the reduced limitation shall apply until the Commissioner finds that a subsequent actuarial valuation shows a change to be necessary. Such subsequent valuation may be made by the taxpayer at any time and submitted to the Commissioner with a request for a change in the limitation.

(c) For the purpose of limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) "compensation otherwise paid or accrued" means all of the compensation paid or accrued except that for which a deduction is allowable under a plan that qualifies under section 165 (a) including a plan that qualifies under section 23 (p) (1) (B) Where two or more pension or annuity plans cover the same employee, under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) the deductions with respect to each such plan are subject to the limitations applicable to the particular plan and the total deductions for all such plans are also subject to the limitations which would be applicable thereto if they constituted a single plan. Where, because of the particular provisions applicable to a large class of employees under a plan, the costs with respect to such employees are nominal in comparison with their compensation, after the first year to which the initial 5-percent limitation applies, deductions under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) are subject to limitations determined by considering the plan applicable to such class as if it were a separate plan. Deductions are allowable to the extent of the applicable limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) even where these are greater than the applicable limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) or section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii)

§ 39.23 (p)-6 Pension and annuity plans; limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) (a) Subject to the applicable general conditions and limitations (see § 39.23 (p)-4) under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) deductions may be allowed to the extent of limitations based on costs determined by distributing the remaining unfunded cost of the past and current service credits with respect to all employees covered under the trust or plan as a level amount or level percentage of compensation over the remaining service of each such employee except that, as to any three individuals with respect to whom more than 50 percent of such remaining unfunded cost is attributable, the remaining unfunded cost attributable to such individuals shall be distributed over a period of at least five taxable years.

(b) The determination of costs as a basis of deductions under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) may be illustrated by a case where it is estimated actuarially as of the beginning of the plan on the basis of appropriate assumptions and factors that employer contributions of 4 percent of compensation of each covered employee during his remaining service will be sufficient to provide the current service credits of all employees under the plan and employer contributions of 3 percent of compensation of each covered employee during his remaining service will be sufficient to provide the past service credits of all employees under the plan, so that the estimated cost for the first year is 7 percent of compensation of covered employees.

(c) The statutory limitation for any taxable year under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) is any excess of the amount necessary for the year on the basis of the costs over the amount allowable as a deduction under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) all determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(d) For this purpose, such excess, adjusted for prior experience, may be computed for each year as follows; all determinations being made as of the beginning of the year:

(1) Determine the value of all benefits expected to be paid after the beginning of the year for all employees, any former employees, and any other beneficiaries, then covered under the plan.

(2) If employees contribute under the plan, determine the value of all contributions expected to be made after the beginning of the year by employees then covered under the plan.

(3) Determine the value of all funds of the plan as of the beginning of the year.

(4) Determine the amount remaining to be distributed as a level amount or as a level percentage of compensation over the remaining future service of each employee by subtracting from subparagraph (1) of this paragraph the sum of subparagraphs (2) and (3) of this paragraph.

(5) Determine the value of all compensation expected to be paid after the beginning of the year to all employees then covered under the plan.

(6) Determine an accrual rate for each employee by dividing subparagraph (5) of this paragraph into subparagraph (4) of this paragraph.

(7) Compute the excess under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) for the year by multiplying the compensation paid to all employees covered under the plan during the year by any excess of subparagraph (6) of this paragraph over 5 percent. In general, where this method is used, the limitation under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) will be equal to the excess so computed without further adjustment on account of prior favorable experience, provided all the factors and assumptions used are reasonable in view of all applicable considerations (see § 39.23 (p)-4) and provided subparagraph (5) of this paragraph is not less than five times the annual rate of compensation in effect at the beginning of the year.

(e) Instead of determining the excess deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) by the above method, such excess may be based upon costs determined by some other method which is reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances. Thus, such excess may be based on the amounts necessary with respect to each individual covered employee to provide the remaining unfunded cost of all his benefits under the plan distributed as a level amount over the period remaining until the normal commencement of his retirement benefits, in accordance with other generally accepted actuarial methods which are reasonable and appropriate in view of the provisions of the plan and the funding medium. In view of the relationship of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) to sections 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) and 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) however, if the excess is determined by a method other than that set forth in the preceding paragraph, the total limitations under sections 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) and section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) combined must be determined by a method approved by the Commissioner, except where they do not exceed the limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) adjusted for prior favorable experience.

§ 39.23 (p)-7 Pension and annuity plans; limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) (a) Subject to the applicable general conditions and limitations (see § 39.23 (p)-4) under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) in lieu of amounts deductible under the limitations of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) and section 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) deductions may be allowed to the extent of limitations based on normal and past service or supplementary costs of providing benefits under the plan. "Normal cost" for any year is the amount actuarially determined which would be required as a contribution by the employer in such year to maintain the plan if the plan had been in effect from the beginning of service of each then included employee and if such costs for prior years had been paid and all assumptions as to interest, mortality, time of payment, etc., had been fulfilled. Past service or supplementary cost at any time is the amount actuarially determined which would be required at such time to meet all the future benefits provided under the plan which would not be met by future normal costs and employee contributions with respect to the employees covered under the plan at such time.

(b) The limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) for any taxable year is the sum of normal cost for the year plus an amount not in excess of one-tenth of the past service or supplementary cost as of the date the past service or supplementary credits are provided under the plan, all determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. For this purpose the normal costs may be determined by any generally accepted actuarial method and may be expressed either as (1) the aggregate of level amounts with respect to each employee covered under the plan, (2) a level percentage of payroll with respect to each employee covered under the plan, or (3) the aggregate of the single premium or unit costs for the unit credits accruing during the year with respect to each employee covered under the plan, provided, in any case, that the method is reasonable in view of the provisions and coverage of the plan, funding medium, and other applicable considerations. The limitation may include one-tenth of the past service or supplementary cost as of the date the provisions resulting in such cost were put into effect, but is subject to adjustments for prior favorable experience. See § 39.23 (p)-4. In any case past service or supplementary costs shall not be included in the limitation for any year when the amount required to fully fund or purchase such past service or supplementary credits has been deducted and no deduction is allowable for any amount (other than the normal cost) which is paid in after such credits are fully funded or purchased.

§ 39.23 (p)-8 Pension and annuity plans; contributions in excess of limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) application of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) Where contributions paid by an employer in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, to or under a pension or annuity plan exceed the limitations applicable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) but otherwise satisfy the conditions for deduction under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) then in accordance with section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) the excess contributions are carried over and are deductible in succeeding taxable years in order of time to the extent of the difference between the amount paid and deductible in each such succeeding year and the limitation applicable to such year under sections 23 (p) (1) (A) (i) 23 (p) (1) (A) (ii) or 23 (p) (1) (A) (iii) The provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) are to be applied before giving effect to the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F) for any year. The carry-over provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) before effect has been given to section 23 (p) (1) (F), may be illustrated by the following example for a plan put into effect in a taxable year ending December 31, 1952:

Taxable year ending Dec. 31, 1952:
Amount of contributions paid in year	$100,000
Limitation applicable to year	60,000
Amount deductible for year	60,000
Excess carried over to succeeding years	40,000
Taxable year ending Dec. 31, 1953:
Amount of contributions paid in year	25,000
Carried over from previous years	40,000
Total deductible subject to limitation	65,000
Limitation applicable to year	50,000
Amount deductible for year	50,000
Excess carried over to succeeding years	15,000
Taxable year ending Dec. 31, 1954:
Amount of contributions paid in year	$10,000
Carried over from previous years	15,000
Total deductible subject to limitation	25,000
Limitation applicable to year	45,000
Amount deductible for year	25,000
Excess carried over to succeeding years	None

In the case of contributions paid before September 1, 1942, which are carried over to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1951, the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) are applied after giving effect to the special provision for alternative limitations in section 162 (d) (1) (C) of the Revenue Act of 1942 for the taxable year beginning in 1942 (see § 29.23 (p)-3 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.))

§ 39.23 (p)-9 Contributions of an employer under an employees' annuity plan which meets the requirements of section 165 (a) application of section 23 (p) (1) (B) (a) If contributions are paid by an employer under an annuity plan for employees and the general conditions and limitations applicable to deductions for such contributions are satisfied (see § 39.23 (p)-1), the contributions are deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (B) if the further conditions provided therein are satisfied. For the meaning of "annuity plan" as used here, see § 39.23 (p)-4. In order that contributions by the employer may be deducted under section 23 (p) (1) (B) all of the following conditions must be satisfied:

(1) The contributions must be paid toward the purchase of retirement annuities (or for disability, severance, insurance, or survivorship benefits incidental and directly related to such annuities) under an annuity plan for the exclusive benefit of the employer's employees or their beneficiaries. See § 39.165-1 (a)

(2) The contributions must be paid in a taxable year of the employer which ends with or within a year of the plan for which it meets the applicable requirements with respect to discrimination set out in section 165 (a) (3) (4), (5) and (6) In order that contributions carried over may be deducted in a succeeding taxable year of the employer in accordance with section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv), the succeeding year also must end with or within a taxable year of the plan for which it meets such requirements. See §§ 39.165-3 and 39.165-4. These requirements are considered to be satisfied for the period beginning with the date on which an annuity plan was put into effect and ending with the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the taxable year of the employer in which the plan was put into effect, if all provisions of the plan which are necessary to satisfy such requirements are in effect by the end of such period and have been made effective for all purposes with respect to the whole of such period. See section 162 (d) (2) (B) of the Revenue Act of 1942, as amended by Public Law 511 (78th Cong.), approved December 20, 1944, as set forth preceding § 39.165-1, and § 39.165-5.

(3) There must be a definite written arrangement between the employer and the insurer that refunds of premiums, if any, shall be applied within the taxable year of the employer in which received or within the next succeeding taxable year toward the purchase of retirement annuities (or for disability, severance, insurance, or survivorship benefits incidental and directly related to such annuities) under the plan. For the purpose of this condition, "refunds of premiums" means payments by the insurer on account of credits such as dividends, experience rating credits, or surrender or cancellation credits. The arrangement may be in the form of contract provisions or written directions of the employer or partly in one form and partly in another. This condition will be considered satisfied where

(i) All credits are applied regularly, as they are determined, toward the premiums next due under the contracts before any further employer contributions are so applied and

(ii) Under the arrangement,

(a) No refund of premiums may be made during continuance of the plan unless applied as aforesaid and

(b) If refunds of premiums may be made after discontinuance of the plan on account of surrenders or cancellations before all retirement annuities provided under the plan with respect to service before its discontinuance have been purchased, such refunds will be applied in the taxable year of the employer in which received, or in the next succeeding taxable year, to purchase retirement annuities for employees by a procedure which does not contravene the conditions of section 165 (a) (4).

§ 39.23 (p)-10 Contributions of an employer to an employees' profit-sharing or stock bonus trust that meets the requirements of section 165 (a), application of section 23 (p) (1) (C) (a) If contributions are paid by an employer to a profit-sharing or stock bonus trust for employees and the general conditions and limitations applicable to deductions for such contributions are satisfied (see § 39.23 (p)-1) the contributions are deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (C) if the further conditions provided therein are also satisfied. In order to be deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (C) the contributions must be paid in a taxable year of the employer which ends with or within a taxable year of the trust for which it is exempt under section 165 (a) and the trust must not be designed to provide retirement benefits for which the contributions can be determined actuarially. In order that contributions carried over may be deducted in a succeeding taxable year of the employer in accordance with the third sentence of section 23 (p) (1) (C) the succeeding year also must end with or within a taxable year of the trust for which it is exempt under section 165 (a)

(b) The amount of deductions under section 23 (p) (1) (C) for any taxable year is subject to limitations based on the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such taxable year to the employees who, in such year, are beneficiaries of the trust funds accumulated under the plan. For this purpose "compensation otherwise paid or accrued" means all of the compensation paid or accrued except that for which a deduction is allowable under a plan that qualifies under section 165 (a) including a plan that qualifies under section 23 (p) (1) (B) The limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (C) apply to the total amount deductible for contributions to the trust regardless of the manner in which the funds of the trust are invested, applied, or distributed, and no other deduction is allowable on account of any benefits provided by contributions to the trust or by the funds thereof. Where contributions are paid to two or more profit-sharing or stock bonus trusts satisfying the conditions for deduction under section 23 (p) (1) (C) such trusts are considered as a single trust in applying these limitations.

(c) The primary limitation on deductions for a taxable year is 15 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during such taxable year to the employees who, in such year, are beneficiaries of the trust funds accumulated under the plan. So long as the contributions do not in any year exceed the primary limitation, this is the only limitation under section 23 (p) (1) (C) which has any effect.

(d) In order that the deductions may average 15 percent of compensation otherwise paid or accrued over a period of years where contributions in some taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, are less than the primary limitation but contributions in some succeeding taxable year exceed the primary limitation, deductions in each succeeding year are subject to a secondary limitation instead of to the primary limitation. The secondary limitation for any year is equal to the lesser of (1) twice the primary limitation for the year, or (2) any excess of (i) the aggregate of the primary limitations for the year and for all prior years beginning after December 31, 1941, over (ii) the aggregate of the deductions allowed or allowable under the limitations provided in section 23 (p) (1) (C) for all prior years beginning after December 31, 1941.

(e) In any case where the contributions in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, exceed the amount allowable as a deduction for the year under section 23 (p) (1) (C) the excess is deductible in succeeding taxable years, in order of time, in which the contributions are less than the primary limitations, so that the total deduction for any such succeeding year is equal to the primary limitation for such year but not more than the sum of the contributions in such year and the excess contributions not deducted under the limitations of section 23 (p) (1) (C) for prior years beginning after December 31, 1941.

(f) In applying the provisions of paragraphs (d) and (e) of this section in the case of deductions for contributions paid before September 1, 1942, the deductions allowed or allowable under the limitations of section 23 (p) (1) (C) for the taxable year beginning in 1942 and the excess contributions for the taxable year beginning in 1942 are computed after giving effect to the provisions of section 162 (d) (1) (C) of the Revenue Act of 1942. See § 29.23 (p)-3 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.)

(g) In case deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B), as well as under section 23 (p) (1) (C), the limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (A) and (C) are determined and applied without giving effect to the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F), but the amounts allowable as deductions are subject to the further limitations provided in sections 23 (p) (1) (F) See § 39.23 (p)-12.

(h) The provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (C), before giving effect to section 23 (p) (1) (F), may be illustrated as follows:

[1] Compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the year to the employees who are beneficiaries of trust funds accumulated under the plan in the year.

§ 39.23 (p)-11 Contributions of an employer under a plan that does not meet the requirements of section 165 (a) application of section 23 (p) (1) (D) Section 23 (p) (1) (D) covers all cases for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) but not allowable under subparagraphs (A) (B) (C) or (F) of such section. No deduction is allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (D) for any contribution paid or accrued by an employer under a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing, or annuity plan, or for any compensation paid or accrued on account of any employee under a plan deferring the receipt of such compensation, except for the year when paid, and then only to the extent allowable under section 23 (p) (1) See § 39.23 (p)-1. If payments are made under such a plan and the amounts are not deductible under the other subparagraphs of section 23 (p) (1), they are deductible under subparagraph (D) to the extent that the rights of individual employees to, or derived from, such employer's contribution or such compensation are nonforfeitable at the time the contribution or compensation is paid. As to what constitutes nonforfeitable rights of an employee, see § 39.165-7. If an amount is accrued but not paid during the taxable year, no deduction is allowable for such amount for such year. If an amount is paid during the taxable year but the rights of the employee therein are forfeitable at the time the amount is paid, no deduction is allowable for such amount for any taxable year.

§ 39.23 (p)-12 Contributions of an employer where deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) and also under section 23 (p) (1) (C), application of section 23 (p) (1) (F) (a) Where deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) on account of contributions under a pension or annuity plan and deductions are also allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (C) for the same taxable year, on account of contributions to a profit-sharing or stock bonus trust, the total deductions under these sections are subject to the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F) unless no employee who is a beneficiary under the trusts or plans for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) is also a beneficiary under the trusts for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (C) The provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F) apply only to deductions for overlapping trusts or plans, i. e., for all trusts or plans for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) or (C) except (1) any trust or plan for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) and which does not cover any employee who is also covered under a trust for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (C) and (2) any trust for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (C) and which does not cover any employee who is also covered under a trust or plan for which deductions are allowable under section 23 (p) (1) (A) or (B) The limitations under section

23 (p) (1) (F) for any taxable year are based on the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the year to all the employees who are beneficiaries under the overlapping trusts or plans in the year. For this purpose "compensation, otherwise paid or accrued" means all of the compensation paid or accrued except that for which a deduction is allowable under a plan that qualified under section 165 (a) including a plan that qualifies under section 23 (p) (1) (B) The employees who are beneficiaries under overlapping trusts or plans in a year include all the employees who, in the year, are beneficiaries of the funds accumulated under one or more of the overlapping trusts or plans.

(b) Under section 23 (p) (1) (F) any excess of the total amount otherwise deductible for the taxable year under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) or (C) for overlapping trusts or plans over 25 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the year to all the employees who are beneficiaries under such trusts or plans is not deductible for such year but is deductible for succeeding taxable years, in order of time, so that the total deduction for such trusts or plans for a succeeding taxable year is equal to the lesser of

(1) 30 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all the employees who are beneficiaries under such trusts or plans in the year, or

(2) The sum of (i) the smaller of (a) 25 percent of the compensation otherwise paid or accrued during the taxable year to all the employees who are beneficiaries under such trusts or plans in the year, or (b) the total of the amounts otherwise deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) or (C) for the year for such trusts or plans and (ii) any carry-over to the year from prior years under section 23 (p) (1) (F) i. e., any excess otherwise deductible under section 23 (p) (1) (A), (B), or (C) for a prior taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, but not deducted for a prior taxable year because of the limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (F)

(c) The limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (F) are determined and applied after all the limitations, deductions otherwise allowable, and carry-overs under section 23 (p) (1) (A) (B) and (C) have been determined and applied, and, in particular, after effect has been given to the carry-over provision in section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) and in the second and third sentences of section 23 (p) (1) (C) Where the limitations under section 23 (p) (1) (F) reduce the total amount deductible, the excess deductible in succeeding years is treated as a carry-over which is distinct from, and additional to, any excess contributions carried over and deductible in succeeding years under the provisions in section 23 (p) (1) (A) (iv) or in the third sentence of section 23 (p) (1) (C) The application of the provisions of section 23 (p) (1) (F) and the treatment of carry-overs for a case where the taxable years are calendar years and the overlapping trusts or plans consist of a pension trust and a profit-sharing trust put into effect in 1952 and covering the same employees may be illustrated as follows:

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(q) Charitable and other contributions by corporations. In the case of a corporation, contributions or gifts payment of which is made within the taxable year to or for the use of:

(1) The United States, any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof or the District of Columbia, or any possession of the United States, for exclusively public purposes; or

(2) A corporation, trust, or community chest, fund, or foundation, created or organized in the United States or in any possession thereof or under the law of the United states, or of any State or Territory, or of the District of Columbia, or of any possession of the United States, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, veteran rehabilitation service, literary, or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children (but in the case of contributions or gifts to a trust, chest, fund, or foundation, payment of which is made within a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1948, only if such contributions or gifts are to be used within the United States or any of its possessions exclusively for such purposes), no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation. For disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under this paragraph, see sections 3813 and 162 (g) (2); or

(3) Posts or organizations of war veterans, or auxiliary units of, or trusts or foundations for, any such posts or organizations, if such posts, organizations, units, trusts, or foundations are organized in the United States or any of its possessions, and if no part of their net earnings inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; or to an amount which does not exceed 5 per centum of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefits of this subsection. Such contributions or gifts shall be allowable as deductions only if verified under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary.

(4) the United Nations, but only if such contributions or gifts (A) are to be used exclusively for the acquisition of a site in the city of New York for its headquarters, and (B) are made after December 1, 1946, and before December 2, 1947;

In the case of a corporation reporting its net income on the accrual basis, at the election of the taxpayer any contribution or gift payment of which is made after the close of the taxable year and on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of such year shall, for the purposes of this subsection, be considered as paid during such taxable year if, during such year, the board of directors authorized such contribution or gift. Such election shall be made only at the time of the filing of the return for the taxable year, and shall be signified in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall by regulations prescribe.

SEC. 11. Denial of tax deductions and exemptions [Internal Security Act of 1950]. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no deduction for Federal income-tax purposes shall be allowed in the case of a contribution to or for the use of any organization if at the time of the making of such contribution (1) such organization is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board [the Subversive Activities Control Board] requiring such organization to register under section 7. * * *

§ 39.23 (q)-1 Contributions or gifts by corporations. (a) A corporation may, subject to the limitations provided by section 23 (q) deduct from its gross income contributions or gifts to organizations described in section 23 (q) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c) of this section, such deduction shall, to the extent provided by section 23 (q) be allowed only for the taxable year in which such contributions or gifts are actually paid, regardless of when pledged and regardless of the method of accounting employed by the corporation in keeping its books and records. As to charitable contributions by corporations not deductible under section 23 (a) see § 39.23 (a)-13. Sums of money expended for lobbying purposes, the promotion or defeat of legislation, the exploitation of propaganda, including advertising other than trade advertising, and contributions for campaign expenses are not deductible from gross income. For disallowance of certain charitable, etc., deductions otherwise allowable under section 23 (q) (2) see sections 3813 and 162 (g) (2) and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto.

(b) The provisions of § 39.23 (o)-1, relating to (1) the statement in returns of the name and address of each organization to which a contribution or gift was made and the amount and the approximate date of the actual payment of the contribution or gift, (2) the substantiation of the claims for deductions when required by the Commissioner, and (3) the basis for calculation of the amount of a contribution or gift which is other than money, are equally applicable to claims for deductions of contributions or gifts by corporations under section 23 (q)

(c) A corporation reporting its net income on the accrual basis may elect to have considered as paid during the taxable year any contribution or gift to organizations described in section 23 (q), with the exceptions hereinbefore described, payment of which contribution or gift is made after the close of the taxable year and on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of such year if, during such year, the board of directors authorized such contribution or gift. Such election shall be made only at the time of the filing of the return for the taxable year and shall be signified by reporting such contribution or gift on the return. There shall be attached to such return a written declaration that the resolution authorizing the contribution or gift was adopted by the board of directors during the taxable year, and such declaration shall be verified by a statement signed by the president or other principal officer of the corporation that it is made under the penalties of perjury. With respect to contributions or gifts authorized on or after January 1, 1953, there shall be attached to the return, in addition to the written declaration referred to in the preceding sentence, a copy of the resolution of the board of directors authorizing such contribution or gift.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(r) Dividends paid by banking corporations. (1) In the case of mutual savings banks, cooperative banks, and domestic building and loan associations, amounts paid to, or credited to the accounts of, depositors or holders of accounts as dividends on their deposits or withdrawable accounts, if such amounts paid or credited are withdrawable on demand subject only to customary notice of intention to withdraw.

§ 39.23 (r)-1 Dividends paid by mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks—(a) In general. (1) A mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, and a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit may deduct from gross income amounts which during the taxable year are paid to or credited to the accounts of depositors or holders of accounts, as dividends on their deposits or withdrawable accounts, if such amounts paid or credited are withdrawable on demand subject only to customary notice of intention to withdraw.

(2) The deduction provided in section 23 (r) (1) is applicable to the taxable year in which amounts credited as dividends become withdrawable by the depositor or holder of account subject only to customary notice of intention to withdraw. Thus, amounts credited as dividends as of the last day of the taxable year which are not withdrawable by depositors or holders of accounts until the business day next succeeding are deductible under this section in the year subsequent to the taxable year in which they were credited. A deduction under this section will not be denied by reason of the fact that amounts credited as dividends, otherwise deductible under this section, are subject to the terms of a pledge agreement between the institution and the depositor or holder of account. In the case of a building and loan association having nonwithdrawable capital stock represented by shares, no deduction is allowable under this section for amounts paid or credited as dividends on such shares.

(b) Serial associations, bonus plans, etc. In the case of a building and loan association which operates in whole or in part as a serial association, which maintains a bonus plan, or which issues shares subject to fines, penalties, forfeitures, or other withdrawal fees, there is deductible under section 23 (r) (1) the total amount credited as dividends upon such shares, credited to a bonus account for such shares, or allocated to a series of shares for the taxable year, notwithstanding that as a customary condition of withdrawal:

(1) Amounts invested in, and earnings credited to, series shares must be withdrawn in multiples of even shares, or

(2) Such association has the right, pursuant to by-law, contract, or otherwise, to retain or recover a portion of the total amount invested in, or credited as earnings upon, such shares, such bonus account or series of shares, as a fine, penalty, forfeiture or other withdrawal fee.

In any taxable year in which the right referred to in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph is exercised, there is includible in the gross income of such association for such taxable year, amounts retained or recovered by the association pursuant to the exercises of such right.

§ 39.23 (r)-2 Dividends paid by certain banking corporations other than mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks. For deduction of dividends paid by certain banking corporations other than mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks, see section 121.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(s) Net operating loss deductions. For any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1939, the net operating loss deduction computed under section 122.

[Sec. 23 (s) as added by sec. 211 (a), Rev. Act 1939]

(t) Amortization deduction. The deduction for amortization provided in section 124 and section 124A.

(u) Alimony, etc., payments. In the case of a husband described in section 22 (k), amounts includible under section 22 (k) in the gross income of his wife, payment of which is made within the husband's taxable year. If the amount of any such payment is, under section 22 (k) or section 171, stated to be not includible in such husband's gross income, no deduction shall be allowed with respect to such payment under this subsection.

§ 39.23 (u)-1 Periodic alimony payments. (a) A deduction is allowable under section 23 (u) with respect to periodic payments in the nature of, or in lieu of, alimony or an allowance for support actually paid by the taxpayer during his taxable year and required to be included in the income of the payee wife or former wife, as the case may be, under section 22 (k) As to the amounts required to be included in the income of the wife or former wife, as the case may be, see § 39.22 (k)-1. For definition of husband and wife in such cases, see section 3797 (a) (17)

(b) The deduction under section 23 (u) is allowed only to the obligor spouse. It is not allowed to an estate, trust, corporation, or any other person who may pay the alimony obligation of such obligor spouse. The obligor spouse, however, is not allowed a deduction for any periodic payment includible under section 22 (k) in the income of the wife or former wife, as the case may be, which payment is attributable to property transferred in discharge of his obligation and which, under section 22 (k) or section 171, is stated not to be includible in his gross income.

(c) The following examples illustrate cases in which a deduction is or is not allowed under section 23 (u)

Example (1). Pursuant to the terms of a decree of divorce, H, in 1952, transfers securities valued at $100,000 in trust for the benefit of W, which fully discharges all his obligations to W. The periodic payments made by the trust to W are required to be included in W's income under section 22 (k). Such payments are stated in section 22 (k) not to be includible in H's income and, therefore, under section 23 (u) are not deductible from his income.

Example (2). A decree of divorce obtained by W from H incorporated a previous agreement of H to establish a trust, the trustees of which were instructed to pay W $5,000 a year for her life. The court retained jurisdiction to order H to provide further payments if necessary for the support of W. In 1952 the trustees paid to W $4,000 from the income of the trust and $1,000 from the corpus of the trust. Under the provisions of sections 22 (k) and 171 (b), W will include $5,000 in her income for 1952. (The trustees will deduct $4,000 from the income of the trust under section 162.) H will not include any part of the $5,000 in his income nor take a deduction therefor. If H had paid the $1,000 to W, rather than allowing the trustees to pay it out of corpus, he would have been entitled to a deduction of $1,000 under the provisions of section 23 (u).

§ 39.23 (v)-(x) Statutory provisions; deductions from gross income; cross references; medical, dental, etc., expenses.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(v) Bond premium deduction. In the case of a bondholder, the deduction for amortizable bond premium provided in section 125.

[Sec. 23 (v) as added by sec. 126 (a), Rev. Act 1942]

(w) Deductions of estate, etc., on account of decedent's deductions. (1) In the case of a person described in section 126 (b), the amount of the deductions in respect of a decedent to the extent allowed by such subsection.

(2) In the case of a person described in section 126 (a), the amount of the deductions in respect of a decedent to the extent allowed by section 126 (c).

[Sec. 23 (w) as added by sec. 134 (d), Rev. Act 1942]

(x) Medical, dental, etc., expenses. Expenses paid during the taxable year, not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, for medical care of the taxpayer, his spouse, or a dependent specified in section 25 (b) (3)—

(1) If neither the taxpayer nor his spouse has attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year, to the extent that such expenses exceed 5 per centum of the adjusted gross income; or

(2) If either the taxpayer or his spouse has attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year, (A) the amount of such expenses for the care of the taxpayer and his spouse, and (B) the amount by which such expenses for the care of such dependents exceed 5 per centum of the adjusted gross income.

The deduction under this subsection shall not be in excess of $1,250 multiplied by the number of exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) for the taxable year (exclusive of exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) (1) (B) or (C), with a maximum deduction of $2,500, except that the maximum deduction shall be $5,000 in the case of a joint return of husband and wife under section 51 (b). The term "medical care", as used in this subsection, shall include amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body (including amounts paid for accident or health insurance). The determination of whether an individual is married at any time during the taxable year shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 51 (b) (5).

§ 39.23 (x)-1 Medical, dental, etc., expenses. (a) Section 23 (x) permits a deduction from gross income of payments for certain medical expenses. The deduction is allowable only to individuals and only with respect to medical expenses actually paid during the taxable year, regardless of when the incident or event which occasioned the expenses occurred and regardless of the method of accounting employed by the taxpayer in making his income tax return. If the medical expenses are incurred but not paid during the taxable year, no deduction can be taken for such year. Thus, if an expenditure was incurred in December 1952, but not paid until January 1953, no deduction may be taken for the year 1952.

(b) (1) Except as prescribed in paragraph (c) of this section, only such medical expenses are deductible as exceed 5 percent of the adjusted gross income for the taxable year. As to what constitutes adjusted gross income, see section 22 (n) The maximum deduction allowable for medical expenses paid in any one taxable year is $1,250 multiplied by the number of exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) (exclusive of exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) (1) (B) for a taxpayer or spouse attaining the age of 65 years or section 25 (b) (1) (C) for a blind taxpayer or blind spouse) but not in excess of $2,500 in the case of a single individual or a married individual making a separate return and not in excess of $5,000 in the case of a joint return of husband and wife.

(2) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. H and W make a joint return for the calendar year 1952, on which five exemptions are allowed (exclusive of exemptions under section 25 (b) (1) (B) or (C)), one for each taxpayer and three for their dependent minor children. The adjusted gross income of H and W in 1952 is $40,000. They pay during that year $9,000 for medical care, no part of which is compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The deduction allowable under section 23 (x) for the calendar year 1952 is $5,000, computed as follows:

Payment for medical care in 1952	$9,000
Less: 5 percent of $40,000 (adjusted gross income)	2,000
Excess of medical expenses in 1952 over 5 percent of adjusted gross income	7,000
Allowable deduction for 1952 ($1,250 multiplied by 5 exemptions allowed under section 25 (b) (1) (A) and (D) but not in excess of $5,000)	5,000

(c) (1) There is no five percent limitation on the deduction for medical expenses, not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, paid for the care of the taxpayer or his spouse, where either the taxpayer or his spouse has attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year. In such a case the taxpayer may deduct, subject to the maximum deduction allowable as described in paragraph (b) of this section, (i) the amount of all payments for the medical care of the taxpayer and his spouse; and (ii) the amount by which his payments for the medical care of his dependents exceeds 5 percent of his adjusted gross income. In determining the amount of medical expenses deductible under subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph, the amount deductible under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph shall not be taken into account for the purpose of computing the excess of medical expenses over the 5 percent limitation. In determining the age of an individual for the purpose of the unlimited deduction for medical expenses during old age, the last day of the taxable year of the taxpayer is the controlling date. Thus, a taxpayer who has not attained the age of 65 by the end of the taxable year may not claim the unlimited deduction with respect to payments made for the medical care of himself or his spouse if the spouse dies before attaining the age of 65 even though such spouse, had she not died, would have attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer.

(2) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Taxpayer E, who attained the age of 65 years on February 22, 1952, makes his return on the basis of the calendar year. During the year 1952, E has adjusted gross income of $8,000, and pays the following medical bills: (a) $240 (3 percent of adjusted gross income) for the medical care of himself and his spouse, and (b) $320 (4 percent of adjusted gross income) for the medical care of his dependent son. The allowable deduction under section 23 (x) for 1952 is $240. No deduction is allowable for the amount of $320 paid for medical care of the dependent son since the amount of such payment (determined without regard to the payments for the care of the taxpayer and his spouse) does not exceed 5 percent of adjusted gross income.

Example (2). H and W make a joint return for the calendar year 1952 on which four exemptions are allowed (exclusive of exemptions under section 25 (b) (1) (B) or (C)), one for each taxpayer and two for their dependent minor children. W became 65 years of age on August 15, 1952. The adjusted gross income of H and W in 1952 is $40,000 and they pay in such year the following amounts for medical care: (a) $1,500 for the medical care of H; (b) $2,500 for the medical care of W; and (c) $3,500 for the medical care of the children. The allowable deduction under section 23 (x) for medical expenses paid in 1952 is $5,000 computed as follows:

Payment for medical care of H and W in 1952		$4,000
Payment for medical care of children in 1952	$3,500
Less 5 percent of $40,000 (adjusted gross income)	2,000
Maximum allowable deduction in 1952		5,000

(d) (1) The expenses paid must be for medical care of the taxpayer, his spouse, or a dependent of the taxpayer (see § 39.25-2 (e) for description of dependents) not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The term "medical care" as used in this section and in section 23 (x) includes amounts paid for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment, or prevention of disease, or for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body (including amounts paid for accident or health insurance) Payments for hospitalization insurance, or for membership in an association furnishing cooperative or so-called free-choice medical service, or group hospitalization and clinical care are amounts which may be deducted. Amounts paid for operations or treatments affecting any portion of the body, including obstetrical expenses and expenses of X-ray or therapy treatments, are deemed to be for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body and are therefore deductible. Amounts expended for illegal operations or treatments or illegally procured drugs are not deductible. Allowable deductions under section 23 (x) will be confined strictly to expenses incurred primarily for the prevention or alleviation of a physical or mental defect or illness. Thus, payments for expenses for hospital, nursing (including nurses' board where paid by the taxpayer), medical, laboratory, surgical, dental and other diagnostic and healing services, for X-rays, for drugs and medical and dental supplies (including artificial teeth or limbs) and for ambulance hire and travel primarily for and essential to the rendition of the medical services or to the prevention or alleviation of a physical or mental defect or illness, are deductible.

(2) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Taxpayer A, married to B and having one dependent child, had adjusted gross income for 1952 of $3,000. During 1952 he paid $300 for medical care, of which $100 was for treatment of his dependent child and $200 for an operation in September 1951, on B. In 1952 he received a payment of $50 for health insurance covering B's illness during 1951.

The deduction allowable under section 23 (x) for the calendar year 1952 is $100, computed as follows:

Payment for medical care in 1952	$300
Less: Amount of insurance received in 1952	50
Payment for medical care in 1952 not compensated for during 1952	250
Less: 5 percent of $3,000 (adjusted gross income)	150
Excess, allowable as a deduction for 1952	100

(e) (1) Where reimbursement, from insurance or otherwise, for medical expenses is not received until a taxable year subsequent to the year in which allowable medical expenses were paid, the reimbursement must be included in the gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year in which the extent such reimbursement is received to the extent such reimbursement is attributable to (and not in excess of) deductions allowed under section 23 (x) for any prior taxable year (see section 22 (b) (5)) Where, during the year for which the deduction is taken, payments are made for medical care which are not compensated for during such year but for which compensation is received in a subsequent year or years, the entire amount of the compensation so received, if equal to or less than the amount which was deducted, shall be considered as attributable to the deduction taken for such prior year. If the amount of the compensation received in the subsequent year or years is greater than the amount which was deducted for the prior year, such portion of the compensation received which is equal in amount to the deduction taken shall be considered as attributable to such deduction. If the deduction for the prior year would have been greater but for the limitations on the maximum amount of such deduction provided by section 23 (x) (see paragraph (b) of this section) then, for purposes of the two preceding sentences, the amount of the compensation received in a subsequent year or years shall be reduced by an amount equal to the amount by which the deduction for the prior year would, but for the applicable maximum limitations, have been increased. If compensation is received in a subsequent year or years, the net deduction for medical expenses will thus be the same as if the compensation had been received in the year in which the payments for medical care were made.

(2) The deduction for medical expenses shall not be deemed to have been allowed for any taxable year for which the taxpayer claimed and was allowed the standard deduction under section 23 (aa)

(3) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Taxpayer C, a single individual with one dependent, is entitled to two exemptions under the provisions of section 25 (b). He had an adjusted gross income of $35,000 for the calendar year 1952. During 1952 he paid $9,000 for medical care. C received no compensation for such medical expenses in 1952, but in 1953 he receives $5,000 upon an insurance policy covering the medical expenses which he paid in 1952. C was allowed a deduction of $2,500 (the maximum) from his gross income for 1952. The amount which C must include in his gross income for 1953 is $250 and the amount to be excluded from gross income for 1953 is $4,750, computed as follows (see section 22 (b) (5))

Payment for medical care in 1952 (not compensated for in 1952)		$9,000
Less: 5 percent of $35,000 (adjusted gross income)		1,750
Excess of uncompensated medical expenses in 1952 over 5 percent of adjusted gross income		7,250
Allowable deduction for 1952		2,500
Amount by which the medical deduction for 1952 would have been greater than $2,500 but for the limitations on the maximum amount provided by section 23 (x)		4,750
Compensation received in 1953	$5,000
Less: Amount by which the medical deduction for 1952 would have been greater than $2,500 but for the limitations on the maximum amount provided by section 23 (x)	4,750
Compensation received in 1953 reduced by the amount by which the medical deduction for 1952 would have been greater than $2,500 but for the limitations on the maximum amount provided by section 23 (x)		250
Amount attributed to medical deduction taken for 1952		250
Amount to be included in gross income for 1953		250
Amount to be excluded from gross income for 1953 ($5,000 less $250)		4,750

Example (2). Assuming that C, in example (1), receives $8,000 in 1953 as compensation for the medical expenses which he paid in 1952, the amount which C must include in his gross income for 1953 is $2,500 and the amount to be excluded from gross income for 1953 is $5,500, computed as follows (see section 22 (b) (5))

Compensation received in 1953	$8,000
Less: Amount by which the medical deduction for 1952 would have been greater than $2,500 but for the limitations on the maximum amount provided by section 23 (x)	4,750
Compensation received in 1953 reduced by the amount by which the medical deduction for 1952 would have been greater than $2,500 but for the limitations on the maximum amount provided by section 23 (x)	3,250
Deduction allowable for 1952	2,500
Amount of compensation received in 1953 to be included in gross income for 1953 as attributable to deduction allowable for 1952	2,500
Amount to be excluded from gross income for 1953 ($8,000 less $2,500)	5,500

(f) In the case of medical expenses for the care of a person who is the taxpayer's spouse or dependent, the deduction under section 23 (x) is allowable if the status of such person as "spouse" or "dependent" of the taxpayer exists either at the time the expenses were incurred or at the time the payment of the expenses was made. Thus, payments made in June 1952, by A, for medical services rendered to B, his wife, in 1951 may be deducted by A for 1952 even though, before the payments were made, B died or secured a divorce; and payments made in July 1952, by C, for medical services rendered to D in 1951 may be deducted by C for 1952 even though C and D were not married until June 1952. However, the status of a person as the "spouse" of the taxpayer must exist as of the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer in which either the expenses were incurred or the payment was made, or, in the case of the death of the spouse in either such year, as of the time of such death. In determining whether such status exists a taxpayer who is legally separated from his spouse under a decree of separate maintenance is not considered as married.

(g) In connection with claims for deductions under section 23 (x) the taxpayer shall furnish the name and address of each person to whom payment for medical expenses was made and the amount and the approximate date of the actual payment thereof in each case. If payment was in kind, then such fact shall be so reflected. Claims for deductions must be substantiated, when requested by the Commissioner, by a statement from the individual or entity to which payment for medical expenses was made showing the nature of the service rendered, to or for whom rendered, the amount paid therefor, and the date of the actual payment thereof, and by such other information as the Commissioner may deem necessary.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(y) Special deduction for blind individuals: * * * [Repealed by section 202 (e), Rev. Act 1948, with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1947.]

(z) Amounts representing taxes and interest paid to cooperative apartment corporation—(1) In general. In the case of a tenant-stockholder (as defined in paragraph (2)), amounts, not otherwise deductible, paid or accrued to a cooperative apartment corporation within the taxable year, if such amounts represent that proportion of the real estate taxes on the apartment building and the land on which it is situated, allowable as deductions under subsection (c), paid or incurred by the corporation, or of the interest paid or incurred by the corporation on its indebtedness contracted in the acquisition, construction, alteration, rehabilitation, or maintenance of such apartment building or in the acquisition of the land on which the building is located, which the stock of the corporation owned by the tenant-stockholder is of the total outstanding stock of the corporation, including that held by the corporation.

(2) Definition. For the purposes of this subsection—

(A) Cooperative apartment corporation. The term "cooperative apartment corporation" means a corporation—

(i) Having one and only one class of stock outstanding,

(ii) All of the stockholders of which are entitled, solely by reason of their ownership of stock in the corporation, to occupy for dwelling purposes apartments in a building owned or leased by such corporation, and who are not entitled, either conditionally or unconditionally, except upon a complete or partial liquidation of the corporation, to receive any distribution not out of earnings and profits of the corporation, and

(iii) 80 per centum or more of the gross income of which for the taxable year in which the taxes and interest described in paragraph (1) are paid or incurred is derived from tenant-stockholders.

(B) Tenant-stockholder. The term "tenant-stockholder" means an individual who is a stockholder in a cooperative apartment corporation, and whose stock is fully paid-up in an amount not less than an amount shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner as bearing a reasonable relationship to the portion of the value of the corporation's equity in the building and the land on which it is situated which is attributable to the apartment which such individual is entitled to occupy.

[Sec. 23 (z) as added by sec. 128, Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.23 (z)-1 Amounts representing taxes and interest paid to cooperative apartment corporation. (a) A tenant-stockholder may deduct from his gross income amounts paid or accrued within his taxable year to a cooperative apartment corporation representing certain taxes or interest paid or incurred by such corporation. Such amounts are not allowable as a deduction unless they represent the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of the real estate taxes on the apartment building and the land on which it is situated, allowable as deductions under section 23 (c), paid or incurred by the cooperative apartment corporation before the close of the taxable year of the tenant-stockholder, or of the interest paid or incurred by the corporation before such time on its indebtedness contracted in the acquisition, construction, alteration, rehabilitation, or maintenance of such apartment building or in the acquisition of the land on which the building is situated.

(b) The deduction allowable under section 23 (z) shall not exceed the amount of the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of the taxes and interest described therein. In case a tenant-stockholder pays or incurs all or a part of his proportionate share of such taxes and interest to the corporation, the amount so paid or incurred representing taxes and interest is allowable as a deduction if the requirements of section 23 (z) are otherwise satisfied. As used in this section, the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share is that proportion which the stock of the cooperative apartment corporation owned by the tenant-stockholder is of the total outstanding stock of the corporation, including that held by the corporation. If a tenant-stockholder pays or incurs to the corporation an amount on account of such taxes and interest and other items, such as maintenance, overhead expenses, and curtailment of mortgage indebtedness, the amount representing such taxes and interest is an amount which bears the same ratio to the total amount of the tenant-stockholder's payment or liability, as the case may be, as the total amount of the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of such taxes and interest bears to the total amount of the tenant-stockholder's proportionate share of the taxes, interest, and other items on account of which such payment is made or liability incurred. No deduction is allowable under section 23 (z) for such part of amounts representing the taxes or interest described therein as is deductible by a tenant-stockholder under any other provision of the Internal Revenue Code.

(c) In order to qualify as a "cooperative apartment corporation" under section 23 (z), the corporation shall have only one class of stock outstanding. Each stockholder of the corporation shall be entitled to occupy for dwelling purposes an apartment in a building owned or leased by such corporation. The stockholder is not required to occupy the apartment. The right as against the corporation to occupy the apartment is sufficient. Such right shall be conferred on each stockholder solely by reason of his ownership of stock in the corporation, that is, the stock shall entitle the owner thereof either to occupy the apartment or to a lease of the apartment. The fact that the right to continue to occupy the apartment is dependent upon the payment of charges to the corporation in the nature of rentals or assessments is immaterial. None of the stockholders of the corporation shall be entitled, either conditionally or unconditionally, except upon a complete or partial liquidation of the corporation, to receive any distribution other than out of earnings or profits of the corporation. It is a prerequisite to the allowance of a deduction under section 23 (z) that at least 80 percent of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable year of the corporation in which the taxes and interest are paid or incurred is derived from tenant-stockholders.

(d) The term "tenant-stockholder" means an individual who is a stockholder in a cooperative apartment corporation as defined in section 23 (z) and whose stock is fully paid up in an amount at least equal to an amount shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner as bearing a reasonable relationship to the portion of the fair market value, as of the date of the original issuance of the stock, of the corporation's equity in the building and the land on which it is situated which is attributable to the apartment which such individual is entitled to occupy.

(e) The application of section 23 (z) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation is, and at all times since 1950 has been, a cooperative apartment corporation within the meaning of section 23 (z). In 1950 it purchased a site and constructed thereon a building with 10 apartments at a total cost of $200,000. The fair market value of the land and building was likewise $200,000 at the time of completion of the building. Each apartment is of equal value. Upon completion of the building, the X Corporation mortgaged the land and building for $100,000, and sold its total authorized capital stock, consisting of 1,000 shares of common stock, for $100,000. The stock was purchased by 10 individuals, each of whom paid $10,000 for 100 shares. Each certificate for 100 shares provides that the holder thereof is entitled to a lease of a particular apartment in the building for a specified term of years. Each lease provides that the lessee shall pay his proportionate part of the corporation's expenses. In 1950 the original owner of 100 shares of the common stock of the X Corporation and of the lease to apartment No. 1 made a gift of the stock and lease to A, an individual. The taxable year of A and of the X Corporation is the calendar year. The corporation computes its net income on the accrual basis, while A computes his net income on the cash receipts and disbursements basis. In 1951 the X Corporation incurred expenses aggregating $13,800, namely, $4,000 for the real estate taxes on the land and building, $5,000 for the interest on the mortgage, $3,000 for the maintenance of the building, and $1,800 for other expenses. In 1952, A pays the X Corporation $1,380, representing his proportionate part of the expenses incurred by the corporation. The entire gross income of the X Corporation for 1951 was derived from tenant-stockholders. A is entitled under section 23 (z) to a deduction of $900 in computing his net income for 1952. The deduction is computed as follows:

Shares of stock of X Corporation owned by A		100
Shares of stock of X Corporation owned by 9 other tenant-stockholders		900
Total shares of stock of X Corporation outstanding		1,000
Proportion of outstanding stock of X Corporation owned by A		1/10
Expenses incurred by X Corporation:
Real estate taxes	$4,000
Interest	5,000
Maintenance	3,000
Other expenses	1,800
		$13,800
Amount paid by A representing his proportionate part of such expenses (1/10 of $13,800)		1,380
A's proportionate part of real estate taxes and interest based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $9,000)		900
A's proportionate part of total corporate expenses based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $13,800)		$1,380
Amount of A's payment representing real estate taxes and interest (900/1380 of $1,380)		900
A's allowable deduction		900

Since the stock which A acquired by gift was fully paid up by his donor in an amount equal to the portion of the fair market value, as of the date of the original issuance of the stock, of the corporation's equity in the land and building which is attributable to apartment No. 1, the requirement of section 23 (z) in this regard is satisfied. The fair market value at the time of the gift of the corporation's equity attributable to the apartment is immaterial.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that the building constructed by the X Corporation contained, in addition to the 10 apartments, business space on the ground floor, which the corporation rented at $2,400 for the calendar year 1951; the corporation deducted the $2,400 from its expenses in determining the amount of the expenses to be prorated among its tenant-stockholders; the amount paid by A to the corporation in 1952 is $1,140 instead of $1,380; and more than 80 percent of the gross income of the corporation for 1951 was derived from tenant-stockholders. A is entitled under section 23 (z) to a deduction of $743.48 in computing his net income for 1952. The deduction is computed as follows:

Expenses incurred by X Corporation	$13,800.00
Less rent from business space	2,400.00
Expenses to be prorated among tenant-stockholders	11,400.00
Amount paid by A representing his proportionate part of such expenses (1/10 of $11,400)	1,140.00
A's proportionate part of real estate taxes and interest based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $9,000)	900.00
A's proportionate part of total corporate expenses based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $13,800)	1,380.00
Amount of A's payment representing real estate taxes and interest (900/1380 of $1,140)	743.48
A's allowable deduction	743.48

Since the portion of A's payment allocable to real estate taxes and interest is only $743.48, that amount instead of $900 is allowable as a deduction in computing A's net income for 1952.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) except that the amount paid by A to the X Corporation in 1952 is $1,000 instead of $1,140. A is entitled under section 23 (z) to a deduction of $652.17 in computing his net income for 1952. The deduction is computed as follows:

Total amount paid by A	$1,000.00
A's proportionate part of real estate taxes and interest based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $9,000)	900.00
A's proportionate part of total corporate expenses based on his stock ownership (1/10 of $13,800)	1,380.00
Amount of A's payment representing real estate taxes and interest (900/1380 of $1,000)	652.17
A's allowable deduction	652.17

Since the portion of A's payment allocable to real estate taxes and interest is only $652.17, that amount instead of $900 is allowable as a deduction in computing A's net income for 1952.

§ 39.23 (aa) Statutory provisions; deductions from gross income; optional standard deduction for individuals.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(aa) Optional standard deduction for individuals—(1) Allowance. In the case of an individual, at his election a standard deduction as follows:

(A) Adjusted gross income $5,000 or more. If his adjusted gross income is $5,000 or more, the standard deduction shall be $1,000 or an amount equal to 10 per centum of the adjusted gross income, whichever is the lesser, except that in the case of a separate return by a married individual, the standard deduction shall be $500.

(B) Adjusted gross income less than $5,000. If his adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, the standard deduction shall be an amount equal to 10 per centum of the adjusted gross income upon the basis of which the tax applicable to the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer is determined under the tax table provided in section 400.

(2) In lieu of certain deductions and credits. The standard deduction shall be in lieu of: (A) all deductions other than those which under section 22 (n) are to be subtracted from gross income in computing adjusted gross income, (B) all credits with respect to taxes of foreign countries and possessions of the United States, (C) all credits with respect to taxes withheld at the source under section 143 (a) (relating to interest on tax-free covenant bonds), and (D) all credits against net income with respect to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations of the character specified in section 25 (a) (1) and (2).

(3) Method and effect of election. (A) If the adjusted gross income shown on the return is $5,000 or more, the standard deduction shall be allowed if the taxpayer so elects in his return, and the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall by regulations prescribe the manner of signifying such election in the return.

(B) If the adjusted gross income shown on the return is less than $5,000, the standard deduction shall be allowed if the taxpayer elects, in the manner provided in Supplement T, to pay the tax imposed by such supplement.

(C) If the taxpayer upon making his return fails to signify, in the manner provided by subparagraph (A) or (B), his election to take the standard deduction, such failure shall be considered his election not to take the standard deduction.

(D) If the adjusted gross income shown on the return is $5,000 or more, but the correct adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, then an election by the taxpayer under subparagraph (A) to take the standard deduction shall be considered as his election to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T; and his failure to make under subparagraph (A) an election to take the standard deduction shall be considered his election not to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T. If the adjusted gross income shown on the return is less than $5,000, but the correct adjusted gross income is $5,000 or more, then an election by the taxpayer under subparagraph (B) to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T shall be considered as his election to take the standard deduction; and his failure to elect under subparagraph (B) to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T shall be considered his election not to take the standard deduction.

(4) Husband and wife. In the case of husband and wife, the standard deduction shall not be allowed to either if the net income of one of the spouses is determined without regard to the standard deduction.

(5) Short period. In the case of a taxable year of less than twelve months on account of a change in the accounting period, the standard deduction shall not be allowed.

(6) Determination of status. For the purposes of this subsection—

(A) The determination of whether an individual is married shall be made as of the close of his taxable year, unless his spouse dies during his taxable year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death; and

(B) An individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(7) Change of election. Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, a change of an election to take, or not to take, the standard deduction for any taxable year may be made after the filing of the return for such year. If the spouse of the taxpayer filed a separate return for any taxable year corresponding, for the purposes of paragraph (4), to the taxable year of the taxpayer, the change shall not be allowed unless, in accordance with such regulations—

(A) The spouse makes a change of election with respect to the standard deduction for the taxable year covered in such separate return, consistent with the change of election sought by the taxpayer, and

(B) The taxpayer and his spouse consent in writing to the assessment, within such period as may be agreed upon with the Secretary, of any deficiency, to the extent attributable to such change of election, even though at the time of the filing of such consent the assessment of such deficiency would otherwise be prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law.

This paragraph shall not apply if the tax liability of the taxpayer's spouse, for the taxable year corresponding (for the purposes of paragraph (4) to the taxable year of the taxpayer, has been compromised under the provisions of section 3761.

[Sec. 23 (aa) as added by sec. 9 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944, amended by sec. 302, Rev. Act 1948 and sec. 308 (a), (b), Rev. Act. 1951]

§ 39.23 (aa)-1 Standard deduction—(a) General. (1) The taxpayer may elect to take, in addition to the deductions from gross income allowable in computing adjusted gross income, a standard deduction in lieu of all nonbusiness deductions (that is, deductions other than those allowable under section 22 (n)) and in lieu of certain credits allowable to the taxpayer had he not so elected. Such credits are the credit provided by sections 31 and 131 for income tax paid to foreign countries or possessions of the United States, the credit provided by section 32 for tax paid at the source under section 143 (a) by the obligor on tax-free covenant bonds with respect to interest on such bonds, and the credit provided by section 25 (a) (1) and (2) for normal-tax purposes with respect to interest on United States obligations and interest on obligations of instrumentalities of the United States.

(2) In the case of taxpayers whose adjusted gross income is $5,000 or more, the standard deduction is $1,000 or 10 percent of adjusted gross income, whichever is the lesser, except that in the case of a separate return by a married individual, the standard deduction is $500. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the determination of whether an individual is married shall be made as of the close of his taxable year unless his spouse dies during his taxable year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death; and an individual shall be considered as married even though living apart from his spouse unless legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance. In the case of taxpayers whose adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, the standard deduction is about 10 percent of the adjusted gross income upon which the tax is determined in the table provided in section 400. A taxpayer having adjusted gross income of less than $5,000, who does not elect to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T, may not take the standard deduction.

(3) In the case of a joint return, there is only one adjusted gross income and only one standard deduction. For example, if a husband has an income of $15,000 and his spouse has an income of $12,000 for the taxable year for which they file a joint return, and they have no deductions allowable for the purpose of computing adjusted gross income, the adjusted gross income is $27,000, and the standard deduction is $1,000 (and not $2,000)

(4) The standard deduction is not allowable:

(i) In the case of a taxable year of less than 12 months where such taxable year arises because of a change in accounting period under section 47 (a)

(ii) In the case of a return for a fractional part of a year under section 146 (a) (1)

(iii) In the case of an estate or trust;

(iv) In the case of common trust funds;

(v) In the determination of the net income of a partnership;

(vi) In the case of nonresident alien individuals (including those who enter and leave the United States at frequent intervals) and

(vii) In the case of a citizen of the United States entitled to the benefits of section 251.

(5) An election to take the standard deduction is not precluded by reason of the fact that the return is made for a taxable year of less than 12 months on account of the death of the taxpayer.

(b) Manner and effect of election to take the standard deduction. The following rules are prescribed with respect to the manner of signifying an election by a taxpayer to take the standard deduction:

(1) A taxpayer whose adjusted gross income as shown by his return is $5,000 or more shall be allowed the standard deduction if he signifies on his return his election to take such deduction. Such taxpayer shall so signify on his return by claiming thereon the deduction in the amount provided for in section 23 (aa) instead of itemizing the deductions allowable under section 23 other than those specified in section 22 (n). The amount to be claimed on the return by such taxpayer is $1,000 or 10 percent of the adjusted gross income, whichever is lesser (except that in the case of a separate return by a married individual, the amount is $500). If in any case the adjusted gross income shown on the return of the taxpayer is $5,000 or more, but the correct adjusted gross income is less than $5,000, then:

(i) If the taxpayer has elected on his return to take the standard deduction such election shall be deemed to be an election by the taxpayer to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T; and

(ii) If the taxpayer has not so elected upon his return, it shall be deemed that the taxpayer has elected not to pay the tax under Supplement T.

(2) If the adjusted gross income shown on the return is less than $5,000, the standard deduction is allowable if the taxpayer elects in the manner provided in Supplement T to pay the tax imposed by such supplement. As to the manner and effect of election to pay the tax under Supplement T, see § 39.402-1. In any case, however, in which adjusted gross income shown on the return is less than $5,000 but the correct adjusted gross income is in fact $5,000 or more, then:

(i) If the taxpayer has elected to pay the tax imposed under Supplement T, it shall be deemed that he has elected to take the standard deductions; and

(ii) If the taxpayer has not elected on his return to pay the tax under Supplement T, it shall be deemed that he has made an election not to take the standard deduction.

(c) Husband and wife. (1) In the case of husband and wife (except as qualified below), if the net income of one spouse is determined without regard to the standard deduction, the other spouse may not elect to take the standard deduction. If a joint return is filed and election made thereon to take the standard deduction, such deduction shall be determined by reference to the aggregate adjusted gross income of both spouses. If Form 1040A is filed as a combined return, the standard deduction is allowed through the application to the adjusted gross income shown on such return of the tax table in Supplement T. See § 39.51-2 limiting the use of Form 1040A as a combined return to cases in which the aggregate adjusted gross income of the spouses is less than $5,000.

(2) If each spouse files Form 1040, both must elect to take the standard deduction or both are denied the standard deduction. If one spouse files Form 1040 and does not elect to take the standard deduction, the other spouse may not elect to take the standard deduction and, hence, may not file Form 1040A as his or her return. Thus, if A and his wife B have adjusted gross incomes of $6,000 and $3,500 from wages subject to withholding, respectively, and A files Form 1040 and does not elect thereon to take the standard deduction, B may not file Form 1040A but must file Form 1040, taking thereon only her actual allowable deductions and not the standard deduction. In such case, however, if both elect to take the standard deduction, A must file Form 1040, but B may file Form 1040A or, in the alternative, she may file Form 1040 and compute the tax under Supplement T. Under either alternative, effect is given to the standard deduction through the application of Supplement T.

(3) The restriction upon the right of a married person to elect the standard deduction in his separate return is applicable with respect to the taxable years of the husband and wife ending in the same calendar year, except that in the event of the death of one spouse the restriction is applicable with respect to the taxable year ended with death and the taxable year of the surviving spouse in which such death occurs. The restriction applies unless the spouses are legally separated under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance. The determination of whether an individual is married (whether or not living with his spouse) for the purpose of the allowance of the standard deduction shall be made as of the last day of such individual's taxable year, unless his spouse dies during such taxable year, in which event the determination shall be made as of the date of the death of such spouse.

(4) The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Taxpayer A and his wife B both make their returns on a calendar year basis. In July 1952 they enter into a separation agreement and thereafter live apart but no decree of divorce or separate maintenance is issued until March 1953. If A itemizes and claims his actual deductions on his return for the calendar year 1952, B may not elect the standard deduction on her return for such year since B is considered as married to A (although permanently separated by agreement) on the last day of 1952.

Example (2). Taxpayer A makes his returns on the basis of a fiscal year ending June 30. His wife B makes her returns on the calendar year basis. A died in October 1952. In such case, since A and B were married as of the date of death, B may not elect the standard deduction for the calendar year 1952 if the income of A for the short taxable year ending with the date of his death is determined without regard to the standard deduction.

(d) Change of election to take, or not to take, the standard deduction. (1) A change of the election to take, or not to take, the standard deduction for any taxable year may be made before or after the time prescribed for filing the return for the taxable year. However, the period of time prescribed in section 322 within which claim for credit or refund of tax must be made is not extended by the right to effect a change of election. See § 39.322-7.

(2) If the spouse of the taxpayer filed a separate return for any taxable year that corresponds, for the purpose of section 23 (aa) (4) (see paragraph (c) of this section) to the taxable year of the taxpayer, a change of election may not be made by the taxpayer unless (i) the spouse makes a change of election in such separate return with respect to the standard deduction consistent with the change of election sought by the taxpayer, and (ii) the taxpayer and his spouse file a consent in writing to the assessment, within such period of time as may be agreed upon, of any deficiency of either to the extent attributable to such change of election even though at the time of the filing of such consent the assessment of such deficiency would otherwise be prevented by the operation of any law or rule of law.

(3) A change of election for any taxable year shall not be permitted if the tax liability of the taxpayer for the taxable year, or of the taxpayer's spouse for the taxable year corresponding, for the purpose of section 23 (aa) (4) (see paragraph (c) of this section) to the taxable year of the taxpayer, has been compromised under the provisions of section 3761.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(bb) Circulation expenditures. Notwithstanding section 24 (a), all expenditures (other than expenditures for the purchase of land or depreciable property or for the acquisition of circulation through the purchase of any part of the business of another publisher of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical) to establish, maintain, or increase the circulation of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical; except that the deduction shall not be allowed with respect to the portion of such expenditures as, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, is chargeable to capital account if the taxpayer elects, in accordance with such regulations, to treat such portion as so chargeable. Such election, if made, must be for the total amount of such portion of the expenditures which is so chargeable to capital account; and shall be binding for all subsequent taxable years unless, upon application by the taxpayer, the Secretary permits a revocation of such election subject to such conditions as he deems necessary.

[Sec. 23 (bb) as added by sec. 204 (a), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.23 (bb)-1 Circulation expenditures—(a) Allowance of deduction. Section 23 (bb) provides for the deduction from gross income (notwithstanding the provisions of section 24 (a) and the regulations thereunder, relating to items not deductible from gross income) of all expenditures to establish, maintain, or increase the circulation of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical subject to the two following rules:

(1) The deduction is not allowable with respect to expenditures for the purchase of land or depreciable property or for the acquisition of circulation through the purchase of any part of the business of another publisher of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical.

(2) The deduction is allowable only to the publisher making the circulation expenditures.

(b) Election to capitalize. A taxpayer entitled to the deduction for circulation expenditures provided in section 23 (bb) may, in lieu of taking such deduction, elect to charge to capital account the portion of such circulation expenditures which, under approved standard methods of accounting, is properly chargeable to capital account. As a general rule, expenditures normally made from year to year in an effort to maintain circulation are not properly chargeable to capital account; however, expenditures made in an effort to establish or to increase circulation are properly chargeable to capital account. For example, if a newspaper normally employs five persons to obtain renewals of subscriptions by telephone, the expenditures in connection therewith would not be properly chargeable to capital account. However, if such newspaper, in a special effort to increase its circulation, hires for a limited period 20 additional employees to obtain new subscriptions by means of telephone calls to the general public, the expenditures in connection therewith would be properly chargeable to capital account. If an election is made by the taxpayer to treat any portion of his circulation expenditures as chargeable to capital account, such election must be for the total amount of all such expenditures which are properly so chargeable; in such case, no deduction will be allowed for any such expenditures which are properly chargeable to capital account. If such election is made with respect to a particular taxable year, the taxpayer must continue for subsequent taxable years to charge to capital account all circulation expenditures which are properly so chargeable, unless the Commissioner, on application in writing made to him by the taxpayer, permits a revocation of such election with respect to any subsequent taxable year, subject to such conditions as the Commissioner deems necessary. The election referred to in this paragraph shall be made by a statement attached to the taxpayer's return for the first taxable year to which such election is applicable.

§ 39.23 (cc) Statutory provisions; deductions from gross income; deduction of expenditures paid or incurred for the development of mines or other natural deposits.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(cc) Development of mines—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (2), all expenditures paid or incurred during the taxable year for the development of a mine or other natural deposit (other than an oil or gas well) if paid or incurred after December 31, 1950, and after the existence of ores or minerals in commercially marketable quantities has been disclosed. This subsection shall not apply to expenditures for the acquisition or improvement of property of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l), but allowances for depreciation shall be considered, for the purposes of this subsection, as expenditures.

(2) Election of taxpayer. At the election of the taxpayer, made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, expenditures described in paragraph (1) paid or incurred during the taxable year shall be treated as deferred expenses and shall be deductible on a ratable basis as the units of produced ores or minerals benefited by such expenditures are sold. In the case of such expenditures paid or incurred during the development stage of the mine or deposit, the election shall apply only with respect to the excess of such expenditures during the taxable year over the net receipts during the taxable year from the ores or minerals produced from such mine or deposit. The election under this paragraph, if made, must be for the total amount of such expenditures, or the total amount of such excess, as the case may be, with respect to the mine or deposit, and shall be binding for such taxable year.

(3) Adjusted basis of mine or deposit. The amount of expenditures which are treated under paragraph (2) as deferred expenses shall be taken into account in computing the adjusted basis of the mine or deposit, except that such amount, and the adjustments to basis provided in section 113 (b) (1) (J), shall be disregarded in determining the adjusted basis of the property for the purpose of computing a deduction for depletion under section 114.

[Sec. 23 (cc) as added by sec. 309 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.23 (cc)-1 Mine development expenditures—(a) Allowance of deduction. (1) Section 23 (cc) (1) provides for a deduction from gross income of all expenditures for the development of a mine or other natural deposit (other than an oil or gas well) paid or incurred by the taxpayer after the existence of ores or minerals in commercially marketable quantities has been disclosed subject to the following rules. The deduction is not allowable with respect to expenditures for the acquisition or improvement of property of a character subject to allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l) However, allowances for depreciation shall be considered for the purposes of this section as expenditures for development to the extent allocable to development. Such development expenditures are deductible under section 23 (cc) (1) (notwithstanding the provisions of § 39.23 (m)-15) whether paid or incurred by the taxpayer while the mine or deposit is in the development or while in the production stage.

(2) For the purposes of this section, expenditures thus described include only those which, except for this section, would not qualify as a deduction for the taxable year. For treatment of certain exploration expenditures, see section 23 (ff) and § 39.23 (ff)-1. In general, the provisions of this section are applicable only to costs paid or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of development undertaken (directly or through a contract) by the taxpayer and do not apply, for example, to such costs of development undertaken by other persons as may be reflected in the acquisition cost paid or incurred by the taxpayer for wholly or partially developed property.

(3) As to the deductibility of expenditures attributable to a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of the exploration, development, or mining of critical and strategic minerals, see section 22 (b) (15)

(b) Election to defer (1) A taxpayer entitled to the deduction under section 23 (cc) (1) may, in lieu of taking such deduction in the year when the expenditures for development were paid or incurred, elect under section 23 (cc) (2) to treat such expenditures as deferred expenses to be deducted ratably as the units of the produced ore or minerals benefited by the expenditures are sold. In the case of such expenditures paid or incurred while the mine or deposit is in the development stage, the election is applicable only in respect of the excess of such expenditures paid or incurred during the taxable year over the net receipts during the taxable year from the ore or minerals produced from the mine or deposit. The amount of such expenditures not in excess of net receipts from the ore or mineral for the taxable year while the mine or deposit is in the development stage shall be deductible in full. See § 39.23 (m)-15 (a) for description as to when a mine will be considered to have passed from a development to a production stage.

(2) The amount of the deduction allowable during the taxable year is an amount A, which bears the same ratio to B (the total deferred development expenditures for a particular mine or deposit reduced by the amount of such expenditures deducted in prior taxable years) as C (the number of units of the ore or mineral benefited by such expenditures sold during the taxable year) bears to D (the number of units of ore or mineral benefited by such expenditures remaining as of the taxable year) For the purposes of this proportion, the "number of units of ore or mineral benefited by such expenditures remaining as of the taxable year" is the number of units of ore or mineral benefited by the deferred development expenditures remaining at the end of the year to be recovered from the mine or deposit (including units benefited by such expenditures recovered but not sold) plus the number of units benefited by such expenditures sold within the taxable year. The principles outlined in § 39.23 (m)-9 are applicable in estimating the number of units remaining as of the taxable year and the number of units sold during the taxable year. The estimate is subject to revision in accordance with that section in the event it is ascertained as the result of operations or development that the remaining units are materially greater or less than the number of units remaining from a prior estimate. Sections 39.23 (e)-3 and 39.23 (f)-1 contain rules relating to the treatment of losses resulting from abandonment.

(3) If the taxpayer has paid or incurred expenditures of the character described herein, has made the election to defer such expenditures, and thereafter leases the developed property retaining a royalty interest therein, he shall be allowed the ratable deduction indicated in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph.

(4) The election referred to in this paragraph shall be made for each mine or deposit by a clear indication on the return or by a statement filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the return was filed not later than six months after the filing of the return for the taxable year to which such election is applicable, or, in case the return for the taxable year to which such election is applicable is filed on or before March 15, 1953, by a statement in writing to that effect filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the return was filed on or before September 15, 1953. If such an election is made by the taxpayer, such election must be for the total amount of all such expenditures during the taxable year while the mine or deposit is in the producing stage. If the mine or deposit is in the development stage, such election must be for all of the excess of such expenditures over the net receipts during the taxable year from the ore or mineral produced. The election shall be binding for the taxable year with respect to which the election was made.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(dd) Repayment by mutual savings banks, etc., of certain loans. In the case of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, or a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, amounts paid by the taxpayer during the taxable year in repayment of loans made prior to September 1, 1951, by (1) the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof which is wholly owned by the United States, or (2) any mutual fund established under the authority of the laws of any State.

[Sec. 23 (dd) as added by sec. 313 (g), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.23 (dd)-1 Repayment of certain loans by mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks. There is deductible, under section 23 (dd) from the gross income of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, or a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, amounts paid by such institutions during the taxable year in repayment of loans made before September 1, 1951, by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof which is wholly owned by the United States, and amounts paid to a mutual fund established under the authority of the laws of any State. For example, amounts paid by such institution in repayment of loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation before September 1, 1951, are deductible under this section. Section 23 (dd) is not applicable, however, in the case of amounts paid to an agency or instrumentality not wholly owned by the United States.

§ 39.23 (ee)-(ff) Statutory provisions; deductions from gross income; cross reference; exploration expenditures.

SEC. 23. Deductions from gross income. In computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions: * * *

(ee) Long-term capital gains. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the deduction for long-term capital gains provided in section 117 (b).

[Sec. 23 (ee) as added by sec. 322, Rev. Act 1951]

(ff) Deduction of exploration expenditures—(1) In general. In the case of expenditures paid or incurred during the taxable year for the purpose of ascertaining the existence, location, extent, or quality of any deposit of ore or other mineral, and paid or incurred prior to the beginning of the development stage of the mine or deposit, so much of such expenditures as does not exceed $75,000. This subsection shall apply only with respect to the amount of such expenditures which, but for this subsection, would not be allowable as a deduction for the taxable year. This subsection shall not apply to expenditures for the acquisition or improvement of property of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l), but allowances for depreciation shall be considered, for the purposes of this subsection, as expenditures paid or incurred. In no case shall this subsection apply with respect to amounts paid or incurred for the purpose of ascertaining the existence, location, extent, or quality of any deposit of oil or gas.

(2) Election of taxpayer. If the taxpayer elects, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, to treat as deferred expenses any portion of the amount deductible for the taxable year under paragraph (1), such portion shall not be deductible under paragraph (1) but shall be deductible on a ratable basis as the units of produced ores or minerals discovered or explored by reason of such expenditures are sold. An election made under this paragraph for any taxable year shall be binding for such year.

(3) Limitation. This subsection shall not apply to any amounts paid or incurred in any taxable year if in any four preceding years the taxpayer, or any individual or corporation who has transferred to the taxpayer any mineral property under circumstances which make the provisions of paragraph (7), (8), (11), (13), (15), (17), (20), or (22) of section 113 (a) applicable to such transfer, has either (A) been allowed a deduction under paragraph (1) of this subsection or (B) made the election provided under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

(4) Adjusted basis of mine or deposit. The amount of expenditures which are treated under paragraph (2) as deferred expenses shall be taken into account in computing the adjusted basis of the mine or deposit, but such amounts, and the adjustments to basis provided in section 113 (b) (1) (M) shall be disregarded in determining the adjusted basis of the property for the purpose of computing a deduction for depletion under section 114.

[Sec. 23 (ff), as added by sec. 342 (a), Rev. Act 951]

§ 39.23 (ff)–1 Discovery or exploration expenditures—(a) Allowance of deduction. (1) Subject to the limitation prescribed in paragraph (c) of this section, section 23 (ff) (1) provides for a deduction from gross income of expenditures for ascertaining the existence, location, extent, or quality of any deposit of ore or other mineral (other than oil or gas) paid or incurred by the taxpayer before the beginning of the development stage. The expenditures thus described include only those which, except for this section, would not qualify as a deduction for the taxable year and do not include expenditures for the acquisition or improvement of property of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided for in section 23 (l) However, allowances for depreciation shall be considered for the purposes of this section as expenditures paid or incurred. For the purposes of this section, such expenditures do not include expenditures paid or incurred after the existence of ores or minerals in commercially marketable quantities has been disclosed. For treatment of development expenditures see section 23 (cc) and § 39.23 (cc)–1. In general, the provisions of this section are applicable only to costs paid or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of exploration or discovery undertaken (directly or through contract) by the taxpayer and do not apply, for example, to such costs of exploration or discovery undertaken by other persons as may be reflected in the acquisition cost paid or incurred by the taxpayer for the property.

(2) As to the deductibility of expenditures attributable to a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of the exploration, development or mining of critical and strategic minerals, see section 22 (b) (15)

(b) Election to defer (1) A taxpayer entitled to the deduction under section 23 (ff) (1) may, in lieu of taking such deduction to which he is entitled in the year when the expenditures for discovery or exploration were paid or incurred, elect under section 23 (ff) (2) to treat any portion of such deductible expenditures as deferred expenses to be deducted ratably as the units of produced ores or minerals discovered or explored by reason of such expenditures are sold.

(2) The amount of the deduction allowable during the taxable year is an amount A, which bears the same ratio to B (the total deferred discovery or exploration expenditures reduced by the amount of such expenditures deducted in prior taxable years) as C (the number of units of the produced ore or mineral sold during the taxable year) bears to D (the number of units of ore or mineral remaining as of the taxable year) For the purposes of this proportion, the "number of units of ore or mineral remaining as of the taxable year" is the number of units of ore or mineral remaining at the end of the year to be recovered from the mines or deposits benefited by such expenditures (including units recovered but not sold) plus the number of units sold within the taxable year. The principles outlined in § 39.23 (m)–9 are applicable in estimating the number of units remaining as of the taxable year and the number of units sold during the year. The estimate is subject to revision in accordance with that section in the event it is ascertained as the result of further discovery, development or operations that the remaining units are materially greater or less than the units remaining from a prior estimate. Sections 39.23 (e)–3 and 39.23 (f)–1 contain rules relating to the treatment of losses resulting from abandonment.

(3) If the taxpayer has paid or incurred expenditures of the character described herein, has made the election to defer such expenditures and thereafter leases the mine or deposit benefited by such expenditures retaining a royalty interest therein, he shall be allowed the ratable deduction indicated in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph.

(4) The election referred to in this paragraph shall be made by a clear indication on the return or by a statement filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the return was filed not later than six months after the filing of the return for the taxable year to which such election is applicable, or, in case the return for the taxable year to which such election is applicable is filed on or before March 15, 1953, by a statement in writing to that effect filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the return was filed on or before September 15, 1953. In such statement, the taxpayer shall disclose the amount to be deferred, and the name, location, extent and nature of the mineral deposit to which the election relates. The election shall be binding for the taxable year with respect to which the election was made.

(c) Limitation. The deduction described in paragraph (a) of this section is allowable only for the amount of all such expenditures paid or incurred by the taxpayer in the taxable year as does not exceed $75,000. Amounts otherwise allowable as deductions without reference to this section (except allowances for depreciation) are not to be taken into account in determining this limitation. The limitation applies to all such described expenditures of the taxpayer and is not a total amount allowable with respect to each mine or deposit. No deduction under section 23 (ff) (1) or election under section 23 (ff) (2) may be taken or exercised if in any four preceding years (not necessarily consecutive years) the taxpayer, or any individual or corporation who has transferred to the taxpayer any mineral or ore property under circumstances which make the provisions of paragraph (7), (8), (11) (13) (15) (17) (20), or (22) of section 113 (a) applicable to such transfer, has been allowed a deduction or elected to treat such expenditures as deferred expenses under section 23 (ff) (1) or section 23 (ff) (2) respectively. Thus, under such circumstances, no deduction under section 23 (ff) (1) or election under section 23 (ff) (2) may be taken or exercised after the combined deductions and elections so taken or exercised by one or more transferors and the taxpayer equal four. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, a deduction and an election availed of in any taxable year by a particular taxpayer or transferor shall be considered as having been taken or exercised only once.

Example (1). Assume that a taxpayer who has never claimed the benefits of section 23 (ff) received in 1956 a mineral deposit from X corporation upon a distribution in complete liquidation of the latter under conditions which would make the provisions of section 113 (a) (15) applicable in determining the basis of the property in the hands of the taxpayer, and that during the year 1955 X corporation expended $60,000 for exploration expenditures which X corporation elected to treat as deferred expenses. On the basis of these facts the taxpayer may deduct or defer for any three (not necessarily consecutive) subsequent taxable years similar expenditures made in those years not to exceed $75,000 in any year. Where the amount expended in any taxable year is less than $75,000 the difference, if any, may not be carried over or back to other taxable years.

Example (2). Assume the same facts stated in example (1) except that, prior to acquisition by the taxpayer of the deposit from corporation X in 1956, corporation X had acquired the deposit in 1954 in a similar distribution from Y corporation which, in the years 1952 and 1953, deducted exploration costs paid in respect of an entirely different deposit in the amounts of $30,000 and $50,000 respectively. Under these circumstances, the taxpayer may deduct or defer exploration expenditures paid or incurred for only one taxable year in an amount not in excess of $75,000.

SEC. 24. Items not deductible—(a) General rule. In computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of—

(1) Personal, living, or family expenses, except extraordinary medical expenses deductible under section 23 (x);

(2) Any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate, except expenditures for the development of mines or deposits deductible under section 23 (cc);

(3) Any amount expended in restoring property or in making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made;

(4) Premiums paid on any life insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee, or of any person financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy;

(5) Any amount otherwise allowable as a deduction which is allocable to one or more classes of income other than interest (whether or not any amount of income of that class or classes is received or accrued) wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter, or any amount otherwise allowable under section 23 (a) (2) which is allocable to interest (whether or not any amount of such interest is received or accrued) wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter;

(6) Any amount paid or accrued on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase a single premium life insurance or endowment contract. For the purposes of this paragraph, if substantially all the premiums on a life insurance or endowment contract are paid within a period of four years from the date on which such contract is purchased, such contract shall be considered a single premium life insurance or endowment contract; or

(7) Amounts paid or accrued for such taxes and carrying charges as, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, are chargeable to capital account with respect to property, if the taxpayer elects, in accordance with such regulations, to treat such taxes or charges as so chargeable.

§ 39.24 (a)-1 Personal and family expenses. Insurance paid on a dwelling owned and occupied by a taxpayer is a personal expense and not deductible. Premiums paid for life insurance by the insured are not deductible. In the case of a professional man who rents a property for residential purposes, but incidentally receives clients, patients, or callers there in connection with his professional work (his place of business being elsewhere) no part of the rent is deductible as a business expense. If, however, he uses part of the house for his office, such portion of the rent as is properly attributable to such office is deductible. If the father is entitled to the services of his minor children, any allowances which he gives them, whether said to be in consideration of services or otherwise, are not allowable deductions in his return of income. Amounts paid as damages for breach of promise to marry and attorneys' fees and other costs of suit to recover such damages are not deductible. Generally, attorneys' fees paid in a suit for divorce or separate maintenance are not deductible. However, the part of an attorney's fee paid in a divorce or separate maintenance proceeding which is properly attributable to the production or collection of amounts includible in gross income under section 22 (k) is deductible under section 23 (a) (2). Amounts paid as alimony or allowance for support upon divorce or separation are not deductible except as provided in section 23 (u) The cost of equipment of an Army officer to the extent only that it is especially required by his profession and does not merely take the place of articles required in civilian life is deductible. Accordingly, the cost of a sword is an allowable deduction, but the cost of a uniform is not. For deduction of extraordinary medical expenses (including amounts paid for accident or health insurance) see section 23 (x)

§ 39.24 (a)-2 Capital expenditures—(a) Expenditures except non-depreciable mine development expenditures. Amounts paid for increasing the capital value or for making good the depreciation (for which a deduction has been made) of property are not deductible from gross income. See section 23 (l) Amounts expended for securing a copyright and plates, which remain the property of the person making the payments, are investments of capital. The cost of defending or perfecting title to property constitutes a part of the cost of the property and is not a deductible expense. The amount expended for architects' services is part of the cost of the building. Commissions paid in purchasing securities are a part of the cost price of such securities. Commissions paid in selling securities are an offset against the selling price, except that in the case of dealers in securities such commissions may be treated as an ordinary and necessary business expense. Amounts to be assessed and paid under an agreement between bondholders or shareholders of a corporation, to be used in a reorganization of the corporation, are investments of capital and not deductible for any purpose in returns of income. See § 39.22 (a)-16. An assessment paid by a shareholder of a national bank on account of his statutory liability is ordinarily not deductible but, subject to the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, may in certain cases represent a loss. Expenses of the organization of a corporation, such as incorporation fees, attorneys' and accountants' charges, are capital expenditures and not deductible from gross income. A holding company which guarantees dividends at a specified rate on the stock of a subsidiary corporation for the purpose of securing new capital for the subsidiary and increasing the value of its stock holdings in the subsidiary may not deduct amounts paid in carrying out this guaranty in computing its net income, but such payments may be added to the cost of its stock in the subsidiary.

(b) Non-depreciable expenditures for mine development. Section 23 (cc) provides that certain expenditures (not subject to depreciation allowance under section 23 (l) paid or incurred by the taxpayer for mine development may be deducted or treated as deferred expenses. For the rules governing treatment of such expenditures, see section 23 (cc) and § 39.23 (cc)-1.

§ 39.24 (a)-3 Premiums on business insurance. Premiums paid by a taxpayer on an insurance policy on the life of an officer, employee, or other individual financially interested in the taxpayer's business, for the purpose of protecting the taxpayer from loss in the event of the death of the officer or employee insured are not deductible from the taxpayer's gross income. If, however, the taxpayer is not a beneficiary under such a policy, the premiums so paid will not be disallowed as deductions merely because the taxpayer may derive a benefit from the increased efficiency of the officer or employee insured. See §§ 39.23 (a)-6 to 39.23 (a)-9, inclusive. In either case the proceeds of such policies paid by reason of the death of the insured may be excluded from gross income whether the beneficiary is an individual or a corporation, except in the case of certain transferees as provided in § 39.22 (b) (2)-3 and in the case of a spouse to whom such proceeds are income under section 22 (k). See generally section 22 (b) (1) and (2) and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.24 (a)-4 Amounts allocable to exempt income—(a) Class of exempt income. (1) As used in this section, the term "class of exempt income" means any class of income, including interest only to the extent that amounts otherwise allowable under section 23 (a) (2) are allocable thereto (whether or not any amount of income of that class or classes is received or accrued) wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1. Included are any item or class of income, including interest only to the extent that amounts otherwise allowable under section 23 (a) (2) are allocable thereto, constitutionally exempt from the taxes imposed by chapter 1, any item or class, as above defined, excluded from gross income under any provision of section 22 or section 116; and any item or class of income, as above defined, exempt under the provisions of any other law from the taxes imposed by chapter 1. As used in this section, the term "taxable income" means income which is required to be included in gross income; and the term "exempt income" means income which is not required to be included in gross income.

(2) The object of section 24 (a) (5) is to segregate the exempt income from the taxable income, in order that a double exemption may not be obtained through the reduction of taxable income by expenses and other items incurred in the production of items of income wholly exempt from tax. Accordingly, just as exempt items of income are excluded from the computation of gross income under section 22, so section 24 (a) (5) excludes from the computation of deductions under section 23 all items referable to the production of exempt income, as above defined.

(b) Determination of amounts allocable to a class of exempt income. (1) No deduction may be allowed for the amount of any item or part thereof allocable to a class or classes of exempt income. For example, expenses paid or incurred for the production or collection of income which is wholly exempt from income taxes, such as interest or dividends of a type not includible in gross income, are not deductible expenses. Items, or parts of such items, directly attributable to any class or classes of exempt income, shall be allocated thereto; and items, or parts of such items, directly attributable to any class or classes of taxable income, shall be allocated thereto.

(2) If an item is indirectly attributable both to taxable income and exempt income, a reasonable proportion thereof, determined in the light of all the facts and circumstances in each case, shall be allocated to each. Apportionments must in all cases be reasonable.

(c) Statement of items of exempt income; records. (1) A taxpayer receiving any class of exempt income or holding any property or engaging in any activity the income from which is exempt shall submit with his return as a part thereof an itemized statement, in detail, showing (i) the amount of each class of exempt income, and (ii) the amount of items, or parts of items, allocated to each such class (the amount allocated by apportionment being shown separately) as required by paragraph (b) of this section. If an item is apportioned between a class of exempt income and a class of taxable income, the statement shall show the basis of the apportionment. Such statement shall also recite that each deduction claimed in the return is not in any way referable to exempt income.

(2) The taxpayer shall keep such records as will enable him to make the allocations required by this section (see section 54)

§ 39.24 (a)-5 Single premium life insurance or endowment contracts. Amounts paid or accrued on indebtedness incurred or continued, directly or indirectly, to purchase a single premium life insurance or endowment contract are not deductible under section 23 (b) or any other provision of chapter 1. This prohibition applies even though the insurance is not on the life of the taxpayer. A contract shall be considered a single premium life insurance or endowment contract, for the purposes of this section, if substantially all the premiums on such contracts are paid within a period of four years from the date on which the contract was purchased.

§ 39.24 (a)-6 Taxes and carrying charges chargeable to capital account and treated as capital items—(a) General. In accordance with section 24 (a) (7), items enumerated in paragraph (b) (1) of this section may be capitalized at the election of the taxpayer. Thus, taxes and carrying charges with respect to property, of the type described in this section, are chargeable to capital account at the election of the taxpayer notwithstanding that they are expressly deductible under section 23. No deduction is permitted for any items so treated.

(b) Taxes and carrying charges. (1) The following items may upon the election of the taxpayer, in the manner provided in paragraph (c) of this section, be treated as chargeable to capital account (either as a component of original cost or other basis, for the purposes of section 113 (a) or as an adjustment to basis, for the purposes of section 113 (b) (1) (A)) notwithstanding that they are expressly deductible under section 23:

(i) In the case of unimproved and unproductive real property annual taxes, interest on a mortgage, and other carrying charges,

(ii) In the case of real property, whether improved or unimproved and whether productive or unproductive, expenditures (otherwise deductible) paid or incurred in the development thereof or in the construction of an improvement or additional improvement thereon, up to the time the development or construction work has been completed, such as interest on a loan made or continued to furnish funds for this purpose (but not including theoretical interest of a taxpayer using his own funds) taxes of the owner of the property measured by compensation paid to his employees and taxes of such owner imposed on the purchase of materials for such work or on the storage, use, or other consumption in the State of materials for such work which are purchased for storage, use, or other consumption in that State, and other necessary expenditures paid or incurred in connection therewith up to the time the development or construction work has been completed. The development or construction work with respect to which such items are incurred may relate to unimproved and unproductive real estate whether the construction work will make the property productive of taxable income (as in the case of a factory) or not (as in the case of a personal residence) or may relate to property already improved or productive (as in the case of a plant addition or improvement, such as the construction of another floor on a factory or the installation of insulation therein),

(iii) In the case of personal property taxes of an employer measured by compensation for services rendered in transporting machinery or other fixed assets to his plant or in installing them therein, interest on a loan to purchase such property or to pay for transporting or installing the same, and taxes of the owner thereof imposed on the purchase of such property or on the storage, use, or other consumption of such property in the State which is purchased for storage, use, or other consumption in that State, paid or incurred up to the date of installation or the date when such property is first put into use by the taxpayer, whichever date is later,

(iv) Any other taxes and carrying charges with respect to property, otherwise deductible, which in the opinion of the Commissioner are, under sound accounting principles, chargeable to capital account.

(2) If for any taxable year there are two or more items, such as social security taxes, use taxes, or any other type of items above described, relating to the same project to which the election is applicable, the taxpayer may elect to capitalize any one or more of such items even though he does not elect to capitalize the remaining items or to capitalize items of the same type relating to other projects. However, if several items of the same type are incurred with respect to a single project the election to capitalize must, if exercised, be exercised as to all items of that type.

(3) Once, however, such an election is made under subparagraph (1) (ii), (iii) or (iv) of this paragraph to capitalize a given charge incurred with respect to a particular project, charges of the same type incurred with respect to the particular project in subsequent years, whether they be social security taxes, use taxes, sales taxes, or any other item enumerated in any of these subparagraphs, must also be capitalized for the entire period to which the election so to treat items of that type is applicable. The term "project" for this purpose in the case of items included in subparagraph (1) (ii) of this paragraph means the particular development or construction work with respect to which the charge as to which the election was exercised was incurred, and in the case of items included in subparagraph (1) (iii) of this paragraph the term means the act of transporting, installing, or putting into use of the machinery or other fixed assets. An election under subparagraph (1) (i) of this paragraph, however, may be exercised for a given year without regard to the manner in which the same type of item with respect to the same property was treated by the taxpayer for a prior year.

(4) The following examples are illustrative of the application of the provisions of this paragraph:

Example (1). A in 1952 and 1953 pays annual taxes and interest on a mortgage on a piece of property. During 1952, the property is vacant and unproductive, but throughout 1953, A operates the property as a parking lot. A may capitalize the taxes and mortgage interest paid in 1952 but not the taxes and mortgage interest paid in 1953.

Example (2). X began in February 1952 the erection of a building for himself. X in 1952, in connection with the erection of the building, paid $6,000 social security taxes, which in his 1952 return he elected to capitalize. X must continue to capitalize the social security taxes paid in connection with the erection of the building until its completion in 1954.

Example (3). Assume the facts in example (2) except that in November 1952, X also begins to build a hotel which will be completed in 1955. In 1952 X pays $3,000 social security taxes in connection with the erection of the hotel. X's election to capitalize the social security taxes paid in erecting the building started in February 1952 does not bind him to capitalize the social security taxes paid in erecting the hotel; he may deduct the $3,000 social security taxes paid in erecting the hotel.

Example (4). X in 1952 began the erection of a building for himself, which would take three years to complete. X in 1952 paid $4,000 social security taxes and $8,000 interest on a building loan in connection with this building. X may elect to capitalize the social security taxes although he deducts the interest charges.

Example (5). A purchases machinery in 1952 for use in his factory. He pays social security taxes on the labor for transportation and installation, as well as interest on a loan to obtain funds to pay for the machinery and for installation costs. A may capitalize the social security taxes and the interest up to the date of installation or until the machinery is first put into use by him, whichever is later.

(5) The sole effect of section 24 (a) (7) is to permit the items enumerated in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph to be charged to capital account notwithstanding that a deduction is expressly provided therefor in section 23. Any item not charged to capital account which is otherwise deductible under section 23 is still deductible. An item may not be charged to capital account under this section where such treatment would be disallowed whether or not a deduction is expressly provided therefor in section 23 (such, for example, as maintenance expenses and the cost of repairs and upkeep of a personal residence) This section does not prevent an item from being treated as a capital item which would otherwise be allowed to be so treated nor does it have the effect of making deductible an item which is not deductible under section 23 (such, for example, as salaries or other compensation paid or incurred for services rendered in the construction of property)

(6) In the absence of a provision in this section for treating a given item as a capital item, this section has no effect on the treatment otherwise accorded such item. Thus, items which are otherwise deductible are deductible notwithstanding the provisions of this section, and items which are otherwise treated as capital items are to be so treated. Nor is the absence of a provision in this section to be construed as withdrawing or modifying the right now given to the taxpayer under some other provision of chapter 1 of the Code or of the regulations promulgated thereunder to elect to capitalize or to deduct a given item. See § 39.23 (m)-16, making intangible drilling and development costs chargeable to capital or to expenses at the taxpayer's option and § 39.23 (c)-2, making certain Federal duties and excise taxes deductible unless the taxpayer has added them to the expenses of the business or the cost of the articles of merchandise.

(c) Manner of exercising election. If the taxpayer elects to capitalize an item or items under this section, such election shall be exercised by filing with the original return a statement for that year indicating the item or items (whether with respect to the same project or to different projects) which the taxpayer elects to treat as chargeable to capital account (either as a component of original cost or other basis, for the purposes of section 113 (a) or as an adjustment to basis, for the purposes of section 113 (b) (1) (A))

(d) Allocation. If any tax or carrying charge with respect to property is in part a type of item described in paragraph (b) of this section and in part a type of item or items with respect to which no election to treat as a capital item is given, a reasonable proportion of such tax or carrying charge, determined in the light of all the facts and circumstances in each case, shall be allocated to each item. Apportionment must in all cases be reasonable.

Example. A, the owner of a factory on which a new addition is under construction, in 1952 pays its general manager, B, a salary of $4,000 and social security taxes of $120. B spends nine-tenths of his time in the general business of the firm and the remaining tenth in supervising the construction work. A treats as expenses $3,600 of B's salary and charges the remaining $400 to capital account. A may also capitalize $12 of the $120 social security taxes.

SEC. 24. Items not deductible. * * *

(b) Losses from sales or exchanges of property—(1) Losses disallowed. In computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of losses from sales or exchanges of property, directly or indirectly—

(A) Between members of a family, as defined in paragraph (2) (D);

(B) Except in the case of distributions in liquidation, between an individual and a corporation more than 50 per centum in value of the outstanding stock of which is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for such individual;

(C) Except in the case of distributions in liquidation, between two corporations more than 50 per centum in value of the outstanding stock of each of which is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the same individual, if either one of such corporations, with respect to the taxable year of the corporation preceding the date of the sale or exchange was, under the law applicable to such taxable year, a personal holding company or a foreign personal holding company;

(D) Between a grantor and a fiduciary of any trust;

(E) Between the fiduciary of a trust and the fiduciary of another trust, if the same person is a grantor with respect to each trust; or

(F) Between a fiduciary of a trust and a beneficiary of such trust.

(2) Stock ownership, family, and partnership rule. For the purposes of determining, in applying paragraph (1), the ownership of stock—

(A) Stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation, partnership, estate, or trust, shall be considered as being owned proportionately by or for its shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries;

(B) An individual shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his family;

(C) An individual owning (otherwise than by the application of subparagraph (B)) any stock in a corporation shall be considered as owning the stock owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his partner;

(D) The family of an individual shall include only his brothers and sisters (whether by the whole or half blood), spouse, ancestors, and lineal descendants; and

(E) Constructive ownership as actual ownership. Stock constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of subparagraph (A) shall, for the purpose of applying subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), be treated as actually owned by such person, but stock constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of subparagraph (B) or (C) shall not be treated as owned by him for the purpose of again applying either of such subparagraphs in order to make another the constructive owner of such stock.

§ 39.24 (b)-1 Losses from sales or exchanges between certain classes of persons—(a) Individuals (including fiduciaries). In the case of sales or exchanges of property, directly or indirectly, between individuals (including fiduciaries) no deduction shall be allowed with respect to losses arising therefrom in the following cases: (1) Between members of a family as defined in section 24 (b) (2) (D) (2) between fiduciaries of trusts having a common grantor; (3) between a grantor and a fiduciary of the same trust; or (4) between a fiduciary of a trust and a beneficiary of such trust.

(b) Corporations (including shareholders) In the case of sales or exchanges of property (except in the case of distributions in liquidation) where a corporation not acting in a fiduciary capacity is a party to the transaction, under certain circumstances no deduction shall be allowed with respect to losses arising from such sales or exchanges, directly or indirectly, between a corporation and an individual shareholder (see section 24 (b) (1) (B)) or between two corporations (see section 24 (b) (1) (C)) Under section 24 (b) (1) (B) it is necessary that there be owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual a party to the transaction, more than 50 percent in value of the stock of the other party to the transaction on the date of the sale or exchange. Under section 24 (b) (1) (C), however, not only must more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of each of such corporations be owned, directly or indirectly, on the date of the sale or exchange by or for the same individual, but one of the corporations must be either a personal holding company as defined in section 501, or a foreign personal holding company as defined in section 331, for the taxable year preceding the date of the sale or exchange. It is not necessary that either of the corporations be a personal holding company or a foreign personal holding company on the date of the sale or exchange.

(c) Stock-ownership rule. For the purpose of paragraph (b) of this section, the ownership of stock shall be determined in accordance with the rules provided in section 24 (b) (2) In order that an individual shall be considered under section 24 (b) (2) (C) as constructively owning the stock of a corporation owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his partner, such individual must himself own, directly or indirectly, stock of such corporation. On the other hand, under section 24 (b) (2) (B) an individual need not own any stock of a corporation, either directly or indirectly, in order to be considered as constructively owning the stock of such corporation which is owned, directly or indirectly, by or for any member of his family.

(d) Illustrations of the application of section 24 (b) The application of section 24 (b) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On July 1, 1952, the M Corporation owned all of the stock of the O Corporation which for the calendar year 1951 was a personal holding company under section 501. On that day all of the outstanding stock of the M Corporation was owned by A. By the application of the rule provided in section 24 (b) (2) (A), the stock in the O Corporation owned by the M Corporation is considered to be owned constructively by A, the sole stockholder of the M Corporation. Such constructive ownership of the stock of the O Corporation by A is considered as actual ownership for the purpose of applying the family rule provided in section 24 (b) (2) (B) to make a member of A's family, as, for example, his wife, AW, the constructive owner of the stock of the O Corporation. But the constructive ownership of the O Corporation stock by AW may not be considered as actual ownership by AW for the purpose of again applying the family rule so as to make a member of AW's family, for example, her father, AWF, in turn constructive owner of such stock. These rules apply in the same manner and with the same effect in determining the ownership of stock in the M Corporation. Accordingly, assuming that A, AW, AWF the M Corporation, and the O Corporation make their income returns on the basis of a calendar year and that there was no distribution in complete or partial liquidation of the M or O Corporation, no deduction is allowable under section 24 (b) (1) with respect to losses from sales or exchanges of property made on July 1, 1952, between any of such individuals or corporations, except as between A and AWF and between AWF and the M or O Corporation.

Example (2). On June 15, 1952, all of the stock of the N Corporation was owned in equal proportions by A and A's partner, AP. Except in the case of distributions in complete or partial liquidation by the N Corporation, no deduction is allowable with respect to losses from sales or exchanges of property made on June 15, 1952, between A and the N Corporation or AP and the N Corporation inasmuch as, by the application of section 24 (b) (2) (C), each partner is considered as having owned the stock owned by the other and, therefore, is considered as having owned more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the N Corporation. Deductions for losses from sales or exchanges between A's brother, AB, and the N Corporation, or between AP and A, or AP and AB, are not prohibited by section 24 (b).

SEC. 24 Items not deductible. * * *

(c) Unpaid expenses and interest. In computing net income no deduction shall be allowed under section 23 (a), relating to expenses incurred, or under section 23 (b), relating to interest accrued—

(1) If such expenses or interest are not paid within the taxable year or within two and one half months after the close thereof; and

(2) If, by reason of the method of accounting of the person to whom the payment is to be made, the amount thereof is not, unless paid, includible in the gross income of such person for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the taxpayer ends; and

(3) If, at the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer or at any time within two and one-half months thereafter, both the taxpayer and the person to whom the payment is to be made are persons between whom losses would be disallowed under section 24 (b).

§ 39.24 (c)-1 Disallowance of deductions for unpaid expenses and interest. The application of section 24 (c) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A is the holder and owner of an interest-bearing note executed by the M Corporation, all the stock of which is owned by him. A and the M Corporation make their income returns on the basis of a calendar year but the M Corporation makes its returns on the accrual basis and A makes his returns on the cash receipts and disbursements basis. The M Corporation does not pay any interest on such note during the calendar year 1952 or within two and one-half months after the close thereof, but claims a deduction for the year 1952 with respect to the interest accruing on the note in that year. A, being on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, does not include such interest in his return for the year 1952. By the application of section 24 (c), no deduction for such interest is allowable in computing the net income of the M Corporation for the year 1952. The provisions of section 24 (c) do not otherwise affect the general rules governing the allowance of deductions under the accrual basis. Hence, in the event the M Corporation should pay such interest after March 15, 1953, no deduction therefor would be allowable in computing its net income for the year in which the payment was made.

SEC. 24. Items not deductible. * * *

(d) Holders of life or terminable interest. Amounts paid under the laws of any State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country as income to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance shall not be reduced or diminished by any deduction for shrinkage (by whatever name called) in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time, nor by any deduction allowed by this chapter (except the deductions provided for in subsections (l) and (m) of section 23) for the purpose of computing the net income of an estate or trust but not allowed under the laws of such State, Territory, District of Columbia, possession of the United States, or foreign country for the purpose of computing the income to which such holder is entitled.

§ 39.24 (d)-1 Life or terminable interests. (a) Amounts paid to the holder of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance shall not be subject to any deduction for shrinkage (whether called depreciation or any other name) in the value of such interest due to the lapse of time. In other words, the holder of such an interest so acquired may not set up the value of the expected future payments as corpus or principal and claim deductions for shrinkage or exhaustion thereof due to the passage of time. See section 113 (a) (5)

(b) No deductions shall be allowed in the case of a life or terminable interest acquired by gift, bequest, or inheritance, if the estate or trust is entitled to a deduction under chapter 1 but there is no reduction of the income of the life or terminable interest. For example, an estate or a trust in a certain State sells securities at a loss; if, under the laws of that State, the beneficiary suffers no actual loss, then even though the estate or trust is permitted to deduct such loss in making its return, the beneficiary whose income has not been diminished thereby is not entitled to a deduction on account of such loss, but must include in his return the full amount distributed or distributable. See section 162. However, in the case of property held by one person for life with remainder to another person and in the case of property held in trust, see section 23 (l) as to depreciation and section 23 (m) as to depletion.

SEC. 24. Items not deductible. * * *

(e) Tax withheld on tax-free covenant bonds. For nondeductibility of tax withheld on tax-free covenant bonds, see section 143 (a) (3).

(f) Sale of land with unharvested crop. Where an unharvested crop sold by the taxpayer is considered under the provisions of section 117 (j) (3) as "property used in the trade or business" in computing net income no deduction (whether or not for the taxable year of the sale and whether for expenses, depreciation, or otherwise) attributable to the production of such crop shall be allowed.

[Sec. 24 (f) as added by sec. 323 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.24 (f)-1 Items attributable to an unharvested crop sold with the land. In computing net income no deduction shall be allowed in respect of items attributable to the production of an unharvested crop which is sold, exchanged, or involuntarily converted with the land and which is considered as property used in the trade or business under section 117 (j) (3) Such items shall be so treated whether or not the taxable year involved is that of the sale, exchange, or conversion of such crop and whether they are for expenses, depreciation, or otherwise. If the taxable year involved is not that of the sale, exchange, or conversion of such crop, a recomputation of the tax liability for such year shall be made; such recomputation should be in the form of an "amended return" if necessary. For the adjustments to basis as a result of such disallowance, see § 39.113 (b) (1)-1.

CREDITS AGAINST NET INCOME

SEC. 25. Credits of individual against net income—(a) Credits for normal tax only. There shall be allowed for the purpose of the normal tax, but not for the surtax, the following credits against the net income:

(1) Interest on United States obligations. The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States, if such interest is included in gross income under section 22, and if, under the Act authorizing the issue of such obligations, as amended and supplemented, such interest is exempt from normal tax.

(2) Interest on obligations of instrumentalities of the United States. The amount received as interest on obligations of a corporation organized under Act of Congress, if (A) such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States; and (B) such interest is included in gross income under section 22; and (C) under the Act authorizing the issue thereof, as amended and supplemented, such interest is exempt from normal tax. (For reduction of credit under paragraph (1) or (2) on account of amortizable bond premium, see section 125.)

(3) Normal-tax exemption. [Repealed by sec. 102 (b) (2), Rev. Act 1945.]

(4) Earned-income definitions. [Repealed by sec. 107 (a), Rev. Act 1943]

(b) Credits for both normal tax and surtax—(1) Credits. There shall be allowed for the purposes of both the normal tax and the surtax, the following credits against net income:

(A) An exemption of $600 for the taxpayer; and an additional exemption of $600 for the spouse of the taxpayer if a separate return is made by the taxpayer, and if the spouse, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer;

(B) (i) An additional exemption of $600 for the taxpayer if he has attained the age of 65 before the close of his taxable year; and

(ii) An additional exemption of $600 for the spouse of the taxpayer if a separate return is made by the taxpayer, and if the spouse has attained the age of 65 before the close of such taxable year, and, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer;

(C) (i) An additional exemption of $600 for the taxpayer if he is blind at the close of his taxable year; and

(ii) An additional exemption of $600 for the spouse of the taxpayer if a separate return is made by the taxpayer, and if the spouse is blind and, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer. For the purposes of this clause the determination of whether the spouse is blind shall be made as of the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer, unless the spouse dies during such taxable year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death;

(iii) For the purposes of this subparagraph an individual is blind only if either: His central visual acuity does not exceed 20/200 in the better eye with correcting lenses, or his visual acuity is greater than 20/200 but is accompanied by a limitation in the fields of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angle no greater than 20 degrees;

(D) An exemption of $600 for each dependent whose gross income for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins is less than $600, except that the exemption shall not be allowed in respect of a dependent who has made a joint return with his spouse under section 51 for the taxable year beginning in such calendar year.

(2) Determination of status. For the purposes of this subsection—

(A) The determination of whether an individual is married shall be made as of the close of his taxable year, unless his spouse dies during his taxable year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death; and

(B) An individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(3) Definition of dependent. As used in this chapter the term "dependent" means any of the following persons over half of whose support, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, was received from the taxpayer:

(A) A son or daughter of the taxpayer, or a descendant of either,

(B) A stepson or stepdaughter of the taxpayer,

(C) A brother, sister, stepbrother, or stepsister of the taxpayer,

(D) The father or mother of the taxpayer, or an ancestor of either,

(E) A stepfather or stepmother of the taxpayer,

(F) A son or daughter of a brother or sister of the taxpayer,

(G) A brother or sister of the father or mother of the taxpayer,

(H) A son-in-law, daughter-in-law, father-in-law, mother-in-law, brother-in-law, or sister-in-law of the taxpayer.

As used in this paragraph, the terms "brother" and "sister" include a brother or sister by the half-blood. For the purposes of determining whether any of the foregoing relationships exist, a legally adopted child of a person shall be considered a child of such person by blood. The term "dependent" does not include any individual who is a citizen or subject of a foreign country unless such individual is a resident of the United States or of a country contiguous to the United States. A payment to a wife which is includible under section 22 (k) or section 171 in the gross income of such wife shall not be considered a payment by her husband for the support of any dependent.

§ 39.25-1 Credits of individuals for purpose of normal tax. The taxpayer's net income as determined pursuant to sections 21 to 24, inclusive, is reduced, for the purpose of computing the normal tax by (a) the income exempt from normal tax only received upon certain obligations of the United States and upon certain obligations of corporations organized under Act of Congress which are instrumentalities of the United States, and (b) the credits for both normal tax and surtax under section 25 (b).

§ 39.25-2 Credits of individuals for purpose of normal tax and surtax—(a) In general. For the purposes of the normal tax and the surtax on individuals, there are allowed as credits against net income the exemptions specified in section 25 (b) Such credits include (1) the exemptions for an individual taxpayer and spouse (the so-called personal exemptions) (2) the additional exemptions for a taxpayer attaining the age of 65 years and spouse attaining the age of 65 years (the so-called old-age exemptions) (3) the additional exemptions for a blind taxpayer and a blind spouse, and (4) the exemptions for dependents of the taxpayer.

(b) Exemptions for individual taxpayer and spouse (so-called personal exemptions) There are allowed by section 25 (b) (1) (A) an exemption of $600 for the taxpayer and an additional exemption of $600 for the spouse of the taxpayer if a separate return is made by the taxpayer, and if the spouse, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer. Since, in the case of a joint return, there are two taxpayers (although under section 51 (b) there is only one income for the two taxpayers on such return—i. e. their aggregate income) two exemptions of $600 are allowed on such return, one for each taxpayer spouse. If in any case a joint return is made by the taxpayer and his spouse, no exemption is allowed any other person for such spouse even though such other person would have been entitled to claim an exemption for such spouse as a dependent if such joint return had not been made.

(c) Exemptions for taxpayer attaining the age of 65 and spouse attaining the age of 65 (so-called old-age exemptions). (1) Section 25 (b) (1) (B) provides an additional exemption of $600 for the taxpayer if he has attained the age of 65 before the close of his taxable year. An additional exemption of $600 is also allowed to the taxpayer for his spouse if a separate return is made by the taxpayer and if the spouse has attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer and, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, the spouse has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer. If a husband and wife make a joint return, an old-age exemption of $600 will be allowed as to each taxpayer spouse who has attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year for which the joint return is made. The exemptions under section 25 (b) (1) (B) are in addition to the exemptions for the taxpayer and spouse under section 25 (b) (1) (A)

(2) In determining the age of an individual for the purposes of the exemption for old age, the last day of the taxable year of the taxpayer is the controlling date. Thus, in the event of a separate return by a husband, no additional exemption for old age may be claimed for his spouse unless such spouse has attained the age of 65 on or before the close of the taxable year of the husband. In no event shall the additional exemption for old age be allowed on a separate return of the taxpayer with respect to a spouse who dies before attaining the age of 65 even though such spouse would have attained the age of 65 before the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer. For the purposes of the old-age exemption, an individual attains the age of 65 on the first moment of the day preceding his sixty-fifth birthday. Accordingly, an individual whose sixty-fifth birthday falls on January 1 in a given year attains the age of 65 on the last day of the calendar year immediately preceding.

(d) Exemptions for the blind. (1) Section 25 (b) (1) (C) provides an additional exemption of $600 for the taxpayer if he is blind at the close of his taxable year. An additional exemption is also allowed to the taxpayer for his spouse if the spouse is blind and, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, has no gross income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer. The determination of whether the spouse is blind shall be made as of the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer, unless the spouse dies during such taxable year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death.

(2) The exemptions for the blind are in addition to the exemptions for the taxpayer and spouse under section 25 (b) (1) (A) and are also in addition to the exemptions under section 25 (b) (1) (B) for taxpayers and spouses attaining the age of 65 years. Thus, a single individual who has, before the close of his taxable year, attained the age of 65 years and who is blind at the close of his taxable year is entitled, in addition to the so-called personal exemption of $600, to two further exemptions, each of $600, one by reason of his age and the other by reason of his blindness. If a husband and wife make a joint return, an exemption of $600 for the blind will be allowed as to each taxpayer spouse who is blind at the close of the taxable year for which the joint return is made.

(3) A taxpayer claiming an exemption allowed by section 25 (b) (1) (C) for a blind taxpayer or a blind spouse shall, if the individual for whom the exemption is claimed is not totally blind as of the last day of the taxable year of the taxpayer (or in the case of a spouse who dies during such taxable year as of the time of such death) attach to his return a certificate from a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or a registered optometrist stating that as of the applicable status determination date in the opinion of such physician or optometrist (i) the central visual acuity of the individual for whom the exemption is claimed did not exceed 20/200 in the better eye with correcting lenses or (ii) such individual's visual acuity was accompanied by a limitation in the fields of vision such that the widest diameter of the visual field subtends an angle no greater than 20 degrees. If such individual is totally blind as of the status determination date there shall be attached to the return a statement by the person or persons making the return setting forth such fact.

(e) Exemptions for dependents. Section 25 (b) (1) (D) allows to a taxpayer an exemption of $600 for each dependent whose gross income for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins is less than $600, who receives more than one-half of his support from the taxpayer for such calendar year and who does not file a joint return with his spouse. For the purposes of this credit a dependent is a person who is related to the taxpayer within one of the following relationships: child, the descendants of such child; stepchild; brother; sister; brother or sister by the half blood; stepbrother or stepsister· parent; the ancestors of such parent; stepfather or stepmother· son or daughter of the taxpayer's brother or sister; brother or sister of the taxpayer's father or mother; son-in-law· daughter-in-law· father-in-law· mother-in-law; brother-in-law· or sister-in-law. In the case of a joint return it is not necessary that the prescribed relationship exist between the person claimed as a dependent and the spouse who furnishes the support; it is sufficient if the prescribed relationship exists with respect to either spouse. Thus, a husband and wife making a joint return may claim as a dependent a daughter of the wife's brother (wife's niece) even though the husband is the one who furnishes the chief support. The relationship of affinity once existing will not terminate by divorce or the death of a spouse. A legally adopted child of a person shall be considered a child of such person by blood. A citizen or subject of a foreign country may not be claimed as a dependent, unless he is a resident of the United States, Canada, or Mexico at some time during the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins. Whether or not over half of a person's support, for the calendar year in which the taxable year of the taxpayer begins, was received from the taxpayer shall be determined by reference to the amount of expense incurred by the taxpayer for such support. A payment to a wife which is includible under section 22 (k) or section 171 in the gross income of such wife shall not be considered a payment by her husband for the support of any dependent.

(2) The only exemption allowed for a dependent of the taxpayer is that provided by section 25 (b) (1) (D) The exemptions provided by section 25 (b) (1) (B) (old-age exemptions) and section 25 (b) (1) (C) (exemptions for the blind) are allowed only for the taxpayer or his spouse. Thus, if a taxpayer provides the entire support of his father, who meets all the requirements of a dependent under section 25 (b) (3) and who is over the age of 65 years, the taxpayer is entitled only to the one exemption under section 25 (b) (1) (D) of $600 for his father as a dependent, and is not entitled to any additional exemption because of his father's age.

(f) Determination of husband and wife status. For the purpose of determining the right of an individual to claim an exemption for his spouse under section 25 (b) the determination of whether such individual is married shall be made as of the close of his taxable year, unless his spouse dies during such year, in which case such determination shall be made as of the time of such death. An individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(g) Alien resident of Puerto Rico. A nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year and subject to tax under sections 11 and 12 is allowed as credits against net income the exemptions specified in section 25 (b) even though as to the United States such individual is a nonresident alien. See, however, section 51 (b) (2) and regulations thereunder which provide that a joint return may not be made if either the husband or wife at any time during the taxable year is a nonresident alien.

§ 39.26 (a) Statutory provisions; credits of corporations; interest on obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities.

SEC. 26. Credits of corporations. In the case of a corporation the following credits shall be allowed to the extent provided in the various sections imposing tax—

(a) Interest on obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities. The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States or of corporations organized under Act of Congress which is allowed to an individual as a credit for purposes of normal tax by section 25 (a) (1) or (2). (For reduction of credit under this subsection on account of amortizable bond premium, see section 125.)

[Sec. 26 (a) as amended by sec. 126 (1) (2), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.26 (a)-1 Credit of corporation for interest on obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities. The credit allowed by section 26 (a) is an amount equal to the interest received upon obligations of the United States or of a corporation organized under Act of Congress (if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States and under the Act authorizing the issue of such obligations, as amended and supplemented, such interest is in the case of individuals exempt from normal tax) which is included in gross income under section 22.

SEC. 26. Credits of corporations. In the case of a corporation the following credits shall be allowed to the extent provided in the various sections imposing tax— * * *

(b) Dividends received. An amount equal to the sum of—

(1) In general. 85 per centum of the amount received as dividends (other than dividends described in paragraph (2) on the preferred stock of a public utility) from a domestic corporation which is subject to taxation under this chapter.

(2) Certain preferred stock—(A) Calendar year 1951. * * * [Not applicable.]

(B) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, 62 per centum of the amount received as dividends on the preferred stock of a public utility which is subject to taxation under this chapter and with respect to which the credit provided in section 26 (h) for dividends paid is allowable.

(C) Taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954. In the case of taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954, 59 per centum of the amount received as dividends on the preferred stock of a public utility which is subject to taxation under this chapter and with respect to which the credit provided in section 26 (h) for dividends paid is allowable.

(3) Dividends received from certain foreign corporations. In the case of dividends received from a foreign corporation (other than a foreign personal holding company) which is subject to taxation under this chapter, if, for an uninterrupted period of not less than 36 months ending with the close of such foreign corporation's taxable year in which such dividends are paid (or, if the corporation has not been in existence for 36 months at the close of such taxable year, for the period the foreign corporation has been in existence as of the close of such taxable year) such foreign corporation has been engaged in trade or business within the United States and has derived 50 per centum or more of its gross income from sources within the United States—

(A) An amount equal to 85 per centum of the dividends received out of its earnings or profits specified in clause (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (a), but such amount shall not exceed an amount which bears the same ratio to 85 per centum of such dividends received out of such earnings or profits as the gross income of such foreign corporation for the taxable year from sources within the United States bears to its gross income from all sources for such taxable year, and

(B) An amount equal to 85 per centum of the dividends received out of that part of its earnings or profits specified in clause (1) of the first sentence of section 115 (a) accumulated after the beginning of such uninterrupted period, but such amount shall not exceed an amount which bears the same ratio to 85 per centum of such dividends received out of such accumulated earnings or profits as the gross income of such foreign corporation from sources within the United States for the portion of such uninterrupted period ending at the beginning of such taxable year bears to its gross income from all sources for such portion of such uninterrupted period.

For determination of earnings or profits distributed in any taxable year, see section 115 (b).

For the purpose of this subsection (but not for the purposes of computing adjusted net income), if the whole or any part of a dividend is received after August 31, 1950, in property other than money, then, with respect to such property, the shareholder shall not be considered to have received as a dividend an amount in excess of the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the distributing corporation at the time of distribution increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the distributing corporation by reason of such distribution. The credit allowed under this subsection shall not be allowed in respect of dividends received from a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, 42 Stat. 849 (U. S. C., title 15, c. 4), or from a corporation which under section 251 is taxable only on its gross income from sources within the United States by reason of its receiving a large percentage of its gross income from sources within a possession of the United States. In no event shall the credit allowed by this subsection exceed 85 per centum of the adjusted net income computed without regard to the deduction allowed by section 23 (s).

§ 39.26 (b)-1 Credit for dividends received—(a) Dividends on stock of domestic corporations. A credit is provided in section 26 (b) for dividends received from a domestic corporation which is subject to taxation under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Such credit of a corporation for a taxable year is, except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, an amount equal to 85 percent of such dividends received by the corporation during the taxable year. The credit shall be determined without regard to dividends received on the preferred stock of a public utility with respect to which the credit for dividends paid provided in section 26 (h) is allowable to the distributing corporation. For credit for such dividends received on the preferred stock of a public utility, see paragraph (b) of this section. If a credit for dividends paid is not allowable to the distributing corporation under section 26 (h) with respect to the dividends on its preferred stock, such dividends received from a domestic public utility corporation subject to taxation under chapter 1 are includible in determining the credit under this paragraph.

(b) Dividends on certain preferred stock of public utilities. A credit is provided in section 26 (b) (2) for dividends received on certain preferred stock of certain public utility corporations subject to taxation under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Such credit is allowable only for dividends received on the preferred stock of a public utility with respect to which the credit for dividends paid provided in section 26 (h) is allowable to the distributing corporation. The credit of a corporation under section 26 (b) (2) for a taxable year is, except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, an amount equal to the following percent of such dividends received by the corporation during the taxable year:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before Apr. 1, 1954	62
For taxable years beginning after Mar. 31, 1954	59

For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108-2.

(c) Dividends on stock of certain foreign corporations. (1) A credit is provided in section 26 (b) (3) for dividends received from a foreign corporation (other than a foreign personal holding company as defined in section 331) which is subject to taxation under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code if, for an uninterrupted period of not less than 36 months ending with the close of the foreign corporation's taxable year in which the dividends are paid, such foreign corporation has been engaged in trade or business within the United States and has derived 50 percent or more of its gross income from sources within the United States. If the foreign corporation has been in existence less than 36 months as of the close of the taxable year in which the dividends are paid, then the applicable uninterrupted period to be taken into consideration in lieu of the uninterrupted period of 36 or more months is the entire period such corporation has been in existence as of the close of such taxable year. An uninterrupted period which satisfies the twofold requirement with respect to business activity and gross income may start at a date later than the date on which the foreign corporation first commenced an uninterrupted period of engaging in trade or business within the United States, but the applicable uninterrupted period is in any event the longest uninterrupted period which satisfies such twofold requirement.

(2) The credit of a corporation under section 26 (b) (3) for a taxable year is, except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, an amount equal to 85 percent of such dividends—

(i) Received out of the foreign corporation's earnings or profits for its taxable year in which the dividends are paid (computed as of the close of such taxable year without diminution by reason of any distributions made during such taxable year) without regard to the amount of the earnings and profits at the time the distribution was made, but not in excess of an amount which bears the same ratio to 85 percent of such dividends received as the gross income of the foreign corporation for such taxable year from sources within the United States bears to its gross income from all sources for such year, and

(ii) Received out of that part of the foreign corporation's earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, which has accumulated after the beginning of the applicable uninterrupted period, but not in excess of an amount which bears the same ratio to 85 percent of such dividends received as the gross income of the foreign corporation from sources within the United States for that portion of the applicable uninterrupted period which ends at the beginning of its taxable year in which the dividends are paid bears to its gross income from all sources for the same portion of such applicable uninterrupted period.

(3) The determination of earnings or profits distributed in any taxable year shall be made in accordance with the principles of section 115 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code. For the determination of the source of income, see section 119 and the regulations thereunder.

(4) The application of section 26 (b) (3) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation A (a foreign corporation filing its income tax return on a calendar year basis) whose stock is 100 percent owned by Corporation B (a domestic corporation filing its income tax return on a calendar year basis) for the first time engaged in trade or business within the United States on January 1, 1941, and qualifies under section 26 (b) (3) for the entire period beginning on that date and ending on December 31, 1952. Corporation A had accumulated earnings or profits of $50,000 immediately prior to January 1, 1941, and had earnings or profits of $10,000 for each taxable year during the uninterrupted period from January 1, 1941, through December 31, 1952. It derived for the period from January 1, 1941, through December 31, 1951, 90 percent of its gross income from sources within the United States, and in 1952 derived 95 percent of its gross income from sources within the United States. During the calendar years 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945 Corporation A distributed in each year $15,000; during the calendar years 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, and 1951 it distributed in each year $5,000; and during the year 1952, $50,000. For 1952 a dividends received credit of $31,025 is allowable to Corporation B with respect to the $50,000 received from Corporation A, computed as follows:

(i) $8,075 which is $8,500 (85 percent of the $10,000 of earnings or profits of the taxable year) multiplied by 95 percent (the portion of the gross income of Corporation A derived during the taxable year from sources within the United States), plus

(ii) $22,950 which is $25,500 (85 percent of $30,000, that part of the earnings or profits accumulated after the beginning of the uninterrupted period) multiplied by 90 percent (the portion of the gross income of Corporation A derived from sources within the United States during that portion of the uninterrupted period ending at the beginning of the taxable year).

Example (2). If in example (1) Corporation A for the taxable year 1952 had incurred a deficit of $10,000 (shown to have been incurred before December 31), and if it had distributed $50,000 on December 31, 1952, the dividends received credit allowable to Corporation B would be $15,300, computed by multiplying $17,000 (85 percent of $20,000 earnings or profits accumulated after the beginning of the uninterrupted period) by 90 percent (the portion of the gross income of Corporation A derived from United States sources during that portion of the uninterrupted period ending at the beginning of the taxable year).

(d) Limitations on credit. No credit is allowable under section 26 (b) in respect of dividends received from a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922 (15 U. S. C. (1946) c. 4) or from a corporation which under section 251 is taxable only on its gross income from sources within the United States by reason of its receiving a large percentage of its gross income from sources within a possession of the United States. The credit under section 26 (b) (that is, the sum of the credits determined under paragraphs (a) (b) and (c) of this section) is limited to 85 percent of the corporation's adjusted net income computed without regard to the deduction for net operating loss allowed by section 23 (s) For the purpose of section 26 (b) and this section (but not for the purpose of computing adjusted net income) if the whole or any part of a dividend is received in property other than money, the amount of such dividend in such property shall not be considered to be in excess of the adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the distributing corporation at the time of distribution increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the distributing corporation by reason of such distribution. In no event shall the amount of the dividend in property other than money be treated as an amount greater than the fair market value of such property received by the shareholder. For definition of the term "adjusted net income" see section 13 (a) (1) and § 39.13-1.

§ 39.26 (c) Statutory provisions; credits of corporations; net operating loss of preceding year

SEC. 26. Credits of corporations. In the case of a corporation the following credits shall be allowed to the extent provided in the various sections imposing tax—* * *

(c) Net operating loss of preceding year—(1) Amount of credit. The amount of net operating loss (as defined in paragraph (2)) of the corporation for the preceding taxable year * * * but not in excess of (A) the section 102 net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed by section 102; (B) the Supplement P net income for the taxable year, in the case of the computations required under Supplement P· or (C) the Subchapter A net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed under Subchapter A.

(2) Definition. As used in this section the term "net operating loss" means the excess of the deductions allowed by this chapter over the gross income, with the following exceptions and limitations—

(A) The deduction for depletion shall not exceed the amount which would be allowable if computed without reference to discovery value or to percentage depletion under section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4);

(B) There shall be included in computing gross income the amount of interest received which is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter, decreased by the amount of interest paid or accrued which is not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (b), relating to interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry certain tax-exempt obligations.

(C) For the purposes of this paragraph, the net operating loss deduction provided in section 122 shall not be allowed.

[Sec. 26 (c) as amended by sec. 211 (j), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 132 (a), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.26 (c)-1. Credit of corporation for net operating loss of preceding year (a) Since the net operating loss credit allowed by section 26 (c) cannot exceed the section 102 net income for the taxable year in the case of the tax imposed by section 102, the Supplement P net income for the taxable year in the case of the computations required under Supplement P or the subchapter A net income for the taxable year in the case of the tax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2, it is the smaller of the following amounts:

(1) The excess of the deductions allowed by chapter 1 for the preceding taxable year over gross income for such year, both computed in accordance with the exceptions and limitations provided by section 26 (c) (2)

(2) (i) The section 102 net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed by section 102; (ii) the Supplement P net income for the taxable year, in the case of the computations required under Supplement P· (iii) the subchapter A net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2.

(b) In computing deductions for the preceding taxable year any deduction for depletion shall be computed without reference to discovery value or percentage depletion under section 114 (b) (2), (3) or (4) (see § 39.23 (m)-2) The basis for such depletion is the basis provided in section 113 (a), adjusted as provided in section 113 (b), for the purpose of determining the gain upon the sale or other disposition of the property involved.

(c) In computing deductions for the preceding taxable year the net operating loss provided in section 122 shall not be allowed.

(d) In computing the gross income for the preceding taxable year there must be included the excess, if any, of the amount of any interest received which is wholly exempt from taxes imposed by chapter 1 over the amount of interest paid or accrued which is not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (b), relating to interest on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry certain tax-exempt obligations.

(e) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. For 1953 the X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has a net income of $750,000, computed on the accrual basis and without the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s), capital losses of $550,000, and no capital gains. Its Federal normal tax and surtax for 1953, not allowable as a deduction under section 23, are $20,500, and it made no contributions during that year. For 1952 its gross income was $500,000, and its allowable deductions were $1,500,000. Included in such deductions was $500,000 for net operating loss (attributable to 1951), allowed as a deduction under section 23 (s) and computed under section 122. There was likewise included in such deductions $300,000 for depletion based on discovery value. If depletion had been computed without reference to discovery value or to percentage depletion, the amount of such deduction would have been $100,000. For 1952 the corporation had $300,000 of wholly tax-exempt interest, and paid $200,000 in interest on indebtedness incurred to carry obligations from which such tax-exempt interest was derived. The net operating loss credit available to such corporation for 1953 is computed as follows:

Deductions for 1952		$1,500,000
Less: Excess of depletion deduction computed on basis of discovery value over amount allowable for depletion without reference to discovery value or percentage depletion ($300,000 minus $100,000)	$200,000
Net operating loss deduction	500,000	700,000
Deductions as limited by sections 26 (c) (2) (A) and 26 (c) (2) (C)		800,000
Gross income for 1952	$500,000
Plus tax-exempt interest minus interest paid ($300,000 minus $200,000)	100,000
Gross income contemplated by section 26 (c) (2) (B)		600,000
Excess of deductions over gross income for 1952		200,000
Net income for 1953 (computed without net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s))		750,000
Less: Capital losses not allowed by section 117 (d)	$550,000
Federal normal tax and surtax for 1953 not allowed as a deduction under section 23	20,500	570,500
Section 102 net income for 1953		179,500

The credit for the net operating loss for the preceding year available to the X Corporation for 1953 is $179,500. Inasmuch as the excess of deductions over gross income for 1952, as computed above, is greater than the section 102 net income for 1953, the net operating loss credit available to the X Corporation for 1953 is equal to the section 102 net income for 1953. If the excess of deductions over gross income for 1952, as computed above, were smaller than the section 102 net income for 1953, the entire amount of such excess would be allowed as the net operating loss for 1953.

(f) Similar rules for the computation of the net operating loss credit are applicable in the case of computations required under Supplement P or the tax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2.

SEC. 26. Credits of corporations. In the case of a corporation the following credits shall be allowed to the extent provided in the various sections imposing tax—* * *

(d) Bank affiliates. In the case of a holding company affiliate (as defined in section 2 of the Banking Act of 1933), the amount of the earnings or profits which the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System certifies to the Commissioner has been devoted by such affiliate during the taxable year to the acquisition of readily marketable assets other than bank stock in compliance with section 5144 of the Revised Statutes. The aggregate of the credits allowable under this subsection for all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935, shall not exceed the amount required to be devoted under such section 5144 to such purposes, and the amount of the credit for any taxable year shall not exceed the adjusted net income for such year.

§ 39.26 (d)-1 Bank affiliates. (a) The credit provided in section 26 (d) is allowed—

(1) To a holding company affiliate of a bank, as defined in section 2 of the Banking Act of 1933 (12 U. S. C. 221a) which holding company affiliate holds, at the end of the taxable year, a general voting permit granted by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System;

(2) In the amount of the earnings or profits of such holding company affiliate which, in compliance with section 5144 of the Revised Statutes (12 U. S. C. 61) has been devoted by it during the taxable year to the acquisition of readily marketable assets other than bank stock;

(3) Upon certification by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to the Commissioner that such an amount of the earnings or profits has been so devoted by such affiliate during the taxable year.

No credit is allowable under section 26 (d) for the amount of readily marketable assets in excess of what is required by such section 5144 to be acquired by such affiliate, or in excess of the adjusted net income for the taxable year. Nor may the aggregate of the credits allowable under section 26 (d) exceed the amount required to be devoted under such section 5144 to the acquisition of readily marketable assets other than bank stock.

(b) Every taxpayer claiming and making a deduction for the credit provided for in section 26 (d) shall attach to its return a supplementary statement, in duplicate, setting forth all the facts and information upon which the claim is predicated, including such facts and information as the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may prescribe as necessary to enable it, upon the request of the Commissioner subsequent to the filing of the return, to certify to the Commissioner the amount of earnings or profits devoted to the acquisition of such readily marketable assets. A certified copy of such supplementary statement shall be forwarded by the taxpayer to the Board of Governors at the time of the filing of the return. The holding company affiliate shall also furnish the Board of Governors such further information as the Board shall require. For the requirements with respect to the amount of such readily marketable assets which must be acquired and maintained by a holding company affiliate to which a voting permit has been granted, see section 5144 (b) and (c) of the Revised Statutes.

SEC 26. Credits of corporations. In the case of a corporation the following credits shall be allowed to the extent provided in the various sections imposing tax—* * *

(e) Income subject to excess profits tax. [Repealed by sec. 122 (g) (1), Rev. Act 1945.]

[Sec. 26 (f) as amended by sec. 105 (d), Rev. Act 1942]

[Sec. 26 (g) as amended by sec. 105 (d), Rev. Act 1942]

(h) Credit for Dividends Paid on Certain Preferred Stock—(1) Amount of credit. In the case of a public utility, (A) * * * [Applicable only to calendar year 1951], (B) for a taxable year beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, an amount equal to 27 per centum of the lesser of (i) the amount of dividends paid during the taxable year on its preferred stock or (ii) the adjusted net income for such taxable year minus the credit for dividends received provided in subsection (b) for such year, and (C) for a taxable year beginning after March 31, 1954, an amount equal to 30 per centum of the lower of (i) the amount of dividends paid during the taxable year on its preferred stock or (ii) the adjusted net income for such taxable year minus the credit for dividends received provided in subsection (b) for such year. For the purposes of the credit provided in this subsection the amount of dividends paid shall not include any amount distributed in the current taxable year with respect to dividends unpaid and accumulated in any taxable year ending prior to October 1, 1942. Amounts distributed in the current taxable year with respect to dividends unpaid and accumulated for a prior taxable year shall for the purposes of this paragraph be deemed to be distributed with respect to the earliest year or years for which there are dividends unpaid and accumulated. The credit provided in this subsection shall be subtracted from the basic surtax credit provided in section 27.

(2) Definitions. As used in this subsection, subsection (b), and sections 13 and 15—

(A) Public utility. The term "public utility" means a corporation engaged in the furnishing of telephone service or in the sale of electric energy, gas, or water, if the rates for such furnishing or sale, as the case may be, have been established or approved by a State or political subdivision thereof or by an agency or instrumentality of the United States or by a public utility or public service commission or other similar body of the District of Columbia or of any State or political subdivision thereof.

(B) Preferred stock. The term "preferred stock" means stock issued prior to October 1, 1942, which during the whole of the taxable year (or the part of the taxable year after its issue) was stock the dividends in respect of which were cumulative, limited to the same amount, and payable in preference to the payment of dividends on other stock. Stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, shall be deemed for the purposes of this paragraph to have been issued prior to October 1, 1942, if it was issued (including issuance either by the same or another corporation in a transaction which is a reorganization, as defined in section 112 (g) (1), or a transaction to which section 112 (b) (10), or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10), is applicable, or which is a transaction subject to Supplement R) to refund or replace bonds or debentures issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other preferred stock (including stock which is preferred stock by reason of this sentence), but only to the extent that the par or stated value of the new stock does not exceed the par, stated, or face value of the bonds or debentures issued prior to October 1, 1942, or the other preferred stock, which such new stock is issued to refund or replace. The determination of whether stock was issued to refund or replace bonds or debentures issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other preferred stock, shall be made under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

§ 39.26 (h)-1 Credit for dividends paid on preferred stock of public utilities—(a) Amount of credit. (1) A credit is provided in section 26 (h) for dividends paid during the taxable year by certain public utility corporations (see paragraph (b) of this section) on certain preferred stock (see paragraph (c) of this section) This credit is an amount equal to a specified percent of the lesser of (1) the amount of the dividends paid during the taxable year by a public utility on its preferred stock or (2) the adjusted net income of the public utility for such taxable year minus the credit for dividends received allowable to such public utility for such taxable year under section 26 (b). The specified percent applicable for the respective taxable years is as follows:

	Percent
For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954	27
For taxable years beginning after March 31, 1954	30

For taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, see § 39.108-2. However, the amount of dividends paid in a given taxable year shall not include any amount distributed in such year with respect to dividends unpaid and accumulated in any taxable year ending before October 1, 1942. If any distribution is made in the current taxable year with respect to dividends unpaid and accumulated for a prior taxable year, such distribution will be deemed to have been made with respect to the earliest year or years for which there are dividends unpaid and accumulated. Thus, if a public utility makes a distribution with respect to a prior taxable year, it shall be considered that such distribution was made with respect to the earliest year or years for which there are dividends unpaid and accumulated, whether or not the public utility states that the distribution was made with respect to such year or years and even though the public utility states that the distribution was made with respect to a later year. Even though it has dividends unpaid and accumulated with respect to a taxable year ending before October 1, 1942, a public utility may however, receive credit for dividends paid with respect to the current taxable year. If there are no dividends unpaid and accumulated with respect to a taxable year ending before October 1, 1942, a public utility may receive credit for dividends paid with respect to a prior taxable year which ended after October 1, 1942; and such credit may be in addition to a credit for dividends paid with respect to the current taxable year. However, if local law or its own charter requires a public utility to pay all unpaid and accumulated dividends before any dividends can be paid with respect to the current taxable year, such public utility will not receive credit for any distribution in the current taxable year to the extent that there are dividends unpaid and accumulated with respect to taxable years ending before October 1, 1942.

(2) The amount allowable as a credit under section 26 (h) shall be subtracted from the basic surtax credit otherwise computed under section 27 (b)

(b) Public Utility. As used in section 26 (h) and this section, public utility means a corporation engaged in the furnishing of telephone service, or in the sale of electric energy gas, or water if the rates charged by such corporation for such furnishing or sale, as the case may be, have been established or approved by a State or political subdivision thereof or by an agency or instrumentality of the United States or by a public utility or public service commission or other similar body of the District of Columbia or of any State or political subdivision thereof. If a schedule of rates has been filed with any of the above bodies having the power to disapprove such rates, then such rates shall be considered as established or approved rates even though such body has taken no action on the filed schedule. Rates fixed by contract between the corporation and the purchaser, except where the purchaser is the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or an agency or political subdivision of the United States, a State, or the District of Columbia, shall not be considered as established or approved rates in those cases where they are not subject to direct control, or where no maximum rate for such contract rates has been established by the United States, a State, the District of Columbia, or by an agency or political subdivision thereof. The credit provided in section 26 (h) will not be denied solely because part of the gross income of the corporation consists of revenue derived from such furnishing or sale at rates which are not so regulated, provided the corporation establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner (1) that the revenue from regulated rates and the revenue from unregulated rates are derived from the operation of a single interconnected and coordinated system within a single area or region in one or more States and (2) that the regulation to which it is subject in part of its operating territory is effective to control rates within the unregulated territory so that the rates within the unregulated territory have been and are substantially as favorable to users and consumers as are the rates within the regulated territory.

(c) Preferred stock. (1) For the purposes of section 26 (h) and this section, preferred stock means stock which was issued prior to October 1, 1942, and which during the whole of the taxable year (or the part of the taxable year after the actual date of its issue) was stock nonparticipating as to earnings or profits either currently or in liquidation, the dividends in respect of which were cumulative and payable in preference to the payment of dividends on other stock. In addition, the preferred stock must be such that the rate of return is fixed and cannot be changed by a vote of the board of directors or by some similar method. However, if there are several classes of preferred stock, all of which meet the above requirements, the credit provided in section 26 (h) shall not be denied in the case of a given class of preferred stock merely because there is another class of preferred stock whose dividends are to be paid before those of the given class of stock. Likewise, it is immaterial for the purposes of this section whether the stock be voting or nonvoting stock.

(2) Stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, under certain circumstances will be considered as having been issued before October 1, 1942, for purposes of the credit provided in section 26 (h) If the new stock is issued on or after October 1, 1942, to refund or replace bonds or debentures which were issued before October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other stock which was preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B) such new stock shall be considered as having been issued before October 1, 1942. If stock is issued to refund or replace stock which was preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B) it shall be immaterial whether the preferred stock so refunded or replaced was issued before, on, or after October 1, 1942. If stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, to refund or replace stock which was issued before October 1, 1942, and which was preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B), is not itself preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B) no stock issued to refund or replace such stock can be considered preferred stock for purposes of the credit provided in section 26 (h)

(3) In the case of any stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, to refund or replace bonds or debentures issued before October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other stock which was preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B) only that portion of the stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, will be considered as having been issued before October 1, 1942, the par or stated value of which does not exceed the par, stated, or face value of such bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock which the new stock was issued to refund or replace. In such case no shares of the new stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, shall be earmarked in determining the credit allowable under section 26 (h) but the appropriate allocable portion of the total amount of dividends paid on such stock will be considered as having been paid on stock which was issued before October 1, 1942.

(4) The provisions of section 26 (h) (2) (B) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A public utility has outstanding 1,000 bonds which were issued before October 1, 1942, and each of which has a face value of $100. On or after October 1, 1942, each of such bonds is retired in exchange for 1$\frac{1}{10}$ shares of stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, and having a par value of $100 per share. Only $\frac{10}{11}$ of the dividends paid on the stock thus issued in exchange for the bonds will be considered as having been paid on stock which was issued before October 1, 1942. Likewise, if stock which is issued on or after October 1, 1942, has no par value but a stated value of $50 per share and such stock is issued in a ratio of three shares to one share to refund or replace preferred stock having a par value of $100 per share, only two-thirds of the dividends paid on the new shares of stock will be considered as having been paid on stock which was issued before October 1, 1942.

(5) Whether or not stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, was issued to refund or replace bonds or debentures issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other preferred stock, is in each case a question of fact. Among the factors to be considered is whether such stock is new in an economic sense to the corporation or whether it was issued merely to take the place, directly or indirectly, of bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock of such corporation. It is not necessary that the new stock be issued in exchange for such bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock. The mere fact that the bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock remain in existence for a short period of time after the issuance of the new stock (or were retired before the issuance of the new stock) does not necessarily mean that such new stock was not issued to refund or replace such bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock. It is necessary to consider the entire transaction, including the issuance of the new stock, the date of such issuance, the retirement of the old bonds, debentures, or preferred stock, and the date of such retirement, in order to determine whether such new stock really was issued to take the place of bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock of the corporation or whether it represents something essentially new in an economic sense in the corporation's financial structure. If, for example, a public utility, which has outstanding bonds issued prior to October 1, 1942, issues new stock on March 1, 1944, in order to secure funds with which to retire such bonds and with the money paid in for such stock retires the bonds on April 1, 1944, such stock may be considered as having been issued to refund or replace bonds issued prior to October 1, 1942. Whether the money used to retire the bonds can be traced back and identified as the money paid in for the stock will have evidentiary value, but will not be conclusive, in determining whether the stock was issued to refund or replace the bonds. Similarly, whether the amount of money used to retire the bonds was smaller than, equal to, or greater than that paid in for the stock, or whether the entire issue of bonds is retired, will be important, but not decisive, in making such determination.

(6) Stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, by a corporation to refund or replace bonds or debentures of a second corporation which were issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other preferred stock of such second corporation, may be considered as having been issued prior to October 1, 1942, if such new stock was issued (1) in a transaction which is a reorganization within the meaning of section 112 (g) (1) or (2) in a transaction to which section 112 (b) (10) relating to reorganization of certain insolvent corporations, or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10) is applicable; or (3) in a transaction which is subject to the provisions of Supplement R, relating to exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Whether the stock actually was issued to refund or replace bonds or debentures of the second corporation issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace preferred stock of such second corporation, shall be determined under the same principles as if only one corporation were involved. A corporation may issue stock to refund or replace its own bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock in a transaction which is a reorganization within the meaning of section 112 (g) (1) in a transaction to which section 112 (b) (10) or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10) is applicable, or in a transaction which is subject to the provisions of Supplement R. The provisions of this paragraph (c) in addition, are applicable in case a corporation issues stock on or after October 1, 1942, to refund or replace its own bonds, debentures, or other preferred stock even though the issuance of such stock may not fall within one of the categories enumerated above.

(7) Even though stock issued on or after October 1, 1942, is considered as having been issued prior to October 1, 1942, by reason of having been issued to refund or replace bonds or debentures issued prior to October 1, 1942, or to refund or replace other preferred stock, such stock will not be deemed to be preferred stock within the meaning of section 26 (h) (2) (B), and no credit will be allowable in respect of dividends paid on such stock, unless the stock fulfills all the other requirements of a preferred stock set forth in section 26 (h) (2) (B) and in this paragraph.

(2) The dividend carry-over to such year, computed as provided in subsection (c);

(3), (4) * * * [Applicable only to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1940.]

[Sec. 27 (a) as amended by sec. 222 (a), Rev. Act 1939]

§ 39.27 (a)-1 Dividends paid credit. The amount of the dividends paid credit provided by section 27 (a) is an amount equivalent to the sum of the following:

(a) The basic surtax credit for the taxable year. For computation of the basic surtax credit see section 27 (b)

(b) The dividend carry-over to the taxable year. For computation of the dividend carry-over see section 27 (c)

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(b) Basic surtax credit. As used in this chapter the term "basic surtax credit" means the sum of:

(1) The dividends paid during the taxable year, increased by the consent dividends credit provided in section 28, and reduced by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations;

(2) The net operating loss credit provided in section 26 (c) (1);

(3) The bank affiliate credit provided in section 26 (d).

The aggregate of the amounts under paragraphs (2) and (3) shall not exceed (A) the section 102 net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed by section 102; (B) the Supplement P net income for the taxable year, in the case of the computations required under Supplement P; or (C) the Subchapter A net income for the taxable year, in the case of the tax imposed under Subchapter A.

§ 39.27 (b)-1 Basic surtax credit. The amount constituting the basic surtax credit of a corporation for the taxable year consists of the sum of the following, less the amount allowable as a credit under section 26 (h) (relating to the credit for dividends paid on certain preferred stock of certain public utility corporations) and less the amount allowable as a deduction under section 121 (relating to the deduction of dividends paid on certain preferred stock of certain banks and trust companies)

(a) The dividends paid during the taxable year (subject to the qualifications, limitations, and exceptions provided in section 27 (d) to 27 (i), inclusive) plus the consent dividends credit provided by section 28, less the credit for interest on certain obligations of the United States and its instrumentalities, provided by section 26 (a) and

(b) The smaller of the following:

(1) The sum of the net operating loss credit for the preceding taxable year provided in section 26 (c) (1) and the bank affiliate credit provided in section 26 (d).

(2) (i) The section 102 net income for the taxable year, in the case of tax imposed by section 102; (ii) the Supplement P net income for the taxable year, in the case of computations required under Supplement P or (iii) the subchapter A net income for the taxable year, in the case of tax imposed under subchapter A of chapter 2.

§ 39.27 (b)-2 Dividends paid—(a) When dividends are considered paid. (1)

A dividend will be considered as paid when it is received by the shareholder. An allowance for dividends paid will not be permitted unless the shareholder receives the dividend during the taxable year for which the credit is claimed.

(2) If a dividend is paid by check and the check bearing a date within the taxable year is deposited in the mails, in a cover properly stamped and addressed to the shareholder at his last known address, at such time that in the ordinary handling of the mails the check would be received by the shareholder within the taxable year, a presumption arises that the dividend was paid to the shareholder in such year.

(3) The payment of a dividend during the taxable year to the authorized agent of the shareholder will be deemed payment of the dividend to the shareholder during such year.

(4) If a corporation, instead of paying the dividend directly to the shareholder, credits the account of the shareholder on the books of the corporation with the amount of the dividend, the allowance for a dividend paid will not be permitted unless it be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such crediting constituted payment of the dividend to the shareholder within the taxable year.

(5) An allowance will not be permitted for the amount of a dividend credited during the taxable year upon an obligation of the shareholder to the corporation unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such crediting constituted payment of the dividend to the shareholder within the taxable year.

(6) In the case of a stock dividend, if the shares (other than fractional shares payable to bearer) constituting the dividend are not entered or registered on the books of the corporation in the name of the shareholder (or his nominee or transferee) within the taxable year, the dividend will not be deemed to have been paid in such year. Delivery of a certificate, or certificates, for such new shares, within the taxable year, consitutes prima facie evidence of the payment of the dividend.

(7) If the dividend is payable in obligations of the corporation, they should be entered or registered in the taxable year on the books of the corporation, in the name of the shareholder (or his nominee or transferee) and, in the case of obligations payable to bearer, should be received in the taxable year by the shareholder (or his nominee or transferee) to constitute payment of the dividend within the taxable year.

(8) In the case of a dividend from which the tax has been deducted and withheld as required by section 143 or 144, the dividend is considered as paid when such deducting and withholding occur.

(b) Methods of accounting. The determination of whether a dividend has been paid to the shareholder by the corporation during its taxable year is in no way dependent upon the method of accounting regularly employed by the corporation in keeping its books or upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income of the corporation is computed. See section 43.

(c) Records. Every corporation claiming an allowance for dividends paid shall keep such permanent records as are necessary (1) to establish that the dividends with respect to which such allowance is claimed were actually paid during the taxable year and (2) to supply the information required to be filed with the income tax return of the corporation. Such corporation shall file with its return (i) a copy of the dividend resolution; and (ii) a concise statement of the pertinent facts relating to the payment of the dividend, clearly specifying (a) the medium of payment and (b) if not paid in money, the fair market value and adjusted basis (or face value, if paid in its own obligations) on the date of distribution of the property distributed and the manner in which such fair market value and adjusted basis were determined. Canceled dividend checks and receipts obtained from shareholders acknowledging payment of dividends paid otherwise than by check need not be filed with the return but shall be kept by the corporation as a part of its records.

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(c) Dividend carry-over. There shall be computed with respect to each taxable year of a corporation a dividend carry-over to such year from the two preceding taxable years, which shall consist of the sum of—

(1) The amount of the basic surtax credit for the second preceding taxable year, reduced by the Subchapter A net income for such year, and further reduced by the amount, if any, by which the Subchapter A net income for the first preceding taxable year exceeds the sum of—

(A) The basic surtax credit for such year; and

(B) The excess, if any, of the basic surtax credit for the third preceding taxable year over the Subchapter A net income for such year; and

(2) The amount, if any, by which the basic surtax credit for the first preceding taxable year exceeds the Subchapter A net income for such year. In the case of a preceding taxable year referred to in this subsection, the Subchapter A net income shall be determined as if the corporation was, under the law applicable to such taxable year, a personal holding company.

[Sec. 27 (c) as amended by sec. 132 (c), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.27 (c)-1 Dividend carry-over (a) The dividend carry-over to a given taxable year is computed as follows:

(1) If the basic surtax credit for the first preceding taxable year exactly equals the subchapter A net income for such year, the dividend carry-over is the amount of the excess of the basic surtax credit for the second preceding taxable year over the subchapter A net income for such year.

(2) If the basic surtax credit for the first preceding taxable year exceeds the subchapter A net income for such year, the dividend carry-over is the amount of such excess plus the excess of the basic surtax credit for the second preceding taxable year over the subchapter A net income for such year.

(3) If the basic surtax credit for the first preceding taxable year is less than the subchapter A net income for such year, the dividend carry-over is the amount by which the basic surtax credit for the second preceding taxable year exceeds the subchapter A net income for such year reduced by the excess of the subchapter A net income for the first preceding taxable year over the sum of the basic surtax credit for such year and the excess of the basic surtax credit for the third preceding taxable year over the subchapter A net income for such year.

(b) In computing the dividend carry-over the subchapter A net income of any preceding taxable year shall be determined as if the corporation was, under the law applicable to such taxable year, a personal holding company.

(c) Every corporation claiming a dividend carry-over for any taxable year shall file with its return for such year a concise statement setting forth the amount of the dividend carry-over claimed and all material and pertinent facts relative thereto, including a detailed schedule showing the computation of the dividend carry-over claimed.

(d) The computation of the dividend carry-over may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has subchapter A net income of $150,000 and a basic surtax credit of $225,000 for 1949. For 1950 its subchapter A net income is $200,000 and its basic surtax credit is $350,000, and for 1951 its subchapter A net income and its basic surtax credit are each $175,000. Its dividend carry-over to 1952 is $150,000, computed as follows:

(1) Basic surtax credit for 1950	$350,000
(2) Less subchapter A net income for 1950	200,000
(3) Dividend carry-over to 1952 ((1) minus (2))	150,000

Since the basic surtax credit for 1951 exactly equals the subchapter A net income for that year, neither that year nor the year 1949 need be taken into account. The preceding taxable year (1951) is taken into account only if the basic surtax credit for such year exceeds the subchapter A net income for such year or if the subchapter A net income for such year exceeds the sum of the basic surtax credit for such year and the excess of the basic surtax credit for the third preceding taxable year (1949) over the subchapter A net income for such year. The third preceding taxable year (1949) is taken into account only if the subchapter A net income for the first preceding taxable year (1951) exceeds the basic surtax credit for such year, in which case it operates to reduce the amount of such excess which must be deducted from the carry-over from the second preceding taxable year (1950).

Example (2). The Y Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has subchapter A net income of $100,000 and a basic surtax credit of $150,000 for 1949. For 1950 its subchapter A net income is $50,000 and its basic surtax credit is $75,000, and for 1951 its subchapter A net income and its basic surtax credit are $25,000 and $100,000, respectively. Its dividend carry-over to 1952 is $100,000, computed as follows:

Year 1950
(1) Basic surtax credit	$75,000
(2) Less subchapter A net income	50,000
(3) Excess of basic surtax credit over subchapter A net income		$25,000
Year 1951
(4) Basic surtax credit	$100,000
(5) Less subchapter A net income	25,000
(6) Excess of basic surtax credit over subchapter A net income		75,000
(7) Dividend carry-over to 1952 (sum of (3) and (6))		100,000

For the reason why the year 1949 is not taken into account, see explanation at end of example (1).

Example (3). The Z Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has a subchapter A net income of $90,000, and a basic surtax credit of $150,000 for 1949. For 1950 its subchapter A net income is $60,000 and its basic surtax credit is $160,000, and for 1951 its subchapter A net income and its basic surtax credit are $120,000 and $25,000, respectively. Its dividend carry-over to 1952 is $65,000, computed as follows:

Year 1950
(1) Basic surtax credit			$160,000
(2) Less subchapter A net income			60,000
(3) Excess of basic surtax credit over subchapter A net income				$100,000
Year 1951
(4) Subchapter A net income			$120,000
(5) Basic surtax credit		$25,000
Year 1949
(6) Basic surtax credit	$150,000
(7) Less subchapter A net income	90,000
(8) Excess of basic surtax credit over subchapter A net income		60,000
(9) Sum of (5) and (8)			85,000
(10) Excess of subchapter A net income for the first preceding taxable year (1951)				35,000
(11) Dividend carry-over to 1952				65,000

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(d) Dividends in kind. If a dividend is paid in property other than money (including stock of the corporation if held by the corporation as an investment) the amount with respect thereto which shall be used in computing the basic surtax credit shall be the adjusted basis of the property in the hands of the corporation at the time of the payment, or the fair market value of the property at the time of the payment, whichever is the lower.

§ 39.27 (d)-1 Dividends in kind. (a) Section 27 (d) imposes limitations upon the extent to which dividends paid in assets (other than money) may be recognized for purposes of determining the amount of the allowance for dividends paid which may be included in the basic surtax credit. Irrespective of the form of the corporate resolution by which a dividend is declared, if the dividend is ultimately and actually paid by the corporation in any property other than money, constituting its corporate assets, the amount of the allowance for dividends paid to which the corporation is entitled with respect thereto cannot exceed the lesser of the two following amounts determined as of the time of payment:

(1) The adjusted basis of such property in the hands of the corporation as provided for in section 113; or

(2) The fair market value of such property.

(b) As used in this section, the term "property" includes shares of capital stock of the corporation making the dividend distribution if such shares of stock are held by it as an investment. Unless shown to the contrary, shares of capital stock once issued but thereafter acquired by the corporation in any manner whatsoever, but not retired, shall be deemed to be held by the corporation as an investment. The term "property" also includes obligations upon which the corporation making the distribution is liable as a guarantor, indorser, or surety.

(c) The application of section 27 (d) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The S Corporation, in 1944, purchased stock of the Y Corporation for $100,000. In 1952 such stock had a fair market value of $70,000. During the period of its ownership of such stock, the S Corporation received distributions amounting to $5,000 out of earnings or profits of the Y Corporation accumulated before March 1, 1913. In 1952 the S Corporation used such stock for the payment of a dividend. The allowance for dividends paid for purposes of inclusion in the basic surtax credit for 1952 is $70,000, computed as follows:

Purchase price, or cost of stock	$100,000
Less tax-free distribution	5,000
Adjusted basis of stock in the hands of the corporation at the time of the dividend payment	95,000
Fair market value of stock at the time of the dividend payment	70,000
Allowance for dividends paid for purposes of inclusion in the basic surtax credit for 1952	$70,000

Since the fair market value of the stock ($70,000) at the time of the dividend payment is less than the adjusted basis ($95,000) of the stock in the hands of the corporation at the time of the dividend payment, the lesser amount ($70,000) should be used as the allowance for dividends paid for purposes of computing the basic surtax credit for 1952 with respect to such stock.

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(e) Dividends in obligations of the corporation. If a dividend is paid in obligations of the corporation, the amount with respect thereto which shall be used in computing the basic surtax credit shall be the face value of the obligations, or their fair market value at the time of the payment, whichever is the lower. If the fair market value of any such dividend paid in any taxable year of the corporation beginning after December 31, 1935, is lower than the face value, then when the obligation is redeemed by the corporation the excess of the amount for which redeemed over the fair market value at the time of the dividend payment (to the extent not allowable as a deduction in computing net income for any taxable year) shall be treated as a dividend paid in the taxable year in which the redemption occurs.

§ 39.27 (e)-1 Dividends in obligations of the corporation. (a) Section 27 (e) is concerned solely with the amount of the allowance for dividends paid for purposes of inclusion in the basic surtax credit to the extent that dividends are paid by a corporation in its own obligations. If the corporation ultimately pays a dividend in its own obligations (regardless of the form of the corporate resolution by which the dividend is declared) the amount of the allowance for dividends paid to which it is entitled with respect thereto for the year in which such dividend is paid is limited to the lesser of the face value or fair market value of such obligations as of the date of payment. If in a taxable year of the corporation beginning after December 31, 1935, the allowance for dividends paid as of the date of payment is limited to the fair market value of the corporate obligations distributed and the corporation redeems such obligations, the corporation becomes entitled to an additional allowance for dividends paid in computing the basic surtax credit for the taxable year in which it redeems such obligations, but only in the event that the amount at which such obligations are redeemed is higher than their fair market value at the time of the distribution. The amount of such additional allowance is the excess of the price at which such obligations are redeemed over their fair market value at the time of the distribution, subject to the restriction that such excess be diminished by any amounts which were allowable as deductions for amortized bond discount or bond issue commissions and expenses allocable to the obligations redeemed in computing the net income of the corporation for any taxable year. A corporation is entitled to such additional allowance regardless of the identity of the holders of the obligations at the time of their redemption.

(b) As used in this section, the term "obligations" means any legal liability on the part of the corporation (not including liability as a guarantor, indorser, or surety) regardless of when incurred, to pay a fixed or determinable sum of money evidenced in writing executed by the corporation. As used in this section, the term "redeemed" includes (1) repurchase in the open market for investment or sinking fund purposes, (2) retirement, or (3) cancellation of the obligations before, at, or after maturity.

(c) The application of section 27 (e) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, declared a dividend of $85,000 in 1946, payable in that year in its 5 percent bonds at 85. Pursuant to such declaration, bonds having an aggregate face value of $100,000 were issued during 1946 in payment of the dividend. The fair market value of the bonds at the time of issuance was $75,000. The dividends paid credit for 1946 was the fair market value of the bonds at the time of the dividend payment ($75,000), since such fair market value was lower than the face value ($100,000) of the obligations.

The bonds were redeemed in 1952. The corporation prior to the redemption of the bonds at face value deducted in its returns over the life of the bonds the $15,000 bond discount resulting from the payment in 1946 of the $85,000 dividend in bonds having a face value of $100,000. The allowance for dividends paid for purposes of computing the basic surtax credit with respect to the bond redemption for the taxable year 1952, in which the redemption of the bonds occurs, is $10,000, computed as follows:

Redemption price of bonds	$100,000
Less fair market value of bonds when dividend was paid in 1946	75,000
Difference	25,000
Less bond discount allowed as a deduction in computing net income	15,000
Amount treated as dividend paid in 1952	10,000

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(f) Taxable stock dividends. In case of a stock dividend or stock right which is a taxable dividend in the hands of shareholders under section 115 (f), the amount with respect thereto which shall be used in computing the basic surtax credit shall be the fair market value of the stock or the stock right at the time of payment.

§ 39.27 (f)-1 Taxable stock dividends. The allowance for dividends paid provided by section 27 (b) (1) is limited by section 27 (f) in the case of distributions in the form of stock dividends or stock rights, to distributions which are taxable dividends in the hands of shareholders under section 115 (f) Such allowance, however, is limited in amount to the fair market value of such stock or stock rights at the time of payment of the dividend. As to a distribution by a corporation of its own capital stock held as an investment, see § 39.27 (d)-1.

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(g) Distributions in liquidation. In the case of amounts distributed in liquidation the part of such distribution which is properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, shall, for the purposes of computing the basic surtax credit under this section, be treated as a taxable dividend paid.

§ 39.27(g)-1 Dividends paid credit for distributions in liquidation—(a) Distributions which diminish earnings or profits. (1) To the general rule that an allowance for dividends paid is permitted only with respect to taxable dividends paid, section 27 (g) makes one exception, namely, for that part of an amount distributed in liquidation which, under the Internal Revenue Code, constitutes a distribution of, and is properly chargeable to, earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913. Thus, a distribution either in complete or partial liquidation of a corporation is treated by the Code as one constituting in part a distribution of, and being properly chargeable to, earnings or profits, if—

(i) Under the provisions of section 115 (c) the amounts distributed in liquidation are treated as received in payment in exchange for the stock; and

(ii) Under the provisions of section 112, the gain or loss, if any, from such exchange is recognized or the gain is taxed as provided in section 112 (b) (7)

In such a case, an allowance for dividends paid may be included in the basic surtax credit for the amount actually involved in such distribution which is properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, even though the method of taxation of the distribution is that ordinarily employed with respect to the gain or loss realized and recognized upon an exchange, rather than that employed with respect to a taxable dividend.

(2) On the other hand, certain transactions described in sections 112 and 115 are treated, for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, not as distributions to the shareholders of earnings or profits, but as transfers of such earnings or profits intact to another corporation in whose hands such earnings or profits, being available for distribution by it as dividends to its shareholders, have essentially the same status for the purposes of the Code as earnings or profits derived from its own operations. Characteristic of these transactions is the circumstance that the gain or loss realized from the receipt by the shareholders of property is not recognized by the Code. No allowance for dividends paid is permissible with respect to such transactions.

(b) Amount properly chargeable to earnings or profits. (1) In the case of a distribution in liquidation with respect to which an allowance for dividends paid is permissible (see paragraph (a) of this section) the amount of the allowance is equal to the part of such distribution which is properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913. To determine the amount properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, there must be deducted from the amount of the distribution that part allocable to capital account. The capital account, for the purposes of this section, includes not only amounts representing the par or stated value of the stock with respect to which the liquidating distribution is being made but also that stock's proper share of the paid-in surplus, and such other corporate items, if any, which, for purposes of income taxation, are treated like capital in that they are not taxable dividends when distributed but are applied against and reduce the basis of the stock. The remainder of the distribution in liquidation is, ordinarily, properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The Y Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, was organized on January 1, 1910, with an authorized and outstanding capital stock of 2,000 shares of common stock of a par value of $100 each and 1,000 shares of participating preferred stock of a par value of $100 each. The preferred stock was to receive annual dividends of $7 per share and $100 per share on complete liquidation of the corporation in priority to any payments on common stock, and was to participate equally with the common stock in either instance after the common stock had received a similar amount. However, the preferred stock was redeemable in whole or in part at the option of the board of directors at any time at $100 per share plus its proportion of the earnings of the company at the time of such redemption. In 1910 the preferred stock was issued at $106 per share, for a total of $106,000, and the common stock was issued, at $100 per share, for a total of $200,000. On July 15, 1952, the company had a paid-in surplus of $6,000, consisting of the premium received on the preferred stock; earnings or profits of $30,000 accumulated prior to March 1, 1913; and earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, of $75,000. On July 15, 1952, the option with respect to the preferred stock was exercised and the entire amount of such stock was redeemed at $141 per share or a total of $141,000 in a transaction upon which gain or loss to the distributees resulting from the exchange was determined and recognized under the Internal Revenue Code, such transaction being only a partial liquidation under section 115 (c). The amount of the distribution allocable to capital account was $116,000 ($100,000 attributable to par value, $6,000 attributable to paid-in surplus, and $10,000 attributable to earnings or profits accumulated prior to March 1, 1913). The remainder, $25,000 ($141,000, the amount of the distribution, less $116,000, the amount allocable to capital account) is properly chargeable to the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, and is allowable as dividends paid.

(c) Credit in respect of earnings or profits transferred under certain tax-free transactions. (1) If, as a result of one or more transactions described in section 112, a corporation's earnings or profits accumulated after February 28,

1913, and its undistributed earnings or profits of the taxable year, shall have become the earnings or profits of another corporation subject to distribution as dividends by such other corporation, any dividend paid by the transferee corporation during that portion of the transferor's taxable year subsequent to the consummation of such tax-free transaction may, subject to the provisions of section 115, be apportioned and allocated to the transferor as a distribution out of such earnings or profits of the transferor. The resolution of the board of directors of the transferee shall specifically designate the distribution, or part thereof, so apportioned and allocated. For the purposes of the allowance for dividends paid, any such distribution so allocated shall be treated as a dividend paid only in the computation of the basic surtax credit allowable to the transferor, and must be consistently so treated by both corporations for the current and succeeding taxable years. Each corporation shall file as part of its return for the taxable year involved (i) a statement setting forth concisely all of the material facts, including the date and the character of the transaction under section 112, the status at that time of the earnings or profits of both corporations, the date and amount of all dividend distributions subsequently made, and the particular distribution or portion thereof designated as effecting a distribution of the earnings or profits of the transferor corporation, and (ii) a certified copy of the resolution of the board of directors of the transferee corporation with respect to the distribution. No allowance for dividends paid based upon such apportionment and allocation will be permitted unless the Commissioner is satisfied that the transferor corporation is entitled thereto pursuant to the provisions of this paragraph and that there has been a full compliance with the requirements of this paragraph.

(2) The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The P Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the basis of a fiscal year ending March 31, owned all of the capital stock of the S Corporation. The S Corporation, which makes its returns on the calendar year basis, was completely liquidated on December 1, 1952. At that time, the S Corporation had earnings or profits accumulated subsequent to February 28, 1913, in the amount of $50,000, in addition to earnings or profits for 1952 of $20,000, and an adjusted net income of $45,000. It had paid no dividends prior to its liquidation. The P Corporation had earnings or profits accumulated subsequent to February 28, 1913, in the amount of $60,000 in addition to earnings or profits of the taxable year computed as of March 31, 1953, in the amount of $80,000, and an adjusted net income in the amount of $60,000. The P Corporation pays dividends as follows: June 15, 1952, $25,000; September 15, 1952, $25,000; December 15, 1952, $25,000; and March 15, 1953, $25,000. No portion of the dividends paid on June 15 and September 15 prior to the liquidation and no portion of the dividend paid on March 15, 1953, after the close of the taxable year of the S Corporation may be allocated to the S Corporation. The dividend paid on December 15 may, by appropriate corporate action, be made as one effecting a distribution out of the current earnings or profits of the S Corporation to the extent of $20,000. No part of that distribution may be allocated to the S Corporation's accumulated earnings or profits since, under section 115 (b), the earnings or profits of the P Corporation and the S Corporation for the taxable year ($100,000) are sufficient in amount to cover all the distributions made during that year ($100,000).

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(h) Preferential dividends. The amount of any distribution (although each portion thereof is received by a shareholder as a taxable dividend), not made in connection with a consent distribution (as defined in section 28 (a) (4)), shall not be considered as dividends paid for the purpose of computing the basic surtax credit, unless such distribution is pro rata, with no preference to any share of stock as compared with other shares of the same class, and with no preference to one class of stock as compared with another class except to the extent that the former is entitled (without reference to waivers of their rights by shareholders) to such preference.

For a distribution made in connection with a consent distribution, see section 28.

§ 39.27 (h)-1 Preferential distributions. (a) Section 27 (h) imposes a limitation upon the general rule that a corporation is entitled to an allowance for dividends paid with respect to all dividends which it actually pays during the taxable year. Before a corporation may be entitled to any such allowance with respect to a distribution, regardless of the medium in which the distribution is made, every shareholder of the class of stock with respect to which the distribution is made must be treated the same as every other shareholder of that class, and no class of stock may be treated otherwise than in accordance with its dividend rights as a class. The limitation imposed by section 27 (h) is unqualified, except in the case of a partial distribution (see section 28 (a) (5)) made in connection with a consent distribution, as defined in section 28 (a) (4) if the entire distribution composed of such partial distribution and consent distribution (see section 28 (e)) is not preferential. The existence of a preference is sufficient to prohibit allowance regardless of the fact (1) that such preference is authorized by all the shareholders of the corporation, or (2) that the part of the distribution received by the shareholder benefited by the preference is taxable to him as a dividend. A corporation will not be entitled to an allowance for dividends paid with respect to any distribution upon a class of stock if there is distributed to any shareholder of such class (in proportion to the number of shares held by him) more or less than his pro rata part of the distribution as compared with the distribution made to any other shareholder of the same class. Nor will a corporation be entitled to an allowance for dividends paid in the case of any distribution upon a class of stock if there is distributed upon such class of stock more or less than the amount to which it is entitled as compared with any other class of stock. A preference exists if any rights to preference inherent in any class of stock are violated. The disallowance, where any preference in fact exists, extends to the entire amount of the distribution and not merely to a part of such distribution. As used in this section, the term "distribution" includes a dividend as defined in section 115, and a distribution in liquidation referred to in section 27 (g)

(b) The application of the provisions of section 27 (h) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, B, C, and D are the owners of all the shares of class A common stock in the M Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on a calendar year basis. With the consent of all the shareholders, the M Corporation, on July 15, 1952, declared a dividend of $5 a share payable in cash on August 1, 1952, to A. On September 15, 1952, it declared a dividend of $5 a share payable in cash on October 1, 1952, to B, C, and D. No allowance for dividends paid for the taxable year 1952 is permitted to the M Corporation with respect to any part of the dividends paid on August 1, 1952, and October 1, 1952.

Example (2). The N Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has a capital of $100,000 (consisting of 1,000 shares of common stock of a par value of $100) and earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, in the amount of $50,000. In the year 1952 the N Corporation distributes $7,500 in cancellation of 50 shares of the stock owned by three of the four shareholders of the corporation. No allowance for dividends paid is permissible under section 27 (h) with respect to such distribution.

Example (3). The P Corporation has two classes of stock outstanding, 10 shares of cumulative preferred, owned by E, entitled to $5 per share and on which no dividends have been paid for two years, and 10 shares of common, owned by F. On December 31, 1952, the corporation distributes a dividend of $125, $50 to E and $75 to F. The corporation is entitled to no allowance for any part of such dividend paid, since there has been a preference to F. If, however, the corporation had distributed $100 to E and $25 to F, it would have been entitled to include $125 in its basic surtax credit as a dividend paid.

SEC. 27. Corporation dividends paid credit. * * *

(i) Nontaxable distributions. If any part of a distribution (including stock dividends and stock rights) is not a taxable dividend in the hands of such of the shareholders as are subject to taxation under this chapter for the period in which the distribution is made, such part shall not be included in computing the basic surtax credit.

§ 39.27 (i)-1 Nontaxable distributions. (a) No allowance for dividends paid is permitted with respect to any part of the distribution by a corporation to its shareholders which is—

(1) Not out of earnings or profits of the taxable year or out of earnings or profits of the corporation accumulated subsequent to February 28, 1913 (see section 115) or, in the case of distributions in liquidation, not properly chargeable to earnings or profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, under section 27 (g)

(2) In the case of a corporation which was classified as a personal service corporation under the Revenue Act of 1918 or the Revenue Act of 1921, out of earnings or profits which were taxable in accordance with the provisions of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1921 (see section 115 (e)) or

(3) A distribution in stock of the corporation or rights to acquire its stock which does not constitute income to its shareholders within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution (see section 115 (f))

(b) The effect of sections 27 (h) and (i) is that no allowance for dividends paid may be included in the basic surtax credit with respect to any distribution unless each of the shareholders of that class, who are subject to taxation under chapter 1 for the period in which the distribution is made, receives a taxable dividend as a result of the distribution. (See also section 27 (g).)

(c) The application of section 27 (i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, B, and C are shareholders of the Y Corporation, a personal holding company, which makes its returns on the basis of a fiscal year ending July 31. A is an educational corporation exempt from income tax under section 101. On July 15, 1952, the Y Corporation distributed $90,000 in cash to its shareholders, $30,000 to each. The Y Corporation had a deficit in earnings and profits as of the beginning of its taxable year in the amount of $200,000, but had a subchapter A net income for the taxable year in the amount of $90,000. Its earnings and profits for the taxable year were only $50,000. It was entitled under section 26 (c) (1) to a net operating loss credit of $30,000. The distributions from the Y Corporation will constitute a taxable dividend in the hands of B and C only to the extent of $40,000, $20,000 to each (the amount of $30,000 reduced by a proportionate part of the net operating loss credit.) See § 39.115 (a)-1. The Y Corporation, accordingly, will be entitled to an allowance for dividends paid in the amount of $70,000 with respect to the distribution on July 15.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit—(a) Definitions. As used in this section—

(1) Consent stock. The term "consent stock" means the class or classes of stock entitled, after the payment of preferred dividends (as defined in paragraph (2)), to a share in the distribution (other than in complete or partial liquidation) within the taxable year of all the remaining earnings or profits, which share constitutes the same proportion of such distribution regardless of the amount of such distribution.

(2) Preferred dividends. The term "preferred dividends" means a distribution (other than in complete or partial liquidation), limited in amount, which must be made on any class of stock before a further distribution (other than in complete or partial liquidation) of earnings or profits may be made within the taxable year.

(3) Consent dividends day. The term "consent dividends day" means the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, unless during the last month of such year there have occurred one or more days on which was payable a partial distribution (as defined in paragraph (5)), in which case it means the last of such days.

(4) Consent distribution. The term "consent distribution" means the distribution which would have been made if on the consent dividends day (as defined in paragraph (3)) there had actually been distributed in cash and received by each shareholder making a consent filed by the corporation under subsection (d), the specific amount stated in such consent.

(5) Partial distribution. The term "partial distribution" means such part of an actual distribution, payable during the last month of the taxable year of the corporation, as constitutes a distribution on the whole or any part of the consent stock (as defined in paragraph (1)), which part of the distribution, if considered by itself and not in connection with a consent distribution (as defined in paragraph (4)), would be a preferential distribution, as defined in paragraph (6).

(6) Preferential distribution. The term "preferential distribution" means a distribution which is not pro rata, or which is with preference to any share of stock as compared with other shares of the same class, or to any class of consent stock as compared with any other class of consent stock.

§ 39.28 (a)-1 Consent stock. (a) As defined in section 28 (a) (1) the term "consent stock" includes what is generally known as common stock. It also includes participating preferred stock, the participation rights of which are unlimited.

(b) The application of section 28 (a) (1) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If in the case of the X Corporation there is only one class of stock outstanding, it would all be consent stock. If, on the other hand, there were two classes of stock, class A and class B, and class A was entitled to 6 percent before any distribution could be made on class B, but class B was entitled to everything distributed after class A had received its 6 percent, only class B stock would be consent stock. Similarly, if class A, after receiving its 6 percent, was to participate equally or in some fixed proportion with class B until it had received a second 6 percent, after which class B alone was entitled to any further distributions, only class B stock would be consent stock. The same result would follow if the order of preferences were class A 6 percent, then class B 6 percent, then class A a second 6 percent, either alone or in conjunction with class B, then class B the remainder. If, however, class A stock is entitled to ultimate participation without limit as to amount, then it, too, may be consent stock. For example, if class A is to receive 3 percent and then share equally or in some fixed proportion with class B in the remainder of the earnings or profits distributed, both class A stock and class B stock are consent stock.

§ 39.28 (a)-2 Preferred dividends. (a) As defined in section 28 (a) (2) the term "preferred dividend" includes all fixed amounts (whether determined by percentage of par value, a stated return expressed in a certain number of dollars per share, or otherwise) the distribution (other than in liquidation) of which on any class of stock is a condition precedent to a further distribution (other than in liquidation) of earnings or profits. A distribution, though expressed in terms of a fixed amount, is not a preferred dividend, however, unless it is preferred over a subsequent distribution within the taxable year upon some other class or classes of stock than the one on which it is payable.

(b) The application of section 28 (a) (2) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If, in the case of the X Corporation, there are only two classes of stock outstanding, class A and class B, and class A is entitled to a distribution of 6 percent of par, after which the balance of the earnings and profits are distributable on class B exclusively, class A's 6 percent is a preferred dividend. If the order of preferences is class A $6 per share, class B $6 per share, then class A and class B in fixed proportions until class A receives $3 more per share, then class B the remainder, all of class A's $9 per share and $6 per share of the amount distributable on class B are preferred dividends. The amount which class B is entitled to receive in conjunction with the payment to class A of its last $3 per share is not a preferred dividend, because the payment of such amount is preferred over no subsequent distribution except one made on class B itself. Finally, if a distribution must be $6 on class A, $6 on class B, then on class A and class B share and share alike, the distribution on class A of $6 and the distribution on class B of $6 are both preferred dividends.

§ 39.28 (a)-3 Consent dividends day. The term "consent dividends day" is defined in section 28 (a) (3) If there was no partial distribution (as defined in section 28 (a) (5)) payable during the last month of the corporation's taxable year, the consent dividends day is the last day of such taxable year. If there were one or more days during such last month on which was payable a partial distribution, the consent dividends day is the last of such days. The day upon which shareholders, under the terms of the resolution of the board of directors directing the distribution, are entitled to receive the distribution is the day it is payable.

§ 39.28 (a)-4 Consent distribution. (a) As defined in section 28 (a) (4), the term "consent distribution" does not include any actual distributions but is limited to the hypothetical distribution evidenced by shareholders' consents. The consent distribution equals the aggregate of all the amounts specified in the several consents, whether or not, if actually distributed, such amounts would have constituted in whole or in part a return of capital.

(b) Section 28 (a) (4) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only one class of stock outstanding, consisting of 500 shares, 200 of which are owned by A, and 300 by B. On December 15, 1952, the corporation distributes to A $5 per share, or $1,000. On December 31, 1952, B executes a consent to include $1,500 in his gross income as a taxable dividend. At the beginning of 1952 the corporation had no accumulated earnings or profits. For the taxable year 1952 the earnings or profits are $2,000. Nevertheless the corporation will be deemed to have made a consent distribution of $1,500 on December 15.

§ 39.28 (a)-5 Partial distribution. (a) As defined in section 28 (a) (5), the term "partial distribution" does not include preferred dividends even though payable on consent stock.

(b) The application of section 28 (a) (5) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only two classes of stock outstanding, class A and class B, each of which is consent stock. Class A, consisting of 500 shares, is entitled to a preference of $3 per share, after which class B, consisting of 500 shares, is to receive $3 per share, whereupon class A and class B are entitled to share equally in any further distributions of earnings or profits. On December 15, 1952, the X Corporation distributes $6 per share or $3,000 on class A stock, and $3 per share or $1,500 on class B stock. Such distribution, to the extent of $1,500 paid on class A stock, is a partial distribution.

§ 39.28 (a)-6 Preferential distribution. (a) A preferential distribution is an actual distribution (other than the distribution of a preferred dividend as defined in section 28 (a) (2)) or a consent distribution, or a combination of the two, upon consent stock, which involves a preference to one or more shares of stock as compared with other shares of the same class or to one class of consent stock as compared with any other class of consent stock. Such a preference exists if there is distributed to any shareholder (in proportion to the number of shares held by him) more or less than his pro rata part of a distribution as compared with the distribution made to any other shareholder of the same class, or if there is distributed to all the shareholders of one class of consent stock in the aggregate more or less than their pro rata part of a distribution as compared with the distribution made to all the shareholders of any other class of consent stock. If such preference exists, the entire distribution is preferential.

(b) Section 28 (a) (6) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has one class of consent stock outstanding, owned in equal amounts by A, B, and C. On December 15, 1952, the corporation makes a distribution in cash of $5,000 each to A and B, and $3,000 to C. The distribution is preferential. If A and B each receives a distribution in cash of $5,000 and C consents to include $3,000 in gross income as a taxable dividend, the combined actual and consent distribution is preferential. Similarly, if no one receives a distribution in cash, but A and B each consents to include $5,000 as a taxable dividend in gross income but C agrees to include only $3,000, the consent distribution is preferential.

Example (2). The Y Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only two classes of stock outstanding, each class being consent stock and consisting of 500 shares. Class A, with a par value of $40 per share, is entitled to two-thirds of any distribution of earnings and profits. Class B, with a par value of $20 per share, is entitled to one-third of any distribution of earnings and profits. On December 15, 1952, there is distributed on the class A stock $2 per share, or $1,000, and on the class B stock $2 per share, or $1,000. The distribution is preferential, inasmuch as the class B stock has received more than its pro rata share of the distribution.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *

(b) Corporations not entitled to credit. A corporation shall not be entitled to a consent dividends credit with respect to any taxable year—

(1) Unless, at the close of such year, all preferred dividends (for the taxable year and, if cumulative, for prior taxable years) have been paid; or

(2) If, at any time during such year, the corporation has taken any steps in, or in pursuance of a plan of, complete or partial liquidation of all or any part of the consent stock.

§ 39.28 (b)-1 Payment of preferred dividends. Section 28 (b) (1) provides that a corporation shall not be entitled to a consent dividends credit for any taxable year, regardless of compliance with other requirements of section 28, unless at the close of such year all preferred dividends (for the taxable year and, if cumulative, for prior taxable years) have been paid. Whatever form such payment takes, it must result in the complete discharge of the obligation of the corporation to pay such dividends. For what constitutes payment of a dividend before the close of the taxable year, see § 39.27 (b)-2. For what constitutes a preferred dividend see section 28 (a) (2). A preferred dividend will be considered paid for the purposes of this requirement, even though it is paid as part of a preferential dividend as defined in section 27 (h) and the corporation receives no credit for dividends paid in consequence thereof.

§ 39.28 (b)-2 Liquidation of consent stock. (a) (1) A corporation is not entitled to a consent dividends credit for any taxable year in which it has taken any steps in, or in pursuance of a plan of, complete or partial liquidation of all or any part of the consent stock.

(2) The application of section 28 (b) (2) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has outstanding on January 1, 1952, 1,000 shares of class A stock, the dividend rights of which are limited to an annual return of $6 per share. It also has outstanding on that date 1,000 shares of class B stock, which is entitled to receive the entire amount of any distribution made of earnings or profits within the taxable year after the payment on class A stock of $6 per share. On April 1, 1952, the corporation makes a distribution in partial liquidation, whereby five shares of class B stock (consent stock) are canceled or redeemed. The corporation is barred from obtaining a consent dividends credit for the taxable year, regardless of compliance with other requirements of section 28. If, however, class A stock (not consent stock), instead of class B stock, had been canceled or redeemed in the liquidation, the corporation would not be barred, because of such liquidation, from obtaining a consent dividends credit.

(b) The mere purchase by a corporation of its own stock for investment is not, within the meaning of section 28 (b) (2) the taking of any step in, or in pursuance of a plan of, complete or partial liquidation and will not prevent a corporation from obtaining a consent dividends credit for the taxable year.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *

(c) Allowance of credit. There shall be allowed to the corporation, as a part of its basic surtax credit for the taxable year, a consent dividends credit equal to such portion of the total sum agreed to be included in the gross income of shareholders by their consents filed under subsection (d) as it would have been entitled to include in computing its basic surtax credit if actual distribution of an amount equal to such total sum had been made in cash and each shareholder making such a consent had received, on the consent dividends day, the amount specified in the consent.

§ 39.28 (c)-1 Amount of consent dividends credit. (a) The consent dividends credit forms part of the basic surtax credit. It consists of the amount which the corporation would be permitted to include in its basic surtax credit as a dividend paid if it had distributed to each shareholder whose consent has been filed pursuant to section 28 (d) and each such shareholder had received, on the consent dividends day (see section 28 (a) (3)) an amount equal to the amount specified in such consent. The amount of the consent dividends credit, therefore, cannot exceed the sum of the amounts specified in the several consents. It may, however, regardless of the fact that such amounts are treated and taxed in their entirety to the consenting shareholders as a dividend (see section 28 (f)) be smaller than the sum of the specified amounts, because it is limited to the amount which would have been allowed as dividends paid if an actual distribution had been made.

(b) The provisions of section 28 (c) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only one class of stock outstanding, owned in equal amounts by A and B. It makes no distributions during the taxable year. Its earnings and profits for the calendar year 1952 amount to $8,000, there being at the beginning of such year no accumulated earnings or profits. A and B execute proper consents to include $5,000 each in their gross income as a dividend received by them on December 31, 1952. The sum of the amount specified in the consents executed by A and B is $10,000, but if $10,000 had actually been distributed by the X Corporation on December 31, 1952, only $8,000 would have constituted a dividend. The allowance for dividends paid, includible in the computation of the basic surtax credit, would have amounted to only $8,000. The consent dividends credit of the corporation, therefore, is limited to $8,000.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *

(d) Shareholders' consents. The corporation shall not be entitled to a consent dividends credit with respect to any taxable year—

(1) Unless it files (in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) with its return for such year, or within one year after the date of enactment of the Revenue Act of 1942, in the case of a corporation which is a personal holding company for the taxable year with respect to which it claims the benefits of this section, signed consents made under oath by persons who were shareholdzers, on the last day of the taxable year, of the corporation, of any class of consent stock; and

(2) Unless in each such consent the shareholder agrees that he will include as a taxable dividend, in his return for the taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends, a specific amount; and

(3) Unless the consents filed are made by such of the shareholders and the amount specified in each consent is such, that the consent distribution would not have been a preferential distribution—

(A) If there was no partial distribution during the last month of the taxable year of the corporation, or

(B) If there was such a partial distribution, then when considered in connection with such partial distribution;

and

(4) Unless in each consent made by a shareholder who is taxable with respect to a dividend only if received from sources within the United States, such shareholder agrees that the specific amount stated in the consent shall be considered as a dividend received by him from sources within the United States; and

(5) Unless each consent filed is accompanied by cash, or such other medium of payment as the Commissioner may by regulations authorize, in an amount equal to the amount that would be required by section 143 (b) or 144 to be deducted and withheld by the corporation if the amount specified in the consent had been, on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, paid to the shareholder in cash as a dividend. The amount accompanying the consent shall be credited against the tax imposed by section 211 (a) or 231 (a) upon the shareholder.

§ 39.28 (d)–1 Making and filing of consents. (a) A consent shall be made in duplicate on Form 972 in accordance with this section and the instructions on the form or issued therewith and may be made only by or on behalf of a person who was the actual owner on the last day of the corporation's taxable year of any class of consent stock, i. e., the person who would have been required to include in gross income any dividends on such stock actually distributed on the last day of such year. Form 972 shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury In the consent such person must agree:

(1) To include in his gross income for his taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends a specific amount as a taxable dividend; and

(2) If he is a shareholder who is taxable with respect to a dividend only if received from sources within the United States, that the specific amount stated in his consent shall be considered as a dividend received by him from sources within the United States.

(b) A consent may be made at any time not later than the due date of the corporation's income tax return for the taxable year for which the credit is claimed. With such return, and not later than the due date thereof, the corporation must file two duly executed duplicate originals of each consenting shareholder's consent, and a return on Form 973 showing by classes the stock outstanding on the first and last days of the taxable year, the dividend rights of such stock, distribution made during the taxable year to shareholders, and giving all the other information required by the form. Form 973 shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(c) In the event that any consent filed by the corporation is made by a shareholder to whom the payment of a dividend in cash on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation would have made it necessary for the corporation to deduct and withhold any amount as a tax under section 143 (b) or 144, such consent, when filed by the corporation, must be accompanied by payment of the amount which would have been required to be deducted and withheld if the amount specified in such consent had, on the last day of the corporation's taxable year, been paid to the shareholder in cash as a dividend. Such payment must be in one of the following forms:

(1) Cash;

(2) United States postal money order;

(3) Certified check drawn on a domestic bank, provided that the law of the place where the bank is located does not permit the certification to be rescinded prior to presentation;

(4) A cashier's check of a domestic bank; or

(5) A draft on a domestic bank or a foreign bank maintaining a United States agency or branch and payable in United States funds.

The amount of such payment shall be credited against the tax imposed by section 211 (a) or 231 (a) upon the shareholder.

§ 39.28 (d)–2 Consent distribution must be nonpreferential. The application of section 28 (d) (3) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has 200 shares of stock outstanding, owned by A and B in equal amounts. On December 15, 1952, the corporation distributes $600 to B and $100 to A. On December 31, 1952, A executes a consent to include $500 in his gross income as a taxable dividend, though such amount is not distributed to him. The X Corporation, assuming the other requirements of section 28 have been complied with, is entitled to a consent dividends credit of $500. Though considered by themselves, both the partial distribution of $700 and the consent distribution of $500 are preferential, when considered together they constitute a single nonpreferential distribution of $1,200.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *

(e) Consent distribution as part of entire distribution. If during the last month of the taxable year with respect to which shareholders' consents are filed by the corporation under subsection (d) there is made a partial distribution, then, for the purposes of this chapter, such partial distribution and the consent distribution shall be considered as having been made in connection with each other and each shall be considered together with the other as one entire distribution.

§ 39.28 (e)–1 Consent and partial distributions to be considered together The rule provided in section 28 (e), that a consent distribution and a partial distribution are to be considered as having been made in connection with each other and as together forming parts of one entire distribution, is not limited to the purposes of section 28, but is applicable in connection with any of the purposes of chapter 1. Thus, such rule is to be applied to determine whether a partial distribution is a preferential dividend under section 27 (h)

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *

(f) Taxability of amounts specified in consents. The total amount specified in a consent filed under subsection (d) shall be included as a taxable dividend in the gross income of the shareholder making such consent, and, if the shareholder is taxable with respect to a dividend only if received from sources within the United States, shall be included in the computation of his tax as a dividend received from sources within the United States; regardless of—

(1) Whether he actually so includes it in his return; and

(2) Whether the distribution by the corporation of an amount equal to the total sum included in all the consents filed, had actual distribution been made, would have been in whole or in part a taxable dividend; and

(3) Whether the corporation is entitled to any consent dividends credit by reason of the filing of such consents, or to a credit less than the total sum included in all the consents filed.

§ 39.28 (f)–1 Taxability of amounts specified in consents. (a) Once a shareholder's consent is filed, the full amount specified therein shall be included in his gross income as a taxable dividend, and, in cases where the shareholder is taxable on a dividend only if received from sources within the United States, shall be treated as a dividend so received; regardless of—

(1) Whether he actually so includes it in his return;

(2) Whether he would have been taxable on all or any part of such amount as a dividend if it had been distributed to him in cash; and

(3) Whether the corporation, as a result of filing such consents, is entitled to any consent dividends credit or to a smaller consent dividends credit than the sum of the amounts specified in the several consents.

(b) The ground upon which a consent dividends credit is denied the corporation does not affect the taxability of a shareholder whose consent has been filed for the amount specified in his consent. Thus, he is taxable on the full amount so specified, though the corporation receives no credit or a smaller credit than the sum of the amounts specified in the consents because the corporation has no amount of earnings and profits or a smaller amount of earnings and profits than the sum of the amounts specified in the consents. The full amount specified in a shareholder's consent which has been filed is also taxable to him as a dividend though a consent dividends credit is denied the corporation because (1) preferred dividends have not been paid, (2) part or all of the consent stock has been in a state of liquidation at any time during the taxable year, (3) the distribution of which the consent distribution is a part is preferential, (4) a consenting shareholder who is taxable with respect to a dividend only if received from sources within the United States fails to agree that the amount specified in his consent shall be considered as a dividend received by him from sources within the United States, or (5) payment has not been made as required by section 28 (d) (5) and § 39.28 (d)-1.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *
(g) Corporate shareholders. If the shareholder who makes the consent is a corporation, the amount specified in the consent shall be considered as part of its earnings or profits for the taxable year, and shall be included in the computation of its accumulated earnings and profits.

§ 39.28 (g)-1 Treatment of amount specified in consent of corporate shareholder (a) From the standpoint of computing a shareholder's income for a taxable year relative to which he has agreed to include a specific amount in gross income, such amount is treated exactly as though such shareholder had received in cash a taxable dividend equal to the amount specified in his consent. Therefore, in the case of a corporate shareholder, such amount shall be included in the computation of its earnings and profits for the taxable year and its accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year.

(b) The effect of a corporate shareholder's consent upon the computation of its earnings and profits may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation has one shareholder, the Y Corporation, whose consent to include $10,000 in its gross income for the calendar year 1952 has been duly made and filed. The earnings and profits of the X Corporation for the calendar year 1952 amount to only $8,000, there being at the beginning of such year no accumulated earnings or profits. The Y Corporation must nevertheless include in its gross income $10,000 as a taxable dividend. Assume the Y Corporation to have begun the year 1952 with $5,000 accumulated earnings and profits, to have made no distributions during the year, and (without considering the amount specified in its consent) to have had neither profit nor loss during the year. Its earnings and profits for the year will be $10,000, and its accumulated earnings and profits at the close of the year will be $15,000.

§ 39.28 (h)-(i) Statutory provisions; consent dividends credit; basis of stock in hands of shareholders; effect on capital account of corporation.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *
(h) Basis of stock in hands of shareholders. The amount specified in a consent made under subsection (d) shall, for the purpose of adjusting the basis of the consent stock with respect to which the consent was given, be treated as having been reinvested by the shareholder as a contribution to the capital of the corporation; but only in an amount which bears the same ratio to the consent dividends credit of the corporation as the amount of such shareholder's consent stock bears to the total amount of consent stock with respect to which consents are made.

(i) Effect on capital account of corporation. The amount of the consent dividends credit allowed under subsection (c) shall be considered as paid in surplus or as a contribution to the capital of the corporation, and the accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year shall be correspondingly reduced.

§ 39.28 (i)-1 Effect on basis of stock in hands of shareholders and capital account of corporation. The application of sections 28 (h) and 28 (i) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only one class of stock outstanding, owned entirely by A and B in equal amounts. A makes a consent to include $50 in his gross income as a dividend, but B refuses to do so. The X Corporation therefore distributes $50 to B in cash during the last month of its taxable year 1952. The consent distribution evidenced by A's consent and the actual distribution to B are treated together, as though one distribution of $100 had been made. The earnings and profits of the X Corporation for 1952, however, amount to only $80, there being at the beginning of such year no accumulated earnings or profits. If, therefore, the entire $100, which is the sum of A's consent distribution and B's actual distribution, had been actually distributed, 80 percent thereof would have been a dividend, includible in the X Corporation's basic surtax credit, and 20 percent a return of capital. Applying this principle to the facts stated, the following results are obtained:

(a) In the case of the X Corporation—

(1) Its consent dividends credit is $40, being 80 percent of the amount specified in A's consent;

(2) Its basic surtax credit, assuming it has no net operating loss in the preceding year and no bank affiliate credit, is $80, composed of a consent dividends credit of $40 and an allowance for dividends paid of $40;

(3) The amount of its accumulated earnings and profits as of the close of the taxable year is zero, because of the transfer of $40 (the amount of the consent dividends credit) from earnings and profits to capital account and the deduction of an additional $40 on account of dividends paid to B. If, therefore, in the following year the X Corporation has no earnings and profits but nevertheless makes a distribution to shareholders, no part of such distribution will be a dividend, but it will all constitute a return of capital.

(b) In the case of A—

(1) A is taxable on $50 as a dividend;

(2) The basis of his stock is increased by $40, his pro rata share, i. e., all, of the consent dividends credit.

(c) In the case of B—

(1) B is taxable on $40 as a dividend;

(2) The basis of his stock is reduced by $10.

SEC. 28. Consent dividends credit. * * *
(j) Amounts not included in shareholder's return. The failure of a shareholder of consent stock to include in his gross income for the proper taxable year the amount specified in the consent made by him and filed by the corporation, shall have the same effect, with respect to the deficiency resulting therefrom, as is provided in section 272 (f) with respect to a deficiency resulting from a mathematical error appearing on the face of the return.

CREDITS AGAINST TAX

§ 39.31-35 Statutory provisions; credits against tax; taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States; cross references; tax withheld on wages.

SEC. 31. Taxes of foreign countries and possessions of United States. The amount of income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes imposed by foreign countries or possessions of the United States shall be allowed as a credit against the tax (other than the tax imposed by subchapter E, relating to tax on self-employment income), to the extent provided in section 131.

[Sec. 31 as amended by sec. 203 (d) (3), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

SEC. 32. Taxes withheld at source. The amount of tax withheld at the source under section 143 or 144 shall be allowed as a credit against the tax.

SEC. 33. Credit for overpayments. For credit against the tax of overpayments of taxes imposed by this chapter for other taxable years, see section 322.

[Repealed by sec. 108 (c) (2), Rev. Act 1943]

SEC. 35. Credit for tax withheld on wages. The amount deducted and withheld as tax under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 during any calendar year upon the wages of any individual shall be allowed as a credit to the recipient of the income against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year beginning in such calendar year. If more than one taxable year begins in any such calendar year uch amount shall be allowed as a credit against the tax for the last taxable year so beginning.

[Sec. 35 as added by sec. 172 (f) (2), Rev. Act 1942; amended by sec. 3, Current Tax Payment Act 1943]

§ 39.35-1 Credit for tax withheld on wages. (a) The tax deducted and withheld at the source upon wages under subchapter D of chapter 9 is allowable as a credit against the tax imposed by chapter 1 upon the recipient of the income. If the tax has actually been withheld at the source, credit or refund shall be made to the recipient of the income even though such tax has not been paid over to the Government by the employer. See section 322. For the purpose of the credit, the recipient of the income is the person subject to tax imposed under chapter 1 upon the wages from which the tax was withheld. For instance, if a husband and wife domiciled in a State recognized as a community property State for Federal tax purposes make separate returns, each reporting for income tax purposes one-half of the wages received by the husband, each spouse is entitled to one-half of the credit allowable for the tax withheld at source with respect to such wages.

(b) The credit shall be allowed against the tax imposed by chapter 1 for the taxable year of the recipient of the income which begins in such calendar year. If such recipient has more than one taxable year beginning in such calendar year, the credit shall be allowed against the tax for the last taxable year so beginning.

§ 39.35-2 Credit for "special refunds" of employee social security tax—(a) In general. (1) In the case of an employee receiving wages from more than one employer during the calendar year, amounts may be deducted and withheld as employee social security tax under section 1400 with respect to more than $3,600 wages (for example, on $4,500 if the employee is paid $2,500 by one employer and $2,000 by another) Section 1401 (d) permits, under certain conditions, a so-called "special refund" of the amount of such employee social security tax deducted and withheld with respect to wages in excess of $3,600 by reason of the employee working for more than one employer during the calendar year.

(2) An employee who is entitled to a special refund of employee tax with respect to wages received during a calendar year and who is also required to file an income tax return for such calendar year (or for his last taxable year beginning in such calendar year) may obtain the benefits of such special refund only by claiming credit for such special refund in the same manner as if such special refund were an amount deducted and withheld as income tax at the source under subchapter D of chapter 9. The credit with respect to a special refund is not allowable unless the return, amended return, or claim for refund, on which the special refund is claimed, is filed within two years after the calendar year in which payment is made of the wages with respect to which the special refund of tax is claimed. See section 1401 (d) (3) and (4) and § 408.802 (c) of this chapter (Regulations 128) pertaining to tax under subchapter A of chapter 9 (Federal Insurance Contributions Act) For special provisions for claiming special refunds in the case of employees not required to file income tax returns, see § 408.802 (c) (3) of this chapter (Regulations 128)

(3) The amount of the special refund allowed as a credit shall be considered as an amount deducted and withheld as income tax at the source under subchapter D of chapter 9. If the amount of such special refund when added to amounts deducted and withheld as income tax under subchapter D of chapter 9 exceeds the taxes imposed by chapter 1, the amount of the excess constitutes an overpayment of income tax under chapter 1, and interest on such overpayment is allowed to the extent provided under section 3771 upon an overpayment of income tax resulting from a credit for income tax withheld at source. See section 322 (a) (2) and (4)

(b) Federal and State employees. The provisions of this section shall apply to the amount of a special refund (under section 1401 (d) (4) (A)) allowable to an employee of a Federal agency or a wholly owned instrumentality of the United States, and to the amount of a special refund (under section 1401 (d) (4) (B)) allowable to an employee of any State or political subdivision thereof (or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing)

ACCOUNTING PERIODS AND METHODS OF ACCOUNTING

SEC. 41. General rule. The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the Commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 48 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year.

For use of inventories, see section 22 (c).

§ 39.41-1 Computation of net income. Net income must be computed with respect to a fixed period. Usually that period is 12 months and is known as the taxable year. Items of income and of expenditure which as gross income and deductions are elements in the computation of net income need not be in the form of cash. It is sufficient that such items, if otherwise properly included in the computation, can be valued in terms of money. The time as of which any item of gross income or any deduction is to be accounted for must be determined in the light of the fundamental rule that the computation shall be made in such a manner as clearly reflects the taxpayer's income. If the method of accounting regularly employed by him in keeping his books clearly reflects his income, it is to be followed with respect to the time as of which items of gross income and deductions are to be accounted for. (See §§ 39.42-1 to 39.42-3, inclusive.) If the taxpayer does not regularly employ a method of accounting which clearly reflects his income, the computation shall be made in such manner as in the opinion of the Commissioner clearly reflects it.

§ 39.41-2 Bases of computation and changes in accounting methods. (a) Approved standard methods of accounting will ordinarily be regarded as clearly reflecting income. A method of accounting will not, however, be regarded as clearly reflecting income unless all items of gross income and all deductions are treated with reasonable consistency. See section 48 for definitions of "paid or accrued" and "paid or incurred." All items of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which they are received by the taxpayer, and deductions taken accordingly, unless in order clearly to reflect income such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period. But see sections 42 and 43. See also section 48. For instance, in any case in which it is necessary to use an inventory, no method of accounting in regard to purchases and sales will correctly reflect income except an accrual method. A taxpayer is deemed to have received items of gross income which have been credited to or set apart for him without restriction. (See §§ 39.42-2 and 39.42-3.) On the other hand, appreciation in value of property is not even an accrual of income to a taxpayer prior to the realization of such appreciation through sale or conversion of the property. (But see § 39.22 (c)-5.)

(b) The true income, computed under the Internal Revenue Code and, if the taxpayer keeps books of account, in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping such books (provided the method so used is properly applicable in determining the net income of the taxpayer for purposes of taxation) shall in all cases be entered in the return. If for any reason the basis of reporting income subject to tax is changed, the taxpayer shall attach to his return a separate statement setting forth for the taxable year and for the preceding year the classes of items differently treated under the two systems, specifying in particular all amounts duplicated or entirely omitted as the result of such change.

(c) A taxpayer who changes the method of accounting employed in keeping his books shall, before computing his income upon such new method for purposes of taxation, secure the consent of the Commissioner. For the purposes of this section, a change in the method of accounting employed in keeping books means any change in the accounting treatment of items of income or deductions, such as a change from cash receipts and disbursements method to the accrual method, or vice versa, a change involving the basis of valuation employed in the computation of inventories (see §§ 39.22 (c)-1 to 39.22 (c)-8, inclusive) a change from the cash or accrual method to the long-term contract method, or vice versa, a change in the long-term contract method from the percentage of completion basis to the completed contract basis, or vice versa (see § 39.42-4) or a change involving the adoption of, or a change in the use of, any other specialized basis of computing net income such as the crop basis (see §§ 39.22 (a)-7 and 39.23 (a)-11) Application for permission to change the method of accounting employed and the basis upon which the return is made shall be filed within 90 days after the beginning of the taxable year to be covered by the return. The application shall be accompanied by a statement specifying the classes of items differently treated under the two methods and specifying all amounts which would be duplicated or entirely omitted as a result of the proposed change. Permission to change the method of accounting will not be granted unless the taxpayer and the Commissioner agree to the terms and conditions under which the change will be effected. See section 22 (d) and §§ 39.22 (d)-1 to 39.22 (d)-7, inclusive, with respect to changing to the last-in first-out method of inventorying goods.

(d) Section 44 contains special provisions for reporting the profit derived from the sale of property on the installment plan.

(e) The foregoing requirements relative to a change of accounting method are not applicable if a taxpayer desires to adopt the installment basis of returning income, as provided in §§ 39.44-1 and 39.44-3, but are applicable if a taxpayer desires to change from such basis to a straight accrual basis. In cases where permission to make such change is granted, the taxpayer will be required to return as additional income for the taxable year in which the change is made all the profit not theretofore returned as income pertaining to the payments due on installment sales contracts as of the close of the preceding taxable year.

§ 39.41-3 Methods of accounting. It is recognized that no uniform method of accounting can be prescribed for all taxpayers, and the law contemplates that each taxpayer shall adopt such forms and systems of accounting as are in his judgment best suited to his purpose. Each taxpayer is required by law to make a return of his true income. He must, therefore, maintain such accounting records as will enable him to do so. (See section 54 and § 39.54-1.) Among the essentials are the following:

(a) In all cases in which the production, purchase, or sale of merchandise of any kind is an income-producing factor, inventories of the merchandise on hand (including finished goods, work in process, raw materials, and supplies) should be taken at the beginning and end of the year and used in computing the net income of the year (see section 22 (c) and §§ 39.22 (c)-1 to 39.22 (c)-8, inclusive)

(b) Expenditures made during the year should be properly classified as between capital and expense; that is to say, expenditures for items of plant, equipment, etc., which have a useful life extending substantially beyond the year should be charged to a capital account and not to an expense account; and

(c) In any case in which the cost of capital assets is being recovered through deductions for wear and tear, depletion, or obsolescence, any expenditure (other than ordinary repairs) made to restore the property or prolong its useful life should be added to the property account or charged against the appropriate reserve and not to current expenses.

§ 39.41-4 Accounting period. The return of a taxpayer is made and his income computed for his taxable year, which in general means his fiscal year, or the calendar year if he has not established a fiscal year. (See section 48.) The term "fiscal year" means an accounting period of 12 months ending on the last day of any month other than December. No fiscal year will, however, be recognized unless before its close it was definitely established as an accounting period by the taxpayer and the books of such taxpayer were kept in accordance therewith. A person having no such fiscal year must make his return on the basis of the calendar year. Except in the case of a first return for income tax a taxpayer shall make his return on the basis upon which he made his return for the taxable year immediately preceding, unless, with the approval of the Commissioner, he has changed his accounting period. See § 39.46-1.

§ 39.42 Statutory provisions; accounting periods and methods of accounting; period in which items of gross income included.

SEC. 42. Period in which items of gross income included—(a) General rule. The amount of all items of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which received by the taxpayer, unless, under methods of accounting permitted under section 41, any such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer whose net income is computed upon the basis of the accrual method of accounting, amounts (except amounts includible in computing a partner's net income under section 182) accrued only by reason of the death of the taxpayer shall not be included in computing net income for the period in which falls the date of the taxpayer's death.

(b) Noninterest-bearing obligations issued at discount. If, in the case of a taxpayer owning any noninterest-bearing obligation issued at a discount and redeemable for fixed amounts increasing at stated intervals or owning an obligation described in paragraph (2) of subsection (d), the increase in the redemption price of such obligation occurring in the taxable year does not (under the method of accounting used in computing his net income) constitute income to him in such year, such taxpayer may, at his election made in his return for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1940, treat such increase as income received in such taxable year. If any such election is made with respect to any such obligation, it shall apply also to all such obligations owned by the taxpayer at the beginning of the first taxable year to which it applies and to all such obligations thereafter acquired by him and shall be binding for all subsequent taxable years, unless upon application by the taxpayer the Commissioner permits him, subject to such conditions as the Commissioner deems necessary, to change to a different method. In the case of any such obligations owned by the taxpayer at the beginning of the first taxable year to which his election applies, the increase in the redemption price of such obligations occurring between the date of acquisition (or, in the case of an obligation described in paragraph (2) of subsection (d), the date of acquisition of the series E bond involved) and the first day of such taxable year shall also be treated as income received in such taxable year.

(c) Short-term obligations issued on discount basis. In the case of any obligation of the United States or any of its possessions, or of a State or Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, issued on or after March 1, 1941, on a discount basis and payable without interest at a fixed maturity date not exceeding one year from the date of issue, the amount of discount at which such obligation is originally sold shall not be considered to accrue until the date on which such obligation is paid at maturity, sold, or otherwise disposed of.

(d) Matured United States savings bonds. In the case of a taxpayer who—

(1) Holds a series E United States savings bond at the date of maturity, and

(2) Pursuant to regulations prescribed under the Second Liberty Bond Act retains his investment in the maturity value of such series E bond in an obligation, other than a current income obligation, which matures not more than ten years from the date of maturity of such series E bond, the increase in redemption value (to the extent not previously includible in gross income) in excess of the amount paid for such series E bond shall be includible in gross income in the taxable year in which the obligation is finally redeemed or in the taxable year of final maturity, whichever is earlier. The provisions of this subsection shall not apply to a corporation, and shall not apply in the case of any taxable year for which the taxpayer's net income is computed upon the basis of the accrual method of accounting or for which an election made by the taxpayer under subsection (b) is applicable.

[Sec. 42 as amended by secs. 114, 115 (a), Rev. Act 1941; sec. 134 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 2, Pub. Law 12 (82d Cong.).]

§ 39.42-1 When included in gross income—(a) In general. Except as otherwise provided in section 42, gains, profits, and income are to be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which they are received by the taxpayer, unless they are included as of a different period in accordance with the approved method of accounting followed by him. See §§ 39.41-1 to 39.41-3, inclusive. As to income from noninterest-bearing obligations issued at discount, see § 39.42-6, and as to income from short-term obligations issued on a discount basis, see § 39.42-7. If no determination of compensation is had until the completion of the services, the amount received is ordinarily income for the taxable year of its determination, if the return is rendered on the accrual basis; or, for the taxable year in which received, if the return is rendered on the receipts and disbursements basis. If a person sues in one year on a pecuniary claim or for property, and money or property is recovered on a judgment therefor in a later year, income is realized in the later year, assuming that the money or property would have been income in the earlier year if then received. This is true of a recovery for patent infringement. Bad debts or accounts charged off subsequent to March 1, 1913, because of the fact that they were determined to be worthless, which are subsequently recovered, whether or not by suit, constitute income for the year in which recovered, regardless of the date when the amounts were charged off. See § 39.23 (k)-1. Except as otherwise stated in this paragraph, such items as claims for compensation under canceled Government contracts constitute income for the year in which they are allowed or their value is otherwise definitely determined, if the return is rendered on the accrual basis; or for the year in which received, if the return is rendered on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements. In the case of a termination of a war contract as defined by section 3 of the Contract Settlement Act of 1944, 41 U. S. C. 103 (or the termination of any other Government contract as to which the right to compensation is definitely fixed and the measure thereof is determinable with reasonable accuracy) if the return is rendered on a basis other than cash receipts and disbursements, compensation for the termination shall, unless a different method of reporting is prescribed or approved by the Commissioner, constitute income for the taxable year in which falls the effective date of the termination, except that if any part of the compensation is attributable to cost, expenses, or losses incurred in a subsequent year such part of the compensation shall be returned as income for the subsequent year. As to amounts received pursuant to an award under the order issued on December 4, 1950, under the Railway Mail Pay Act of 1916 by the Interstate Commerce Commission, as compensation for the transportation of mail during 1950 and prior years, see section 611 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1951.

(b) Last taxable year of decedent. For the taxable year in which falls the date of the death of a taxpayer, there shall be included in computing net income of the taxpayer only amounts properly includible under the approved method of accounting followed by the taxpayer, or, if the taxpayer followed no such method, only amounts received during such year. However, if the taxpayer followed the accrual method of accounting, amounts accrued only by reason of his death shall not be included in computing net income for such year, except that, if the taxpayer was a member of a partnership, his share of the partnership income for the partnership year ending with its dissolution on account of his death shall be included in computing his net income. The approved accounting practice of the partnership in computing its income shall not be changed by reason of the taxpayer's death. Thus, if the partnership computed its income on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, the partnership income for the year ending with the dissolution, a distributive share of which is included in the taxpayer's income, shall be so computed. If the partnership used the accrual method of accounting, its income shall be computed according to such practice. For example, if a law partnership keeping its books on the accrual method of accounting is entitled to certain contingent fees which are accrued only upon the completion of the cases involved, such partnership will compute its income for the year ending with its dissolution on account of the death of the taxpayer without accruing, on account of the death of the partner at such time, any such contingent fees in uncompleted cases. Under section 126, any distribution by the partnership to the estate or a beneficiary of the deceased partner out of such fees will be income to such estate or person. There must also be included in computing net income for the taxable year in which falls the date of death of a taxpayer the gain described in section 44 (d) relating to gain upon the disposition of installment obligations, except as otherwise provided in that section. See § 39.44-5. This amount must be included in computing net income regardless of the method of accounting followed by the taxpayer.

§ 39.42-2 Income not reduced to possession. Income which is credited to the account of or set apart for a taxpayer and which may be drawn upon by him at any time is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. To constitute receipt in such a case the income must be credited or set apart to the taxpayer without any substantial limitation or restriction as to the time or manner of payment or condition upon which payment is to be made, and must be made available to him so that it may be drawn at any time, and its receipt brought within his own control and disposition. A book entry, if made, should indicate an absolute transfer from one account to another. If a corporation contingently credits its employees with bonus stock, but the stock is not available to such employees until some future date, the mere crediting on the books of the corporation does not constitute receipt.

§ 39.42-3 Examples of constructive receipt. If interest coupons have matured and are payable, but have not been cashed, such interest, though not collected when due and payable, shall be included in gross income for the year during which the coupons mature, unless it can be shown that there are no funds available for payment of the interest during such year. The interest shall be included in gross income even though the coupons are exchanged for other property instead of eventually being cashed. The amount of defaulted coupons is income for the year in which paid. Dividends on corporate stock are subject to tax when unqualifiedly made subject to the demand of the shareholder. If a dividend is declared payable on December 31 and the corporation intended to and did follow its practice of paying the dividends by checks mailed so that the shareholders would not receive them until January of the following year, such dividends are not considered to have been unqualifiedly made subject to the demand of the shareholders prior to January, when the checks were actually received. As to the distributive share of the profits of a partner in a partnership, see section 188. Interest credited on savings bank deposits, even though the bank nominally has a rule, seldom or never enforced, that it may require so many days' notice before withdrawals are permitted, is income to the depositor when credited. An amount credited to shareholders of a building and loan association, when such credit passes without restriction to the shareholder, has a taxable status as income for the year of the credit. If the amount of such accumulations does not become available to the shareholder until the maturity of a share, the amount of any share in excess of the aggregate amount paid in by the shareholder is income for the year of the maturity of the share.

§ 39.42-4 Long-term contracts. (a) Income from long-term contracts is taxable for the period in which the income is determined, such determination depending upon the nature and terms of the particular contract. As used in this section, the term "long-term contracts" means building, installation, or construction contracts covering a period in excess of one year from the date of execution of the contract to the date on which the contract is finally completed and accepted. Persons whose income is derived in whole or in part from such contracts may, as to such income, prepare their returns upon either of the following bases:

(1) Gross income derived from such contracts may be reported upon the basis of percentage of completion. In such case there should accompany the return certificates of architects or engineers showing the percentage of completion during the taxable year of the entire work to be performed under the contract. There should be deducted from such gross income all expenditures made during the taxable year on account of the contract, account being taken of the material and supplies on hand at the beginning and end of the taxable period for use in connection with the work under the contract but not yet so applied.

(2) Gross income may be reported for the taxable year in which the contract is finally completed and accepted if the taxpayer elects as a consistent practice so to treat such income, provided such method clearly reflects the net income. If this method is adopted there should be deducted from gross income all expenditures during the life of the contract which are properly allocated thereto, taking into consideration any material and supplies charged to the work under the contract but remaining on hand at the time of completion.

(b) A taxpayer may change his method of accounting to accord with subparagraph (1) or (2) of paragraph (a) of this section only after permission is secured from the Commissioner as provided in § 39.41-2.

§ 39.42-5 Subtraction for redemption of trading stamps. (a) If a taxpayer, for the purpose of promoting his business, issues with sales trading stamps or premium coupons redeemable in merchandise or cash, he should in computing the income from such sales subtract only the amount which will be required for the redemption of such part of the total issue of trading stamps or premium coupons issued during the taxable year as will eventually be presented for redemption. This amount will be determined in the light of the experience of the taxpayer in his particular business and of other users of trading stamps or premium coupons engaged in similar businesses. The taxpayer shall file for each of the five preceding years or such number of these years as stamps or coupons have been issued by him, a statement showing:

(1) The total issue of stamps during each year;

(2) The total stamps redeemed in each year; and

(3) The rate, in percentage, which the stamps redeemed in each year bear to the total stamps issued in such year, regardless of the year when such redeemed stamps were issued.

(b) A similar statement shall also be presented showing the experience of other users of stamps or coupons whose experience is relied upon by the taxpayer to determine the amount to be subtracted from the proceeds of sales. The Commissioner will examine the basis used in each return, and in any case in which the amount subtracted in respect of such stamps or coupons is found to be excessive, appropriate adjustment will be made.

§ 39.42–6 Noninterest-bearing obligations issued at discount. (a) If a taxpayer owns any noninterest-bearing obligation issued at a discount and redeemable for fixed amounts increasing at stated intervals, and if the increase in redemption price of such obligation occurring in the taxable year does not constitute income for such year under the method of accounting used in computing his net income, the taxpayer may, at his election, treat such increase as constituting income for the year in which it occurs rather than in the year in which the obligation is disposed of, redeemed, or paid at maturity. The election must be made in the taxpayer's return and may be made for any taxable year. The election shall apply also to all other obligations of the type described in this section owned by the taxpayer at the beginning of the first taxable year to which the election applies and to those thereafter acquired by him. It shall apply to the taxable year for which such return is filed, and shall be binding for all subsequent taxable years unless upon application by the taxpayer the Commissioner permits the taxpayer, subject to such conditions as the Commissioner deems necessary, to change to a different method of reporting income from such obligations. Although the election, once made, is binding upon the taxpayer, it does not apply to a transferee of such taxpayer.

(b) In any case in which an election is made under this section, the amount considered to accrue in any taxable year to which the election applies is measured by the actual increases in the redemption price occurring in that year. Such amount shall not be considered to accrue ratably between the dates on which the redemption price changes. Thus, if two dates on which the redemption price increases fall within a taxable year and if the redemption price increases in the amount of 50 cents on each such date, the amount deemed to accrue in that year would be $1. If at the beginning of the first taxable year to which the election applies the taxpayer owns noninterest-bearing bonds of the prescribed character acquired prior thereto, he is required to report in such year, in addition to the increases in the redemption price actually falling within that year, the total of the increases in such price occurring between the date of his acquisition and the beginning of such year.

Example. Throughout the calendar year 1952, a taxpayer who makes his returns on the calendar year basis and computes his net income on the cash receipts and disbursements basis holds United States savings bonds, Series E, having a maturity value of $5,000, which he purchased on January 1, 1947, for $3,750. The taxpayer holds no other obligation of the type described in this section. In his return for 1952 the taxpayer elects to treat the increase in the redemption price of such bonds occurring in such year as income to him for such year. Under this section he is required to report with respect to such bonds as subject to both normal tax and surtax $400, of which $300 represents the increase in the redemption price before 1952 and $100 represents the increase in the redemption price in 1952.

§ 39.42–7 Short-term obligations issued on discount basis. In the case of any obligation of the United States or any of its possessions, or of a State or Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, issued on or after March 1, 1941, on a discount basis and payable without interest at a fixed maturity date not exceeding one year from the date of issue, the amount of discount at which such obligation is originally sold shall not be considered to accrue until the date on which such obligation is paid at maturity, sold, or otherwise disposed of. Accordingly, if a taxpayer who computes his net income on the accrual basis purchases upon issuance a United States Treasury bill and holds it until maturity, the entire amount of the discount at which the bill was originally sold accrues on the date of maturity; and if such a taxpayer holds a United States Treasury bill for a period less than its life, the portion of the original discount attributable to such period accrues only on the date on which he sells or otherwise disposes of the bill or receives payment at maturity. The original discount or the portion of such discount, as the case may be, is includible only in the gross income for the taxable year in which the taxpayer sells or otherwise disposes of the bill or receives payment at maturity. For examples illustrating rules for computation of income from sale or other disposition of obligations of the type described in this section, see § 39.117 (a)–1.

§ 39.43 Statutory provisions; accounting periods and methods of accounting; period for which deductions and credits taken.

SEC. 43. Period for which deductions and credits taken. The deductions and credits (other than the corporation dividends paid credit provided in section 27) provided for in this chapter shall be taken for the taxable year in which "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred," dependent upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed, unless in order to clearly reflect the income the deductions or credits should be taken as of a different period. In the case of the death of a taxpayer whose net income is computed upon the basis of the accrual method of accounting, amounts (except amounts includible in computing a partner's net income under section 182) accrued as deductions and credits only by reason of the death of the taxpayer shall not be allowed in computing net income for the period in which falls the date of the taxpayer's death.

§ 39.43–1 "Paid or incurred" and "paid or accrued." (a) The terms "paid or incurred" and "paid or accrued" will be construed according to the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed by the taxpayer. (See section 48 (c).) The deductions and credits provided for in chapter 1 (other than the dividends paid credit provided in section 27) must be taken for the taxable year in which "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred," unless in order clearly to reflect the income such deductions or credits should be taken as of a different period. If a taxpayer desires to claim a deduction or a credit as of a period other than the period in which it was "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred," he shall attach to his return a statement setting forth his request for consideration of the case by the Commissioner together with a complete statement of the facts upon which he relies. However, in his income tax return he shall take the deduction or credit only for the taxable period in which it was actually "paid or incurred," or "paid or accrued," as the case may be. Upon the audit of the return, the Commissioner will decide whether the case is within the exception provided by the Internal Revenue Code, and the taxpayer will be advised as to the period for which the deduction or credit is properly allowable.

(b) In any case in which, owing to monetary, exchange, or other restrictions imposed by a foreign country, an amount otherwise constituting gross income for the taxable year from sources without the United States is not includible in gross income of the taxpayer for that year, the deductions and credits charged against the amount so restricted shall be deemed to have been "paid or accrued" or "paid or incurred" proportionately in any subsequent taxable year in which such amount or portion thereof is includible in gross income. See § 39.131 (d)–1 for the treatment of foreign income tax imposed with respect to such amount as a basis of credit for foreign income tax in such cases.

(c) The provisions of paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section are in general applicable with respect to the taxable year during which the taxpayer dies. However, if the taxpayer followed the accrual method of accounting, there shall be included in computing net income for such year no amount accrued solely by reason of his death other than his distributive share of the losses of a partnership for the year ending with the dissolution of the partnership on account of his death. No change in the accounting practice of the partnership shall be made because of the taxpayer's death when the income and losses of the partnership are computed for the year ending with the dissolution of the partnership on account of the partner's death.

§ 39.43–2 When charges deductible. Each year's return, so far as practicable, both as to gross income and deductions therefrom, should be complete in itself, and taxpayers are expected to make every reasonable effort to ascertain the facts necessary to make a correct return. The expenses, liabilities, or deficit of one year cannot be used to reduce the income of a subsequent year. A taxpayer has the right to deduct all authorized allowances, and it follows that if he does not within any year deduct certain of his expenses, losses, interest, taxes, or other charges, he cannot deduct them from the income of the next or any succeeding year. It is recognized, however, that particularly in a going business of any magnitude there are certain overlapping items both of income and deduction, and so long as these overlapping items do not materially distort the income they may be included in the year in which the taxpayer, pursuant to a consistent policy, takes them into his accounts. Judgments or other binding adjudications, such as decisions of referees and boards of review under workmen's compensation laws, on account of damages for patent infringement, personal injuries, or other cause, are deductible from gross income when the claim is so adjudicated or paid, unless taken under other methods of accounting which clearly reflect the correct deduction, less any amount of such damages as may have been compensated for by insurance or otherwise. If subsequent to its occurrence, however, a taxpayer first ascertains the amount of a loss sustained during a prior taxable year which has not been deducted from gross income, he may render an amended return for such preceding taxable year including such amount of loss in the deductions from gross income and may file a claim for refund of the excess tax paid by reason of the failure to deduct such loss in the original return. (See section 322.) A loss from theft or embezzlement occurring in one year and discovered in another is ordinarily deductible for the year in which sustained.

SEC. 44. Installment basis—(a) Dealers in personal property. Under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, a person who regularly sells or otherwise disposes of personal property on the installment plan may return as income therefrom in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the gross profit realized or to be realized when payment is completed, bears to the total contract price.

(b) Sales of realty and casual sales of personalty. In the case (1) of a casual sale or other casual disposition of personal property (other than property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year), for a price exceeding $1,000, or (2) of a sale or other disposition of real property, if in either case the initial payments do not exceed 30 per centum of the selling price (or, in case the sale or other disposition was in a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1934, the percentage of the selling price prescribed in the law applicable to such year), the income may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, be returned on the basis and in the manner above prescribed in this section. As used in this section the term "initial payments" means the payments received in cash or property other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser during the taxable period in which the sale or other disposition is made.

(c) Change from accrual to installment basis. If a taxpayer entitled to the benefits of subsection (a) elects for any taxable year to report his net income on the installment basis, then in computing his income for the year of change or any subsequent year, amounts actually received during any such year on account of sales or other dispositions of property made in any prior year shall not be excluded.

(d) Gain or loss upon disposition of installment obligations. If an installment obligation is satisfied at other than its face value or distributed, transmitted, sold, or otherwise disposed of, gain or loss shall result to the extent of the difference between the basis of the obligation and (1) in the case of satisfaction at other than face value or a sale or exchange—the amount realized, or (2) in case of a distribution, transmission, or disposition otherwise than by sale or exchange—the fair market value of the obligation at the time of such distribution, transmission, or disposition. Any gain or loss so resulting shall be considered as resulting from the sale or exchange of the property in respect of which the installment obligation was received. The basis of the obligation shall be the excess of the face value of the obligation over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligation satisfied in full. This subsection shall not apply to the transmission at death of installment obligations if there is filed with the Commissioner, at such time as he may by regulation prescribe, a bond in such amount and with such sureties as he may deem necessary, conditioned upon the return as income, by the person receiving any payment on such obligations, of the same proportion of such payment as would be returnable as income by the decedent if he had lived and had received such payment. If an installment obligation is distributed by one corporation to another corporation in the course of a liquidation, and under section 112 (b) (6) no gain or loss with respect to the receipt of such obligation is recognized in the case of the recipient corporation, then no gain or loss with respect to the distribution of such obligation shall be recognized in the case of the distributing corporation.

§ 39.44-1 Sale of personal property on installment plan. (a) Dealers who sell on the installment plan usually adopt one of four ways of protecting themselves in case of default—

(1) By an agreement that title is to remain in the vendor until the purchaser has completely performed his part of the transaction;

(2) By a form of contract in which title is conveyed to the purchaser immediately, but subject to a lien for the unpaid portion of the selling price;

(3) By a present transfer of title to the purchaser, who at the same time executes a reconveyance in the form of a chattel mortgage to the vendor; or

(4) By conveyance to a trustee pending performance of the contract and subject to its provisions.

(b) The general purpose and effect being the same in all of these cases, the same rule is uniformly applicable. The general rule prescribed is that a person who regularly sells or otherwise disposes of personal property on the installment plan, whether or not title remains in the vendor until the property is fully paid for, may return as income therefrom in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the total or gross profit (that is, sales less cost of goods sold) realized or to be realized when the property is paid for, bears to the total contract price. Thus, the income of a dealer in personal property on the installment plan may be ascertained by taking as income that proportion of the total payments received in the taxable year from installment sales (such payments being allocated to the year against the sales of which they apply) which the total or gross profit realized or to be realized on the total installment sales made during each year bears to the total contract price of all such sales made during that respective year. No payments received in the taxable year shall be excluded in computing the amount of income to be returned on the ground that they were received under a sale the total profit from which was returned as income during a taxable year or years prior to the change by the taxpayer to the installment basis of returning income. Deductible items are not to be allocated to the years in which the profits from the sales of a particular year are to be returned as income, but must be deducted for the taxable year in which the items are "paid or incurred" or "paid or accrued," as provided by sections 43 and 48. A dealer who desires to compute his income on the installment basis shall maintain books of accounts in such a manner as to enable an accurate computation to be made on such basis in accordance with the provisions of this section.

(c) The income from a casual sale or other casual disposition of personal property (other than property of a kind which should properly be included in inventory) may be reported on the installment basis only if (1) the sale price exceeds $1,000 and (2) the initial payments do not exceed 30 percent of the selling price.

(d) If for any reason the purchaser defaults in any of his payments, and the vendor returning income on the installment basis repossesses the property sold, whether title thereto had been retained by the vendor or transferred to the purchaser, gain or loss for the year in which the repossession occurs is to be computed upon any installment obligations of the purchaser which are satisfied or discharged upon the repossession or are applied by the vendor to the purchase or bid price of the property. Such gain or loss is to be measured by the difference between the fair market value of the property repossessed and the basis in the hands of the vendor of the obligations of the purchaser which are so satisfied, discharged, or applied, with proper adjustment for any other amounts realized or costs incurred in connection with the repossession. (See also § 39.44-5.) The basis in the hands of the vendor of the obligations of the purchaser satisfied, discharged, or applied upon the repossession of the property shall be the excess of the face value of such obligations over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligations paid in full. No deduction for a bad debt shall in any case be taken on account of any portion of the obligations of the purchaser which are treated by the vendor as not having been satisfied, discharged, or applied upon the repossession, unless it is clearly shown that after the property was repossessed the purchaser remained liable for such portion; and in no event shall the amount of the deduction exceed the basis in the hands of the vendor of the portion of the obligations with respect to which the purchaser remained liable after the repossession. (See also § 39.23

(k)-1.) If the property repossessed is bid in by the vendor at a lawful public auction or judicial sale, the fair market value of the property shall be presumed to be the purchase or bid price thereof in the absence of clear and convincing proof to the contrary. The property repossessed shall be carried on the books of the vendor at its fair market value at the time of repossession.

(e) If the vendor chooses as a matter of consistent practice to return the income from installment sales on the straight accrual or cash receipts and disbursements basis, such a course is permissible.

§ 39.44-2 Sale of real property involving deferred payments. (a) Under section 44 deferred-payment sales of real property include (1) agreements of purchase and sale which contemplate that a conveyance is not to be made at the outset, but only after all or a substantial portion of the selling price has been paid, and (2) sales in which there is an immediate transfer of title, the vendor being protected by a mortgage or other lien as to deferred payments.

(b) Such sales, either under paragraph (a) (1) or (2) of this section fall into two classes when considered with respect to the terms of sale, as follows:

(1) Sales of property on the installment plan, that is, sales in which the payments received in cash or property other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser during the taxable year in which the sale is made do not exceed 30 percent of the selling price;

(2) Deferred-payment sales not on the installment plan, that is, sales in which the payments received in cash or property other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser during the taxable year in which the sale is made exceed 30 percent of the selling price.

(c) In the sale of mortgaged property the amount of the mortgage, whether the property is merely taken subject to the mortgage or whether the mortgage is assumed by the purchaser, shall be included as a part of the "selling price," but the amount of the mortgage, to the extent it does not exceed the basis to the vendor of the property sold, shall not be considered as a part of the "initial payments" or of the "total contract price," as those terms are used in section 44, in §§ 39.44-1 and 39.44-3, and in this section. The term "initial payments" does not include amounts received by the vendor in the year of sale from the disposition to a third person of notes given by the vendee as part of the purchase price which are due and payable in subsequent years. Commissions and other selling expenses paid or incurred by the vendor are not to be deducted or taken into account in determining the amount of the "initial payments," the "total contract price," or the "selling price." The term "initial payments" contemplates at least one other payment in addition to the initial payment. If the entire purchase price is to be paid in a lump sum in a later year, there being no payment during the first year, the income may not be returned on the installment basis. Income may not be returned on the installment basis where no payment in cash or property, other than evidences of indebtedness of the purchaser, is received during the first year, the purchaser having promised to make two or more payments in later years.

§ 39.44-3 Sale of real property on installment plan. (a) In transactions included in § 39.44-2 (a) (1) the vendor may return as income from such transactions in any taxable year that proportion of the installment payments actually received in that year which the total profit realized or to be realized when the property is paid for bears to the total contract price.

(b) If the purchaser defaults in any of his payments, and the vendor returning income on the installment basis reacquires the property sold, whether title thereto had been retained by the vendor or transferred to the purchaser, gain or loss for the year in which the reacquisition occurs is to be computed upon any installment obligations of the purchaser which are satisfied or discharged upon the reacquisition or are applied by the vendor to the purchase or bid price of the property. Such gain or loss is to be measured by the difference between the fair market value of the property reacquired (including the fair market value of any fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser) and the basis in the hands of the vendor of the obligations of the purchaser which are so satisfied, discharged, or applied, with proper adjustment for any other amounts realized or costs incurred in connection with the reacquisition. (See also § 39.44-5.) The basis in the hands of the vendor of the obligations of the purchaser satisfied, discharged, or applied upon the reacquisition of the property will be the excess of the face value of such obligations over an amount equal to the income which would be returnable were the obligations paid in full. No deduction for a bad debt shall in any case be taken on account of any portion of the obligations of the purchaser which are treated by the vendor as not having been satisfied, discharged, or applied upon the reacquisition of the property, unless it is clearly shown that after the property was reacquired the purchaser remained liable for such portion; and in no event shall the amount of the deduction exceed the basis in the hands of the vendor of the portion of the obligations with respect to which the purchaser remained liable after the reacquisition. (See § 39.23 (k)-1.) If the property reacquired is bid in by the vendor at a foreclosure sale, the fair market value of the property shall be presumed to be the purchase or bid price thereof in the absence of clear and convincing proof to the contrary. If the property reacquired is subsequently sold, the basis for determining gain or loss is the fair market value of the property at the date of reacquisition (including the fair market value of any fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser)

(c) If the vendor chooses as a matter of consistent practice to return the income from installment sales on the straight accrual or cash receipts and disbursements basis, such a course is permissible, and the sales will be treated as deferred-payment sales not on the installment plan.

§ 39.44-4 Deferred-payment sale of real property not on installment plan. (a) In transactions included in § 39.44-2 (a) (2) the obligations of the purchaser received by the vendor are to be considered as the equivalent of cash to the amount of their fair market value in ascertaining the profit or loss from the transaction.

(b) If the vendor has retained title to the property and the purchaser defaults in any of his payments, and the vendor repossesses the property, the difference between (1) the entire amount of the payments actually received on the contract and retained by the vendor plus the fair market value at the time of repossession of fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser and (2) the sum of the profits previously returned as income in connection therewith and an amount representing what would have been a proper adjustment for exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion of the property during the period the property was in the hands of the purchaser had the sale not been made will constitute gain or loss, as the case may be, to the vendor for the year in which the property is repossessed, and the basis of the property in the hands of the vendor will be the original basis at the time of the sale plus the fair market value at the time of repossession, of fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser. If the vendor has previously transferred title to the purchaser, and the purchaser defaults in any of his payments, and the vendor accepts a voluntary reconveyance of the property, in partial or full satisfaction of the unpaid portion of the purchase price, the receipt of the property so reacquired, to the extent of its fair market value at that time, including the fair market value of fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser, shall be considered as the receipt of payment on the obligations satisfied. If the fair market value of the property is greater than the basis of the obligations of the purchaser so satisfied (generally, such basis being the fair market value of such obligations previously recognized in computing income) the excess constitutes ordinary income, and if the value of such property is less than the basis of such obligations, the difference may be deducted as a bad debt if uncollectible, except that if the obligations satisfied are securities (as defined in section 23 (k) (3) and section 117 (f)), any gain or loss resulting from the transaction is a capital gain or loss subject to the provisions of section 117. If the property reacquired is subsequently sold, the basis for determining gain or loss is the fair market value of the property at the date of reacquisition including the fair market value of the fixed improvements placed on the property by the purchaser. See § 39.23 (k)-3 with respect to property reacquired in a foreclosure proceeding.

(c) If the obligations received by the vendor have no fair market value, the payments in cash or other property having a fair market value shall be applied against and reduce the basis of the property sold, and, if in excess of such basis, shall be taxable to the extent of the excess. Gain or loss is realized when the obligations are disposed of or satisfied, the amount being the difference between the reduced basis as provided above and the amount realized therefor. Only in rare and extraordinary cases does property have no fair market value.

§ 39.44–5 Gain or loss upon disposition of installment obligations. (a) The entire amount of gain or loss resulting from the disposition or satisfaction of installment obligations, computed in accordance with section 44 (d) is recognized under the Internal Revenue Code unless the disposition is within one of the exceptions made by the Code. Such an exception is provided in section 44 (d) with respect to distributions under section 112 (b) (6) and in section 112 (b) (4) and (5) with respect to exchanges.

(b) The application of section 44 (d) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1950 the M Corporation sold a piece of unimproved real estate to B for $20,000. The company acquired the property in 1938 at a cost of $10,000. During 1950 the company received $5,000 cash and vendee's notes for the remainder of the selling price, or $15,000, payable in subsequent years. In 1952, before the vendee made any further payments, the company sold the notes for $13,000 in cash. The corporation makes its returns on the calendar year basis. The income to be reported for 1952 is $5,500, computed as follows:

Proceeds of sale of notes		$13,000
Selling price of property	$20,000
Cost of property	10,000
Total profit	10,000
Total contract price	20,000
Percent of profit, or proportion of each payment returnable as income, $10,000 divided by $20,000, 50 percent.
Face value of notes	15,000
Amount of income returnable were the notes satisfied in full, 50 percent of $15,000	7,500
Excess of face value of notes over amount of income returnable were the notes satisfied in full		7,500
Taxable income to be reported for 1952		5,500

Example (2). Suppose in the example given above the M Corporation, instead of selling the notes, distributed them in 1952 to its shareholders as a dividend, and at the time of such distribution the fair market value of the notes was $14,000. The income to be reported for 1952 is $6,500, computed as follows:

Fair market value of notes	$14,000
Excess of face value of notes over amount of income returnable were the notes satisfied in full (computed as in example (1))	7,500
Taxable income to be reported for 1952	6,500

(c) In the case of a decedent who dies possessed of installment obligations, no gain on account of the transmission at death of such obligations is required to be reported as income in the return of the decedent for the year of his death, if the executor or administrator of the estate of the decedent or any of the next of kin or legatees files with the Commissioner a bond on Form 1132 conditioned upon the return as income, by any person receiving any payment in satisfaction of such obligations, of the same proportion of such payment as would be returnable as income by the decedent if he had lived and received such payment. The bond shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner, shall be in an amount sufficient in his judgment to insure collection of the tax resulting from the fulfillment of the conditions stated in the bond, and shall be filed at the time of filing the return for the decedent for the year of his death or at such later time as may be specified by the Commissioner. A corporation will not be accepted as a surety on such bond unless the corporation holds a certificate of authority from the Secretary as an acceptable surety on Federal bonds. In lieu of surety or sureties there may be deposited bonds or notes of the United States.

(d) See section 117 as to the limitation on capital losses sustained by corporations and the limitation as to both capital gains and capital losses of individuals.

§ 39.45 Statutory provisions; accounting periods and methods of accounting; allocation of income and deductions.

SEC. 45. Allocation of income and deductions. In any case of two or more organizations, trades, or businesses (whether or not incorporated, whether or not organized in the United States, and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the Commissioner is authorized to distribute, apportion, or allocate gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances between or among such organizations, trades, or businesses, if he determines that such distribution, apportionment, or allocation is necessary in order to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any of such organizations, trades, or businesses.

§ 39.45–1 Determination of the taxable net income of a controlled taxpayer—(a) Definitions. When used in this section:

(1) The term "organization" includes any organization of any kind, whether it be a sole proprietorship, a partnership, a trust, an estate, or a corporation (as each is defined or understood in the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations in this part) irrespective of the place where organized, where operated, or where its trade or business is conducted, and regardless of whether domestic or foreign, whether exempt, whether affiliated, or whether a party to a consolidated return.

(2) The terms "trade" or "business" include any trade or business activity of any kind, regardless of whether or where organized, whether owned individually or otherwise, and regardless of the place where carried on.

(3) The term "controlled" includes any kind of control, direct or indirect, whether legally enforceable, and however exercisable or exercised. It is the reality of the control which is decisive, not its form or the mode of its exercise. A presumption of control arises if income or deductions have been arbitrarily shifted.

(4) The term "controlled taxpayer" means any one of two or more organizations, trades, or businesses owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests.

(5) The terms "group" and "group of controlled taxpayers" mean the organizations, trades, or businesses owned or controlled by the same interests.

(6) The term "true net income" means, in the case of a controlled taxpayer, the net income (or, as the case may be, any item or element affecting net income) which would have resulted to the controlled taxpayer, had it in the conduct of its affairs (or, as the case may be, in the particular contract, transaction, arrangement, or other act) dealt with the other member or members of the group at arm's length. It does not mean the income, the deductions, the credits, the allowances, or the item or element of income, deductions, credits, or allowances, resulting to the controlled taxpayer by reason of the particular contract, transaction, or arrangement, the controlled taxpayer, or the interests controlling it, chose to make (even though such contract, transaction, or arrangement be legally binding upon the parties thereto)

(b) Scope and purpose. (1) The purpose of section 45 is to place a controlled taxpayer on a tax parity with an uncontrolled taxpayer, by determining, according to the standard of an uncontrolled taxpayer, the true net income from the property and business of a controlled taxpayer. The interests controlling a group of controlled taxpayers are assumed to have complete power to cause each controlled taxpayer so to conduct its affairs that its transactions and accounting records truly reflect the net income from the property and business of each of the controlled taxpayers. If, however, this has not been done, and the taxable net incomes are thereby understated, the statute contemplates that the Commissioner shall intervene, and, by making such distributions, apportionments, or allocations as he may deem necessary of gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances, or of any item or element affecting net income, between or among the controlled taxpayers constituting the group, shall determine the true net income of each controlled taxpayer. The standard to be applied in every case is that of an uncontrolled taxpayer dealing at arm's length with another uncontrolled taxpayer.

(2) Section 45 and this section apply to the case of any controlled taxpayer, whether such taxpayer makes a separate or a consolidated return. If a controlled taxpayer makes a separate return, the determination is of its true separate net income. If a controlled taxpayer is a party to a consolidated return, the true consolidated net income of the affiliated group and the true separate net income of the controlled taxpayer are determined consistently with the principles of a consolidated return.

(3) Section 45 grants no right to a controlled taxpayer to apply its provisions at will, nor does it grant any right to compel the Commissioner to apply such provisions. It is not intended (except in the case of the computation of consolidated net income under a consolidated return) to effect in any case such a distribution, apportionment, or allocation of gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances, or any item of gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances, as would produce a result equivalent to a computation of consolidated net income under section 141.

(c) Application. Transactions between one controlled taxpayer and another will be subjected to special scrutiny to ascertain whether the common control is being used to reduce, avoid, or escape taxes. In determining the true net income of a controlled taxpayer, the Commissioner is not restricted to the case of improper accounting, to the case of a fraudulent, colorable, or sham transaction, or to the case of a device designed to reduce or avoid tax by shifting or distorting income, deductions, credits, or allowances. The authority to determine true net income extends to any case in which either by inadvertence or design the taxable net income, in whole or in part, of a controlled taxpayer, is other than it would have been had the taxpayer in the conduct of his affairs been an uncontrolled taxpayer dealing at arm's length with another uncontrolled taxpayer.

§ 39.46 Statutory provisions; accounting periods and methods of accounting; change of accounting period.

SEC. 46. Change of accounting period. If a taxpayer changes his accounting period from fiscal year to calendar year, from calendar year to fiscal year, or from one fiscal year to another, the net income shall, with the approval of the Commissioner, be computed on the basis of such new accounting period, subject to the provisions of section 47.

§ 39.46-1 Change of accounting period—(a) Short taxable years ending prior to July 1, 1953. If a taxpayer (other than a subsidiary corporation required to change its accounting period by reason of the provisions of § 24.14 of this chapter (Regulations 129)) changes his accounting period, he shall make application direct to the Commissioner on Form 1128 at least 60 days prior to the close of the fractional part of the year for which a return would be required to effect the change if the short taxable year ends before July 1, 1953, and, before using the new period for income tax purposes, secure the consent of the Commissioner. If a change of accounting period of a subsidiary is required for income tax purposes under § 24.14 of this chapter (Regulations 129) the information required on Form 1128 shall be furnished by the subsidiary at or before the time of filing the consolidated income tax return. For the due date of returns for fractional parts of a year, see § 39.53-1. Where a timely application is made to compute the net income of an individual taxpayer upon the basis of the same accounting period as that of such individual's spouse, permission so to compute net income will be granted even though such permission will allow the individual and his spouse to reduce their taxes by taking advantage of section 12 (d) (the so-called "income splitting" provision) through the filing of a joint return, so long as no other reason appears which is considered sufficient by the Commissioner for denying such permission. If the change is approved by the Commissioner, the taxpayer shall thereafter make his returns and compute his net income upon the basis of the new accounting period. See section 47.

(b) Short taxable years ending after June 30, 1953—(1) General. A change of accounting period for income tax purposes requiring a return for a short taxable year ending after June 30, 1953, is authorized, except where inconsistent with section 41, requiring the use of the calendar year basis in certain specific cases, and except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, and no application for such change need be filed. To make such a change the taxpayer shall file a tax return on or before the 15th day of the third full calendar month following the close of the short taxable year accompanied by a statement that it is made under the authorization conferred by this section. Once a change of accounting period has been made, the taxpayer shall thereafter make his returns and compute his net income on the basis of the new accounting period.

(2) Cases in which approval of change of accounting period is required. The prior approval of the Commissioner will be required before a taxpayer may change his accounting period if any of the following conditions exist:

(i) At any time within the 5 calendar years ending with the calendar year which includes the beginning of the short taxable year required to effect the change of accounting period the taxpayer has changed his accounting period for income tax purposes. For the purpose of this subparagraph a change of accounting period for income tax purposes by a partnership shall be considered as a change by each member thereof and a change by any member shall be deemed to be a change by the partnership. Likewise, a change of accounting period for income tax purposes by a trust shall be considered as a change by each beneficiary thereof and a change by a beneficiary shall be deemed to be a change by the trust.

(ii) The short taxable year required to effect the change of accounting period ends more than 3 months and less than 9 months after the close of the accounting period used by the taxpayer for purposes of filing his income tax return for the previous full taxable year.

(iii) The taxpayer's net income for the short taxable year required to effect the change of accounting period, as annualized in the manner provided in § 39.47-2, is less than 80 percent of the net income of the taxpayer for the full taxable year immediately preceding such short taxable year.

(3) Illustration. The application of certain of the foregoing provisions is illustrated by the following example:

Example. X files his income tax returns on a calendar year basis. He desires to change his accounting period during the year 1954 in order to file his returns on a fiscal year basis ending March 31. X has not previously changed his accounting period. His income for the period January 1 through March 31, 1954, when annualized in accordance with § 39.47-2, equals at least 80 percent of his net income for the calendar year 1953. X is authorized to change his accounting period by filing, on or before June 15, 1954, a tax return for the short taxable year beginning January 1 and ending March 31, 1954. Thereafter, X shall make his annual returns and compute his net income on the basis of a fiscal year ending March 31.

Had X preferred, he could have changed to a fiscal year basis ending the last day of January, February, September, October, or November. However, if X had elected to change to a fiscal year accounting period ending on the last day of April, May, June, July, or August the prior approval of the Commissioner would be required since such a change would result in a return for a short taxable year ending more than 3 months and less than 9 months after the close of the accounting period regularly used by X.

(4) Approval of change of accounting period. Where prior approval of a change of accounting period is required, application shall be filed on Form 1128 with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., on or before the 15th day following the close of the short taxable year for which a return would be required to effect the change of accounting period. In general, an application for a change of accounting period will be approved where the taxpayer establishes valid business reasons for making such change. A change of accounting period intended to be made primarily for the purpose of effecting a tax saving shall not be allowed except where such tax saving results from the application of section 12 (d) the so-called "income splitting" provision, in the case where a husband and wife adopt the same accounting period in order to file a joint return and no other reason appears which is considered sufficient by the Commissioner for denying such permission.

(5) Change of accounting period by a subsidiary corporation filing a consolidated return. The foregoing provisions of this paragraph have no application in the case of a subsidiary corporation required to change its accounting period because it has elected to file consolidated returns. See § 24.14 of this chapter (Regulations 129) In such a case, if a change of accounting period is made on or after July 1, 1953, the corporation shall complete Form 1128 and forward it to the district director of internal revenue with whom the consolidated return is to be filed at or before the time of filing of such consolidated return.

§ 39.47 Statutory provisions; accounting periods and methods of accounting; returns for periods of less than 12 months.

SEC. 47. Returns for a period of less than twelve months—(a) Returns for short period resulting from change of accounting period. If a taxpayer, with the approval of the Commissioner, changes the basis of computing net income from fiscal year to calendar year a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the last fiscal year for which return was made and the following December 31. If the change is from calendar year to fiscal year, a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the last calendar year for which return was made and the date designated as the close of the fiscal year. If the change is from one fiscal year to another fiscal year a separate return shall be made for the period between the close of the former fiscal year and the date designated as the close of the new fiscal year.

(b) Income computed on basis of short period. Where a separate return is made under subsection (a) on account of a change in the accounting period, and in all other cases where a separate return is required or permitted, by regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to be made for a fractional part of a year, then the income shall be computed on the basis of the period for which separate return is made.

(c) Income placed on annual basis—(1) General rule. If a separate return is made under subsection (a) on account of a change in the accounting period, the net income, computed on the basis of the period for which separate return is made (referred to in this subsection as "the short period"), shall be placed on an annual basis by multiplying the amount thereof by twelve, and dividing by the number of months in the short period. The tax shall be such part of the tax computed on such annual basis as the number of months in the short period is of twelve months.

(2) Exception. If the taxpayer establishes the amount of his net income for the period of twelve months beginning with the first day of the short period, computed as if such twelve-month period were a taxable year, under the law applicable to such year, then the tax for the short period shall be reduced to an amount which is such part of the tax computed on the net income for such twelve-month period as the net income computed on the basis of the short period is of the net income for the twelve-month period. The taxpayer (other than a taxpayer to which the next sentence applies) shall compute the tax and file his return without the application of this paragraph. If the taxpayer (other than a corporation) was not in existence at the end of the twelve-month period, or if the taxpayer is a corporation and has disposed of substantially all its assets prior to the end of such twelve-month period, then in lieu of the net income for such twelve-month period there shall be used for the purposes of this paragraph the net income for the twelve-month period ending with the last day of the short period. The tax computed under this paragraph shall in no case be less than the tax computed on the net income for the short period without placing such net income on an annual basis. The benefits of this paragraph shall not be allowed unless the taxpayer, at such time as regulations prescribed hereunder require (but not after the time prescribed for the filing of the return for the first taxable year which ends on or after twelve months after the beginning of the short period), makes application therefor in accordance with such regulations. Such application, in case the return was filed without regard to this paragraph, shall be considered a claim for credit or refund with respect to the amount by which the tax is reduced under this paragraph. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe such regulations as he may deem necessary for the application of this paragraph.

(e) Reduction of credits against net income. In the case of a return made for a fractional part of a year under section 146 (a) (1), the exemptions provided in section 25 (b) shall be reduced to amounts which bear the same ratio to the full exemptions so provided as the number of months in the period for which return is made bears to twelve months.

(f) Closing of taxable year in case of jeopardy. For closing of taxable year in case of jeopardy, see section 146.

(g) Returns where taxpayer not in existence for twelve months. In the case of a taxpayer not in existence during the whole of an annual accounting period ending on the last day of a month, or, if the taxpayer has no such annual accounting period or does not keep books, during the whole of a calendar year, the return shall be made for the fractional part of the year during which the taxpayer was in existence.

[Sec. 47 as amended by sec. 135 (a), (c), Rev. Act 1942; secs. 104, 107 (a), Rev. Act 1943; sec. 10 (c), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 102 (b) (3), Rev. Act 1945]

§ 39.47–1 Returns for periods of less than 12 months. (a) No return can be made for a period of more than 12 months. A separate return for a fractional part of a year is therefore required whenever there is a change, with the approval of the Commissioner, in the basis of computing net income from one taxable year to another taxable year. The periods to be covered by such separate returns in the several cases are stated in section 47 (a) The requirements with respect to the filing of a separate return and the payment of tax for a part of a year are the same as for the filing of a return and the payment of tax for a full taxable year closing at the same time, except as otherwise provided in §§ 39.53–1, 39.56–1, 39.217–1, 39.218–1, 39.235–1, and 39.236–1. If a return is made for a fractional part of a year resulting from the termination of the taxable period by the Commissioner under section 146, the exemptions for normal tax and surtax shall be reduced to that proportion of the full exemptions for normal tax and surtax which the number of months in the period for which the return is made bears to 12 months, but such exemptions shall not be reduced for a fractional part of a year otherwise resulting. A return is required in the case of every taxable year which is a period of less than 12 months, if the gross income for such taxable year is greater than one exemption for normal tax and surtax as so reduced.

(b) The return of a decedent for the taxable year in which falls the date of his death is a return for the period during which he was alive.

(c) Any reference in the regulations in this part to a taxable year which is the calendar year (see, for example, the regulations under sections 11–15, inclusive, and 108) means a taxable year of 12 months beginning on January 1 and ending on December 31. The term does not include a taxable year of less than 12 months, even though the taxpayer may have customarily made his returns on the basis of a calendar year.

§ 39.47–2 Returns for period of less than 12 months on account of a change in accounting period—(a) Net income placed on annual basis and tax computed thereon. (1) In the case of a return for a period of less than 12 months on account of a change in accounting period, section 47 (c) provides that the net income computed on the return for such short period shall be placed on an annual basis by multiplying the amount thereof by 12 and dividing by the number of months in the short period. The tax is such part of the tax computed on such annual basis as the number of months in the period is of 12 months.

(2) In placing on an annual basis the net income of a corporation for a short period, the credit for dividends received is placed on an annual basis to correspond to the amount of dividends received included in the net income, which amount is placed on an annual basis when such net income is placed on an annual basis. Similarly, the credit for interest on United States obligations should reflect the amount of such interest as increased when such amount is placed on an annual basis as part of the net income which is placed on an annual basis.

(3) The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph:

Example (1). A citizen of the United States made a return for the 10-month period ended October 31, 1952, on account of a change in accounting period. His net income for such 10-month period was $10,000. He was entitled to exemptions for normal tax and surtax of $1,200. His tax for the period is $2,743.33, computed as follows:

Net income for 10-month period	$10,000.00
Multiplied by 12	120,000.00
Net income on annual basis ($120,000--10)	12,000.00
Less: Exemption for normal tax and surtax	1,200.00
Net income subject to normal tax and surtax	10,800.00
Normal tax (3 percent of $10,800)	324.00
Surtax on $10,800	2,968.00
Total tax on annual basis	3,292.00
Amount of tax for 10-month period $\left($3{,}292.00 \times \frac{10}{12}\right)$	2,743.33

Example (2). The X Corporation made a return for the 8-month period ended August 31, 1952, on account of a change in accounting period. The net income of the corporation for such 8-month period was $72,000, including $4,000 interest on obligations of the United States described in section 26 (a) and $12,000 in dividends from a domestic corporation, for which the credit provided in section 26 (b) is applicable. The normal tax and surtax for the 8-month period is $27,269.33, computed as follows:

Net income for 8-month period		$72,000.00
Multiplied by 12		864,000.00
Net income on annual basis ($864,000—8)		108,000.00
Dividends received, subject to the credit provided in section 26 (b)	$12,000.00

Multiplied by 12	$144,000.00
Dividends received placed on annual basis ($144,000 ÷ 8)	18,000.00
Subtracting: Credit provided in section 26 (b) for dividends received (85 percent of $18,000)		$15,300.00
Surtax net income		92,700.00
Interest on United States obligations subject to credit provided in section 26 (a)	$4,000.00
Multiplied by 12	48,000.00
Subtracting: Credit provided in section 26 (a) for interest placed on annual basis ($48,000 ÷ 8)		6,000.00
Normal tax net income		86,700.00
Normal tax on $86,700.00		26,010.00
Surtax on $92,700.00		14,894.00
Total tax on annual basis		40,904.00
Amount of tax for period $\left($40{,}904 \times \frac{8}{12}\right)$		27,269.33

(b) Tax for short period determined by annual income. (1) If the taxpayer applies to the Commissioner in the manner provided in paragraph (c) of this section to have his tax computed under the provisions of section 47 (c) (2) and if the taxpayer establishes the amount of his net income for the 12-month period hereinafter described, then section 47 (c) (2) provides that the tax for the short period shall be reduced to an amount which is such part of the tax computed on the basis of the net income which the taxpayer has established for the 12-month period as the net income for the short period is of the net income for the 12-month period. If such amount, however, is greater than the tax computed under paragraph (a) of this section, the tax for the short period is the tax computed under paragraph (a) of this section. The 12-month period referred to above is the 12-month period beginning with the first day of the short period, except that if the taxpayer (other than a corporation) is not in existence at the end of such 12-month period, or if the taxpayer is a corporation which has distributed substantially all its assets prior to the end of such 12-month period, then it is the 12-month period ending with the last day of the short period. If a corporation ceases business and distributes so much of the assets used in its business that it cannot resume its customary operations with the remaining assets, it will be considered to have distributed substantially all of its assets.

(2) In computing the tax under section 47 (c) (2) the net income for the short period is not placed on an annual basis. The net income for the 12-month period is computed under the same provisions of law as are applicable to the short period, and is computed as if the 12-month period were an actual accounting period of the taxpayer. All items which fall in such 12-month period must be included even if they are extraordinary in amount or of an unusual nature. If the taxpayer is a member of a partnership, there shall be included in computing his income for the 12-month period his share of the partnership income for taxable years of the partnership ending with or during such 12-month period, but no amount shall be included with respect to a taxable year of the partnership ending after such 12-month period.

(3) If any other item partially applicable to such 12-month period can be determined only at the end of a taxable year which includes only part of the 12-month period, the taxpayer, subject to review by the Commissioner, shall apportion such item to the 12-month period in such manner as will most clearly reflect the income for the 12-month period. In the case of a taxpayer permitted or required to take inventories, the cost of goods sold during the part of the 12-month period included in the taxable year shall be considered, unless a more exact determination is available, as such part of the cost of goods sold during the entire taxable year as the gross receipts from sales for the part of the 12-month period included in the taxable year is of the gross receipts from sales for the entire taxable year. For example, the 12-month period of a corporation, engaged in the sale of merchandise, which has a short period from January 1, 1952, to September 30, 1952, is the calendar year 1952. The 3-month period October 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, is a part of the fiscal year ending September 30, 1953. The cost of goods sold during such 3-month period is such part of the cost of goods sold during the entire fiscal year ending September 30, 1953, as the gross receipts from sales for such 3-month period are of the gross receipts from sales for the entire fiscal year. The Commissioner may, in granting permission to a taxpayer to change its accounting period, require as a condition to granting the change that, if the taxpayer is to obtain the benefits of section 47 (c) (2), it shall take a closing inventory upon the last day of the 12-month period. Such closing inventory will be used only for the purposes of section 47 (c) (2), and the taxpayer will not be required to use such inventory in computing the net income for the taxable year in which such inventory is taken.

(4) The tax for the short period may not be reduced under section 47 (c) (2) to an amount which is less than the tax for the short period computed on the basis of the net income for the short period without placing such net income on an annual basis. If the tax computed under section 47 (c) (2) by reference to the net income for a 12-month period is less than such amount, the tax may be reduced only to such amount.

(5) The following examples illustrate the application of section 47 (c) (2)

Example (1). The facts are the same as in example (1) in paragraph (a) (3) of this section. In the period from November 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, the taxpayer has $1,000 net income. His net income for the 12-month period from January 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, is, therefore, $11,000. The taxpayer files an application under paragraph (c) of this section for a reduction of his tax to an amount computed on the basis of his actual net income for the 12-month period from January 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952. His tax is reduced to $2,618.18, computed as follows:

Net income for 12-month period		$11,000.00
Less: Exemptions for normal tax and surtax		1,200.00
Income subject to normal tax		9,800.00
Normal tax (3 percent of $9,800)		294.00
Surtax on $9,800		2,586.00
Total tax on annual income		2,880.00
Net income for 10-month period	$10,000.00
Net income for 12-month period	$11,000.00
Amount of tax for 10-month period $\left(\frac{10{,}000}{11{,}000} \times $2{,}880.00\right)$		2,618.18

The amount of tax which would be due if the income were not placed on an annual basis is $2,500.00, computed as follows:

Net income for 10-month period	$10,000.00
Less: Exemptions for normal tax and surtax	1,200.00
Net income subject to normal tax and surtax	8,800.00
Normal tax (3 percent of $8,800)	264.00
Surtax on $8,800	2,236.00
Total tax for 10-month period	2,500.00

Since the tax for the short period computed under section 47 (c) (2) by reference to the actual income for the 12-month period, or $2,618.18, is greater than the tax which would be due if the income for the short period were not placed on an annual basis, or $2,500.00, the tax for the short period is reduced to $2,618.18, the tax computed by reference to the income for the 12-month period.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) of this subparagraph, except that during the period from November 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, the taxpayer has no income, but has deductible business expenses of $1,000. His net income for the 12-month period from January 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, is, therefore, $9,000. The taxpayer filed an application under paragraph (c) of this section for a reduction of his tax under the provisions of section 47 (c) (2). The tax computed on the basis of the net income for the period from January 1, 1952, to October 31, 1952, without placing such net income on an annual basis is $2,500.00 (see example (1)). The tax computed under section 47 (c) (2) by reference to the actual net income for the 12-month period from January 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, is $2,364.44, computed as follows:

Net income for 12-month period		$9,000.00
Less: Exemptions for normal tax and surtax		1,200.00
Net income subject to normal tax and surtax		7,800.00
Normal tax (3 percent of $7,800)		234.00
Surtax on $7,800		1,834.00
Total tax on annual income		2,128.00
Net income for 10-month period	$10,000.00
Net income for 12-month period	9,000.00
Amount of tax for 10-month period $\left(\frac{10{,}000}{9{,}000} \times $2{,}128.00\right)$		2,364.44

computed by reference to the actual net income for the 12-month period, the tax for the short period under section 47 (c) (2) is $2,500.00.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) in paragraph (a) (3) of this section. The taxpayer applies to have its tax reduced under the provisions of section 47 (c) (2). During the 4-month period from September 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, the X Corporation has $16,000 net income, including $3,000 dividends from a domestic corporation for which the credit provided in section 26 (b) is applicable and $1,000 interest on obligations of the United States described in section 26 (a). The net income for the 12-month period from January 1, 1952, to December 31, 1952, is, therefore, $88,000. For such 12-month period, the dividends from domestic corporations for which the credit provided in section 26 (b) is applicable amount to $15,000, and the interest on United States obligations described in section 26 (a) amounts to $5,000. The normal tax and surtax for the short period is reduced under section 47 (c) (2) to $26,288.18, computed as follows:

Net income for 12-month period Jan. 1, 1952, to Dec. 31, 1952		$88,000.00
Subtracting: Dividends received credit provided by section 26 (b) (85 percent of $15,000)		12,750.00
Surtax net income		75,250.00
Less: Credit provided in section 26 (a) for interest on United States obligations		5,000.00
Normal tax net income		70,250.00
Normal tax on $70,250.00		21,075.00
Surtax on $75,250.00		11,055.00
Total tax on annual income		32,130.00
Net income for 8-month period Jan. 1, 1952, to Aug. 31, 1952	$72,000
Net income for 12-month period Jan. 1, 1952, to Dec. 31, 1952	88,000
Amount of tax for 8-month period Jan. 1, 1952, to Aug. 31, 1952 $\left(\frac{72,000}{88,000}\times $32,130.00\right)$		26,288.18

The amount of normal tax and surtax that would be due if the income for the short period were not placed on an annual basis is $25,436.00, computed as follows:

Net income for 8-month period	$72,000.00
Credit for dividends received (85 percent of $12,000)	10,200.00
Surtax net income	61,800.00
Less: Credit for interest on United States obligations	4,000.00
Normal tax net income	57,800.00
Normal tax on $57,800.00	17,340.00
Surtax on $61,800	8,096.00
Total tax for period	25,436.00

Since the tax for the short period computed under section 47 (c) (2) by reference to the actual income for the 12-month period, or $26,288.18, is greater than the tax that would be due if the income for the short period were not placed on an annual basis, or $25,436.00, the tax for the short period is reduced to $26,288.18, the tax computed by reference to the income for the 12-month period.

(c) Application to compute tax under section 47 (c) (2) A taxpayer desiring the benefit of section 47 (c) (2) must file an application therefor. If at the time the return for the short period is filed the taxpayer is able to determine that the 12-month period ending with the close of the short period will be used in the computations under section 47 (c) (2) then the tax on the return for the short period may be determined under the provisions of section 47 (c) (2) In such a case, an income tax return form covering the 12-month period shall be attached to the return as a part thereof, and the return will then be considered the application for the benefits of section 47 (c) (2) required by that section. In all other cases, the taxpayer shall file its return and compute its tax as provided in paragraph (a) of this section, and the application for the benefits of section 47 (c) (2) shall be made in the form of a claim for credit or refund. The claim shall set forth the computation of the net income and the tax thereon for the 12-month period, and must be filed not later than the time prescribed for filing the return for the first taxable year ending with or after the twelfth month after the beginning of the short period. For example, the taxpayer changes its accounting period from the calendar year basis to the fiscal year basis ending September 30, and files a return for the period from January 1, 1952, to September 30, 1952. Its application for the benefits of section 47 (c) (2) must be filed not later than the time prescribed for filing its return for the first taxable year which ends on or after the last day of December 1952, the twelfth month after the beginning of the short period. In this case, the taxpayer must file its application not later than December 15, 1953, the time prescribed for filing the return for its fiscal year ending September 30, 1953. However, if it obtains an extension of time for filing the return for such fiscal year, it may file its application during the period of such extension. If the Commissioner determines that the taxpayer has established the amount of the net income for the 12-month period, any excess of the tax paid for the short period over the tax computed under section 47 (c) (2) will be credited or refunded to the taxpayer in the same manner as in the case of an overpayment.

SEC. 48. Definitions. When used in this chapter—

(a) Taxable year. "Taxable year" means the calendar year, or the fiscal year ending during such calendar year, upon the basis of which the net income is computed under this part. "Taxable year" means, in the case of a return made for a fractional part of a year under the provisions of this chapter or under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, the period for which such return is made.

(b) Fiscal year. "Fiscal year" means an accounting period of twelve months ending on the last day of any month other than December.

(c) "Paid or incurred," "paid or accrued" The terms "paid or incurred" and "paid or accrued" shall be construed according to the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed under this part.

(d) Trade or business. The term "trade or business" includes the performance of the functions of a public office.

[Sec. 48 as amended by sec. 135 (d), Rev. Act 1942]

RETURNS AND PAYMENT OF TAX

SEC. 51. Individual returns—(a) Requirement. Every individual having for the taxable year a gross income of $600 or more shall make a return, which shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. Such return shall set forth in such cases, and to such extent, and in such detail, as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, the items of gross income and the deductions and credits allowed under this chapter and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as may be prescribed by such regulations.

(b) Husband and wife—(1) In general. A husband and wife may make a single return jointly. Such a return may be made even though one of the spouses has neither gross income nor deductions. If a joint return is made the tax shall be computed on the aggregate income and the liability with respect to the tax shall be joint and several.

(2) Nonresident alien. No joint return may be made if either the husband or wife at any time during the taxable year is a nonresident alien.

(3) Different taxable years. No joint return shall be made if the husband and wife have different taxable years; except that if such taxable years begin on the same day and end on different days because of the death of either or of both, then the joint return may be made with respect to the taxable year of each. The above exception shall not apply if the surviving spouse remarries before the close of his taxable year, nor if the taxable year of either spouse is a fractional part of a year under section 47 (a).

(4) Joint return after death. In the case of the death of one spouse or both spouses the joint return with respect to the decedent may be made only by his executor or administrator; except that in the case of the death of one spouse the joint return may be made by the surviving spouse with respect to both himself and the decedent if (A) no return for the taxable year has been made by the decedent, (B) no executor or administrator has been appointed, and (C) no executor or administrator is appointed before the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse. If an executor or administrator of the decedent is appointed after the making of the joint return by the surviving spouse, the executor or administrator may disaffirm such joint return by making, within one year after the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse, a separate return for the taxable year of the decedent with respect to which the joint return was made, in which case the return made by the survivor shall constitute his separate return.

(5) Determination of status. For the purposes of this section—

(A) The status as husband and wife of two individuals having taxable years beginning on the same day shall be determined—

(i) If both have the same taxable year—as of the close of such year; and

(ii) If one dies before the close of the taxable year of the other—as of the time of such death; and

(B) An individual who is legally separated from his spouse under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(6) Tax in case of joint return. For determination of combined normal tax and surtax under section 11 and section 12 (b) in case of joint return under this subsection, see section 12 (d). For tax in case of joint return of husband and wife electing to pay the tax under Supplement T, see section 400.

(c) Persons under disability. If the taxpayer is unable to make his own return, the return shall be made by a duly authorized agent or by the guardian or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

(e) Fiduciaries. For returns to be made by fiduciaries, see section 142.

(f) Tax computed by collector in case of wage earners—(1) Return requirements. An individual entitled to elect to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T whose gross income is less than $5,000 and is entirely from one or more of the following sources: Remuneration for services performed by him as an employee, dividends, or interest; and whose gross income from sources other than wages, as defined in section 1621 (a), does not exceed $100, shall at his election be relieved, by using the form prescribed as the form for the return for the purposes of this subsection, from showing on the return the tax imposed by this chapter. In such case the tax shall be computed by the collector. In the case of a head of a household electing the benefits of this subsection, the tax shall be computed by the collector under Supplement T without regard to the taxpayer's status as head of a household.

(2) Result of computation. After the collector has computed the tax, he shall mail to the taxpayer a notice stating the amount determined by the collector as payable and making demand therefor.

(3) Regulations. The Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary shall prescribe regulations for carrying out this subsection, and such regulations may provide for the application of the rules of this subsection to cases where the gross income includes items other than those enumerated in paragraph (1), to cases where the gross income from sources other than wages on which the tax has been withheld at the source is more than $100 but not more than $200, and to cases where the gross income is $5,000 or more but not more than $5,200. Such regulations shall provide (A) for the application of this subsection in the case of husband and wife, including provisions determining when a joint return under this subsection may be permitted or required and what constitutes a joint return, whether the liability shall be joint and several, and whether one spouse may make return under this subsection and the other without regard to this subsection, and (B) whether and the extent to which the benefits of this subsection may be availed of, in the case of taxable years beginning in the calendar year 1944, by persons required to make or making payments of estimated tax with respect to any such taxable year.

(4) Method of election. The election to have the benefits of this subsection shall be made by making return on the form prescribed as the form for the return for the purposes of this subsection. An election so made shall constitute an election to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T.

(g) Joint return after filing separate return—(1) In general. If an individual has filed a separate return for a taxable year for which a joint return could have been made by him and his spouse under subsection (b) of this section, and the time prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year has expired, such individual and his spouse may nevertheless make a joint return for such taxable year. A joint return filed by the husband and wife in such a case shall constitute the return of the husband and wife for such taxable year, and all payments, credits, refunds, or other repayments made or allowed with respect to the separate return of either spouse for such taxable year shall be taken into account in determining the extent to which the tax based upon the joint return has been paid.

(2) Payments required before joint return can be made. A joint return can be made under paragraph (1) only if there is paid in full at or before the time of the filing of the joint return—

(A) All amounts previously assessed with respect to either spouse for such taxable year;

(B) All amounts shown as the tax by either spouse upon his separate return for such taxable year; and

(C) Any amount determined, at the time of the filing of the joint return, as a deficiency with respect to either spouse for such taxable year if, prior to such filing, a notice under section 272 (a) of such deficiency has been mailed.

(3) Time for making joint return. A joint return cannot be made under paragraph (1)—

(A) After the expiration of three years from the last date prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year (determined without regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse);

(B) After there has been mailed to either spouse, with respect to such taxable year, a notice of deficiency under section 272 (a), if the spouse, as to such notice, files a petition with the Tax Court of the United States within the time prescribed in such section;

(C) After either spouse has commenced a suit in any court for the recovery of any part of the tax for such taxable year; or

(D) After either spouse has entered into a closing agreement under section 3760 with respect to such taxable year, or after any civil or criminal case arising against either spouse with respect to such taxable year has been compromised under section 3761.

(4) Elections made in separate return. If a joint return is made under this subsection, any election (other than the election to file a separate return) made by either spouse in his separate return for such taxable year with respect to the treatment of any income, deduction, or credit of such spouse shall not be changed in the making of the joint return where such election would have been irrevocable if the joint return had not been made.

(5) Death of spouse. If a joint return is made under this subsection after the death of either spouse, such return with respect to the decedent can be made only by his executor or administrator.

(6) Additions to the tax. Where the amount shown as the tax by the husband and wife on a joint return made under this subsection exceeds the aggregate of the amounts shown as the tax upon the separate return of each spouse—

(A) Negligence. If any part of such excess is attributable to negligence or intentional disregard of rules and regulations (but without intent to defraud) at the time of the making of such separate return, then 5 per centum of the total amount of such excess shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as if it were a deficiency;

(B) Fraud. If any part of such excess is attributable to fraud with intent to evade tax at the time of the making of such separate return, then 50 per centum of the total amount of such excess shall be so assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the 50 per centum addition to the tax provided in section 3612 (d) (2).

(7) Rules for application of sections 275 and 291. For the purposes of section 275 (relating to period of limitations upon assessment and collection), and for the purposes of section 291 (relating to delinquent returns), a joint return made under this subsection shall be deemed to have been filed—

(A) Where both spouses filed separate returns prior to making the joint return—on the date the last separate return was filed (but not earlier than the last date prescribed by law for filing the return of either spouse);

(B) Where only one spouse filed a separate return prior to the making of the joint return, and the other spouse had less than $600 of gross income for such taxable year—on the date of the filing of such separate return (but not earlier than the last date prescribed by law for the filing of such separate return); or

(C) Where only one spouse filed a separate return prior to the making of the joint return, and the other spouse had gross income of $600 or more for such taxable year—on the date of the filing of such joint return.

(8) Rule for application of section 322. For the purposes of section 322 (relating to refunds and credits), a joint return made under this subsection shall be deemed to have been filed on the last date prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year (determined without regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse).

(9) Additional time for assessment. If a joint return is made under this subsection, the period of limitations provided in sections 275 and 276 on the making of assessments and the beginning of distraint or a proceeding in court for collection shall with respect to such return include one year immediately after the date of the filing of such joint return (computed without regard to the provisions of paragraph (7) of this subsection).

(10) Rule for application of section 3809 (a). For the purposes of section 3809 (a) (relating to criminal penalties in the case of fraudulent returns) the term "return" includes a separate return filed by a spouse with respect to a taxable year for which a joint return is made under this subsection after the filing of such separate return.

§ 39.51-1 Individual returns—(a) In general. For each taxable year a return of income shall be made by each citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, by every individual residing within the United States though not a citizen thereof, and by every alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, regardless of family or marital status, if such citizen or resident has for such taxable year a gross income of $600 or more, or a gross income in excess of the credit allowed by section 25 (b) prorated as provided in section 47 (e)

(b) Joint returns—(1) In general. (i) A husband and wife occupying the marital status as of the last day of the taxable year may elect to make a joint return (see section 51 (b)) even though one of the spouses has no gross income or deductions, and even though the spouses are not living together at any time during the taxable year. However, for the purpose of filing a joint return, an individual legally separated from his spouse under a decree of separate maintenance shall not be considered as married.

(ii) For any taxable year where a joint return has been filed, separate returns may not be made by the spouses after the time for filing the return of either has expired. See, however, subparagraph (2) (v) of this paragraph for the right of an executor to file a late separate return for a deceased spouse and thereby disaffirm a timely joint return made by the surviving spouse.

(iii) If a joint return is made, the gross income and adjusted gross income of husband and wife on the joint return are computed in an aggregate amount and the deductions allowed and the net income are likewise computed on an aggregate basis. Deductions limited to a percentage of the adjusted gross income, such as the deduction for charitable contributions under section 23 (o) will be allowed with reference to such aggregate adjusted gross income. Similarly, in the case of a joint return, losses of husband and wife from sales or exchanges of capital assets are combined and such combined losses are allowed under section 117 (d) (2) only to the extent of the combined gains of the spouses from such sales or exchanges, plus the net income (or adjusted gross income if the tax is computed under Supplement T) or $1,000 whichever is smaller. The "net income" referred to in section 117 (d) (2) is the net income computed before reduction by one-half for the purposes of income splitting under section 12 (d) and is such net income computed without regard to gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. Although there are two taxpayers on a joint return, there is only one net income. The tax on the joint return shall be computed on the aggregate income and the liability with respect to the tax shall be joint and several. A joint return may not be made if either the husband or wife at any time during the taxable year is a nonresident alien. For computation of tax on the basis of the splitting of income in the case of a joint return, see § 39.12—3. For tax in the case of a joint return of husband and wife electing to pay the tax under Supplement T, see §§ 39.400–1 and 39.401–1.

(2) Joint return after death. (i) Since in general a joint return may not be made if husband and wife have different taxable years, and since the taxable year of an individual closes as of the date of his death (see § 39.47–1) no joint return may be made for any taxable year, except as provided by section 51 (b) or by section 51 (g) in the case of the death of one or both spouses prior to the last day of such taxable year. Section 51 (b) provides that a joint return may be made for the survivor and the deceased spouse or for both deceased spouses if the taxable years of such spouses begin on the same day and end on different days only because of the death of either or both. Thus, if a husband and wife make their returns on a calendar year basis, and the wife dies on August 1, 1952, a joint return may be made with respect to the calendar year 1952 of the husband and the taxable year of the wife beginning on January 1, 1952, and ending with her death on August 1, 1952. Similarly if husband and wife both make their returns on the basis of a fiscal year beginning on July 1 and the wife dies on October 1, 1952, a joint return may be made with respect to the fiscal year of the husband beginning on July 1, 1952, and ending on June 30, 1953, and with respect to the taxable year of the wife beginning on July 1, 1952, and ending with her death on October 1, 1952. Section 51 (g) provides that a joint return may be made, under certain conditions, after separate rereturns have been filed even though the time prescribed by law for filing the return for such year has expired. See § 39.51–1 (b) (3) A joint return made under section 51 (g) after the death of either spouse shall, with respect to the decedent, be made only by his executor or administrator. Thus, where no executor or administrator has been appointed, a joint return cannot be made under section 51 (g) For the purposes of this subparagraph the status of two individuals as husband and wife, if one dies prior to the close of the taxable year of the other, shall be determined as of the time of such death.

(ii) The provision allowing a joint return to be made for the taxable year in which the death of either or both spouses occurs is subject to two exceptions. The first exception is that if the surviving spouse remarries before the close of his taxable year, he may not make a joint return with the first spouse who died during the taxable year. In such a case, however, the surviving spouse may make a joint return with his new spouse provided that the other requirements of section 51 (b) are met. The second exception is that the surviving spouse may not make a joint return with the deceased spouse if the taxable year of either spouse is a fractional part of a year under section 47 (a) resulting from a change of accounting period. For example, if a husband and wife make their returns on the calendar year basis and the wife dies on March 1, 1952, and thereafter the husband receives permission to change his accounting period to a fiscal year beginning July 1, 1952, no joint return may be made for the short taxable year ending June 30, 1952. Similarly, if a husband and wife who make their returns on a calendar year basis receive permission to change to a fiscal year beginning July 1, 1952, and the wife dies on June 1, 1952, no joint return may be made for the short taxable year ending June 30, 1952.

(iii) Section 51 (b) (4) provides for the method of making a joint return in the case of the death of one spouse or both spouses. The general rule is that, in the case of the death of one spouse, or of both spouses, the joint return with respect to the decedent may be made only by his executor or administrator. By the term executor or administrator is meant the person who is actually appointed to such office and not merely a person who may be in charge of the property of the decedent. An exception is made from this general rule whereby, in the case of the death of one spouse, the joint return may be made by the surviving spouse with respect to both him and the decedent if all the following conditions exist:

(a) No return has been made by the decedent for the taxable year in respect to which the joint return is made.

(b) No executor or administrator has been appointed at or before the time of making such joint return.

(c) No executor or administrator is appointed before the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse.

These conditions are to be applied with respect to the return for each of the taxable years of the decedent for which a joint return may be made if more than one such taxable year is involved. Thus, in the case of husband and wife on the calendar year basis, if the wife dies in February 1953, a joint return for the husband and wife for 1952 may be made if the conditions set forth above are satisfied with respect to such return. A joint return may also be made by the survivor for both himself and the deceased spouse for the calendar year 1953 if it is separately determined that the conditions set forth above are satisfied with respect to the return for such year. If, however, the deceased spouse should, prior to her death, make a return for 1952, the surviving spouse may not thereafter make a joint return for himself and the deceased spouse for 1952.

(iv) If an executor or administrator is appointed at or before the time of making the joint return or before the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse, the surviving spouse cannot make a joint return for himself and the deceased spouse whether or not a separate return for the deceased spouse is made by such executor or administrator. In such a case, any return made solely by the surviving spouse shall be treated as his separate return. The joint return, if one is to be made, must be made by both the surviving spouse and the executor or administrator. In determining whether an executor or administrator is appointed before the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse, an extension of time for making the return is included.

(v) If the surviving spouse makes the joint return provided for in subdivision (iii) and thereafter an executor or administrator of the decedent is appointed, the executor or administrator may disaffirm such joint return. This disaffirmance, in order to be effective, must be made within one year after the last day prescribed by law for filing the return of the surviving spouse (including any extension of time for filing such return) and must be made in the form of a separate return for the taxable year of the decedent with respect to which the joint return was made. In the event of such proper disaffirmance the return made by the survivor shall constitute his separate return, that is, the joint return made by him shall be treated as his return and the tax thereon shall be computed by excluding all items properly includible in the return of the deceased spouse. The separate return made by the executor or administrator shall constitute the return of the deceased spouse for the taxable year.

(vi) The time allowed the executor or administrator to disaffirm the joint return by the making of a separate return does not establish a new due date for the return of the deceased spouse. Accordingly, the provisions of sections 291 and 294, relating to delinquent returns and delinquency in payment of tax, are applicable to such return made by the executor in disaffirmance of the joint return.

(3) Joint return after filing separate return—(i) In general. (a) Where an individual has filed a separate return for a taxable year for which a joint return could have been made by him and his spouse under section 51 (b) and the time prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year has expired, such individual and his spouse may, under conditions hereinafter set forth, make a joint return for such taxable year. The joint return filed pursuant to section 51 (g) shall constitute the return of the husband and wife for such year, and all payments, credits, refunds, or other repayments, made or allowed with respect to the separate return of either spouse are to be taken into account in determining the extent to which the tax based on the joint return has been paid.

(b) For the purpose of this section, the determination whether an individual is married at any time during the taxable year shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 51 (b) (5) See § 39.51-1 (b) (1) The fact that the taxpayer and his spouse are divorced or legally separated at any time after the close of the taxable year for which separate returns are filed shall not deprive them of their right to file a joint return for such taxable year pursuant to section 51 (g)

(ii) Payments required before joint returns can be made. A joint return may not be made under section 51 (g) for a taxable year unless at or before the time of the filing of such joint return the following amounts are paid:

(a) All amounts previously assessed with respect to either spouse for such taxable year;

(b) All amounts shown as the tax by either spouse upon his separate return for such taxable year; and

(c) Any amount determined, at the time of the filing of the joint return, as a deficiency with respect to either spouse for such taxable year if, prior to such filing, a notice under section 272 (a) of such deficiency has been mailed.

(iii) Time for making joint return. A joint return may not be made under section 51 (g) with respect to a taxable year:

(a) After the expiration of 3 years from the last day prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year determined without regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse. Thus where an extension of time for filing returns has been granted by the Commissioner or his representative in accordance with section 53 (a) the extension shall be disregarded in determining the last day upon which a joint return may be filed after separate returns have been filed.

(b) After there has been mailed to either spouse, with respect to such taxable year, a notice of deficiency under section 272 (a) if the spouse, as to such notice, files a petition with the Tax Court of the United States within the time prescribed in section 272 (a) that is, within 90 days (or 150 days if notice is addressed to taxpayer outside the States of the Union and the District of Columbia) after the mailing of the notice, excluding Saturday, Sunday, or a legal holiday in the District of Columbia as the ninetieth day;

(c) After either spouse has commenced a suit in any court for the recovery of any part of the tax for such taxable year; or

(d) After either spouse has entered into a closing agreement under section 3760 with respect to such taxable year, or after any civil or criminal case arising against either spouse with respect to such taxable year has been compromised under section 3761.

(iv) Elections made in separate return. If a joint return is made under section 51 (g), any election, other than the election to file a separate return, made by either spouse in his separate return for the taxable year with respect to the treatment of any income, deduction, or credit of such spouse shall not be changed in the making of the joint return where such election would have been irrevocable if the joint return had not been made. Thus, if one spouse has made an irrevocable election to adopt and use the last-in, first-out inventory method under section 22 (d) this election may not be changed upon making the joint return under section 51 (g).

(v) Additions to the tax. Where the amount shown as the tax by the husband and wife on a joint return made under section 51 (g) exceeds the aggregate of the amounts shown as tax on the separate return of each spouse, and such excess is attributable to negligence, intentional disregard of rules and regulations, or fraud at the time of the making of such separate returns, there shall be assessed, collected, and paid in the same manner as if it were a deficiency an additional amount as provided in the two succeeding sentences. If any part of such excess is attributable to negligence, or intentional disregard of rules and regulations, at the time of the making of such separate return, but without any intent to defraud, this additional amount shall be 5 percent of the total amount of the excess. If any part of such excess is attributable to fraud with intent to evade tax at the time of the making of such separate return, this additional amount shall be 50 percent of the total amount of the excess. The latter addition is in lieu of the 50 percent addition to the tax provided in section 3612 (d) (2)

(vi) Rules for application of sections 275 and 291. For the purpose of section 275, relating to the period of limitations upon assessment and collection, and section 291, relating to delinquent returns, a joint return made under section 51 (g) shall be deemed to have been filed, giving due regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse, on the following dates:

(a) Where both spouses filed separate returns, prior to making the joint return under section 51 (g) on the date the last separate return of either spouse was filed for the taxable year, but not earlier than the last date prescribed by law for the filing of the return of either spouse;

(b) Where only one spouse was required and did file a return prior to the making of the joint return under section 51 (g) on the date of the filing of the separate return, but not earlier than the last day prescribed by law for the filing of such return; and

(c) Where both spouses were required to file a return, but only one spouse did so file, on the date of the filing of the joint return under section 51 (g)

(vii) Rule for application of section 322. For the purpose of section 322, relating to refunds and credits, a joint return made under section 51 (g) shall be deemed to have been filed on the last date prescribed by law for filing the return for such taxable year, determined without regard to any extension of time granted to either spouse for filing the return or paying the tax.

(viii) Additional time for assessment. In the case of a joint return made under section 51 (g) the period of limitations provided in sections 275 and 276 shall not be less than 1 year after the date of the actual filing of such joint return. The expiration of the 1 year is to be determined without regard to the rules provided in subdivision (vi) of this subparagraph, relating to the application of sections 275 and 291 with respect to a joint return made under section 51 (g)

(ix) Rule for application of section 3809 (a) For the purposes of section 3809 (a), relating to criminal penalties in the case of a fraudulent return, the term "return" includes a separate return filed by a spouse for the taxable year for which a joint return is subsequently made under section 51 (g)

§ 39.51-2 Form of return—(a) In general. (1) The return shall be on Form 1040, except in the case of a taxpayer entitled to elect, and who so elects, to use the Form 1040A in accordance with the rules prescribed in paragraph (b) of this section. A taxpayer, even though entitled to use Form 1040A for the taxable year may, nevertheless, use Form 1040 as his return. Such taxpayer otherwise entitled to use Form 1040A as his return for the taxable year but who does not desire to take the standard deduction provided in section 23 (aa) is required to use Form 1040 as his return for such taxable year.

(2) The forms may be obtained from the district directors of internal revenue for the several internal revenue districts. The return may be made by an agent, if by reason of illness, the person liable for the making of the return is unable to make it. The return may also be made by an agent if the taxpayer is unable to make the return by reason of continuous absence from the United States for a period of at least 60 days before the date prescribed by law for making the return. Whenever a return is made by an agent it must be accompanied by the prescribed power of attorney, Form 935, except that an agent holding a valid and subsisting general power of attorney authorizing him to represent his principal in making, executing, and filing the income return, may submit a certified copy thereof in lieu of the authorization on Form 935. The taxpayer and his agent, if any, are responsible for the return as made and incur liability for the penalties provided for erroneous, false, or fraudulent returns. For returns of nonresident aliens, see §§ 39.217-1 and 39.217-2.

(3) The home or residential address of the taxpayer (including the street and number, if any) shall be given in the space provided at the top of the return for the name and address of the taxpayer. A taxpayer having a permanent business address may give that address as the principal or mailing address, provided that the complete home or residential address is also given within the space provided.

(b) Use of optional return on Form 1040A. (1) An individual entitled to elect to pay the tax imposed by Supplement T (except a taxpayer making his returns on a fiscal year basis) may elect to use Form 1040A as his return provided his gross income is less than $5,000, consists entirely of remuneration for personal services performed by him as an employee, dividends, or interest, and his gross income from sources other than wages, as defined in section 1621 (a) does not exceed $100. A taxpayer who makes his return on a basis other than the cash receipts and disbursements basis may not use Form 1040A as his return. A taxpayer who has made payments of estimated tax for a taxable year may not use Form 1040A as his return for such year. In the case of married persons domiciled in a community-property State, Form 1040A may not be used as a return by either spouse unless the aggregate gross income of husband and wife meets the tests prescribed above and they make a joint return. If they desire to file separate returns, Form 1040 must be used.

(2) An election to make a return on Form 1040A shall be exercised by properly executing and filing such form, to which shall be attached all Forms W-2 received for the taxable year, with the district director of internal revenue on or before the due date of the taxpayer's return. Such Form 1040A, when filled out and executed and having attached thereto all Forms W-2 received with respect to wages paid in the taxable year, shall, when timely filed, constitute such individual's return for such year if he is eligible under section 51 (f) to use the optional return.

(c) Joint return of husband and wife on Form 1040A. (1) If during the taxable year either husband or wife, or both, derive income from wages, as defined in section 1621 (a) and are furnished one or more Forms W-2, and the aggregate gross income of both spouses is less than $5,000, consists solely of remuneration for services performed as an employee, dividends, or interest, and includes a total of not more than $100 from dividends, interest, and remuneration for personal services other than such wages, the spouses may file a joint return on Form 1040A signed by both spouses, and all Forms W-2 received by both spouses for the taxable year shall be attached thereto.

(2) The tax computed by the district director of internal revenue upon the basis of a joint return on Form 1040A shall be the lesser of the following amounts:

(i) A tax computed as though the return on Form 1040A constituted the separate returns of the spouses, and

(ii) A tax computed as though the return on Form 1040A constituted a joint return.

(3) If a joint return is made by husband and wife on Form 1040A, the liability for the tax shall be joint and several.

(d) Head of household. In the case of a head of a household electing to make his return on Form 1040A in accordance with the rules prescribed in this section, the tax shall be computed under Supplement T without regard to the status of the taxpayer as the head of a household.

§ 39.51-3 Return of income of minor. An individual, although a minor, who is single, is required to render a return of income if he has gross income (including compensation for personal services includible in his gross income under section 22 (m) (1) of $600 or over for the taxable year regardless of the amount of his net income. If the aggregate of the gross income of such a minor from any property which he possesses and from any funds held in trust for him by a trustee or guardian and from his earnings is at least $600, regardless of the amount of his net income, a return, as in the case of any other individual, must be made by him or for him by his guardian or other person charged with the care of his person or property. See § 39.142-2. If he is married, see § 39.51-1.

§ 39.51-4 Verification of returns. (a) A return of an individual required to be filed under section 51 shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury. All other income tax returns must be verified in the manner prescribed on the form for the return.

(b) Income tax returns actually prepared by other persons for individuals required to file returns under section 51 shall be verified as provided in section 51. If any person or persons actually prepare any other income return for another person, the prescribed form of verification on the return shall be executed by such person or persons preparing the return. Such verification is required on all such income returns required under the Internal Revenue Code except the following:

(1) Returns required under sections 143 and 144 (relating to withholding of tax at the source),

(2) Returns required to be made by departing aliens under section 146;

(3) Returns required under sections 147, 148, and 149 (relating to information at source),

(4) Returns by subsidiary corporations included in consolidated returns; and

(5) Returns required under sections 338 (a) 339, and 3604 (relating to monthly information returns filed by officers and directors, and also monthly and annual information returns filed by certain shareholders, of certain foreign corporations, and returns as to the formation of foreign corporations).

Such verification is not required if the actual preparation of the return is a regular and usual incident of the employment of one regularly and continuously employed for full time by the person for whom the return is made (as in the case of a clerk, secretary, bookkeeper, accountant, etc.) If, however, the employee is not regularly or continuously employed by the person for whom the return is made for the full time, or the actual preparation of the return is not a regular and usual incident of such employment, the requirements of this paragraph apply. Thus, if the return is prepared by an accountant or firm of accountants making periodical audits of the accounts of the person for whom the return is prepared, the verification is required. If the return is a separate return of a married person, the verification is required, although the one actually preparing the return is the husband or wife of the taxpayer. A person who renders mere mechanical assistance or preparation as, for example, a stenographer or typist, is not considered as preparing the return. If, in the course of his official duties, an internal revenue agent, or other officer or employee of the Internal Revenue Service actually prepares the return, the person for whom the return is made shall make in the return a brief statement to that effect, and it will not be necessary to make the verification required by this paragraph.

§ 39.51-5 Use of prescribed forms. Copies of the prescribed return forms will so far as possible be furnished taxpayers by district directors of internal revenue. A taxpayer will not be excused from making a return, however, by the fact that no return form has been furnished to him. Taxpayers not supplied with the proper forms should make application therefor to the district director of internal revenue in ample time to have their returns prepared, verified, and filed with the district director of internal revenue on or before the due date. Each taxpayer should carefully prepare his return so as fully and clearly to set forth the data therein called for. Returns which have not been so prepared will not be accepted as meeting the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code. In lack of a prescribed form a statement made by a taxpayer disclosing his gross income and the deductions therefrom may be accepted as a tentative return, and if filed within the prescribed time the statement so made will relieve the taxpayer from liability to penalties, provided that without unnecessary delay such a tentative return is supplemented by a return made on the proper form. (See further §§ 39.53-2 to 39.53-4, inclusive.)

SEC. 52. Corporation returns—(a) Requirement. Every corporation subject to taxation under this chapter shall make a return, stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits allowed by this chapter and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may by regulations prescribe. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer and by the treasurer, assistant treasurer, or chief accounting officer. In cases where receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of corporations, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall make returns for such corporations in the same manner and form as corporations are required to make returns. Any tax due on the basis of such returns made by receivers, trustees, or assignees shall be collected in the same manner as if collected from the corporations of whose business or property they have custody and control.

(b) Cross reference. For provisions relating to consolidated returns, see section 141. [Sec. 52 as amended by sec. 159 (f), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.52-1 Corporation returns. (a) Every corporation not expressly exempt from tax must make a return of income, regardless of the amount of its net income. In the case of ordinary corporations, the return shall be on Form 1120. For returns of insurance companies, see §§ 39.201-1, 39.204-1, and 39.207-1, of foreign corporations, see section 235; and of affiliated corporations, see section 141 and § 39.141-1. For returns of certain corporations, otherwise exempt from tax under section 101 (1) (6) (7) or (14) which are subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) (1) upon their Supplement U net income, see § 39.421-3. For returns of certain governmental colleges or universities and corporations wholly owned by such colleges or universities, which are subject to the tax imposed by section 421 (a) (1) upon their Supplement U net income, see § 39.421-3.

(b) A corporation having an existence during any portion of a taxable year is required to make a return. If a corporation was not in existence throughout an annual accounting period (either calendar year or fiscal year) the corporation is required to make a return for that fractional part of a year during which it was in existence. A corporation is not in existence after it ceases business and dissolves, retaining no assets, whether or not under State law it may thereafter be treated as continuing as a corporation for certain limited purposes connected with winding up its affairs, such as for the purpose of suing and being sued. If the corporation has valuable claims for which it will bring suit during this period, it has retained assets, and it continues in existence. A corporation does not go out of existence if it is merely turned over to receivers or trustees who continue to operate it. A corporation which has received a charter, but has never perfected its organization, which has transacted no business and had no income from any source, may upon presentation of the facts to the district director of internal revenue be relieved from the necessity of making a return as long as it remains in an unorganized condition. In the absence of a proper showing to the district director of internal revenue such a corporation will be required to make a return.

(c) For information returns by corporations contemplating dissolution or liquidation, see section 148 (d) For information returns by corporations of distributions in liquidation, see section 148 (e) For information returns by corporations relating to profits of the taxable year declared as dividends, see section 148 (b). For verification of returns and use of prescribed forms, see §§ 39.51-4 and 39.51-5.

§ 39.52-2 Returns by receivers. Receivers, trustees in dissolution, trustees in bankruptcy, and assignees, operating the property or business of corporations, must make returns of income for such corporations. If a receiver has full custody of and control over the business or property of a corporation, he shall be deemed to be operating such business or property within the meaning of section 52, whether he is engaged in carrying on the business for which the corporation was organized or only in marshaling, selling, and disposing of its assets for purposes of liquidation. Notwithstanding that the powers and functions of a corporation are suspended and that the property and business are for the time being in the custody of the receiver, trustee, or assignee, subject to the order of the court, such receiver, trustee, or assignee stands in the place of the corporate officers and is required to perform all the duties and assume all the liabilities which would devolve upon the officers of the corporation were they in control. (See sections 274 and 298 and §§ 39.274-1 and 39.274-2.) A receiver in charge of only part of the property of a corporation, however, as, for example, a receiver in mortgage foreclosure proceedings involving merely a small portion of its property, need not make a return of income.

SEC. 53. Time and place for filing returns—(a) Time for filing—(1) General rule. Returns made on the basis of the calendar year shall be made on or before the 15th day of March following the close of the calendar year, except that in the case of the return of the fiduciary of an estate or trust, the return shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of April following the close of the calendar year. Returns made on the basis of a fiscal year shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, except that in the case of the return of the fiduciary of an estate or trust, the return shall be made on or before the fifteenth day of the fourth month following the close of the fiscal year.

(2) Extension of time. The Commissioner may grant a reasonable extension of time for filing returns, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe with the approval of the Secretary. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no such extension shall be for more than six months.

(b) To whom return made—(1) Individuals. Returns (other than corporation returns) shall be made to the collector for the district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the return, or, if he has no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, then to the collector at Baltimore, Maryland.

(2) Corporations. Returns of corporations shall be made to the collector of the district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office or agency of the corporation, or, if it has no principal place of business or principal office or agency in the United States, then to the collector at Baltimore, Maryland.

§ 39.53-1 Time for filing returns. (a) In general, returns of income must be filed on or before the 15th day of the third full calendar month following the close of the taxable year. This rule is subject to several exceptions, in which the time for filing is as follows:

(1) In the case of a return of a nonresident alien individual (except a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year) at the time prescribed in section 217.

(2) In the case of a return of a nonresident foreign corporation, at the time prescribed in section 235.

(3) In the case of a final return of a decedent for a fractional part of a year, on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of the 12-month period which began with the first day of such fractional part of the year.

(4) In the case of any return for a fractional part of a year, the district director may, upon a showing by the taxpayer of unusual circumstances, prescribe a later time for the filing of the return.

(5) In the case of a return of a fiduciary of an estate or trust, on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the taxable year.

(b) A corporation going into liquidation during any taxable year may, upon the completion of such liquidation, prepare a return for that year covering its income for the part of the year during which it was engaged in business and may immediately file such return with the district director of internal revenue. See also section 148 (d) and (e)

(c) For provisions relating to certain cases in which the time for filing income tax returns is postponed by reason of an individual serving in or in support of the military or naval forces of the United States in a combat zone, see section 3804. See section 3805 and § 39.3805-1 as to the time for filing income tax returns of China Trade Act corporations.

§ 39.53-2 Extension of time for filing returns. It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date a return as nearly complete and final as it is possible for him to prepare. However, the Commissioner is authorized to grant a reasonable extension of time for filing returns under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe with the approval of the Secretary. Accordingly, authority for granting extensions of time for filing income tax returns is hereby delegated to the various district directors of internal revenue. Application for extensions of time for filing income tax returns should be addressed to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the taxpayer files his returns and must contain a full recital of the causes for the delay. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension for filing income tax returns may be granted for more than six months. For extensions of time for payment of tax, see sections 56 (c) and 272 (j) and §§ 39.53-3, 39.56-2, and 39.272-3.

§ 39.53-3 Extensions of time in the case of foreign organizations, certain domestic corporations, citizens of United States residing or traveling abroad, and nontaxable returns of fiduciaries for estates or trusts. An extension of time for filing returns of income is hereby granted up to and including the 15th day of the sixth month following the close of the taxable year in the case of:

(a) Foreign partnerships, regardless of whether they maintain an office or place of business within the United States;

(b) Foreign corporations which maintain an office or place of business within the United States;

(c) Domestic corporations which transact their business and keep their records and books of account abroad;

(d) Domestic corporations whose principal income is from sources within the possessions of the United States; and

(e) American citizens residing or traveling abroad, including persons in military or naval service on duty outside the United States.

In all such cases a statement must be attached to the return showing that the person for whom the return is made is a person described in this subsection.

Taxpayers who take advantage of this extension of time will be charged with interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum on the first installment of tax, if any, from the original due date until paid.

§ 39.53-4 Due date of return. The due date is the date on or before which a return is required to be filed in accordance with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, (including sections 3804 and 3805) and the regulations prescribed thereunder or the last day of the period covered by an extension of time granted by the Commissioner or a district director of internal revenue. When the due date falls on Sunday or a legal holiday, the due date for filing returns will be the day following such Sunday or legal holiday. If placed in the mails, the returns should be posted in ample time to reach the office of the district director of internal revenue, under ordinary handling of the mails, on or before the date on which the return is required to be filed. If a return is made and placed in the mails in due course, properly addressed and postage paid, in ample time to reach the office of the district director of internal revenue on or before the due date, no penalty will attach should the return not actually be received by such officer until subsequent to that date. If a question may be raised as to whether the return was posted in ample time to reach the office of the district director of internal revenue on or before the due date, the envelope in which the return was transmitted will be preserved by the district director of internal revenue and forwarded to the Commissioner with the return. As to additions to the tax in the case of failure to file return within the prescribed time, see section 291.

§ 39.53-5 Place for filing individual returns. (a) Section 53 (b) (1) provides that individual returns shall be made to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the return, or, if he has no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, then to the District Director of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Md.

(b) An individual employed on a salary or commission basis who is not also engaged in conducting a commercial or professional enterprise for profit on his own account does not have a "principal place of business" within the meaning of section 53 (b) (1) and shall make his return to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located his legal residence, or, if he has no legal residence in the United States, then to the District Director of Internal Revenue at Baltimore, Md.

SEC. 54. Records and special returns—(a) By taxpayer. Every person liable to any tax imposed by this chapter or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations, as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may from time to time prescribe.

(b) To determine liability to tax. Whenever in the judgment of the Commissioner necessary he may require any person, by notice served upon him, to make a return, render under oath such statements, or keep such records, as the Commissioner deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable to tax under this chapter.

(c) Information at the source. For requirement of statements and returns by one person to assist in determining the tax liability of another person, see sections 147 to 150.

(d) Copies of returns. If any person, required by law or regulations made pursuant to law to file a copy of any income return for any taxable year, fails to file such copy at the time required, there shall be due and assessed against such person $5 in the case of an individual return or $10 in the case of a fiduciary, partnership, or corporation return, and the collector with whom the return is filed should prepare such copy. Such amount shall be collected and paid, without interest, in the same manner as the amount of tax due in excess of that shown by the taxpayer upon a return in the case of a mathematical error appearing on the face of the return. Copies of returns filed or prepared pursuant to this subsection shall remain on file for a period of not less than two years from the date they are required to be filed, and may be destroyed at any time thereafter under the direction of the Commissioner.

(e) Foreign personal holding companies. For information returns by officers, directors, and large shareholders, with respect to foreign personal holding companies, see sections 338, 339, and 340.

For information returns by attorneys, accountants, and so forth, as to formation, and so forth, of foreign corporations, see section 3604.

(f) Every organization, except as hereinafter provided, exempt from taxation under section 101 shall file an annual return, which shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, stating specifically the items of gross income, receipts, and disbursements, and such other information for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe, and shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, make such other returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may from time to time prescribe. No such annual return need be filed under this subsection by any organization exempt from taxation under the provisions of section 101—

(1) Which is a religious organization exempt under section 101 (6); or

(2) Which is an educational organization exempt under section 101 (6), if such organization normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly organized body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on; or

(3) Which is a charitable organization, or an organization for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, exempt under section 101 (6), if such organization is supported, in whole or in part, by funds contributed by the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof, or is primarily supported by contributions of the general public; or

(4) Which is an organization exempt under section 101 (6), if such organization is operated, supervised, or controlled by or in connection with a religious organization described in paragraph (1)· or

(5) Which is an organization exempt solely under section 101 (3)· or

(6) Which is an organization exempt under section 101 (15), if such organization is a corporation wholly owned by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, or a wholly owned subsidiary of such a corporation.

[Sec. 54 as amended by sec. 117, Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.54-1 Records and income tax forms. (a) Every person subject to the tax, except persons whose gross income (1) consists solely of salary, wages, or similar compensation for personal services rendered, or (2) arises solely from the business of growing and selling products of the soil, shall, for the purpose of enabling the Commissioner to determine the correct amount of income subject to the tax, keep such permanent books of account or records, including inventories, as are sufficient to establish the amount of the gross income and the deductions, credits, and other matters required to be shown in any return under chapter 1.

In addition to such permanent books and records as are required by this paragraph with respect to the tax imposed by Supplement U (sections 421 to 424, inclusive) every organization exempt from tax under section 101 but required by section 54 (f) to file an annual return shall keep such permanent books of account or records, including inventories, as are sufficient to show specifically the items of gross income, receipts, and disbursements, and such other information as is required by § 39.101-1. The books or records required by this paragraph shall be kept at all times available for inspection by internal revenue officers, and shall be retained so long as the contents thereof may become material in the administration of any internal revenue law.

(b) Income-tax forms shall be prescribed by the Commissioner and shall be executed and filed in accordance with regulations in this part and the instructions on the form or issued therewith.

(c) The provisions of section 54 (f) relieving certain specified types of organizations exempt from tax under section 101 from filing annual returns do not abridge or impair in any way the powers and authority of the Commissioner provided for in other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code to require the filing of such returns by such organizations. For further regulations regarding proof and establishment of right to exemption from tax, for filing of returns, and keeping records by organizations exempt from tax, see §§ 39.101-1 and 39.153-1.

SEC. 55. Publicity of returns—(a) Public record and inspection. (1) Returns made under this chapter upon which the tax has been determined by the Commissioner shall constitute public records; but, except as hereinafter provided in this section, they shall be open to inspection only upon order of the President and under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary and approved by the President.

(2) And all returns made under this chapter, subchapters A, B, D, and E of chapter 2, subchapter B of chapter 3, chapters 4, 7, 12, and 21, subchapter A of chapter 29, and chapter 30, shall constitute public records and shall be open to public examination and inspection to such extent as shall be authorized in rules and regulations promulgated by the President.

(3) Whenever a return is open to the inspection of any person a certified copy thereof shall, upon request, be furnished to such person under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. The Commissioner may prescribe a reasonable fee for furnishing such copy.

(b) Inspection by States—(1) State officers. The proper officers of any State may, upon the request of the governor thereof, have access to the returns of any corporation, or to an abstract thereof showing the name and income of the corporation, at such times and in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe.

(2) State bodies or commissions. All income returns filed under this chapter (or copies thereof, if so prescribed by regulations made under this subsection), shall be open to inspection by any official, body, or commission, lawfully charged with the administration of any State tax law, if the inspection is for the purpose of such administration or for the purpose of obtaining information to be furnished to local taxing authorities as provided in this paragraph. The inspection shall be permitted only upon written request of the governor of such State, designating the representative of such official, body, or commission to make the inspection on behalf of such official, body, or commission. The inspection shall be made in such manner, and at such times and places, as shall be prescribed by regulations made by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Any information thus secured by any official, body, or commission of any State may be used only for the administration of the tax laws of such State, except that upon written request of the Governor of such State any such information may be furnished to any official, body, or commission of any political subdivision of such State, lawfully charged with the administration of the tax laws of such political subdivision, but may be furnished only for the purpose of, and may be used only for, the administration of such tax laws.

(c) Inspection by shareholders. All bona fide shareholders of record owning 1 per centum or more of the outstanding stock of any corporation shall, upon making request of the Commissioner, be allowed to examine the annual income returns of such corporation and of its subsidiaries.

(d) Inspection by committees of Congress—(1) Committees on ways and means and finance. (A) The Secretary and any officer or employee of the Treasury Department, upon request from the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Finance of the Senate, or a select committee of the Senate or House specially authorized to investigate returns by a resolution of the Senate or House, or a joint committee so authorized by concurrent resolution, shall furnish such committee sitting in executive session with any data of any character contained in or shown by any return.

(B) Any such committee shall have the right, acting directly as a committee, or by or through such examiners or agents as it may designate or appoint, to inspect any or all of the returns at such times and in such manner as it may determine.

(C) Any relevant or useful information thus obtained may be submitted by the committee obtaining it to the Senate or the House, or to both the Senate and the House, as the case may be.

(2) Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. The Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation shall have the same right to obtain data and to inspect returns as the Committee on Ways and Means or the Committee on Finance, and to submit any relevant or useful information thus obtained to the Senate, the House of Representatives, the Committee on Ways and Means or the Committee on Finance. The Committee on Ways and Means or the Committee on Finance may submit such information to the House or to the Senate, or to both the House and the Senate, as the case may be.

(e) Inspection in collector's office of list of taxpayers. The Commissioner shall as soon as practicable in each year cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the collector in each internal revenue district and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the name and the post-office address of each person making an income-tax return in such district.

(f) Penalties for disclosing information—(1) Federal employees and other persons. It shall be unlawful for any collector, deputy collector, agent, clerk, or other officer or employee of the United States to divulge or to make known in any manner whatever not provided by law to any person the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any income return, or to permit any income return or copy thereof or any book containing any abstract or particulars thereof to be seen or examined by any person except as provided by law; and it shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any income return, or any part thereof or source of income, profits, losses, or expenditures appearing in any income return; and any offense against the foregoing provisions shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court; and if the offender be an officer or employee of the United States he shall be dismissed from office or discharged from employment.

(2) State employees. Any officer, employee, or agent of any State or political subdivision, who divulges (except as authorized in paragraph 2 of subsection (b), or when called upon to testify in any judicial or administrative proceeding to which the State or political subdivision, or such State or local official, body, or commission, as such, is a party) any information acquired by him through an inspection permitted him or another under paragraph 2 of subsection (b) shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall upon conviction be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

(3) Shareholders. Any shareholder who pursuant to the provisions of this section is allowed to examine the return of any corporation, and who makes known in any manner whatever not provided by law the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any such return, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

(4) Cross reference. For penalties for disclosing operations, style of work, or apparatus of any manufacturer or producer, see section 4047.

[Sec. 55 as amended by sec. 507, Second Rev. Act 1940; sec. 554 (d) (1), Rev. Act 1941]

§ 39.55-1 Inspection of returns. (a) Any properly authorized official, body, or commission, lawfully charged with the administration of any State tax law, or properly designated representatives of such official, body, or commission, may, in the discretion of the Commissioner, inspect income returns for the purpose of such administration. For the purposes of this section, the word "returns" shall include information returns, schedules, lists, and other written statements filed with the Commissioner designed to be supplemental to or to become a part of income returns.

(b) Requests for permission to inspect returns must be in writing signed by the governor under the seal of his State, and must be addressed to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Audit Service Branch, Washington, D. C. The request must state (1) the kind of returns it is desired to inspect, (2) the taxable year or years covered by the returns it is desired to inspect, (3) the name of the official, body, or commission by whom or which inspection is to be made, (4) the name of the representative of such official, body, or commission, designated to make the inspection, (5) by specific references, the State tax law which such official, body, or commission is charged with administering and the law under which he, she, or it is so charged, (6) the purpose for which the inspection is to be made, and (7) if the inspection is for the purpose of obtaining information to be furnished to local taxing authorities, (i) the name of the official, body, or commission of any political subdivision of the State, lawfully charged with the administration of the tax laws of such political subdivision, if any, to whom or to which the information secured by the inspection is to be furnished, and (ii) the purpose for which the information is to be used by such official, body or commission.

(c) In any case where inspection of the returns is authorized in accordance with the provisions of this section, the Commissioner may, in his discretion, permit inspection of other records and reports which contain information included or required by statute to be included in the return.

(d) For inspection of returns, other than on behalf of States or political subdivisions thereof, and furnishing copies of returns so open to inspection, see Treasury Decision 4929, approved by the President on August 28, 1939, and Treasury Decision 4945, approved September 20, 1939.

SEC. 56. Payment of tax—(a) Time of Payment. The total amount of tax imposed by this chapter shall be paid on the fifteenth day of March following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year, except that in the case of the tax imposed upon an estate or trust the tax shall be paid on the fifteenth day of April following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return should be made on the basis of a fiscal year, then on the fifteenth day of the fourth month following the close of the fiscal year.

(b) Installment payments—(1) Estates of decedents. In the case of the estate of a decedent, the fiduciary may elect to pay the tax in four equal installments.

(2) Corporations. In the case of a corporation—

(A) Taxable years ending before December 31, 1954. The taxpayer may elect with respect to any taxable year ending before December 31, 1954, to pay the tax in four installments, and in such case the amount of the tax paid by each installment shall be determined as follows:

If the taxable year ends—		Each of the first 2 installments shall be the following percentage of the tax	And each of the last 2 installments shall be the following percentage of the tax
On or after—	And before—
Dec. 31, 1951	Dec. 31, 1952	35	15
Dec. 31, 1952	Dec. 31, 1953	40	10
Dec. 31, 1953	Dec. 31, 1954	45	5

(B) Taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1954. The taxpayer may elect with respect to any taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1954, to pay the tax in two equal installments.

(3) Dates for installment payments—(A) Four installments. In any case in which the tax may be paid in four installments, the first installment shall be paid on the date prescribed for the payment of the tax by the taxpayer, the second installment shall be paid on the 15th day of the third month, the third installment on the 15th day of the sixth month, and the fourth installment on the 15th day of the ninth month, after such date.

(B) Two installments. In any case in which the tax may be paid in two installments, the first installment shall be paid on the date prescribed for the payment of the tax by the taxpayer, and the second installment shall be paid on the 15th day of the third month after such date.

(4) Requirement for payment. If any installment is not paid on or before the date fixed for its payment, the whole of the tax unpaid shall be paid upon notice and demand from the collector.

(c) Extension of time for payment—(1) General rule. At the request of the taxpayer, the Commissioner may extend the time for payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer, or any installment thereof, for a period not to exceed six months from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax or an installment thereof. In such case the amount in respect of which the extension is granted shall be paid on or before the date of the expiration of the period of the extension.

(2) Liquidation of personal holding companies. At the request of the taxpayer, the Commissioner may (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) extend (for a period not to exceed five years from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax) the time for the payment of such portion of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer as is attributable to the short-term or long-term capital gain derived by the taxpayer from the receipt by him of property other than money upon the complete liquidation (as defined in section 115 (c)) of a corporation. This paragraph shall apply only if the corporation, for its taxable year preceding the year in which occurred the complete liquidation (or the first of the series of distributions referred to in such section), was, under the law applicable to such taxable year, a personal holding company or a foreign personal holding company. An extension under this paragraph shall be granted only if it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the failure to grant it will result in undue hardship to the taxpayer. If an extension is granted the amount with respect to which the extension is granted shall be paid on or before the date of the expiration of the extension. If an extension is granted under this paragraph the Commissioner may require the taxpayer to furnish a bond in such amount, not exceeding double the amount with respect to which the extension is granted, and with such sureties as the Commissioner deems necessary, conditioned upon the payment of the amount with respect to which the extension is granted in accordance with the terms of the extension.

(d) Voluntary advance payment. A tax imposed by this chapter, or any installment thereof, may be paid, at the election of the taxpayer, prior to the date prescribed for its payment.

(e) Advance payment in case of jeopardy. For advance payment in case of jeopardy, see section 146.

(f) Tax withheld at source. For requirement of withholding tax at source, see sections 143 and 144.

(g) Fractional parts of cent. In the payment of any tax under this chapter a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

(h) Receipts. Every collector to whom any payment of any income tax is made shall upon request give to the person making such payment a full written or printed receipt therefor.

(i) Payment of tax if not computed by taxpayer. Where under section 51 (f) a taxpayer who is an individual is permitted to file return without showing the tax thereon, and the tax is to be computed by the collector, the amount determined by the collector as payable shall be paid within thirty days after the mailing by the collector to the taxpayer of a notice stating such amount and making demand thereof.

[Sec. 56 as amended by sec 172 (f) (1), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 5 (d), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; secs. 6 (b) (2), 12, Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 205 (a), (b) (2), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.56-1 Date on which tax shall be paid—(a) In general. (1) The tax, unless it is required to be withheld at the source under section 1622, is to be paid on or before the 15th day of March following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return is made on the basis of a fiscal year, on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of such fiscal year. See, however, paragraph (b) of this section with respect to estates and trusts and § 39.59-1 with respect to estimated tax.

(2) In any case in which an individual taxpayer is entitled to elect, and does so elect, to file as his return Form 1040A, as provided in § 39.51-2, the amount of the tax determined by the district director is to be paid within 30 days after the date of mailing by the district director to the taxpayer of a notice stating the amount payable by the taxpayer and making demand upon the taxpayer therefor.

(3) In the case of a return (other than a return by a nonresident alien individual who does not have wages subject to withholding under section 1622 or a nonresident foreign corporation) for a fractional part of a year, the tax is to be paid on or before the last day prescribed for the filing of the return (see § 39.53-1) But see § 39.53-3.

(4) For the time of payment of tax by a nonresident alien individual (except a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico subject to the provisions of section 220) who does not have wages subject to withholding under section 1622, see section 218. In the case of a nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year and thus subject to the provisions of section 220, the tax is to be paid at the time provided in the case of United States citizens and residents.

(5) For the time of payment of tax by a nonresident foreign corporation, see section 236.

(6) For provisions relating to certain cases in which the time for filing income tax returns is postponed by reason of an individual serving in or in support of the military or naval forces of the United States in a combat zone, see section 3804. See section 3805 and § 39.3805-1 as to the time for filing income tax returns of China Trade Act corporations.

(b) Estates and trusts. In the case of the tax imposed upon an estate or trust, the tax shall be paid on or before the 15th day of April following the close of the calendar year, or, if the return is made on the basis of a fiscal year, on or before the 15th day of the fourth month following the close of the fiscal year.

(c) Installment payments—(1) Estates of decedents. With respect to estates of decedents, the fiduciary may elect to pay the tax in four equal installments, instead of in a single payment, in which case the first installment shall be paid on or before the date prescribed for the payment of the tax as a single payment, the second installment shall be paid on or before the 15th day of the third month, the third installment on or before the 15th day of the sixth month, and the fourth installment on or before the 15th day of the ninth month, after such date.

(2) Corporations; taxable years ending before December 31, 1954. With respect to taxable years of corporations ending before December 31, 1954, the taxpayer may elect to pay the tax in four installments, and in such case the amount of the tax paid by each installment shall be as follows:

If the taxable year ends—		Each of the first 2 installments shall be the following percentage of the tax	And each of the last 2 installments shall be the following percentage of the tax
On or after—	And before—
Dec. 31, 1951	Dec. 31, 1952	35	15
Dec. 31, 1952	Dec. 31, 1953	40	10
Dec. 31, 1953	Dec. 31, 1954	45	5

The first installment shall be paid on or before the date prescribed for the payment of the tax as a single payment, the second installment shall be paid on or before the 15th day of the third month, the third installment on or before the 15th day of the sixth month, and the fourth installment on or before the 15th day of the ninth month, after such date.

(3) Corporations; taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1954. With respect to taxable years of corporations ending on or after December 31, 1954, the taxpayer may elect to pay the tax in two equal installments, in which case the first installment shall be paid on or before the date prescribed for the payment of the tax as a single payment and the second installment on or before the 15th day of the third month after such date.

(4) In general. (i) If the taxpayer elects to pay the tax in installments, any installment may be paid, at the election of the taxpayer, prior to the date prescribed for its payment. If an installment is not paid in full on or before the date fixed for its payment either by the Internal Revenue Code or by the Commissioner in accordance with the terms of an extension, the whole amount of the tax unpaid shall be paid upon notice and demand from the district director of internal revenue.

(ii) In the case of taxpayers other than estates of decedents, and other than corporations, the privilege of installment payments of the tax does not apply.

§ 39.56-2 Extension of time for payment of the tax or part or installment thereof. (a) If it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner or the district director that the payment of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer or any part or installment thereof upon the date or dates prescribed for the payment thereof will result in undue hardship to the taxpayer, the Commissioner (after August 31, 1953, the district director), at the request of the taxpayer, may grant an extension of time for the payment for a period not to exceed six months from the date prescribed for the payment of such amount, part, or installment. However, the extension may be for a period not to exceed five years from the date prescribed for the payment of the tax in the case of such portion of the amount determined as the tax by the taxpayer which is attributable to the short-term or long-term capital gain derived by the taxpayer from the receipt by him of property other than money upon the complete liquidation (as defined in section 115 (c)) of a corporation if the corporation, for its taxable year preceding the year in which occurred the complete liquidation (or the first of the series of distributions referred to in section 115 (c)), was, under the law applicable to such taxable year, a personal holding company or a foreign personal holding company. An extension will not be granted upon a general statement of hardship. The term "undue hardship" means more than an inconvenience to the taxpayer. It must appear that substantial financial loss, for example, due to the sale of property at a sacrifice price, will result to the taxpayer from making payment of the amount at the due date. If a market exists, the sale of property at the current market price is not ordinarily considered as resulting in an undue hardship.

(b) An application for an extension of time for the payment of such tax should be made on Form 1127 and must be accompanied or supported by evidence showing the undue hardship that would result to the taxpayer if the extension were refused. A statement of assets and liabilities of the taxpayer and an itemized statement showing all receipts and disbursements for each of the three months immediately preceding the due date of the tax are required and should accompany the application. The application, with the evidence, must be filed with the district director of internal revenue, who, if the application is filed before September 1, 1953, will transmit it to the Commissioner with his recommendations as to the extension. It will be examined and, if possible, within 30 days will be denied, granted, or tentatively granted, subject to certain conditions of which the taxpayer will be notified. An application for an extension of time for the payment of a tax will not be considered unless request therefor is made to the district director of internal revenue on or before the date prescribed for payment of the tax or any part or installment thereof for which the extension is desired, or on or before the date or dates prescribed for payment in any prior extension granted.

(c) As a condition to the granting of such an extension, the taxpayer will usually be required to furnish a bond on Form 1130 in an amount not exceeding double the amount of the tax or to furnish other security satisfactory to the Commissioner for the payment of the tax, or any part or installment thereof, on or before the date or dates prescribed for payment in the extension, so that the risk of loss to the Government will not be greater at the end of the extension period than it was at the beginning of the period. If a bond is required it shall be conditioned upon the payment of the tax, interest, and additional amounts assessed in connection therewith in accordance with the terms of the extension granted, and shall be executed by a surety company holding a certificate of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury as an acceptable surety on Federal bonds, and shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner. In lieu of such a bond, the taxpayer may file a bond secured by deposit of bonds or notes of the United States equal in their total par value to an amount not exceeding double the amount of the tax, or any part or installment thereof. See 6 U. S. C. 15. A request by the taxpayer for an extension of time for the payment of one installment does not operate to procure an extension of time for payment of subsequent installments. Nor does an extension of time for filing a return operate to extend the time for the payment of the tax or any part thereof, unless so specified in the extension. If an extension of time for payment of the tax, or any part or installment thereof, is granted, the amount, time for payment of which is so extended, shall be paid on or before the expiration of the period of the extension, together with interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum on such amount from the date when the payment should have been made if no extension had been granted until the expiration of the period of the extension. See section 295.

§ 39.56-3 When fractional part of cent may be disregarded. In the payment of taxes a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent. Fractional parts of a cent should not be disregarded in the computation of taxes.

§ 39.56-4 Receipts for tax payments. Upon request a district director of internal revenue will give a receipt for each tax payment. In the case of payments made by check or money order the canceled check or the money order receipt is usually a sufficient receipt. In the case of payments in cash, however, the taxpayer should in every instance require and the district director of internal revenue should furnish a receipt.

§ 39.57 Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; examination of returns and determination of tax.

SEC. 57. Examination of return and determination of tax. As soon as practicable after the return is filed the Commissioner shall examine it and shall determine the correct amount of the tax.

§ 39.57-1 Examination of return and determination of tax by the Commissioner. As soon as practicable after returns are filed, they will be examined and the correct amount of the tax determined under such procedure as may be prescribed from time to time by the Commissioner. See section 272.

§ 39.58 (a) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; requirement of declaration.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals—(a) Requirement of declaration. Every individual (other than an estate or trust and other than a nonresident alien with respect to whose wages, as defined in section 1621 (a), withholding under Subchapter D of Chapter 9 is not made applicable, but including every alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year) shall, at the time prescribed in subsection (d), make a declaration of his estimated tax for the taxable year if—

(1) His gross income from wages (as defined in section 1621) can reasonably be expected to exceed the sum of $4,500 plus $600 with respect to each exemption provided in section 25 (b); or

(2) His gross income from sources other than wages (as defined in section 1621) can reasonably be expected to exceed $100 for the taxable year and his gross income to be $600 or more.

[Sec. 58 (a) as amended by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 102 (b) (4), Rev. Act 1945; sec. 202 (a), Rev. Act 1948; sec. 221 (g), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.58 (a)-1 Declarations of estimated tax. (a) A declaration of estimated tax shall be made by every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, every individual residing in the United States though not a citizen thereof, every nonresident alien who is a resident of Canada, Mexico, or Puerto Rico and who has wages subject to withholding at the source under section 1622, and every nonresident alien who has been, or expects to be, a resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, if such citizen or resident or alien can reasonably be expected to have for such taxable year:

(1) Gross income from wages subject to withholding under section 1622 in excess of the sum of $4,500 plus $600 for each exemption allowable as a credit under section 25 (b) or

(2) Gross income of more than $100 from sources other than wages subject to withholding under section 1622 and total gross income of $600 or more.

(b) In the case of a husband and wife, whether or not they are living together, a joint declaration of estimated tax may be made if the gross income of either spouse meets the requirements of section 58 (a) If the gross income of each spouse meets the requirements of section 58 (a) either a joint declaration must be made or a separate declaration must be made by each. For the purpose of determining whether a declaration of estimated tax is required under the provisions of section 58 (a) a married person may not take into account the exemption of his spouse, if his spouse has, or is reasonably expected to have, gross income.

(c) In estimating his gross income for the taxable year a parent should not take into account the income of his minor child. Such income is not includible in the gross income of the parent. See section 22 (m)

(d) A nonresident alien who is (1) a resident of Canada or Mexico, who enters into and leaves the United States at frequent intervals, or (2) a resident of Puerto Rico, and who has wages subject to withholding under the provisions of section 1622 is required to file a declaration of estimated tax if his gross income meets the requirements of section 58 (a) In the case of a nonresident alien (other than an alien resident of Puerto Rico for the entire taxable year) gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States. See sections 212 (a) and 220. As to what constitutes gross income from sources within the United States, see section 119 and the regulations thereunder. Thus, for example, a nonresident alien over the age of 65 years, living in Mexico with his wife and one dependent child throughout 1952, makes his return on a calendar year basis. His wife and child are also nonresident aliens. He is employed as an executive in El Paso, Texas, at a salary of $8,000 per annum and enters and leaves the United States at frequent intervals in pursuit of such employment. Neither husband nor wife has any reasonable expectation of any other income from United States sources. Since his wages derived from sources within the United States in 1952 can reasonably be expected to amount to more than $4,500 plus $2,400 (the aggregate of four exemptions, including one exemption for old age) or $6,900, a declaration of estimated tax must be filed for such resident of Mexico for 1952.

(e) A nonresident alien who has been, or expects to be, a resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year is required to file a declaration of estimated tax if his gross income meets the requirements of section 58 (a) For the purpose of such declaration, gross income means gross income from all sources, other than sources within Puerto Rico, but including amounts received for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof. See sections 116 (l) and 220.

(f) An estate or trust, though generally taxed as an individual, is not within the scope of the system of current payment of the tax, and hence is not required to file a declaration.

(g) The application of these provisions may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). H, a taxpayer making his return on the calendar year basis, is married and has two dependent children. Neither his wife nor his children have any source of income. H's wife has been blind for several years and it is reasonable to assume that she will not regain her sight in 1952. H's salary from January 1 to June 30, 1952, is at the annual rate of $7,000. However, effective July 1, 1952, his annual salary is increased to $9,000 and under the facts then existing it is reasonable to assume that his salary for the remaining portion of 1952 will remain unchanged and that his total salary for the year will, therefore, be $8,000. Since such amount is in excess of $4,500 plus $3,000 (the aggregate of five exemptions, including the two exemptions for the blind spouse), or $7,500, H is required to file a declaration of estimated tax for 1952. As to when such declaration is required to be filed, see § 39.58(d)-1(a).

Example (2). P, a professional man engaged in the practice of his profession on his own account, has gross income of $400 from such profession for the two months of January and February 1952. It can reasonably be expected that he will have no income during 1952 from any other source. Since P has gross income which can for 1952 reasonably be expected to exceed $600 and such income does not constitute wages subject to withholding, he is required to file a declaration of estimated tax regardless of his marital status and regardless of the number of exemptions to which he may be entitled for that year.

Example (3). S has been regularly employed for many years prior to January 1, 1952, at which date his weekly wage is $50. S also owns stock in a corporation from which he has derived regularly for many years prior to 1952 annual dividends ranging from $120 to $160. In view of the fact that for 1952 S can reasonably be expected to receive gross income of $600 or more, which includes more than $100 of income from sources other than wages as defined in section 1621 (a), he is required to make a declaration of estimated tax for such year regardless of his marital status or the number of exemptions to which he may be entitled.

Example (4). T, a married taxpayer, who makes his return on the calendar year basis, is employed at the beginning of 1952 at an annual salary of $7,500, which, on the basis of facts then existing, will, it is expected, not undergo any change throughout 1952. His wife owns stock upon which dividends ranging from $75 to $100 have been paid regularly during the years before 1952. T has two dependent children, one of whom has no source of income in 1952; the other child, however, is employed on a part-time basis and may reasonably be expected to receive compensation of $650 in 1952. T also contributes the major portion of the support of his mother whose only source of income is approximately $100 per year from a trust fund. Under these facts for the purpose of determining whether he is required to file a declaration, T may take into account only three exemptions, one for himself, one for his mother, and one for the child expected to receive less than $600 gross income in 1952. Since his expected salary of $7,500 exceeds the sum of $4,500 plus $1,800 (three exemptions), or $6,300, T is required to file a declaration of estimated tax for 1952. In computing his estimated tax on a separate declaration, T may not take into account any exemption for his wife since she is reasonably expected to have gross income in 1952. If, however, a joint declaration is made and the tax is estimated on the basis of the aggregate net income, account may be taken of an exemption for the wife.

§ 39.58 (b) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; contents of declaration.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals. * * *

(b) Contents of declaration. In the declaration required under subsection (a) the individual shall state—

(1) The amount which he estimates as the amount of tax under this chapter for the taxable year, without regard to any credits under sections 32 and 35 for taxes withheld at source and without regard to the tax imposed by subchapter E on self-employment income;

(2) The amount which he estimates as the credits for the taxable year under sections 32 and 35; and

(3) The excess of the amount estimated under paragraph (1) over the amount estimated under paragraph (2), which excess for the purposes of this chapter shall be considered the estimated tax for the taxable year.

The declaration shall also contain such other information for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this chapter as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe, and shall contain or be verified by a written statement that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

[Sec. 58 (b) as amended by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 208 (d) (4), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.58 (b)-1 Form and contents of declaration of estimated tax—(a) In general. (1) The declaration of estimated tax shall be on Form 1040-ES. The form may be obtained from the district directors of internal revenue of the several districts. It shall be executed, verified, and filed in accordance with the regulations in this part and the instructions on the form issued therewith. For the purposes of making the declaration, the amount of gross income which the taxpayer can reasonably be expected to receive or accrue, as the case may be, depending upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed, and the amount of the estimated allowable deductions and credits to be taken into account in computing the amount of the estimated tax, shall be determined upon the basis of facts and circumstances existing as at the time prescribed for the filing of the declaration. If, therefore, the taxpayer is employed at the date of filing his declaration at a given wage or salary, it should, in the absence of circumstances indicating the contrary, be presumed by him for the purposes of the declaration that such employment will continue to the end of the taxable year at the wage or salary received by him as at the date of making the declaration. In the case of the recipient of income other than wages the regularity in the payment of income, such as dividends, interests, rents, royalties, and income arising from estates and trusts is a factor to be taken into consideration. Thus, if the taxpayer owns shares of stock in the X Corporation and dividends have been paid regularly for several years upon such stock, the taxpayer in the preparation of his schedules preliminary to the execution of Form 1040-ES should, in the absence of information indicating a change in the dividend policy, include the prospective dividends from the X Corporation for the taxable year as well as those actually received in such year prior to the filing of the declaration. In the case of a taxpayer engaged in business on his own account, there shall be made an estimate of gross income and deductions and credits in the light of the best available information affecting the trade, business, or profession.

(2) In the case of any individual who can, at the time of the preparation of Form 1040-ES, reasonably anticipate that his gross income will be of such amount and character as to enable him to elect upon his return for such year to compute the tax under section 400 in lieu of the normal tax and surtax, the declaration of estimated tax may be made upon the basis set forth in section 400 and § 39.400-1. The filing of a declaration computed upon the basis of section 400 shall not constitute an election under section 402 and shall not permit the filing of a return under section 400 unless the taxpayer comes within the provisions of sections 400 and 401. For the purposes of computing the tax liability under chapter 1 in the case of married persons, if the net income of one spouse is determined without regard to the standard deduction, the standard deduction is not allowed to either. (See, however, § 39.23 (aa)-1 (c) for exceptions where spouses are legally separated or are not living together.) Hence, to avoid the risk of underestimating the tax in such case, one spouse should not use section 400 in computing the estimated tax unless the other spouse also uses section 400 or employs the standard deduction in computing the estimated tax.

(3) The declaration may be made by an agent if, by reason of illness, the person liable for the making of the declaration is unable to make it. The declaration may also be made by an agent if the taxpayer is unable to make the declaration by reason of continuous absence from the United States (including Puerto Rico as if a part of the United States) for a period of at least 60 days prior to the date prescribed by law for making the declaration. Whenever a declaration is made by an agent it must be accompanied by the prescribed power of attorney, Form 935, except that an agent holding a valid and subsisting general power of attorney authorizing him to represent his principal in making, executing, and filing the declaration, may submit a certified copy thereof in lieu of the authorization on Form 935. The taxpayer and his agent, if any, are responsible for the declaration as made and incur liability for the penalties provided for erroneous, false, or fraudulent declarations.

(4) The home or residential address of the taxpayer (including the street and number, if any) shall be given in the space provided on the form. A taxpayer having a permanent business address may give that address as the principal or mailing address, provided that the complete home or residential address is also given within the space provided.

(b) Contents of declaration. The declaration shall contain (1) the amount estimated as the tax for the taxable year after the application of the credit for foreign tax, if any, but without regard to the credits under sections 32 and 35; (2) the amount estimated by the taxpayer as the sum of the credits under such sections; and (3) the excess, if any, of the amount shown under (1) over the amount shown under (2), which excess shall be the estimated tax for such taxable year. The estimated tax need not include an amount estimated as the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480.

§ 39.58 (b)-2 Use of prescribed forms. Copies of the prescribed declaration forms will so far as possible be furnished taxpayers by district directors of internal revenue. A taxpayer will not be excused from making a declaration, however, by the fact that no declaration form has been furnished to him. Taxpayers not supplied with the proper forms should make application therefor to the district director of internal revenue in ample time to have their declarations prepared, verified, and filed with the district director of internal revenue on or before the due date. Each taxpayer should carefully prepare his declaration so as to set forth fully and clearly the data therein called for. If the prescribed form is not available, a statement disclosing his estimated income tax, his estimated credits, and his estimated tax after deducting such credits may be accepted as a tentative declaration, and if filed within the prescribed time, accompanied by the payment of the required installment, the statement so made will relieve the taxpayer from liability to penalties, Provided, That without unnecessary delay such a tentative declaration is supplemented by a declaration made on the proper form.

§ 39.58 (c) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; joint declaration by husband and wife.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals. * * *

(c) Joint declaration by husband and wife. In the case of a husband and wife, a single declaration under this section may be made by them jointly, in which case the liability with respect to the estimated tax shall be joint and several. No joint declaration may be made if either the husband or wife is a nonresident alien. If a joint declaration is made but a joint return is not made for the taxable year, the estimated tax for such year may be treated as the estimated tax of either the husband or the wife, or may be divided between them.

[Sec. 58 (c) as added by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; as amended by sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.58 (c)-1 Joint declarations by husband and wife. (a) A husband and wife may make a joint declaration even though they are not living together. A joint declaration may not be made after the death of either the husband or wife or if either the husband or wife is a nonresident alien, including such an alien who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year. However, if it is reasonable for a surviving spouse to assume that there will be filed a joint return for himself and the deceased spouse for taxable years which include the last taxable year of the deceased spouse, he may, in making a separate declaration for his taxable year which includes the period comprising such last taxable year of his spouse, estimate net income on an aggregate basis and compute his estimated tax in the same manner as though a joint declaration had been filed. For computation of tax in case of a joint return, see § 39.12-3.

(b) A joint declaration of a husband and wife, if not made by an agent (see § 39.51-2) shall be signed by both spouses. If signed by one spouse as agent for the other, authorization for such action must accompany the declaration. The spouse acting as agent for the other shall, with the principal, assume the responsibility for making the declaration and incur liability for the penalties provided for erroneous, false, or fraudulent declarations.

(c) If a joint declaration is made by husband and wife, the liability with respect to the estimated tax shall be joint and several. The fact that a joint declaration of estimated tax is made by them will not preclude a husband and his wife from filing separate returns. In case a joint declaration is made but a joint return is not made for the same taxable year, the payments made on account of the estimated tax for such year may be treated as payments on account of the tax liability of either the husband or wife for the taxable year or may be divided between them in any manner they see fit.

(d) If a joint declaration is made by husband and wife and thereafter one spouse dies, no further payments of estimated tax on account of such joint declaration are required from the estate of the decedent. The surviving spouse, however, shall be liable for the payment of subsequent installments of the joint estimated tax unless an amended declaration setting forth the separate estimated tax for the taxable year is filed by such spouse. Such separate estimated tax shall be paid at the time and in the amounts determined under the rules prescribed in § 39.59-1. For the purposes of the amended declaration, the payments made pursuant to the joint declaration may be divided between the decedent and the surviving spouse in such proportion as the surviving spouse and the legal representative of the decedent may agree.

§ 39.58 (d) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; time and place for filing.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals. * * *

(d) Time and place for filing—(1) In general. The declaration required under subsection (a) shall be filed on or before March 15 of the taxable year, except that if the requirements of section 58 (a) are first met

(A) after March 1 and before June 2 of the taxable year, the declaration shall be filed on or before June 15 of the taxable year, or

(B) after June 1 and before September 2 of the taxable year, the declaration shall be filed on or before September 15 of the taxable year, or

(C) after September 1 of the taxable year, the declaration shall be filed on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.

(2) Amendment of declaration. An individual may make amendments of a declaration filed during the taxable year under this subsection, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. If so made, such amendments may be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the last month of any quarter of the taxable year subsequent to that in which the declaration was filed and in which no previous amendment has been filed, except that in the case of an amendment filed after September 15 of the taxable year, it may be filed on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year. Declarations and amendments thereof shall be filed with the collector specified in section 53 (b) (1).

(3) Return as declaration or amendment. If on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year the taxpayer files a return, for the taxable year for which the declaration is required, and pays in full the amount computed on the return as payable, then, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary—

(A) If the declaration is not required to be filed during the taxable year, but is required to be filed on or before such January 15, such return shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be considered as such declaration; and

(B) If the tax shown on the return (reduced by the credits under sections 32 and 35) is greater than the estimated tax shown in a declaration previously made, or in the last amendment thereof, such return shall, for the purposes of this chapter, be considered as the amendment of the declaration permitted by paragraph (2) to be filed on or before such January 15.

[Sec. 58 (d) as added by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; amended by sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.58 (d)-1 Time and place for filing declarations—(a) Time for filing declaration. (1) Declarations of estimated tax for the calendar year shall (except in the case of farmers, as to whom see § 39.60-1) be made on or before March 15th of such year by every individual whose then anticipated income for the current calendar year meets the requirements of section 58 (a) If, however, the requirements necessitating the filing of the declaration are first met, in the case of a taxpayer on the calendar year basis, after March 1st, but before June 2d of the calendar year, the declaration must be filed on or before June 15th; if such requirements are first met after June 1st and before September 2d, the declaration must be filed on or before September 15th; and if such requirements are first met after September 1st, the declaration must be filed on or before January 15th of the succeeding calendar year. In the case of a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis, see § 39.60-3.

(2) The requirements with respect to the filing of the declaration are those prescribed in section 58 (a) The requirements with respect to the time for filing the declaration apply alike to such nonresident aliens as are required to make a declaration as well as to United States citizens and residents. In the case of certain individuals, serving in or in support of the military or naval forces of the United States in a combat zone, the provisions of section 3804 relative to the time for filing returns are also applicable with respect to the time for filing declarations. In the case of any such individual, however, if the time for filing the return for a taxable year is postponed under section 3804, a declaration of estimated tax for such taxable year is not required.

(b) Place for filing declaration. (1) The declaration of estimated tax and amendments and revisions thereof shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the legal residence or principal place of business of the person making the declaration, or if he has no legal residence or principal place of business in the United States, then with the district director of internal revenue at Baltimore, Md. Any amended declaration shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the original declaration was filed.

(2) An individual employed on a salary or commission basis who is not also engaged in conducting a commercial or professional enterprise for profit on his own account does not have a "principal place of business" within the meaning of this paragraph and shall make his declaration to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located his legal residence, or if he has no legal residence in the United States then to the district director of internal revenue at Baltimore, Md.

(c) Amended declarations. In the making of a declaration of estimated tax, the statute requires the taxpayer to take into account the then existing facts and circumstances as well as those reasonably to be anticipated relating to prospective gross income, allowable deductions, and estimated credits for the taxable year. Amended or revised declarations may be made in any case in which the taxpayer estimates that his gross income, deductions, or credits will differ from the gross income, deductions, or credits reflected in the previous declaration. An amended declaration may also be made based upon a change in the number of exemptions to which the taxpayer may be entitled for the then current taxable year. An amended declaration may be filed jointly by husband and wife even though separate declarations have previously been filed. Such amended declaration shall be on Form 1040-ES, marked "Amended." No amended or revised declaration may be filed in the quarter in which the original declaration has been filed nor in any subsequent quarter in which a prior or revised declaration has been filed. Where an original declaration has previously been filed: In the case of a taxpayer on the calendar year basis, an amended declaration to be filed after September 15 may be filed on or before January 15 of the succeeding calendar year; in the case of a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis, an amended declaration to be filed after the 15th day of the ninth month of such fiscal year may be filed on or before the 15th day of the succeeding fiscal year. Thus, if a taxpayer is on a fiscal year basis beginning July 1, 1952, an amended declaration to be filed after March 15, 1953, may be filed on or before July 15, 1953.

(d) Return as a declaration of estimated tax or amendment thereof. (1) If the taxpayer files his return for the calendar year on or before January 15th (in the case of a farmer, January 31st, see § 39.60-1) of the succeeding calendar year (or if the taxpayer is on a fiscal year basis (see § 39.60-3), on or before the 15th day (in the case of a farmer, the last day) of the first month immediately succeeding the close of such fiscal year—see § 39.60-3 (b)) and pays in full the amount of tax shown by such return as payable, then:

(i) Such return shall be considered also as a declaration for such taxable year if, in such case, the taxpayer first met the requirements of section 58 (a) (relating to the requirements with respect to filing of declarations) after September 1st of the taxable year (or the 1st day of the ninth month of the taxable year if the taxpayer is on a fiscal year basis) and

(ii) If the tax shown on such return differs from the estimated tax shown in the previously filed declaration, such return shall be considered as an amended declaration the filing of which before the 15th day of the first month following the close of the taxable year is permitted by section 58 (d) (2)

Hence, for example, an individual taxpayer on the calendar year basis who, subsequent to September 1, 1952, first meets the requirements of section 58 (a) which necessitate the filing of such declaration in 1952, may satisfy the requirements as to the filing of such declaration by filing his return for 1952 on or before January 15, 1953, and paying in full at the time of such filing the tax shown thereon to be payable.

(2) Likewise, if a taxpayer files on or before September 15th a timely declaration for such year and subsequent thereto and on or before January 15th of the succeeding taxable year (or corresponding date in the case of a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis) files his return for such year, and pays at the time of filing the tax shown by the return to be payable, such return shall be treated as an amended declaration timely filed.

(3) For the purposes of section 58 (d) (3) a taxpayer may file his return, Form 1040, on or before the 15th day of the first month following the close of the taxable year even though he has not been furnished Form W-2 by his employer. In such case the taxpayer shall compute, as accurately as possible, his wages for such year and the tax withheld for which he is entitled to a credit, reporting such wages and tax on his return, Form 1040, together with all other pertinent information necessary to the determination of his tax liability for such year.

§ 39.58 (e) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; extension of time.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals. * * *

(e) Extension of time. The Commissioner may grant a reasonable extension of the time for filing declarations and paying the estimated tax, under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe with the approval of the Secretary. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no such extension shall be for more than six months.

[Sec. 58 (e) as added by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; amended by sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.58 (e)-1 Extension of time for filing declarations. (a) It is important that the taxpayer render on or before the due date a declaration of estimated tax as accurate as the facts and circumstances then existing or reasonably to be anticipated permit. However, the Commissioner is authorized to grant a reasonable extension of time for filing declarations under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe with the approval of the Secretary. Accordingly, authority for granting extensions of time for filing declarations is hereby delegated to the various district directors of internal revenue. Applications for extensions of time for filing declarations shall be addressed to the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the taxpayer files his income tax returns, and must contain a full recital of the causes for the delay. Except in the case of taxpayers who are abroad, no extension for filing declarations may be granted for more than six months.

(b) An extension of time for filing the declaration of estimated tax otherwise due on or before the 15th day of the third month of the taxable year is hereby granted to and including the 15th day of the sixth month of the taxable year in the case of United States citizens outside continental United States, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico on the 15th day of the third month of the taxable year.

(c) An extension of time for filing the declaration of estimated tax automatically extends the time for paying the estimated tax (without interest) for the same period.

§ 39.58 (f)-(h) Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; declaration of estimated tax by individuals; persons under disability; signatures presumed correct; publicity of declaration.

SEC. 58. Declaration of estimated tax by individuals. * * *

(f) Persons under disability. If the taxpayer is unable to make his own declaration, the declaration shall be made by a duly authorized agent or by the guardian or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

(g) Signatures presumed correct. The fact that an individual's name is signed to a filed declaration shall be prima facie evidence for all purposes that the declaration was actually signed by him.

(h) Publicity of declaration. For the purposes of section 55 (relating to publicity of returns), a declaration of estimated tax shall be held and considered a return under this chapter.

[Sec. 58 (f) to (h) as added by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943]

§ 39.58 (h)-1 Publicity of returns. The declaration of estimated tax constitutes, within the meaning of section 55, a return. Hence, the rules provided under that section with respect to publicity of returns are equally applicable to declarations of estimated tax. See section 55 and § 39.55-1.

SEC. 59. Payment of estimated tax—(a) In general. The estimated tax shall be paid as follows:

(1) If the declaration is filed on or before March 15 of the taxable year, the estimated tax shall be paid in four equal installments. The first installment shall be paid at the time of the filing of the declaration, the second and third on June 15 and September 15, respectively, of the taxable year, and the fourth on January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.

(2) If the declaration is filed after March 15 and not after June 15 of the taxable year, and is not required by section 58 (d) to be filed on or before March 15 of the taxable year, the estimated tax shall be paid in three equal installments. The first installment shall be paid at the time of the filing of the declaration, the second on September 15 of the taxable year, and the third on January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.

(3) If the declaration is filed after June 15 and not after September 15 of the taxable year, and is not required by section 58 (d) to be filed on or before June 15 of the taxable year, the estimated tax shall be paid in two equal installments. The first installment shall be paid at the time of the filing of the declaration, and the second on January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.

(4) If the declaration is filed after September 15 of the taxable year, and is not required by section 58 (d) to be filed on or before September 15 of the taxable year, the estimated tax shall be paid in full at the time of the filing of the declaration.

(5) If the declaration is filed after the time prescribed in section 58 (d) (including cases in which an extension of time for filing the declaration has been granted under section 58 (e)), paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this subsection shall not apply, and there shall be paid at the time of such filing all installments of estimated tax which would have been payable on or before such time if the declaration had been filed within the time prescribed in section 58 (d), and the remaining installments shall be paid at the times at which, and in the amounts in which, they would have been payable if the declaration had been so filed.

(b) Amendments of declaration. If any amendment of a declaration is filed, the remaining installments, if any, shall be ratably increased or decreased, as the case may be, to reflect the increase or decrease, as the case may be, in the estimated tax by reason of such amendment, and if any amendment is made after September 15 of the taxable year, any increase in the estimated tax by reason thereof shall be paid at the time of making such amendment.

(c) Installments paid in advance. At the election of the individual, any installment of the estimated tax may be paid prior to the date prescribed for its payment.

(d) Payment as part of tax for taxable year. Payment of the estimated tax, or any installment thereof, shall be considered payment on account of the tax for the taxable year. Assessment in respect to the estimated tax shall be limited to the amount paid.

[Sec. 59 as amended by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.59-1 Payment of estimated tax—(a) In general. (1) Section 59 (a) provides the following rules governing the time for payment of the estimated tax for calendar years:

Date of filing declaration	Dates of payment of estimated tax
(1) On or before March 15	In four equal installments—one at time of filing declaration, one not later than June 15, one not later than September 15, and one not later than January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.

(ii) After March 15 and before June 16 and not required to be filed on or before March 15.	In three equal installments—one at time of filing declaration, one on or before September 15, and one on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.
(iii) After June 15 and before September 16 and not required to be filed on or before June 15.	In two equal installments—one at time of filing declaration, and the other on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year.
(iv) After September 15 and not required to be filed on or before that date.	In full at time of filing declaration.

(2) If, for example, due to the nature and amount of his gross income and his then existing marital status for 1952, the taxpayer is not required to file his declaration as of March 15, but is required to file on or before June 15, 1952, the case comes within the scope of subdivision (ii) of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph and the estimated tax is payable in full at the time of filing the declaration or, in the alternative, in three equal installments, one on the date of filing, one on or before September 15, 1952, and the third installment on or before January 15, 1953.

(3) Notwithstanding the rules set forth in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph relating to the time for payment of the estimated tax, section 59 provides that if in any case a declaration is filed after the time prescribed in section 58 (d) (including a case in which such filing is due to an extension of time granted for filing the declaration) the estimated tax shall be paid at the time of filing the declaration or, in the alternative, there shall be paid at such time all installments of the estimated tax which would have been payable on or before such date of filing if the declaration had been timely filed in accordance with the provisions of section 58 (d) and the remaining installments shall be paid at the times and in the amounts in which they would have been payable if the declaration had been so filed. Thus, for example, A, a married man who makes his return on the calendar year basis, was employed from the beginning of 1952 and for several years prior thereto at an annual salary of $6,000, thus meeting the requirements of section 58 (a) A filed his declaration for 1952 on September 16, 1952. In such case, A should have filed a declaration on or before March 15, 1952, and at the time of filing his declaration he was delinquent in the payment of three installments of his estimated tax for the taxable year 1952. Hence, upon his filing the declaration on September 16, 1952, three-fourths of the estimated tax shown thereon must be paid.

(4) In the case of a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis, there shall be substituted for the dates March 15, June 15, September 15, and January 15 of the succeeding taxable year, the 15th day of the third month, the 15th day of the sixth month, and the 15th day of the ninth month of the taxable year and the 15th day of the first month of the succeeding taxable year, respectively. For example, if a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis ending June 30, 1953, first meets on January 15, 1953, the requirements of section 58 (a) and the declaration is filed on or before March 15, 1953, the estimated tax shall be paid in two equal installments, one at the time of filing of such declaration and the second on or before July 15, 1953.

(5) In the case of a decedent, payments of estimated tax are not required subsequent to the date of death. See, however, § 39.58 (c)-1 for requirement of amended declaration by surviving spouse if a joint declaration was made with decedent before death.

(6) At the election of the taxpayer any installment of the estimated tax may be paid prior to the date prescribed for its payment.

(7) The payment of any and every installment of the estimated tax shall be considered payment on account of the tax for such taxable year. Hence, upon the return for such taxable year, the aggregate amount of the payments of estimated tax should be entered as payments to be applied against the tax shown on such return.

(b) Farmers. In the case of an individual whose estimated gross income from farming is at least two-thirds of his total gross income from all sources for the taxable year, special provisions are made with respect to the filing of the declaration, the payment of the tax, and the penalties incurred. As to what constitutes income from farming within the meaning of this paragraph, see § 39.60-1(a) In such case, if such taxable year is the calendar year, the declaration is to be filed on or before January 15 of the succeeding calendar year and payment of the estimated tax shall be made in full at such time. In the case of a farmer on the fiscal year basis, the declaration may be filed on or before the 15th day of the succeeding fiscal year and payment of the estimated tax shall be made in full at such time.

(c) Short taxable years. (1) In the case of a short taxable year for which a declaration is required to be filed the estimated tax shall be paid in equal installments, one at the time of filing the declaration, one on the 15th day of the third month of each succeeding 3-month period contained in such short taxable year except the last such 3-month period or fraction thereof, and one on the 15th day of the first month of the succeeding taxable year. For example, if the short taxable year is the period of 10 months from January 1, 1952, to October 31, 1952, and the declaration is required to be filed on or before March 15, 1952, the estimated tax is payable in four equal installments, on the date of filing the declaration, June 15, September 15, and November 15. If in such case the declaration is required to be filed after March 15 but on or before June 15, the tax will be payable in three equal installments, on the date of filing the declaration, September 15, and November 15.

(2) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section relating to payment of estimated tax in any case in which the declaration is filed after the time prescribed in section 58 (d) are equally applicable to the payment of the estimated tax for short taxable years.

§ 39.60 Statutory provisions; returns and payment of tax; special rules for application of sections 58 and 59.

SEC. 60. Special rules for application of sections 58 and 59—(a) Farmers. In the case of an individual whose estimated gross income from farming for the taxable year is at least two-thirds of the total estimated gross income from all sources for the taxable year, in lieu of the time prescribed in section 58 (d), the declaration for the taxable year may be made at any time on or before January 15 of the succeeding taxable year; and if such an individual files a return on or before January 31 of the succeeding taxable year, and pays in full the amount computed on the return as payable, such return shall have the same effect as that prescribed in section 58 (d) (3) in the case of a return filed on or before January 15.

(b) Application to short taxable years. The application of sections 58, 59, and 294 (d) and of subsection (a) of this section, to taxable years of less than twelve months shall be as prescribed in regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(c) Fiscal years. In the application of sections 58 and 59, and subsection (a) of this section, to the case of a taxable year beginning on any date other than January 1, there shall be substituted, for the months specified therein, the months which correspond thereto.

[Sec. 60 as amended by sec. 5 (a), Current Tax Payment Act 1943; sec. 118 (b), Rev. Act 1943; sec. 13 (a), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 1, Pub. Law 378 (81st Cong.)]

§ 39.60-1 Farmers—(a) General rule. In the case of an individual, whose estimated gross income from farming for the taxable year is at least two-thirds of his total estimated gross income from all sources for such taxable year, his declaration may be filed on or before the 15th day of January of the succeeding taxable year in lieu of the time prescribed for individuals generally. The estimated gross income from farming is the estimated income resulting from the cultivation of the soil and the raising or harvesting of any agricultural or horticultural commodities, and the raising of livestock, bees, or poultry. In other words, the requisite gross income must be derived from the operations of a stock, dairy, poultry, fruit, or truck farm, or plantation, ranch, nursery, range or orchard. If an individual receives for the use of his land income in the form of a share of the crops produced thereon, such income is from farming. As to determination of income of farmers, see §§ 39.22 (a)-7 and 39.23 (a)-11.

(b) Short taxable years. In the case of an individual whose estimated gross income from farming for a short taxable year is at least two-thirds of his total estimated gross income from all sources for such taxable year, his declaration may be filed on or before the 15th day of the month immediately following the close of such taxable year.

§ 39.60-2 Short taxable years—(a) Requirement of declaration. No declaration may be made for a period of more than 12 months. A separate declaration for a fractional part of a year is, therefore, required where, for example, there is a change, with the approval of the Commissioner, in the basis of computing net income from one taxable year to another taxable year. The periods to be covered by such separate declarations in the several cases are those set forth in section 47 (a) No declaration, however, is required for a taxable year of less than three months. If the short taxable year is a period:

(1) Of at least three months but less than six months and the requirements of section 58 (a) are first met after the 1st day of the third month, or

(2) Of at least six months but less than nine months and the requirements of section 58 (a) are first met after the 1st day of the sixth month, or

(3) Of nine months or more and the requirements of section 58 (a) are first met after the 1st day of the ninth month, no declaration is required. In the case of a decedent, no declaration need be filed subsequent to the date of death. As to requirement for amended declaration if death of one spouse occurs after filing a joint declaration, see § 39.58 (c)-1.

(b) Income placed on annual basis. For the purpose of determining whether the anticipated income for a short taxable year necessitates the filing of a declaration, such income shall be placed on an annual basis in the manner prescribed in section 47 (c) (1) Thus, for example, a taxpayer who changes from a calendar year basis to a fiscal year basis beginning July 1, 1952, will have a short taxable year beginning January 1, 1952, and ending June 30, 1952. If his anticipated gross income for such short taxable year consists solely of wages (as defined in section 1621 (a)) in the amount of $3,000, his total gross income and his gross income from such wages for the purpose of determining whether a declaration is required is $6,000, the amount obtained by placing anticipated income of $3,000 upon an annual basis. Hence, assuming such taxpayer is single and has no dependents, he is required to file a declaration of estimated tax for the short taxable year since his anticipated gross income from wages when placed upon an annual basis is in excess of $5,100 ($4,500 plus $600)

(c) Time for filing declaration. In the case of short taxable years the declaration shall be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month of such taxable year if the requirements of section 58 (a) are met on or before the 1st day of the third month of such year. If such requirements are first met after the 1st day of the third month but before the 2d day of the sixth month, the declaration must be filed on or before the 15th day of the sixth month. If, however, the period for which the declaration is filed is one of three months, or one of six months and the requirements of section 58 (a) were not met until after the 1st day of the third month, or one of nine months and such requirements were not met until after the 1st day of the sixth month, the declaration may be filed on or before the 15th day of the succeeding taxable year. For the special rule in the case of farmers, see § 39.60-1 (b)

§ 39.60-3 Fiscal years. (a) In the case of a taxpayer on the fiscal year basis, the declaration must be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month of the taxable year. If, however, the requirements of section 58 (a) are first met after the 1st day of the third month and before the 2d day of the sixth month, the declaration must be filed on or before the 15th day of the sixth month of the taxable year. If such requirements are first met after the 1st day of the sixth month, and before the 2d day of the ninth month, the declaration must be filed on or before the 15th day of the ninth month, of the taxable year. If such requirements are first met after the 1st day of the ninth month, the declaration must be filed on or before the 15th day of the first month of the succeeding fiscal year. Thus, if an individual taxpayer is on the fiscal year basis ending June 30, 1953, his declaration must be filed on or before September 15, 1952, if the requirements of section 58 (a) are met on or before September 1, 1952. If, however, such conditions are not met until after September 1, 1952, and before December 2, 1952, the declaration need not be filed until December 15, 1952.

(b) A taxpayer on the fiscal year basis, who first meets the requirements of section 58 (a) after the 1st day of the ninth month of such taxable year, may satisfy the requirements as to the filing of such declaration by filing his return and paying the tax on or before the 15th day of the first month following the close of such fiscal year.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

§ 39.61-64 Statutory provisions; miscellaneous provisions; laws made applicable; rules and regulations; publication of statistics; definitions.

SEC. 61. Laws made applicable. All administrative, special, or stamp provisions of law, including the law relating to the assessment of taxes, so far as applicable, shall be extended to and made a part of this chapter.

SEC. 62. Rules and regulations. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe and publish all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this chapter.

SEC. 63. Publication of statistics. The Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prepare and publish annually statistics reasonably available with respect to the operation of the income, war-profits and excess-profits tax laws, including classifications of taxpayers and of income, the amounts allowed as deductions, exemptions, and credits, and any other facts deemed pertinent and valuable.

SEC. 64. Definitions. For definitions of a general character, see section 3797.

SUBPART C—SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS

(CHAPTER I, INTERNAL REVENUE CODE)

SUPPLEMENT A—RATES OF TAX

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

SEC. 11. Denial of tax deductions and exemptions [Internal Security Act of 1950]. * * *

(b) No organization shall be entitled to exemption from Federal income tax, under section 101 of the Internal Revenue Code, for any taxable year if at any time during such taxable year (1) such organization is registered under section 7, or (2) there is in effect a final order of the Board [the Subversive Activities Control Board] requiring such organization to register under section 7.

§ 39.101-1 Proof of exemption; annual returns—(a) Proof of exemption in general. An organization is not exempt from tax merely because it is not organized and operated for profit. In order to establish its exemption, it is necessary that every organization claiming exemption file with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization an application form as set forth below. An organization claiming exemption under section 101 (1), (3) (4) except a bona fide credit union, (6), (7) (8) (9) (10) (12) (14) or (16) shall file the form of application appropriate to its activities, filled out in accordance with the instructions on the form or issued therewith. Copies of the following forms may be obtained from any district director of internal revenue: For organizations claiming exemption under section 101 (6) Form 1023; under section 101 (1), (3) (7) or (8) Form 1024; under section 101 (9) Form 1025; under section 101 (10) (14) or (16) Form 1026; under section 101 (4), except bona fide credit unions, Form 1027; and under section 101 (12) Form 1028. All other organizations claiming exemption, including bona fide credit unions, shall file an application for exemption showing the character of the organization, the purpose for which it was organized, its actual activities, the sources of its income and the disposition of such income, whether or not any of its income is credited to surplus or may inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and in general all facts relating to its operations which affect its right to exemption. To each such form or application shall be attached a copy of the articles of incorporation, declaration of trust, or other instrument of similar import, setting forth the permitted powers or activities of the organization, the by-laws or other code of regulations, and the latest financial statement showing the assets, liabilities, receipts, and disbursements of the organization. Each such form or application shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

(b) Additional proof by particular classes of organizations. (1) Organizations mentioned below shall submit with and as a part of their applications the following information:

(i) Mutual insurance companies shall submit copies of the policies or certificates of membership;

(ii) In the case of holding companies claiming exemption under section 101 (14) if the organization for which title is held has not been specifically notified in writing by the Internal Revenue Service that it is held to be exempt under section 101, the holding company shall submit the information indicated herein as necessary for a determination of the status of the organization for which title is held.

(2) In addition to the information specifically called for by this section the Commissioner may require any additional information deemed necessary for a proper determination of whether a particular organization is exempt under section 101, and when deemed advisable in the interest of an efficient administration of the internal revenue laws he may in the cases of particular types of organizations prescribe the form in which the proof of exemption shall be furnished.

(3) An organization claiming to be specifically exempted by section 54 (f) from filing annual returns shall submit with and as a part of its application a statement of all the facts on which it bases its claim.

(c) Duties of district director with respect to proof of exemption. The district director of internal revenue, upon receipt of the application and other papers constituting the proof of exemption of an organization claiming exemption from tax under section 101, will forward completed documents to the Commissioner for decision as to whether the organization is exempt.

(d) "Private shareholder or individual" defined. The words "private shareholder or individual" in section 101 refer to persons having a personal and private interest in the activities of the organization.

(e) Requirement of annual returns. Every organization exempt from tax under section 101, regardless of the amount or source of its income or receipts and irrespective of whether it is chartered by, or affiliated or associated with, any central, parent, or other organization, except organizations specifically exempted from filing annual returns by section 54 (f) (see paragraph (h) of this section) shall file annually with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located the principal place of business or principal office of the organization a return of information on Form 990 specifically stating the items of gross income, receipts, and disbursements and such other information as may be prescribed by the Commissioner in the instructions on the form or issued by him therewith. However, those organizations which are exempt from tax under section 101 (6) shall, in lieu of using Form 990, file an information return on Form 990-A to comply with the provisions of this section and of § 39.153-1. Returns on Forms 990 and 990-A shall be on the basis of the established annual accounting period of the organization. Where the organization has no such established accounting period, such returns shall be on the basis of the calendar year. Religious and apostolic organizations which are exempt from tax under section 101 (18) shall annually file the return of income required under § 39.101 (18)-1 on the same form (Form 1065) as is required in the case of partnerships, in lieu of Form 990. With respect to group returns, see paragraph (f) of this section. For proof and establishment of right to exemption from tax which must accompany Form 990 or Form 990-A in the case of an organization which has not established its right to such exemption before the filing of the annual return, see paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

(f) Group returns. A central, parent, or like organization (referred to in this section as central organization) although required to file a separate annual return for itself under section 54 (f) and paragraph (e) of this section, may file annually, in addition to such separate annual return, a group return on Form 990 or Form 990-A as may be appropriate (see paragraph (e) of this section) for two or more of the local organizations, chapters, or the like (referred to in this section as "local organizations") which are (1) chartered by, or affiliated or associated with, such central organization at the close of its annual accounting period, (2) subject to the general supervision of, and examination by, the central organization, and (3) exempt from tax under the same provision of section 101 under which the central organization is exempt from tax. The filing of the group return shall be in lieu of the filing of a separate return by each of the local organizations included in the group return. The group return shall include only those local organizations which in writing have authorized the central organization to include them in the group return, and which have made and filed, with the central organization, their statements, containing written declarations that they are made under the penalties of perjury, specifically stating their items of gross income, receipts, and disbursements, and such other information relating to them which is required to be stated in the group return, and such authorizations and statements shall be permanently retained by the central organization. There shall be attached to the group return and made a part thereof a schedule showing the name and address of each of the local organizations and the total number thereof included in such return, and a schedule showing the name and address of each of the local organizations and the total number thereof not included in the group return. The group return shall be on the basis of the established annual accounting period of the central organization. Where such central organization has no established annual accounting period, such return shall be on the basis of the calendar year. The same income, receipts, and disbursements of a local organization shall not be included in more than one group return. The group return shall be filed in accordance with these regulations and the instructions on Form 990 or Form 990-A or issued therewith, and shall be considered the return of each of the local organizations included therein. For proof and establishment of right to exemption from tax which must accompany Form 990 or Form 990-A in the case of a local organization included in the group return but which has not established its right to such exemption before the filing of the group return, see paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

(g) Date for filing annual returns. The annual returns of information on Forms 990 and 990-A shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the fifth full calendar month following the close of the period for which the return is required to be filed.

(h) Organizations not required to file annual returns. (1) Annual returns on Forms 990 and 990-A are not required to be filed by an organization which has established its right to exemption from tax under section 101 (6), if:

(i) It is organized and operated exclusively for religious purposes;

(ii) It is operated, supervised, or controlled by or in connection with an organization which is organized and operated exclusively for religious purposes;

(iii) It is an educational organization which normally maintains a regular faculty and curriculum and normally has a regularly organized body of pupils or students in attendance at the place where its educational activities are regularly carried on; or

(iv) It is a charitable organization, or an organization for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, which is supported, in whole or in part, by funds contributed by the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof, or which is primarily supported by contributions of the general public.

(2) The annual return on Form 990 need not be filed by a fraternal beneficiary society, order, or association, which has established its exemption from tax solely under section 101 (3), or by an organization exempt from tax under section 101 (15) if it is a corporation wholly owned by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof, or is a wholly-owned subsidiary of such a corporation.

(3) An educational organization which normally maintains and has a regular faculty, curriculum, and student body and meets the above conditions which relieve it from the requirement of filing annual returns shall not be considered as having thereafter failed to continue meeting such conditions if it is temporarily compelled to curtail or discontinue its normal and regular activities during the existence of abnormal circumstances and conditions.

(4) An organization organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals is not "primarily supported by contributions of the general public" for any accounting period

if more than 50 percent of its income and receipts for such period are not actually derived from voluntary contributions and gifts made by the general public, as distinguished from a few contributors or donors or from related or associated persons. For the purposes of this subparagraph, the words "related or associated persons" refer to persons or a particular group who are connected with or are interested in the activities of the organization such as founders, incorporators, shareholders, members, fiduciaries, officers, employees, or the like, or who are connected with such persons by family or business relationship.

(i) Records of district directors. District directors of internal revenue will keep a list of all organizations held to be exempt from tax to the end that they may occasionally inquire into their status and ascertain whether or not they are (1) observing the conditions upon which their exemption is predicated, and (2) annually filing returns on Form 990 or Form 990-A if they are required to file such returns.

(j) Records, statements, and other returns of tax-exempt organizations. (1) An organization which has established its right to exemption from tax under section 101 and has also established that it is not required to file annually the return of information on Form 990 or Form 990-A shall immediately notify in writing the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which is located its principal office of any changes in its character, operations, or purpose for which it was originally created.

(2) Every organization which has established its right to exemption from tax, whether or not it is required to file an annual return of information, shall submit such additional information as may be required by the Commissioner for the purpose of enabling him to inquire further into its exempt status and to administer the provisions of section 54 (f) and this section. For requirement as to keeping of permanent books of account or records, see § 39.54-1.

(3) An organization which has established its right to exemption from tax under section 101, including an organization which is relieved under section 54 (f) and this section from filing returns of income or annual returns of information, is not, however, relieved from the duty of filing other returns of information. See sections 147 and 148.

(k) Supplement U tax returns. In addition to the foregoing requirements of this section, certain organizations otherwise exempt from tax under section 101 (1) (6) (7) or (14) which are subject to tax on Supplement U net income, are also required to file returns on Form 990-T. See § 39.421-3 for requirements with respect to such returns.

§ 39.101-2 Limitations on exemption—(a) In general. Under section 11 (b) of the Internal Security Act of 1950, no organization is entitled to exemption under section 101 for any taxable year if at any time during such year such organization is registered under section 7 of such act or if there is in effect a final order of the Subversive Activities Control Board established by section 12 of such act requiring such organization to register under section 7 of such act. Under sections 3813 and 3814 of the Internal Revenue Code, certain organizations described in section 101 (6) may be denied exemption under section 101 (6). See §§ 39.3813-1 and 39.3814-1.

(b) Feeder organizations. (1) In the case of an organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit, exemption is not allowed under any paragraph of section 101 on the ground that all the profits of such organization are payable to one or more organizations exempt from taxation under section 101. For the purpose of this rule, the term "trade or business" does not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property). In determining the primary purpose of an organization, all the circumstances must be considered, including the size and extent of the trade or business and the size and extent of those activities of such organization which are specified in the applicable paragraph of section 101. If a subsidiary organization of a tax-exempt organization would itself be exempt on the ground that its activities are an integral part of the exempt activities of the parent organization, its exemption will not be lost because, as a matter of accounting between the two organizations, the subsidiary derives a profit from its dealings with its parent organization, for example, a subsidiary organization which is operated for the sole purpose of furnishing electric power used by its parent organization, a tax-exempt educational organization, in carrying on its educational activities. However, the subsidiary organization is not exempt from tax if it is operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business which would be an unrelated trade or business (that is, unrelated to exempt activities) if regularly carried on by the parent organization. For example, if a subsidiary organization is operated primarily for the purpose of furnishing electric power to consumers other than its parent organization (and the parent's tax-exempt subsidiary organizations), it is not exempt since such business would be an unrelated trade or business if regularly carried on by the parent organization. Similarly, if the subsidiary is owned by several unrelated exempt organizations, and is operated for the purpose of furnishing electric power to each of them, it is not exempt since such business would be an unrelated trade or business if regularly carried on by any one of the tax-exempt organizations.

(2) In certain cases an organization which carries on a trade or business for profit but is not operated for the primary purpose of carrying on such trade or business is subject to tax under Supplement U of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code (which supplement begins with section 421) on its unrelated business net income.

§ 39.101 (1) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B), and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—

(1) Labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (1)-1. Labor, agricultural, and horticultural organizations. (a) The organizations contemplated by section 101 (1) as entitled to exemption from income taxation are those which:

(1) Have no net income inuring to the benefit of any member;

(2) Are educational or instructive in character; and

(3) Have as their objects the betterment of the conditions of those engaged in such pursuits, the improvement of the grade of their products, and the development of a higher degree of efficiency in their respective occupations.

(b) Organizations such as county fairs and like associations of a quasi public character, which are designed to encourage the development of better agricultural and horticultural products through a system of awards and whose income from gate receipts, entry fees, and donations is used exclusively to meet the necessary expenses of upkeep and operation, are thus exempt. On the other hand, associations which have for their purpose, for example, the holding of periodic race meets, the profits from which may inure to the benefit of their shareholders, are not exempt. Similarly, corporations engaged in growing agricultural or horticultural products for profit are not exempt from tax. Organizations otherwise exempt from tax under this section are taxable upon their Supplement U net income. See sections 421 to 424, inclusive, and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.101 (2)-(3) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; mutual savings banks; fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(2) Mutual savings banks * * * [Repealed by sec. 313 (a), Rev. Act 1951.]

(3) Fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations, (A) operating under the lodge system or for the exclusive benefit of the members of a fraternity itself operating under the lodge system; and (B) providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such society, order, or association or their dependents; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (3)-1 Fraternal beneficiary societies. A fraternal beneficiary society is exempt from tax only if operated under the "lodge system," or for the exclusive benefit of the members of a society so operating. "Operating under the lodge system" means carrying on its activities under a form of organization that comprises local branches, chartered by a parent organization and largely self-governing, called lodges, chapters, or the like. In order to be exempt it is also necessary that the society have an established system for the payment to its members or their dependents of life, sick, accident, or other benefits.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(4) Credit unions without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit; and corporations or associations without capital stock organized prior to September 1, 1951, and operated for mutual purposes and without profit for the purpose of providing reserve funds for, and insurance of, shares or deposits in—

(A) Domestic building and loan associations,

(B) Cooperative banks without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, or

(C) Mutual savings banks not having capital stock represented by shares; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by sec. 301 (b), Rev. Act 1950; secs. 313 (b), 314 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (4)-1 Credit unions and mutual insurance funds. Credit unions (other than Federal credit unions which are exempt under section 101 (15)) without capital stock, organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, are exempt from tax under section 101 (4) Corporations or associations without capital stock organized before September 1, 1951, and operated for mutual purposes and without profit for the purpose of providing reserve funds for and insurance of shares or deposits in:

(a) Domestic building and loan associations as defined in section 3797 (a) (19)

(b) Cooperative banks without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, or

(c) Mutual savings banks not having capital stock represented by shares, are exempt from tax under section 101 (4)

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(5) Cemetery companies owned and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members or which are not operated for profit; and any corporation chartered solely for burial purposes as a cemetery corporation and not permitted by its charter to engage in any business not necessarily incident to that purpose, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (5)-1 Cemetery companies. (a) A cemetery company may be entitled to exemption—

(1) If it is owned by and operated exclusively for the benefit of its lot owners who hold such lots for bona fide burial purposes and not for purpose of resale, or

(2) If it is not operated for profit.

(b) Any cemetery corporation chartered solely for burial purposes and not permitted by its charter to engage in any business not necessarily incident to that purpose is exempt from income tax, provided that no part of its net earnings inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. A cemetery company which fulfills the other requirements of the Internal Revenue Code may be exempt, even though it issues preferred stock entitling the holders to dividends at a fixed rate, not exceeding the legal rate of interest in the State of incorporation or 8 percent per annum, whichever is greater, on the value of the consideration for which the stock was issued, provided that its articles of incorporation require:

(1) That the preferred stock shall be retired at par as soon as sufficient funds available therefor are realized from sales, and

(2) That all funds not required for the payment of dividends upon or for the retirement of preferred stock shall be used by the company for the care and improvement of the cemetery property.

§ 39.101 (6) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; religious, charitable, etc., organizations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(6) Corporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and no substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation. For loss of exemption under certain circumstances, see sections 3813 and 3814; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by secs. 301 (b), 332 (c), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 314 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (6)-1 Religious, charitable, scientific, literary, and educational organizations and community chests. (a) In order to be exempt under section 101 (6) the organization must meet three tests:

(1) It must be organized and operated exclusively for one or more of the specified purposes;

(2) Its net income must not inure in whole or in part to the benefit of private shareholders or individuals; and

(3) It must not by any substantial part of its activities attempt to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise.

(b) Corporations organized and operated exclusively for charitable purposes comprise, in general, organizations for the relief of the poor. The fact that a corporation established for the relief of indigent persons may receive voluntary contributions from the persons intended to be relieved will not necessarily deprive it of exemption.

(c) An educational organization within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code is one designed primarily for the improvement or development of the capabilities of the individual, but, under exceptional circumstances, may include an association whose sole purpose is the instruction of the public, or an association whose primary purpose is to give lectures on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community, even though an association of either class has incidental amusement features. An organization formed, or availed of, to disseminate controversial or partisan propaganda is not an educational organization within the meaning of the Code. However, the publication of books or the giving of lectures advocating a cause of a controversial nature shall not of itself be sufficient to deny an organization the exemption, if carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation forms no substantial part of its activities, its principal purpose and substantially all of its activities being clearly of a nonpartisan, noncontroversial, and educational nature.

(d) Since an organization exempt under section 101 (6) must be organized and operated exclusively for one or more of the specified purposes, an organization organized or operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit is not exempt thereunder. Thus, such an organization is not exempt under section 101 (6) even though it has certain religious purposes, its property is held in common, and its profits do not inure to the benefit of individual members of the organization. See section 101 (18) as to religious or apostolic associations or corporations. Organizations, including trusts, otherwise exempt from tax under this section (other than a church, or a convention or association of churches) are taxable on Supplement U net income. See sections 421 to 424, inclusive, and the regulations thereunder.

(e) A corporation otherwise exempt under section 101 (6) does not lose its status as an exempt corporation by receiving income such as rent, dividends, and interest from investments, provided such income is devoted exclusively to one or more of the purposes specified in that section.

(f) Sections 3813 and 3814 set forth rules under which certain organizations described in section 101 (6) may be denied exemption. See §§ 39.3813-1 and 39.3814-1.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(7) Business leagues, chambers of commerce, real-estate boards, or boards of trade, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this action from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by secs. 301 (b), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 314 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (7)-1 Business leagues, chambers of commerce, real estate boards, and boards of trade. A business league is an association of persons having some common business interest, the purpose of which is to promote such common interest and not to engage in a regular business of a kind ordinarily carried on for profit. It is an organization of the same general class as a chamber of commerce or board of trade. Thus, its activities should be directed to the improvement of business conditions of one or more lines of business as distinguished from the performance of particular services for individual persons. An organization whose purpose is to engage in a regular business of a kind ordinarily carried on for profit, even though the business is conducted on a cooperative basis or produces only sufficient income to be self-sustaining, is not a business league. An association engaged in furnishing information to prospective investors, to enable them to make sound investments, is not a business league, since its activities do not further any common business interest, even though all of its income is devoted to the purpose stated. A stock exchange is not a business league, a chamber of commerce, or a board of trade within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code and is not exempt from tax. Organizations otherwise exempt from tax under this section are taxable upon their Supplement U net income. See sections 421 to 424, inclusive, and the regulations thereunder.

SEC. 101 Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(8) Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare, or local associations of employees, the membership of which is limited to the employees of a designated person or persons in a particular municipality, and the net earnings of which are devoted exclusively to charitable, educational, or recreational purposes; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (8)-1 Civic leagues and local associations of employees. Civic leagues entitled to exemption under section 101 (8) comprise those not organized for profit but operated exclusively for purposes beneficial to the community as a whole, and, in general, include organizations engaged in promoting the welfare of mankind, other than organizations comprehended within section 101 (6). Certain local associations of employees are also expressly entitled to exemption under section 101 (8). The Internal Revenue Code prescribes as conditions to exemption (a) that the membership of such an association be limited to the employees of a designated person or persons in a particular municipality, and (b) that the net earnings of the association be devoted exclusively to charitable, educational, or recreational purposes. See § 39.101 (6)-1 with reference to the meaning of "charitable" and "educational" and § 39.101 (10)-1 as to the meaning of "local" as used in section 101.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(9) Clubs organized and operated exclusively for pleasure, recreation, and other nonprofitable purposes, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits from payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (9)-1 Social clubs. The exemption granted by section 101 (9) applies to practically all social and recreation clubs which are supported by membership fees, dues, and assessments. If a club engages in traffic, in agriculture, horticulture, or in the sale of real estate, timber, etc., for profit, such club is not organized and operated exclusively for pleasure, recreation, or social purposes. Generally, an incidental sale of property will not deprive the club of the exemption.

§ 39.101 (10) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; benevolent life insurance associations and mutual or cooperative companies.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(10) Benevolent life insurance associations of a purely local character, mutual ditch or irrigation companies, mutual or cooperative telephone companies, or like organizations; but only if 85 per centum or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (10)-1 Local benevolent life insurance associations, mutual irrigation and telephone companies, and like organizations. (a) It is a prerequisite to exemption under section 101 (10) that at least 85 percent of the income of the organization shall consist of amounts collected from members for the sole purpose of meeting losses and expenses. If an organization issues policies for stipulated cash premiums, or if it requires advance deposits to cover the cost of the insurance and maintains investments from which more than 15 percent of its income is derived, it is not entitled to exemption. On the other hand, an organization may be entitled to exemption, although it makes advance assessments for the sole purpose of meeting future losses and expenses, provided that the balance of such assessments remaining on hand at the end of the year is retained to meet losses and expenses or is returned to members.

(b) The phrase "of a purely local character" applies to benevolent life insurance associations, and not to the other organizations specified in section 101 (10) It applies, however, to any organization seeking exemption on the ground that it is an organization similar to a benevolent life insurance association. An organization of a purely local character is one whose business activities are confined to a particular community, place, or district, irrespective, however, of political subdivisions. If the activities of an organization are limited only by the borders of a State, it cannot be considered to be purely local in character.

§ 39.101 (11) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; mutual insurance organizations other than life or marine.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(11) Mutual insurance companies or associations other than life or marine (including interinsurers and reciprocal underwriters) if the gross amount received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) does not exceed $75,000; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by sec. 165 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 301 (b), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 314 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (11)-1 Mutual insurance companies or associations. An insurance company is exempt from taxation under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code if it is a mutual company or association (other than life or marine) or an interinsurer or reciprocal underwriter and if the gross amount received during the taxable year from interest, dividends, rents, and premiums (including deposits and assessments) does not exceed $75,000.

§ 39.101 (12) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; cooperative farmers' fruit growers' etc., associations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(12) (A) Farmers' fruit growers' or like associations organized and operated on a cooperative basis (a) for the purpose of marketing the products of members or other producers, and turning back to them the proceeds of sales, less the necessary marketing expenses, on the basis of either the quantity or the value of the products furnished by them, or (b) for the purpose of purchasing supplies and equipment for the use of members or other persons, and turning over such supplies and equipment to them at actual cost, plus necessary expenses. Exemption shall not be denied any such association because it has capital stock, if the dividend rate of such stock is fixed at not to exceed the legal rate of interest in the State of incorporation or 8 per centum per annum, whichever is greater, on the value of the consideration for which the stock was issued, and if substantially all such stock (other than nonvoting preferred stock, the owners of which are not entitled or permitted to participate, directly or indirectly, in the profits of the association, upon dissolution or otherwise, beyond the fixed dividends) is owned by producers who market their products or purchase their supplies and equipment through the association; nor shall exemption be denied any such association because there is accumulated and maintained by it a reserve required by State law or a reasonable reserve for any necessary purpose. Such an association may market the products of nonmembers in an amount the value of which does not exceed the value of the products marketed for members, and may purchase supplies and equipment for nonmembers in an amount the value of which does not exceed the value of the supplies and equipment purchased for members, provided the value of the purchases made for persons who are neither members nor producers does not exceed 15 per centum of the value of all its purchases. Business done for the United States or any of its agencies shall be disregarded in determining the right to exemption under this paragraph;

(B) An organization exempt from taxation under the provisions of subparagraph (A) shall be subject to the taxes imposed by sections 13 and 15, or section 117 (c) (1), except that in computing the net income of such an organization there shall be allowed as deductions from gross income (in addition to other deductions allowable under section 23)—

(i) Amounts paid as dividends during the taxable year upon its capital stock, and

(ii) Amounts allocated during the taxable year to patrons with respect to its income not derived from patronage (whether or not such income was derived during such taxable year) whether paid in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the dollar amount allocated to him. Allocations made after the close of the taxable year and on or before the fifteenth day of the ninth month following the close of such year shall be considered as made on the last day of such taxable year to the extent the allocations are attributable to income derived before the close of such year.

Patronage dividends, refunds, and rebates to patrons with respect to their patronage in the same or preceding years (whether paid in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the dollar amount of such dividend, refund, or rebate) shall be taken into account in computing net income in the same manner as in the case of a cooperative organization not exempt under subparagraph (A). Such dividends, refunds, and rebates made after the close of the taxable year and on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of such year shall be considered as made on the last day of such taxable year to the extent that dividends, refunds, or rebates, are attributable to patronage occurring before the close of such year. * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by sec. 301 (b), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 314 (a) (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (12)-1 Farmers' cooperative marketing and purchasing associations; requirements for exemption under section 101 (12) (A) (a) (1) Cooperative associations engaged in the marketing of farm products for farmers, fruit growers, livestock growers, dairymen, etc., and turning back to the producers the proceeds of the sales of their products, less the necessary operating expenses, on the basis of the products furnished by them, are exempt from income tax. For instance, cooperative dairy companies which are engaged in collecting milk and disposing of it or the products thereof and distributing the proceeds, less necessary operating expenses, among the producers upon the basis of the quantity of milk or of butter fat in the milk furnished by such producers, are exempt from the tax. If the proceeds of the business are distributed in any other way than on such a proportionate basis, the association does not meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code and is not exempt. In other words, nonmember patrons must be treated the same as members insofar as the distribution of patronage dividends is concerned, that is, if products are marketed for nonmember producers, the proceeds of the sale, less necessary operating expenses, must be returned to the patrons from the sale of whose goods such proceeds result, whether or not such patrons are members of the association. In order to show its cooperative nature and to establish compliance with the requirement of the Code that the proceeds of sales, less necessary expenses, be turned back to all producers on the basis of the products furnished by them, it is necessary for such an association to keep permanent records of the business done both with members and nonmembers. The Code does not require, however, that the association keep ledger accounts with each producer selling through the association. Any permanent records which show that the association was operating during the taxable year on a cooperative basis in the distribution of patronage dividends to all producers will suffice. While under the Code patronage dividends must be paid to all producers on the same basis, this requirement is complied with if an association, instead of paying patronage dividends to nonmember producers in cash, keeps permanent records from which the proportionate shares of the patronage dividends due to nonmember producers can be determined, and such shares are made applicable toward the purchase price of a share of stock or of a membership in the association.

(2) An association which has capital stock will not for such reason be denied exemption (i) if the dividend rate of such stock is fixed at not to exceed the legal rate of interest in the State of incorporation or 8 percent per annum, whichever is greater, on the value of the consideration for which the stock was issued, and (ii) if substantially all of such stock (with the exception noted below) is owned by producers who market their products or purchase their supplies and equipment through the association. Any ownership of stock by others than such actual producers must be satisfactorily explained in the association's application for exemption. The association will be required to show that the ownership of its capital stock has been restricted as far as possible to such actual producers. If by statutory requirement all officers of an association must be shareholders, the ownership of a share of stock by a nonproducer to qualify him as an officer will not destroy the association's exemption. Likewise, if a shareholder for any reason ceases to be a producer and the association is unable, because of a constitutional restriction or prohibition or other reason beyond the control of the association, to purchase or retire the stock of such nonproducer, the fact that under such circumstances a small amount of the outstanding capital stock is owned by shareholders who are no longer producers will not destroy the exemption. The restriction placed on the ownership of capital stock of an exempt cooperative association shall not apply to nonvoting preferred stock, provided the owners of such stock are not entitled or permitted to participate, directly or indirectly, in the profits of the association, upon dissolution or otherwise, beyond the fixed dividends. The accumulation and maintenance of a reserve required by State statute, or the accumulation and maintenance of a reasonable reserve or surplus for any necessary purpose, such as to provide for the erection of buildings and facilities required in business or for the purchase and installation of machinery and equipment or to retire indebtedness incurred for such purposes, will not destroy the exemption. An association will not be denied exemption because it markets the products of nonmembers, provided the value of the products marketed for nonmembers does not exceed the value of the products marketed for members. Anyone who shares in the profits of a farmers' cooperative marketing association, and is entitled to participate in the management of the association, must be regarded as a member of such association within the meaning of section 101 (12)

(b) Cooperative associations engaged in the purchasing of supplies and equipment for farmers, fruit growers, livestock growers, dairymen, etc., and turning over such supplies and equipment to them at actual cost, plus the necessary operating expenses, are exempt. The term "supplies and equipment" as used in section 101 (12) includes groceries and all other goods and merchandise used by farmers in the operation and maintenance of a farm or farmer's household. The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section relating to a reserve or surplus and to capital stock shall apply to associations coming under this paragraph. An association which purchases supplies and equipment for nonmembers will not for such reason be denied exemption, provided the value of the purchases for nonmembers does not exceed the value of the supplies and equipment purchased for members, and provided the value of the purchases made for nonmembers who are not producers does not exceed 15 percent of the value of all its purchases.

(c) In order to be exempt under either paragraph (a) or (b) of this section an association must establish that it has no net income for its own account other than that reflected in a reserve or surplus authorized in paragraph (a) of this section. An association engaged both in marketing farm products and in purchasing supplies and equipment is exempt if as to each of its functions it meets the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code. Business done for the United States or any of its agencies shall be disregarded in determining the right to exemption under section 101 (12) and this section. An association to be entitled to exemption must not only be organized but actually operated in the manner and for the purposes specified in section 101 (12)

(d) Cooperative organizations engaged in occupations dissimilar from those of farmers, fruit growers, and the like, such as marketing building materials, are not exempt.

§ 39.101 (12)-2 Tax treatment of farmers' cooperative marketing and purchasing associations exempt under section 101 (12) (A)—(a) In general. (1) Section 101 (12) (B) is applicable to farmers', fruit growers' or like associations organized and operated on a cooperative basis in the manner prescribed in section 101 (12) (A) Although such an association is subject to both normal tax and surtax, as in the case of corporations generally, certain special rules for the computation of net income are provided in section 101 (12) (B) and § 39.101 (12)-3. For the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes such an association shall, however, be considered as an organization exempt under section 101. Thus, under section 454 (a) such an association is not subject to the excess profits tax. Similarly, the provisions of section 26 (b) providing a credit for dividends received from a domestic corporation subject to taxation, are not applicable to dividends received from a cooperative association subject to section 101 (12) (B). The provisions of section 141, relating to consolidated returns, are likewise not applicable.

(2) Rules governing the manner in which amounts allocated as patronage dividends, refunds, or rebates are to be taken into account in computing the net income of such an association are set forth in § 39.101 (12)-4. For the tax treatment, as to patrons, of amounts received during the taxable year as patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds, see § 39.22 (a)-23.

(b) Meaning of terms. For purposes of §§ 39.101 (12)-2 to 39.101 (12)-4, inclusive, §§ 39.148 (f)-1, and 39.22 (a)-23, the following terms shall have the meaning ascribed below:

(1) Cooperative association. The term "cooperative association" includes any corporation operating on a cooperative basis and allocating amounts to patrons on the basis of the business done with or for such patrons, except that the term does not include any cooperative or nonprofit corporation (including any cooperative or nonprofit corporation engaged in rural electrification) exempt from taxation under section 101 (10) or (11) or any corporation subject to a tax imposed by Supplement G (relating to insurance companies)

(2) Patron. The term "patron" includes any person with whom or for whom the cooperative association does business on a cooperative basis, whether a member or a nonmember of the cooperative association, and whether an individual, a trust, estate, partnership, company corporation, or cooperative association.

(3) Allocation. The term "allocation" includes distributions made by a cooperative association to a patron in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, similar documents, or in any other manner whereby there is disclosed to a patron the dollar amount apportioned on the books of the association for the account of such patron. Thus, a mere credit to the account of a patron on the books of the cooperative associations, without disclosure to the patron, is not an allocation.

(4) Patronage dividends, rebates, and refunds. The term "patronage dividend, rebate, or refund" includes any amount allocated by a cooperative association, to the account of a patron on the basis of the business done with or for such patron. The following are not patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds:

(i) Amounts distributed in redemption of capital stock, or in redemption or satisfaction of certificates of indebtedness, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, letters of advice, or other similar documents;

(ii) Amounts allocated (whether in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the amount of such dividend, refund, or rebate) by the association for products of members or other patrons to the extent such amounts are fixed without reference to the earnings of the cooperative association. For this purpose, the term "earnings" includes the excess of amounts retained (or assessed) by the association to cover expenses or other items over the amount of such expenses or other items.

(c) Examples. The application of paragraph (b) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Cooperative A, a marketing association operating on a pooling basis, receives the products of patron W on January 5, 1952. On the same day Cooperative A advances to W 45 cents per unit for the products so delivered and allocates to him a "retain certificate" having a face value calculated at the rate of 5 cents per unit. During the operation of the pool, and before substantially all the products in the pool are disposed of, Cooperative A advances to W an additional 40 cents per unit, the amount being determined by reference to the market price of the products sold and the anticipated price of the unsold products. At the close of the pool on November 10, 1952, Cooperative A determines the excess of its receipts over the sum of its expenses and its previous advances to patrons, and allocates to W an additional 3 cents per unit and shares of the capital stock of A having an aggregate of face value calculated at the rate of 2 cents per unit.

The amount of patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds allocated to W during 1952 amount to 5 cents per unit, consisting of the aggregate of the following per-unit allocations: The amount of cash distribution (3 cents), and the face value of the capital stock of A (2 cents), which are fixed with reference to the earnings of A. The amount of the two distributions in cash (85 cents) and the face amount of the "retain certificate" (5 cents), which are fixed without reference to the earnings of A, do not constitute patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds.

Example (2). Cooperative B, a marketing association operating on a pooling basis, receives the products of patron X on March 5, 1952. On the same day Cooperative B pays to X $1.00 per unit for such products, this amount being determined by reference to the market price of the product when received, and issues to him a participation certificate having no face value but which entitles X on the close of the pool to the proceeds derived from the sale of his products less the previous payment of $1.00 and the expenses and other charges attributable to such products. On March 5, 1955, Cooperative B, having sold the products in the pool, having deducted the previous payments for such products, and having determined the expenses and other charges of the pool, redeems the participation certificate of X in cash for 10 cents per unit. The allocation made to X during 1955, amounting to 10 cents per unit, is a patronage dividend, rebate, or refund. Neither the payment to X in 1952 of $1.00 nor the issuance to him of the participation certificate in that year constitutes a patronage dividend, rebate, or refund within the meaning of this section.

Example (3). Cooperative C, a purchasing association, obtains supplies for patron Y on May 1, 1952, and receives in return therefor $100. On February 1, 1953, Cooperative C, having determined the excess of its receipts over its costs and expenses, allocates to Y a cash distribution of $1.00 and a revolving fund certificate of a face amount of $1.00. The amount of patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds allocated to Y for 1953 is $2.00, the aggregate of the cash distribution of $1.00, and the face amount, $1.00, of the revolving fund certificate.

Example (4). Cooperative D, a service association, sells the products of members on a fee basis. It receives the products of patron Z under an agreement not to pool his products with those of other members, to sell his products, and to deliver to him the proceeds of the sale. Patron Z makes payments to Cooperative D during 1952 aggregating $75 for service rendered him by Cooperative D during that year. On May 15, 1953, Cooperative D, having determined the excess of its receipts over its costs and expenses, allocates to Z a cash distribution of $2.00. Such amount is a patronage dividend, rebate, or refund allocated by Cooperative D during 1953.

§ 39.101 (12)-3 Manner of taxation of cooperative associations subject to 101 (12)—(a) In general. Farmers' fruit growers' or like associations, organized and operated in compliance with the requirements of section 101 (12) (A) and § 39.101 (12)-1 shall be subject to the taxes imposed by sections 13 and 15 or section 117 (c) (1) except that there shall be allowed as deductions from gross income, in addition to the other deductions allowable under section 23, certain special deductions provided in section 101 (12) (B) (i) and paragraph (c) of this section, and section 101 (12) (B) (ii) and paragraph (d) of this section. Amounts allocated as patronage dividends, refunds, or rebates, whether in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the dollar amount allocated, with respect to patronage for the taxable year or for preceding taxable years, shall be taken into account in the manner provided in section 101 (12) (B) and in § 39.101 (12)-4.

(b) Cooperative associations exempt from tax before January 1, 1952. (1) In the case of a cooperative association exempt from tax for taxable years beginning prior to January 1, 1952, the taxable year (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) shall be determined without regard to the fact that such association may have been exempt from tax and not subject to the provisions of section 101 (12) (B) during any prior period. See sections 41 and 48 and the regulations thereunder. Similarly in computing net income, the determination of the taxable year for which an item of income or expense is taken into account shall be made under the provisions of sections 41, 42 and 43 and the regulations prescribed thereunder, whether or not the item arose during a taxable year beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1951. For the purpose of determining the method of accounting of the cooperative association under section 41, a method of accounting recognized under section 41 and under the regulations prescribed thereunder and utilized in the return of such association filed for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, shall be deemed to constitute the method of accounting regularly employed by the cooperative association. The method selected shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon the examination of the return. Any change of the method so selected and so approved may be made only if permission is obtained from the Commissioner to change to another recognized basis in accordance with § 39.41-2.

(2) In any case where inventories are an income-producing factor see section 22 (c) and (d) and the regulations prescribed thereunder. The elective method of inventorying goods provided in section 22 (d) may be adopted by the cooperative association for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, in accordance with the requirements of section 22 (d) and the regulations issued under that section. In order to use such method for such a taxable year, the cooperative association must exercise the election provided in sections 22 (d) (2) and § 39.22 (d)-3 even though it may have utilized such method for accounting purposes for taxable years beginning prior to January 1, 1952.

(3) The following rules shall be applicable in computing, under section 122, the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) No net operating loss carry-back or carry-over shall be allowed from a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1952, for which the cooperative association was exempt from tax under section 101 (12) In the case of a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1952, for which the association was not exempt under section 101 (12), and of a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, the amount of the net operating loss carry-back or carry-over from such year shall not be reduced by reference to the income of any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1952, for which the association was exempt from tax under section 101 (12) However, in determining preceding taxable years and succeeding taxable years under section 122 (b) a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1952, for which the cooperative association was exempt from tax under section 101 (12) shall be taken into account and shall be considered to be a "preceding taxable year" or a "succeeding taxable year," as the case may be.

(4) The adjustments to the cost or other basis provided in section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (1)-3, inclusive, are applicable for the entire period since the acquisition of the property. Thus, proper adjustment to basis must be made under section 113 (b) for depreciation, obsolescence, amortization and depletion for all taxable years beginning prior to January 1, 1952, although the cooperative association was exempt from tax under section 101 (12) for such years. However, the provisions of section 114 (b) (relating to percentage and discovery depletion) are applicable only for such years during which the association was not exempt from tax under section 101 (12) The amendment to section 113 (b) (1) (B) (limiting the adjustment to basis for excessive depreciation, etc., which did not result in a reduction of taxes) made by Public Law 539, 82d Congress, is also applicable for such years where the association has made a proper election in accordance with section 113 (d) and the regulations prescribed thereunder. Similarly, in the case of tax exempt and partially taxable bonds purchased at a premium and subject to amortization under section 125, proper adjustment to basis must be made to reflect amortization with respect to such premium from the date of acquisition of the bond. (For principles governing the method of computation, see the example in § 39.113 (b) (1)-4 relating to mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks.) The basis of a fully taxable bond purchased at a premium shall be adjusted from the date of the election to amortize such premium in accordance with the provisions of section 125 except that no adjustment shall be allowable for such portion of the premium attributable to the period prior to the election.

(5) In the case of a mortgage acquired at a premium where the principal of such mortgage is payable in installments, adjustments to the basis for the premium must be made for all taxable years (whether or not the association was exempt from tax under section 101 (12) during such years) in which installment payments are received. Such adjustments may be made on an individual mortgage basis or on a composite basis by reference to the average period of payments of the mortgage loans of such association. For the purpose of this adjustment, the term "premium" includes the excess of the acquisition value of the mortgage over its maturity value. The acquisition value of the mortgage is the cost including buying commissions, attorneys' fees or brokerage fees, but such value does not include amounts paid for accrued interest.

(6) The cooperative association may select either of the alternative methods for treating bad debts provided in § 39.23 (k)-1 (a) in the return for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951. The method selected shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon examination of the return. Any change in the method so selected and approved may be made only if permission is granted as provided in § 39.23 (k)-1 (a).

(c) Deduction for dividends paid. There is allowable as a deduction from the gross income of a cooperative association operated in compliance with the requirements of section 101 (12) (A) and § 39.101 (12)-1, amounts paid as dividends during the taxable year upon the capital stock of the cooperative association. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, the term "capital stock" includes common stock (whether voting or nonvoting) preferred stock, or any other form of capital represented by capital retain certificates, revolving fund certificates, letters of advice, or other evidence of a proprietary interest in a cooperative association. Such deduction is applicable only to the taxable year in which the dividends are actually or constructively paid to the holder of capital stock or other proprietary interest of the cooperative association. If a dividend is paid by check and the check bearing a date within the taxable year is deposited in the mail, in a cover properly stamped and addressed to the shareholder at his last known address, at such time that in the ordinary handling of the mails the check would be received by such holder within the taxable year, a presumption arises that the dividend was paid to such holder in such year. The determination of whether a dividend has been paid to such holder by the corporation during its taxable year is in no way dependent upon the method of accounting regularly employed by the corporation in keeping its books, or upon the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income of the corporation is computed. For further rules as to the determination of the right to a deduction for dividends paid, under certain specific circumstances, see § 39.27 (b)-2.

(d) Deduction for amounts allocated from income not derived from patronage. There is allowable as a deduction from the gross income of a cooperative association operated in compliance with the requirements of section 101 (12) (A) and § 39.101 (12)-1 amounts allocated during the taxable year to patrons with respect to its income not derived from patronage (whether or not such income was derived during such taxable year) whether such amounts are paid in cash, merchandise, capital stock, revolving fund certificates, retain certificates, certificates of indebtedness, letters of advice, or in some other manner that discloses to each patron the dollar amount allocated to him. For this purpose, allocations made after the close of the taxable year and on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of the taxable year shall be considered as made on the last day of such taxable year to the extent that such allocations are attributable to income derived during the taxable year or during years prior to the taxable year. As used in this paragraph, the term "income not derived from patronage" means incidental income derived from sources not directly related to the marketing, purchasing, or service activities of the cooperative association. For example, income derived from the lease of premises, from investment in securities, from the sale or exchange of capital assets, constitutes income not derived from patronage. Business done with the United States shall constitute income not derived from patronage. In order that the deduction for income not derived from patronage may be applicable, it is necessary that the amount sought to be deducted be allocated on a patronage basis in proportion, insofar as is practicable, to the amount of business done by or for patrons during the period to which such income is attributable. Thus, if capital gains are realized from the sale or exchange of capital assets acquired and disposed of during the taxable year, income realized from such gains must be allocated to patrons of such year in proportion to the amount of business done by such patrons during the taxable year. Similarly, if capital gains are realized by the association from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for a period of more than one taxable year income realized from such gains must be allocated, in proportion insofar as is practicable, to the patrons of the taxable years during which the asset was owned by the association, and to the amount of business done by such patrons during such taxable years.

§ 39.101 (12)-4 Patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds; treatment as to cooperative associations entitled to tax treatment under section 101 (12) (B)—(a) General rule. Patronage dividends, refunds, or rebates, allocated by a cooperative association entitled to tax treatment under section 101 (12) (B) to a patron shall be taken into account in computing the gross income of such association for the taxable year, as an increase in its other cost of goods sold in the case of an association marketing products for patrons, or as a reduction in its gross receipts, in the case of an association purchasing supplies and equipment or performing services for patrons, as the case may be, if:

(1) The allocation is made in fulfillment and satisfaction of a valid obligation of such association to the patron, which obligation was in existence prior to the receipt by the cooperative association of the amount allocated, and

(2) The allocation is made on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of the taxable year in which the amounts allocated were received by the cooperative association.

For the purpose of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, amounts allocated by a cooperative association entitled to tax treatment under section 101 (12) (B) will be deemed allocated in fulfillment and satisfaction of a valid enforceable obligation, if made pursuant to provisions of the by-laws, articles of incorporation, or other contract, whereby the association is obligated to make such allocation after the retention of "reasonable reserves" and after payment of dividends on capital stock or other proprietary capital interests. Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph, amounts allocated as patronage dividends, refunds, or rebates during the taxable year, or on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of such year, with respect to patronage for years preceding the taxable year, shall be taken into account as an increase in its other cost of goods sold, or as a reduction in gross receipts, for the taxable year, as the case may be, where retention as "reasonable reserves" of the amounts so allocated beyond the year in which earned was proper in accordance with the provisions of section 101 (12) (A) and where the allocation is made to the patron on a patronage basis in proportion insofar as is practicable, to the amount of business done by such patrons during the taxable year or years in which the retained amounts were received by the cooperative association.

Example (1). E, a cooperative association entitled to tax treatment under section 101 (12) (B), organized without capital stock, is engaged in the business of marketing products for its patrons on a non-pool basis. The by-laws of cooperative E provide that there shall be allocated to patrons as patronage dividends within a reasonable time following the close of the year all of the gross returns from sales, less expenses of operation for the year and amounts retained as "reasonable reserves" necessary to the operation of cooperative E. At the close of the taxable year, 1952, it is determined that from the gross returns from sales less operating expenses and all taxes for such year, $5,000 is to be retained as "reasonable reserves" for various necessary purposes of cooperative E. It is assumed that the retention of such amount is proper in accordance with the provisions of section 101 (12) (A). Such $5,000 is apportioned on the books of cooperative E to patrons of 1952 on a patronage basis, or permanent records are kept from which an apportionment to such patrons can be made. On March 1, 1953, pursuant to the terms of the by-laws $200,000, the balance of the gross returns for the taxable year is allocated to patrons of 1952 on the basis of patronage. $100,000 of such $200,000 is allocated in cash. The remaining $100,000 is allocated in "retain certificates" bearing no interest and redeemable in the discretion of the Board of Directors of cooperative E.

There may be added to the cost of goods sold by cooperative E for 1952, $200,000 ($100,000 in cash, $100,000 in retain certificates), the total amount allocated as patronage dividends, rebates or refunds in fulfillment and satisfaction of the obligation of the by-laws, on March 1, 1953, before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of 1952. There may not be added to the cost of goods sold by cooperative E for 1952, $5,000, the amount retained as reserves apportioned on the books, but not allocated as patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds.

Example (2). The facts are the same as Example 1, it additionally appearing that at the close of 1953 it is determined by Cooperative E to allocate as cash patronage dividends, rebates, or refunds to patrons of 1952, $5,000, the amount retained as "reasonable reserves" for 1952 in accordance with the provisions of section 101 (12) (A). On March 1, 1954, such amount is allocated.

There may be added to the cost of goods sold by Cooperative E for 1953, $5,000, the amount allocated with respect to patronage of a preceding year, 1952, properly maintained as a reserve under section 101 (12) (A).

§ 39.101 (13) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; corporations organized to finance crop operations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(13) Corporations organized by an association exempt under the provisions of paragraph (12), or members thereof, for the purpose of financing the ordinary crop operations of such members or other producers, and operated in conjunction with such association. Exemption shall not be denied any such corporation because it has capital stock, if the dividend rate of such stock is fixed at not to exceed the legal rate of interest in the State of incorporation or 8 per centum per annum, whichever is greater, on the value of the consideration for which the stock was issued, and if substantially all such stock (other than nonvoting preferred stock, the owners of which are not entitled or permitted to participate, directly or indirectly, in the profits of the corporation, upon dissolution or otherwise, beyond the fixed dividends) is owned by such association, or members thereof; nor shall exemption be denied any such corporation because there is accumulated and maintained by it a reserve required by State law or a reasonable reserve for any necessary purpose; * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (13)-1 Corporations organized to finance crop operations. Corporations organized by farmers' cooperative marketing or purchasing associations, or the members thereof, for the purpose of financing the ordinary crop operations of such members or other producers are also exempt, provided the marketing or purchasing association is exempt under section 101 (12), and the financing corporation is operated in conjunction with the marketing or purchasing association. The provisions of § 39.101 (12)-1 relating to a reserve or surplus and to capital stock shall also apply to corporations coming under this section.

§ 39.101 (14) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; corporations organized to hold title to property for exempt organizations.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(14) Corporations organized for the exclusive purpose of holding title to property, collecting income therefrom, and turning over the entire amount thereof, less expenses, to an organization which itself is exempt from the tax imposed by this chapter;

* * * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

[Sec. 101 as amended by sec. 314 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.101 (14)-1 Corporations organized to hold title to property for exempt organizations. (a) A corporation otherwise exempt from tax under section 101 (14) is taxable upon its Supplement U net income if the income is payable to an organization which is itself subject to the tax imposed by Supplement U or if the income is payable to a church or to a convention or association of churches. See sections 421 to 424, inclusive, and the regulations thereunder. Since a corporation to be exempt under section 101 (14) must not engage in any business other than that of holding title to property and collecting income therefrom, it cannot have unrelated business net income as defined in section 422 (a) other than Supplement U rental income described in section 423.

(b) A corporation exempt under section 101 (14) cannot accumulate income and retain its exemption, but it must turn over the entire amount of such income, less expenses, to an organization which is itself exempt from tax under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code.

§ 39.101 (15)–(18) Statutory provisions; exemptions from tax on corporations; instrumentalities of the United States; employees' beneficiary associations; teachers' retirement fund associations; religious or apostolic organizations.

SEC. 101 Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—* * *

(15) Corporations organized under Act of Congress, if such corporations are instrumentalities of the United States and if, under such Act, as amended and supplemented, such corporations are exempt from Federal income taxes;

(16) Voluntary employees' beneficiary associations providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents, if (A) no part of their net earnings inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and (B) 85 per centum or more of the income consists of amounts collected from members and amounts contributed to the association by the employer of the members for the sole purpose of making such payments and meeting expenses;

(17) Teachers' retirement fund associations of a purely local character, if (A) no part of their net earnings inures (other than through payment of retirement benefits) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and (B) the income consists solely of amounts received from public taxation, amounts received from assessments upon the teaching salaries of members, and income in respect of investment;

(18) Religious or apostolic associations or corporations, if such associations or corporations have a common treasury or community treasury, even if such associations or corporations engage in business for the common benefit of the members, but only if the members thereof include (at the time of filing their returns) in their gross income their entire pro-rata shares, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the association or corporation for such year. Any amount so included in the gross income of a member shall be treated as a dividend received. * * *

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

§ 39.101 (18)–1 Religious or apostolic associations or corporations. (a) Religious or apostolic associations or corporations are exempt from taxation under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code if they have a common treasury or community treasury, even though they engage in business for the common benefit of the members, provided each of the members includes (at the time of filing his return) in his gross income his entire pro rata share, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the association or corporation for the taxable year of the association or corporation ending with or during his taxable year. Any amount so included in the gross income of a member shall be treated as a dividend received.

(b) Every association or corporation claiming exemption as a religious or apostolic association or corporation under the provisions of section 101 (18) and this section shall make for each taxable year a return on Form 1065 stating specifically the items of its gross income and deductions, and its net income, and there shall be attached to the return as a part thereof a statement showing the name and address of each member of the association or corporation and the amount of his distributive share of the net income of the association or corporation for such year. If the taxable year of any member is different from the taxable year of the association or corporation, the distributive share of the net income of the association or corporation to be included in the gross income of the member for his taxable year shall be based upon the net income of the association or corporation for the taxable year of the association or corporation ending within the taxable year of the member.

SEC. 101. Exemptions from tax on corporations. Except as provided in paragraph (12) (B) and in supplement U, the following organizations shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter—

* * * * *

(19) Voluntary employees' beneficiary associations providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such association or their dependents or their designated beneficiaries, if (A) admission to membership in such association is limited to individuals who are officers or employees of the United States Government, and (B) no part of the net earnings of such association inures (other than through such payments) to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

An organization operated for the primary purpose of carrying on a trade or business for profit shall not be exempt under any paragraph of this section on the ground that all of its profits are payable to one or more organizations exempt under this section from taxation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "trade or business" shall not include the rental by an organization of its real property (including personal property leased with the real property).

Notwithstanding paragraph (12) (B) and supplement U, an organization described in this section (other than in the preceding paragraph) shall be considered an organization exempt from income taxes for the purpose of any law which refers to organizations exempt from income taxes.

SEC. 102. Surtax on corporations improperly accumulating surplus.—(a) Imposition of tax. There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year (in addition to other taxes imposed by this chapter) upon the net income of every corporation (other than a personal holding company as defined in section 501 or a foreign personal holding company as defined in Supplement P) if such corporation, however created or organized, is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its shareholders or the shareholders of any other corporation, through the medium of permitting earnings or profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed, a surtax equal to the sum of the following:

27½ per centum of the amount of the undistributed section 102 net income not in excess of $100,000, plus

38½ per centum of the undistributed section 102 net income in excess of $100,000.

(b) Prima facie evidence. The fact that any corporation is a mere holding or investment company shall be prima facie evidence of a purpose to avoid surtax upon shareholders.

(c) Evidence determinative of purpose. The fact that the earnings or profits of a corporation are permitted to accumulate beyond the reasonable needs of the business shall be determinative of the purpose to avoid surtax upon shareholders unless the corporation by the clear preponderance of the evidence shall prove to the contrary.

(d) Definitions. As used in this chapter—

(1) Section 102 net income. The term "section 102 net income" means the net income, computed without the benefit of the capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e) from a taxable year which begins after December 31, 1940, and computed without the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s), minus the sum of—

(A) Taxes. Federal income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes (other than the tax imposed by Subchapter E of Chapter 2 for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1940) paid or accrued during the taxable year, to the extent not allowed as a deduction by section 23, but not including the tax imposed by this section or a corresponding section of a prior income-tax law.

(B) Disallowed charitable, etc., contributions. Contributions or gifts payment of which is made within the taxable year, not otherwise allowed as a deduction, to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (o), for the purposes therein specified. For the purposes of the preceding sentence, payment of any contribution or gift shall be considered as made within the taxable year if and only if it is considered for the purposes of section 23 (q) as made within such year.

(C) Disallowed losses. Losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets which are disallowed as a deduction by section 117 (d).

(D) Long-term capital gains. The excess of the net long-term capital gain for the taxable year over the net short-term capital loss for such year, minus the taxes imposed by this chapter attributable to such excess. The taxes attributable to such excess shall be an amount equal to the difference between (i) the taxes imposed by this chapter (except the tax imposed by this section) for such year and (ii) such taxes computed for such year without including such excess in net income.

(2) Undistributed section 102 net income. The term "undistributed section 102 net income" means the section 102 net income minus the basic surtax credit provided in section 27 (b), but the computation of such credit under section 27 (b) (1) shall be made without its reduction by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations.

(e) Tax on personal holding companies. For surtax on personal holding companies, see section 500.

(f) Income not placed on annual basis. Section 47 (c) shall not apply in the computation of the tax imposed by this section.

[Sec. 102 as amended by sec. 211 (f), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 103 (d), 135 (b), 202 (b), Rev. Act 1941; secs. 105 (e), 138, Rev. Act 1942; sec. 122 (g) (5), Rev. Act 1945; sec. 3 (b), Pub. Law 378 (81st Cong.); sec. 315 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.102-1 Taxation of corporation formed or utilized for avoidance of surtax. (a) Section 102 imposes (in addition to other taxes imposed by chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code) a graduated income tax or surtax upon any domestic or foreign corporation formed or availed of to avoid the imposition of the individual surtax upon its shareholders or the shareholders of any other corporation through the medium of permitting earnings or profits to accumulate instead of dividing or distributing them. However, personal holding companies, as defined in section 501, and foreign personal holding companies, as defined in Supplement P (see section 331) are excepted from taxation under section 102. The surtax imposed by section 102 applies whether the avoidance was accomplished through the formation or use of only one corporation or a chain of corporations. For example, if the capital stock of the M Corporation is held by the N Corporation so that the dividend distributions of the M Corporation would not be returned as income subject to the individual surtax until distributed in turn by the N Corporation to its individual shareholders, nevertheless the surtax imposed by section 102 applies to the M Corporation, if that corporation is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the individual surtax upon the individual shareholders of the N Corporation.

(b) A foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, formed or availed of for the purpose specified in section 102 is subject to the tax imposed thereby if it derives income from sources within the United States as defined in section 119 and the regulations thereunder, if any of its shareholders are (1) citizens or residents of the United States and therefore subject to the surtax with respect to distributions of the corporation or (2) nonresident alien individuals who, by the application of section 211 (b) or section 211 (c) would be subject to the surtax with respect to distributions of the corporation which if made would constitute income from sources within the United States (see section 119) or (3) foreign corporations if any beneficial interest therein is owned directly or indirectly by any shareholder specified in (1) or (2) On the other hand, the tax imposed by section 102 will not apply even though a foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, derives income from sources within the United States, if all of its shareholders are nonresident alien individuals who, by the application of section 211 (a) would not be subject to surtax with respect to distributions of the corporation if made.

(c) For the computation of the surtax, see § 39.102-4.

§ 39.102-2 Purpose to avoid surtax; evidence; burden of proof; definition of holding or investment company. (a) The Commissioner's determination that a corporation was formed or availed of for the purpose of avoiding the individual surtax is subject to disproof by competent evidence. The existence or nonexistence of the purpose may be indicated by circumstances other than the evidence specified in the Internal Revenue Code, and whether or not such purpose was present depends upon the particular circumstances of each case. In other words, a corporation is subject to taxation under section 102 if it is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of surtax upon shareholders through the medium of permitting earnings or profits to accumulate, even though the corporation is not a mere holding or investment company and does not have an unreasonable accumulation of earnings or profits; and on the other hand, the fact that a corporation is such a company or has such an accumulation is not absolutely conclusive against it if, by clear and convincing evidence, the taxpayer satisfies the Commissioner that the corporation was neither formed nor availed of for the purpose of avoiding the individual surtax. All the other circumstances which might be construed as evidence of the purpose to avoid surtax cannot be outlined, but among other things the following will be considered: (1) Dealings between the corporation and its shareholders, such as withdrawals by the shareholders as personal loans or the expenditure of funds by the corporation for the personal benefit of the shareholders, and (2) the investment by the corporation of undistributed earnings in assets having no reasonable connection with the business. The mere fact that the corporation distributed a large portion of its earnings for the year in question does not necessarily prove that earnings were not permitted to accumulate beyond reasonable needs or that the corporation was not formed or availed of to avoid surtax upon shareholders.

(b) If the Commissioner determines that the corporation was formed or availed of for the purpose of avoiding the individual surtax through the medium of permitting earnings or profits to accumulate, and the taxpayer contests such determination of fact by litigation, the burden of proving the determination wrong by a preponderance of evidence, together with the corresponding burden of first going forward with evidence, is on the taxpayer under principles applicable to income tax cases generally, and this is so even though the corporation is not a mere holding or investment company and does not have an unreasonable accumulation of earnings or profits. However, if the corporation is a mere holding or investment company, then the Internal Revenue Code gives further weight to the presumption of correctness already arising from the Commissioner's determination by expressly providing an additional presumption of the existence of a purpose to avoid surtax upon shareholders, while if earnings or profits are permitted to accumulate beyond the reasonable needs of the business, then the Code adds still more weight to the Commissioner's determination by providing that irrespective of whether or not the corporation is a mere holding or investment company, the existence of such an accumulation is determinative of the purpose to avoid surtax upon shareholders unless the taxpayer proves the contrary by such a clear preponderance of all the evidence that the absence of such a purpose is unmistakable.

(c) A corporation having practically no activities except holding property, and collecting the income therefrom or investing therein, shall be considered a holding company within the meaning of section 102. If the activities further include, or consist substantially of, buying and selling stocks, securities, real estate, or other investment property (whether upon an outright or a marginal basis) so that the income is derived not only from the investment yield but also from profits upon market fluctuations, the corporation shall be considered an investment company within the meaning of section 102.

§ 39.102-3 Unreasonable accumulation of profits. (a) An accumulation of earnings or profits (including the undistributed earnings or profits of prior years) is unreasonable if it is not required for the purposes of the business, considering all the circumstances of the case. It is not intended, however, to prevent accumulations of surplus for the reasonable needs of the business if the purpose is not to prevent the imposition of the surtax. No attempt is here made to enumerate all the ways in which earnings or profits of a corporation may be accumulated for the reasonable needs of the business. Undistributed income is properly accumulated if retained for working capital needed by the business; or if invested in additions to plant reasonably required by the business; or if in accordance with contract obligations placed to the credit of a sinking fund for the purpose of retiring bonds issued by the corporation. The nature of the investment of earnings or profits is immaterial if they are not in fact needed in the business. Among other things, the nature of the business, the financial condition of the corporation at the close of the taxable year, and the use of the undistributed earnings or profits will be considered in determining the reasonableness of the accumulations.

(b) The business of a corporation is not merely that which it has previously carried on, but includes in general any line of business which it may undertake. However, a radical change of business when a considerable surplus has been accumulated may afford evidence of a purpose to avoid the surtax. If one corporation owns the stock of another corporation in the same or a related line of business and in effect operates the other corporation, the business of the latter may be considered in substance although not in legal form the business of the first corporation. Earnings or profits of the first corporation put into the second through the purchase of stock or otherwise may, therefore, if a subsidiary relationship is established, constitute employment of the income in its own business. Investment by a corporation of its income in stock and securities of another corporation is not of itself to be regarded as employment of the income in its business. The business of one corporation may not be regarded as including the business of another unless the other corporation is a mere instrumentality of the first; to establish this it is ordinarily essential that the first corporation own all or substantially all of the stock of the second.

(c) The Commissioner, or any district director of internal revenue upon direction from the Commissioner, may require any corporation to furnish a statement of its accumulated earnings and profits, the name and address of, and number of shares held by each of its shareholders, and the amounts that would be payable to each, if the income of the corporation were distributed. See section 148 (c)

§ 39.102-4 Computation of undistributed section 102 net income. (a) In ascertaining the tax basis for corporations subject to the provisions of section 102, the "section 102 net income" is first computed. This is accomplished in the case of a domestic corporation by subtracting from the corporate net income (as defined in sections 21 and 204) computed without the benefit of the capital loss carry-over provided in section 117 (e) and without the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) the sum of (1) Federal income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes paid or accrued during the taxable year, to the extent not allowed as a deduction by section 23 (c) but not including the graduated income tax or surtax imposed by section 102 or corresponding sections of prior Revenue Acts; (2) contributions or gifts payment of which is made within the taxable year (or considered for the purposes of section 23 (q) as made within such year) not otherwise allowed as a deduction, to or for the use of donees described in section 23 (o) and § 39.23 (o)-1 for the purposes therein specified; (3) losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets which are disallowed as a deduction by section 117 (d) for the taxable year; (4) the amount remaining after deducting from the excess of the net long-term capital gain for the taxable year over the net short-term capital loss for such year (computed without regard to any capital loss carry-over) the taxes attributable to such excess. For purposes of this subparagraph, the taxes attributable to such excess shall be the amount remaining after deducting from the taxes imposed by chapter 1 for such year (determined without regard to the taxes imposed by section 102) the taxes similarly imposed and determined for such year without including the excess of net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss for such year in net income. For example, if the taxpayer pays the alternative tax as computed under section 117 (c) the tax attributable to the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss shall be the amount computed under section 117 (c) (1) (B) In the case of a foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, which files or causes to be filed a return, the "section 102 net income" means the net income from sources within the United States (gross income from sources within the United States, as defined in section 119 and the regulations thereunder, less statutory deductions) minus the amount of the deductions enumerated in subparagraphs (1) (2) (3), and (4) of this paragraph. In the case of a foreign corporation, whether resident or nonresident, which files no return, the "section 102 net income" means the gross income from sources within the United States, as defined in section 119 and the regulations thereunder, without the benefit of the deductions enumerated in subparagraphs (1) (2) (3) and (4) of this paragraph, or any other deductions. See section 233. In the case of a taxable year of less than 12 months on account of a change in the accounting period of the corporation, the corporate net income is computed on the basis of the period included in the taxable year, and is not placed on an annual basis under the provisions of section 47 (c)

(b) The "section 102 net income" includes interest upon obligations of the United States and obligations of a corporation organized under act of Congress, if such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States, except as provided in section 22 (b) (4) The "section 102 net income" does not include interest on obligations of States or Territories of the United States or any political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia or of the possessions of the United States.

(c) In determining "section 102 net income," section 117 (k) (2) in the case of coal, shall have no application. See § 39.117 (k)-1 (c).

(d) The "undistributed section 102 net income" is computed by subtracting from the "section 102 net income" the amount of the basic surtax credit provided in section 27 (b). In computing the basic surtax credit for the purpose of section 102, the credit under section 27 (b) (1) is not to be reduced by the amount of the credit provided in section 26 (a), relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government corporations.

§ 39.103-104 Statutory provisions; tax on citizens and corporations of certain foreign countries; banks and trust companies.

SEC. 103. Rates of tax on citizens and corporations of certain foreign countries. Whenever the President finds that, under the laws of any foreign country, citizens or corporations of the United States are being subjected to discriminatory or extraterritorial taxes, the President shall so proclaim and the rates of tax imposed by sections 11, 12, 13, 14, 201 (a), 204 (a), 207, 211 (a), 231 (a), 362, and 400 shall, for the taxable year during which such proclamation is made and for each taxable year thereafter, be doubled in the case of each citizen and corporation of such foreign country; but the tax at such doubled rate shall be considered as imposed by sections 11, 12, 13, 14, 201 (a), 204 (a), 207, 211 (a), 231 (a), 362, and 400, as the case may be. In no case shall this section operate to increase the taxes imposed by such sections (computed without regard to this section) to an amount in excess of 80 per centum of the net income of the taxpayer. Whenever the President finds that the laws of any foreign country with respect to which the President has made a proclamation under the preceding provisions of this section have been modified so that discriminatory and extraterritorial taxes applicable to citizens and corporations of the United States have been removed, he shall so proclaim, and the provisions of this section providing for doubled rates of tax shall not apply to any citizen or corporation of such foreign country with respect to any taxable year beginning after such proclamation is made.

[Sec. 103 as amended by secs. 163 (b) (1), 172 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 6 (b) (3), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

SEC. 104. Banks and trust companies—(a) Definition. As used in this section the term "bank" means a bank or trust company incorporated and doing business under the laws of the United States (including laws relating to the District of Columbia), of any State, or of any Territory, a substantial part of the business of which consists of receiving deposits and making loans and discounts, or of exercising fiduciary powers similar to those permitted to national banks under section 11 (k) of the Federal Reserve Act, 38 Stat. 262 (U. S. C., Title 12, section 248k), as amended, and which is subject by law to supervision and examination by State, Territorial or Federal authority having supervision over banking institutions. Such term also means a domestic building and loan association.

(b) Rate of tax. Banks shall be subject to tax under section 13 or section 14 (b), and under section 15.

§ 39.104-1 Tax on banks. A bank, as defined in section 104 (a) is, under section 104 (b) subject to the normal tax on corporations imposed by section 13 (see § 39.13-1) and the surtax on corporations imposed by section 15 (see § 39.15-1)

§ 39.104-2 Mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks. (a) Mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks not having capital stock represented by shares are subject to both normal tax and surtax as in the case of other corporations. Such institutions are, however, not subject to excess profits tax. For special rules governing the taxation of a mutual savings bank conducting a life insurance business, see section 110 and the regulations prescribed thereunder.

(b) While the general principles for determining the net income of a corporation are applicable to a mutual savings bank, a building and loan association, or a cooperative bank not having capital stock represented by shares, there are certain exceptions and special rules governing the computation in the case of such institutions. See § 39.23 (k)-5 for special rules concerning additions to reserves for bad debts. See also § 39.23

(r)–1, relating to dividends paid by banking corporations, for special rules concerning deductions for amounts paid to, or credited to the accounts of, depositors or holders of withdrawable accounts as dividends. Furthermore, in determining the normal tax net income of such an institution, the credit for dividends received provided in section 26 (b) shall not be applicable to dividends which were deductible in computing the net income of the distributing corporation under section 23 (r)

(c) The taxable year (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) of a mutual savings bank, a building and loan association, or a cooperative bank not having capital stock represented by shares shall be determined without regard to the fact that the taxpayer may have been exempt from tax during any prior period. See sections 41 and 48 and the regulations thereunder. Similarly, in computing net income, the determination of the taxable year for which an item of income or expense is taken into account shall be made under the provisions of sections 41, 42, and 43, and the regulations thereunder, whether or not the item arose during a taxable year beginning before, on, or after December 31, 1951. For the purpose of determining, under section 41, the method of accounting of the mutual savings bank, the building and loan association, or the cooperative bank, a method of accounting recognized under section 41 and under the regulations prescribed thereunder and utilized in the return of such institution filed for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, shall be deemed to constitute the method of accounting regularly employed by the institution. The method selected shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner upon the examination of the return. Any change in the method so selected and so approved may be made only if permission is obtained from the Commissioner under § 39.41–2 to change to another recognized method. For the purpose of computing, under section 122, the net operating loss deduction provided in section 23 (s) the terms "preceding taxable year" and "preceding taxable years" as used in section 122, shall not include any taxable year for which the institution was exempt from tax. Thus, if the institution was exempt from tax for the immediately preceding taxable year, the net operating loss is not a carry-back to any preceding taxable year, and the net operating loss carry-over to succeeding taxable years is not reduced by the net income for any preceding taxable year. No net operating loss carry-back or carry-over shall be allowed from a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1952.

SEC. 105. Sale of oil or gas properties. In the case of a bona fide sale of any oil or gas property, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration or discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the tax imposed by section 12 attributable to such sale shall not exceed 30 per centum of the selling price of such property or interest.

§ 39.105–1 Surtax on sale of oil or gas properties. (a) If the taxpayer, by prospecting and locating claims or by exploring or discovering undeveloped claims, has demonstrated the principal value of oil or gas property, which prior to his efforts had a relatively minor value, the portion of the surtax imposed by section 12 attributable to a sale of such property or of the taxpayer's interest therein shall not exceed 30 percent of the selling price. Shares of stock in a corporation owning oil or gas property do not constitute an interest in such property. To determine the application of section 105 to a particular case, the taxpayer should first compute the surtax imposed by section 12 upon his entire surtax net income, including the net income from any sale of such property or interest therein, without regard to section 105. The proportion of the surtax, so computed, indicated by the ratio which the taxpayer's net income from the sale of the property or interest therein, computed as prescribed in this section, bears to his total net income is the portion of the surtax attributable to such sale, and if it exceeds 30 percent of the selling price of such property or interest, such portion of the surtax shall be reduced to that amount.

(b) In determining the portion of the net income attributable to the sale of such oil or gas property or interest therein, the taxpayer shall allocate to the gross income derived from such sale, and to the gross income derived from all other sources, the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly appertaining thereto and shall apply any general expenses, losses, and deductions (which cannot properly be otherwise apportioned) ratably to the gross income from all sources. The gross income derived from the sale of such oil or gas property or interest therein, less the deductions properly appertaining thereto and less its proportion of any general deductions, shall be the net income attributable to such sale. The taxpayer shall submit with his return a statement fully explaining the manner in which such expenses, losses, and deductions are allocated or apportioned.

SEC. 106. Claims against United States involving acquisition of property. In the case of amounts (other than interest) received by a taxpayer from the United States with respect to a claim against the United States involving the acquisition of property and remaining unpaid for more than fifteen years, the portion of the tax imposed by section 12 attributable to such receipt shall not exceed 30 per centum of the amount (other than interest) so received.

§ 39.106–1 Surtax on certain amounts received from the United States. The method of computation provided for in § 39.105–1, relating to the limitation on surtax on the sale of oil or gas properties, shall be applicable in computing, under section 106, the surtax imposed by section 12 attributable to certain amounts received by the taxpayer from the United States under a claim involving acquisition of his property. The surtax limitation provided in section 106 is not applicable to any amount received from the United States which constitutes interest, whether such interest was included in the claim or in any judgment thereon or has accrued on such judgment.

§ 39.107 Statutory provisions; compensation for services rendered for a period of 36 months or more and back pay.

SEC. 107. Compensation for services rendered for a period of thirty-six months or more and back pay—(a) Personal services. If at least 80 per centum of the total compensation for personal services covering a period of thirty-six calendar months or more (from the beginning to the completion of such services) is received or accrued in one taxable year by an individual or a partnership, the tax attributable to any part thereof which is included in the gross income of any individual shall not be greater than the aggregate of the taxes attributable to such part had it been included in the gross income of such individual ratably over that part of the period which precedes the date of such receipt or accrual.

(b) Patent, copyright, etc. For the purposes of this subsection, the term "artistic work or invention" in the case of an individual, means a literary, musical, or artistic composition of such individual or a patent or copyright covering an invention of or a literary, musical, or artistic composition of such individual, the work on which by such individual covered a period of thirty-six calendar months or more from the beginning to the completion of such composition or invention. If, in the taxable year, the gross income of any individual from a particular artistic work or invention by him is not less than 80 per centum of the gross income in respect of such artistic work or invention in the taxable year plus the gross income therefrom in previous taxable years and the twelve months immediately succeeding the close of the taxable year, the tax attributable to the part of such gross income of the taxable year which is not taxable as a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months shall not be greater than the aggregate of the taxes attributable to such part had it been received ratably over that part of the period preceding the close of the taxable year but not more than thirty-six calendar months.

(c) Fractional parts of a month. For the purposes of this section a fractional part of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month in which case it shall be considered as a month.

(d) Back pay—(1) In general. If the amount of the back pay received or accrued by an individual during the taxable year exceeds 15 per centum of the gross income of the individual for such year, the part of the tax attributable to the inclusion of such back pay in gross income for the taxable year shall not be greater than the aggregate of the increases in the taxes which would have resulted from the inclusion of the respective portions of such back pay in gross income for the taxable years to which such portions are respectively attributable, as determined under the regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(2) Definition of back pay. For the purposes of this subsection, "back pay" means (A) remuneration, including wages, salaries, retirement pay, and other similar compensation, which is received or accrued during the taxable year by an employee for services performed prior to the taxable year for his employer and which would have been paid prior to the taxable year except for the intervention of one of the following events: (i) bankruptcy or receivership of the employer; (ii) dispute as to the liability of the employer to pay such remuneration, which is determined after the commencement of court proceedings; (iii) if the employer is the United States, a State, a Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing, lack of funds appropriated to pay such remuneration; or (iv) any other event determined to be similar in nature under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary; and (B) wages or salaries which are received or accrued during the taxable year by an employee for services performed prior to the taxable year for his employer and which constitute retroactive wage or salary increases ordered, recommended, or approved by any Federal or State agency, and made retroactive to any period prior to the taxable year; and (C) payments which are received or accrued during the taxable year as the result of an alleged violation by an employer of any State or Federal law relating to labor standards or practices; and which are determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary to be attributable to a prior taxable year. Amounts not includible in gross income under this chapter shall not constitute "back pay."

(e) Tax on self-employment income. This section shall be applied without regard to and shall not affect, the tax imposed by subchapter E, relating to tax on self-employment income.

[Sec. 107 as added by sec. 220 (a), Rev. Act 1939; amended by sec. 139 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 119, Rev. Act 1943; sec. 208 (d) (5), Social Security Act Amendments 1950]

§ 39.107–1 Personal services. (a) Section 107 (a) provides that if at least 80 percent of the total compensation for personal services covering a period of 36 calendar months or more (from the beginning to the completion of such services) is received or accrued in one taxable year by an individual or a partnership, then the tax attributable to any part of such amount which is included in the gross income of any individual shall not be greater than the aggregate of the taxes attributable to such part had such part been included in the gross income of such individual ratably over that part of the period of service which precedes the date of such receipt or accrual. Thus, for example, if an individual who makes his returns on a calendar year basis and on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements commences personal services on February 17, 1949, and completes them on July 1, 1952, and is paid $8,000 for such services on the completion date, he is entitled to the benefits of section 107 (a) provided the $8,000 is at least 80 percent of the total compensation paid or to be paid to such individual for such services; and the tax attributable to the $8,000 received in 1952 and included in the individual's gross income for such year shall not be greater than the tax attributable to such amount, had it been received ratably over the calendar months included in the period from February 17, 1949, to July 1, 1952. However, if such individual receives an additional $5,000 in 1953 for such services, he is not entitled to the benefits of section 107 (a) with respect to either the $8,000 or the $5,000, for the reason that he does not receive in one taxable year at least 80 percent of the total compensation for such services. Also, for example, if an individual who makes his returns on the calendar year basis and on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements commences personal services on March 3, 1950, and completes them on August 22, 1953, and is paid a total compensation of $10,000 for such services on July 5, 1952, he is entitled to the benefits of section 107 (a) and the tax attributable to the $10,000 received in 1952 and included in such individual's gross income for such year shall not be greater than the tax attributable to such amount, had it been received ratably over the calendar months included in the period from March 3, 1950, to July 5, 1952, the date on which the $10,000 was received. However, if such individual receives an additional $7,000 for such services on May 1, 1953, he is not entitled to the benefits of section 107 (a) for the reason that he does not receive in one taxable year at least 80 percent of the total compensation for such services.

(b) It is immaterial when the personal services are rendered provided at least 36 calendar months elapse from the beginning to the completion of the services. For the purposes of this section, a fractional part of a month is to be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it is to be considered as a month.

(c) It is not necessary, in order for section 107 (a) to be applicable, that the individual who includes in his gross income compensation for such personal services be the person who renders the services. For example, a partner who shares in the compensation for such personal services rendered by the partnership may be entitled to the benefits of section 107 (a) notwithstanding that he took no part in the rendering of such services.

(d) The first step in determining whether the limitation in section 107 (a) relative to the amount of tax is applicable is the computation of the amount of tax in the current taxable year attributable to that part of the compensation which is included in the gross income of the taxpayer for such year. The tax attributable to such compensation is the difference between the tax for such taxable year computed with the inclusion of such compensation in gross income and the tax for such taxable year computed without including such compensation in gross income.

(e) The next step is to compute the tax attributable to such compensation in each of the taxable years (including the current taxable year) within which falls one or more calendar months included in the part of the period of service which precedes the date such compensation is received or accrued, as if the compensation had been received or accrued in equal portions in each of such calendar months. For what constitutes a taxable year, see section 48 (a) The amount of the tax attributable to such compensation in each such taxable year is the difference between the tax for such year computed with the inclusion of an allocable portion of such compensation in gross income and the tax for such year computed without including any part of such compensation in gross income. The portion of the compensation allocable to each such taxable year is an amount equal to the entire amount of such compensation received or accrued in the current taxable year, divided by the entire number of calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date such compensation is received or accrued, and multiplied by the number of such calendar months falling within the particular taxable year.

(f) The tax for the current taxable year shall be the tax for such year computed without including the compensation for personal services in gross income, plus (1) the amount of tax for such taxable year attributable to such compensation (computed in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section) or (2) the sum of the taxes attributable to such compensation had it been received in equal portions in each of the calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date such compensation is received or accrued (computed in accordance with paragraph (e) of this section), whichever is the smaller.

(g) The method of allocating compensation for personal services to the taxable years in which falls any of the calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date such compensation is received may be illustrated by the following examples, in each of which the taxpayer makes his return on the cash receipts and disbursements basis:

Example (1). On November 1, 1952, A, an individual, who makes his income tax returns on a calendar year basis, receives $40,000, the entire compensation for the performance of personal services covering a 40-month period beginning on June 1, 1949, and ending on September 30, 1952. For the purpose of determining whether the aggregate of the taxes attributable to the $40,000 compensation, had it been received in equal portions in each of the calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date the compensation is received (in this case the entire period of service), is less than the tax attributable to such compensation in the taxable year 1952, $1,000 ($40,000 divided by 40) must be allocated to each of the calendar months included within the period of service. Thus, $7,000 is allocated to 1949, $12,000 to 1950, $12,000 to 1951, and $9,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that A makes his income tax returns on the basis of the fiscal year July 1 to June 30. The $40,000 is allocated as follows: $1,000 to the taxable year ended June 30, 1949, $12,000 each to the taxable years ended June 30, 1950, June 30, 1951, and June 30, 1952, and $3,000 to the taxable year ending June 30, 1953 (the current taxable year).

Example (3). Assumes the same facts as in example (1) except that A receives the $40,000 on February 1, 1952 (before completion of the services), instead of November 1, 1952. There are 32 calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date the compensation is received. Accordingly, $1,250 ($40,000 divided by 32) must be allocated to each of the calendar months included within the period from June 1, 1949, to February 1, 1952. Thus, $8,750 is allocated to 1949, $15,000 to 1950, $15,000 to 1951, and $1,250 to 1952 (the current taxable year).

Example (4). B, an individual, who makes his income tax returns on a calendar year basis, renders personal services covering a 40-month period beginning on May 1, 1949, and ending on August 31, 1952. The total compensation for such services is $74,000, of which $34,000 is paid to B on March 1, 1952, and $40,000 on August 31, 1952. Using the method of allocation illustrated in example (1), the $40,000 payment must be allocated to the 40 calendar months included within the entire period of service. Accordingly, with respect to the $40,000 payment, $8,000 is allocated to 1949, $12,000 to 1950, $12,000 to 1951, and $8,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year). Using the method of allocation illustrated in example (3), the $34,000 payment must be allocated to the 34 calendar months included within the part of the period of service which precedes the date such payment is received (March 1, 1952). Accordingly, with respect to the $34,000 payment, $8,000 is allocated to 1949, $12,000 to 1950, $12,000 to 1951, and $2,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year). The entire compensation of $74,000 will, therefore, be allocated as follows: $16,000 to 1949, $24,000 to 1950, $24,000 to 1951, and $10,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year).

(h) If an individual, in computing his income tax for a particular taxable year, avails himself of the benefits of section 107 with respect to compensation received or accrued in such year for personal services, and in a subsequent taxable year receives or accrues compensation for other personal services, all or a part of the period of which services is the same as the period of the services for which he was compensated in the previous taxable year, then he must, in availing himself of the benefits of section 107 for such subsequent taxable year, take into consideration the fact that he has previously allocated compensation to all or a part of the period of service. For example, an individual commences the performance of personal services for A on January 1, 1947, and completes them on December 31, 1951. On December 31, 1951, he receives $60,000 in full compensation therefor. In his return for the calendar year 1951, he allocates $1,000 to each of the 60 calendar months included within the period of service and determines his income tax under the provisions of section 107 (a) He also commences the performance of personal services for B on January 1, 1949, and completes them on December 31, 1952. On December 31, 1952, he receives $48,000 in full compensation therefor. If he wishes to avail himself of the benefits of section 107 (a) in his return for the calendar year 1952, he must, in allocating $1,000 to each of the 48 calendar months included within the period of service and computing the tax attributable thereto, include in his income for the years 1949, 1950, and 1951, for the purposes of the tentative computation, the amount of $12,000 previously allocated to each of such years in his return for the calendar year 1951.

(i) The provisions of section 107 and of this section shall be applied without regard to, and shall not affect, the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480.

§ 39.107-2 Artistic work or invention. (a) Section 107 (b) provides that if, in the taxable year, the gross income of an individual from an artistic work or invention of such individual covering a period of 36 calendar months or more (from the beginning to the completion thereof) is not less than 80 percent of the sum of the gross income therefrom in the taxable year, and the gross income therefrom in previous taxable years and in the 12 months following the close of the taxable year, then the tax attributable to such gross income in the taxable year shall not be greater than the aggregate of the taxes attributable thereto had it been received ratably over (1) the part of the period of the work which precedes the close of the taxable year, or (2) a period of 36 calendar months, whichever of such periods is the shorter. That part of the gross income from such artistic work or invention which is taxable as a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than six months is excluded from the benefits of section 107 (b) For the purpose of determining the tax which would be attributable to gain on the sale or exchange of an artistic work had such gain been received ratably in any prior taxable year, such gain shall be treated as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is not a capital asset.

(b) For the purposes of this section, the term "artistic work or invention" means a literary, musical, or artistic composition, or a patent or copyright covering an invention or a literary, musical, or artistic composition. Also, for the purposes of this section, a fractional part of a month is to be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it is to be considered as a month.

(c) The first step in determining whether the limitation in section 107 (b) relative to the amount of tax is applicable is the computation of the amount of tax in the current taxable year attributable to the gross income received or accrued in such year from the artistic work or invention. The tax attributable to such income is the difference between the tax for such taxable year computed with the inclusion in gross income of the gross income from the artistic work or invention and the tax for such taxable year computed without including in gross income the gross income from the artistic work or invention.

(d) The next step is to compute the tax attributable to the gross income from the artistic work or invention in each of the taxable years (including the current taxable year) within which falls one or more of the calendar months included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of the current taxable year (not, however, exceeding 36 calendar months) as if the gross income from the artistic work or invention had been received or accrued in equal portions in each of such calendar months. For what constitutes a taxable year, see section 48 (a) The amount of tax attributable to gross income in each such taxable year from the artistic work or invention is the difference between the tax for such year computed with the inclusion in gross income of an allocable portion of the gross income from the artistic work or invention and the tax for such year computed without including in gross income any part of the gross income from the artistic work or invention. The portion of the gross income from the artistic work or invention allocable to each such taxable year is an amount equal to the entire amount of the gross income from the artistic work or invention received or accrued in the current taxable year, divided by the entire number (not to exceed 36) of calendar months included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of the current taxable year, and multiplied by the number of such calendar months falling within the particular taxable year.

(e) The tax for the current taxable year shall be the tax for such year, computed without including in gross income the gross income from the artistic work or invention, plus whichever of the following is the smaller: (1) The amount of tax for such taxable year attributable to the gross income from the artistic work or invention (computed in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section) or (2) the sum of the taxes attributable to the gross income from the artistic work or invention had it been received in equal portions in each of the calendar months (not exceeding 36 calendar months) included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of the current taxable year (computed in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section)

(f) The method of allocating the gross income from the artistic work or invention to the taxable years in which falls any of the calendar months (not exceeding 36 calendar months) included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of the current taxable year may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On October 1, 1952, A, an individual, who makes his returns on a calendar year basis and on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements, receives $36,000 in full payment for a musical composition, the work on which was commenced by A on July 10, 1948, and completed on January 29, 1953. Although the period of work covers 55 calendar months, allocations may be made to only the last 36 calendar months included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of 1952 (the current taxable year). Therefore, $1,000 ($36,000 divided by 36) must be allocated to each of the 36 calendar months preceding January 1, 1953. Accordingly, $12,000 is allocated to 1950, $12,000 to 1951, and $12,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) except that the period of work was commenced by A on July 1, 1951, and completed on September 1, 1954. Although the period of work covers 38 calendar months, allocations may be made to only the 18 calendar months which are included within the part of the period of work which precedes the close of 1952 (the current taxable year). Therefore, $2,000 ($36,000 divided by 18) must be allocated to each of 18 calendar months preceding January 1, 1953. Accordingly, $12,000 is allocated to 1951, and $24,000 to 1952 (the current taxable year).

(g) The principles set forth in paragraph (h) of § 39.107-1, relating to the manner of allocating compensation for personal services to a particular calendar month where an allocation for other such services has previously been made to such month, are also applicable with respect to allocations under section 107 (b) and this section.

(h) The provisions of section 107 and of this section shall be applied without regard to, and shall not affect, the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480.

§ 39.107-3 Back pay attributable to prior taxable years. (a) Section 107 (d) (2) defines "back pay" and section 107 (d) (1) limits the amount of tax resulting from the inclusion of such back pay in gross income for the year in which it is received or accrued. Back pay includes compensation, wages, salaries, pensions, and retirement pay received or accrued during the taxable year by an employee for services performed prior to the taxable year for his employer and which would have been paid prior to the taxable year but for the intervention of any one of the following events: (1) bankruptcy or receivership of the employer; (2) dispute as to the liability of the employer to pay such remuneration, which is determined after the commencement of court proceedings; (3) if the employer is the United States, a State, a Territory or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing, lack of funds appropriated to pay such remuneration; or (4) any other event determined to be similar in nature under this section. As to what constitutes bankruptcy and receivership proceedings, see § 39.274-1.

(b) An event will be considered similar in nature to those events specified in section 107 (d) (2) (A) (i) (ii) and (iii) only if the circumstances are unusual, if they are of the type specified therein, if they operate to defer payment of the remuneration for the services performed, and if payment, except for such circumstances, would have been made prior to the taxable year in which received or accrued. For the purposes of this section, the term "back pay" does not include remuneration which is deemed to be constructively received in the taxable year or years in which the services were performed, remuneration paid in the current year in accordance with the usual practice or custom of the employer even though received in respect of services performed in a prior year or years, additional compensation for past services where there was no prior agreement or legal obligation to pay such additional compensation, or any amount which is not includible in gross income under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. The term "back pay" also embraces retroactive wage or salary increases received or accrued in respect of services performed by an employee for his employer in a prior taxable year which have been ordered, recommended, or approved by any Federal or State agency such as, but not limited to, the Wage Stabilization Board, the Salary Stabilization Board, and boards authorized by the Railway Labor Act (45 U. S. C. 151-188) comparable State organizations, and United States and State courts; payments made as a result of alleged violations of sections 6 and 7 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U. S. C. 206, 207) and made retroactive to any period prior to the taxable year; and payments which are received or accrued during the taxable year arising out of an alleged violation by an employer of any State or Federal law relating to labor standards or practices, such as payments received to effectuate the policies of the National Labor Relations Act (29 U. S. C. 151-166)

(c) An individual must compute his net income for any taxable year to which back pay is attributable, even though he was not required to make a return for such year. Thus, all amounts properly includible as gross income for any taxable year to which back pay is attributable must be included in the computation.

(d) For the purpose of determining under section 107 (d) the particular taxable year or years to which the back pay is attributable and, if such back pay is attributable to more than one taxable year, the amount thereof which is attributable to each of such taxable years, the following rules will be applicable:

(1) Back pay, as defined under section 107 (d) (2) (A), shall be deemed to be attributable to a particular taxable year in the amount and to the extent that it would have been paid in such year except for the intervention of one of the events described in section 107 (d) (2) (A)

(2) Back pay, as defined under section 107 (d) (2) (B) shall be deemed to be attributable to a particular taxable year in the amount and to the extent that it would have been paid in such year had the wage or salary increase as described in section 107 (d) (2) (B) been actually put into effect on the date to which it was first made retroactive.

(3) Back pay, as defined under section 107 (d) (2) (C) shall be deemed to be attributable to a particular taxable year in the amount and to the extent that it represents payments in respect of the alleged violation described in section 107 (d) (2) (C) which occurred in such year or which continued during any part of such year.

(4) In those cases where a computation has been made by, or under the direction of, a Federal or State agency (including any Federal or State court) under which the back pay was awarded, which indicates that particular portions of such back pay are attributable to certain definite periods of time, such computation shall be accepted as the appropriate apportionment for the purposes of this section.

(5) Where no computation has been made as provided in subparagraph (4) of this paragraph, and where the apportionment cannot be accurately made upon consideration of all the attendant circumstances in accordance with the applicable rule prescribed in subparagraph (1) (2), or (3) of this paragraph, then in proper cases the back pay shall be apportioned to each of the taxable years within which fall one or more calendar months included within the entire period for which such back pay has been paid, as if such back pay had been received or accrued in equal portions in each of such calendar months. For the purposes of this section, a fractional part of a month is to be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it is to be considered as a month.

(e) In determining whether section 107 (d) is applicable, the percentage which the back pay is of the gross income of the taxpayer for the current taxable year must be ascertained. It must exceed 15 percent of such gross income.

(f) The amount of the tax attributable to back pay is the difference between the tax for the taxable year computed with the inclusion of such back pay in gross income and the tax for such taxable year computed without including such back pay in such gross income. The amount of the tax attributable to back pay in each taxable year is the difference between the tax for such taxable year computed with the inclusion in gross income of the portion of such back pay attributable to such taxable year and the tax for such taxable year computed without including any part of such back pay in gross income. The tax for the current taxable year is the smaller of (1) the tax computed with the inclusion in gross income of the entire back pay received or accrued in the taxable year, or (2) the tax computed without including any such back pay in gross income for the current taxable year, plus the aggregate of the increase in the taxes which would have resulted from the inclusion of the respective portions of such back pay in gross income for each taxable year to which each such portion is respectively attributable.

(g) This section may be illustrated by the following example in which the taxpayer makes his returns on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, and in which it is assumed that he is entitled to use and uses for the taxable years 1952, 1949, and 1948, the alternative tax provided in Supplement T:

Example. In 1952, a single individual with no dependents who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis receives $4,200, which amount constitutes his adjusted gross income. Of this amount, $1,000 constitutes back pay. His tax for the calendar year 1952 on $4,200 would be $740. On $3,200 ($4,200 minus $1,000) the tax would be $518. That part of the tax for 1952 attributable to back pay is therefore $222 ($740 minus $518). Of the back pay, $600 is attributable to the year 1949. During such year he had received $1,700. For such year the amount of tax on $1,700 is $156. The amount of tax which he would have paid for such year had he included in gross income the portion of back pay attributable to such year would be $246. The increase in the tax for such year would be $90 ($246 minus $156). The remainder of the back pay, $400, is attributable to the calendar year 1948. During such year he had received $1,200. For such year the amount of tax is $82 and the amount of tax which he would have paid for such year had he included in gross income the portion of back pay attributable to such year would be $141. The increase in the tax for such year would be $59 ($141 minus $82). The aggregate of the increases of taxes for the calendar years 1949 and 1948 would be $149. The tax for the calendar year 1952 is the smaller of $518 plus (1) $222 or (2) $149. Since $149 is smaller than $222, the tax for the calendar year 1952 is $667 ($518 plus $149).

(h) The provisions of section 107 and of this section shall be applied without regard to, and shall not affect, the tax on self-employment income imposed by section 480.

SEC. 108. Fiscal year taxpayers. (a) to (h), inclusive. * * * [applicable only to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1952].

(i) Definition of calendar month. For the purposes of this section, a calendar month only part of which falls within a taxable year (1) shall be disregarded if less than 15 days of such month are included in such taxable year, and (2) shall be included as a calendar month within the taxable year if more than 14 days of such month fall within the taxable year.

(j) Taxable years of individuals beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954. In the case of a taxable year of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, beginning before January 1, 1954, and ending after December 31, 1953, the tax imposed by sections 11 and 12, section 400, or section 421 (a) (2), shall be an amount equal to the sum of—

(1) That portion of a tentative tax, computed under the provisions of sections 11 and 12, section 400, or section 421 (a) (2), applicable to years beginning on January 1, 1953, which the number of calendar months in such taxable year prior to January 1, 1954, bears to the total number of calendar months in such taxable year, plus

(2) That portion of a tentative tax, computed under the provisions of sections 11 and 12, section 400, or section 421 (a) (2), applicable to years beginning on January 1, 1954, as if such provisions were applicable to such taxable year, which the number of calendar months in such taxable year after December 31, 1953, bears to the total number of calendar months in such taxable year.

(k) Taxable years of corporations beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954. In the case of a taxable year of a corporation beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, the tax imposed by sections 13 and 15, or section 421 (a) (1), shall be an amount equal to the sum of—

(1) That portion of a tentative tax, computed under the provisions of sections 13 and 15, or section 421 (a) (1), applicable to years beginning on January 1, 1953, which the number of days in such taxable year prior to April 1, 1954, bears to the total number of days in such taxable year, plus

(2) That portion of a tentative tax, computed under the provisions of sections 13 and 15, or section 421 (a) (1), applicable to years beginning on April 1, 1954, as if such provisions were applicable to such taxable year, which the number of days in such taxable year after March 31, 1954, bears to the total number of days in such taxable year.

(l) Special classes of taxpayers. This section shall not apply to an insurance company subject to Supplement G or an investment company subject to Supplement Q.

§ 39.108-1 Computation of tax of individuals for taxable years beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954—(a) General rule. For a taxable year beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, the normal tax, surtax, optional tax, and Supplement U normal tax and surtax, imposed by sections 11, 12, 400, and 421 (a) (2) upon taxpayers other than corporations, shall be computed under section 108 (j) The tax shall be an amount equal to the sum of:

(1) That portion of a tentative tax under section 108 (j) (1) computed under the provisions of sections 11 and 12, section 400, or section 421 (a) (2) applicable to taxable years beginning on January 1, 1953, which the number of calendar months before January 1, 1954, in the taxable year of the taxpayer bears to the total number of calendar months in such taxable year, and

(2) That portion of a tentative tax under section 108 (j) (2) computed under the provisions of sections 11 and 12, section 400, or section 421 (a) (2) applicable to taxable years beginning on January 1, 1954, which the number of calendar months after December 31, 1953, in the taxable year of the taxpayer bears to the total number of calendar months in such taxable year.

For the purpose of section 108 (j) and this section, a calendar month only part of which falls within the taxable year (1) shall be disregarded if less than 15 days of such month are included in such taxable year, and (2) shall be included as a calendar month within the taxable year if more than 14 days of such month fall within the taxable year.

(b) Estates, trusts, and nonresident alien individuals. The provisions of section 108 (j) apply to estates, trusts, and nonresident alien individuals subject to tax under sections 11 and 12 and to trusts described in section 421 (b) (2) which are subject to tax under section 421 (a) (2)

(c) Short taxable years. The provisions of section 108 (j) apply to a taxable year beginning in 1953 and ending in 1954, whether or not such taxable year is one of less than 12 months. In the case of a taxpayer who is subject to the provisions of section 108 (j) and who because of a change in accounting period has a taxable year of less than 12 months, the net income shall be placed on an annual basis under the provisions of section 47 (c) (1) for the purpose of both tentative tax computations under section 108 (j) or shall be computed under the exception in section 47 (c) (2) for the purpose of both such tentative tax computations. Regardless of the method adopted, the amounts of the tentative normal tax and surtax so computed upon the basis of 12 months' income shall be properly reduced under section 47 (c) in order to determine the tentative taxes under section 108 (j). However, in the case of a taxpayer who is subject to the provisions of section 108 (j) and who because of any reason other than a change in accounting period has a taxable year of less than 12 months, the net income shall not be placed on an annual basis under section 47 (c) (1) and shall not be computed under the exception in section 47 (c) (2)

(d) Alternative tax under section 117 (c) In any case in which a taxpayer subject to the provisions of section 108 (j) has an excess of net long-term capital gains over net short-term capital losses, the alternative tax under section 117 (c) shall be an amount equal to the sum of the proper portions of the tentative taxes determined under section 108 (j) by computing each such tentative tax pursuant to the alternative tax computation provided in section 117 (c), regardless of whether either tentative tax so computed on the alternative basis is larger or smaller than the tentative tax computed without regard to section 117 (c)

(e) Certain joint returns. If a joint return of a husband and wife is filed under the provisions of section 51 (b) (3), if the husband and wife have different taxable years solely because of the death of either spouse, and if the taxable year of the surviving spouse covered by such joint return is a period which begins in 1953 and ends in 1954, the number of calendar months to be taken into account for the purpose of computing the portions of the tentative tax under section 108 (j) (1) and (2) shall be the number of calendar months before January 1, 1954, in the taxable year of the surviving spouse, the number of calendar months after December 31, 1953, in the taxable year of the surviving spouse, and the total number of calendar months in the taxable year of the surviving spouse.

(f) Credits against tax. In the case of a taxpayer subject to the provisions of section 108 (j) any credit against the tax otherwise imposed by sections 11, 12, 400, and 421 (a) (2) such as the credit for taxes paid to a foreign country or possession of the United States under section 131, shall be deducted from, and any limitation in such credit shall be based upon, the tax computed under section 108 (j) However, in those instances in which an individual taxpayer computes a tentative tax under section 108 (j) by taking into account the optional standard deduction under section 23 (aa) the following credits shall not be allowed: All credits under section 131 with respect to taxes of foreign countries and possessions, and all credits with respect to taxes withheld at the source under section 143 (a) relating to interest on tax-free covenant bonds.

§ 39.108-2 Computation of tax of corporations for taxable years beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954—(a) General rule. For a taxable year beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954 (including the calendar year 1954), the normal tax, surtax, and Supplement U normal tax and surtax imposed by sections 13, 15, and 421 (a) (1) upon corporations shall be computed under section 108 (k) The tax shall be an amount equal to the sum of:

(1) That portion of a tentative tax under section 108 (k) (1) computed under the provisions of sections 13 (b) (2) and 15 (b) or section 421 (a) (1) applicable to taxable years beginning on January 1, 1953, which the number of days before April 1, 1954, in the taxable year of the taxpayer bears to the total number of days in such taxable year, and

(2) That portion of a tentative tax under section 108 (k) (2) computed under the provisions of sections 13 (b) (3) and 15 (b) or section 421 (a) (1) applicable to taxable years beginning on April 1, 1954, which the number of days after March 31, 1954, in the taxable year of the taxpayer bears to the total number of days in such taxable year.

The tentative normal taxes under section 108 (k) (1) and (2) of a corporation are computed at the rates of 30 percent and 25 percent, respectively, upon its normal-tax net income or upon its Supplement U net income, in the case of a corporation subject to tax under Supplement U. The tentative surtaxes under section 108 (k) (1) and (2) of a corporation are computed upon its corporation surtax net income or Supplement U net income, as the case may be, in excess of $25,000 at the rate of 22 percent. See, however, section 15 (c) and § 39.15-2 as to the circumstances under which the $25,000 exemption from surtax may be disallowed, in whole or in part, in the computation under section 108 (k) (1) of the tentative surtax under section 15 for a taxable year beginning before July 1, 1953.

(b) Computation of normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income in special cases—(1) In general. In computing the tentative taxes under section 108 (k) (1) and (2) the amount of the net income and the amount of the adjusted net income of the corporation are not recomputed and remain unchanged. However, the credits provided in section 26 (b) (h) and (i) may differ in computing the several tentative taxes. Thus, in the case of a Western Hemisphere trade corporation, or a public utility corporation which has paid dividends on its preferred stock with respect to which the credit for dividends paid provided in section 26 (h) is allowable, or any corporation which has received dividends on the preferred stock of a domestic public utility corporation with respect to which the credit provided in section 26 (h) is allowable to the distributing corporation, the amount of the normal-tax net income and the amount of the corporation surtax net income for the first tentative tax computation differ from such amounts for the second tentative tax computation. See subparagraphs (2) (3) and (4) of this paragraph.

(2) Western Hemisphere trade corporations. In the case of a Western Hemisphere trade corporation, its normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income are determined, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (1) with the allowance of the 27-percent credit provided in section 26 (i) applicable to a taxable year beginning on January 1, 1953, and, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (2) with the allowance of the 30-percent credit provided in section 26 (i) applicable to a taxable year beginning on April 1, 1954.

(3) Public utilities paying dividends on preferred stock. In the case of a public utility corporation which has paid dividends on its preferred stock with respect to which the credit for dividends paid provided in section 26 (h) is allowable, its normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income are determined, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (1) with the allowance of the 27-percent credit provided in section 26 (h) applicable to a taxable year beginning on January 1, 1953, and, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (2) with the allowance of the 30-percent credit provided in section 26 (h) applicable to a taxable year beginning on April 1, 1954.

(4) Corporations receiving dividends on preferred stock of public utility. In the case of any corporation which has received dividends on the preferred stock of a domestic public utility corporation with respect to which the credit provided in section 26 (h) is allowable to the distributing corporation, its normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income are determined, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (1) with the allowance of the 62-percent credit provided in section 26 (b) (2) with respect to such dividends received, and, for the purpose of the tentative tax computation under section 108 (k) (2) with the allowance of the 59-percent credit provided in section 26 (b) (2) with respect to such dividends received.

(c) Classes of corporations excluded from operation of section 108 (k). The provisions of section 108 (k) do not apply to an insurance company subject to Supplement G, a regulated investment company subject to Supplement Q, or a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States other than such a corporation subject to Supplement U.

(d) Short taxable years. The provisions of section 108 (k) apply to a taxable year beginning before April 1, 1954, and ending after March 31, 1954, whether or not such taxable year is one of less than 12 months. In the case of a taxpayer which is subject to the provisions of section 108 (k) and which because of a change in accounting period has a taxable year of less than 12 months, the net income shall be placed on an annual basis under the provisions of section 47 (c) (1) for the purpose of both tentative tax computations under section 108 (k) or shall be computed under the exception in section 47 (c) (2) for the purpose of both such tentative tax computations. Regardless of the method adopted, the amounts of the tentative normal tax and surtax so computed upon the basis of 12 months' income shall be properly reduced under section 47 (c) in order to determine the tentative taxes under section 108 (k) However, in the case of a taxpayer which is subject to the provisions of section 108 (k) and which because of any reason other than a change in accounting period has a taxable year of less than 12 months, the net income for the purpose of section 108 (k) shall not be placed on an annual basis under section 47 (c) (1) and shall not be computed under the exception in section 47 (c) (2)

(e) Alternative tax under section 117 (c) In any case in which a taxpayer subject to the provisions of section 108 (k) has an excess of net long-term capital gains over net short-term capital losses, the alternative tax under section 117 (c) shall be an amount equal to the sum of the proper portions of the tentative taxes determined under section 108 (k), by computing each such tentative tax pursuant to the alternative tax computation provided in section 117 (c) regardless of whether either tentative tax so computed on the alternative basis is larger or smaller than the tentative tax computed without regard to section 117 (c)

(f) Credits against tax. In the case of a taxpayer subject to the provisions of section 108 (k) any credit against the tax otherwise imposed by sections 13, 15, and 421 (a) (1) such as the credit for taxes paid to a foreign country or possession of the United States under section 131, shall be deducted from, and any limitation in such credit shall be based upon, the tax computed under section 108 (k).

(g) Example. This section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The A Corporation, a domestic corporation (which is neither a public utility referred to in section 26 (h) nor a Western Hemisphere trade corporation referred to in section 26 (i), and which is not subject to tax under Supplement U), makes its income tax returns on the basis of the calendar year. For the calendar year 1954, the A Corporation has net income of $100,000, which does not include any interest on United States obligations or dividends on stock of foreign corporations. The net income includes cash dividends received from a domestic corporation other than a public utility (allowable as a credit under section 26 (b) (1)) in the amount of $10,000, and cash dividends received from a domestic public utility corporation on its preferred stock (with respect to which a credit is allowable to the public utility under section 26 (h)) in the amount of $5,000. The normal tax and surtax of the A Corporation for the calendar year 1954 are $23,218.12 and $13,972.88, respectively, computed as follows:

(1) Computation of tentative taxes provided in section 108 (k) (1)
NORMAL TAX AND SURTAX
1. Net income		$100,000.00
2. Less credit under section 26 (b) (1) for dividends received from domestic corporation other than dividends with respect to which credit is allowable under section 26 (h) (85 percent of $10,000)	$8,500.00
3. Less credit under section 26 (b) (2) for dividends received with respect to which credit is allowable under section 26 (h) (62 percent of $5,000)	3,100.00	11,600.00
4. Normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income		88,400.00
5. Normal tax (30 percent of item 4)		26,520.00
6. Surtax (22 percent of $63,400, the excess of $88,400 over $25,000)		13,948.00
(2) Computation of tentative taxes provided in section 108 (k) (2)
NORMAL TAX AND SURTAX
7. Net income		$100,000.00
8. Less credit under section 26 (b) (1) (85 percent of $10,000)	$8,500.00
9. Less credit under section 26 (b) (2) (59 percent of $5,000)	2,950.00	11,450.00
10. Normal-tax net income and corporation surtax net income		88,550.00
11. Normal tax (25 percent of item 10)		22,137.50
12. Surtax (22 percent of $63,550, the excess of $88,550 over $25,000)		13,981.00
(3) Computation of normal tax and surtax for calendar year 1954.
13. Number of days in taxable year before Apr. 1, 1954		90
14. Number of days in taxable year after March 31, 1954		275
15. Total number of days in taxable year		365
NORMAL TAX
16. Tentative normal tax computed in (1)	$26,520.00
17. 90/365ths of $26,520		$6,539.18
18. Tentative normal tax computed in (2)	22,137.50
19. 275/365ths of $22,137.50		16,678.94
20. Total normal tax		23,218.12
SURTAX
21. Tentative surtax computed in (1)	$13,948.00
22. 90/365ths of $13,948		3,439.23
23. Tentative surtax computed in (2)	13,981.00
24. 275/365ths of $13,981		10,533.63
25. Total surtax		13,972.86

SEC. 109 Western Hemisphere trade corporations. For the purposes of this chapter, the term "western hemisphere trade corporation" means a domestic corporation all of whose business is done in any country or countries in North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or in Newfoundland and which satisfies the following conditions:

(a) If 95 per centum or more of the gross income of such domestic corporation for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period during which the corporation was in existence) was derived from sources other than sources within the United States; and

(b) If 90 per centum or more of its gross income for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business.

[Sec. 109 as added by sec. 141, Rev. Act. 1942]

§ 39.109-1 Western Hemisphere trade corporations. (a) The term "Western Hemisphere trade corporation" for the purposes of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code means a domestic corporation which meets the following tests:

(1) Its entire business must be carried on within the geographical limits of North, Central, or South America, or in the West Indies, or in Newfoundland; and

(2) 95 percent or more of its gross income for the 3-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period during which the corporation was in existence) must be derived from sources without the United States; and

(3) 90 percent or more of its gross income for such period or such part thereof must be derived from the active conduct of a trade or business.

A domestic corporation is not excluded from the definition merely because, incident to the conduct of its trade or business, it retains title in goods to insure payment for such goods shipped to a country outside the geographical areas enumerated in section 109.

(b) A corporation which claims to qualify as a Western Hemisphere trade corporation shall attach to its income tax return a statement showing that its entire business is done in one or more of the designated countries, and for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part thereof during which the corporation was in existence) (1) its total gross income from all sources, (2) the amount thereof derived from the active conduct of a trade or business, (3) a description of such trade or business and the facts upon which the corporation relies to establish that such trade or business was actively conducted by it, and (4) the amount of its gross income, if any, from sources within the United States. The gross income from sources without the United States and within the United States shall be determined as provided in section 119 and the regulations prescribed thereunder.

SEC. 110. Mutual savings banks conducting life insurance business.—(a) Alternative tax. In the case of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, authorized under State law to engage in the business of issuing life insurance contracts, and which conducts a life insurance business in a separate department the accounts of which are maintained separately from the other accounts of the mutual savings bank, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by sections 13 and 15, or section 117 (c) (1), a tax consisting of the sum of the partial taxes determined under paragraphs (1) and (2)

(1) A partial tax computed upon the net income determined without regard to any items of gross income or deductions properly allocable to the business of the life insurance department, at the rates and in the manner as if this section has not been enacted; and

(2) a partial tax computed upon the net income (as defined in section 201 (c) (7)) of the life insurance department determined without regard to any item of gross income or deductions not properly allocable to such department, at the rates and in the manner provided in Supplement G with respect to life insurance companies.

(b) Limitations of section. The provisions of subsection (a) shall be applicable only if the life insurance department would, if it were treated as a separate corporation, qualify as a life insurance company under section 201 (b).

[Sec. 110 as added by sec. 346 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.110-1 Mutual savings banks conducting life insurance business—(a) Scope of application. Section 110 is applicable in the case of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares which conducts a life insurance business, if:

(1) The conduct of the life insurance business is authorized under State law.

(2) The life insurance business is carried on in a separate department of the bank,

(3) The books of account of the life insurance business are maintained separately from other departments of the bank, and

(4) The life insurance department of the bank, were it separately incorporated, would qualify as a life insurance company under section 201 (b)

(b) Computation of tax. In the case of a mutual savings bank conducting a life insurance business to which section 110 is applicable, the tax upon such bank consists of the sum of the following:

(1) A partial tax computed under sections 13 and 15 upon the net income of the bank determined without regard to any items of income or deduction properly allocable to the life insurance department.

(2) A partial tax upon the net income of the life insurance department determined without regard to any items of income or deduction not properly allocable to such department at the rates and in the manner provided in Supplement G with respect to life insurance companies.

SUPPLEMENT B—COMPUTATION OF NET INCOME

SEC. 111. Determination of amount of, and recognition of, gain or loss—(a) Computation of gain or loss. The gain from the sale or other disposition of property shall be the excess of the amount realized therefrom over the adjusted basis provided in section 113 (b) for determining gain, and the loss shall be the excess of the adjusted basis provided in such section for determining loss over the amount realized.

(b) Amount realized. The amount realized from the sale or other disposition of property shall be the sum of any money received plus the fair market value of the property (other than money) received.

(c) Recognition of gain or loss. In the case of a sale or exchange, the extent to which the gain or loss determined under this section shall be recognized for the purposes of this chapter, shall be determined under the provisions of section 112.

(d) Installment sales. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent (in the case of property sold under contract providing for payment in installments) the taxation of that portion of any installment payment representing gain or profit in the year in which such payment is received.

§ 39.111-1 Computation of gain or loss. (a) Except as otherwise provided, the Internal Revenue Code regards as income or as loss sustained, the gain or loss realized from the conversion of property into cash, or from the exchange of property for other property differing materially either in kind or in extent. The amount realized from a sale or other disposition of property is the sum of any money received plus the fair market value of any property which is received. The fair market value of property is a question of fact, but only in rare and extraordinary cases will property be considered to have no fair market value. The general method of computing such gain or loss is prescribed by section 111, which contemplates that from the amount realized upon the sale or exchange there shall be withdrawn a sum sufficient to restore the adjusted basis prescribed by section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (4)-1, inclusive (i. e., the cost or other basis provided by section 113 (a), adjusted for receipts, expenditures, losses, allowances, and other items chargeable against and applicable to such cost or other basis) The amount which remains after the adjusted basis has been restored to the taxpayer constitutes the realized gain. If the amount realized upon the sale or exchange is insufficient to restore to the taxpayer the adjusted basis of the property, a loss is sustained in the amount of the insufficiency. The basis may be different depending upon whether gain or loss is being computed.

(b) (1) Even though property is not sold or otherwise disposed of, gain is realized if the sum of all the amounts received which are required by section 113 (b) to be applied against the basis of the property exceeds such basis. Except as otherwise provided in section 115 (b) with respect to distributions out of increase in value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, such gain is includible in gross income under section 22 (a) as "gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever." See § 39.115 (d)-1. On the other hand, a loss is not ordinarily sustained prior to the sale or other disposition of the property, for the reason that until such sale or other disposition occurs there remains the possibility that the taxpayer may recover or recoup the adjusted basis of the property. Until some identifiable event fixes the actual sustaining of a loss and the amount thereof the Internal Revenue Code takes no account of it.

(2) The provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A purchased certain shares of stock subsequent to February 28, 1913, for $10,000. On January 1, 1952, A's adjusted basis for the stock had been reduced to $1,000, by reason of receipts and distributions described in section 113 (b) (1) (A) and (D). He received in 1952 a further distribution of $5,000, being a distribution described in section 113 (b) (1) (D) other than a distribution out of increase of value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913. This distribution applied against the adjusted basis as required by section 113 (b) (1) (D) exceeds that basis by $4,000. The amount of the excess, namely, $4,000, is a gain realized by A in 1952 includible, as a gain from the stock, in gross income in his return for that calendar year. In computing gain from the stock, as in adjusting basis, no distinction is made between items of receipts or distributions described in section 113 (b). If A sells the stock in 1953 for $5,000, he realizes in 1953 a gain of $5,000, since the adjusted basis of the stock for the purpose of computing gain or loss from the sale is zero.

(c) In the case of property sold on the installment plan, special rules for the taxation of the gain are prescribed in section 44.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss—(a) General rule. Upon the sale or exchange of property the entire amount of the gain or loss, determined under section 111, shall be recognized, except as hereinafter provided in this section.

§ 39.112 (a)-1 Sales or exchanges. (a) The extent to which the amount of gain or loss, determined under section 111, from the sale or exchange of property is to be recognized is governed by the provisions of section 112. The general rule is that the entire amount of such gain or loss is to be recognized.

(b) Exceptions to the general rule are made by section 112 (b) (1) to (5) inclusive, section 112 (b) (10) and section 112 (l) in the case of certain specifically described exchanges of property in which at the time of the exchange particular differences exist between the property parted with and the property acquired, but such differences are more formal than substantial. As to these, the Internal Revenue Code provides that such differences shall not be deemed controlling, and that gain or loss shall not be recognized at the time of the exchange. The underlying assumption of these exceptions is that the new property is substantially a continuation of the old investment still unliquidated; and, in the case of reorganizations, that the new enterprise, the new corporate structure, and the new property are substantially continuations of the old still unliquidated.

(c) The Internal Revenue Code makes specific provision for the case in which, in addition to property which may be received tax free on the exchange, there is received as boot other property or money. In such a case gain is recognized to the extent of the boot (see section 112 (c) and (d)) but no loss of any kind is recognized (see section 112 (e))

(d) The exceptions from the general rule requiring the recognition of all gains and losses, like other exceptions from a rule of taxation of general and uniform application, are strictly construed and do not extend either beyond the words or the underlying assumptions and purposes of the exception. Nonrecognition is accorded by the Internal Revenue Code only if the exchange is one which satisfies both (1) the specific description in the Code of an excepted exchange, and (2) the underlying purpose for which such exchange is excepted from the general rule. The exchange must be germane to, and a necessary incident of, the investment or enterprise in hand. The relationship of the exchange to the venture or enterprise is always material, and the surrounding facts and circumstances must be shown. As elsewhere, the taxpayer claiming the benefit of the exception must show himself within the exception.

(e) To constitute an exchange within the meaning of section 112 (b) (1) to (5), inclusive, section 112 (b) (10) and section 112 (l) the transaction must be a reciprocal transfer of property, as distinguished from a transfer of property for a money consideration only.

(f) See section 112 (b) (6) and (7) with respect to nonrecognition of gain or loss upon the receipt of property distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation under certain specifically described circumstances. See sections 112 (b) (8) and 371 with respect to nonrecognition of gain or loss upon exchanges and distributions made in obedience to orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission. See section 510 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as added by section 7 of the Act of August 4, 1939 (46 U. S. C. 1160 (e)), with respect to nonrecognition of gain in case of the transfer of an obsolete vessel to the Maritime Commission under the provisions of such section. See section 112 (b) (11) with respect to nonrecognition of gain upon the distribution of stock (other than preferred) in a corporation a party to a reorganization under certain circumstances without the surrender of stock.

§ 39.112 (a)-2 Use of term "assumption of liabilities." When used in the regulations prescribed under sections 112 and 113, the terms "assumption of liabilities," "liabilities assumed," or similar expressions include, in addition to cases where personal liabilities of the taxpayer are assumed by another party to the exchange, cases (a) where property of the taxpayer is acquired by another party to the exchange subject to a liability whether or not the taxpayer was himself personally liable, and (b) where, though the property transferred was held by the taxpayer merely subject to a liability, the liability is assumed by another party to the exchange.

§ 39.112 (b) (1) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind, property held for productive use or investment.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind—(1) Property held for productive use or investment. No gain or loss shall be recognized if property held for productive use in trade or business or for investment (not including stock in trade or other property held primarily for sale, nor stocks, bonds, notes, choses in action, certificates of trust or beneficial interest, or other securities or evidences of indebtedness or interest) is exchanged solely for property of a like kind to be held either for productive use in trade or business or for investment.

§ 39.112 (b) (1)-1 Property held for productive use in trade or business or for investment. (a) As used in section 112 (b) (1) the words "like kind" have reference to the nature or character of the property and not to its grade or quality. One kind or class of property may not, under such section, be exchanged for property of a different kind or class. The fact that any real estate involved is improved or unimproved is not material, for such fact relates only to the grade or quality of the property and not to its kind or class. Unproductive real estate held by one other than a dealer for future use or future realization of the increment in value is held for investment and not primarily for sale.

(b) No gain or loss is recognized if (1) a taxpayer exchanges property held for productive use in his trade or business, together with cash, for other property of like kind for the same use, such as a truck for a new truck or a passenger automobile for a new passenger automobile to be used for a like purpose, or (2) a taxpayer who is not a dealer in real estate exchanges city real estate for a ranch or farm, or a leasehold of a fee with 30 years or more to run for real estate, or improved real estate for unimproved real estate, or (3) a taxpayer exchanges investment property and cash for investment property of a like kind.

(c) A transfer is not within the provisions of section 112 (b) (1) if as part of the consideration the other party to the exchange assumes a liability of the taxpayer, but such transfer, if otherwise qualified, will be within the provisions of section 112 (c)

(d) Gain or loss is recognized if a taxpayer exchanges (1) Treasury bonds maturing September 15, 1953, for Treasury bonds maturing June 15, 1963, or (2) a real estate mortgage for consolidated farm loan bonds.

§ 39.112 (b) (2) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind, stock for stock of same corporation.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(2) Stock for stock of same corporation. No gain or loss shall be recognized if common stock in a corporation is exchanged solely for common stock in the same corporation, or if preferred stock in a corporation is exchanged solely for preferred stock in the same corporation.

§ 39.112 (b) (2)-1 Stock for stock of the same corporation. (a) The exchange, without the recognition of gain or loss, of common stock for common stock, or of preferred stock for preferred stock, in the same corporation is not limited to a transaction between a stockholder and the corporation; it includes an exchange between two individual stockholders. However, the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) do not apply if stock is exchanged for bonds, or preferred stock is exchanged for common stock, or common stock is exchanged for preferred stock, or common stock in one corporation is exchanged for common stock in another corporation.

(b) A transfer is not within the provisions of section 112 (b) (2) if as part of the consideration the other party to the exchange assumes a liability of the taxpayer, but such transfer, if otherwise qualified, will be within the provisions of section 112 (c)

§ 39.112 (b) (3)-(5) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind, stock for stock on reorganization, gain of corporation; transfer to corporation controlled by transferor

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(3) Stock for stock on reorganization. No gain or loss shall be recognized if stock or securities in a corporation a party to a reorganization are, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, exchanged solely for stock or securities in such corporation or in another corporation a party to the reorganization.

(4) Same; gain of corporation. No gain or loss shall be recognized if a corporation a party to a reorganization exchanges property, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, solely for stock or securities in another corporation a party to the reorganization.

(5) Transfer to corporation controlled by transferor. No gain or loss shall be recognized if property is transferred to a corporation by one or more persons solely in exchange for stock or securities in such corporation, and immediately after the exchange such person or persons are in control of the corporation; but in the case of an exchange by two or more persons this paragraph shall apply only if the amount of the stock and securities received by each is substantially in proportion to his interest in the property prior to the exchange. Where the transferee assumes a liability of a transferor, or where the property of a transferor is transferred subject to a liability, then for the purpose only of determining whether the amount of stock or securities received by each of the transferors is in the proportion required by this paragraph, the amount of such liability (if under subsection (k) it is not to be considered as "other property or money") shall be considered as stock or securities received by such transferor.

§ 39.112 (b) (5)-1 Transfer of property to corporation controlled by transferor (a) As used in section 112 (b) (5) the phrase "one or more persons" includes individuals, trusts or estates, partnerships, and corporations (see section 3797) and to be in "control" of the transferee corporation such person or persons must own immediately after the transfer stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of such corporation. (See section 112 (h).) The phrase "immediately after the exchange" does not necessarily require simultaneous exchanges by two or more persons, but comprehends a situation where the rights of the parties have been previously defined and the execution of the agreement proceeds with an expedition consistent with orderly procedure.

(b) The provisions of section 112 (b) (5) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A owns certain real estate which cost him $50,000 in 1930, but which has a fair market value of $150,000 in 1952. He transfers this property to the M Corporation, a newly formed company, for all the latter's capital stock. No gain or loss is recognized on the transaction.

Example (2). C owns a patent right worth $25,000 and D owns a manufacturing plant worth $75,000. C and D organize the R Corporation with an authorized capital stock of $100,000. C transfers his patent right to the R Corporation for $25,000 of its stock and D transfers his plant to the new corporation for $75,000 of its stock. No gain or loss to C or D is recognized.

Example (3). B owns certain real estate which cost him $50,000 in 1930, but which has a fair market value of $200,000 in 1952. He transfers the property to the N Corporation in 1952 for 78 percent of each class of stock of the corporation, the remaining 22 percent of the stock of the corporation having been issued by the corporation in 1940 to other persons for cash. B realizes a taxable gain of $150,000 on this transaction. (See section 112 (h).)

§ 39.112 (b) (5)-2 Treatment of assumptions of liabilities—(a) Recognition of gain. For the effect upon the recognition of gain of an assumption of liabilities in a transfer described in section 112 (b) (5), see section 112 (k) and § 39.112 (k)-1.

(b) Computation of proportionate interests required by section 112 (b) (5) (1) In any case where an assumption of liabilities is not to be treated as "other property or money" under section 112 (k) the liabilities so assumed are, for the purpose of determining whether the stock or securities received by the trans-ferors are substantially proportionate to their interests in the property transferred as required by section 112 (b) (5), to be treated as stock or securities received by the transferor whose indebtedness is assumed.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A and B are individuals, each of whom owns property with a fair market value of $100,000 on July 1, 1952. There is a purchase money mortgage on A's property of $50,000. On July 1, 1952, A and B organize the X Corporation, to which they transfer the property above described for the entire capital stock of the X Corporation and the assumption by the X Corporation of A's purchase money mortgage. The X Corporation's capital stock is divided as follows: $50,000 to A and $100,000 to B. Nevertheless, for the purposes of determining whether the transferors received stock or securities substantially in proportion to their interests in the properties transferred, as required by section 112 (b) (5), A is deemed to have received stock or securities to the extent of $100,000, since his $50,000 purchase money mortgage, assumed by the X Corporation, is also to be treated as stock or securities received by him. Accordingly, under the facts as stated, the proportions required by section 112 (b) (5) exist.

§ 39.112 (b) (5)-3 Records to be kept and information to be filed. (a) Every person who receives the stock or securities of a controlled corporation for property under section 112 (b) (5) shall file with his income tax return for the taxable year in which the exchange takes place a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange, including—

(1) A description of the property transferred, or of his interest in such property, together with a statement of the cost or other basis thereof, adjusted to the date of the transfer, and

(2) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received in the exchange, including any liabilities of the taxpayer assumed by the controlled corporation. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property received shall be set forth at its fair market value at the date of the exchange.

(b) Every such controlled corporation shall file with its income tax return for the taxable year in which the exchange takes place:

(1) A full description of all property received from the transferors, together with a statement of the cost or other basis thereof in the hands of the transferors adjusted to the date of the transfer, and

(2) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money which passed to the transferors in the transaction (including any liabilities assumed by such controlled corporation) together with a full statement of the amount of the issued and outstanding stock and securities of such controlled corporation immediately after the exchange and of the ownership of each transferor of each class of stock of such controlled corporation immediately after the exchange (showing as to each class the number of shares and percentage owned and the voting power of each share)

(c) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every taxpayer who participates in a tax-free exchange under section 112 (b) (5) showing the cost or other basis in his hands of the transferred property, and of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received, in order to facilitate the determination of gain or loss from a subsequent disposition of such stock or securities and other property received in the exchange.

§ 39.112 (b) (6) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind, property received by corporation on complete liquidation of another.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(6) Property received by corporation on complete liquidation of another. No gain or loss shall be recognized upon the receipt by a corporation of property distributed in complete liquidation of another corporation. For the purposes of this paragraph a distribution shall be considered to be in complete liquidation only if—

(A) The corporation receiving such property was, on the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, and has continued to be at all times until the receipt of the property, the owner of stock (in such other corporation) possessing at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and the owner of at least 80 per centum of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock (except nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends), and was at no time on or after the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation and until the receipt of the property the owner of a greater percentage of any class of stock than the percentage of such class owned at the time of the receipt of the property; and

(B) No distribution under the liquidation was made before the first day of the first taxable year of the corporation begining after December 31, 1935; and either

(C) The distribution is by such other corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock, and the transfer of all the property occurs within the taxable year; in such case the adoption by the shareholders of the resolution under which is authorized the distribution of all the assets of such corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock, shall be considered an adoption of a plan of liquidation, even though no time for the completion of the transfer of the property is specified in such resolution; or

(D) Such distribution is one of a series of distributions by such other corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock in accordance with a plan of liquidation under which the transfer of all property under the liquidation is to be completed within three years from the close of the taxable year during which is made the first of the series of distributions under the plan, except that if such transfer is not completed within such period, or if the taxpayer does not continue qualified under subparagraph (A) until the completion of such transfer, no distribution under the plan shall be considered a distribution in complete liquidation.

If such transfer of all the property does not occur within the taxable year the Commissioner may require of the taxpayer such bond, or waiver of the statute of limitations on assessment and collection, or both, as he may deem necessary to insure, if the transfer of the property is not completed within such three-year period, or if the taxpayer does not continue qualified under subparagraph (A) until the completion of such transfer, the assessment and collection of all income, war-profits, and excess-profits taxes then imposed by law for such taxable year or subsequent taxable years, to the extent attributable to property so received. A distribution otherwise constituting a distribution in complete liquidation within the meaning of this paragraph shall not be considered as not constituting such a distribution merely because it does not constitute a distribution or liquidation within the meaning of the corporate law under which the distribution is made; and for the purposes of this paragraph a transfer of property of such other corporation to the taxpayer shall not be considered as not constituting a distribution (or one of a series of distributions) in complete cancellation or redemption of all the stock of such other corporation, merely because the carrying out of the plan involves (i) the transfer under the plan to the taxpayer by such other corporation of property, not attributable to shares owned by the taxpayer, upon an exchange described in paragraph (4) of this subsection, and (ii) the complete cancellation or redemption under the plan, as a result of exchanges described in paragraph (3) of this subsection, of the shares not owned by the taxpayer.

§ 39.112 (b) (6)-1 Distributions in liquidation of subsidiary corporation—(a) General. Under the general rule prescribed by section 115 (c) for the treatment of distributions in liquidation of a corporation, amounts received by one corporation in complete liquidation of another corporation are treated as in full payment in exchange for stock in such other corporation, and gain or loss from the receipt of such amounts is to be determined as provided in section 111. The scope of this treatment is governed by the meaning of the term "amounts distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation" as used in section 115 (c) Section 112 (b) (6) excepts from the general rule property received, under certain specifically described circumstances, by one corporation as a distribution in complete liquidation of another corporation and provides for the nonrecognition of gain or loss in those cases which meet the statutory requirements. Section 112 (i) places a limitation on the application of section 112 (b) (6) in the case of foreign corporations. See § 39.113 (a) (15)-1 for the basis for determining gain or loss from the subsequent sale of property received upon complete liquidations such as described in this section.

(b) Requirements for nonrecognition of gain or loss. The nonrecognition of gain or loss is limited to the receipt of such property by a corporation which is the actual owner of stock (in the liquidating corporation) possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and the owner of at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock (except nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends) The Internal Revenue Code expressly requires that the recipient corporation must have been the owner of the specified amount of such stock on the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation and have continued so to be at all times until the receipt of the property. The Code also expressly requires that the recipient corporation shall at no time, on or after the date of the adoption of the plan and until the receipt of the property, be the owner of a greater percentage of any class of stock than the percentage of such class owned at the time of the receipt of the property. If the recipient corporation does not continue qualified with respect to the ownership of stock of the liquidating corporation and if the failure to continue qualified occurs at any time prior to the completion of the transfer of all the property, the provisions for the nonrecognition of gain or loss do not apply to any distribution received under the plan.

(c) The provisions of section 112 (b) (6) do not apply to any liquidation if any distribution in pursuance thereof has been made before the first day of the first taxable year of the recipient corporation beginning after December 31, 1935.

(d) To constitute a distribution in complete liquidation within the meaning of section 112 (b) (6) the distribution must be (1) made by the liquidating corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock in accordance with a plan of liquidation or (2) one of a series of distributions in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock in accordance with a plan of liquidation. It is essential that a status of liquidation exist at the time the first distribution is made under the plan and that such status continue to the date of dissolution of the corporation. A status of liquidation exists when the corporation ceases to be a going concern and its activities are merely for the purpose of winding up its affairs, paying its debts, and distributing any remaining balance to its shareholders. A liquidation may be completed prior to the actual dissolution of the liquidating corporation but no liquidation is completed until the liquidating corporation and the receiver or trustees in liquidation are finally divested of all the property (both tangible and intangible) (See § 39.22(a)-20.)

(e) If a transaction constitutes a distribution in complete liquidation within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code and satisfies the requirements of section 112 (b) (6) it is not material that it is otherwise described under the local law. If a liquidating corporation distributes all of its property in complete liquidation and if pursuant to the plan for such complete liquidation a corporation owning the specified amount of stock in the liquidating corporation receives property constituting amounts distributed in complete liquidation within the meaning of the Code and also receives other property attributable to shares not owned by it, the transfer of the property to the recipient corporation shall not be treated, by reason of the receipt of such other property, as not being a distribution (or one of a series of distributions) in complete cancellation or redemption of all of the stock of the liquidating corporation within the meaning of section 112 (b) (6) even though for purposes of those provisions in section 112 relating to reorganizations the amount received by the recipient corporation in excess of its ratable share is regarded as acquired upon the issuance of its stock or securities in a tax-free exchange as described in section 112 (b) (4) and the cancellation or redemption of the stock not owned by the recipient corporation is treated as occurring as a result of a tax-free exchange described in section 112 (b) (3)

(f) The application of these rules may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. On July 1, 1952, the M Corporation had outstanding capital stock consisting of 3,000 shares of common stock, par value $100 a share, and 1,000 shares of preferred stock, par value $100 a share, which preferred stock was limited and preferred as to dividends and had no voting rights. On July 1, 1952, and thereafter until the date of dissolution of the M Corporation, the O Corporation owned 2,500 shares of the common stock of the M Corporation. By a statutory merger consummated on August 1, 1952, pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted on July 1, 1952, the M Corporation was merged into the O Corporation, the O Corporation under the plan issuing stock which was received by the holders of the stock of the M Corporation not owned by the O Corporation in exchange for their stock in the M Corporation. The receipt by the O Corporation of the properties of the M Corporation is a distribution received by the O Corporation in complete liquidation of the M Corporation within the meaning of section 112 (b) (6), and no gain or loss is recognized as the result of the receipt of such properties.

§ 39.112 (b) (6)-2 Liquidations completed within one taxable year If in a liquidation completed within one taxable year, pursuant to a plan of complete liquidation, distributions in complete liquidation are received by a corporation which owns the specified amount of stock in the liquidating corporation and which continues qualified with respect to the ownership of such stock until the transfer of all the property within such year is completed (see § 39.112 (b) (6)-1) then no gain or loss shall be recognized with respect to the distributions received by the recipient corporation. In such case no waiver or bond is required of the recipient corporation under section 112 (b) (6)

§ 39.112 (b) (6)-3 Liquidations covering more than one taxable year (a) If the plan of liquidation is consummated by a series of distributions covering a period of more than one taxable year, the nonrecognition of gain or loss with respect to the distributions in liquidations shall, in addition to the requirements of § 39.112 (b) (6)-1, be subject to the following requirements:

(1) In order for the distribution in liquidation to be brought within the exception provided in section 112 (b) (6) to the general rule for computing gain or loss with respect to amounts received in liquidation of a corporation, the entire property of the corporation shall be transferred in accordance with a plan of liquidation, which plan shall include a statement showing the period within which the transfer of the property of the liquidating corporation to the recipient corporation is to be completed. The transfer of all the property under the liquidation must be completed within three years from the close of the taxable year during which is made the first of the series of distributions under the plan.

(2) For each of the taxable years which falls wholly or partly within the period of liquidation, the recipient corporation shall, at the time of filing its return, file with the district director of internal revenue for transmittal to the Commissioner a waiver of the statute of limitations on assessment. The waiver shall be executed on such form as may be prescribed by the Commissioner and shall extend the period for assessment of all income and profits taxes for each such year to a date not earlier than one year after the last date of the period for assessment of such taxes for the last taxable year in which the transfer of the property of the liquidating corporation to the controlling corporation may be completed in accordance with section 112 (b) (6) Such waiver shall also contain such other terms with respect to assessment as may be considered by the Commissioner to be necessary to insure the assessment and collection of the correct tax liability for each year within the period of liquidation.

(3) For each of the taxable years which falls wholly or partly within the period of liquidation, the recipient corporation shall file a bond, the amount of which shall be fixed by the Commissioner. The bond shall contain all terms specified by the Commissioner, including provisions unequivocally assuring prompt payment of the excess of income and profits taxes (plus penalty, if any, and interest) as computed by the Commissioner without regard to the provisions of sections 112 (b) (6) and 113 (a) (15) over such taxes computed with regard to such provisions, regardless of whether such excess may or may not be made the subject of a notice of deficiency under section 272 and regardless of whether it may or may not be assessed. Any bond required under section 112 (b) (6) shall have such surety or sureties as the Commissioner may require. However, see 6 U. S. C. 15, providing that where a bond is required by law or regulations, in lieu of surety or sureties there may be deposited bonds or notes of the United States. Only surety companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary as acceptable sureties on Federal bonds will be approved as sureties. The bonds shall be executed in triplicate so that the Commissioner, the taxpayer, and the surety or the depositary may each have a copy.

(b) Pending the completion of the liquidation, if there is a compliance with subparagraphs (1) (2) and (3) of paragraph (a) and § 39.112 (b) (6)-1 with respect to the nonrecognition of gain or loss, the income and profits tax liability of the recipient corporation for each of the years covered in whole or in part by the liquidation shall be determined without the recognition of any gain or loss on account of the receipt of the distributions in liquidation. In such determination, the basis of the property or properties received by the recipient corporation shall be determined in accordance with section 113 (a) (15) (See § 39.113 (a) (15)-1.) However, if the transfer of the property is not completed within the three-year period allowed by section 112 (b) (6) or if the recipient corporation does not continue qualified with respect to the ownership of stock of the liquidating corporation as required by that section, gain or loss shall be recognized with respect to each distribution and the tax liability for each of the years covered in whole or in part by the liquidation shall be recomputed without regard to the provisions of section 112 (b) (6) or section 113 (a) (15) and the amount of any additional tax due upon such recomputation shall be promptly paid.

§ 39.112 (b) (6)-4 Distributions in liquidation as affecting minority interests. Upon the liquidation of a corporation in pursuance of a plan of complete liquidation, the gain or loss of minority shareholders shall be determined without regard to section 112 (b) (6) since it does not apply to that part of distributions in liquidation received by minority shareholders.

§ 39.112 (b) (6)-5 Records to be kept and information to be filed with return. (a) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every corporation receiving distributions in complete liquidation within the exception provided in section 112 (b) (6) showing the information required by this section to be submitted with its return. The plan of liquidation must be adopted by each of the corporations parties thereto; and the adoption must be shown by the acts of its duly constituted responsible officers, and appear upon the official records of each such corporation.

(b) For the taxable year in which the liquidation occurs, or, if the plan of liquidation provides for a series of distributions over a period of more than one year, for each taxable year in which a distribution is received under the plan, the recipient shall file with its return a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss, including—

(1) A certified copy of the plan for complete liquidation, and of the resolutions under which the plan was adopted and the liquidation was authorized, together with a statement under oath showing in detail all transactions incident to, or pursuant to, the plan.

(2) A list of all the properties received upon the distribution, showing the cost or other basis of such properties to the liquidating corporation at the date of distribution and the fair market value of such properties on the date distributed.

(3) A statement as to its ownership of all classes of stock of the liquidating corporation (showing as to each class the number of shares and percentage owned and the voting power of each share) as of the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, and at all times since, to and including the date of the distribution in liquidation, and the cost or other basis of such stock.

§ 39.112 (b) (7) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind; election as to recognition of gain in certain corporate liquidations.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(7) Election as to recognition of gain in certain corporate liquidations—(A) General rule. In the case of property distributed in complete liquidation of a domestic corporation, if—

(i) The liquidation is made in pursuance of a plan of liquidation adopted after December 31, 1950, whether the taxable year of the corporation began on, before, or after January 1, 1951; and

(ii) The distribution is in complete cancellation or redemption of all the stock, and the transfer of all the property under the liquidation occurs within some one calendar month in 1951 or 1952—

then in the case of each qualified electing shareholder (as defined in subparagraph (C)) gain upon the shares owned by him at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation shall be recognized only to the extent provided in subparagraphs (E) and (F).

(B) Excluded corporation. The term "excluded corporation" means a corporation which at any time between August 15, 1950, and the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, both dates inclusive, was the owner of stock possessing 50 per centum or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote on the adoption of such plan.

(C) Qualified electing shareholders. The term "qualified electing shareholder" means a shareholder (other than an excluded corporation) of any class of stock (whether or not entitled to vote on the adoption of the plan of liquidation) who is a shareholder at the time of the adoption of such plan, and whose written election to have the benefits of subparagraph (A) has been made and filed in accordance with subparagraph (D), but—

(i) In the case of a shareholder other than a corporation, only if written elections have been so filed by shareholders (other than corporations) who at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation are owners of stock possessing at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power (exclusive of voting power possessed by stock owned by corporations) of all classes of stock entitled to vote on the adoption of such plan of liquidation; or

(ii) In the case of a shareholder which is a corporation, only if written elections have been so filed by corporate shareholders (other than an excluded corporation) which at the time of the adoption of such plan of liquidation are owners of stock possessing at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power (exclusive of voting power possessed by stock owned by an excluded corporation and by shareholders who are not corporations) of all classes of stock entitled to vote on the adoption of such plan of liquidation.

(D) Making and filing of elections. The written elections referred to in subparagraph (C) must be made and filed in such manner as to be not in contravention of regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. The filing must be within thirty days after the adoption of the plan of liquidation, and may be by the liquidating corporation or by the shareholder.

(E) Noncorporate shareholders. In the case of a qualified electing shareholder other than a corporation—

(i) There shall be recognized, and taxed as a dividend, so much of the gain as is not in excess of his ratable share of the earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, such earnings and profits to be determined as of the close of the month in which the transfer in liquidation occurred under subparagraph (A) (ii), but without diminution by reason of distributions made during such month; but by including in the computation thereof all amounts accrued up to the date on which the transfer of all the property under the liquidation is completed; and

(ii) There shall be recognized, and taxed as short-term or long-term capital gain, as the case may be, so much of the remainder of the gain as is not in excess of the amount by which the value of that portion of the assets received by him which consists of money, or of stock or securities acquired by the corporation after August 15, 1950, exceeds his ratable share of such earnings and profits.

(F) Corporate shareholders. In the case of a qualified electing shareholder which is a corporation the gain shall be recognized only to the extent of the greater of the two following—

(i) The portion of the assets received by it which consists of money, or of stock or securities acquired by the liquidating corporation after August 15, 1950; or

(ii) Its ratable share of the earnings and profits of the liquidating corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, such earnings and profits to be determined as of the close of the month in which the transfer in liquidation occurred under subparagraph (A) (ii), but without diminution by reason of distributions made during such month; but by including in the computation thereof all amounts accrued up to the date on which the transfer of all the property under the liquidation is completed.

[Sec. 112 (b) (7) as added by sec. 120 (a), Rev. Act 1943; amended by sec. 206 (a), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 316 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.112 (b) (7)-1 Corporate liquidation in calendar month in 1952—(a) In general. Section 112 (b) (7) provides a special rule, in the case of certain specifically described complete liquidations of domestic corporations occurring within some one calendar month in 1952, for the treatment of gain on the shares of stock owned by qualified electing shareholders at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation. The effect of such section is in general to postpone the recognition of that portion of a qualified electing shareholder's gain on the liquidation which would otherwise be recognized and which is attributable to appreciation in the value of certain corporate assets unrealized by the corporation at the time such assets are distributed in complete liquidation. Only qualified electing shareholders are entitled to the benefits of section 112 (b) (7). The determination of who is a qualified electing shareholder is to be made under section 112 (b) (7) (C) and § 39.112 (b) (7)-2. For the basis of property received on such liquidations, see section 113 (a) (18)

(b) Type of liquidation. (1) The liquidation must be in pursuance of a plan of liquidation adopted after December 31, 1950, if the liquidation occurs within one calendar month in 1952. The plan may be adopted at any time after December 31, 1950, and before the first distribution under the liquidation occurs. The Code requires that the transfer of all the property, both tangible and intangible, of the corporation under the liquidation occur entirely within some one calendar month in 1952, but this requirement will be considered to have been complied with if cash is set aside under arrangements for the payment, after the close of such month, of unascertained or contingent liabilities and expenses, and such arrangements are made in good faith and the amount set aside is reasonable. Though it is not necessary that the corporation dissolve in the month of liquidation, it is essential that a status of liquidation exist at the time the first distribution is made under the plan and that such status continue to the date of dissolution of the corporation. A status of liquidation exists when the corporation ceases to be a going concern and its activities are merely for the purpose of winding up its affairs, paying its debts, and distributing any remaining balance to its shareholders.

(2) If a transaction constitutes a distribution in complete liquidation within the meaning of the Code and satisfies the requirements of section 112 (b) (7) it is immaterial that it is otherwise described under the local law.

§ 39.112 (b) (7)-2 Qualified electing shareholder (a) No corporate shareholder may be a qualified electing shareholder if at any time between August 15, 1950, and the date of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, both dates inclusive, it is the owner of stock of the liquidating corporation possessing 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote upon the adoption of the plan of liquidation. All other shareholders are divided into two groups for the purpose of determining whether they are qualified electing shareholders: (1) shareholders other than corporations, and (2) corporate shareholders.

(b) Any shareholder of either of such two groups, whether or not the stock he owns is entitled to vote on the adoption of the plan of liquidation, is a qualified electing shareholder if:

(1) His written election to be governed by the provisions of section 112 (b) (7) which cannot be withdrawn or revoked, has been made and filed as prescribed in § 39.112 (b) (7)-3; and

(2) Like elections have been made and filed by owners of stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock owned by shareholders of the same group at the time of, and entitled to vote upon, the adoption of the plan of liquidation, whether or not the shareholders making such elections actually realize gain upon the cancellation or redemption of such stock upon the liquidation.

(c) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The R Corporation has outstanding 20 shares of common stock on July 1, 1952, at the time of the adoption of a plan of liquidation within the provisions of section 112 (b) (7), each entitled to one vote upon the adoption of such plan of liquidation. At that time ten of such shares are owned by the S Corporation, two each by the X Corporation and the Y Corporation, one by the Z Corporation, and one each by A, B, C, D, and E, individuals. There are also outstanding at such time two shares of preferred stock, not entitled to vote on liquidation, one share being owned by F, an individual, and one share by the P Corporation. The S Corporation, being a corporate shareholder and the owner of 50 percent of the voting stock, may not be a qualified electing shareholder under any circumstances. In order for any other corporate shareholder to be a qualified electing shareholder, it is necessary that the X Corporation and the Y Corporation file their written elections to be governed by section 112 (b) (7). If this is done, the P Corporation will also be a qualified electing shareholder if it has filed a like election. Similarly, in the case of the individual shareholders, some combination of four of the individual holders of the common stock must have filed their written elections, before any individual shareholder may be considered a qualified electing shareholder, but if this is done, F will also be a qualified electing shareholder if he has filed a like election.

(d) An election to be governed by the provisions of section 112 (b) (7) relates to the treatment of gain realized upon the cancellation or redemption of stock upon liquidation and can therefore be made only by or on behalf of the person by whom gains, if any, will be realized. Thus, the shareholder who may make such election must be the actual owner of stock and not a mere record holder, such as a nominee.

(e) A shareholder is entitled to make an election relative to the gain only on stock owned by him at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation. The election is personal to the shareholder making it and does not follow such stock into the hands of a transferee.

§ 39.112 (b) (7)-3 Making and filing of written elections. An election to be governed by section 112 (b) (7) shall be made on Form 964 (revised) in accordance with the instructions printed thereon and with this section. The original and one copy shall be filed by the shareholder or by the liquidating corporation with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., attention of the Audit Service Branch, Audit Division, within 30 days after the adoption of the plan of liquidation. An election shall be considered as timely filed if it is placed in the mail on or before midnight of the 30th day after the adoption of the plan of liquidation, as shown by the postmark on the envelope containing the written election or as shown by other available evidence of the mailing date. Another copy shall be attached to and made a part of the shareholder's income tax return for his taxable year in which the transfer of all the property under the liquidation occurs.

§ 39.112 (b) (7)-4 Treatment of gain—(a) Computation of gain. As in the case of shareholders generally, for the purpose of computing gain, amounts received by qualified electing shareholders are treated as in full payment in exchange for their stock, as provided in section 115 (c), and gain from the receipt of such amounts is determined as provided in section 111. Gain or loss must be computed separately on each share of stock owned by a qualified electing shareholder at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation. The limited recognition and special treatment accorded by section 112 (b) (7) applies only to the gain on such shares of stock upon which gain was realized and not to net gain computed by setting off losses realized on some shares against gain on others.

(b) Recognition of gain. Pursuant to section 112 (b) (7) only so much of the gain on each share of stock owned by a qualified electing shareholder at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation is recognized as does not exceed the greater of the following:

(1) Such share's ratable share of the earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, computed as of the last day of the month of liquidation, without diminution by reason of distributions made during such month, and including in such computation all items of income and expense accrued up to the date on which the transfer of all the property under the liquidation is completed; or

(2) Such share's ratable share of the sum of the amount of money received by such shareholder on shares of the same class and the fair market value of all the stock or securities so received which were acquired by the liquidating corporation after August 15, 1950. The mere replacement after August 15, 1950, of lost or destroyed certificates or instruments acquired on or before August 15, 1950, or the mere conversion of certificates or instruments into certificates or instruments of larger or smaller denominations will not constitute an acquisition within the meaning of the phrase "acquired after August 15, 1950." Nor will such an acquisition result from the issuance after August 15, 1950, of certificates of stock in connection with a subscription made and accepted on or before August 15, 1950.

(c) Treatment of recognized gain. (1) In the case of a qualified electing shareholder other than a corporation that part of the recognized gain on a share of stock owned at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation which is not in excess of his ratable share of the earnings and profits of the liquidating corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, determined as provided in section 112 (b) (7) (E) (i) is treated and taxed to him as a dividend. It retains its character as a dividend for all tax purposes. The remainder of the gain which is recognized is treated and taxed to him as a short-term or long-term capital gain, as the case may be. In the case of a qualified electing shareholder which is a corporation, the entire amount of the gain which is recognized is treated and taxed as a short-term or long-term capital gain, as the case may be.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation has only one class of stock outstanding, owned in equal amounts by three shareholders. The basis of the stock owned by each shareholder is $50, each having bought his stock in a single block prior to the date of the adoption of a plan of liquidation conforming to the requirements of section 112 (b) (7). One of such shareholders is an individual and two are corporations and all are qualified electing shareholders. The X Corporation has earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913 (computed as provided in section 112 (b) (7)), of $60, its assets consisting of property (other than stock or securities acquired after August 15, 1950, and money) with a fair market value of $240, cash of $75, and stock and securities acquired after August 15, 1950, with a fair market value of $90, all of which assets are distributed in October, 1952, to the shareholders pro rata in complete liquidation of the corporation, as provided in section 112 (b) (7). Each shareholder, therefore, receives, in cash and property, $135 and his gain is $85. In the case of each shareholder $55 of this gain is recognized since such amount represents the sum of the cash received by him and the fair market value of the stock and securities received by him which were acquired by the X Corporation after August 15, 1950, and is greater than his ratable share of the earnings and profits ($20). In the case of the corporate shareholders this amount is treated as capital gain. In the case of the individual shareholder, however, $20, being the amount of the shareholder's ratable share of the earnings and profits, is taxable to him as a dividend, and $35, being the difference between the shareholder's ratable share of the earnings and profits and the sum of the cash and stock and securities received by him, is recognized and treated as a short-term or long-term capital gain, as the case may be. The remainder of each shareholder's gain, $30, is not recognized. If the basis of each shareholder's stock had been $100, instead of $50, the corporate shareholders would be taxed on only $35 as capital gain and the individual shareholder on $20 as a dividend but only on $15 as a capital gain, since the total amount taxed is limited by the amount of gain realized by the shareholder upon the cancellation or redemption of his stock.

§ 39.112 (b) (7)-5 Records to be kept and information to be filed with return. (a) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every qualified electing shareholder receiving distributions in complete liquidation of a domestic corporation. Such shareholder shall file with his income tax return for his taxable year in which the liquidation occurs a statement of all facts pertinent to the recognition and treatment of the gain realized by him upon the shares of stock owned by him at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, including:

(1) A statement of his stock ownership in the liquidating corporation as of the date of the distribution, showing the number of shares of each class owned on such date and the cost or other basis of each such share;

(2) A list of all the property including money received upon the distribution, showing the fair market value of each item of such property other than money on the date distributed and stating what items, if any, consist of stock or securities acquired by the liquidating corporation after August 15, 1950;

(3) A statement of his ratable share of the earnings and profits of the liquidating corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, computed without diminution by reason of distributions made during the month of liquidation; and

(4) A copy of such shareholder's written election to be governed by the provisions of section 112 (b) (7). (See § 39.112 (b) (7)-3.)

(b) For information to be filed by the liquidating corporation, see section 148 (e)

§ 39.112 (b) (8)-(9) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind; exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of Securities and Exchange Commission; property transfers on certain railroad reorganizations.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(8) Exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of Securities and Exchange Commission. In the case of any exchange or distribution described in section 371, no gain or loss shall be recognized to the extent specified in such section with respect to such exchange or distribution.

(9) Loss not recognized on certain railroad reorganizations. No loss shall be recognized if property of a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, is transferred, after December 31, 1938, in pursuance of an order of the court having jurisdiction of such corporation—

(A) In a receivership proceeding, or

(B) In a proceeding under section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, to a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, organized or made use of to effectuate a plan of reorganization approved by the court in such proceeding. The term "reorganization" as used in this paragraph, shall not be limited by the definition of such term in subsection (g).

[Sec. 112 (b) (9) as added by sec. 142 (a), Rev. Act 1942; amended by sec. 126 (a), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (b) (9)-1 Nonrecognition of loss upon transfer of property of railroad corporation. (a) For the purpose of section 112 (b) (9) it is unnecessary that the transfer be a direct transfer by the corporation undergoing reorganization or that such reorganization constitute a reorganization within the meaning of section 112 (g) It is sufficient if the transfer is made in pursuance of an order of the court and is an integral step in the consummation of a plan of reorganization approved by the court having jurisdiction of the proceeding. If these conditions are satisfied, no loss is recognized to the transferor upon the ultimate transfer of the property, or to the transferor upon any intermediate transfer.

(b) Section 112 (b) (9) applies only to a transfer resulting in a loss and has no application if the transfer therein described results in a gain.

§ 39.112 (b) (10) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind; transfers of property on reorganization of corporations in certain receivership and bankruptcy proceedings.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(10) Gain or loss not recognized on reorganization of corporations in certain receivership and bankruptcy proceedings. No gain or loss shall be recognized if property of a corporation (other than a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended) is transferred, in a taxable year of such corporation beginning after December 31, 1933, in pursuance of an order of the court having jurisdiction of such corporation—

(A) In a receivership, foreclosure, or similar proceeding, or

(B) In a proceeding under section 77B or Chapter X of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, to another corporation organized or made use of to effectuate a plan of reorganization approved by the court in such proceeding, in exchange solely for stock or securities in such other corporation.

[Sec. 112 (b) (10) as added by sec. 121 (a), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (b) (10)-1 Transfer of property of insolvent corporation in corporate reorganization or receivership proceeding—(a) Exchange solely for stock or securities. (1) Section 112 (b) (10) provides for the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon certain exchanges made in connection with the reorganization of an insolvent corporation, hereinafter referred to in this section and §§ 39.112 (b) (10)-2, 39.112 (c)-1, and 39.112 (g)-1 as a "section 112 (b) (10) reorganization." Section 112 (b) (10) does not apply to a railroad corporation as defined in section 77 (m) of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 205 (m)) In order to qualify as a section 112 (b) (10) reorganization, the transaction must satisfy the express statutory requirements as well as the underlying assumptions and purposes for which the exchange is excepted from the general rule requiring the recognition of gain or loss upon the exchange of property.

(2) Section 112 (b) (10) applies only with respect to a reorganization effected in one of two specified types of court proceedings: (i) Receivership, foreclosure, or similar proceedings, or (ii) corporate reorganization proceedings under section 77B (48 Stat. 912) or Chapter X of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. c. 10). The specific statutory requirements are the transfer of property of a corporation, in pursuance of an order of the court having jurisdiction of the corporation in such proceeding, to another corporation organized or made use of to effectuate a plan of reorganization approved by the court in such proceeding, in exchange solely for stock or securities in such other corporation. If the consideration for the transfer consists of other property or money as well as stock and securities, the gain, if any, is recognized in an amount not in excess of such other property and money (see section 112 (d)) but no loss is recognized (see section 112 (e)) As to the assumption of liabilities in an exchange described in section 112 (b) (10) see section 112 (k) and §§ 39.112 (a)-2 and 39.112 (k)-1.

(3) The application of section 112 (b) (10) is to be strictly limited to a transaction of the character set forth in such section. Hence, the section is inapplicable unless there is a bona fide plan of reorganization approved by the court having jurisdiction of the proceeding and the transfer of the property of the insolvent corporation is made pursuant to such plan. It is unnecessary that the transfer be a direct transfer from the insolvent corporation, it is sufficient if the transfer is an integral step in the consummation of the reoganization plan approved by the court. By its terms, the section has no application to a reorganization consummated by adjustment of the capital or debt structure of the insolvent corporation without the transfer of its assets to another corporation.

(4) As used in section 112 (b) (10) the term "reorganization" is not controlled by the definition of "reorganization" contained in section 112 (g) However, certain basic requirements, implicit in the statute, which are essential to a reorganization under section 112 (g) are likewise essential to qualify a transaction as a reorganization under section 112 (b) (10) Among these requirements are a continuity of the business enterprise under the modified corporate form and a continuity of interest therein on the part of those persons who were the owners of the enterprise prior to the reorganization. Thus, the nonrecognition accorded by section 112 (b) (10) applies only to a genuine reorganization as distinguished from a liquidation and sale of property to either new or old interests supplying new capital and discharging the obligations of the old corporation. For the purpose of determining whether the requisite continuity of interest exists, the interest of creditors who have, by appropriate legal steps, obtained effective command of the property of an insolvent corporation is considered as the equivalent of a proprietary interest But the mere possibility of a proprietary interest is not its equivalent. The determinative and controlling factors are the corporation's insolvency and the effective command by the creditors over its property. The term "insolvent" as used herein refers to insolvency at any time during the course of the proceeding referred to in section 112 (b) (10) either in the sense of excess of liabilities over assets or in the sense of inability to meet obligations as they mature.

(5) A short-term purchase money note is not a security within the meaning of section 112 (b) (10) and the transfer of the properties of the insolvent corporation for cash and deferred payment obligations of the transferee evidenced by short-term notes is a sale and not an exchange.

(b) Exchange for stock or securities and other property or money. (1) If an exchange would be within the provisions of section 112 (b) (10) if it were not for the fact that the consideration for the transfer of the property of the insolvent corporation consists not only of stock or securities but also of other property or money, then, as provided in section 112 (d) (1) if the other property or money received by the corporation is distributed by it pursuant to the plan of reorganization, no gain to the corporation will be recognized. Property is distributed within the meaning of this section if it is paid over or distributed to shareholders or creditors who have by appropriate legal steps obtained effective command of the property of the corporation. If the other property or money received by the corporation is not distributed by it pursuant to the plan of reorganization, the gain, if any, to the corporation from the exchange will be recognized, under the provisions of section 112 (d) (2) in an amount not in excess of the sum of money and the fair market value of the other property so received which is not distributed. In either case no loss from the exchange will be recognized (see section 112 (e))

(2) For the proper treatment of a transaction involving an assumption of liabilities under so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10) see section 112 (k)

§ 39.112 (b) (10)-2 Records to be kept and information to be filed. (a) Each corporation a party to a section 112 (b) (10) reorganization shall furnish a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss in connection with the exchange, including:

(1) A certified copy of the plan of reorganization approved by the court in the proceeding, together with a statement showing in full the purposes thereof and in detail all transactions incident, or pursuant, to the plan;

(2) A complete statement of the cost or other basis of all property, including all stock or securities, transferred incident to the plan;

(3) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received in the exchange, including a statement of all distributions or other disposition made thereof. The amount of each kind of stock or securities or other property shall be stated on the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange;

(4) A statement of the amount and nature of any liabilities assumed upon the exchange.

The information required by this section shall be filed as a part of the corporation's return for its taxable year within which the reorganization occurred.

(b) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every taxpayer who participates in a tax-free exchange in connection with a corporate reorganization showing the cost or other basis of the transferred property and the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received (including any liabilities assumed upon the exchange) in order to facilitate the determination of gain or loss from a subsequent disposition of such stock or securities and other property received from the exchange.

§ 39.112 (b) (11) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges solely in kind, distribution of stock not in liquidation.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(b) Exchanges solely in kind. * * *

(11) Distribution of stock not in liquidation. If there is distributed, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to a shareholder of a corporation which is a party to the reorganization, stock (other than preferred stock) in another corporation which is a party to the reorganization, without the surrender by such shareholder of stock, no gain to the distributee from the receipt of such stock shall be recognized unless it appears that (A) any corporation which is a party to such reorganization was not intended to continue the active conduct of a trade or business after such reorganization, or (B) the corporation whose stock is distributed was used principally as a device for the distribution of earnings and profits to the shareholders of any corporation a party to the reorganization.

§ 39.112 (b) (11)-1 Certain distributions of stock on reorganization. (a) If there is distributed, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to a shareholder of a corporation which is a party to the reorganization, stock (other than preferred stock) in another corporation which is a party to the reorganization, without the surrender by such shareholder of stock, no gain to such shareholder from the receipt of such stock shall be recognized, unless it appears that:

(1) Any corporation which is a party to such reorganization was not intended to continue the active conduct of a trade or business after such reorganization, or

(2) The corporation whose stock is distributed was used principally as a device for the distribution of earnings and profits to the shareholders of any corporation a party to the reorganization.

(b) For section 112 (b) (11) to be applicable, there must be a reorganization as defined in section 112 (g) (1) and a distribution to shareholders in pursuance of the plan of reorganization. Accordingly, for the purpose of section 112 (b) (11) there must be compliance with the rules prescribed in §§ 39.112 (a)-1, 39.112 (g)-1, and 39.112 (g)-2, relating to reorganizations and to exchanges and distributions. The distributions under section 112 (b) (11) must be of stock in a corporation which is a party to the reorganization, which stock was received in the reorganization.

(c) Section 112 (b) (11) involves cases in which one corporation, in a reorganization as defined in section 112 (g) (1) (D) transfers a part of its assets to another corporation in exchange for stock, and, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, distributes or causes to be distributed on its behalf to its shareholders, without the surrender by them of stock in the transferor corporation, stock (other than preferred stock) received in the reorganization. For limitations specially applicable under section 112 (b) (11) see § 39.112 (b) (11)-2. The distribution of preferred stock or other property received in the reorganization, or of other property of the transferor corporation, is not within the provisions of section 112 (b) (11)

§ 39.112 (b) (11)-2 Limitations upon the application of section 112, (b) (11) (a) The benefits of section 112 (b) (11) are limited to a reorganization in which all of the corporations, parties to the reorganization, are intended to continue the active conduct of a trade or business after the reorganization, and in which the corporation whose stock is distributed is not used principally as a device for the distribution of earnings and profits to shareholders of any corporation a party to the reorganization. The underlying assumption of section 112 (b) (11) and of the rules applicable to reorganizations is that the reorganization and distribution of stock must result in a continuation of the old business activities and in a continuation of the interests of the shareholders therein.

(b) A corporation shall be considered for the purpose of section 112 (b) (11) to be engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business after the reorganization only if it directly conducts such business or indirectly conducts the business through ownership of stock in another corporation actively conducting the business, which other corporation is a subsidiary (whether or not majority-owned) of the corporation, a party to the reorganization. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, a corporation is considered a subsidiary of another corporation if a majority of its voting stock is owned by the other corporation or if a part of its stock (whether or not a majority of its voting stock) is owned by the other corporation under such circumstances that the policies of the first corporation are directed by the second corporation. The assets, if any, of a corporation used directly in the conduct of a business and stock, if any, held by a corporation in a subsidiary actively conducting a business must constitute a substantial part of all of the assets of the corporation.

(c) Ordinarily, the business reasons (as distinguished from any desire to make a distribution of earnings and profits to the shareholders) which support the reorganization and the distribution of the stock will require the distribution of all of the stock received by the transferor corporation in the reorganization.

(d) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example 1. Corporation A owns and operates several mines and in addition owns 45 percent of the stock of Corporation X, 40 percent of the stock of Corporation Y, and 35 percent of the stock of Corporation Z. Corporation A is the largest single shareholder in each of these corporations, and directs their policies in such manner that these corporations are operated as subsidiaries of Corporation A. Corporations X, Y, and Z are each directly engaged in the active conduct of a trade or business. Corporation A transfers all its stock in Corporations X, Y, and Z to newly organized Corporation B in exchange for all of Corporation B's stock, which stock is distributed pro rata among the shareholders of Corporation A. Corporation B then directs the policies of these corporations in such manner that they are operated as subsidiaries of Corporation B. There are no other relevant facts. The distribution of the stock (other than preferred stock) in Corporation B to the shareholders of Corporation A is within the terms of section 112 (b) (11).

Example 2. Corporation C owns and operates a department store. It decides to provide parking facilities for the customers of the store. In order to provide such facilities, Corporation C enters into a contract to purchase land adjacent to its premises. The purchase price of the land is $100,000 and it is estimated that the cost of developing the parking lot will be $50,000. In order to separate the operations of the parking lot from those of the department store, Corporation C transfers to a newly formed Corporation D $90,000 in cash and $90,000 in bonds, together with the contract for the purchase of the land, in exchange for all the stock of Corporation D, which stock is distributed pro rata among the shareholders of Corporation C. The purchase of the land is completed on the date fixed in the contract, and the parking facilities are developed and operated by Corporation D. There are no other relevant facts. The transfer of the cash, bonds, and contract to Corporation D in exchange for its stock is a reorganization under section 112 (g) (1) and the distribution of stock (other than preferred stock) in Corporation D to the shareholders of Corporation C is within the terms of section 112 (b) (11).

Example 3. Corporation E is engaged in a manufacturing business. The assets of Corporation E include $300,000 in cash and $600,000 in bonds in addition to $450,000 in other assets used in the manufacturing business. Corporation E forms a new corporation, F, to which Corporation E transfers $200,000 in cash and the $600,000 in bonds in exchange for all the stock of Corporation F, which stock is distributed among the shareholders of Corporation E pro rata. At the time of the transaction, there is no clear and definite plan for the acquisition by Corporation F of specific business assets. There are no other relevant facts. The transfer of cash and bonds to Corporation F is not a reorganization under section 112 (g) (1) of the Code; therefore, the distribution of the stock of Corporation F is taxable as a dividend to the extent provided in section 115 (a).

§ 39.112 (c) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; gain from exchanges not solely in kind.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(c) Gain from exchanges not solely in kind. (1) If an exchange would be within the provisions of subsection (b) (1), (2), (3), or (5), or within the provisions of subsection (l), of this section if it were not for the fact that the property received in exchange consists not only of property permitted by such paragraph or by subsection (l) to be received without the recognition of gain, but also of other property or money, then the gain, if any, to the recipient shall be recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the sum of such money and the fair market value of such other property.

(2) If a distribution made in pursuance of a plan of reorganization is within the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection but has the effect of the distribution of a taxable dividend, then there shall be taxed as a dividend to each distributee such an amount of the gain recognized under paragraph (1) as is not in excess of his ratable share of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913. The remainder, if any, of the gain recognized under paragraph (1) shall be taxed as a gain from the exchange of property.

§ 31.112 (c)-1 Receipt of other property or money in tax-free exchange not connected with corporate reorganization. (a) If in any transaction in which property held for investment or productive use in trade or business is exchanged for property of like kind to be held either for productive use or for investment; or if common stock is exchanged for common stock, or preferred stock for preferred stock, in the same corporation and not in connection with a corporate reorganization; or if property is transferred by one or more persons to a corporation for its stock or securities, within the meaning of section 112 (b) (5) there is received by the taxpayer other property (in addition to property permitted to be received without recognition of gain) or money, then

(1) The gain, if any, to the taxpayer will be recognized in an amount not in excess of the sum of the money and the fair market value of the other property, but

(2) The loss, if any, to the taxpayer from such an exchange is not to be recognized to any extent (see section 112 (e)).

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who is not a dealer in real estate, in 1952 exchanges real estate, which he purchased (for investment) in 1940 for $5,000, for other real estate (to be held for productive use in trade or business) which has a fair market value of $6,000, and he receives in addition $2,000 in cash. The gain from the transaction is $3,000, but is recognized only to the extent of the cash received of $2,000.

(c) Consideration received in the form of an assumption of liabilities is to be treated as "other property or money" for the purposes of so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (b) (1) and (2) As to the proper treatment of such consideration for the purposes of so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (b) (3), see § 39.112 (g)-4, and so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (b) (5), see section 112 (k).

(d) See section 113 (a) (6) for the basis for determining the gain or loss from the subsequent sale of the property received in exchanges such as described in this section.

(e) As to the receipt of other property or money on an exchange of stock or securities in connection with a section 112 (g) reorganization, see § 39.112 (g)-4; or in connection with a section 112 (b) (10) reorganization, see § 39.112 (l)-1. As to distributions in pursuance of a plan of reorganization which have the effect of a taxable dividend, see § 39.112 (g)-4, in the case of a section 112 (g) reorganization, or § 39.112 (l)-1, in the case of a section 112 (b) (10) reorganization.

§ 39.112 (d)-(e) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; gain of corporation from exchanges not solely in kind, loss from exchanges not solely in kind.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(d) Same—gain of corporation. If an exchange would be within the provisions of subsection (b) (4) or (10) of this section if it were not for the fact that the property received in exchange consists not only of stock or securities permitted by such paragraph to be received without the recognition of gain, but also of other property or money, then—

(1) If the corporation receiving such other property or money distributes it in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, no gain to the corporation shall be recognized from the exchange, but

(2) If the corporation receiving such other property or money does not distribute it in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, the gain, if any, to the corporation shall be recognized, but in an amount not in excess of the sum of such money and the fair market value of such other property so received, which is not so distributed.

[Sec. 112 (d) as amended by sec. 121 (d) (2), Rev. Act 1943]

(e) Loss from exchanges not solely in kind. If an exchange would be within the provisions of subsection (b) (1) to (5), inclusive, or (10), or within the provisions of subsection (l), of this section if it were not for the fact that the property received in exchange consists not only of property permitted by such paragraph to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, but also of other property or money, then no loss from the exchange shall be recognized.

[Sec. 112 (e) as amended by sec. 121 (d) (3), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (e)-1 Nonrecognition of loss. (a) Section 112 (e) provides that in no event shall a loss be recognized from a tax-free exchange of property under section 112 (b) (1) to (5) inclusive, or section 112 (b) (10) notwithstanding the fact that there is received in the exchange other property or money in addition to property permitted to be received without recognition of gain or loss.

(b) As to the nonrecognition of loss upon an exchange described in so much of section 112 (e) as refers to section 112 (l) see § 39.112 (l)-1. As to the basis of the property received in such an exchange for the purpose of determining gain or loss from the subsequent sale thereof, see section 113 (a) (6) As to the nonrecognition of loss upon the receipt of property by one corporation in complete liquidation of another corporation under certain specifically described circumstances, see section 112 (b) (6)

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(f) Involuntary conversion. If property (as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, seizure, or requisition or condemnation or threat or imminence thereof) is compulsorily or involuntarily converted—

(1) Conversion into similar property. Into property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, no gain shall be recognized.

(2) Conversion into money where disposition occurred prior to 1951. * * * For the purposes of this paragraph and paragraph (3), the term "disposition of the converted property" means the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of the converted property, or the sale or exchange of such property under threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation.

(3) Conversion into money where disposition occurred after 1950. Into money or into property not similar or related in service or use to the converted property, and the disposition of the converted property (as defined in paragraph (2)) occurred after December 31, 1950, the gain (if any) shall be recognized except to the extent hereinafter provided in this paragraph:

(A) Nonrecognition of gain. If the taxpayer during the period specified in subparagraph (B), for the purpose of replacing the property so converted, purchases other property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or purchases stock in the acquisition of control of a corporation owning such other property, at the election of the taxpayer the gain shall be recognized only to the extent that the amount realized upon such conversion (regardless of whether such amount is received in one or more taxable years) exceeds the cost of such other property or such stock. Such election shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe. For the purposes of this paragraph—

(i) No property or stock acquired before the disposition of the converted property shall be considered to have been acquired for the purpose of replacing such converted property unless held by the taxpayer on the date of such disposition; and

(ii) The taxpayer shall be considered to have purchased property or stock only if, but for the provisions of section 113 (a) (9), the unadjusted basis of such property or stock would be its cost within the meaning of section 113 (a).

(B) Period within which property must be replaced. The period referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be the period beginning with the date of the disposition of the converted property, or the earliest date of the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation of the converted property, whichever is the earlier, and ending—

(i) One year after the close of the first taxable year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized, or

(ii) Subject to such terms and conditions as may be specified by the Secretary, at the close of such later date as the Secretary may designate upon application by the taxpayer. Such application shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe.

(C) Time for assessment of deficiency attributable to gain upon conversion. If a taxpayer has made the election provided in subparagraph (A), then (i) the statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency, for any taxable year in which any part of the gain upon such conversion is realized, attributable to such gain shall not expire prior to the expiration of three years from the date the Secretary is notified by the taxpayer (in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) of the replacement of the converted property or of an intention not to replace, and (ii) such deficiency may be assessed prior to the expiration of such three-year period notwithstanding the provisions of section 272 (f) or the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

(D) Time for assessment of other deficiencies attributable to election. If the election provided in subparagraph (A) is made by the taxpayer and such other property or such stock was purchased prior to the beginning of the last taxable year in which any part of the gain upon such conversion is realized, any deficiency, to the extent resulting from such election, for any taxable year ending before such last taxable year may be assessed (notwithstanding the provisions of section 272 (f) or 275 or the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment) at any time before the expiration of the period within which a deficiency for such last taxable year may be assessed.

This subsection shall not apply, in the case of property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence, if the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of the residence, or the sale or exchange of such residence under threat or imminence thereof, occurred after December 31, 1950.

[Sec. 112 (f) as amended by sec. 151 (d), (e), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 318 (b) (1), Rev. Act 1951; sec. 1, Pub. Law 251 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.112 (f)-1 Involuntary conversion where disposition of the converted property occurred after December 31, 1950—(a) In general. This section applies only with respect to involuntary conversions where the disposition of the converted property occurred after December 31, 1950. See §§ 29.112 (f)-1 and 29.112 (f)-2 of Regulations 111 (Part 29 of this chapter) for the rules applicable where the disposition of the converted property occurred before January 1, 1951. The term "disposition of the converted property" means the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of the converted property, or the sale or exchange of such property under threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation. This section applies only with respect to gains; losses from involuntary conversions are recognized or not recognized without regard to this section. This section shall not apply in the case of an involuntary conversion of property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence; see § 39.112 (n)-1. In the case of property used by the taxpayer partially as a principal residence and partially for other purposes, proper allocation shall be made and this section shall apply only with respect to the involuntary conversion of the portion used for such other purposes.

(b) Conversion into similar property. If property (as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, seizure, or requisition or condemnation or threat or imminence thereof) is compulsorily or involuntarily converted only into property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, no gain shall be recognized. Such nonrecognition of gain is mandatory. If the conversion is, in whole or in part, into money or property not similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, see paragraph (c) of this section.

(c) Conversion into money or into dissimilar property. (1) If property (as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, seizure, or requisition or condemnation or threat or imminence thereof) is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into money or into property not similar or related in service or use to the converted property, the gain, if any, shall be recognized, at the election of the taxpayer, only to the extent that the amount realized upon such conversion exceeds the cost of other property purchased by the taxpayer which is similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or the cost of stock of a corporation owning such other property which is purchased by the taxpayer in the acquisition of control of such corporation, if the taxpayer purchased such other property, or such stock, for the purpose of replacing the property so converted and during the period specified in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph.

(2) All of the details in connection with an involuntary conversion of property at a gain (including those relating to the replacement of the converted property, or a decision not to replace, or the expiration of the period for replacement) shall be reported in the return for the taxable year or years in which any of such gain is realized. An election to have such gain recognized only to the extent provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph shall be made by including such gain in gross income for such year or years only to such extent. If, at the time of filing such a return, the period within which the converted property must be replaced has expired, or if such an election is not desired, the gain should be included in gross income for such year or years in the regular manner. A failure to so include such gain in gross income in the regular manner shall be deemed to be an election by the taxpayer to have such gain recognized only to the extent provided in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph even though the details in connection with the conversion are not reported in such return. If, after having made an election under section 112 (f) (3) the converted property is not replaced within the required period of time, or replacement is made at a cost lower than was anticipated at the time of the election, or a decision is made not to replace, the tax liability for the year or years for which the election was made shall be recomputed. Such recomputation should be in the form of an "amended return" If a decision is made to make an election under section 112 (f) (3) after the filing of the return and the payment of the tax for the year or years in which any of the gain on an involuntary conversion is realized and before the expiration of the period within which the converted property must be replaced, a claim for credit or refund for such year or years should be filed. If the replacement of the converted property occurs in a year or years in which none of the gain on the conversion is realized, all of the details in connection with such replacement shall be reported in the return for such year or years.

(3) The period referred to in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph is the period of time commencing with the date of the disposition of the converted property, or the date of the beginning of the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation of the converted property, whichever is earlier, and ending one year after the close of the first taxable year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized, or at the close of such later date as may be designated pursuant to an application of the taxpayer. Such application shall be made prior to the expiration of the one year after the close of the first taxable year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized. Such application shall be made to the Commissioner, or to such person as he may designate, and shall contain all of the details in connection with the involuntary conversion. No extension of time shall be granted pursuant to such an application unless the taxpayer executes a bond, with such surety as the Commissioner may require, in an amount not in excess of twice the estimated additional income taxes (including interest, penalties, and additions to the tax) which would be payable if an election were not made under this section, and conditioned upon the replacement of the converted property within the extended period of time (including any subsequent extensions granted by the Commissioner or such person as he may designate) or the payment of the additional tax attributable to the gain on the conversion (including interest, penalties, and additions to the tax). Only surety companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury as acceptable sureties on Federal bonds will be approved as sureties. See 6 U. S. C. 15 with respect to the depositing of bonds or notes of the United States in lieu of sureties.

(4) Property or stock purchased before the disposition of the converted property shall be considered to have been purchased for the purpose of replacing the converted property only if such property or stock is held by the taxpayer on the date of the disposition of the converted property. Property or stock shall be considered to have been purchased only if, but for the provisions of section 113 (a) (9) the unadjusted basis of such property or stock would be its cost to the taxpayer within the meaning of section 113 (a) If the taxpayer's unadjusted basis of the replacement property would be determined, in the absence of section 113 (a) (9) under any of the other numbered paragraphs of section 113 (a), the unadjusted basis of the property would not be its cost within the meaning of section 113 (a) For example, if property similar or related in service or use to the converted property is acquired by gift and its basis is determined under section 113 (a) (2), such property will not qualify as a replacement for the converted property.

(5) If a taxpayer makes an election under section 112 (f) (3), any deficiency, for any taxable year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized, which is attributable to such gain may be assessed at any time before the expiration of three years from the date the district director of internal revenue with whom the return for such year has been filed is notified by the taxpayer of the replacement of the converted property or of an intention not to replace, or of a failure to replace, within the required period, notwithstanding the provisions of section 272 (f) or the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment. If replacement has been made, such notification shall contain all of the details in connection with such replacement. Such notification should be made in the return for the taxable year or years in which the replacement occurs, or the intention not to replace is formed, or the period for replacement expires, if this return is filed with such district director of internal revenue. If this return is not filed with such district director, then such notification shall be made to such district director at the time of filing this return. If the taxpayer so desires, he may, in either event, also notify such district director before the filing of such return.

(6) If a taxpayer makes an election under section 112 (f) (3) and the replacement property or stock was purchased before the beginning of the last taxable year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized, any deficiency, for any taxable year ending before such last taxable year, which is attributable to such election may be assessed at any time before the expiration of the period within which a deficiency for such last taxable year may be assessed, notwithstanding the provisions of section 272 (f) or 275 or the provisions of any law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

(7) If the taxpayer makes an election under section 112 (f) (3) the gain upon the conversion shall be recognized to the extent that the amount realized upon such conversion exceeds the cost of the replacement property or stock regardless of whether such amount is realized in one or more taxable years.

(8) The proceeds of a use and occupancy insurance contract, which by its terms insured against actual loss sustained of net profits in the business, are not proceeds of an involuntary conversion but are income in the same manner that the profits for which they are substituted would have been.

(9) There is no investment in property similar in character and devoted to a similar use if:

(i) The proceeds of unimproved real estate, taken upon condemnation proceedings, are invested in improved real estate.

(ii) The proceeds of conversion of real property are applied in reduction of indebtedness previously incurred in the purchase of a leasehold.

(iii) The owner of a requisitioned tug uses the proceeds to buy barges.

(10) If, in a condemnation proceeding the Government retains out of the award sufficient funds to satisfy special assessments levied against the remaining portion of the plot or parcel of real estate affected for benefits accruing in connection with the condemnation, the amount so retained shall be deducted from the gross award in determining the amount of the net award.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(g) Definition of reorganization. As used in this section (other than subsection (b) (10) and subsection (l) and in section 113 (other than subsection (a) (22))—

(1) The term "reorganization" means (A) a statutory merger or consolidation, or (B) the acquisition by one corporation, in exchange solely for all or a part of its voting stock, of at least 80 per centum of the voting stock and at least 80 per centum of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of another corporation, or (C) the acquisition by one corporation, in exchange solely for all or a part of its voting stock, of substantially all the properties of another corporation, but in determining whether the exchange is solely for voting stock the assumption by the acquiring corporation of a liability of the other, or the fact that property acquired is subject to a liability, shall be disregarded, or (D) a transfer by a corporation of all or a part of its assets to another corporation if immediately after the transfer the transferor or its shareholders or both are in control of the corporation to which the assets are transferred, or (E) a recapitalization, or (F) a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization, however effected.

(2) The term "a party to a reorganization" includes a corporation resulting from a reorganization and includes both corporations in the case of a reorganization resulting from the acquisition by one corporation of stock or properties of another.

[Sec. 112 (g) as amended by sec. 213 (b), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 121 (d) (4), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (g)-1 Purpose and scope of exception of reorganization exchanges—(a) Reorganizations. As used in the regulations under section 112 (g) the terms "reorganization" and "party to a reorganization" mean only a reorganization or a party to a reorganization as defined in such section. With respect to section 112 (b) (10) reorganizations, see § 39.112 (b) (10)-1.

(b) Purpose. Under the general rule, upon the exchange of property, gain or loss must be accounted for if the new property differs in a material particular, either in kind or in extent, from the old property. The purpose of the reorganization provisions of the Internal Revenue Code is to except from the general rule certain specifically described exchanges incident to such readjustments of corporate structures, made in one of the particular ways specified in the Code, as are required by business exigencies, and which effect only a readjustment of continuing interests in property under modified corporate forms. Requisite to a reorganization under the Code are a continuity of the business enterprise under the modified corporate form, and a continuity of interest therein on the part of those persons who were the owners of the enterprise prior to the reorganization. The Code recognizes as a reorganization the change (made in a specified way) from a business enterprise conducted by a single corporation to the same business enterprise conducted by a parent and a subsidiary corporation, but not the creation of a temporary subsidiary as a device for the making of an ordinary dividend. The Code recognizes as a reorganization the amalgamation (occurring in a specified way) of two corporate enterprises under a single corporate structure if there exists among the holders of the stock and securities of either of the old corporations the requisite continuity of interest in the new corporation, but there is not a reorganization if the holders of the stock and securities of the old corporation are merely the holders of short-term notes in the new corporation. In order to exclude transactions not intended to be included, the specifications of the reorganization provisions of the law are precise. Both the terms of the specifications and their underlying assumptions and purposes must be satisfied in order to entitle the taxpayer to the benefit of the exception from the general rule. Accordingly, under the Code, a short-term purchase money note is not a security of a party to a reorganization, an ordinary dividend is to be treated as an ordinary dividend, and a sale is nevertheless to be treated as a sale, even though the mechanics of a reorganization have been set up.

(c) Scope. The nonrecognition of gain or loss is prescribed for two specifically described types of exchanges, viz: The exchange that is provided for in section 112 (b) (3) in which stock or securities in a corporation a party to the reorganization are, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, exchanged for the stock or securities in a corporation a party to the same reorganization; and the exchange that is provided for in section 112 (b) (4) in which a corporation a party to the reorganization exchanges property, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, for stock or securities in another corporation a party to the same reorganization. Section 112 (g) limits the definition of the term "reorganization" to six kinds of transactions and excludes all others. From its context, the term "a party to a reorganization" can only mean a party to a transaction specifically defined as a reorganization by section 112 (g) Certain rules respecting boot received in either of the two types of exchanges provided for in section 112 (b) (3) and (4) are prescribed in sections 112 (c) and 112 (d) Under section 112 (i) a limitation is placed on all these provisions by providing that except under specified conditions foreign corporations shall not be deemed within their scope. The provisions of the Internal Revenue Code referred to in this paragraph are inapplicable unless there is a plan of reorganization. A plan of reorganization must contemplate the bona fide execution of one of the transactions specifically described as a reorganization in section 112 (g) and for the bona fide consummation of each of the requisite acts under which nonrecognition of gain is claimed. Such transaction and such acts must be an ordinary and necessary incident of the conduct of the enterprise and must provide for a continuation of the enterprise. The nonrecognition of gain or loss is also prescribed with respect to the distribution in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to a shareholder of a corporation which is a party to the reorganization, of stock (other than preferred stock) in another corporation which is a party to the reorganization, where such shareholder does not surrender any stock. See section 112 (b) (11) and the regulations thereunder. A scheme which involves an abrupt departure from normal reorganization procedure, devised and adopted with reference to a transaction on which the imposition of the tax is imminent, is not a plan of reorganization.

§ 39.112 (g)-2 Definition of terms. (a) The application of the term "reorganization" is to be strictly limited to the specific transaction set forth in section 112 (g) (1) The term does not embrace the mere purchase by one corporation of the properties of another corporation, for it imports a continuity of interest on the part of the transferor or its stockholders in the properties transferred. If the properties are transferred for cash and deferred payment obligations of the transferee evidenced by short-term notes, the transaction is a sale and not an exchange.

(b) The words "statutory merger or consolidation" refer to a merger or a consolidation effected in pursuance of the corporation laws of the United States or a State or Territory or the District of Columbia.

(c) In order to qualify as a "reorganization" under section 112 (g) (1) (B), the acquisition by the acquiring corporation of the required amount of the stock of the other corporation must be in exchange solely for all or a part of the voting stock of the acquiring corporation. If, for example, Corporation X exchanges nonvoting preferred stock or bonds in addition to all or a part of its voting stock in the acquisition of the required amount of stock of Corporation Y, the transaction is not a "reorganization" under section 112 (g) (1) (B)

(d) The same requirements obtain in the case of section 112 (g) (1) (C), relative to the acquisition by one corporation of substantially all the properties of another corporation, except that for the purpose of determining whether the exchange is solely for voting stock of the acquiring corporation any assumption by the acquiring corporation of liabilities of the other shall be disregarded. Though such an assumption does not prevent an exchange from being solely for voting stock for the purposes of the definition of a reorganization contained in section 112 (g) (1) (C), it may in some cases, however, so alter the character of the transaction as to place the transaction outside the purposes and assumptions of the reorganization provisions. Section 112 (g) (1) (C) does not prevent consideration of the effect of an assumption of liabilities on the general character of the transaction but merely provides that the requirement that the exchange be solely for voting stock is satisfied if the only additional consideration is an assumption of liabilities.

(e) A "recapitalization," and therefore a reorganization, takes place if, for example:

(1) A corporation with $200,000 par value of bonds outstanding, instead of paying them off in cash, discharges them by issuing preferred shares to the bondholders;

(2) There is surrendered to a corporation for cancellation 25 percent of its preferred stock in exchange for no par value common stock;

(3) A corporation issues preferred stock, previously authorized but unissued, for outstanding common stock; or

(4) An exchange is made of a corporation's outstanding preferred stock, having certain priorities with reference to the amount and time of payment of dividends and the distribution of the corporate assets upon liquidation, for a new issue of such corporation's common stock having no such rights.

(f) The term "a party to a reorganization" includes, in addition to a corporation which performs the specific act constituting the reorganization as described and defined in section 112 (g) (1) only a corporation specified in section 112 (g) (2) Both corporations are parties to the reorganization if under statutory authority Corporation A is merged into Corporation B; and all three of the corporations are parties to the reorganization if, pursuant to statutory authority, Corporations C and D are consolidated into Corporation E. Both corporations are parties to the reorganization if it consists of the transfer by Corporations F and G of part of the assets of Corporation F in exchange for all of the capital stock of Corporation G. Only Corporations H and J are parties to the reorganization if it consists of the acquisition by Corporation H in exchange solely for all or a part of its voting stock of at least 80 percent of the voting stock and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classses of stock of Corporation J, even though such acquisition by Corporation H is from Corporation K.

(g) The term "plan of reorganization" has reference to a consummated transaction specifically defined as a reorganization under section 112 (g) (1) The term is not to be construed as broadening the definition of "reorganization" as set forth in section 112 (g) (1) but is to be taken as limiting the nonrecognition of gain or loss to such exchanges or distributions as are directly a part of the transaction specifically described as a reorganization in section 112 (g) (1) Moreover, the transaction, or series of transactions, embraced in a plan of reorganization must not only come within the specific language of section 112 (g) (1) but the readjustments involved in the exchanges or distributions effected in the consummation thereof must be undertaken for reasons germane to the continuance of the business of a corporation a party to the reorganization. Section 112 (g) (1) contemplates genuine corporate reorganizations which are designed to effect a readjustment of continuing interests under modified corporate forms.

(h) As used in section 112, as well as in other provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, if the context so requires, the conjunction "or" denotes both the conjunctive and the disjunctive, and the singular includes the plural. For example, the provisions of the statute are complied with if "stock and securities" are received in exchange as well as if "stock or securities" are received.

§ 39.112 (g)–3 Exchanges solely of stock or securities, or property, solely for stock or securities, in pursuance of plan of reorganization. No taxable income is received, nor is a deductible loss sustained, if the shareholders in a corporation a party to the following reorganization transactions exchange stock or securities solely for stock or securities of the same corporation, or of another corporation mentioned, or if one of such corporations transfers property to another of the corporations solely for stock or securities of such other corporation, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization:

(a) The merger of Corporation A, in accordance with statutory authority, into Corporation B;

(b) The consolidation, pursuant to statutory authority, of Corporations C and D into Corporation E, a new corporation;

(c) The acquisition by Corporation F, in exchange solely for all or a part of its voting stock, of at least 80 percent of the voting stock and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of the stock of Corporation G;

(d) The acquisition by Corporation H, in exchange solely for all or a part of its voting stock (disregarding any assumption of liabilities, as prescribed in § 39.112 (g)–2) of substantially all the properties of Corporation I;

(e) The transfer by Corporation J of all or a part of its assets to Corporation K, if immediately after the transfer Corporation J or its stockholders, or both, are in control of Corporation K ("control" for the purpose of this transaction being defined in section 112 (h) as the ownership by Corporation J or its stockholders, or both, of the stock of Corporation K to the extent of at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes thereof) or

(f) The exchange of stock or securities solely for stock or securities of the same corporation in the case of (1) a recapitalization of a corporation, or (2) a mere change in the identity, form, or place of organization of a corporation, however effected.

§ 39.112 (g)–4 Exchanges in reorganization for stock or securities and other property or money. (a) If in an exchange of stock or securities in a corporation a party to a reorganization, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, for stock or securities in the same corporation or in another corporation a party to the reorganization, there is received by the taxpayer other property (not permitted to be received without the recognition of gain) or money, then

(1) As provided in section 112 (c) (1), the gain, if any, to the taxpayer will be recognized in an amount not in excess of the sum of money and the fair market value of the other property, but

(2) The loss, if any, to the taxpayer from such an exchange is not to be recognized to any extent (see section 112 (e)).

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, in connection with a reorganization, in 1952, exchanges a share of stock in the X Corporation purchased in 1929 at a cost of $100 for a share of stock of the Y Corporation (a party to the reorganization), which has a fair market value of $90, plus $20 in cash. The gain from the transaction is $10 and is recognized and taxed as a gain from the exchange of property. But see section 117. However, if the share of stock received had a fair market value of $70, the loss from the transaction of $10 would not be recognized.

(c) If the distribution of such other property or money by or on behalf of a corporation in the course of a reorganization has the effect of the distribution of a taxable dividend, then, as provided in section 112 (c) (2), there shall be taxed to each distributee (1) as a dividend, such an amount of the gain recognized on the exchange as is not in excess of the distributee's ratable share of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, and (2) as a gain from the exchange of property, the remainder of the gain so recognized.

(d) The application of paragraph (c) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation has a capital of $100,000 and earnings and profits of $50,000 accumulated since February 28, 1913. The X Corporation in 1952 transfers all of its assets to the Y Corporation in exchange for the issuance of all of the stock of the Y Corporation and the payment of $50,000 in cash to the stockholders of the X Corporation. A, who owns one share of stock in the X Corporation, for which he in 1940 paid $100, receives a share of stock in the Y Corporation worth $100 and the sum of $50 in cash in addition. A gain of $50 is recognized to A.

(e) If, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, property is exchanged by a corporation a party to the reorganization for stock or securities in another corporation a party to the reorganization and other property or money, then, as provided in section 112 (d) (1) if the other property or money received by the corporation is distributed by it pursuant to the plan of reorganization, no gain to the corporation will be recognized. If the other property or money received by the corporation is not distributed by it pursuant to the plan of reorganization, the gain, if any, to the corporation from the exchange will be recognized, under the provisions of section 112 (d) (2) in an amount not in excess of the sum of money and the fair market value of the other property so received which is not distributed. In either case no loss from the exchange will be recognized (see section 112 (e))

(f) Consideration received in the form of an assumption of liabilities is to be treated as "other property or money" for the purposes of so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (b) (3) For the proper treatment of an assumption of liabilities under section 112 (d) and so much of section 112 (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (4), see section 112 (k)

§ 39.112 (g)–5 Receipt of stock or securities in reorganization without surrender of stock by shareholder. Any distribution, though in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to its shareholders without the surrender of their stock, by or on behalf of a corporation a party to a reorganization, of its stock or securities (other than its own stock, which is not taxable as a dividend under section 115 (f)) or of stock or securities of another corporation a party to the reorganization, shall be taxed to such shareholders as a dividend, within the meaning of section 115, to the extent that the fair market value of such stock or securities at the date of the distribution is not in excess of (a) the earnings or profits of the corporation of the taxable year computed without regard to prior years and (b) the earnings or profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, and prior to the taxable year. Any remainder of such fair market value of the stock or securities distributed over the amount of such earnings or profits shall be applied against and used to reduce the basis provided in section 113 of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made; and if in excess of such basis, such excess shall be taxable in the same manner as a gain from the sale or exchange of property See § 39.111-1. See § 39.112 (b) (11)-1 with respect to the distribution to a shareholder, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization of stock (other than preferred stock) in another corporation which is a party to the reorganization, without the surrender by such shareholder of stock.

§ 39.112 (g)-6 Records to be kept and information to be filed with returns. (a) The plan of reorganization must be adopted by each of the corporations parties thereto; and the adoption must be shown by the acts of its duly constituted responsible officers, and appear upon the official records of the corporation. Each corporation a party to a reorganization shall file as a part of its return for its taxable year within which the reorganization occurred a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss in connection with the reorganization, including:

(1) A certified copy of the plan of reorganization, together with a statement under oath showing in full the purposes thereof and in detail all transactions incident to, or pursuant to, the plan.

(2) A complete statement of the cost or other basis of all property, including all stock or securities, transferred incident to the plan.

(3) A statement of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received from the exchange, including a statement of all distributions or other disposition made thereof. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property received shall be stated on the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange.

(4) A statement of the amount and nature of any liabilities assumed upon the exchange.

(b) Every taxpayer, other than a corporation a party to the reorganization, who receives stock or securities and other property or money upon a tax-free exchange in connection with a corporate reorganization shall incorporate in his income tax return for the taxable year in which the exchange takes place a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange, including:

(1) A statement of the cost or other basis of the stock or securities transferred in the exchange, and

(2) A statement in full of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received from the exchange, including any liabilities assumed upon the exchange. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property (other than liabilities assumed upon the exchange) received shall be set forth upon the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange.

(c) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every taxpayer who participates in a tax-free exchange in connection with a corporate reorganization showing the cost or other basis of the transferred property and the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received (including any liabilities assumed upon the exchange) in order to facilitate the determination of gain or loss from a subsequent disposition of such stock or securities and other property received from the exchange.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(h) Definition of Control. As used in this section the term "control" means the ownership of stock possessing at least 80 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 per centum of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of the corporation.

§ 39.112 (h)-1 Control of corporation. Section 112 (h) defines the term "control" in reference to the phrase "control of the corporation," as used in section 112 (b) (5) and section 112 (g) (1) It is provided specifically that this definition is limited to the meaning of the term "control" as that term is used in section 112.

§ 39.112 (i) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges involving foreign corporations.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(i) Foreign corporations. In determining the extent to which gain shall be recognized in the case of any of the exchanges described in subsection (b) (3), (4), (5), or (6), or described in so much of subsection (c) as refers to subsection (b) (3) or (5), or described in subsection (d), a foreign corporation shall not be considered as a corporation unless, prior to such exchange, it has been established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such exchange is not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

§ 39.112 (i)-1 Reorganization with, or transfer of property to or from, a foreign corporation. (a) A foreign corporation will not be considered a corporation to or from which a tax-free transfer of property for stock or securities may be made, or a corporation a party to a reorganization with which a tax-free reorganization exchange may be made, or a corporation a party to or from which a tax-free liquidation distribution may be made, unless, prior to the transfer, exchange, or liquidation, it has been established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such transfer, exchange, or liquidation is not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes, including the excess-profits tax imposed by subchapter D of chapter 1 of the Code.

(b) Whether any of the exchanges or distributions referred to in section 112 (i) involving a foreign corporation, is in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income or excess-profits taxes, is a question to be determined from the facts and circumstances of each particular case. In any such case if a taxpayer desires to establish that the exchange or distribution is not in pursuance of such a plan, a statement under oath of the facts relating to the plan under which the exchange or distribution is to be made, together with a copy of the plan, shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Washington 25, D. C., for a ruling. A letter setting forth the Commissioner's determination will be mailed to the taxpayer. If the Commissioner determines that the exchange or distribution is not in pursuance of a plan having as one of its principal purposes the avoidance of Federal income or excess-profits taxes, the taxpayer should retain a copy of the Commissioner's letter as authority for treating the foreign corporation as a corporation in determining the extent to which gain is recognized from the exchange or distribution. If the reorganization or the transfer is not carried out in accordance with the plan submitted, the Commissioner's approval will not render the transaction tax free.

§ 39.112 (j)-(k) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; cross reference; assumption of liability.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(j) Installment obligations. For nonrecognition of gain or loss in the case of installment obligations, see section 44 (d).

(k) Assumption of liability not recognized. Where upon an exchange the taxpayer receives as part of the consideration property which would be permitted by subsection (b) (4), (5), or (10) of this section to be received without the recognition of gain if it were the sole consideration, and as part of the consideration another party to the exchange assumes a liability of the taxpayer or acquires from the taxpayer property subject to a liability, such assumption or acquisition shall not be considered as "other property or money" received by the taxpayer within the meaning of subsection (c), (d), or (e) of this section and shall not prevent the exchange from being within the provisions of subsection (b) (4), (5), or (10); except that if, taking into consideration the nature of the liability and the circumstances in the light of which the arrangement for the assumption or acquisition was made, it appears that the principal purpose of the taxpayer with respect to the assumption or acquisition was a purpose to avoid Federal income tax on the exchange, or, if not such purpose, was not a bona fide business purpose, such assumption or acquisition (in the amount of the liability) shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered as money received by the taxpayer upon the exchange. In any suit or proceeding where the burden is on the taxpayer to prove that such assumption or acquisition is not to be considered as money received by the taxpayer, such burden shall not be considered as sustained unless the taxpayer sustains such burden by the clear preponderance of the evidence.

[Sec. 112 (k) as added by sec. 213 (a), Rev. Act 1939; amended by sec. 121 (d) (5), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (k)-1 Assumption of liabilities not to be taken into account for purpose of recognizing gain or loss—(a) General rule. Section 112 (k) does not affect the rule that liabilities assumed are to be taken into account for the purpose of computing the amount of gain or loss realized under section 111 upon an exchange. Section 112 (k) provides, subject to the exceptions and limitations specified in paragraph (c) of this section, that—

(1) Liabilities assumed are not to be treated as "other property or money" under section 112 (e) or for the purpose of determining the amount of the realized gain which is to be recognized under section 112 (c) or (d), if the transactions would, but for the receipt of "other property or money," have been exchanges of the type described in section 112 (b) (4) (5) or (10); and

(2) If the only type of consideration received by the transferor in addition to that permitted to be received by section 112 (b) (4) (5) or (10) consists of an assumption of liabilities, the transaction, if otherwise qualified, shall be deemed to be within the provisions of section 112 (b) (4) (5) or (10).

(b) Application of general rule. The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, an individual, transfers to a controlled corporation property with an adjusted basis of $10,000 in exchange for stock of the corporation with a fair market value of $8,000, cash in the amount of $3,000, and the assumption by the corporation of indebtedness of A amounting to $4,000. A's gain is $5,000, computed as follows:

Stock received	$8,000
Cash received	3,000
Liabilities assumed by transferee	4,000
Total consideration received	15,000
Less: Adjusted basis of property transferred	10,000
Gain realized	5,000

Assuming that the transaction falls within section 112 (c) as a transaction which would have been within section 112 (b) (5) but for the receipt of "other property or money," only so much of such $5,000 gain will be recognized as does not exceed the "other property or money" received. Since section 112 (k) provides that an assumption of liabilities shall not constitute "other property or money" for this purpose, the only "other property or money" received is the $3,000 cash, and the $5,000 realized gain will be recognized only to the extent of $3,000.

(c) Exceptions and limitations. The benefits of section 112 (k) do not extend to any exchange involving an assumption of liabilities where it appears that the principal purpose of the taxpayer with respect to such assumption was a purpose to avoid Federal income tax on the exchange, or, if not such purpose, was not a bona fide business purpose. In such cases, the amount of the liabilities assumed shall, for the purpose of determining the amount of gain to be recognized upon the exchange in which the liabilities are assumed, be treated as money received by the taxpayer upon the exchange. In any suit or proceeding where the burden is on the taxpayer to prove that an assumption of liabilities is not to be treated as "other property or money" under section 112 (k) which is the case if the Commissioner determines that the taxpayer's purpose with respect thereto was a purpose to avoid Federal income tax on the exchange or was not a bona fide business purpose and the taxpayer contests such determination by litigation, the taxpayer must sustain such burden by the clear preponderance of the evidence. Thus, the taxpayer must prove his case by such a clear preponderance of all the evidence that the absence of a purpose to avoid Federal income tax on the exchange, or the presence of a bona fide business purpose, is unmistakable.

§ 39.112 (l) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; exchanges by security holders in connection with certain corporate reorganizations.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * * (l) Exchanges by security holders in connection with certain corporate reorganizations—(1) General rule. No gain or loss shall be recognized upon an exchange consisting of the relinquishment or extinguishment of stock or securities in a corporation the plan of reorganization of which is approved by the court in a proceeding described in subsection (b) (10), in consideration of the acquisition solely of stock or securities in a corporation organized or made use of to effectuate such plan of reorganization.

[Sec. 112 (l) as added by sec. 121 (b), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (l)-1 Exchange in connection with reorganization of insolvent corporation—(a) In general. (1) Section 112 (l) and so much of section 112 (c) and (e) as relates to section 112 (l) prescribe the rules relative to the recognition of gain or loss upon certain exchanges made by the holders of stock or securities of an insolvent corporation in connection with a reorganization described in section 112 (b) (10) or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10). Under section 112 (l) no gain or loss shall be recognized if, pursuant to the plan of reorganization, stock or securities in the insolvent corporation are exchanged solely for stock or securities in the corporation organized or made use of to effectuate such plan. If, in addition to such stock or securities, other property or money is received upon such exchange, gain is recognized to the extent of such other property or money (section 112 (c)), but no loss is recognized (section 112 (e)). As to the basis of the stock or securities or other property acquired upon an exchange under section 112 (l), see section 113 (a) (6)

(2) By thus characterizing as an exchange, and regarding as a single taxable event, the event or series of events resulting in the relinquishment or extinguishment of the stock or securities in the old corporation and the acquisition in consideration thereof, in whole or in part, of stock or securities in the new corporation, the Internal Revenue Code secures uniformity of treatment for the participating security holders, regardless of the particular steps or the procedural devices by which such exchange is effected. Thus, the transaction which qualifies as a reorganization under section 112 (b) (10) may take one of several forms. In a typical creditors' reorganization there may be a transfer of the property of the old corporation to its bondholders, or the bondholders' committee, upon surrender of the bonds, followed by the transfer of such property to the new corporation in consideration of stock in the latter; or there may be a transfer of the bonds to the new corporation in exchange for its stock or securities, followed by the transfer of the property of the old corporation in consideration of the surrender of its bonds. In either event, section 112 (l) treats the result to the participating security holders as an exchange of the securities of the old corporation for securities of the new corporation. In order, however, to qualify as an exchange under section 112 (l) or so much of section 112 (c) or (e) as relates to section 112 (l) the various events resulting in the relinquishment or extinguishment of the old securities and the acquisition of the new securities must be embraced within the plan of reorganization and must be undertaken for reasons germane to the plan. If the event, or series of events, qualifies as an exchange under section 112 (l) or so much of section 112 (c) or (e) as relates to section 112 (l), no antecedent event necessarily a component of the relinquishment or extinguishment of the securities of the old corporation in consideration of the acquisition of the securities of the new corporation shall be considered a transaction or event having consequences for income or excess profits tax purposes.

(b) Exchange solely for stock or securities. Section 112 (l) provides that no gain or loss shall be recognized upon an exchange consisting of the relinquishment or extinguishment of stock or securities in an insolvent corporation described in section 112 (b) (10) or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10) in consideration of the acquisition solely of stock or securities in a corporation organized or made use of to effectuate the plan of reorganization. As used in section 112 (l) and this section the term security does not include a short-term note.

(c) Exchanges for stock or securities and other property or money. (1) If an exchange would be within section 112 (l) if it were not for the fact that the property received in the exchange consists not only of stock or securities in the corporation organized or made use of to effectuate the plan of reorganization, but also of other property or money, then

(i) As provided in section 112 (c) (1), the gain, if any, to the taxpayer will be recognized in an amount not in excess of the sum of money and the fair market value of the other property but

(ii) The loss, if any to the taxpayer from such an exchange is not to be recognized to any extent (see section 112 (e))

(2) If the distribution of such other property or money by or on behalf of a corporation in the course of a reorganization described in section 112 (b) (10) has the effect of the distribution of a taxable dividend, then, as provided in section 112 (c) (2), there shall be taxed to each distributee (i) as a dividend, such amount of the gain recognized on the exchange as is not in excess of the distributee's ratable share of the undistributed earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913, and (ii) as a gain from the exchange of property the remainder of the gain so recognized.

(3) Consideration received in the form of an assumption of liabilities is to be treated as "other property or money" for the purposes of so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (l)

§ 39.112 (l)-2 Records to be kept and information to be filed. (a) Every taxpayer who receives stock or securities and other property or money upon an exchange described in section 112 (l) or so much of section 112 (c) or (e) as relates thereto, in connection with a corporate reorganization, shall furnish a complete statement of all facts pertinent to the recognition or nonrecognition of gain or loss upon such exchange, including—

(1) A statement of the cost or other basis of the stock or securities transferred in the exchange, and

(2) A statement in full of the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received from the exchange, including any liability assumed upon the exchange. The amount of each kind of stock or securities and other property (other than liabilities assumed upon the exchange) received shall be set forth upon the basis of the fair market value thereof at the date of the exchange.

The statement shall be incorporated in the taxpayer's income tax return for the taxable year in which the exchange occurs.

(b) Permanent records in substantial form shall be kept by every taxpayer who participates in an exchange described in section 112 (l) or so much of section 112 (c) or (e) as relates thereto, showing the cost or other basis of the transferred property and the amount of stock or securities and other property or money received (including any liabilities assumed upon the exchange) in order to facilitate the determination of gain or loss from a subsequent disposition of such stock or securities and other property received from the exchange.

§ 39.112 (m) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; gain from sale or exchange to effectuate policies of Federal Communications Commission.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * * (m) Gain from sale or exchange to effectuate policies of Federal Communications Commission. If the sale or exchange of property (including stock in a corporation) is certified by the Federal Communications Commission to be necessary or appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Commission with respect to the ownership and control of radio broadcasting stations, such sale or exchange shall, if the taxpayer so elects, be treated as an involuntary conversion of such property within the meaning of subsection (f) of this section. For the purposes of subsection (f) of this section as made applicable by the provisions of this subsection, stock of a corporation operating a radio broadcasting station, whether or not representing control of such corporation, shall be treated as property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted. The part of the gain, if any, upon such sale or exchange to which subsection (f) of this section is not applied shall nevertheless not be recognized, if the taxpayer so elects, to the extent that it is applied to reduce the basis for determining gain or loss upon sale or exchange of property, of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l), remaining in the hands of the taxpayer immediately after the sale or exchange, or acquired in the same taxable year. The manner and amount of such reduction shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary. Any election made by the taxpayer under this subsection shall be made by a statement to that effect in his return for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange takes place (or, with respect to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1944 * * *) and such election shall be binding for the taxable year and all subsequent taxable years.

[Sec. 112 (m) as added by sec. 123, Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.112 (m)-1 Gain from sale or exchange to effectuate policies of Federal Communications Commission. (a) At the election of the taxpayer, section 112 (m) in effect, postpones the recognition of gain upon the sale or exchange of property, if the Federal Communications Commission certifies such sale or exchange to be necessary or appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Commission with respect to the ownership or control of radio broadcasting stations. Any taxpayer desiring to obtain the benefits of section 112 (m) shall file with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or the district director of internal revenue, a certificate from the Federal Communications Commission clearly identifying the property and showing that the sale or exchange of such property is necessary or appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Commission with respect to the ownership and control of radio broadcasting stations. Such certificate shall be accompanied by a detailed statement showing: The kind of property, the date of acquisition, the cost or other basis of the property the date of sale or exchange, the name and address of the transferee, and the amount of money and the fair market value of the property other than money received upon such sale or exchange.

(b) Section 112 (m) applies only in the case of a sale or exchange made necessary by reason of the Federal Communications Commission's policies as to ownership or control of radio facilities. Section 112 (m) does not apply in the case of a sale or exchange made necessary as a result of other matters, such as the operation of a broadcasting station in a manner determined by the Commission to be not in the public interest or in violation of Federal or State law.

(c) An election to have the benefits of section 112 (m) shall be made in the manner prescribed in § 39.112 (m)-4.

§ 39.112 (m)-2 Nature and effect of election—(a) Alternative elections. (1) A taxpayer entitled to the benefits of section 112 (m) in respect of a sale or exchange of property may elect—

(i) To treat such sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under the provisions of section 112 (f), or

(ii) To treat such sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under the provisions of section 112 (f), and in addition elect to reduce the basis of property, in accordance with the regulations prescribed in § 39.112 (m)-3, by all or part of the gain that would otherwise be recognized under section 112 (f), or

(iii) To reduce the basis of property, in accordance with the regulations prescribed in § 39.112 (m)-3, by all or part of the gain realized upon the sale or exchange.

(2) The effect of the provisions of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph is, in general, to grant the taxpayer an election to treat the proceeds of the sale or exchange as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion subject to the provisions of section 112 (f) and a further election to reduce the basis of certain property owned by the taxpayer by the amount of the gain realized upon the sale or exchange to the extent of that portion of the proceeds which is not treated as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion.

(3) An election under section 112 (m) for any taxable year shall be irrevocable and shall be binding for such taxable year and all subsequent taxable years.

(b) Application of sections 112 (f) and 113 (a) (9) (1) If the taxpayer elects, either under paragraph (a) (1) (i) or (ii) of this section, to treat the sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion, the provisions of sections 112 (f) and 113 (a) (9) as modified by section 112 (m) together with the regulations prescribed under such sections, shall be applicable to determine the amount of recognized gain and the basis of property acquired as a result of such sale or exchange. For the purposes of section 112 (m) and the regulations thereunder, stock of a corporation operating a radio broadcasting station shall be treated as property similar or related in service or use to the property sold or exchanged. Securities of such a corporation other than stock, or securities of a corporation not operating a radio broadcasting station do not constitute property similar or related in service or use to the property sold or exchanged. If the taxpayer exercises the election referred to in paragraph (a) (1) (i) of this section, the gain realized upon such sale or exchange shall be recognized to the extent of that part of the money received upon the sale or exchange which is not expended in the manner prescribed in section 112 (f) and the regulations thereunder. If, however, the taxpayer exercises the elections referred to in paragraph (a) (1) (ii) of this section, the amount of the gain which would be recognized, determined in the same manner as in the case of an election under paragraph (a) (1)

…) of this section, shall not be recognized but shall be applied to reduce the basis of property, remaining in the hands of the taxpayer after such sale or exchange or acquired by him during the same taxable year, which is of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l) Such reduction of basis shall be made in accordance with and under the conditions prescribed by § 39.112 (m)-3.

(2) In the application of sections 112 (f) and 113 (a) (9) to determine the recognized gain and the basis of property acquired as a result of a sale or exchange pursuant to an election under paragraph (a) (1) (i) or (ii) of this section, the entire amount of the proceeds of such sale or exchange shall be taken into account.

(c) The application of the provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who makes his return on the calendar year basis, sold in 1952, for $100,000 cash, stock of X Corporation, which operates a radio broadcasting station. The stock had a basis in A's hands of $75,000. Forthwith, A used $50,000 of the proceeds of the sale to purchase stock in Y Corporation, which also operates a radio broadcasting station. The sale was certified by the Federal Communications Commission as provided in section 112 (m) and A elected in his return for the taxable year in which the sale occurred to treat such sale and purchase as an involuntary conversion subject to the provisions of section 112 (f). He also elected at the same time to reduce the basis of depreciable property, in accordance with the provisions of § 39.112 (m)-3, by the amount of gain that would otherwise be recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f), as made applicable by section 112 (m). The determination of the amount to be applied in reduction of basis under § 39.112 (m)-3 and of the basis under section 113 (a) (9) of the stock of Y Corporation purchased by A is as follows:

Application of sections 112 (f) and (m)
Sale price of X Corporation stock	$100,000
Basis for gain or loss	75,000
Gain realized	25,000
Proceeds of sale	100,000
Amount expended to replace property sold	50,000
Amount not expended in manner prescribed in section 112 (f)	50,000
Realized gain recognized under section 112 (f) (not to exceed unexpended portion of proceeds of sale)	25,000
Amount applied in reduction of basis	25,000
Gain recognized for tax purposes	None
Application of section 113 (a) (9)
Basis of property sold (converted)	75,000
Decreased in amount of proceeds not expended under section 112 (f)	50,000
Balance	25,000
Increased in amount of gain recognized under section 112 (f)	25,000
Basis of Y Corporation stock in A's hands	50,000

§ 39.112 (m)-3 Reduction of basis of property pursuant to election under section 112 (m)—(a) General rule. (1) In addition to the adjustments provided in section 113 (b) and the sections of the regulations relating thereto, which are required to be made with respect to the cost or other basis of property, a further adjustment shall be made in the amount of the unrecognized gain under section 112 (m) if the taxpayer so elects. Such further adjustment shall be made only with respect to the cost or other basis of property which is of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l) and which remains in the hands of the taxpayer immediately after the sale or exchange in respect of which the election is made, or which is acquired by the taxpayer in the same taxable year in which such sale or exchange occurs. If the property is in the hands of the taxpayer immediately after the sale or exchange, the time of reduction of the basis is the date of the sale or exchange; in all other cases the time of reduction of the basis is the date of acquisition.

(2) The reduction of basis under section 112 (m) in the amount of the unrecognized gain shall be made in respect of the cost or other basis, as of the time prescribed, of all units of property of the specified character. The cost or other basis of each unit shall be decreased in an amount equal to such proportion of the unrecognized gain as the adjusted basis (for determining gain, determined without regard to this section) of such unit bears to the aggregate of such adjusted bases of all units of such property, but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of such adjusted basis. If in the application of such rule the adjusted basis of any unit is reduced to zero, the process shall be repeated to reduce the adjusted basis of the remaining units of property by the portion of the unrecognized gain which is not absorbed in the first application of the rule. For such purpose the "adjusted basis" of the remaining units shall be the adjusted basis for determining gain reduced by the amount of the adjustment previously made under this section. The process shall be repeated until the entire amount of the unrecognized gain has been absorbed.

(b) Special cases. With the consent of the Commissioner, the taxpayer may, however, have the basis of the various units of property of the class specified in section 112 (m) and this section adjusted in a manner different from the general rule set forth in paragraph (a) of this section. Variations from such general rule may, for example, involve adjusting the basis of only certain units of such property. The request for variations from such general rule should be filed by the taxpayer with his return for the taxable year in which he elects to have the basis of property reduced under section 112 (m) Agreement between the taxpayer and the Commissioner as to any variations from such general rule shall be effective only if incorporated in a closing agreement entered into under the provisions of section 3760.

§ 39.112 (m)-4 Manner of election. (a) An election under the provisions of section 112 (m) shall be in the form of a written statement and shall be executed and filed in duplicate. Such statement shall be signed by the taxpayer or his authorized representative. In the case of a corporation the statement shall be signed with the corporate name, followed by the signature and title of at least two officers of the corporation empowered to sign for the corporation, and the corporate seal must be affixed. An election under section 112 (m) to reduce the basis of property and an election under such section to treat the sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under section 112 (f) may be exercised independently of each other. An election under section 112 (m) must be filed with the return for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange occurs. Where practicable, the certificate of the Federal Communications Commission required by § 39.112 (m)-1 should be filed with the election.

(b) If, in pursuance of an election to have the basis of its property adjusted under section 112 (m) the taxpayer desires to have such basis adjusted in any manner different from the general rule set forth in § 39.112 (m)-3 (a) the precise method (including allocation of amounts) should be set forth in detail on separate sheets accompanying the election. Consent by the Commissioner to any departure from such general rule shall be effected only by a closing agreement entered into under the provisions of section 3760.

§ 39.112 (n) Statutory provisions; recognition of gain or loss; gain from sale or exchange of residence.

SEC. 112. Recognition of gain or loss. * * *

(n) Gain from sale or exchange of residence—(1) Nonrecognition of gain. If property (hereinafter in this subsection called "old residence") used by the taxpayer as his principal residence is sold by him and, within a period beginning one year prior to the date of such sale and ending one year after such date, property (hereinafter in this subsection called "new residence") is purchased and used by the taxpayer as his principal residence, gain (if any) from such sale shall be recognized only to the extent that the taxpayer's selling price of the old residence exceeds the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence.

(2) Rules for application of subsection. For the purposes of this subsection:

(A) An exchange by the taxpayer of his residence for other property shall be considered as a sale of such residence, and the acquisition of a residence upon the exchange of property shall be considered as a purchase of such residence.

(B) If the taxpayer's residence (as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, or seizure) is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into property or into money, such destruction, theft, or seizure shall be considered as a sale of the residence; and if the residence is so converted into property which is used by the taxpayer as his residence, such conversion shall be considered as a purchase of such property by the taxpayer.

(C) In the case of an exchange or conversion described in subparagraph (A) or (B), in determining the extent to which the selling price of the old residence exceeds the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence, the amount realized by the taxpayer upon such exchange or conversion shall be considered the selling price of the old residence.

(D) A residence any part of which was constructed or reconstructed by the taxpayer shall be considered as purchased by the taxpayer. In determining the taxpayer's cost of purchasing a residence, there shall be included only so much of his cost as is attributable to the acquisition, construction, reconstruction, and improvements made which are properly chargeable to capital account, during the period specified in paragraph (1).

(E) If a residence is purchased by the taxpayer prior to the date of his sale of the old residence, the purchased residence shall not be treated as his new residence if sold or otherwise disposed of by him prior to the date of the sale of the old residence.

(F) If the taxpayer, during the period described in paragraph (1), purchases more than one residence which is used by him as his principal residence at some time within one year after the date of the sale of the old residence, only the last of such residences so used by him after the date of such sale shall constitute the new residence. If within the one year referred to in the preceding sentence property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence is destroyed, stolen, seized, requisitioned, or condemned, or is sold or exchanged under threat or imminence thereof, then for the purposes of the preceding sentence such one year shall be considered as ending with the date of such destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, condemnation, sale, or exchange.

(G) In the case of a new residence the construction of which was commenced by the taxpayer prior to the expiration of one year after the date of the sale of the old residence, the period specified in paragraph (1), and the one year referred to in subparagraph (F) of this paragraph, shall be considered as including a period of 18 months beginning with the date of the sale of the old residence.

(3) Limitation. The provisions of paragraph (1) shall not be applicable with respect to the sale of the taxpayer's residence if within one year prior to the date of such sale the taxpayer sold at a gain other property used by him as his principal residence, and any part of such gain was not recognized by reason of the provisions of paragraph (1). For the purposes of this paragraph, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of property or the sale or exchange of property under threat or imminence thereof, shall not be considered as a sale of such property.

(4) Basis of new residence. Where the purchase of a new residence results, under paragraph (1), in the nonrecognition of gain upon the sale of an old residence, in determining the adjusted basis of the new residence as of any time following the sale of the old residence, the adjustments to basis shall include a reduction by an amount equal to the amount of the gain not so recognized upon the sale of the old residence. For this purpose, the amount of the gain not so recognized upon the sale of the old residence includes only so much of such gain as is not recognized by reason of the cost, up to such time, of purchasing the new residence.

(5) Tenant-stockholder in a cooperative apartment corporation. For the purposes of this subsection, section 113 (b) (1) (K), and section 117 (h) (7), references to property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence, and references to the residence of a taxpayer, shall include stock held by a tenant-stockholder (as defined in section 23 (z) (2)) in a cooperative apartment (as defined in such section) if—

(A) In the case of stock sold, the apartment which the taxpayer was entitled to occupy as such stockholder was used by him as his principal residence, and

(B) In the case of stock purchased, the taxpayer used as his principal residence the apartment which he was entitled to occupy as such stockholder.

(6) Husband and wife. If the taxpayer and his spouse, in accordance with regulations which shall be prescribed by the Secretary pursuant to this paragraph, consent to the application of subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, then—

(A) For the purposes of this subsection, the words "taxpayer's selling price of the old residence" shall mean the selling price (of the taxpayer, or of the taxpayer and his spouse) of the old residence, and the words "taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence" shall mean the cost (to the taxpayer, his spouse, or both) of purchasing the new residence (whether held by the taxpayer, his spouse, or the taxpayer and his spouse); and

(B) So much of the gain upon the sale of the old residence as is not recognized solely by reason of this paragraph, and so much of the adjustment under paragraph (4) to the basis of the new residence as results solely from this paragraph, shall be allocated between the taxpayer and his spouse as provided in such regulations.

This paragraph shall apply only if the old residence and the new residence are each used by the taxpayer and his spouse as their principal residence. In case the taxpayer and his spouse do not consent to the application of subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, then the recognition of gain upon the sale of the old residence shall be determined under this subsection without regard to the rules provided in this paragraph.

(7) Statute of limitations. If the taxpayer during a taxable year sells at a gain property used by him as his principal residence, then—

(A) The statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to any part of such gain shall not expire prior to the expiration of three years from the date the Secretary is notified by the taxpayer (in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe) of—

(i) The taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence which the taxpayer claims results in nonrecognition of any part of such gain,

(ii) The taxpayer's intention not to purchase a new residence within the period specified in paragraph (1), or

(iii) A failure to make such purchase within such period; and

(B) Such deficiency may be assessed prior to the expiration of such three-year period notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

(8) Members of Armed Forces. The running of any period of time specified in paragraph (1) or (2) (other than the one year referred to in paragraph (2) (F)) of this subsection shall be suspended during any time that the taxpayer (or his spouse if the old residence and the new residence are each used by the taxpayer and his spouse as their principal residence) serves on extended active duty with the Armed Forces of the United States after the date of the sale of the old residence and before January 1, 1954, except that any such period as so suspended shall not extend beyond the date four years after the date of the sale of the old residence. For the purpose of this paragraph, the term "extended active duty" means any period of active duty pursuant to a call or order to such duty for a period in excess of ninety days or for an indefinite period.

[Sec. 112 (n) as added by sec. 318 (a), Rev. Act 1951; amended by sec. 1 Pub. Law 507 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.112 (n)-1 Gain from sale or exchange of residence—(a) In general. Gain from a sale of property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence (referred to in this section as the "old residence") will not be recognized if the taxpayer within a period beginning one year before the date of such sale and ending one year after such date purchases property and uses it as his principal residence (referred to in this section as the "new residence") except to the extent that the taxpayer's selling price of the old residence exceeds the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence. In the case of a new residence the construction of which was commenced by the taxpayer at any time before the expiration of one year after the date of the sale of the old residence, the one year after the sale of the old residence referred to in the preceding sentence shall be considered as including a period of 18 months beginning with the date of the sale of the old residence. Such nonrecognition of gain is mandatory. This section applies only with respect to gains; losses from sales of property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence are recognized or not recognized without regard to this section.

(b) Rules for application of section—(1) Property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence. (i) Whether or not property is used by the taxpayer as his residence, and whether or not property is used by the taxpayer as his principal residence (in the case of a taxpayer using more than one property as a residence) depends upon all of the facts and circumstances in each individual case, including the bona fides of the taxpayer. The mere fact that property is, or has been, rented is not determinative that such property is not used by the taxpayer as his principal residence. For example, if the taxpayer purchases his new residence before he sells his old residence, the fact that he temporarily rents out the new residence during the period before he vacates the old residence may not, in the light of all the facts and circumstances in the case, prevent the new residence from being considered as property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence. Property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence may include a houseboat, a house trailer, or stock held by a tenant-stockholder in a cooperative apartment corporation (as those terms are defined in section 23 (z) (2)), if the apartment which the taxpayer is entitled to occupy as such stockholder is used by him as his principal residence. Property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence does not include personal property such as a piece of furniture, a radio, etc., which, in accordance with the applicable local law is not a fixture.

(ii) Where part of a property is used by the taxpayer as his principal residence and part is used for other purposes, an allocation must be made to determine the application of this section. If the old residence is used only partially for residential purposes, only that part of the gain allocable to the residential portion may be not recognized under this section and only an amount allocable to the selling price of such portion need be reinvested in the new residence in order to have the gain allocable to such portion not recognized under this section. If the new residence is used only partially for residential purposes, only so much of its cost as is allocable to the residential portion may be counted as the cost of purchasing the new residence.

(2) Sale of residence. For the purpose of this section, an exchange by the taxpayer of his residence for other property shall be considered as a sale of such residence. Also, if the taxpayer's residence (as a result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, seizure, requisition or condemnation) is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into money or property, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition or condemnation shall be considered as a sale of such residence.

(3) Purchase of residence. For the purpose of this section, the acquisition of a residence upon the exchange of property shall be considered as a purchase of such residence. Also, the acquisition of a residence upon the compulsory or involuntary conversion of the taxpayer's residence as the result of its destruction in whole or in part, theft, seizure, requisition or condemnation shall be considered to be a purchase of the residence. A residence any part of which was constructed or reconstructed by the taxpayer shall be considered as purchased by the taxpayer, but the mere improvement of a residence, not amounting to reconstruction, does not constitute a purchase of a residence.

(4) Selling price of old residence. The taxpayer's selling price of the old residence includes the amount of any mortgage, trust deed, or other indebtedness to which such property is subject in the hands of the purchaser whether or not the purchaser assumed such indebtedness. Such selling price also includes the face amount of any liabilities of the purchaser which are part of the consideration for the sale. Commissions and other selling expenses paid or incurred by the taxpayer on the sale of the old residence are not to be deducted or taken into account in determining such selling price. In the case of an exchange or conversion which is considered as a sale under this section, the amount realized by the taxpayer upon such exchange or conversion shall be considered to be the taxpayer's selling price of the old residence. As to what constitutes the amount realized, see § 39.111-1.

(5) Cost of purchasing new residence. The taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence also includes such indebtedness to which the property purchased is subject at the time of purchase whether or not assumed by the taxpayer (including purchase-money mortgages, etc.) and the face amount of any liabilities of the taxpayer which are part of the consideration for the purchase. Commissions and other purchasing expenses paid or incurred by the taxpayer on the purchase of the new residence are to be included in determining such cost. In the case of an acquisition of a residence upon an exchange or conversion which is considered as a purchase under this section, the fair market value of the new residence shall be considered as the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence. The taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence includes only so much of such cost as is attributable to acquisition, construction, reconstruction, or improvements made within the two-year or 30 months period of time, as the case may be, in which the purchase and use of the new residence must be made in order to have gain on the sale of the old residence not recognized under this section. Such cost also includes only such amounts as are properly chargeable to capital account rather than to current expense. As to what constitutes capital expenditures, see § 39.24 (a)-2. Where any part of the new residence is acquired by the taxpayer other than by purchase, the value of such part is not to be included in determining the taxpayer's cost of the new residence. For example, if the taxpayer acquires a residence by gift or inheritance, and spends $20,000 in reconstructing such residence, only such $20,000 may be treated as his cost of purchasing the new residence.

(6) Selling price and cost of residence in the case of husband and wife. (i) If the taxpayer and his spouse file the consent referred to in this subdivision, then the "taxpayer's selling price of the old residence" shall mean the taxpayer's or the taxpayer and his spouse's selling price of the old residence, and the "taxpayer's cost of purchasing the new residence" shall mean the cost to the taxpayer, or to his spouse, or to both of them, of purchasing the new residence, whether such new residence is held by the taxpayer, or his spouse, or both. Such consent may be filed only if the old residence and the new residence are each used by the taxpayer and his same spouse as their principal residence. If the taxpayer and his spouse do not file such a consent, the recognition of gain upon sale of the old residence shall be determined under this section without regard to the foregoing.

(ii) The consent referred to in subdivision (i) of this subparagraph is a consent by the taxpayer and his spouse to have the basis of the interest of either of them in the new residence reduced from what it would have been but for the filing of such consent by an amount by which the gain of either of them on the sale of his interest in the old residence is not recognized solely by reason of the filing of such consent. Such reduction in basis is applicable to the basis of the new residence, whether such basis is that of the husband, of the wife, or divided between them. If the basis is divided between the husband and wife, the reduction in basis shall be divided between them in the same proportion as the basis (determined without regard to such reduction) is divided between them. Such consent shall be filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the return for the taxable year or years in which the gain from the sale of the old residence is realized has been filed.

(iii) The following examples will illustrate the application of this rule:

Example (1). A taxpayer, in 1952, sells for $10,000 the principal residence of himself and his wife, which he owns individually and which has an adjusted basis to him of $5,000. Within a year after such sale he and his wife contribute $5,000 each from their separate funds for the purchase of their new principal residence which they hold as tenants in common, each owning an undivided one-half interest therein. If the taxpayer and his wife file the required consent, the gain of $5,000 upon the sale of the old residence will not be recognized to the taxpayer, and the adjusted basis of the taxpayer's interest in the new residence will be $2,500 and the adjusted basis of his wife's interest in such property will be $2,500.

Example (2). A taxpayer and his wife, in 1952, sell for $10,000 their principal residence, which they own as joint tenants and which has an adjusted basis of $2,500 to each of them ($5,000 together). Within a year after such sale, the wife spends $10,000 of her own funds in the purchase of a principal residence for herself and the taxpayer and takes title in her name only. If the taxpayer and his wife file the required consent, the adjusted basis to the wife of the new residence shall be $5,000, and the gain of the taxpayer of $2,500 upon the sale of the old residence will not be recognized. The wife, as a taxpayer herself, will have her gain of $2,500 on the sale of the old residence not recognized under the general rule.

(c) Basis of new residence. (1) Where the purchase of a new residence results, under this section, in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized upon the sale of an old residence, then, in determining the adjusted basis of the new residence as of any time following the sale of the old residence, the adjustments to basis shall include a reduction by an amount equal to the amount of the gain which was not recognized upon the sale of the old residence. Such a reduction is not to be made for the purpose of determining the adjusted basis of the new residence as of any time preceding the sale of the old residence. For the purpose of this determination, the amount of the gain not recognized under this section upon the sale of the old residence includes only so much of the gain as is not recognized because of the taxpayer's cost, up to the date of the determination of the adjusted basis, of purchasing the new residence.

(2) The following example will illustrate the rule of subparagraph (1)

Example. On January 1, 1952, the taxpayer buys a new residence for $10,000. On March 1, 1952, he sells for $15,000 his old residence which has an adjusted basis to him of $5,000. During April a wing is constructed on the new house at a cost of $5,000 and in May he builds a garage at a cost of $2,000. The adjusted basis of the new residence is $10,000 during January and February, $5,000 during March and April, and $7,000 following the completion of the construction in May.

(d) Limitations on application of section. (1) If a residence is purchased by the taxpayer prior to the date of the sale of the old residence, the purchased residence shall, in no event, be treated as a new residence if such purchased residence is sold or otherwise disposed of by him prior to the date of the sale of the old residence. And, if the taxpayer, during the period within which the purchase and use of the new residence must be made in order to have any gain on the sale of the old residence not recognized under this section, purchases more than one property which is used by him as his principal residence during the one year (or 18 months in the case of the construction of the new residence) succeeding the date of the sale of the old residence, only the last of such properties shall be considered a new residence. However, if the taxpayer's new residence is destroyed, stolen, seized, requisitioned, condemned, or sold or exchanged under the threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation within such year (or 18 months) succeeding the sale of the old residence, then, for the purpose of the preceding sentence, such year (or 18 months) is deemed to end on the date of the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, condemnation, sale, or exchange. If within one year before the date of the sale of the old residence, the taxpayer sold other property used by him as his principal residence at a gain, and any part of such gain was not recognized under this section, this section shall not apply with respect to the sale of the old residence. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, however, the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, condemnation, or sale or exchange under threat or imminence of requisition or condemnation shall not be considered as a sale.

(2) The following example will illustrate the rules of subparagraph (1)

Example. A taxpayer sells his old residence on January 15, 1952, and purchases a new residence on February 15, 1952. On March 15, 1952, he sells the new residence and purchases a second new residence on April 15, 1952. The gain on the sale of the old residence on January 15, 1952, will not be recognized except to the extent to which the taxpayer's selling price of the old residence exceeds the cost of purchasing the second new residence purchased on April 15, 1952. Gain on the sale of the first new residence on March 15, 1952, will be recognized. If, instead of selling the first new residence on March 15, 1952, such residence had been destroyed by fire on that date and insurance proceeds in cash had been received as a result thereof, the gain on the sale of the old residence on January 15, 1952, will not be recognized except to the extent to which the taxpayer's selling price of the old residence exceeds his cost of purchasing the new residence purchased on February 15, 1952. And, the gain on the involuntary conversion by fire of the first new residence on March 15, 1952, will not be recognized except to the extent to which the amount realized from such conversion exceeds the taxpayer's cost of purchasing the second new residence purchased on April 15, 1952.

(e) Statute of limitations. (1) Whenever a taxpayer sells property used as his principal residence at a gain, the statutory period prescribed in section 275 for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to any part of such gain will not expire prior to the expiration of three years from the date the district director of internal revenue, with whom the return for the taxable year or years in which the gain from the sale of the old residence is realized has been filed, is notified by the taxpayer (i) of the cost of purchasing the new residence which the taxpayer claims results in the nonrecognition of any part of such gain, or (ii) of the taxpayer's intention not to, or failure to, purchase a new residence within the period when such a purchase will result in the nonrecognition of any part of such gain. Such a deficiency may be assessed before the expiration of such three-year period notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or rule of law which might otherwise bar such assessment.

(2) If the return for the taxable year or years in which the purchase of the new residence occurs, or the intention not to make such a purchase is formed, or the period for the replacement expires, is filed with the district director of internal revenue with whom the taxpayer filed his return for the taxable year or years in which the gain from the sale of the old residence was realized, the taxpayer shall give to such district director the notification described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph in his return for the taxable year or years in which such purchase occurs, or such intention is formed, or such period expires. However, if the return for the taxable year or years in which such purchase occurs, or such intention is formed, or such period expires, is filed with a different district director of internal revenue, the taxpayer, at the time of filing such return, shall give such notification to the district director of internal revenue with whom the taxpayer filed his return for the taxable year or years in which the gain from the sale of the old residence was realized. In addition to giving such notification at the time he files his return for the taxable year or years in which such purchase occurs, or such intention is formed, or such period expires, the taxpayer may, if he so desires, in either event, also notify such district director before the filing of such return. Such notification shall contain all of the details in connection with the sale of the residence and, if applicable, the purchase of the new residence. If an intention not to replace is formed, or if the period for replacement expires, or if the cost of purchasing the new residence is less than the selling price of the old residence, the recognizable gain shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year or years in which such gain was realized; a recomputation in the form of an "amended return" should be made for this purpose if necessary.

(f) Members of Armed Forces. (1) The running of the one-year (or 18 months in the case of the construction of the new residence) period, specified in paragraph (a) of this section, after the sale of the old residence within which the purchase and use of a new residence may result in the nonrecognition of gain on such sale shall be suspended during any time that the taxpayer serves on extended active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States after the date of the sale of the old residence and before January 1, 1954. Any such period as so suspended, however, shall not extend beyond the date four years after the date of the sale of the old residence. For example, if the taxpayer is on extended active duty with the army from January 1, 1951, to December 31, 1953, and if he sold his old residence on January 1, 1951, the latest date on which the taxpayer may use a new residence constructed by him and have any part of the gain on the sale of the old residence not recognized under this section is January 1, 1955, the date four years after the date of sale of the old residence.

(2) This suspension covers not only the Armed Forces service of the taxpayer but if the taxpayer and his same spouse used both the old and the new residences as their principal residence, then the extension applies in like manner to the time the taxpayer's spouse is on extended active duty with the Armed Forces of the United States.

(3) The time during which the running of the period is suspended is part of such period. Thus, construction costs during such time are includible in the cost of purchasing the new residence under paragraph (b) (5) of this section.

(4) The running of the one-year (or 18 month) periods referred to in paragraph (d) of this section is not suspended, nor is the running of the one-year period prior to the date of the sale of the old residence within which the new residence may be purchased in order to have gain on the sale of the old residence not recognized under this section.

(5) The term "extended active duty" means any period of active duty which is served pursuant to a call or order to such duty for a period in excess of 90 days or for an indefinite period. If the call or order is for a period of more than 90 days, it is immaterial that the time served pursuant to such call or order is less than 90 days, if the reason for such shorter period of service occurs after the beginning of such duty. As to what constitutes active service as a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, see § 39.22 (b) (13)-1. As to who are members of the Armed Forces of the United States, see § 39.3797-11.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

§ 39.113 (a)-1 Scope of basis for determining gain or loss. The basis of property for the purpose of determining gain or loss from the sale or other disposition thereof is the unadjusted basis prescribed in section 113 (a), adjusted for the various applicable items specified in section 113 (b) Unless otherwise indicated, the word "basis," as used in this section and §§ 39.113 (a)-2 to 39.113 (a) (22)-1, inclusive, has reference to the unadjusted basis. For special rules for determining the basis for gain or loss in the case of vessels acquired through the Maritime Commission (or its successor) see sections 510 and 511 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 (46 U. S. C. 1160, 1161) For special rules for determining the unadjusted basis of property recovered in respect of war losses, see section 127 (d) For special rules for determining the basis for gain or loss in the case of the disposition of a share of stock acquired pursuant to the timely exercise of a restricted stock option where the option price was between 85 percent and 95 percent of the fair market value of the stock at the time the option was granted, see section 130A (b). For special rules for determining the basis, both unadjusted and adjusted, of property acquired or improved with the proceeds of a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, critical and strategic minerals or metals, see section 22 (b) (15)

§ 39.113 (a)-2 General rule. In general, the basis of property is the cost thereof. This rule is subject, however, to the exceptions stated in sections 113 (a) (1) to 113 (a) (23) inclusive.

§ 39.113 (a) (1)-1 Property included in inventory. The last inventory value of property which should be included in inventory is the basis of such property. The requirements with respect to the valuation of an inventory are stated in §§ 39.22 (c)-1 to 39.22 (d)-7, inclusive.

§ 39.113 (a) (2) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; gifts after December 31, 1920.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(2) Gifts after December 31, 1920. If the property was acquired by gift after December 31, 1920, the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift, except that if such basis (adjusted for the period prior to the date of the gift as provided in subsection (b)) is greater than the fair market value of the property at the time of the gift, then for the purpose of determining loss the basis shall be such fair market value. If the facts necessary to determine the basis in the hands of the donor or the last preceding owner are unknown to the donee, the Commissioner shall, if possible, obtain such facts from such donor or last preceding owner, or any other person cognizant thereof. If the Commissioner finds it impossible to obtain such facts, the basis in the hands of such donor or last preceding owner shall be the fair market value of such property as found by the Commissioner as of the date or approximate date at which, according to the best information that the Commissioner is able to obtain, such property was acquired by such donor or last preceding owner.

[Sec. 113 (a) (2) as amended by sec. 143 (a), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.113 (a) (2)-1 Property transmitted by gift after December 31, 1920—(a) Property included. (1) Section 113 (a) (2) applies to all property acquired after December 31, 1920, by gift. It does not apply

(i) To property acquired by devise or bequest (see section 113 (a) (5)), or

(ii) To property acquired by an instrument which, under section 113 (a) (5) is to be treated as though it were a will.

(2) Section 113 (a) (2) applies to all gifts of whatever description, whenever and however made, perfected, or taking effect; whether in contemplation of or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after the donor's death; or whether made by means of the exercise (other than by will) of a power of appointment or revocation, or any other power. Section 113 (a) (2) applies whether the gift was made by a transfer in trust or otherwise.

(b) Basis. (1) For the purpose of determining gain, the basis is the same as it would be in the hands of the donor, or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift. For the purpose of determining loss, the basis is as so determined, except that in any case in which such basis, adjusted for the period prior to the date of the gift as provided in section 113 (b) is greater than the fair market value of the property at the time of the gift, the basis is such fair market value.

(2) All titles to property acquired by gift relate back to the time of the gift, even though the interest of him who takes the title was, at the time of the gift, legal, equitable, vested, contingent, conditional, or otherwise. Accordingly, all property acquired by gift is acquired at the time of the gift. In the hands of every person acquiring property by gift, the basis is always the same, whether such person receives the property immediately upon the transfer by the donor, or as remainderman under the instrument of gift, or whether such person is any other person to whom such uniform basis is applicable. Such uniform basis applies to the property in the hands of the trustee or the beneficiary under a gift instrument, both during the term of the trust and after the distribution of the trust corpus. Adjustments to basis, as required by section 113 (b), are to be made as respects the period prior to the gift, and the period after the gift. With respect to the latter period, the adjustments to the uniform basis are to be made in accordance with paragraph (e) of § 39.113 (a) (5)-1.

(3) The time of the gift is the time when the gift is consummated. Delivery, actual or constructive, is requisite to a gift. In determining the time of the gift, the passing of title by the donor is not decisive; the time when the donor relinquishes substantial dominion over the property is decisive.

(c) Fair market value. For the purposes of this section, the value of property as appraised for the purpose of the Federal gift tax, or if the gift is not subject to such tax, its value as appraised for the purpose of a State gift tax, shall be deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the time of the gift.

(d) Reinvestments by fiduciary. If the property is an investment by the fiduciary under the terms of the gift (as, for example, in the case of a sale by the fiduciary of property transferred under the terms of the gift, and the reinvestment of the proceeds) the cost or other basis to the fiduciary is taken in lieu of the basis specified in paragraph (b) of this section.

(e) Records. To insure a fair and adequate determination of the proper basis under section 113 (a) (2) persons making or receiving gifts of property should preserve and keep accessible a record of the facts necessary to determine the cost of the property and, if pertinent, its fair market value as of March 1, 1913.

§ 39.113 (a) (3) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; transfers in trust after December 31, 1920.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(3) Transfer in trust after December 31, 1920. If the property was acquired after December 31, 1920, by a transfer in trust (other than by a transfer in trust by a gift, bequest, or devise) the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the grantor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the grantor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made.

[Sec. 113 (a) (3) as amended by sec. 143 (b), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.113 (a) (3)-1 Transfer in trust after December 31, 1920—(a) Property included. Section 113 (a) (3) applies in general to all property acquired after December 31, 1920, by transfer in trust. It does not apply to property acquired by bequest or devise, by an instrument which, under section 113 (a) (5) is to be treated as though it were a will, or to property acquired as a gift by transfer in trust made at any time after December 31, 1920. With these exceptions, section 113 (a) (3) applies to all property acquired after December 31, 1920, by any transfer in trust of whatever description. If the property was acquired as a gift by transfer in trust, it is not within section 113 (a) (3) but is within section 113 (a) (2) or section 113 (a) (4)

(b) Basis. The basis of property so acquired is the same as it would be in the hands of the grantor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the grantor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made. If the taxpayer acquired the property by a transfer in trust, this basis applies whether the property be in the hands of the trustee, or the beneficiary, and whether prior to the termination of the trust and distribution of the property or thereafter.

(c) Reinvestments by fiduciary. If the property is an investment made by the fiduciary (as, for example, in the case of a sale by the fiduciary of property transferred by the grantor, and the reinvestment of the proceeds) the cost or other basis to the fiduciary is taken in lieu of the basis specified in paragraph (b) of this section.

§ 39.113 (a) (4) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; gifts or transfers in trust before January 1, 1921.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(4) Gift or transfer in trust before January 1, 1921. If the property was acquired by gift or transfer in trust on or before December 31, 1920, the basis shall be the fair market value of such property at the time of such acquisition.

§ 39.113 (a) (4)-1 Gift or transfer in trust before January 1, 1921—(a) Property included. Section 113 (a) (4) applies to all property acquired before January 1, 1921, by gift or transfer in trust. It does not apply to property acquired by a devise or bequest; or by an instrument which, under section 113 (a) (5) is to be treated as though it were a will.

(b) Basis. The basis is the fair market value of such property at the time of the gift or at the time of the transfer in trust. Such fair market value is to be ascertained in the manner prescribed in paragraph (c) of § 39.113 (a) (2)-1, or by equivalent methods.

§ 39.113 (a) (5) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property transmitted at death.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(5) Property transmitted at death. If the property was acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance, or by the decedent's estate from the decedent, the basis shall be the fair market value of such property at the time of such acquisition. In the case of property transferred in trust to pay the income for life to or upon the order or direction of the grantor, with the right reserved to the grantor at all times prior to his death to revoke the trust, the basis of such property in the hands of the persons entitled under the terms of the trust instrument to the property after the grantor's death shall, after such death, be the same as if the trust instrument had been a will executed on the day of the grantor's death. For the purpose of this paragraph property passing without full and adequate consideration under a general power of appointment exercised by will shall be deemed to be property passing from the individual exercising such power by bequest or devise. If the property was acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance, or by the decedent's estate from the decedent, and if the decedent died after August 26, 1937, and if the property consists of stock or securities of a foreign corporation, which with respect to its taxable year next preceding the date of the decedent's death was, under the law applicable to such year, a foreign personal holding company, then the basis shall be the fair market value of such property at the time of such acquisition or the basis in the hands of the decedent, whichever is lower. In the case of an election made by the executor under section 811 (j), the time of acquisition of the property shall, for the purpose of this paragraph, be the applicable valuation date of the property prescribed by such section in determining the value of the gross estate. For the purposes of this paragraph the surviving spouse's one-half share of community property held by the decedent and the surviving spouse under the community property laws of any State, Territory or possession of the United States or any foreign country shall be considered to be property "acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance" from the decedent, if the death of the decedent was after December 31, 1947, and if at least one-half of the whole of the community interest in such property was includible in determining the value of the decedent's gross estate under section 811. In the case of property held by a decedent and his surviving spouse under the community property laws of any State, Territory, or possession of the United States or any foreign country, if the value of any part of the surviving spouse's one-half share of such property was included in determining the value of the gross estate of the decedent and a tax under chapter 3 was payable upon the transfer of the net estate of the decedent, then for the purposes of this paragraph such part of such one-half share of the surviving spouse shall be considered to be property "acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance" from the decedent, if the death of the decedent was after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1942 and on or before December 31, 1947; but nothing in this sentence shall reduce basis below that which would exist if the Revenue Act of 1948 had not been enacted. For the purposes of this paragraph, the survivor's interest in a joint and survivor's annuity shall be considered to be property "acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance" from the decedent if the death of the decedent was after December 31, 1950, and if the value of any part of such interest was required to be included in determining the value of the decedent's gross estate under section 811.

[Sec. 113 (a) (5) as amended by sec. 144 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 366, Rev. Act 1948; sec. 303 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.113 (a) (5)-1 Basis of property acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance—(a) Property included. Section 113 (a) (5) applies—

(1) To all property passing from a decedent by his will or under the law governing the descent and distribution of property of decedents;

(2) To property passing under an instrument which, under section 113 (a) (5) is treated as though it were a will, but applies to such property only at the times and to the extent prescribed in section 113 (a) (5) and

(3) To (i) the surviving spouse's one-half share of community property held by the decedent and the surviving spouse under the community property law of any State, Territory, or possession of the United States or any foreign country, if the death of the decedent is after December 31, 1947, and if at least one-half of the whole of the community interest in such property is includible in determining the value of the decedent's gross estate under section 811 (whether or not a tax under chapter 3, relating to the estate tax, is payable upon the net estate of the decedent) and (ii) such part of the surviving spouse's one-half share of property held by the decedent and surviving spouse as community property as was included in computing the value of the decedent's gross estate if the death of the decedent was after October 21, 1942, and before January 1, 1948, and if a tax under chapter 3, relating to the estate tax, was payable upon the net estate of the decedent. Section 113 (a) (5) shall not, however, be applied in cases described in subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph so as to reduce the basis of any property below that which would exist without the application of such section.

(b) Basis. Section 113 (a) (5) provides three rules for determining the basis of property transmitted at death, first, a rule governing property generally, second, a special rule governing stock in a foreign personal holding company, and, third, a special rule applicable to both the first and second rules in certain cases where for estate tax purposes the decedent's gross estate is valued at the optional valuation dates.

(1) General rule. Except as prescribed in subparagraphs (2) and (3) of this paragraph, the basis of property acquired from a decedent by will or under the law governing the descent and distribution of the property of decedents is the fair market value at the time of such acquisition. Since, under the law governing wills and the distribution of the property of decedents, all titles to property acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance relate back to the death of the decedent, even though the interest of him who takes the title was, at the date of death of the decedent, legal, equitable, vested, contingent, general, specific, residual, conditional, executory, or otherwise, the time of the acquisition of such property is the death of the decedent. For example, if distribution of personal property left by a decedent is not made until one year after his death, the basis of such property in the hands of the legatee is its fair market value at the time when the decedent died, and not when the legatee actually received the property; or, if the bequest is of the residue to trustees in trust, and the executors do not distribute the residue to such trustees until five years after the death of the decedent, the basis of each piece of property left by the decedent and thus received, in the hands of the trustees, is its fair market value at the time when the decedent dies; or, if the bequest is to trustees in trust to pay to A during his lifetime the income of the property bequeathed, and after his death to distribute such property to the survivors of a class, and upon A's death the property is distributed to the taxpayer as the sole survivor, the basis of such property, in the hands of the taxpayer, is its fair market value at the time when the decedent died. The purpose of the Internal Revenue Code, in prescribing a general uniform basis rule for property acquired by bequest, devise, or inheritance, is, on the one hand, to tax the gain, in respect of such property, to him who realizes it (without regard to the circumstance that at the death of the decedent it may have been quite uncertain whether the taxpayer would take or gain anything) and, on the other hand, not to recognize as gain any element of value solely from the circumstance that the possession or enjoyment of the taxpayer was postponed. Such postponement may be, for example, until the administration of the decedent's estate is completed, until the period of the possession or enjoyment of another has terminated, or until an uncertain event has happened. It is the increase or decrease in the value of property reflected in a sale or other disposition which section 113 (a) (5) recognizes as the measure of gain or loss.

(2) Special rule with respect to stock in a foreign personal holding company. In the case of decedents dying after August 26, 1937, the basis of stock of a foreign corporation acquired from the decedent by will or under the law governing descent and distribution of property of decedents, where such foreign corporation with respect to its taxable year next preceding the date of the decedent's death was a foreign personal holding company, is the fair market value of such stock at the time of such acquisition, i. e., the date of the decedent's death, or the basis in the hands of the decedent (with proper adjustments to the date of the decedent's death) whichever is lower.

(3) Special rule where property valued at optional valuation dates. Section 113 (a) (5) provides a special rule applicable in determining the basis of property described in subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph where—

(i) Such property is includible in the gross estate of a decedent who died after October 21, 1942, and

(ii) The executor elects for estate tax purposes under section 811 (j) to value the decedent's gross estate at the optional valuation dates prescribed in such section.

In such cases, the time of acquisition of such property for the purposes of subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph and the remainder of this section is considered to be the date at which such property is valued for estate tax purposes. Thus, in such cases, generally the basis will not be the value at the date of the decedent's death but (with certain limitations) the value at the date one year after his death or, in the case of such property distributed by the executor (or trustee, in certain cases) within one year after the decedent's death, the value as of the time of such distribution. See § 81.11 of this chapter (Regulations 105)

(c) Fair market value. For the purposes of this section, the value of property as of the date of the death of the decedent as appraised for the purpose of the Federal estate tax or the optional value as appraised for such purpose, whichever is applicable as provided in subparagraph (3) of paragraph (b) of this section, or if the estate is not subject to such tax, its value appraised as of the date of the death of the decedent for the purpose of State inheritance or transmission taxes, shall be deemed to be its fair market value at the time of acquisition.

(d) Property acquired before March 1, 1913; reinvestments by fiduciary. (1) If the decedent died before March 1, 1913, the fair market value on that date is taken in lieu of the fair market value on the date of death, but only to the same extent and for the same purposes as the fair market value on March 1, 1913, is taken under section 113 (a) (14)

(2) If the property is an investment by the fiduciary under a will (as, for example, in the case of a sale by a fiduciary under a will of property transmitted from the decedent, and the reinvestment of the proceeds) the cost or other basis to the fiduciary is taken in lieu of the fair market value at the time when the decedent died.

(e) Adjustments to basis. (1) In the hands of every person who acquires the property of a decedent (or any estate or interest therein) by bequest, or devise, or inheritance, the basis of the property is always the same,

(i) Whether such person be the executor or administrator, the heir, the legatee, the devisee, the trustee of a trust created by the will, or any beneficiary of such trust, and whatever the nature of any such person's interest or estate may be;

(ii) Whether during or after administration and settlement of the estate of the decedent, during or after the term of any trust under the will, or before or after the distribution by the executor or administrator, or the trustee.

(2) Adjustments to basis required by section 113 (b) are made in accordance with the same principles. Thus, the deductions for depreciation and for depletion allowed or allowable, under section 23 (l) and section 23 (m) to a legal life tenant as if the life tenant were the absolute owner of the property, constitute an adjustment to the basis of the property in the hands not only of the life tenant, but also in the hands of the remainderman and every other person to whom the same uniform basis is applicable. Similarly, the deductions allowed or allowable under section 23 (l) and section 23 (m) both to the trustee and to the trust beneficiaries, constitute an adjustment to the basis of the property not only in the hands of the trustee, but also in the hands of the trust beneficiaries and every other person to whom the uniform basis is applicable. See, however, section 24 (a) Similarly, adjustments in respect of capital expenditures or losses, tax-free distributions, or other distributions applicable in reduction of basis, or other items for which the basis is adjustable are made without regard to which one of the persons to whom the same uniform basis is applicable makes the capital expenditures or sustains the capital losses, or to whom the tax-free or other distributions are made, or to whom the deductions are allowed or allowable.

(3) The executor or other legal representative of the decedent, the fiduciary of a trust under a will, the life tenant and every other person to whom a uniform basis under this section is applicable, shall make and maintain records showing in detail all deductions, distributions, or other items for which adjustment to basis is required to be made by section 113 (b) and shall furnish to the Commissioner information with respect to such matters in such detail at such time and in such manner as the Commissioner may require.

(f) Sales of remainder and other interests in property transmitted at death. The following is an illustration of the rule stated in paragraph (b) of this section that, under section 113 (a) (5), the measure of gain or loss resulting from a sale or other disposition of property transmitted at death is the increase or decrease in the value of the property as reflected in such sale or other disposition: If land is left for life to A, with remainder in fee to B, and prior to A's death, B sells his remainder, the increase or decrease in the value of the land reflected, and realized by B, in the proceeds from the sale of his remainder interest constitutes the gain recognized upon the sale. (See section 111.) Such gain (or as the case may be, the loss) is computed by comparing the amount of the proceeds received from the sale with the amount of the part of the uniform basis assignable to such sale of B's remainder interest. The part of the uniform basis assignable to such a sale by B is the part of the uniform basis (adjusted to the time of the sale) of the land transmitted from the decedent which bears the same proportion to such uniform basis as B's remainder interest, at the time of the sale, bears to the whole estate in the land transmitted from the decedent.

(g) Joint and survivor annuities. If, with respect to an annuitant who dies after December 31, 1950, the value of any part of a survivor's interest in a joint and survivor's annuity is required to be included in the gross estate of the deceased annuitant (whether or not such estate exceeds $60,000 so as to require the filing of an estate tax return under section 937) the basis of such interest to the survivor annuitant is considered to be the value at the time of the decedent's death. As to the taxability of survivor annuity payments in accordance with this rule, see § 39.22 (b) (2)-2.

§ 39.113 (a) (6) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; tax-free exchanges generally.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(6) Tax-free exchanges generally. If the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, upon an exchange described in section 112 (b) to (e), inclusive, or section 112 (l), the basis (except as provided in paragraphs (15), (17), or (18) of this subsection) shall be the same as in the case of the property exchanged, decreased in the amount of any money received by the taxpayer and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the taxpayer that was recognized upon such exchange under the law applicable to the year in which the exchange was made. If the property so acquired consisted in part of the type of property permitted by section 112 (b) or section 112 (l) to be received without the recognition of gain or loss, and in part of other property, the basis provided in this paragraph shall be allocated between the properties (other than money) received, and for the purpose of the allocation there shall be assigned to such other property an amount equivalent to its fair market value at the date of the exchange. Where as part of the consideration to the taxpayer another party to the exchange assumed a liability of the taxpayer or acquired from the taxpayer property subject to a liability, such assumption or acquisition (in the amount of the liability) shall, for the purposes of this paragraph, be considered as money received by the taxpayer upon the exchange. This paragraph shall not apply to property acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer of the property to it.

[Sec. 113 (a) (6) as amended by sec. 213 (d), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 121 (c) (1), (2), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.113 (a) (6)-1 Property acquired upon a tax-free exchange. (a) In the case of an exchange, after February 28, 1913, of property solely of the type described in section 112 (b) or (l) if no part of the gain or loss was recognized under the law applicable to the year in which the exchange was made, the basis of the property acquired is the same as the basis of the property transferred by the taxpayer with proper adjustments to the date of the exchange.

(b) (1) If, in an exchange, after February 28, 1913, of properties of the type indicated in section 112 (b) or (l) gain to the taxpayer was recognized under the provisions of section 112 (c) (d) or (l) or a similar provision of a prior revenue act, on account of the receipt of money in addition in the transaction, the basis of the property acquired is the basis of the property transferred (adjusted to the date of the exchange) decreased by the amount of money received and increased by the amount of gain recognized on the exchange.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A purchased a share of stock in the X Corporation in 1935 for $100. Pursuant to a plan of reorganization, A in 1952 exchanged his share for one share in the Y Corporation, worth $90, and $30 in cash. A realized a gain of $20 upon the exchange, all of which is recognized under section 112 (c) (1). The basis of the share of stock in the Y Corporation is $90; that is, the basis of the share in the X Corporation ($100) less the amount of money received by A ($30) plus the amount of gain recognized on the exchange ($20).

(c) (1) If, upon an exchange of properties of the type described in section 112 (b) or (l), there was received by the taxpayer in addition other property (not permitted to be received without the recognition of gain) and money, and gain from the transaction was recognized as required under section 112 (c) (d) or (l) or a similar provision of a prior revenue act, the basis (adjusted to the date of the exchange) of the property transferred by the taxpayer, decreased by the amount of money received and increased by the amount of gain recognized, must be apportioned to and is the basis of the properties (other than money) received on the exchange. For the purpose of the allocation of such basis to the properties received, there must be assigned to such other property an amount equivalent to its fair market value at the date of the exchange.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A purchased a share of stock in the X Corporation in 1933 for $100. Upon a reorganization of the X Corporation in 1952, A received in place of his stock in the X Corporation a share of stock in the Y Corporation worth $60, a Treasury bond worth $50, and in addition $20 in cash. A realized a gain of $30 upon the exchange, all of which is recognized under section 112 (c) (1). The basis of the property received in exchange is the basis of the old stock ($100) decreased in the amount of money received ($20) and increased in the amount of gain that was recognized ($30), which results in a basis for the property received of $110. This basis of $110 is apportioned between the Treasury bond and the share of stock, the basis of the Treasury bond being its fair market value at the date of the exchange, $50, and of the share of stock, the remainder, $60.

(d) Section 112 (e) and similar provisions of prior revenue acts provide that no loss may be recognized on an exchange of properties of a type described in section 112 (b) or (l) although the taxpayer receives other property or money from the transaction. However, the basis of the property or properties received by the taxpayer (other than money) is the basis (adjusted to the date of the exchange) of the property transferred, decreased by the amount of money received. This basis must be apportioned to the properties received, and for this purpose there must be allocated to such other property (not permitted to be exchanged tax free) an amount of such basis equivalent to the fair market value of such other property at the date of the exchange.

(e) Section 113 (a) (6) does not apply in ascertaining the basis of property acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer of the property to it. But see section 113 (a) (7) and (8)

§ 39.113 (a) (6)-2 Treatment of assumption of liabilities. (a) For the purposes of section 113 (a) (6) the amount of any liabilities of the taxpayer assumed by the other party to the exchange is to be treated as money received by the taxpayer upon the exchange, whether or not the assumption of liabilities resulted in a recognition of gain or loss to the taxpayer under the law applicable to the year in which the exchange was made.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, an individual, owns property having an adjusted basis of $100,000 and on which there is a purchase money mortgage of $25,000. On September 1, 1952, A organizes the X Corporation to which he transfers the property above described in exchange for all the capital stock of the X Corporation and the assumption of the $25,000 mortgage. The capital stock of the X Corporation has a fair market value of $150,000. Under section 112 (b) (5), no gain is recognized. The basis of such stock in A's hands is $75,000, computed as follows:

Adjusted basis of property transferred	$100,000
Less: Amount of money received (amount of liabilities assumed by X Corporation)	25,000
Basis of stock of the X Corporation in A's hands	75,000

Example (2). B, an individual, owns an apartment house which has an adjusted basis in his hands of $500,000, but which is subject to a mortgage of $150,000. On September 1, 1952, he transfers such apartment house to C, receiving in exchange therefor $50,000 in cash and another apartment house with a fair market value on that date of $600,000. The transfer to C is made subject to the $150,000 mortgage, but C does not assume such mortgage. B realizes a gain of $300,000 on the exchange, computed as follows:

Value of property received	$600,000
Cash	50,000
Liabilities subject to which old property was transferred	150,000
Total consideration received	800,000
Less: Adjusted basis of property transferred	500,000
Gain realized	300,000

Since section 112 (k) does not apply to section 112 (b) (1) or so much of section 112 (c) as relates to section 112 (b) (1), $200,000 of such $300,000 gain is recognized. The basis of the apartment house acquired by B upon the exchange is $500,000, computed as follows:

Adjusted basis of property transferred		$500,000
Less: Amount of money received:
Cash	$50,000
Amount of liabilities subject to which property was transferred	150,000
		200,000
Difference		300,000
Plus: Amount of gain recognized upon the exchange		200,000
Basis of property acquired upon the exchange		500,000

Sec. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(7) Transfers to corporation. If the property was acquired—

(A) After December 31, 1917, and in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, by a corporation in connection with a reorganization, and immediately after the transfer an interest or control in such property of 50 per centum or more remained in the same persons or any of them, or

(B) In a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, by a corporation in connection with a reorganization, then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the transferor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made. This paragraph shall not apply if the property acquired consists of stock or securities in a corporation a party to the reorganization, unless acquired by the issuance of stock or securities of the transferee as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer.

§ 39.113 (a) (7)-1 Property acquired by corporation in reorganization after December 31, 1917 (a) Section 113 (a) (7) sets forth the conditions under which the basis of property acquired by a corporation after December 31, 1917, in connection with a reorganization as defined in section 112 (g) or a corresponding provision of a prior revenue act, is the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, increased or decreased as therein provided in the amount of gain or loss recognized to the transferor under the applicable revenue law. In the case of property so acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, such basis is applicable only if immediately after the transfer there remained in the same persons or any of them an interest or control in such property of 50 percent or more. In the case, however, of property so acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, section 113 (a) (7) is applicable irrespective of the extent of the interest or amount of control in such property remaining, immediately after the transfer, in the hands of the same persons or any of them.

(b) The application of the provisions of section 113 (a) (7) (A) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). In 1933 the X Corporation caused the organization of the Y Corporation and transferred to the Y Corporation, in exchange for all the capital stock of that corporation, property which it had previously purchased for $10,000. The basis of the property in the hands of the Y Corporation is $10,000.

Example (2). In 1933 the M Corporation exchanged 10 percent of its voting stock for all the property of the N Corporation which had a basis of $10,000 in the hands of the N Corporation. The basis of the property in the hands of the M Corporation is cost thereof to it at the time of the transfer, that is, the fair market value of the M stock exchanged for the property.

(c) Section 113 (a) (7) does not apply if, irrespective of when acquired, the property consists of stock or securities in a corporation a party to a reorganization as defined in section 112 (g) or a corresponding provision of a prior revenue act, unless such stock or securities are acquired by the issuance of stock or securities of the transferee as the consideration in whole or in part for the transfer. The application of the last sentence of section 113 (a) (7) to a case where such stock or securities are acquired by the issuance of stock or securities of the transferee may be illustrated as follows:

Example. The Y Corporation owns all of the stock of the X Corporation, which stock it acquired in 1952 by the issuance of all of its own voting stock to the individual shareholders of the X Corporation. The stock of the X Corporation was acquired by the individuals in 1932 for $200,000 in cash. The stock of the Y Corporation had a fair market value of $1,000,000 at the time it was exchanged in 1952 for the stock of the X Corporation. The fair market value of the stock of the X Corporation at the time of the exchange in 1952 was also $1,000,000. The basis to the Y Corporation of the stock of the X Corporation is the basis which such stock would have had in the hands of the individuals from which it was acquired by the Y Corporation, that is, $200,000.

§ 39.113 (a) (8) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired by issuance of stock or as paid-in surplus.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(8) Property acquired by issuance of stock or as paid-in surplus. If the property was acquired after December 31, 1920, by a corporation—

(A) By the issuance of its stock or securities in connection with a transaction described in section 112 (b) (5) (including, also, cases where part of the consideration for the transfer of such property to the corporation was property or money, in addition to such stock or securities), or

(B) As paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital, then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the transferor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made.

§ 39.113 (a) (8)-1 Property acquired by a corporation after December 31, 1920. (a) The acquisition of property by a corporation after December 31, 1917, by the issuance of its stock or securities may not fall within the provisions of section 113 (a) (7) because of the fact that the property was not acquired in connection with a reorganization. If, however, the acquisition of such property occurred after December 31, 1920, and falls within the provisions of section 113 (a) (8), the limitations therein imposed upon the basis of such property are applicable.

(b) In respect of property acquired by a corporation after December 31, 1920, from a shareholder as paid-in surplus, or from any person as a contribution to capital, the basis of the property in the hands of the corporation is the basis which the property would have had in the hands of the transferor if the transfer had not been made. In the case of property acquired by a corporation after December 31, 1920, as a gift, the basis thereof shall be determined under section 113 (a) (2).

§ 39.113 (a) (9) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; involuntary conversions.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(9) Involuntary conversion. If the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, as the result of a compulsory or involuntary conversion, described in section 112 (f) (1) or (2), the basis shall be the same as in the case of the property so converted, decreased in the amount of any money received by the taxpayer which was not expended in accordance with the provisions of law (applicable to the year in which such conversion was made) determining the taxable status of the gain or loss upon such conversion, and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the taxpayer recognized upon such conversion under the law applicable to the year in which such conversion was made. This paragraph shall not apply in respect of property acquired as a result of a compulsory or involuntary conversion of property used by the taxpayer as his principal residence if the destruction, theft, seizure, requisition, or condemnation of such residence, or the sale or exchange of such residence under threat or imminence thereof, occurred after December 31, 1950. In the case of property purchased by the taxpayer which resulted, under the provisions of section 112 (f) (3), in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized as the result of a compulsory or involuntary conversion, the basis shall be the cost of such property decreased in the amount of the gain not so recognized; and if the property purchased consists of more than one piece of property, the basis determined under this sentence shall be allocated to the purchased properties in proportion to their respective costs.

[Sec. 113 (a) (9) as amended by sec. 2, Pub. Law 251 (82d Cong.); sec. 318 (b) (2), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.113 (a) (9)-1 Property acquired as a result of an involuntary conversion. (a) The provisions of the first sentence of section 113 (a) (9) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A vessel purchased by A in 1935 for $100,000 is destroyed in 1950 and A receives insurance in the amount of $200,000. Disregarding, for the purpose of this example, the adjustment for depreciation, if A invests $150,000 in a new vessel, taxable gain to the extent of $50,000 would be recognized. The basis of the new vessel is $100,000; that is, the cost of the old vessel ($100,000) minus the money received by the taxpayer which was not expended in the acquisition of the new vessel ($50,000) plus the amount of gain recognized upon the conversion ($50,000). If any amount in excess of the proceeds of the conversion is expended in the acquisition of the new property, such amount may be added to the basis otherwise determined.

(b) The provisions of the last sentence of section 113 (a) (9) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A taxpayer realizes $22,000 from the involuntary conversion of his barn in 1952; the adjusted basis of the barn to him was $10,000, and he spent in the same year $20,000 for a new barn which resulted in the nonrecognition of $10,000 of the $12,000 gain on the conversion. The unadjusted basis of the new barn to the taxpayer would be $10,000—the cost of the new barn ($20,000) less the amount of the gain not recognized on the conversion ($10,000). The unadjusted basis of the new barn would not be a substituted basis in the hands of the taxpayer within the meaning of section 113 (b) (2) (B). If the replacement of the converted barn had been made by the purchase of two smaller barns which, together, were similar or related in service or use to the converted barn and which cost $8,000 and $12,000, respectively, then the basis of the two barns would be $4,000 and $6,000, respectively, the cost of each barn ($8,000 and $12,000) less in each case the proportion of the gain not recognized on the conversion ($10,000) that the cost of each barn bears to the cost of both barns $\left(\frac{8,000}{20,000} \text{ and } \frac{12,000}{20,000}\right)$.

§ 39.113 (a) (10) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; wash sales of stock.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(10) Wash sales of stock. If the property consists of stock or securities the acquisition of which (or the contract or option to acquire which) resulted in the nondeductibility (under section 118 of this chapter or corresponding provisions of prior income tax laws, relating to wash sales) of the loss from the sale or other disposition of substantially identical stock or securities, then the basis shall be the basis of the stock or securities so sold or disposed of, increased or decreased, as the case may be, by the difference, if any, between the price at which the property was acquired and the price at which such substantially identical stock or securities were sold or otherwise disposed of.

§ 39.113 (a) (10)-1 Stocks or securities acquired in "wash sales." The application of section 113 (a) (10) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A purchased a share of common stock of the X Corporation for $100 in 1935, which he sold January 15, 1952, for $80. On February 1, 1952, he purchased a share of common stock of the same corporation for $90. No loss from the sale is recognized under section 118. The basis of the new share is $110; that is, the basis of the old share ($100) increased by $10, the excess of the price at which the new share was acquired ($90) over the price at which the old share was sold ($80).

Example (2). A purchased a share of common stock of the Y Corporation for $100 in 1935, which he sold January 15, 1952, for $80. On February 1, 1952, he purchased a share of common stock of the same corporation for $70. No loss from the sale is recognized under section 118. The basis of the new share is $90; that is, the basis of the old share ($100) decreased by $10, the excess of the price at which the old share was sold ($80) over the price at which the new share was acquired ($70).

§ 39.113 (a) (11) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired during affiliation.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(11) Property acquired during affiliation. In the case of property acquired by a corporation, during a period of affiliation, from a corporation with which it was affiliated, the basis of such property, after such period of affiliation, shall be determined, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, without regard to inter-company transactions in respect of which gain or loss was not recognized. For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "period of affiliation" means the period during which such corporations were affiliated (determined in accordance with the law applicable thereto) but does not include any taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1922, unless a consolidated return was made, nor any taxable year after the taxable year 1928. The basis in case of property acquired by a corporation during any period, in the taxable year 1929 or any subsequent taxable year, in respect of which a consolidated return is made by such corporation under section 141 of this chapter or the Revenue Act of 1928, 45 Stat. 831, or the Revenue Act of 1932, 47 Stat. 213, or the Revenue Act of 1934, 48 Stat. 720, or the Revenue Act of 1936, 49 Stat. 1698, or the Revenue Act of 1938, 52 Stat. 508, shall be determined in accordance with regulations prescribed under section 141 (b) of this chapter or the Revenue Act of 1928 or the Revenue Act of 1932 or the Revenue Act of 1934 or the Revenue Act of 1936 or the Revenue Act of 1938. The basis in the case of property held by a corporation during any period, in the taxable year 1929 or any subsequent taxable year, in respect of which a consolidated return is made by such corporation under section 141 of this chapter or the Revenue Act of 1928 or the Revenue Act of 1932 or the Revenue Act of 1934 or the Revenue Act of 1936 or the Revenue Act of 1938, shall be adjusted in respect of any items relating to such period, in accordance with regulations prescribed under section 141 (b) of this chapter or the Revenue Act of 1928 or the Revenue Act of 1932 or the Revenue Act of 1934 or the Revenue Act of 1936 or the Revenue Act of 1938, applicable to such period.

[Sec. 113 (a) (11) as amended by sec. 2. Pub. Law 18 (77th Cong.)]

§ 39.113 (a) (11)-1 Basis of property acquired during affiliation. (a) (1) The basis of property acquired by a corporation during a period of affiliation from a corporation with which it was affiliated shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the corporation from which acquired. This rule is applicable if the basis of the property is material in determining tax liability for any year, whether a separate return or a consolidated return is made in respect of such year. For the purpose of this section, the term "period of affiliation" means the period during which such corporations were affiliated (determined in accordance with the law applicable thereto), but does not include any taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1922, unless a consolidated return was made, nor any taxable year after the taxable year 1928.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, the Y Corporation, and the Z Corporation were affiliated for the taxable year 1920. During that year the X Corporation transferred assets to the Y Corporation for $120,000 cash, and the Y Corporation in turn transferred the assets during the same year to the Z Corporation for $130,000 cash. The assets were acquired by the X Corporation in 1916 at a cost of $100,000. The basis of the assets in the hands of the Z Corporation is $100,000.

(b) The basis of property acquired by a corporation during any period, in the taxable year 1929 or any subsequent taxable year, in respect of which a consolidated return was made or was required under the regulations governing the making of consolidated returns, shall be determined in accordance with such regulations. The basis in the case of property held by a corporation during any period, in the taxable year 1929 or any subsequent taxable year, in respect of which a consolidated return is made or is required under the regulations governing the making of consolidated returns, shall be adjusted in respect of any items relating to such period in accordance with such regulations.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in Regulations 129 (Part 24 of this Chapter) the basis of property after a consolidated return period shall be the same as immediately prior to the close of such period.

§ 39.113 (a) (12) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; basis established by Revenue Act of 1932.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(12) Basis established by Revenue Act of 1932. If the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, in any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1934, and the basis thereof, for the purposes of the Revenue Act of 1932, 47 Stat. 199, was prescribed by section 113 (a) (6), (7), or (9) of such Act, then for the purposes of this chapter the basis shall be the same as the basis therein prescribed in the Revenue Act of 1932.

§ 39.113 (a) (12)-1 Basis of property established by Revenue Act of 1932. (a) Section 113 (a) (12) provides that if the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1934, and the basis of the property, for the purposes of the Revenue Act of 1932, was prescribed by section 113 (a) (6) (7), or (9) of that act, then for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code the basis shall be the same as the basis prescribed in the Revenue Act of 1932.

(b) If, after December 31, 1923, and in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1934, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization and without the surrender of his stock, there was distributed to a shareholder in a corporation a party to the reorganization stock or securities of a corporation a party to the reorganization, then as is provided in section 113 (a) (9) of the Revenue Act of 1932, the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made must be apportioned between such stock and the stock or securities so distributed to the shareholder. The basis of the old shares and the new shares or securities shall be determined in accordance with the following rules:

(1) If the stock distributed in reorganization consists solely of stock in the distributing corporation and is all of substantially the same character and preference as the stock in respect of which the distribution is made, the basis of each share will be the quotient of the cost or other basis of the old shares of stock divided by the total number of the old and the new shares.

(2) If the stock distributed in reorganization is in whole or in part stock in a corporation a party to the reorganization other than the distributing corporation, or where the stock distributed in reorganization is in whole or in part stock of a character or preference materially different from the stock in respect of which the distribution is made, or if the distribution consists wholly or partly of securities other than stock, the cost or other basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution is made shall be apportioned between such stock and the stock or securities distributed in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the respective values of each class of stock or security, old and new, at the time of such distribution, and the basis of each share of stock or unit of security will be the quotient of the cost or other basis of the class of stock or security to which such share or unit belongs, divided by the number of shares or units in the class. Within the meaning of the foregoing provisions, securities are different in class from stocks, and stocks or securities in one corporation are different in class from stocks or securities in another corporation. In general, any material difference in character or preference or terms sufficient to distinguish one stock or security from another stock or security so that different values may properly be assigned thereto, will constitute a difference in class.

(3) If the stock in respect of which a distribution in reorganization is made was purchased at different times or at different prices, and the identity of the lots cannot be determined, any sale of the original stock will be charged to the earliest purchases of such stock (see § 39.22 (a)-8) and any sale of the stock or securities distributed in reorganization will be presumed to have been made from the stock or securities distributed in respect of the earliest purchased stock.

(4) If the stock in respect of which a distribution in reorganization is made was purchased at different times or at different prices, and the stock or securities distributed in reorganization cannot be identified as having been distributed in respect of any particular lot of such stock, then any sale of the stock or securities distributed in reorganization will be presumed to have been made from the stock or securities distributed in respect of the earliest purchased stock.

(c) If without the surrender of his stock there is acquired by a shareholder in a corporation a party to a reorganization, as a distribution in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, stock or securities in a corporation a party to the reorganization, such acquisition of new shares or securities by the shareholder will be treated as a dividend to the extent described in § 39.112 (g)-5.

§ 39.113 (a) (13) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired by or from partnerships.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(13) Partnerships. If the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, by a partnership and the basis is not otherwise determined under any other paragraph of this subsection, then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss recognized to the transferor upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made. If the property was distributed in kind by a partnership to any partner, the basis of such property in the hands of the partner shall be such part of the basis in his hands of his partnership interest as is properly allocable to such property.

§ 39.113 (a) (13)-1 Property contributed in kind by a partner to a partnership. The basis of property contributed in kind by a partner to partnership capital after February 28, 1913, is the cost or other basis thereof to the contributing partner. Annual allowances to the partnership for depletion and depreciation are to be computed on such basis. If such basis is greater than the fair market value of the property at the date of the transfer to the partnership, the annual depletion or depreciation allowances shall be allocated to and included in the determination of the distributive shares of the partners in accordance with their agreement in respect of the sharing of gains or losses affecting partnership capital. If the basis of such contributed property is less than the fair market value thereof at the date of transfer to the partnership, the annual allowances for depletion and depreciation are to be limited to such basis and may be apportioned among the partners according to their agreement with respect to the sharing of gains or losses affecting partnership capital. On the sale or other disposition of such contributed property by the partnership the gain or loss, determined on such transferred basis, adjusted as required by section 113 (b), shall be prorated in determining the distributive shares of the partners according to their gain or loss ratios on the disposition of a partnership asset under the partnership agreement. For rules as to allocation of partnership income in the case of family partnerships, see section 191 and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.113 (a) (13)-2 Readjustment of partnership interests. (a) When a partner retires from a partnership, or the partnership is dissolved, the partner realizes a gain or loss measured by the difference between the price received for his interest and the sum of the adjusted cost or other basis to him of his interest in the partnership plus the amount of his share in any undistributed partnership net income earned since he became a partner on which the income tax has been paid. However, if such interest in the partnership was acquired before March 1, 1913, both the cost or other basis as hereinbefore provided and the value of such interest as of such date, plus the amount of his share in any undistributed partnership net income earned since February 28, 1913, on which the income tax has been paid, shall be ascertained, and the gain derived or the loss sustained shall be computed as provided in § 39.111-1. See also section 117. If the partnership distributes its assets in kind and not in cash, the partner realizes no gain or loss until he disposes of the property received in liquidation. The basis of such property in the hands of the partner shall be such part of the basis in his hands of his partnership interest as is properly allocable to such property.

(b) If a new partner is admitted to the partnership, or an existing partnership is reorganized, the facts as to such change or reorganization should be fully set forth in the next return of income, in order that the Commissioner may determine whether any gain has been realized or loss sustained by any partner.

(c) For rules as to allocation of partnership income in the case of family partnerships, see section 191 and the regulations thereunder.

§ 39.113 (a) (14) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired before March 1, 1913.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(14) Property acquired before March 1, 1913. In the case of property acquired before March 1, 1913, if the basis otherwise determined under this subsection, adjusted (for the period prior to March 1, 1913) as provided in subsection (b), is less than the fair market value of the property as of March 1, 1913, then the basis for determining gain shall be such fair market value. In determining the fair market value of stock in a corporation as of March 1, 1913, due regard shall be given to the fair market value of the assets of the corporation as of that date.

§ 39.113 (a) (14)-1 Property acquired before March 1, 1913. (a) The basis as of March 1, 1913, for determining gain in the case of property acquired before that date, is the basis otherwise provided for such property under section 113 (a) adjusted for the period before March 1, 1913, or the fair market value of the property as of March 1, 1913, whichever is higher.

(b) The basis as of March 1, 1913, for determining loss in the case of property acquired before that date is the cost or other basis provided for such property under section 113 (a) adjusted as required by section 113 (b) but without reference to the fair market value of the property as of March 1, 1913. However, see sections 117 (k) (1) and 117 (k) (2) with respect to the determination of loss upon timber or coal which under the provisions of those sections is considered to be sold or exchanged.

(c) The application of section 113 (a) (14) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who makes his returns on the calendar year basis, purchased on March 1, 1903, property having a useful life of 50 years for $100,000. Assuming, for the purposes of this example, that there are no additions and betterments to be taken into account, the depreciation sustained on the property before March 1, 1913, was $10,000, so that the original cost adjusted as of March 1, 1913, for depreciation sustained prior to that date was $90,000. As of that date the property had a fair market value of $94,000, with a remaining life of 45 years. (i) For the purpose of determining gain from the sale or other disposition of the property on March 1, 1952, the basis of the property is the fair market value of $94,000 as of March 1, 1913, adjusted for depreciation for the period subsequent to February 28, 1913, computed on such fair market value. If it be assumed that the amount of depreciation deductions allowed (not less than the amount allowable) after February 28, 1913, to March, 1952, is in the aggregate sum of $81,467, the adjusted basis for determining gain in 1952 is $12,533 ($94,000 less $81,467). (ii) For the purpose of determining a loss from the sale or other disposition of such property in 1952, the basis of the property is the cost of the property, without reference to the fair market value as of March 1, 1913, adjusted for depreciation before March 1, 1913, and after February 28, 1913. The amount of depreciation sustained before March 1, 1913, in this example is $10,000, and if the amount of depreciation to be accounted for after February 28, 1913, is assumed to be $81,467, the aggregate amount of depreciation for which adjustment of such cost must be made is $91,467. The adjusted basis for determining the loss in 1952, is $8,533 ($100,000 less $91,467).

(d) What the fair market value of property was on March 1, 1913, is a question of fact to be established by competent evidence. In determining the fair market value of stock in a corporation, due regard shall be given to the fair market value of the corporate assets on such date. In the case of property traded in on public exchanges, actual sales at or about the basic date afford evidence of value. In general, the fair-market value of a block or aggregate of a particular kind of property is not to be determined by a forced sale price or by an estimate of what a whole block or aggregate would bring if placed upon the market at one and the same time, but such value should be determined by ascertaining as the basis the fair market value of each unit of the property. All relevant facts and elements of value as of the basic date should be considered in every case.

§ 39.113 (a) (15) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property received by a corporation on complete liquidation of another

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(15) Property received by a corporation on complete liquidation of another. If the property was received by a corporation upon a distribution in complete liquidation of another corporation within the meaning of section 112 (b) (6), then the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor. The basis of property with respect to which election has been made in pursuance of the last sentence of section 113 (a) (15) of the Revenue Act of 1936, as amended, shall; in the hands of the corporation making such election, be the basis prescribed in the Revenue Act of 1934, as amended.

§ 39.113 (a) (15)-1 Basis of property received by a corporation in complete liquidation of another corporation. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the basis of property received in complete liquidation, without the recognition of gain or loss as provided in section 112 (b) (6) shall be the same as the basis of the property in the hands of the liquidating corporation with proper adjustments as provided in section 113. See section 113 (b)

(b) In the case of property received in liquidation after December 31, 1935, and before June 23, 1936, in a taxable year of the recipient corporation beginning after December 31, 1935, the basis of such property in the hands of the recipient corporation shall be the basis prescribed by section 113 (a) (6) of the Revenue Act of 1934, as amended by the Revenue Act of 1935, if—

(1) Such property was received in a liquidation which was completed before June 23, 1936;

(2) Such liquidation constituted a complete liquidation within the meaning of section 112 (b) (6) of the Revenue Act of 1934, as added by the Revenue Act of 1935;

(3) No gain or loss would have been recognized under section 112 (b) (6) of the Revenue Act of 1934, as amended, upon the receipt of such property· and

(4) The recipient corporation (within 180 days after the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1938) under § 3.113 (a) (15)-1 of Regulations 94 (26 CFR, 1938 ed.) elected to have such basis apply to such property.

If such an election was made, the basis of such property received in liquidation shall be the cost or other basis (adjusted as provided in section 113) of the stock of the liquidating corporation surrendered in exchange for the property, decreased in the amount of money received and increased in the amount of gain or decreased in the amount of loss to the recipient corporation that was recognized upon the liquidation under the Revenue Act of 1936. If such property consists of more than one class of property the basis shall be allocated among the several properties (other than money) received, in the proportion that the fair market value of each such property as of the date of distribution bears to the fair market value of all such properties on that date.

§ 39.113 (a) (16) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; basis established by Revenue Act of 1934.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(16) Basis established by Revenue Act of 1934. If the property was acquired, after February 28, 1913, in any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1936, and the basis thereof, for the purposes of the Revenue Act of 1934 was prescribed by section 113 (a) (6), (7), or (8) of such Act, then for the purposes of this chapter the basis shall be the same as the basis therein prescribed in the Revenue Act of 1934.

§ 39.113 (a) (16)-1 Basis of property established by Revenue Act of 1934. Section 113 (a) (16) provides that if property was acquired after February 28, 1913, in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, and the basis of the property for the purposes of the Revenue Act of 1934 was prescribed by section 113 (a) (6) (7) or (8) of that act, then for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code the basis shall be the same as the basis therein prescribed under the Revenue Act of 1934. For example, if after December 31, 1920, and in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, property was acquired by a corporation by the issuance of its stock or securities in connection with a transaction which is not described in section 112 (b) (5) of the Code but which is described in section 112 (b) (5) of the Revenue Act of 1934, the basis of the property so acquired shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the transferor, with proper adjustments to the date of the exchange.

§ 39.113 (a) (17)-(18) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; cross reference; property received in certain corporate liquidations.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(17) Property acquired in connection with exchanges and distributions in obedience to certain orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission. If the property was acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, in any manner described in section 372 prior to its amendment by the Revenue Act of 1942, the basis shall be that prescribed in such section (prior to its amendment by such Act) with respect to such property. If the property was acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, in any manner described in section 372 (other than subsection (a) (2)) after its amendment by such Act, the basis shall be that prescribed in such section (after its amendment by such Act) with respect to such property.

[Sec. 113 (a) (17) as amended by sec. 171 (h), Rev. Act 1942]

(18) Property received in certain corporate liquidations. If the property was acquired by a shareholder in the liquidation of a corporation in cancellation or redemption of stock with respect to which gain was realized, but with respect to which, as the result of an election made by him under paragraph (7) of section 112 (b) of this Chapter (whether before or after its amendment by any revenue act) or of the Revenue Act of 1938, 52 Stat. 487, the extent to which gain was recognized was determined under such paragraph, then the basis shall be the same as the basis of such stock cancelled or redeemed in the liquidation, decreased in the amount of any money received by him, and increased in the amount of gain recognized to him.

[Sec. 113 (a) (18) as amended by sec. 120 (b), Rev. Act 1943; sec. 206 (b), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 316 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.113 (a) (18)-1 Basis of property received in certain corporate liquidations—(a) Property included. Section 113 (a) (18) applies only to property (other than money) acquired—

(1) By a qualified electing shareholder·

(2) Upon a distribution in complete liquidation of a domestic corporation

(i) Pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted after May 28, 1938, in accordance with which the distribution is in complete cancellation or redemption of all the stock and the transfer of all the property in the liquidation occurs within the month of December, 1938, or

(ii) Pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted after February 25, 1944, in accordance with which the distribution is in complete cancellation or redemption of all the stock and the transfer of all the property in the liquidation occurs within some one calendar month of the calendar year 1944; or

(iii) Pursuant to a plan of liquidation adopted after December 31, 1950, in accordance with which the distribution is in complete cancellation or redemption of all the stock and the transfer of all the property in the liquidation occurs within some one calendar month of the calendar year 1951 or 1952; and

(3) In cancellation or redemption of only those shares of stock which were owned by such qualified electing shareholder at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation and on which he realizes gain.

It applies to all the property, except money, so acquired, though such property may consist in whole or in part of stock or securities acquired by the liquidating corporation after April 9, 1938, if subdivision (i) of this subparagraph is applicable, or after December 10, 1943, if subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph is applicable, or after August 15, 1950, if subdivision (iii) of this subparagraph is applicable.

(b) Basis. (1) The basis of property so acquired is the same as the basis of the shares of stock, in cancellation or redemption of which such property was received, with proper adjustments to the date of acquisition decreased in the amount of such shares' ratable share of any money received in cancellation or redemption of shares of the same class, and increased in the amount of gain recognized under the provisions of section 112 (b) (7) of the Revenue Act of 1938, or section 112 (b) (7) of the Internal Revenue Code, as the case may be. If such property consists of more than one class of property, the basis shall be allocated among the several properties (other than money) acquired in the proportion that the fair market value of each such property as of the date of acquisition bears to the fair market value of all such properties on that date.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation distributed all its property in complete liquidation during the month of October, 1952, pursuant to the provisions of section 112 (b) (7) of the Internal Revenue Code. A, an individual and a qualified electing shareholder, received, in cancellation or redemption of 100 shares of stock owned by him at the time of the adoption of the plan of liquidation, $1,000 in cash, property (other than stock or securities acquired by the corporation after August 15, 1950) with a fair market value of $12,000, and stock acquired by the liquidating corporation after August 15, 1950, with a fair market value of $4,000. The basis of the shares owned by A was $100 per share, or $10,000. A's ratable share of the earnings and profits of the X Corporation accumulated after February 28, 1913 (computed as provided in section 112 (b) (7) of the Internal Revenue Code), was $2,500. His gain is $7,000, but under section 112 (b) (7) of the Internal Revenue Code only $5,000 of this gain is recognized, $2,500 thereof being taxed as a dividend. The basis of all the property other than money received by A is $14,000, computed as follows:

Adjusted basis of stock cancelled or redeemed	$10,000
Less money received	1,000
Remainder	9,000
Plus gain recognized	5,000
Basis of property acquired	14,000

The basis will be apportioned among the classes of property (other than money) received as follows: 12,000/16,000 of $14,000, or $10,500, to the property other than stock; 4,000/16,000 of $14,000, or $3,500, to the stock.

§ 39.113 (a) (19) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; stock dividends and stock rights.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(19) (A) If the property was acquired by a shareholder in a corporation and consists of stock in such corporation, or rights to acquire such stock, acquired by him after February 28, 1913, in a distribution by such corporation (hereinafter in this paragraph called "new stock"), or consists of stock in respect of which such distribution was made (hereinafter in this paragraph called "old stock") and

(i) The new stock was acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936; or

(ii) The new stock was acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, and its distribution did not constitute income to the shareholder within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution;

then the basis of the new stock and of the old stock, respectively, shall, in the shareholder's hands, be determined by allocating between the old stock and the new stock the adjusted basis of the old stock; such allocation to be made under regulations which shall be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

(B) Where the new stock consisted of rights to acquire stock and such rights were sold in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1939, and there was included in the gross income for such year the entire amount of the proceeds of such sale, then, if before the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1939 the taxpayer has not asserted (by claim for a refund or credit or otherwise) that any part of the proceeds of the sale of such new stock should be excluded from gross income for the year of its sale, the basis of the old stock shall be determined without regard to subparagraph (A); and no part of the proceeds of the sale of such new stock shall ever be excluded from the gross income of the year of such sale.

(C) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply if the new stock was acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, and there was included, as a dividend, in gross income for such year an amount on account of such stock, and after such inclusion such amount was not (before the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1939) excluded from gross income for such year.

(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply if the new stock or the old stock was sold or otherwise disposed of in a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1936, and the basis (determined by a decision of a court or the Board of Tax Appeals, or a closing agreement, and the decision or agreement became final before the ninetieth day after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1939) for determining gain or loss on such sale or other disposition was ascertained by a method other than that of allocation of the basis of the old stock.

§ 39.113 (a) (19)-1 Basis of stock and rights involved in the acquisition of stock dividends or stock rights: general rules—(a) Stock dividends. In the case of stock in respect of which was acquired a stock dividend of any character in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, or in respect of which was acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, a stock dividend which did not constitute income to the shareholder within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, the basis for determining gain or loss from a sale or other disposition of either the stock in respect of which the distribution was made or the stock dividend shall (except as otherwise prescribed in § 39.113 (a) (19)-2) be ascertained in accordance with the principles set forth in § 39.113 (a) (12)-1.

(b) Stock rights acquired after December 31, 1924. In the case of stock in respect of which were acquired after December 31, 1924, and before the first day of the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, stock subscription rights (whether or not constituting income to the shareholder within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution) or in respect of which were acquired in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, stock subscription rights which did not constitute income to the shareholder within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, and in the case of such rights, the basis for determining gain or loss from a sale or other disposition of either the stock in respect of which the distribution was made, or the subscription rights distributed, or the stock acquired in the exercise of such rights shall (except as otherwise prescribed in § 39.113 (a) (19)-2) be ascertained in accordance with the principles set forth in § 39.22 (a)-8.

(c) Stock rights acquired before January 1, 1925. In the case of stock in respect of which were acquired before January 1, 1925, stock subscription rights (whether or not constituting income to the shareholder within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution) and in the case of such rights, the basis for determining gain or loss from a sale or other disposition of either the stock in respect of which the distribution was made, or the subscription rights distributed, or the stock acquired in the exercise of such rights shall (except as otherwise prescribed in § 39.113 (a) (19)-2) be ascertained in accordance with the principles set forth in article 39 of Regulations 65.

§ 39.113 (a) (19)-2 Exceptions to general rules—(a) Proceeds of sale of rights reported as income. In the case of stock rights sold in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1939, the general rules for ascertaining the basis for determining gain or loss set forth in paragraphs (b) and (c) of § 39.113 (a) (19)-1, and in § 39.22 (a)-8 or article 39 of Regulations 65, as the case may be, shall not apply if the entire proceeds of such sale were included by the taxpayer as gross income for the year of the sale and if, before June 29, 1939, the taxpayer had not asserted by a claim for a refund or credit or otherwise that any part of such proceeds should not have been included in gross income for the year of the sale. In such cases, the basis for determining gain or loss from a subsequent sale or other disposition of the stock in respect of which the rights were acquired shall be the same as though the rights had not been acquired.

(b) Receipt of stock dividend or stock right reported as income in prior years. In the case of stock dividends or stock rights acquired in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, the general rules for ascertaining the basis for determining gain or loss set forth in §§ 39.113 (a) (19)-1, 39.113 (a) (12)-1, and 39.22 (a)-8, or article 39 of Regulations 65, as the case may be, shall not apply if for any reason there was included in the gross income of the shareholder as a dividend for such year, as, for example, pursuant to the provisions of section 201 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1918 or the corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts, or as a result of the decision of the Supreme Court in Koshland v. Helvering (298 U. S. 441) an amount reflecting the acquisition of such stock dividend or stock rights, and if before June 29, 1939, such amount was not excluded from gross income for such year. In such cases, the basis for determining gain or loss with respect to the old stock shall be the same as though the stock dividends or the stock rights had not been acquired, and the basis with respect to the stock dividend or stock right shall be an amount equal to that at which such stock dividend or stock right was included in gross income for the year of its acquisition.

(c) Gain or loss upon sale of old or new stock finally determined upon basis inconsistent with general rules. The general rules for ascertaining the basis for determining gain or loss set forth in § 39.113 (a) (19)-1 shall not apply with respect to the old stock, the new stock, or the subscription rights to acquire new stock, remaining on hand after a sale or other disposition of old stock, subscription rights, or new stock effected in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1936, if the basis for determining gain or loss on such sale or other disposition was fixed by a decision of a court or The Tax Court of the United States or by a closing agreement, and if such decision or closing agreement became final before September 27, 1939, and if the basis for determining gain or loss upon such sale or other disposition was fixed by a method other than that of allocation of basis provided by the general rule. In such cases, the basis for determining gain or loss with respect to the remaining shares shall be fixed in a manner consistent with the prior determination to the end that, the sale or other disposition of all lots being considered, the taxpayer will have effected ultimately a tax-free recovery of the total cost or other basis of his original shares, and no more.

§ 39.113 (a) (20) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired by railroad corporation.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(20) Property acquired by railroad corporation. If the property of a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, was acquired after December 31, 1938, in pursuance of an order of the court having jurisdiction of such corporation—

(A) In a receivership proceeding, or

(B) In a proceeding under section 77 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, and the acquiring corporation is a railroad corporation, as defined in section 77m of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, organized or made use of to effectuate a plan or [of] reorganization approved by the court in such proceeding, the basis shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the railroad corporation whose property was so acquired. The term "reorganization," as used in this paragraph, shall not be limited by the definition of such term in section 112 (g).

[Sec. 113 (a) (20) as added by sec. 142 (b), Rev. Act 1942; amended by sec. 126 (b), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.113 (a) (20)-1 Property acquired by railroad corporation in a receivership or railroad reorganization proceeding. (a) Section 113 (a) (20) sets forth certain conditions under which the basis of property acquired by a railroad corporation is the same as it would have been in the hands of the railroad corporation whose property was acquired. For the purpose of section 113 (a) (20) it is unnecessary that the acquisition in question be a direct transfer from the corporation undergoing reorganization or that such reorganization constitute a reorganization within the meaning of section 112 (g) It is sufficient if the acquisition is in pursuance of an order of the court and is an integral step in the consummation of a reorganization plan approved by the court having jurisdiction of the proceeding.

(b) If the conditions of section 113 (a) (20) are satisfied, then for the purpose of determining basis, the provisions of section 113 (a) (20) only shall apply, notwithstanding that the transaction might also fall within another provision of section 113 (a)

§ 39.113 (a) (21) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property property acquired by street, suburban, or interurban electric railway corporation.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(21) Property acquired by street, suburban, or interurban electric railway corporation. If the property of any street, suburban, or interurban electric railway corporation engaged as a common carrier in the transportation of persons or property in interstate commerce was acquired after December 31, 1934, in pursuance of an order of the court having jurisdiction of such corporation in a proceeding under section 77B of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, and the acquiring corporation is a street, suburban, or interurban electric railway engaged as a common carrier in the transportation of persons or property in interstate commerce, organized or made use of to effectuate a plan of reorganization approved by the court in such proceeding, then, notwithstanding the provisions of section 270 of Chapter X of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, the basis, for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1939, shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the corporation whose property was so acquired. The term "reorganization" as used in this paragraph, shall not be limited by the definition of such term in section 112 (g).

[Sec. 113 (a) (21) as added by sec. 142 (c), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.113 (a) (21)-1 Property acquired by electric railway corporation in corporate reorganization proceeding. Subject to the limitations and conditions set forth in section 113 (a) (21), if the reorganization under section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act, 48 Stat. 912, of an electric railway corporation results in the acquisition of the property of such corporation by another corporate entity, the basis of such property in the hands of the acquiring corporation is the same as it would be in the hands of the old corporation. It is requisite to the application of the section that both corporations be street, suburban, or interurban electric railway corporations engaged in the transportation of persons or property in interstate commerce, and that the acquisition is in pursuance of an order of the court and is an integral step in the consummation of a reorganization plan approved by the court having jurisdiction of the proceeding. If section 113 (a) (21) applies, section 270 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 670), relating to the adjustment of basis by reason of the cancellation or reduction of indebtedness in a corporate reorganization proceeding, is inapplicable. Moreover, if the transaction is within the provisions of section 113 (a) (21) and may also be considered to be within any other provision of section 113 (a), then the provisions of section 113 (a) (21) only shall apply.

§ 39.113 (a) (22) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; property acquired on reorganization of certain corporations.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that—* * *

(22) Property acquired on reorganization of certain corporations. If the property was acquired by a corporation upon a transfer to which section 112 (b) (10), or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates to section 112 (b) (10), is applicable, then, notwithstanding the provisions of section 270 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, the basis in the hands of the acquiring corporation shall be the same as it would be in the hands of the corporation whose property was so acquired, increased in the amount of gain recognized to the corporation whose property was so acquired under the law applicable to the year in which the acquisition occurred, and such basis shall not be adjusted under subsection (b) (3) by reason of a discharge of indebtedness pursuant to the plan of reorganization under which such transfer was made.

[Sec. 113 (a) (22) as added by sec. 121 (c) (3), Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.113 (a) (22)-1 Basis of property acquired by corporation as result of certain corporate reorganization or receivership proceedings. (a) If, as the result of a transaction described in section 112

(b) (10) or so much of section 112 (d) or (e) as relates thereto, the property of an insolvent corporation is transferred, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to a corporation organized or made use of to effectuate such plan, the basis of such property in the hands of the acquiring corporation is the same as it would be in the hands of the insolvent corporation, increased in the amount of gain recognized upon such transfer under the law applicable to the year in which the transfer was made. In any such case, the adjustments to basis provided by section 270 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 670) or section 113 (b) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code, shall not be made in respect of any indebtedness canceled pursuant to the plan of reorganization under which the transfer was made. If the transaction falls within the provisions of section 113 (a) (22) the basis of the property involved shall be determined pursuant to such provisions, notwithstanding that the transaction might otherwise fall within another provision of section 113 (a)

(b) The provisions of section 113 (a) (22) are applicable in the determination of basis for all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1933, except that the basis so determined shall not be given effect in the determination of the tax liability for any taxable year beginning January 1, 1943. With the exception indicated, the basis so prescribed is applicable from the date of acquisition of such property. For example, the provisions of section 113 (b) relating to adjusted basis shall be applied as if section 113 (a) (22) were a part of the Internal Revenue Code and prior internal revenue laws applicable to all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1933. Hence, in determining the amount of the adjustments for depreciation, depletion, etc., under the provisions of section 113 (b) (1) (B) the "amount allowable" is the amount computed with reference to the basis provided in section 113 (a) (22)

(c) The effect of the application of section 113 (a) (22) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 1, 1935, the Y Corporation, a taxpayer making its returns on the calendar year basis, acquired depreciable property from the X Corporation as the result of a transaction described in section 113 (a) (22). On January 1, 1935, the property had, in the hands of the X Corporation, a basis of $200,000, an adjusted basis of $150,000, a fair market value as of January 1, 1935, of $80,000, and an estimated remaining life of 20 years. The 1935 transaction was treated as a taxable exchange and, accordingly, the Y Corporation claimed and was allowed depreciation in the amount of $4,000 for each of the eight taxable years 1935 through 1942, inclusive. For each of the nine taxable years 1943 through 1951, inclusive, the Y Corporation claimed and was allowed depreciation in the amount of $7,500. On June 30, 1952, the property was sold for $10,000, cash. The amount of the loss sustained upon the sale is computed as follows:

Basis to X Corporation		$200,000
Adjustment for depreciation in the hands of X Corporation (sec. 113 (b))		50,000
Adjusted basis for depreciation in the hands of both X and Y Corporations (sec. 113 (a) (22))		$150,000
Deduct:
Depreciation allowable in amount of $7,500 per year (1/20 of $150,000) for 8 years, from Jan. 1, 1935, through Dec. 31, 1942	$60,000
Depreciation allowable Jan. 1, 1943, to June 30, 1952 (9½ years at $7,500)	71,250
		131,250
Adjusted basis for computing gain or loss		18,750
Sale price		10,000
Loss sustained		8,750

For the taxable year 1943 and succeeding taxable years, the Y Corporation is entitled to deductions for depreciation in respect of such property in the amounts of $7,500 in the determination of its tax liabilities for such years. But no change in the tax liability is authorized for preceding taxable years by reason of the difference between the $7,500 depreciation allowable and the $4,000 deduction previously allowed.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the property acquired by the Y Corporation had a fair market value as of January 1, 1935, of $180,000, instead of $80,000, and that the Y Corporation claimed and was allowed depreciation in the amount of $9,000 for each of the eight taxable years 1935 to 1942, inclusive, and in the amount of $6,500 for the taxable years 1943 to 1951, inclusive. In such case, the amount of the loss sustained upon the sale of the property would be computed as follows:

Adjusted basis for depreciation in the hands of Y Corporation as computed in example (1)		$150,000
Deduct:
Depreciation allowed in the amount of $9,000 per year for 8 years, Jan. 1, 1935, to Dec. 31, 1942	$72,000
Depreciation allowable Jan. 1, 1943, to June 30, 1952, inclusive (9½ times $6,500)	61,750
		133,750
Adjusted basis for computing gain or loss		16,250
Sale price		10,000
Loss sustained		6,250

No change in the tax liability is authorized for taxable years preceding 1943 by reason of the difference between the $7,500 depreciation allowable and the $9,000 deduction previously allowed.

§ 39.113 (a) (23) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; basis (unadjusted) of property; stock acquired in tax-free distributions.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss—(a) Basis (unadjusted) of property. The basis of property shall be the cost of such property; except that— * * *

(23) Tax-free distributions. If the property consists of stock distributed after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1951 to a taxpayer in connection with a transaction described in section 112 (b) (11) (hereinafter in this paragraph called "new stock"), or consists of stock in respect of which such distribution was made (hereinafter in this paragraph called "old stock"), then the basis of the new stock and of the old stock, respectively, shall, in the shareholder's hands, be determined by allocating between the old stock and the new stock the adjusted basis of the old stock; such allocation to be made under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

[Sec. 113 (a) (23) as added by sec. 317 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.113 (a) (23)-1 Basis of stock on certain distributions on reorganization. The distribution, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, to a shareholder of a corporation (a party to the reorganization) of stock in another corporation (also a party to the reorganization) may be within the provisions of section 112 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1932, or the corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws, if made before January 1, 1934, or may be within the provisions of section 112 (b) (11) if made after October 20, 1951, and if the distribution consists of stock other than preferred stock. Section 112 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1932 and section 112 (b) (11) provide that no gain shall be recognized to the shareholder in the case of such distribution. The basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made and of the stock distributed to the shareholder is ascertained in accordance with the principles set forth in § 39.113 (a) (12)-1 in the case of such a distribution made before January 1, 1934. The same principles of § 39.113 (a) (12)-1 shall apply to the determination of the basis of such stock in the case of a distribution after October 20, 1951, to which section 112 (b) (11) is applicable.

§ 39.113 (b) (1) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; general rule.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(b) Adjusted basis. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, whenever acquired, shall be the basis determined under subsection (a), adjusted as hereinafter provided.

(1) General rule. Proper adjustment in respect of the property shall in all cases be made—

(A) For expenditures, receipts, losses, or other items, properly chargeable to capital account, but no such adjustment shall be made for taxes or other carrying charges, or for expenditures described in section 23 (bb), for which deductions have been taken by the taxpayer in determining net income for the taxable year or prior taxable years;

(B) In respect of any period since February 28, 1913, for exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion, to the extent of the amount—

(i) Allowed as deductions in computing net income under this chapter or prior income tax laws, and

(ii) Resulting (by reason of the deductions so allowed) in a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes under this chapter (other than subchapter E), subchapter E of chapter 2, or prior income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax laws, but not less than the amount allowable under this chapter or prior income tax laws. Clause (ii) of this subparagraph shall not apply in respect of any period since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, unless an election has been made under subsection (d).

Where for any taxable year prior to the taxable year 1932 the depletion allowance was based on discovery value or a percentage of income, then the adjustment for depletion for such year shall be based on the depletion which would have been allowable for such year if computed without reference to discovery value or a percentage of income;

(C) In respect of any period prior to March 1, 1913, for exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion, to the extent sustained;

(D) In the case of stock (to the extent not provided for in the foregoing subparagraphs) for the amount of distributions previously made which, under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made, either were tax-free or were applicable in reduction of basis (not including distributions made by a corporation, which was classified as a personal service corporation under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1918, Feb. 24, 1919, c. 18, 40 Stat. 1057, or the Revenue Act of 1921, Nov. 23, 1921, c. 136, 42 Stat. 227, out of its earnings or profits which were taxable in accordance with the provisions of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or 1921);

(E) To the extent provided in section 337 (f) in the case of the stock of United States shareholders in a foreign personal holding company; and

(F) To the extent provided in section 28 (h) in the case of amounts specified in a shareholder's consent made under section 28.

(G) In the case of property pledged to the Commodity Credit Corporation, to the extent of the amount received as a loan from the Commodity Credit Corporation and treated by the taxpayer as income for the year in which received pursuant to section 123 of this chapter, and to the extent of any deficiency on such loan with respect to which the taxpayer has been relieved from liability.

(H) In the case of any bond (as defined in section 125) the interest on which is wholly exempt from the tax imposed by this chapter, to the extent of the amortizable bond premium disallowable as a deduction pursuant to section 125 (a) (2), and in the case of any other bond (as defined in such section) to the extent of the deductions allowable pursuant to section 125 (a) (1) with respect thereto.

(I) In the case of any short-term municipal bond (as defined in section 22 (o)), to the extent provided in section 22 (o) (1) (B).

(J) For amounts allowed as deductions as deferred expenses under section 23 (cc) (2) (relating to certain expenditures in the development of mines) and resulting in a reduction of the taxpayer's taxes under this chapter, but not less than the amounts allowable under such section for the taxable year and prior years.

(K) In the case of a residence the acquisition of which resulted, under the provisions of section 112 (n), in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized upon the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of another residence, to the extent provided in section 112 (n) (4).

(L) For deductions to the extent disallowed under section 24 (f), notwithstanding the provisions of any other subparagraph of this paragraph.

(M) For amounts allowed as deductions as deferred expenses under section 23 (ff) (2) (relating to certain exploration expenditures) and resulting in a reduction of the taxpayer's taxes under this chapter, but not less than the amounts allowable under such section for the taxable year and prior years.

[Sec. 113 (b) (1) as amended by sec. 223 (b), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 126 (c), 130 (b), Rev. Act 1942; secs. 203 (b) (1), 204 (b), Rev. Act 1950; secs. 309 (b), 318 (b) (3), 323 (b) (2), 342 (b), Rev. Act 1951; sec. 1, Pub. Law 539 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.113 (b) (1)-1 Adjusted basis—(a) General rule. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property is the cost of such property or, in the case of such property as is described in section 113 (a) (1) to (23) inclusive, the basis therein provided, adjusted to the extent provided in section 113 (b)

(b) Items properly chargeable to capital account. (1) The cost or other basis shall be properly adjusted for any expenditure, receipt, loss, or other item, properly chargeable to capital account, including the cost of improvements and betterments made to the property. In the case of mines and oil or gas wells the following shall not be considered as items properly chargeable to capital account: (i) Expenditures made in the taxable year 1932 or subsequent taxable years which are allowable under article 235 or 236 of Regulations 77, article 23 (m)-15 or 23 (m)-16 of Regulations 86, article 23 (m)-15 or 23 (m)-16 of Regulations 94 (26 CFR, 1938 ed., Part 3) article 23 (m)-15 or 23 (m)-16 of Regulations 101 (26 CFR, 1938 ed., Part 9) § 19.23 (m)-15 or § 19.23 (m)-16 of Regulations 103 (26 CFR, 1938 ed., Supps.) § 29.23 (m)-15 or § 29.23 (m)-16 of Regulations 111 (26 CFR, 1949 ed., Supps.) and § 39.23 (m)-15 or § 39.23 (m)-16 as deductions in computing net income; (ii) expenditures made in taxable years prior to 1932 which were allowed, or which may hereafter be allowed, as deductions in computing the net income of the taxpayer for such taxable years.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who makes his returns on the calendar year basis, purchased property in 1941 for $10,000. He subsequently expended $6,000 for improvements. Disregarding, for the purpose of this example, the adjustments required for depreciation, the adjusted basis of the property is $16,000. If A sells the property in 1952 for $20,000, the amount of his gain will be $4,000.

(3) Capital expenditures and carrying charges with respect to property (whether real or personal, improved or unimproved, and whether productive or unproductive) such as taxes and interest, which the taxpayer may elect to treat either as chargeable to capital account or, in the manner provided in § 39.24 (a)-6 (c) as an allowable deduction, but for which deductions have not been taken for any taxable year, are properly chargeable to capital account. The term "taxes" for this purpose includes duties and excise taxes (see § 39.23 (c)-2) but does not include income taxes.

(4) Expenditures to establish, maintain, or increase the circulation of a newspaper, magazine, or other periodical, described in section 23 (bb) are chargeable to capital account only in accordance with and in the manner provided in § 39.23 (bb)-1.

(c) Exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion for periods since February 28, 1913—(1) In general. (i) The cost or other basis must be decreased, to the extent provided in subparagraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this paragraph, by the amount of the deductions for exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion. The adjustment required for any taxable year or period is the amount allowed (or the portion thereof referred to in subparagraph (2) (i) or subparagraph (4) (i) of this paragraph, as the case may be) or the amount allowable for such year or period under the law applicable thereto, whichever is the greater amount. A taxpayer is not permitted to take advantage in a later year of his prior failure to take any depreciation allowance or of his action in taking an allowance plainly inadequate under the known facts in prior years. The determination of the amount properly allowable shall, however, be made on the basis of facts reasonably known to exist at the end of such year or period. The aggregate sum of the greater of such annual amounts is the amount by which the cost or other basis of the property shall be adjusted.

(ii) The deductions by which the cost or other basis is to be decreased shall include deductions allowed under section 114 (b) (2), (3) and (4) of the Revenue Act of 1932, the Revenue Act of 1934, the Revenue Act of 1936, the Revenue Act of 1938, and the Internal Revenue Code, for the taxable year 1932 and subsequent taxable years, but the amount of the diminution in respect of depletion for taxable years before 1932 shall not exceed a depletion deduction computed without reference to discovery value in the case of mines, or without reference to discovery value or a percentage of income in the case of oil and gas wells.

(2) Adjustment for periods beginning on or after January 1, 1952. The decrease required by subparagraph (1) of this paragraph for deductions in respect of any period beginning on or after January 1, 1952, shall be whichever is the greater of the following amounts:

(i) The amount allowed as deductions in computing net income under chapter 1 and resulting (by reason of the deductions so allowed) in a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes under chapter 1 (other than subchapter E, relating to the tax on self-employment income),

(ii) The amount properly allowable as deductions in computing net income under chapter 1 (whether or not the amount properly allowable would have caused a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes)

(3) Adjustment for periods since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, where no election made. Except where an election has been properly made under section 113 (d) (see subparagraph (4) of this paragraph), the decrease required by paragraph (1) for deductions in respect of any period since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, shall be whichever of the following amounts is the greater:

(i) The amount allowed as deductions in computing net income under chapter 1 or prior income tax laws;

(ii) The amount properly allowable in computing net income under chapter 1 or prior income tax laws.

For the purpose of determining the decrease required by this subparagraph it is immaterial whether or not the amount under subdivision (i) of this subparagraph or the amount under subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph would have resulted in a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes.

(4) Adjustment for period since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, where election made under section 113 (d). If an election has been properly made under section 113 (d) (see § 39.113 (d)-1) the decrease required by subparagraph (1) of this paragraph for deductions in respect of any period since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, shall be whichever is the greater of the following amounts:

(i) The amount allowed as deductions in computing net income under chapter 1 or prior income tax laws and resulting (by reason of the deductions so allowed) in a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes under chapter 1 (other than subchapter E, relating to the tax on self-employment income) subchapter E of chapter 2, or prior income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax laws;

(ii) The amount properly allowable as deductions in computing net income under chapter 1 or prior income tax laws (whether or not the amount properly allowable would have caused a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes)

(5) Determination of amount allowed which reduced taxpayer's taxes. (i) For the purpose of determining whether the amount allowed which resulted in a reduction for any taxable year of the taxpayer's taxes under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code (other than subchapter E) subchapter E of chapter 2, or prior income, war-profits, or excess-profits tax laws, which amount is hereinafter referred to as the "tax-benefit amount allowed," exceeded the amount allowable, a determination must be made of that portion of the excess of the amount allowed over the amount allowable which, if disallowed, would not have resulted in an increase in any such tax previously determined. If the entire excess of the amount allowed over the amount allowable could be disallowed without any such increase in tax, the tax-benefit amount allowed shall not be considered to have exceeded the amount allowable. If only part of such excess could be disallowed without any such increase in tax, the tax-benefit amount allowed shall be considered to exceed the amount allowable to the extent of the remainder of such excess.

(ii) For this purpose, the tax previously determined shall be determined under the principles of section 3801 (d) the only adjustments made in determining whether there would be an increase in tax shall be those resulting from the disallowance of the amount allowed. The taxable years for which the determination is made shall be the taxable year for which the deduction was allowed and any other taxable year which would be affected by the disallowance of such deduction. Examples of such other taxable years are taxable years to which there was a carry-over or carry-back of a net operating loss or an unused excess-profits credit from the taxable year for which the deduction for depreciation, etc., was allowed, and taxable years for which a computation under section 22 (b) (12) or section 127 was made by reference to the taxable year for which the deduction was allowed. In determining whether the disallowance of any part of the deduction for depreciation, etc., would not have resulted in an increase in any tax previously determined, proper adjustment must be made for previous determinations under section 452, 734, or 3801, and for any previous application of section 113 (b) (1) (B) (ii).

(iii) If a determination under section 113 (b) (1) (B) (ii) must be made with respect to several properties for each of which the amount allowed for the taxable year exceeded the amount allowable, the tax-benefit amount allowed with respect to each of such properties shall be an allocated portion of the tax-benefit amount allowed determined by reference to the sum of the amounts allowed and the sum of the amounts allowable with respect to such several properties.

(iv) In the case of property held by a partnership or trust, the computation of the tax-benefit amount allowed shall take into account the tax benefit of the partners or beneficiaries, as the case may be, from the deduction by the partnership or trust of the amount allowed to the partnership or the trust. For this purpose, the determination of the amount allowed which resulted in a tax benefit to the partners or beneficiaries shall be made in the same manner as that provided above with respect to the taxes of the person holding the property.

(v) A taxpayer seeking to limit the adjustment to basis to the tax-benefit amount allowed for any period, in lieu of the amount allowed, must establish the tax-benefit amount allowed. A failure of adequate proof as to the tax-benefit amount allowed with respect to one period does not preclude the taxpayer from limiting the adjustment to basis to the tax-benefit amount allowed with respect to another period for which adequate proof is available. For example, a corporate transferee may have available adequate records with respect to the tax effect of the deduction for the taxable years 1946 and 1947 of erroneous depreciation, but may not have available adequate records with respect to the deduction of excessive depreciation for a prior period during which the property was held by its transferor. In such case, assuming a proper election is made under section 113 (d), the corporate transferee shall not be denied the right to apply this section with respect to the erroneous depreciation for the period for which adequate proof is available.

(6) Determination of amount allowable in prior taxable years. (i) Under section 113 (b) (1) (B), one of the factors involved in determining the adjustment to basis as of any date is the amount allowable for periods prior to such date. The amount allowable for such prior periods is determined under the law applicable to such prior periods; all adjustments required by the law applicable to such periods are made in determining the adjusted basis of the property for the purpose of determining the amount allowable. Since provisions corresponding to the amendment to section 113 (b) (1) (B) made by Public Law 539 (82d Congress) are deemed included in all revenue laws applicable to taxable years ending after December 31, 1931, the amount allowable for any such taxable year must be computed with the application of such provisions. For example, if the adjusted basis of property is determined as of January 1, 1952, if an election was properly made under section 113 (d) and if the property was held since January 1, 1930, then the amount allowable which is taken into account in computing the adjusted basis as of January 1, 1952, shall be determined for all taxable years ending after December 31, 1931, with the application to each such taxable year of the provisions of section 113 (b) (1) (B) as amended by Public Law 539. Public Law 539 made no change in the law applicable in determining the amount allowable for taxable years ending before January 1, 1932. In any case in which, prior to the enactment of Public Law 539 (July 14, 1952) there was a final decision of a court determining the amount allowable for a particular taxable year, such determination (but only for the purpose of determining the adjustment under section 113 (b) (1) (B) by reference to such allowable amount) must be adjusted to the extent necessary to reflect the amendment made by Public Law 539 to the law applicable to the taxable year for which the amount was allowable.

(ii) Although Public Law 539 amends the law applicable to all taxable years ending after December 31, 1931, the amendment does not open for refund, credit, or assessment of a deficiency any taxable year for which such refund, credit, or assessment is barred by any law or rule of law.

(7) Property with transferred basis. The following rules apply in the determination of the adjustments to basis of property in the hands of a transferee, donee, or grantee which are required by section 113 (b) (2) with respect to the period the property was held by the transferor, donor, or grantor:

(i) An election under section 113 (d) by a transferor, donor, or grantor made after the date of the transfer, gift, or grant of the property shall not affect the basis of such property in the hands of the transferee, donee, or grantee. Such an election made before the date of the transfer must be taken into account in determining under section 113 (b) (2) the adjustments to basis as of the date of the transfer, gift, or grant, whether or not an election under section 113 (d) was made by the transferee, donee, or grantee.

(ii) An election by the transferee, donee, or grantee shall be applicable in determining the adjustments to basis for the period during which the property was held by the transferor, donor, or grantor, whether or not the transferor, donor, or grantor had made an election, provided that the property was held by the transferee, donee, or grantee at any time on or before the date on which his election was made.

(8) The application of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The case of Corporation A discloses the following facts:

(1) Year	(2) Amount allowed	(3) Amount allowed which reduced taxpayer's taxes	(4) Amount allowable	(5) Amount allowable but not less than amount allowed	(6) Amount allowable but not less than amount allowed which reduced taxpayer's taxes
1949	$6,000	$5,500	$5,000	$6,000	$5,500
1950	7,000	7,000	6,500	7,000	7,000
1951	5,000	4,000	6,500	6,500	6,500
Total, 1949-51				19,500	19,000
1952	6,500	6,500	6,000		6,500
1953	5,000	4,000	4,000		4,000
1954	4,500	4,500	6,000		6,000
Total, 1952-54					16,500

The cost or other basis is to be adjusted by $16,500 with respect to the years 1952-1954, that is, by the amount allowable but not less than the amount allowed which reduced the taxpayer's taxes. An adjustment must also be made with respect to the years 1949-1951, the amount of such adjustment depending upon whether an election was properly made under section 113 (d). If no such election was made, the amount of the adjustment with respect to the years 1949-1951 is $19,500, that is, the amount allowed but not less than the amount allowable. If an election was properly made, the amount of the adjustment with respect to the years 1949-1951 is $19,000, that is, the amount allowable but not less than the amount allowed which reduced the taxpayer's taxes.

Example (2). Corporation A purchased a building on January 1, 1950, at a cost of $100,000. On the basis of the facts reasonably known to exist at the end of 1950, a period of 50 years should have been used as the correct useful life of the building; nevertheless, depreciation was computed by Corporation A on the basis of a useful life of 25 years, and was allowed for 1950 through 1953 as a deduction in an annual amount of $4,000. The building was sold on January 1, 1954. Corporation A did not make an election under section 113 (d). No part of the amount allowed Corporation A for any of the years 1950 through 1953 resulted in a reduction of Corporation A's taxes. The adjusted basis of the building as of January 1, 1954, is $88,166, computed as follows:

Year	Adjustments to basis as of beginning of taxable year	Adjusted basis	Remaining life	Depreciation allowable	Depreciation allowed
1950		$100,000	50	$2,000	$4,000
1951	$4,000	96,000	49	1,959	4,000
1952	8,000	92,000	48	1,917	4,000
1953	9,917	90,083	47	1,917	4,000
1954	11,834	88,166

Example (3). The facts are the same as in Example (2), except that Corporation A made a proper election under section 113 (d). In such case, the adjusted basis of the building as of January 1, 1954, is $92,000, computed as follows:

Year	Adjustments to basis as of beginning of taxable year	Adjusted basis	Remaining life	Depreciation allowable	Depreciation allowed
1950		$100,000	50	$2,000	$4,000
1951	$2,000	98,000	49	2,000	4,000
1952	4,000	96,000	48	2,000	4,000
1953	6,000	94,000	47	2,000	4,000
1954	8,000	92,000

Example (4). If it is assumed that in Example (2), or in Example (3), all of the deduction allowed Corporation A for 1953 had resulted in a reduction of A's taxes, the adjustment to the basis of the building for depreciation for 1953 would reflect the entire $4,000 deduction. In such case, the adjusted basis of the building as of January 1, 1954, would be $86,083 in Example (2), and $90,000 in Example (3).

Example (5). The facts are the same as in Example (2) except that for the year 1950 all of the $4,000 amount allowed Corporation A as a deduction for depreciation for that year resulted in a reduction of A's taxes. In such case, the adjustments to the basis of the building remain the same as those set forth in Example (2).

Example (6). The facts are the same as in Example (3) except that for the year 1950 all of the $4,000 amount allowed Corporation A as a deduction for depreciation resulted in a reduction of A's taxes. In such case, the adjusted basis of the building as of January 1, 1954, is $90,123, computed as follows:

Year	Adjustments to basis as of beginning of taxable year	Adjusted basis	Remaining life	Depreciation allowable	Depreciation allowed
1950		$100,000	50	$2,000	$4,000
1951	$4,000	96,000	49	1,959	4,000
1952	5,959	94,041	48	1,959	4,000
1953	7,918	92,082	47	1,959	4,000
1954	9,877	90,123

(d) Exhaustion, wear and tear obsolescence, amortization, and depletion, periods prior to March 1, 1913. The cost or other basis shall also be decreased by the exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, amortization, and depletion sustained in respect of any period prior to March 1, 1913.

(e) Certain stock distributions. (1) In the case of stock, the cost or other basis must be diminished by the amount of distributions previously made which, under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made, either were tax-free or were applicable in reduction of basis (not including distributions made by a corporation, which was classified as a personal service corporation under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1918 or 1921, out of its earnings or profits which were taxable in accordance with the provisions of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or 1921)

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who makes his returns upon the calendar year basis, purchased stock in 1923 for $5,000. He received in 1924 a distribution of $2,000 paid out of earnings and profits of the corporation accumulated before March 1, 1913. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of the stock in 1952 is $5,000 less $2,000, or $3,000, and the amount of the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of the stock is the difference between $3,000 and the amount realized from the sale or other disposition.

(f) Stock of United States shareholders of a foreign personal holding company. In the case of the stock of the United States shareholders in a foreign personal holding company the cost or other basis must be adjusted also to the extent provided in section 337 (f)

(g) Other applicable rules. (1) Adjustments must always be made to eliminate double deductions or their equivalent. Thus, in the case of the stock of a subsidiary company, the basis thereof must be properly adjusted for the amount of the subsidiary company's losses for the years in which consolidated returns were made.

(2) In determining basis, and adjustments to basis, the principles of estoppel apply, as elsewhere under the Internal Revenue Code.

(3) For adjustment to basis of bonds on account of amortizable bond premium, see §§ 39.125 (a)-1 to 39.125 (c)-2, inclusive. For adjustment to basis of short-term municipal bonds as defined in section 22 (o) (2) (A), see § 39.22 (o)-1.

(4) For adjustment to basis on account of expenditures attributable to a grant or loan made to a taxpayer by the United States for the encouragement of exploration for, or development or mining of, critical and strategic minerals or metals, see section 22 (b) (15) and § 39.22 (b) (15-1.

(5) With respect to taxable years ending after December 31, 1950, the basis shall also be adjusted to take into account the amount of expenditures for development and exploration of mines or mineral deposits treated as deferred expenses under section 23 (cc) (2) and (ff) (2) The basis so adjusted shall be reduced by the amount of such expenditures allowed as deductions under such sections which results in a reduction of the taxpayer's liability for income tax but not less than the amounts allowable under such sections for the taxable year and prior years. For example, if a taxpayer purchases unexplored and undeveloped mining property for $1,000,000 and at the close of the development stage has incurred exploration and development costs of $9,000,000 treated as deferred expenses, the basis of such property at such time for computing gain or loss will be $10,000,000. Assuming that the taxpayer in this example has operated the mine for several years and has deducted allowable percentage depletion in the amount of $2,000,000 and has deducted allowable deferred exploration and development expenditures of $2,000,000, the basis of the property in the taxpayer's hands for purposes of determining gain or loss if sold will be $6,000,000.

(6) In the case of an unharvested crop which is sold, exchanged, or involuntarily converted with the land and which is considered as property used in the trade or business under section 117 (j) (3) the basis of such crop shall be increased by the amount of the items which are attributable to the production of such crop and which are disallowed, under section 24 (f) and § 39.24 (f)-1, as deductions in computing net income. See also § 39.117 (j)-1. The basis of any other property shall be decreased by the amount of any such items which are attributable to such other property, notwithstanding any provision of section 113 (b) (1) or of this section to the contrary. For example, if the items attributable to the production of an unharvested crop consist only of fertilizer costing $100 and $50 depreciation on a tractor used only to cultivate such crop and such items are disallowed under section 24 (f) and § 39.24 (f)-1, the adjustments to the basis of such crop shall include an increase of $150 for such items and the adjustments to the basis of the tractor shall include a reduction of $50 for the depreciation on the tractor.

(7) For the adjustments to basis of a residence because its acquisition resulted, under the provisions of section 112 (n) in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized upon the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of another residence, see § 39.112 (n)-1.

§ 39.113 (b) (1)-2 Adjusted basis; cancellation of indebtedness. (a) In addition to the adjustments provided in section 113 (b) (1) and § 39.113 (b) (1)-1 which are required to be made with respect to the cost or other basis of property, a further adjustment is required in certain cases in which there has been a cancellation or reduction of indebtedness in a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 1 et seq.) Except as otherwise provided in section 113 (a) (21) or (22) or 113 (b) (4) such further adjustment shall be made in any case in which there shall have been a cancellation or reduction of indebtedness in any proceeding under section 12, 74 (except in the case of a "wage earner" as defined in section 606 (8) of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 1006 (8)) or 77B, 48 Stat. 912, or under Chapter X, XI, or XII of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. c. 10, 11, and 12) Such further adjustment shall be made in the following manner and order:

(1) In the case of indebtedness incurred to purchase specific property (other than inventory or notes or accounts receivable) whether or not a lien is placed against such property securing the payment of all or part of such indebtedness, which indebtedness shall have been canceled or reduced in any such proceeding, the cost or other basis of such property shall be decreased (but not below its fair market value) by the amount by which the indebtedness so incurred with respect to such property shall have been canceled or reduced;

(2) In the case of specific property (other than inventory or notes or accounts receivable) against which, at the time of the cancellation or reduction of the indebtedness, there is a lien (other than a lien securing indebtedness incurred to purchase such property) the cost or other basis of such property shall be decreased (but not below its fair market value) by the amount by which the indebtedness secured by such lien shall have been canceled or reduced;

(3) Any excess of the total amount by which the indebtedness shall have been so canceled or reduced in such proceeding over the sum of the adjustments made under subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph shall next be applied to reduce the cost or other basis of the property of the debtor (other than inventory and notes and accounts receivable, but including property covered by such subparagraphs) as follows: The cost or other basis of each unit of property shall be decreased (but not below its fair market value) in an amount equal to such proportion of such excess as the adjusted basis (after adjustment under subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph) of each such unit of property bears to the sum of the adjusted bases (after adjustment under such subparagraphs) of all the property of the debtor other than inventory and notes and accounts receivable;

(4) Any excess of the total amount by which such indebtedness shall have been so canceled or reduced over the sum of the adjustments made under subparagraphs (1) (2), and (3) of this paragraph shall next be applied to reduce the cost of other basis of any units of property covered by such subparagraphs which have a remaining basis (after adjustment under such subparagraphs) greater than their fair market value, as follows: The cost or other basis of each such unit of property shall be decreased (but not below its fair market value) in an amount equal to such proportion of such excess as the remaining basis of each such unit bears to the sum of the remaining bases of such units. The process shall be repeated until the cost or other basis of each unit of the property covered by subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) of this paragraph is reduced to its fair market value or the amount by which the indebtedness shall have been canceled or reduced is exhausted, taking into account in the successive steps only those units of property having, after the preceding adjustment, a remaining basis greater than their fair market value; and

(5) Any excess of the total amount by which the indebtedness shall have been so canceled or reduced over the sum of the adjustments made under subparagraphs (1) (2) (3), and (4) of this paragraph shall next be applied to reduce the cost or other basis of inventory and notes and accounts receivable, as follows: The cost or other basis of inventory or notes or accounts receivable, as the case may be, shall be decreased (but not below its fair market value) in an amount equal to such proportion of such excess as the adjusted basis of inventory, notes receivable or accounts receivable, as the case may be, bears to the sum of the adjusted bases of such inventory and notes and accounts receivable. The process shall be repeated until the adjusted bases of inventory, notes receivable and accounts receivable are reduced to their fair market value or the amount by which the indebtedness shall have been canceled or reduced is exhausted, taking into account in the successive steps only those units of property having, after the preceding adjustment, a remaining basis greater than their fair market value.

(b) For the purposes of this section:

(1) Basis shall be determined as of the date of entry of the order confirming the plan, composition, or arrangement under which such indebtedness shall have been canceled or reduced;

(2) Except where the context otherwise requires, property means all of the debtor's property, other than money;

(3) No adjustment shall be made by virtue of the cancellation or reduction of any accrued interest unpaid which shall not have resulted in a tax benefit in any income tax return;

(4) The phrase "indebtedness incurred to purchase" includes (i) indebtedness for money borrowed and applied in the purchase of property and (ii) an existing indebtedness secured by a lien against the property which the debtor, as purchaser of such property, has assumed to pay and

(5) The term "fair market value" has reference to such value as of the date of entry of the order confirming the plan, composition, or arrangement under which such indebtedness shall have been canceled or reduced.

(c) Any determination of value in a proceeding under the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 1 et seq.) shall not constitute a determination of fair market value for the purposes of this section.

(d) The basis of any of the debtor's property which shall have been transferred to a person required to use the debtor's basis in whole or in part shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of this section.

§ 39.113 (b) (1)-3 Adjusted basis; cancellation of indebtedness; special cases. If the taxpayer and the Commissioner agree, the basis of the taxpayer's property may be adjusted in a manner different from that set forth in § 39.113 (b) (1)-2. Variations from such rule may, for example, involve adjusting the basis of any part of the taxpayer's property or adjusting the basis of all the taxpayer's property, according to a fixed allocation. Agreement between the taxpayer and the Commissioner as to any variation from such general rule shall be effected only by a closing agreement entered into under the provisions of section 3760.

§ 39.113 (b) (1)-4 Adjusted basis; mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, and cooperative banks. (a) The adjustments to the cost or other basis of property provided in section 113 (b) and §§ 39.113 (b) (1)-1 to 39.113 (b) (1)-3, inclusive, are applicable in the case of a mutual savings bank not having capital stock represented by shares, a domestic building and loan association, and a cooperative bank without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit, although such institutions were exempt from tax for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1952. Proper adjustment must be made under section 113 (b) for the entire period since the acquisition of property. Thus, adjustment to basis must be made for depreciation allowable for all prior taxable years although such institution may have been exempt from tax during such period. Similarly, in the case of tax exempt and partially taxable bonds purchased at a premium and subject to amortization under section 125, proper adjustment to basis must be made to reflect amortization with respect to such premium from the date of acquisition of the bond.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example: On January 1, 1952, Z, a mutual savings bank, which keeps its books on a calendar year basis, owns a tax-exempt $1,000 noncallable bond maturing on January 1, 1962. Such bond was acquired by Z on January 1, 1932, for $1,300. It was sold by Z on December 31, 1952, for $1,250. The yearly rate of amortization of the premium, determined by dividing the total premium of $300 by the life of the bond (30 years) is $10. Z realizes a gain of $60 from such sale computed as follows:

(1) Cost of bond		$1,300
(2) Amount of bond premium attributable to years 1942 through 1951, during which Z was exempt from tax ($10 times 10 years)	$100
(3) Amount of bond premium amortized from Jan. 1, 1952, through Dec. 31, 1952 ($10 times 1 year)	10
(4) Total amount of adjustments to basis (aggregate of (2) and (3))		110
(5) Adjusted basis of bond at close of 1952 ((1) reduced by (4))		1,190
(6) Gain realized upon sale—excess of sale price over adjusted basis ($1,250 minus $1,190)		60

The basis of a fully taxable bond purchased at a premium shall be adjusted from the date of the election to amortize such premium in accordance with the provisions of section 125, except that no adjustment shall be allowable for such portion of the premium, attributable to the period prior to the election.

(c) In the case of a mortgage purchased, acquired, or originated at a premium, where the principal of such mortgage is payable in installments, adjustments to the basis of the premium must be made for all taxable years (whether or not the institution was exempt from tax during such years) in which installment payments are received. Such adjustments may be made on an individual mortgage basis or on a composite basis by reference to the average period of payments of the mortgage loans of such institution. For the purpose of this adjustment, the term "premium" includes the excess of the acquisition value of the mortgage over its maturity value. The acquisition value of the mortgage is the cost including buying commissions, attorneys' fees, or brokerage fees, but such value does not include amounts paid for accrued interest.

§ 39.113 (b) (2) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; substituted basis.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(b) Adjusted basis. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, whenever acquired, shall be the basis determined under subsection (2), adjusted as hereinafter provided. * * *

(2) Substituted basis. The term "substituted basis" as used in this subsection means a basis determined under any provision of subsection (a) of this section or under any corresponding provision of a prior income tax law, providing that the basis shall be determined—

(A) By reference to the basis in the hands of a transferor, donor, or grantor, or

(B) By reference to other property held at any time by the person for whom the basis is to be determined.

Whenever it appears that the basis of property in the hands of the taxpayer is a substituted basis, then the adjustments provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be made after first making in respect of such substituted basis proper adjustments of a similar nature in respect of the period during which the property was held by the transferor, donor, or grantor, or during which the other property was held by the person for whom the basis is to be determined. A similar rule shall be applied in the case of a series of substituted bases.

§ 39.113 (b) (2)-1 Substituted basis. (a) Whenever it appears that the basis of property in the hands of the taxpayer is a substituted basis, as defined in section 113 (b) (2) the adjustments indicated in § 39.113 (b) (1)-1 shall be made after first making in respect of such substituted basis proper adjustments of a similar nature in respect of the period during which the property was held by the transferor, donor, or grantor, or during which the other property was held by the person for whom the basis is to be determined. In addition, whenever it appears that the basis of property in the hands of the taxpayer is a substituted basis, as defined in section 113 (b) (2) (A) the adjustments indicated in §§ 39.113 (b) (1)-2, 39.113 (b) (3)-1, and 39.113 (b) (3)-2 shall also be made, whenever necessary, after first making in respect of such substituted basis a proper adjustment of a similar nature in respect of the period during which the property was held by the transferor, donor, or grantor. Similar rules shall also be applied in the case of a series of substituted bases.

(b) The application of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, who makes his returns upon the calendar year basis, in 1935 purchased the X Building and subsequently gave it to his son B. B exchanged the X Building for the Y Building in a tax-free exchange, and then gave the Y Building to his wife C. C, in determining the gain from the sale or other disposition of the Y Building in 1952, is required to reduce the basis of the building by deductions for depreciation which were successively allowed (but not less than the amount allowable) to A and B upon the X Building and to B upon the Y Building, in addition to the deductions for depreciation allowed (but not less than the amount allowable) to herself during her ownership of the Y Building.

§ 39.113 (b) (3) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; discharge of indebtedness.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(b) Adjusted basis. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, whenever acquired, shall be the basis determined under subsection (2), adjusted as hereinafter provided. * * *

(3) Discharge of indebtedness. Where in the case of a corporation any amount is excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) on account of the discharge of indebtedness the whole or a part of the amount so excluded from gross income shall be applied in reduction of the basis of any property held (whether before or after the time of the discharge) by the taxpayer during any portion of the taxable year in which such discharge occurred. The amount to be so applied (not in excess of the amount so excluded from gross income, reduced by the amount of any deduction disallowed under section 22 (b) (9)) and the particular properties to which the reduction shall be allocated, shall be determined under regulations (prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) in effect at the time of the filing of the consent by the taxpayer referred to in section 22 (b) (9). The reduction shall be made as of the first day of the taxable year in which the discharge occurred except in the case of property not held by the taxpayer on such first day, in which case it shall take effect as of the time the holding of the taxpayer began.

[Sec. 113 (b) (3) as added by sec. 215 (b), Rev. Act 1939]

§ 39.113 (b) (3)-1 Adjusted basis; discharge of corporate indebtedness; general rule. (a) In addition to the adjustments provided in section 113 (b) (1) and § 39.113 (b) (1)-1 which are required to be made with respect to the cost or other basis of property, and except as otherwise provided in section 113 (a) (21) or (22), or 113 (b) (4), a further adjustment shall be made in any case in which there shall have been an exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) on account of the discharge of indebtedness of a corporation during the taxable year. Such further adjustments shall, except as otherwise provided in § 39.113 (b) (3)-2, be made in the following manner and order:

(1) In the case of indebtedness incurred to purchase specific property

(other than inventory or notes or accounts receivable) whether or not a lien is placed against such property securing the payment of all or part of such indebtedness, which indebtedness shall have been discharged, the cost or other basis of such property shall be decreased (but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of the adjusted basis without reference to this section) by an amount equal to the amount excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) and attributable to the discharge of the indebtedness so incurred with respect to such property:

(2) In the case of specific property (other than inventory or notes or accounts receivable) against which, at the time of the discharge of the indebtedness, there is a lien (other than a lien securing indebtedness incurred to purchase such property) the cost or other basis of such property shall be decreased (but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of the adjusted basis without reference to this section) by an amount equal to the amount excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) and attributable to the discharge of the indebtedness secured by such lien;

(3) Any excess of the total amount excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) over the sum of the adjustments made under subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph shall next be applied to reduce the cost or other basis of the property of the debtor (other than inventory and notes and accounts receivable, but including property covered by such subparagraphs) as follows: The cost or other basis of each unit of property shall be decreased (but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of the adjusted basis without reference to this section) in an amount equal to such proportion of such excess as the adjusted basis (without reference to this section) of each such unit of property bears to the sum of adjusted bases (without reference to this section) of all the property of the debtor other than inventory and notes and accounts receivable; and

(4) Any excess of the total amount excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) over the sum of the adjustments made under subparagraphs (1) (2) and (3) of this paragraph shall next be applied to reduce the cost or other basis of inventory and notes and accounts receivable, as follows: The cost or other basis of inventory or notes or accounts receivable, as the case may be, shall be decreased (but the amount of the decrease shall not be more than the amount of the adjusted basis without reference to this section) in an amount equal to such proportion of such excess as the adjusted basis of inventory, notes receivable or accounts receivable, as the case may be, bears to the sum of the adjusted bases of such inventory and notes and accounts receivable.

(b) For the purposes of this section:

(1) Except where the context otherwise requires, property means all of the debtor's property, other than money;

(2) The phrase "indebtedness incurred to purchase" includes (i) indebtedness for money borrowed and applied in the purchase of property and (ii) an existing indebtedness secured by a lien against the property which the debtor, as purchaser of such property, has assumed to pay:

(3) The phrase "amount excluded from gross income under section 22 (b) (9)" means the amount of income excluded under that section reduced by any deduction disallowed under that section for unamortized discount;

(4) Adjustments to basis shall be made:

(i) In the case of property owned on the first day of the taxable year, as of that day:

(ii) In the case of property acquired after the first day of the taxable year, as of the day so acquired—regardless of the time such property was subsequently sold, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of by the taxpayer;

(5) Whenever a discharge of indebtedness is accomplished by a transfer of the taxpayer's property in kind, the difference between the amount of the obligation discharged and the fair market value of the property transferred is the amount which may be applied in reduction of basis;

(6) Regardless of the amount excluded by the taxpayer from its gross income under section 22 (b) (9) and so stated on Form 982, the maximum amount by which basis may be reduced in respect of the discharge of any indebtedness is the amount of income resulting from the discharge of such indebtedness.

(7) Effective with respect to a discharge of indebtedness occurring within a taxable year ending after December 31, 1950, except in the case of a consent filed before April 7, 1953, any reduction in basis which remains to be taken (by reason of an exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (9)) after the application of subparagraph (1) of paragraph (a) of this section shall be applied first against property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 23 (l) property with respect to which a deduction for amortization is allowable under section 23 (t), and property with respect to which a deduction for depletion is allowable under section 23 (m) (but not including property specified in section 114 (b) (2), (3), or (4) in the order in which such property is described in subparagraphs (2) and (3) of paragraph (a) of this section. Any further adjustment in basis required to be made under section 22 (b) (9) shall be applied against other property in the order prescribed in subparagraphs (2), (3) and (4) of paragraph (a) of this section.

(c) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). On January 1, 1952, the N Corporation owned an office building, which it sold in March 1952. In June 1952 it purchased a factory building. In October 1952 the N Corporation bought in its outstanding bonds at less than their face value. Assuming that there is a proper exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (9), the basis of each building shall be adjusted under section 113 (b) (3) for the taxable year 1952. (But see § 39.113 (b) (3)–2.)

Example (2). The M Corporation has outstanding an issue of A bonds which it had sold at a premium and an issue of B bonds which it had sold at a discount. In July 1952 the M Corporation purchased such outstanding bonds for less than face value. The amount of income attributable to the discharge of the A bonds is $1,000 and the amount of unamortized premium is $200. The amount of income attributable to the discharge of the B bonds is $1,000 and the amount of unamortized discount is $50. If the M Corporation under section 22 (b) (9) elects to have excluded from gross income the amount of income attributable to the discharge of both bond issues, the total reduction in basis of the property of the M Corporation shall not exceed $2,150. If the M Corporation elects only with respect to the A bonds, the total reduction in basis shall not exceed $1,200 (or $950 if the election is with respect to the B bonds). If the M Corporation excludes only an amount of $500 with respect to the A bonds, the total reduction in basis may nevertheless be $1,200 (or $950 if the exclusion is with respect to the B bonds).

§ 39.113 (b) (3)–2 Adjusted basis; discharge of corporate indebtedness; special cases. (a) Section 39.113 (b) (3)–1 prescribes the general rule to be followed in adjusting basis of property where there is a proper exclusion from gross income under section 22 (b) (9) The taxpayer may, however, have the basis of its property adjusted in a manner different from that set forth in § 39.113 (b) (3)–1 upon a proper showing to the satisfaction of the Commissioner. Such adjustment, however, shall be consistent with the principles of § 39.113 (b) (3)–1 (b) (7). Variations from such general rule may, for example, involve adjusting the basis of only part of the taxpayer's property or adjusting the basis of all the taxpayer's property, according to a fixed allocation.

(b) A request for variations from the general rule prescribed in § 39.113 (b) (3)–1 shall be filed by the taxpayer with its return for the taxable year in which the discharge of indebtedness occurred unless a consent is permitted (under § 39.22 (b) (9)–1) after the original return has been filed, in which case such request shall be filed with the amended return or claim for credit or refund, as the case may be. Agreement between the taxpayer and the Commissioner as to any variations from such general rule shall be effected only by a closing agreement entered into under the provisions of section 3760. If no agreement is reached between the taxpayer and the Commissioner as to variations from the general rule prescribed in § 39.113 (b) (3)–1, then the consent filed on Form 982 shall be deemed to be a consent to the application of such general rule and such general rule shall prevail in the determination of the basis of the taxpayer's property, unless the taxpayer specifically states on such form that it does not consent to the application of the general rule.

§ 39.113 (b) (4) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; adjustment of capital structure before September 22, 1938.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(b) Adjusted basis. The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property, whenever acquired, shall be the basis determined under subsection (2), adjusted as hereinafter provided. * * *

(4) Adjustment of capital structure prior to September 22, 1938. Where a plan of reorganization of a corporation, approved by the court in a proceeding under section 77B of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, is consummated by adjustment of the capital or debt structure of such corporation without the transfer of its assets to another corporation, and a final judgment or decree in such proceeding has been entered prior to September 22, 1938, then the provisions of section 270 of the National Bankruptcy Act, as amended, shall not apply in respect of the property of such corporation. For the purposes of this paragraph the term "reorganization" shall not be limited by the definition of such term in section 112 (g).

[Sec. 113 (b) (4) as added by sec. 122, Rev. Act 1943]

§ 39.113 (b) (4)-1 Adjusted basis; exception to section 270 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended. The adjustment to basis provided by section 270 of the Bankruptcy Act (11 U. S. C. 670) and by §§ 39.113 (b) (1)-2 and 39.113 (b) (1)-3 shall not be made if, in a proceeding under section 77B of such act, 48 Stat. 912, indebtedness was canceled in pursuance of a plan of reorganization which was consummated by adjustment of the capital or debt structure of the insolvent corporation, and the final judgment or decree in such proceeding was entered before September 22, 1938. Section 113 (b) (4) and this section do not apply if the plan of reorganization under section 77B was consummated by the transfer of assets of the insolvent corporation to another corporation.

§ 39.113 (c) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; property on which lessee has made improvements.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(c) Property on which lessee has made improvements. Neither the basis nor the adjusted basis of any portion of real property shall, in the case of the lessor of such property, be increased or diminished on account of income derived by the lessor in respect of such property and excludable from gross income under section 22 (b) (11). If an amount representing any part of the value of real property attributable to buildings erected or other improvements made by a lessee in respect of such property was included in gross income of the lessor for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, the basis of each portion of such property shall be properly adjusted for the amount so included in gross income.

[Sec. 113 (c) as added by sec. 115 (b), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.113 (c)-1 Property on which lessee has made improvements. In any case in which a lessee of real property has erected buildings or made other improvements upon the leased property and the lease is terminated by forfeiture or otherwise resulting in the realization by such lessor of income which, were it not for the provisions of section 22 (b) (11) would be includible in gross income of the lessor, the amount so excluded from gross income shall not be taken into account in determining the basis or the adjusted basis of such property or any portion thereof in the hands of the lessor. If, however, in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1942, there has been included in the gross income of the lessor an amount representing any part of the value of such property attributable to such buildings or improvements, the basis of each portion of such property shall be properly adjusted for the amount so included in gross income. For example, A leased in 1930 to B for a period of 25 years unimproved real property and in accordance with the terms of the lease B erected a building on the property. It was estimated that upon expiration of the lease the building would have a depreciated value of $50,000, which value the lessor elected to report (beginning in 1931) as income over the term of the lease. This method of reporting was used until 1942. In 1952 B forfeits the lease. The amount of $22,000 reported as income by A during the years 1931 to 1941, inclusive, shall be added to the basis of the property represented by the improvements in the hands of A. If in such case A did not report during the period of the lease any income attributable to the value of the building erected by the lessee and the lease was forfeited in 1940 when the building was worth $75,000, such amount, having been included in gross income under the law applicable to that year, is added to the basis of the property represented by the improvements in the hands of A. As to treatment of such property for the purposes of capital gains and losses, see section 117.

§ 39.113 (d) Statutory provisions; adjusted basis for determining gain or loss; depreciation, etc., allowed before 1952.

SEC. 113. Adjusted basis for determining gain or loss. * * *

(d) Election in respect of depreciation, etc., allowed before 1952. Any person may elect to have clause (ii) of subsection (b) (1) (B) apply in respect of periods since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952. Such an election shall be made in such manner as the Secretary may be regulations prescribe, shall be irrevocable, and shall apply in respect of all property held by the person making the election at any time on or before the date on which the election was made and in respect of all periods since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952, during which such person held such property or for which adjustments must be made under subsection (b) (2). An election by a transferor, donor, or grantor made after the date of the transfer, gift, or grant of property shall not affect the basis of such property in the hands of the transferee, donee, or grantee. No such election may be made after December 31, 1952.

[Sec. 113 (d) as added by sec. 2, Pub. Law 539 (82d Cong.)]

§ 39.113 (d)-1 Election as to amounts allowed in respect of depreciation, etc., before 1952—(a) In general. (1) Any person may elect to have the adjustments to the cost or other basis of property under section 113 (b) (1) (B) determined in accordance with clause (ii) of such section, by filing with the district director of internal revenue, on or before December 31, 1952, the written statement of election provided in paragraph (b) of this section. The statement must be filed with the district director with whom the return must be filed (determined under section 53 (b) as of December 31, 1952). Such election shall be irrevocable after December 31, 1952, and shall apply with respect to all periods since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952. The election shall apply to all properties held by the person making the election at any time on or before the date of such election.

(2) A taxpayer may include in an election filed before December 31, 1952, a statement that the election shall take effect when filed, and in such case the election shall be irrevocable on the date filed, and shall not apply to any property acquired by the taxpayer after such date. If an election is made before December 31, 1952, and does not contain such statement, the election may be revoked by filing on or before December 31, 1952, in the same office in which the election was filed, a statement of revocation executed in the same manner as the election. Such an election made before December 31, 1952, and not revoked on or before that date, shall be deemed made on December 31, 1952, and shall apply to all property held by the taxpayer at any time on or before such date.

(3) A copy of the written statement of election must be filed with the first income tax return, amended return, or claim for refund filed on or after the date on which the election is made.

(4) An election by a partner is not an election by the partnership of which he is a member, but a separate election must be made by the partnership. Similarly, an election by the partnership applies only with respect to the partnership, and is not applicable to the separate property of the partners. A similar rule applies with respect to elections by trusts and beneficiaries of such trusts.

(5) An election which conforms in substance to the provisions of this section shall not be deemed invalid solely because it was filed prior to the date on which the regulations in this section were promulgated.

(b) Rules applicable to making of election. The following rules are applicable to the making of an election under section 113 (d)

(1) Form of election. The election shall be in the form of a statement in writing addressed to the district director of internal revenue with whom filed, shall state the name and address of the taxpayer making the election, and shall contain a statement that such taxpayer elects to have the provisions of section 113 (b) (1) (B) (ii) apply in respect of all periods since February 28, 1913, and before January 1, 1952.

(2) Signature. The statement shall be signed by the taxpayer making the election, if an individual, or, if the taxpayer making the election is not an individual, the statement shall be executed in the same manner as is required in the case of the income tax return of such taxpayer.

(3) Filing. The written statement must be filed in the office of the district director of internal revenue on or before December 31, 1952. An election shall be considered as timely filed if it is placed in the mail on or before midnight of December 31, 1952, as shown by the postmark on the envelope containing the written statement of election or as shown by other available evidence of the mailing date.

SEC. 114. Basis for depreciation and depletion—(a) Basis for depreciation. The basis upon which exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence are to be allowed in respect of any property shall be the adjusted basis provided in section 113 (b) for the purpose of determining the gain upon the sale or other disposition of such property.

(b) Basis for depletion—(1) General rule. The basis upon which depletion is to be allowed in respect of any property shall be the adjusted basis provided in section 113 (b) for the purpose of determining the gain upon the sale or other disposition of such property, except as provided in paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this subsection.

(2) Discovery value in the case of mines. In the case of mines (except mines in respect of which percentage depletion is allowable under paragraph (4) of this subsection) discovered by the taxpayer after February 28, 1913, the basis for depletion shall be the fair market value of the property at the date of discovery or within thirty days thereafter, if such mines were not acquired as the result of purchase of a proven tract or lease, and if the fair market value of the property is materially disproportionate to the cost. The depletion allowance under section 23 (m) based on discovery value provided in this paragraph shall not exceed 50 per centum of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property upon which the discovery was made, except that in no case shall the depletion allowance under section 23 (m) be less than it would be if computed without reference to discovery value. Discoveries shall include minerals in commercial quantities contained within a vein or deposit discovered in an existing mine or mining tract by the taxpayer after February 28, 1913, if the vein or deposit thus discovered was not merely the uninterrupted extension of a continuing commercial vein or deposit already known to exist, and if the discovered minerals are of sufficient value and quantity that they could be separately mined and marketed at a profit.

(3) Percentage depletion for oil and gas wells. In the case of oil and gas wells the allowance for depletion under section 23 (m) shall be 27½ per centum of the gross income from the property during the taxable year, excluding from such gross income an amount equal to any rents or royalties paid or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of the property. Such allowance shall not exceed 50 per centum of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property, except that in no case shall the depletion allowance under section 23 (m) be less than it would be if computed without reference to this paragraph.

(4) Percentage depletion for coal and metal mines and for certain other mines and natural mineral deposits.—(A) In general. The allowance for depletion under section 23 (m) in the case of the following mines and other natural deposits shall be—

(i) In the case of sand, gravel, slate, stone (including pumice and scoria), brick and tile clay, shale, oyster shell, clam shell, granite, marble, sodium chloride, and, if from brine wells, calcium chloride, magnesium chloride, and bromine, 5 per centum,

(ii) In the case of coal, asbestos, brucite, dolomite, magnesite, perlite, wollastonite, calcium carbonates, and magnesium carbonates, 10 per centum,

(iii) In the case of metal mines, aplite, bauxite, fluorspar, flake graphite, vermiculite, beryl, garnet, feldspar, mica, talc (including pyrophyllite), lepidolite, spodumene, barite, ball clay, sagger clay, china clay, phosphate rock, rock asphalt, trona, bentonite, gilsonite, thenardite, borax, fuller's earth, tripoli, refractory and fire clay, quartzite, diatomaceous earth, metallurgical grade limestone, chemical grade limestone, and potash, 15 per centum, and

(iv) In the case of sulfur, 23 per centum, of the gross income from the property during the taxable year, excluding from such gross income an amount equal to any rents or royalties paid or incurred by the taxpayer in respect of the property. Such allowance shall not exceed 50 per centum of the net income of the taxpayer (computed without allowance for depletion) from the property, except that in no case shall the depletion allowance under section 23 (m) be less than it would be if computed without reference to this paragraph.

(B) Definition of gross income from property. As used in this paragraph the term "gross income from the property" means the gross income from mining. The term "mining" as used herein, shall be considered to include not merely the extraction of the ores or minerals from the ground but also the ordinary treatment processes normally applied by mine owners or operators in order to obtain the commercially marketable mineral product or products, and so much of the transportation of ores or minerals (whether or not by common carrier) from the point of extraction from the ground to the plants or mills in which the ordinary treatment processes are applied thereto as is not in excess of 50 miles unless the Secretary finds that the physical and other requirements are such that the ore or mineral must be transported a greater distance to such plants or mills. The term "ordinary treatment processes" as used herein, shall include the following: (i) In the case of coal—cleaning, breaking, sizing, and loading for shipment; (ii) in the case of sulphur—pumping to vats, cooling, breaking, and loading for shipment; (iii) in the case of iron ore, bauxite, ball and sagger clay, rock asphalt, and minerals which are customarily sold in the form of a crude mineral product—sorting, concentrating, and sintering to bring to shipping grade and form, and loading for shipment; and (iv) in the case of lead, zinc, copper, gold, silver, or fluorspar ores, potash, and ores which are not customarily sold in the form of the crude mineral product—crushing, grinding, and beneficiation by concentration (gravity, flotation, amalgamation, electrostatic, or magnetic), cyanidation, leaching, crystallization, precipitation (but not including as an ordinary treatment process electrolytic deposition, roasting, thermal or electric smelting, or refining), or by substantially equivalent processes or combination of processes used in the separation or extraction of the product or products from the ore, including the furnacing of quicksilver ores. The principles of this subparagraph shall also be applicable in determining gross income attributable to mining for the purposes of sections 450 and 453.

§ 39.114-1 Basis for allowance of depreciation and depletion. The basis upon which exhaustion, wear and tear, obsolescence, and depletion will be allowed in respect of any property is the same as is provided in section 113 (a) adjusted as provided in section 113 (b) for the purpose of determining the gain from the sale or other disposition of such property, except that as provided in § 39.23 (m)-21 in the case of the cutting of timber which is considered to be a sale or exchange of such timber under section 117 (k) (1), the basis shall be the fair market value of such timber as of the first day of the taxable year in which it is cut; and except as provided in § 39.23 (m)-3, relating to depletion based on discovery value, in § 39.23 (m)-4, relating to percentage depletion in the case of oil and gas wells, in § 39.23 (m)-5, relating to percentage depletion in the case of certain minerals, and in sections 23 (cc) (3) and 23 (ff) (4), relating to basis for depletion.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations—(a) Definition of dividend. The term "dividend" when used in this chapter (except in section 201 (c) (5), section 204 (c) (11) and section 207 (a) (2) and (b) (3) (where the reference is to dividends of insurance companies paid to policyholders)) means any distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders, whether in money or in other property, (1) out of its earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, or (2) out of the earnings or profits of the taxable year (computed as of the close of the taxable year without diminution by reason of any distributions made during the taxable year), without regard to the amount of the earnings and profits at the time the distribution was made. In the case of a corporation which, under the law applicable to the taxable year in which the distribution is made, is a personal holding company, or which, for the taxable year in respect of which the distribution is made under section 504 (c) or section 506 or a corresponding provision of a prior income-tax law, is a personal holding company under the law applicable to such taxable year, such term also means any distribution (whether or not a dividend as defined in the preceding sentence) to its shareholders, whether in money or in other property, to the extent of its subchapter A net income, less the sum of the following:

(1) The net operating loss credit provided in section 26 (c) (1);

(2) The dividend carry-over provided in section 27 (c); and

(3) The deduction for amounts for retirement of indebtedness provided in section 504 (b).

[Sec. 115 (a) as amended by secs. 166, 186 (a) (1), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 512 (a), Rev. Act 1943; sec. 1, Pub. Law 113 (80th Cong.)]

§ 39.115 (a)-1 Dividends. (a) The term "dividend" for the purpose of chapter 1 (except when used in section 201 (c) (5) section 204 (c) (11) and section 207 (a) (2) and (b) (3) where the reference is to dividends of insurance companies paid to policyholders) comprises any distribution in the ordinary course of business, even though extraordinary in amount, made by a domestic or foreign corporation to its shareholders out of either—

(1) Earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, or

(2) Earnings or profits of the taxable year computed without regard to the amount of the earnings or profits (whether of such year or accumulated since February 28, 1913) at the time the distribution was made.

The earnings or profits of the taxable year shall be computed as of the close of such year, without diminution by reason of any distributions made during the taxable year. For the purpose of determining whether a distribution constitutes a dividend, it is unnecessary to ascertain the amount of the earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, if the earnings and profits of the taxable year are equal to or in excess of the total amount of the distributions made within such year.

(b) In the case of a corporation which, under the law applicable to the taxable year in which a distribution is made, is a personal holding company or which, for the taxable year in respect of which a distribution is made under section 504 (c) relating to dividends paid within 2½ months after the close of the taxable year, or section 506, relating to deficiency dividends, or corresponding provisions of a prior income-tax law, was under the applicable law a personal holding company, the term "dividend," in addition to the meaning set forth in the first sentence of section 115 (a) also means a distribution to its shareholders as follows: A distribution within a taxable year of the corporation, or of a shareholder, is a dividend to the extent of the corporation's subchapter A net income less the sum of the net operating loss credit provided in section 26 (c) (1) the dividend carry-over provided in section 27 (c) and the deduction for amounts for retirement of indebtedness provided in section 504 (b) for the taxable year in which, or, in the case of a distribution under section 504 (c) or section 506, the taxable year in respect of which, the distribution is made.

(c) The term "dividend" does not include distributions under section 115 (c) relating to distributions in liquidation, section 115 (e) relating to distributions by personal service corporations, or section 115 (f) relating to stock dividends, or certain distributions by insurance companies. In all other cases the term includes any distribution to shareholders to the extent made out of accumulated or current earnings or profits.

(d) A taxable distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders shall be included in the gross income of the distributees when the cash or other property is unqualifiedly made subject to their demands.

(e) The application of section 115 (a) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). At the beginning of the calendar year 1952, the M Corporation had an operating deficit of $200,000 and the earnings or profits for the year amounted to $100,000. Beginning on March 16, 1952, the corporation made quarterly distributions of $25,000 during the taxable year to its shareholders. Each distribution is a taxable dividend in full, irrespective of the actual or the pro rata amount of the earnings or profits on hand at any of the dates of distribution, since the total distributions made during the year ($100,000) did not exceed the total earnings or profits of the year ($100,000).

Example (2). At the beginning of the calendar year 1952, the N Corporation, a personal holding company, had no accumulated earnings or profits. During that year it made no earnings or profits but its subchapter A net income, due to the disallowance of certain deductions, was $16,000. It distributed to shareholders on December 15, 1952, $15,000, and on February 1, 1953, $1,000, the latter amount being claimed as a deduction under section 504 (c) in its personal holding company return for 1952 filed on March 15, 1953. Both distributions are taxable dividends in full, since they do not exceed the subchapter A net income for 1952, the taxable year in which the distribution of $15,000 was made and with respect to which the distribution of $1,000 was made. It is immaterial whether the N Corporation is a personal holding company for the taxable year 1953 or whether it had any income for that year.

Example (3). In 1952, a deficiency in personal holding company tax was established against the O Corporation for the taxable year 1948 in the amount of $35,500 based on an undistributed subchapter A net income of $42,000 which consisted of a subchapter A net income of $52,000 minus a deduction of $10,000 for amounts used for retirement of indebtedness provided in section 504 (b). The O Corporation complied with the provisions of section 506 and in December 1952 distributed $42,000 to its stockholders as "deficiency dividends." The distribution of $42,000 is a taxable dividend since it does not exceed $42,000 (subchapter A net income of $52,000 for 1948, the taxable year with respect to which the distribution was made, minus the deduction for retirement of indebtedness of $10,000). It is immaterial whether the O Corporation is a personal holding company for the taxable year 1952 or whether it had any income for that year.

Example (4). At the beginning of the taxable year 1952, the P Corporation, a personal holding company, had a deficit in earnings and profits of $200,000. During that year it made earnings and profits of $55,000. For that year, however, it had a subchapter A net income of $100,000, a net operating loss credit under section 26 (c) (1) of $10,000 and a deduction for retirement of indebtedness under section 504 (b) of $10,000. During such taxable year it distributed to its shareholders $100,000. The distribution of $100,000 is a taxable dividend to the extent of $80,000 (subchapter A net income of $100,000 minus the net operating loss credit of $10,000 and the deduction for retirement of indebtedness of $10,000). No interest shall be allowed or paid in respect of any overpayment of tax resulting from the inclusion in taxable income by any shareholder of his proportionate share of the distribution of $100,000.

Example (5). If the facts were the same as in example (4) except that the P Corporation had earnings and profits for the taxable year 1952 of $90,000, the distribution of $100,000 would be a taxable dividend to the extent of $90,000 since its earnings and profits for that year, $90,000, exceed $80,000 (subchapter A net income of $100,000 minus the net operating loss credit of $10,000 and the deduction for retirement of indebtedness of $10,000).

§ 39.115 (a)-2 Earnings or profits. (a) In determining the amount of earnings or profits (whether of the taxable year, or accumulated since February 28, 1913, or accumulated before March 1, 1913) due consideration must be given to the facts, and, while mere bookkeeping entries increasing or decreasing surplus will not be conclusive, the amount of the earnings or profits in any case will be dependent upon the method of accounting properly employed in computing net income. For instance, a corporation keeping its books and filing its income tax returns under sections 41, 42, and 43 on the cash receipts and disbursements basis may not use the accrual basis in determining earnings and profits; a corporation computing income on the installment basis as provided in section 44 shall, with respect to the installment transactions, compute earnings and profits on such basis; and an insurance company subject to taxation under section 204 shall exclude from earnings and profits that portion of any premium which is unearned under the provisions of section 204 (b) (5) and which is segregated accordingly in the unearned premium reserve.

(b) Among the items entering into the computation of corporate earnings or profits for a particular period are all income exempted by statute, income not taxable by the Federal Government under the Constitution, as well as all items includible in gross income under section 22 (a) or corresponding provisions of prior Revenue Acts. Gains and losses within the purview of section 112 or corresponding provisions of prior Revenue Acts are brought into the earnings and profits at the time and to the extent such gains and losses are recognized under that section (see § 39.115 (e)-1) Interest on State bonds and certain other obligations, although not taxable when received by a corporation, is taxable to the same extent as other dividends when distributed to shareholders in the form of dividends.

(c) (1) In the case of a corporation in which depletion or depreciation is a factor in the determination of income, the only depletion or depreciation deductions to be considered in the computation of the total earnings and profits are those based on cost or other basis without regard to March 1, 1913, value. In computing the earnings and profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, the only depletion or depreciation deductions to be considered are those based on (i) costs or other basis, if the depletable or depreciable asset was acquired subsequent to February 28, 1913, or (ii) adjusted cost or March 1, 1913, value, whichever is higher, if acquired before March 1, 1913. Thus, discovery or percentage depletion under all Revenue Acts for mines and oil and gas wells is not to be taken into consideration in computing the earnings and profits of a corporation. Similarly, where the basis of property in the hands of a corporation is a substituted basis, such basis, and not the fair market value of the property at the time of the acquisition by the corporation, is the basis for computing depletion and depreciation for the purpose of determining earnings and profits of the corporation.

(2) The application of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Oil producing property which A had acquired in 1946 at a cost of $28,000 was transferred to the Y Corporation in December 1948, in exchange for all of its capital stock. The fair market value of the stock and of the property as of the date of the transfer was $247,000. The Y Corporation, after four years' operations, effected in 1952 a cash distribution to A in the amount of $165,000. In determining the extent to which the earnings and profits of the Y Corporation available for dividend distributions have been increased as the result of production and sale of oil, the depletion to be taken into account is to be computed upon the basis of $28,000 established in the nontaxable exchange in 1948 regardless of the fair market value of the property or of the stock issued in exchange therefor.

(d) A loss sustained for a year before the taxable year does not affect the earnings or profits of the taxable year. However, in determining the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, the excess of a loss sustained for a year subsequent to February 28, 1913, over the undistributed earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, and before the year for which the loss was sustained, reduces surplus as of March 1, 1913, to the extent of such excess. And, if the surplus as of March 1, 1913, was sufficient to absorb such excess, distributions to shareholders after the year of the loss are out of earnings or profits accumulated since the year of the loss to the extent of such earnings.

(e) With respect to the effect on the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, of distributions made on or after January 1, 1916, and before August 6, 1917, out of earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, which distributions were specifically declared to be out of earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, see section 31 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1916, as amended by section 1211 of the Revenue Act of 1917.

§ 39.115 (a)-3 Effect on earnings or profits of certain tax-free exchanges and tax-free distributions. (a) If, under the law applicable to the year in which any transfer or exchange of property after February 28, 1913, was made (including transfers in connection with a reorganization or a complete liquidation under section 112 (b) (6) and intercompany transfers of property during a period of affiliation) gain or loss was not recognized (or was recognized only to the extent of the property received other than that permitted by such law to be received without the recognition of gain) then proper adjustment and allocation of the earnings or profits of the transferor shall be made as between the transferor and transferee corporations.

(b) If a transaction described in paragraph (a) of this section has occurred, there shall be included in the accumulated earnings and profits of the transferee corporation as of the day on which such transaction occurred the proportionate part of any earnings and profits of the transferor corporation accumulated as of such day and properly allocable to the transferee; and there shall be included in the current earnings and profits of the transferee for the taxable year of the transferee in which such transaction occurred the proportionate part of the earnings and profits of the transferor accumulated after the beginning of such taxable year and properly allocable to the transferee. The amount so included in the current earnings and profits of the transferee shall not exceed such proportionate part of the earnings and profits of the transferor accumulated as of the day on which such transaction occurred.

(c) The general rule provided in section 115 (b) that every distribution is made out of earnings or profits to the extent thereof and from the most recently accumulated earnings or profits does not apply to:

(1) The distribution, in pursuance of a plan of reorganization, by or on behalf of a corporation a party to the reorganization, to its shareholders—

(i) Of stock or securities in such corporation or in another corporation a party to the reorganization in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1934, without the surrender by the distributees of stock or securities in such corporation (see section 112 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1932) or

(ii) Of stock (other than preferred stock) in another corporation which is a party to the reorganization without the surrender by the distributees of stock in the distributing corporation if the distribution occurs after October 20, 1951 (see section 112 (b) (11)) or

(iii) Of stock or securities in such corporation or in another corporation a party to the reorganization in any taxable year (beginning before January 1, 1939, or on or after such date) in exchange for its stock or securities (see section 112 (b) (3))

if no gain to the distributees from the receipt of such stock or securities was recognized by law.

(2) The distribution in any taxable year (beginning before January 1, 1939, or on or after such date) of stock or securities, or other property or money, to a corporation in complete liquidation of another corporation, under the circumstances described in section 112 (b) (6) of the Revenue Act of 1936, or of the Revenue Act of 1938, or of the Internal Revenue Code.

(3) The distribution in any taxable year (beginning after December 31, 1938) of stock or securities, or other property or money, in the case of an exchange or distribution described in section 371 (relating to exchanges and distributions in obedience to orders of the Securities and Exchange Commission), if no gain to the distributees from the receipt of such stock, securities, or other property or money was recognized by law.

(4) A stock dividend which was not subject to tax in the hands of the distributee because either it did not constitute income to him within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution or because exempt to him under section 115 (f) of the Revenue Act of 1934 or a corresponding provision of a prior Revenue Act.

(5) The distribution, in a taxable year of the distributee beginning after December 31, 1931, by or on behalf of an insolvent corporation, in connection with a section 112 (b) (10) reorganization, of stock or securities in a corporation organized or made use of to effectuate the plan of reorganization, if under section 112 (l) no gain to the distributee from the receipt of such stock or securities was recognized by law.

A distribution described in subparagraph (1) (2) (3), (4), or (5) of this paragraph does not diminish the earnings or profits of any corporation. In such cases, the earnings or profits remain intact and available for distribution as dividends by the corporation making such distribution, or by another corporation to which the earnings or profits are transferred upon such reorganization or other exchange. In the case, however, of amounts distributed in liquidation (other than a tax-free liquidation or reorganization described in subparagraph (1) (2) (3) or (5) of this paragraph) the earnings or profits of the corporation making the distribution are diminished by the portion of such distribution properly chargeable to earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, after first deducting from the amount of such distribution the portion thereof allocable to capital account.

(d) For the purposes of this section, the terms "reorganization" and "party to the reorganization" shall, for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1934, have the meanings assigned to such terms in section 112 of the Revenue Act of 1932; for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1933, and before January 1, 1936, have the meanings assigned to such terms in section 112 of the Revenue Act of 1934; for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1935, and before January 1, 1938, have the meanings assigned to such terms in section 112 of the Revenue Act of 1936; and for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1937, and before January 1, 1939, have the meanings assigned to such terms in section 112 of the Revenue Act of 1938.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations. * * *

(b) Source of distributions. For the purposes of this chapter every distribution is made out of earnings or profits to the extent thereof, and from the most recently accumulated earnings or profits. Any earnings or profits accumulated, or increase in value of property accrued, before March 1, 1913, may be distributed exempt from tax, after the earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, have been distributed, but any such tax-free distribution shall be applied against and reduce the adjusted basis of the stock provided in section 113. The preceding sentence shall not apply to a distribution which is a dividend within the meaning of the last sentence of subsection (a).

[Sec. 115 (b) as amended by sec. 186 (b), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.115 (b)-1 Sources of distribution in general. (a) For the purpose of income taxation every distribution made by a corporation is made out of earnings or profits to the extent thereof and from the most recently accumulated earnings or profits. In determining the source of a distribution, consideration should be given first, to the earnings or profits of the taxable year; second, to the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, only in the case where, and to the extent that, the distributions made during the taxable year are not regarded as out of the earnings or profits of that year; third, to the earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, only after all the earnings or profits of the taxable year and all the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, have been distributed; and, fourth, to sources other than earnings or profits only after the earnings or profits have been distributed.

(b) If the earnings or profits of the taxable year (computed as of the close of the year without diminution by reason of any distributions made during the year and without regard to the amount of earnings or profits at the time of the distribution) are sufficient in amount to cover all the distributions made during that year, then each distribution is a taxable dividend. See § 39.115 (a)-1. If the distributions made during the taxable year exceed the earnings or profits of such year, then that proportion of each distribution which the total of the earnings or profits of the year bears to the total distributions made during the year shall be regarded as out of the earnings or profits of that year. The portion of each such distribution which is not regarded as out of earnings or profits of the taxable year shall be considered a taxable dividend to the extent of the earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, and available on the date of the distribution. In any case in which it is necessary to determine the amount of earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, and the actual earnings or profits to the date of a distribution within any taxable year (whether beginning before January 1, 1936, or, in the case of an operating deficit, on or after that date) cannot be shown, the earnings and profits for the year (or accounting period, if less than a year) in which the distribution was made shall be prorated to the date of the distribution not counting the date on which the distribution was made.

(c) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. At the beginning of the calendar year 1952, the M Corporation had $12,000 in earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913. Its earnings and profits for 1952 amounted to $30,000. During the year it made quarterly distributions of $15,000 each. Of each of the four distributions made, $7,500 (that portion of $15,000 which the amount of $30,000, the total earnings and profits of the taxable year, bears to $60,000, the total distributions made during the year) was paid out of the earnings and profits of the taxable year; and of the first and second distributions, $7,500 and $4,500, respectively, were paid out of the earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, and before the taxable year, as follows:

Distributions during 1952		Portion out of earnings or profits of the taxable year	Portion out of earnings accumulated since Feb. 28, 1913, and before the taxable year	Taxable amount of each distribution
Date	Amount
Mar. 10	$15,000	$7,500	$7,500	$15,000
June 10	15,000	7,500	4,500	12,000
Sept. 10	15,000	7,500		7,500
Dec. 10	15,000	7,500		7,500
Total amount taxable as dividends				42,000

(d) Any distribution by a corporation out of earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, or out of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913 (whether or not realized by sale or other disposition, and, if realized, whether before, on, or after March 1, 1913) is not a dividend within the meaning of chapter 1.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations. * * *

(c) Distributions in liquidation. Amounts distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation shall be treated as in full payment in exchange for the stock, and amounts distributed in partial liquidation of a corporation shall be treated as in part or full payment in exchange for the stock. The gain or loss to the distributee resulting from such exchange shall be determined under section 111, but shall be recognized only to the extent provided in section 112. In the case of amounts distributed (whether before January 1, 1939, or on or after such date) in partial liquidation (other than a distribution to which the provisions of subsection (h) of this section are applicable) the part of such distribution which is properly chargeable to capital account shall not be considered a distribution of earnings or profits. If any distribution in partial liquidation or in complete liquidation (including any one of a series of distributions made by the corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of all its stock) is made by a foreign corporation which with respect to any taxable year beginning on or before, and ending after, August 26, 1937, was a foreign personal holding company, and with respect to which a United States group (as defined in section 331 (a) (2)) existed after August 26, 1937, and before January 1, 1938, then, despite the foregoing provisions of this subsection, the gain recognized resulting from such distribution shall be considered as a gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months.

[Sec. 115 (c) as amended by sec. 147, Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.115 (c)-1 Distributions in liquidation. (a) Amounts distributed in complete liquidation of a corporation are to be treated as in full payment in exchange for the stock, and amounts distributed in partial liquidation are to be treated as in part or full payment in exchange for the stock so canceled or redeemed. The gain or loss to a shareholder from a distribution in liquidation is to be determined, as provided in section 111 and § 39.111-1, by comparing the amount of the distribution with the cost or other basis of the stock provided in section 113; but the gain or loss will be recognized only to the extent provided in section 112, and shall be subject to the provisions of section 117.

(b) The term "amounts distributed in partial liquidation" means a distribution by a corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of a part of its stock, or one of a series of distributions in complete cancellation or redemption of all or a portion of its stock. A complete cancellation or redemption of a part of the corporate stock may be accomplished, for example, by the complete retirement of all the shares of a particular preference or series, or by taking up all the old shares of a particular preference or series and issuing new shares to replace a portion thereof, or by the complete retirement of any part of the stock, whether or not pro rata among the shareholders.

(c) In the case of amounts distributed in partial liquidation, the part of such distribution which is properly chargeable to capital account shall not be considered a distribution of earnings or profits within the meaning of section 115 (b) for the purpose of determining taxability of subsequent distributions by the corporation. See §§ 39.27 (g)-1 and 39.115 (a)-3.

(d) For the purposes of the last sentence of section 115 (c), a liquidation may be completed before the actual dissolution of the liquidating corporation but no liquidation is completed until the liquidating corporation and the receiver or trustees in liquidation are finally divested of all the property (both tangible and intangible)

(e) For the purposes of this section the determination of whether a foreign corporation was a foreign personal holding company with respect to a taxable year beginning on or before, and ending after August 26, 1937, shall be made under section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1936 and the regulations thereunder.

(f) The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, an individual who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owns 20 shares of stock of the P Corporation, a domestic corporation, 10 shares of which were acquired in 1941 at a cost of $1,500, and the remainder of 10 shares in December 1951 at a cost of $2,900. He receives in April 1952 a distribution of $250 per share in complete liquidation, or $2,500 on the 10 shares acquired in 1941, and $2,500 on the 10 shares acquired in December 1951. The gain of $1,000 on the shares acquired in 1941 is a long-term capital gain to be treated as provided in section 117. The loss of $400 on the shares acquired in 1951 is a short-term capital loss to be treated as provided in section 117.

Example (2). A, an individual who makes his income tax returns on the calendar year basis, owned 20 shares of participating preferred stock of the Z Corporation, 10 shares of which were acquired in 1943 for $1,700 and 10 shares of which were acquired in January 1952 for $1,120. In May 1952 the corporation in a transaction qualifying as a partial liquidation redeemed the entire issue of preferred stock by paying the holders thereof $152 per share. A received $1,520 on the 10 shares acquired in 1943, and $1,520 on the 10 shares acquired in January 1952. The loss of $180 on the shares acquired in 1943 is a long-term capital loss to be treated as provided in section 117. The gain of $400 on the shares acquired in January 1952 is a short-term capital gain to be treated as provided in section 117.

(d) Other distributions from capital. If any distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders is not out of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913, and is not a dividend, then the amount of such distribution shall be applied against and reduce the adjusted basis of the stock provided in section 113, and if in excess of such basis, such excess shall be taxable in the same manner as a gain from the sale or exchange of property. This subsection shall not apply to a distribution in partial or complete liquidation or to a distribution which, under subsection (f) (1), is not treated as a dividend, whether or not otherwise a dividend.

[Sec. 115 (d) as amended by sec. 214 (b), Rev. Act 1939]

§ 39.115 (d)-1 Distributions other than a dividend. (a) Under section 115 (d) any distribution (including a distribution out of earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913) other than:

(1) A dividend (see §§ 39.115 (a)-1 and 39.115 (b)-1)

(2) A distribution out of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913,

(3) A distribution in partial or complete liquidation (see § 39.115 (c)-1) or

(4) A distribution which, under section 115 (f) (1) is not treated as a dividend (see § 39.115 (f)-1, shall be applied against and reduce the adjusted basis of the stock provided in section 113 and shall be taxable to the recipient if, and to the extent that, such distribution exceeds such basis. The provisions of this paragraph are applicable to such distributions received by one corporation from another corporation. A distribution out of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913, shall be applied against and reduce the adjusted basis of the stock provided in section 113 (b) but the fact that such distribution is in excess of such basis does not render such excess subject to tax.

(b) The application of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. In 1952 the M Corporation purchased certain shares of stock in the O Corporation for $10,000. During that year the M Corporation received a distribution from the O Corporation of $2,000 paid out of earnings or profits of the O Corporation accumulated before March 1, 1913. This distribution must be applied by the M Corporation against the basis of its stock in the O Corporation reducing such basis to $8,000. The $2,000 does not constitute a part of the earnings or profits of the M Corporation. If the M Corporation subsequently sells the stock of the O Corporation for $9,000, it realizes a gain of $1,000, which constitutes a part of its earnings or profits for the year in which the stock is sold. If the distribution had amounted to $14,000, the gain of $4,000 would be taxable to the M Corporation and would have constituted a part of the earnings or profits of that corporation for the year in which the distribution was made.

§ 39.115 (d)-2 Distributions from depletion or depreciation reserves. A reserve set up out of gross income by a corporation and maintained for the purpose of making good any loss of capital assets on account of depletion or depreciation is not a part of surplus out of which ordinary dividends may be paid. A distribution made from a depletion or a depreciation reserve based upon the cost or other basis of the property will not be considered as having been paid out of earnings or profits, but the amount thereof shall be applied against and reduce the cost or other basis of the stock upon which declared. If such a distribution is in excess of the basis, the excess shall be taxed as a gain from the sale or other disposition of property as provided in § 39.111-1. A distribution from a depletion reserve based upon discovery value to the extent that such reserve represents the excess of the discovery value over the cost or other basis for determining gain or loss, is, when received by the shareholders, taxable as an ordinary dividend. The amount by which a corporation's percentage depletion allowance for any year exceeds depletion sustained on cost or other basis, that is, determined without regard to discovery or percentage depletion allowances for the year of distribution or prior years, constitutes a part of the corporation's "earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913," within the meaning of section 115, and, upon distribution to shareholders, is taxable to them as a dividend. A distribution made from that portion of a depletion reserve based upon a valuation as of March 1, 1913, which is in excess of the depletion reserve based upon cost, will not be considered as having been paid out of earnings or profits, but the amount of the distribution shall be applied against and reduce the cost or other basis of the stock upon which declared. See §§ 39.111-1 and 39.115 (d)-1. No distribution, however, can be made from such a reserve until all the earnings or profits of the corporation have first been distributed.

§ 39.115 (e)—(f) Statutory provisions; distributions by corporations; distributions by personal service corporations; stock dividends.

(e) Distributions by personal service corporations. Any distribution made by a corporation, which was classified as a personal service corporation under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1918 or the Revenue Act of 1921, out of its earnings or profits which were taxable in accordance with the provisions of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918, 40 Stat. 1070, or section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1921, 42 Stat. 245, shall be exempt from tax to the distributees.

(f) Stock dividends—(1) General rule. A distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders in its stock or in rights to acquire its stock shall not be treated as a dividend to the extent that it does not constitute income to the shareholder within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

(2) Election of shareholders as to medium of payment. Whenever a distribution by a corporation is, at the election of any of the shareholders (whether exercised before or after the declaration thereof), payable either (A) in its stock or in rights to acquire its stock, of a class which if distributed without election would be exempt from tax under paragraph (1), or (B) in money or any other property (including its stock or in rights to acquire its stock, of a class which if distributed without election would not be exempt from tax under paragraph (1)), then the distribution shall constitute a taxable dividend in the hands of all shareholders, regardless of the medium in which paid.

§ 39.115 (f)-1 Stock dividends. A distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders in its stock or in rights to acquire its stock shall be treated as a dividend to the full extent that it constitutes income to the shareholders within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution. A distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders in its stock or in rights to acquire its stock which would not otherwise be treated as a dividend shall not be so treated merely because such distribution was made out of treasury stock or consisted of rights to acquire treasury stock.

§ 39.115 (f)-2 Election of shareholders as to medium of payment. (a) If the shareholder has the right to an election or option with respect to whether a distribution shall be paid either in money or any other property or in stock or rights to acquire stock of a class which, if distributed without an election, would not constitute income within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution, then the entire distribution is a taxable dividend regardless of—

(1) Whether the distribution is actually made, in whole or in part, in stock or in stock rights which, if distributed without election, would not constitute a taxable dividend;

(2) Whether the election is exercised or exercisable before or after the declaration of the distribution; or

(3) Whether the declaration of the dividend provides that payment will be made in one medium unless the shareholder specifically requests payment in the other.

(b) As used in this section, the term "any other property" includes stock of the corporation or rights to acquire its stock, of a class which, if distributed without an election, would constitute income within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution. See § 39.115 (f)-1.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations. * * *

(g) Redemption of stock—(1) In general. If a corporation cancels or redeems its stock (whether or not such stock was issued as a stock dividend) at such time and in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption in whole or in part essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount so distributed in redemption or cancellation of the stock, to the extent that it represents a distribution of earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, shall be treated as a taxable dividend.

(2) Redemption through use of subsidiary corporation. If stock of a corporation (hereinafter referred to as the issuing corporation) is acquired by another corporation (hereinafter referred to as the acquiring corporation) and the issuing corporation controls (directly or indirectly) the acquiring corporation, the amount paid for the acquisition of the stock shall constitute a taxable dividend from the issuing corporation to the extent that the amount paid for such stock would have been considered, under paragraph (1), as essentially equivalent to a taxable dividend if such amount had been distributed by the acquiring corporation to the issuing corporation and had been applied by the issuing corporation in redemption of its stock. For the purposes of this paragraph, control means the ownership of stock possessing at least 50 per centum of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 50 per centum of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

(3) Redemption of stock to pay death taxes. The provisions of this subsection shall not apply to such part of any amount so distributed with respect to stock the value of which is included in determining the value of the gross estate of a decedent in accordance with section 811, as is distributed after such decedent's death and within the period of limitations for the assessment of estate tax provided in section 874 (a) (determined without the application of section 875) or within 90 days after the expiration of such period, and as is not in excess of the estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes (including any interest collected as a part of such taxes) imposed because of such decedent's death: Provided, That the value of the stock in such corporation for estate tax purposes comprises more than 35 per centum of the value of the gross estate of such decedent.

§ 39.115 (g)-1 Distribution in redemption or cancellation of stock taxable as a dividend—(a) In general. (1) If a corporation cancels or redeems its stock (whether or not such stock was issued as a stock dividend) at such time and in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption in whole or in part essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount so distributed in redemption or cancellation of the stock, to the extent that it represents a distribution of earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, shall be treated as a taxable dividend.

(2) The question whether a distribution in connection with a cancellation or redemption of stock is essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend depends upon the circumstances of each case. A cancellation or redemption by a corporation of a portion of its stock pro rata among all the shareholders will generally be considered as effecting a distribution essentially equivalent to a dividend distribution to the extent of the earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913. On the other hand, a cancellation or redemption by a corporation of all of the stock of a particular shareholder, so that the shareholder ceases to be interested in the affairs of the corporation, does not effect a distribution of a taxable dividend. A bona fide distribution in complete cancellation or redemption of all of the stock of a corporation, or one of a series of bona fide distributions in complete cancellation or redemption of all of the stock of a corporation, is not essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend. If a distribution is made pursuant to a corporate resolution reciting that the distribution is made in liquidation of the corporation, and the corporation is completely liquidated and dissolved within one year after the distribution, the distribution will not be considered essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend; in all other cases the facts and circumstances should be reported to the Commissioner for his determination whether the distribution, or any part thereof, is essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend.

(b) Redemption of stock through use of subsidiary corporation. (1) If stock of one corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "issuing corporation") is acquired from a shareholder of such corporation by another corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "acquiring corporation") and if the issuing corporation controls, directly or indirectly, the acquiring corporation, the amount paid for such stock may constitute a taxable dividend to such shareholder. For the purpose of this paragraph, the issuing corporation is deemed to control the acquiring corporation if it owns, directly or indirectly, stock possessing 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock of the acquiring corporation entitled to vote or 50 percent or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation.

(2) Where stock of one corporation is acquired by another corporation and the issuing corporation controls the acquiring corporation, the amount paid for the stock shall be treated, under section 115 (g) as though such amount had first been distributed to the issuing corporation and immediately thereafter had been distributed by such corporation in redemption of such stock, to the shareholders from whom such stock was acquired. If and to the extent a distribution by the issuing corporation under such circumstances would be treated as essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend under the principles of paragraph (a) of this section, the amount paid by the acquiring corporation shall be considered a dividend to the shareholder from the issuing corporation.

(c) Redemption of stock to pay death taxes. (1) Section 115 (g) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that in certain cases a distribution in cancellation or redemption of stock, the value of which is included in determining the value of the gross estate of a decedent, shall not be treated as a dividend under section 115 (g) Section 115 (g) (3) applies only where the distribution is with respect to stock of a corporation the value of whose stock in the gross estate of the decedent for purposes of the Federal estate tax is an amount in excess of 35 percent of the gross estate of such decedent.

(2) For the purpose of section 115 (g) (3) the term "gross estate" means the gross estate as computed in accordance with section 811 of the Code. See §§ 81.10 to 81.28, inclusive, and § 81.38 of this chapter (Regulations 105)

(3) In determining whether the estate of the decedent is comprised of stock of a corporation of sufficient value to satisfy the percentage requirements of section 115 (g) (3) the total value, in aggregate, of all classes of stock of a corporation includible in the gross estate is taken into account. Thus, if the gross estate of the decedent, valued for purposes of the Federal estate tax at $1,000,000, includes common stock of Corporation A valued at $250,000, preferred stock of Corporation A valued at $110,000, preferred stock of Corporation B valued at $370,000, and common stock of Corporation C valued at $50,000, section 115 (g) (3) is applicable to distributions in cancellation or redemption of either common or preferred stock of Corporation A (comprising $360,000/$1,000,000 or 36 percent of the gross estate) or preferred stock of Corporation B (comprising $370,000/$1,000,000 or 37 percent of the gross estate) but not to distributions in cancellation or redemption of stock of Corporation C (comprising only 5 percent of the gross estate)

(4) Section 115 (g) (3) applies to distributions made after the death of the decedent and before the expiration of the 3-year period of limitations for the assessment of estate tax provided in section 874 (a) (determined without the application of any provision of law extending or suspending the running of such period of limitations) or within 90 days after the expiration of such period. Since the period for assessment of estate tax prescribed in section 874 (a) is a period of three years after the filing of the estate tax return, section 115 (g) (3) applies only to distributions made not later than three years and 90 days after the filing of the estate tax return.

(5) While section 115 (g) (3) will most frequently have application in the case where stock is canceled or redeemed from the executor or administrator of an estate, the section is also applicable to distributions in cancellation or redemption of stock included in the decedent's gross estate and held at the time of the redemption by any person who acquired the stock by any of the means comprehended by the subdivisions of section 811, including the heir, legatee, or donee of the decedent, a surviving joint tenant, surviving spouse, appointee, or taker in default of appointment, or a trustee of a trust created by the decedent. Thus, section 115 (g) (3) may apply with respect to a distribution in cancellation or redemption of stock from a donee to whom the decedent has transferred stock in contemplation of death where the value of such stock is included in the decedent's gross estate under section 811 (c) (1) (A) Similarly, section 115 (g) (3) may apply to the redemption of stock from a beneficiary of the estate to whom an executor has distributed the stock pursuant to the terms of the will of the decedent. However, section 115 (g) (3) is not applicable to the case where stock is redeemed from a stockholder who has acquired the stock by gift or purchase from any person to whom such stock has passed from the decedent.

(6) The total application of section 115 (g) (3) with respect to stock included in the gross estate of any decedent can never exceed the amount of the estate, inheritance, legacy, and succession taxes (including any interest collected as a part of such taxes) imposed because of the decedent's death. In determining whether the total distributions in redemption of such stock made within the period of time prescribed in section 115 (g) (3) exceed the amount of such taxes and interest, account shall be taken of all such distributions without regard to whether any distribution would be treated as a dividend were it not for section 115 (g) (3).

(7) For the purpose of section 115 (g) (3) the Federal estate tax or any other estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession tax shall be ascertained after the allowance of any credit, relief, discount, refund, remission, or reduction of tax.

(8) The sole effect of section 115 (g) (3) is to exempt from tax as a dividend a distribution to which such section is applicable when made in redemption of stock includible in a decedent's gross estate. Such section does not, however, in any other manner affect the principles set forth in paragraph (a) of this section. Thus, if stock of a corporation is owned equally by A, B, and the C Estate, and the corporation redeems one-half of the stock of each shareholder, the determination of whether the distributions to A and B are essentially equivalent to dividends shall be made without regard to the effect which section 115 (g) (3) may have upon the taxability of the distribution to the C Estate.

§ 39.115 (h)-(j) Statutory provisions; distributions by corporations; effect on earnings and profits of distributions of stock; definition of partial liquidation, valuation of dividend.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations. * * *

(h) Effect on earnings and profits of distributions of stock. The distribution (whether before January 1, 1939, or on or after such date) to a distributee by or on behalf of a corporation of its stock or securities, of stock or securities in another corporation, or of property or money, shall not be considered a distribution of earnings or profits of any corporation—

(1) If no gain to such distributee from the receipt of such stock or securities, property or money, was recognized by law, or

(2) If the distribution was not subject to tax in the hands of such distributee because it did not constitute income to him within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution or because exempt to him under section 115 (f) of the Revenue Act of 1934, 48 Stat. 712, or a corresponding provision of a prior Revenue Act.

As used in this subsection the term "stock or securities" includes rights to acquire stock or securities.

(i) Definition of partial liquidation. As used in this section the term "amounts distributed in partial liquidation" means a distribution by a corporation in complete cancellation or redemption of a part of its stock, or one of a series of distributions in complete cancellation or redemption of all or a portion of its stock.

(j) Valuation of dividend. If the whole or any part of a dividend is paid to a shareholder in any medium other than money the property received other than money shall be included in gross income at its fair market value at the time as of which it becomes income to the shareholder.

§ 39.115 (j)-1 Dividends paid in property. If the whole or any part of a dividend is paid to a shareholder in any medium other than money, the property received other than money shall be included in gross income at its fair market value at the time as of which it becomes income to the shareholder. See § 39.42-3. Scrip dividends are subject to tax for the year in which the warrants are issued.

§ 39.115 (k)—(l) Statutory provisions; distributions by corporations; cross reference; effect on earnings and profits of gain or loss and of receipt of tax-free distributions.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations * * *

(k) Consent distributions. For taxability as dividends of amounts agreed to be included in gross income by shareholders' consents, see section 28.

(l) Effect on earnings and profits of gain or loss and of receipt of tax-free distributions. The gain or loss realized from the sale or other disposition (after February 28, 1913) of property by a corporation—

(1) For the purpose of the computation of earnings and profits of the corporation, shall be determined, except as provided in paragraph (2), by using as the adjusted basis the adjusted basis (under the law applicable to the year in which the sale or other disposition was made) for determining gain, except that no regard shall be had to the value of the property as of March 1, 1913; but

(2) For the purpose of the computation of earnings and profits of the corporation for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, shall be determined by using as the adjusted basis the adjusted basis (under the law applicable to the year in which the sale or other disposition was made) for determining gain.

Gain or loss so realized shall increase or decrease the earnings and profits to, but not beyond, the extent to which such a realized gain or loss was recognized in computing net income under the law applicable to the year in which such sale or disposition was made. Where in determining the adjusted basis used in computing such realized gain or loss the adjustment to the basis differs from the adjustment proper for the purpose of determining earnings or profits, then the latter adjustment shall be used in determining the increase or decrease above provided. For the purposes of this subsection, a loss with respect to which a deduction is disallowed under section 118, or a corresponding provision of a prior income-tax law, shall not be deemed to be recognized. Where a corporation receives (after February 28, 1913) a distribution from a second corporation which (under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made) was not a taxable dividend to the shareholders of the second corporation, the amount of such distribution shall not increase the earnings and profits of the first corporation in the following cases:

(1) No such increase shall be made in respect of the part of such distribution which (under such law) is directly applied in reduction of the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made.

(2) No such increase shall be made if (under such law) the distribution causes the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made to be allocated between such stock and the property received.

[Sec. 115 (l) as added by sec. 501 (a), Second Rev. Act 1940; amended by sec. 146 (a), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.115 (l)-1 Effect on earnings and profits of gain or loss realized after February 28, 1913. (a) In order to determine the effect on earnings and profits of gain or loss realized from the sale or other disposition (after February 28, 1913) of property by a corporation, section 115 (l) prescribes certain rules for

(1) The computation of the total earnings and profits of the corporation, of most frequent application in determining invested capital; and

(2) The computation of earnings and profits of the corporation for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, of most frequent application in determining the source of dividend distributions.

Such rules are applicable whenever under any provision of chapter 1 or 2 it is necessary to compute either the total earnings and profits of the corporation or the earnings and profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913. For example, since the earnings and profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, or the earnings and profits of the taxable year, are earnings and profits for a period beginning after February 28, 1913, the determination of either must be in accordance with the rules herein prescribed for the ascertainment of earnings and profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913. Under subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, such gain or loss is determined by using the adjusted basis (under the law applicable to the year in which the sale or other disposition was made) for determining gain, but disregarding value as of March 1, 1913. Under subparagraph (2) of this paragraph above, there is used such adjusted basis for determining gain, giving effect to the value as of March 1, 1913, whenever applicable. In both cases the rules are the same as those governing depreciation and depletion in computing earnings and profits (see § 39.115 (a)-2) Under both subparagraphs (1) and (2) of this paragraph above, the adjusted basis is subject to the limitations of the third sentence of section 115 (l) requiring the use of adjustments proper in determining earnings and profits. The proper adjustments may differ under (1) and (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) depending upon the basis to which the adjustments are to be made. If the application of (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) results in a loss and if the application of (1) of such sentence to the same transaction reaches a different result, then the loss under (2) of such first sentence will be subject to the adjustment thereto required by section 115 (m) (2) See § 39.115 (m)-1.

(b) (1) The gain or loss so realized increases or decreases the earnings and profits to, but not beyond, the extent to which such gain or loss was recognized in computing net income under the law applicable to the year in which such sale or disposition was made. As used in this paragraph, the term "recognized" has reference to that kind of realized gain or loss which is recognized for income tax purposes by the statute applicable to the year in which the gain or loss was realized, for example, see section 112. A loss (other than a wash sale loss with respect to which a deduction is disallowed under the provisions of section 118 or corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws) may be recognized though not allowed as a deduction (by reason, for example, of the operation of section 24 (b) and 117 and corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws) but the mere fact that it is not allowed does not prevent decrease in earnings and profits by the amount of such disallowed loss. Wash sale losses, however, disallowed under section 118 and corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws, are deemed nonrecognized losses and do not reduce earnings or profits. The "recognized" gain or loss for the purpose of computing earnings and profits is determined by applying the recognition provisions to the realized gain or loss computed under the provisions of section 115 (l) as distinguished from the realized gain or loss used in computing net income.

(2) The application of subparagraph of (1) of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation on January 1, 1952, owned stock in the Y Corporation which it had acquired from the Y Corporation in December 1951, in an exchange transaction in which no gain or loss was recognized. The adjusted basis to the X Corporation of the property exchanged by it for the stock in the Y Corporation was $30,000. The fair market value of the stock in the Y Corporation when received by the X Corporation was $930,000. On April 9, 1952, the X Corporation made a cash distribution of $900,000 and, except for the possible effect of the transaction in 1951, had no earnings or profits accumulated after February 28, 1913, and had no earnings or profits for the taxable year. The amount of $900,000 representing the excess of the fair market value of the stock of the Y Corporation over the adjusted basis of the property exchanged therefor was not recognized gain to the X Corporation under the provisions of section 112. Accordingly, the earnings and profits of the X Corporation are not increased by $900,000, the amount of the gain realized but not recognized in the exchange, and the distribution was not a taxable dividend. The basis in the hands of the Y Corporation of the property acquired by it from the X Corporation is $30,000. If such property is thereafter sold by the Y Corporation, gain or loss will be computed on such basis of $30,000, and earnings and profits will be increased or decreased accordingly.

Example (2). On January 2, 1910, the M Corporation acquired nondepreciable property at a cost of $1,000. On March 1, 1913, the fair market value of such property in the hands of the M Corporation was $2,200. On December 31, 1952, the M Corporation transfers such property to the N Corporation in exchange for $1,900 in cash and all the N Corporation stock, which has a fair market value of $1,100. For the purpose of computing the total earnings and profits of the M Corporation the gain on such transaction is $2,000 (the sum of $1,900 in cash and stock worth $1,100 minus $1,000, the adjusted basis for computing gain, determined without regard to March 1, 1913, value), $1,900 of which is recognized under section 112 (c), since this was the amount of money received, although for the purpose of computing net income the gain is only $800 (the sum of $1,900 in cash and stock worth $1,100, minus $2,200, the adjusted basis for computing gain determined by giving effect to March 1, 1913, value). Such earnings and profits will therefore be increased by $1,900. In computing the earnings and profits of the M Corporation for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, however, the gain arising from the transaction, like the taxable gain, is only $800, all of which is recognized under section 112 (c), the money received being in excess of such amount. Such earnings and profits will therefore be increased by only $800 as a result of the transaction. For increase in that part of the earnings and profits consisting of increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913, see § 39.115 (m)-1.

Example (3). On July 31, 1952, the R Corporation owned oil producing property acquired after February 28, 1913, at a cost of $200,000, but having an adjusted basis (by reason of taking percentage depletion) of $100,000 for determining gain in computing net income. However, the adjusted basis of such property to be used in computing gain or loss for the purpose of earnings and profits is, because of the provisions of the third sentence of section 115 (l), $150,000. On such day the R Corporation transferred such property to the S Corporation in exchange for $25,000 in cash and all of the S Corporation stock, which had a fair market value of $100,000. For the purpose of computing net income the R Corporation has realized a gain of $25,000 as a result of this transaction, all of which is recognized under section 112 (c). For the purpose of computing earnings and profits, however, the R Corporation has realized a loss of $25,000, none of which is recognized owing to the provisions of section 112 (e). The earnings and profits of the R Corporation are therefore neither increased nor decreased as a result of the transaction. The adjusted basis of the S Corporation stock in the hands of the R Corporation for purposes of computing earnings and profits, however, will be $125,000 (though only $100,000 for the purpose of computing net income), computed as follows:

Basis of property transferred	$200,000
Less money received on exchange	25,000
Plus gain or minus loss recognized on exchange	None
Basis of stock	175,000
Less adjustments (same as those used in determining adjusted basis of property transferred)	50,000
Adjusted basis of stock	125,000

If, therefore, the R Corporation should subsequently sell the S Corporation stock for $100,000, a loss of $25,000 will again be realized for the purpose of computing earnings and profits, all of which will be recognized and will be applied to decrease the earnings and profits of the R Corporation.

(c) (1) The third sentence of section 115 (l) provides for cases in which the adjustments, prescribed in section 113, to the basis indicated in (1) or (2), as the case may be, of the first sentence of section 115 (l) differ from the adjustments to such basis proper for the purpose of determining earnings or profits. The adjustments provided by such third sentence reflect the treatment provided by § 39.115 (a)-2 relative to cases where the deductions for depletion and depreciation in computing net income differ from the deductions proper for the purpose of computing earnings and profits.

(2) The effect of the third sentence of section 115 (l) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation purchased on January 2, 1931, an oil lease at a cost of $10,000. The lease was operated only for the years 1931 and 1932. The deduction for depletion in each of the years 1931 and 1932 amounted to $2,750, of which amount $1,750 represented percentage depletion in excess of depletion based on cost. The lease was sold in 1952 for $15,000. Under section 113 (b) (1) (B), in determining the gain or loss from the sale of the property, the basis must be adjusted for cost depletion of $1,000 in 1931 and percentage depletion of $2,750 in 1932. However, the adjustment of such basis, proper for the determination of earnings and profits, is $1,000 for each year, or $2,000. Hence, the cost is to be adjusted only to the extent of $2,000, leaving an adjusted basis of $8,000 and the earnings and profits will be increased by $7,000, and not by $8,750. The difference of $1,750 is equal to the amount by which the percentage depletion for the year 1932 ($2,750) exceeds the depletion on cost for that year ($1,000) and has already been applied in the computation of earnings and profits for the year 1932 by taking into account only $1,000 instead of $2,750 for depletion in the computation of such earnings and profits (see §§ 39.115 (a)-2 and 39.115 (c)-1).

Example (2). If, in example (1), above, the property, instead of being sold, is exchanged in a transaction described in section 112 (c) for like property having a fair market value of $7,750 and cash of $7,250, then the increase in earnings and profits amounts to $7,000, that is, $15,000 ($7,750 plus $7,250) minus the basis of $8,000. However, in computing net income of the X Corporation, the gain is $8,750, that is, $15,000 minus $6,250 ($10,000 less depletion of $3,750), of which only $7,250 is recognized because the recognized gain cannot exceed the sum of money received in the transaction. See section 112 (c) (1) and the corresponding provisions of prior revenue laws. If, however, the cash received was only $2,250 and the value of the property received was $12,750, then the increase in earnings and profits would be $2,250, that amount being the gain recognized under section 112.

(d) For adjustment and allocation of the earnings and profits of the transferor as between the transferor and the transferee in cases where the transfer of property by one corporation to another corporation results in the nonrecognition in whole or in part of gain or loss, see § 39.115 (a)-3.

§ 39.115 (l)-2 Effect on earnings and profits of receipt of tax-free distributions requiring adjustment or allocation of basis of stock. (a) In order to determine the effect on earnings and profits, where a corporation receives (after February 28, 1913) from a second corporation a distribution which (under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made) was not a taxable dividend to the shareholders of the second corporation, section 115 (l) prescribes certain rules. It provides that the amount of such distribution shall not increase the earnings and profits of the first or receiving corporation in the following cases: (1) No such increase shall be made in respect of the part of such distribution which (under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made) is directly applied in reduction of the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made and (2) no such increase shall be made if (under the law applicable to the year in which the distribution was made) the distribution causes the basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made to be allocated between such stock and the property received. Where, therefore, the law (applicable to the year in which the distribution was made, as, for example, a distribution in 1934 from earnings and profits accumulated before March 1, 1913) requires that the amount of such distribution shall be applied against and reduce the basis of the stock with respect to which the distribution was made, there is no increase in the earnings and profits by reason of the receipt of such distribution. Similarly, where there is received by a corporation a distribution from another corporation in the form of a stock dividend and the law applicable to the year in which such distribution was made requires the allocation, as between the old stock and the stock received as a dividend, of the basis of the old stock, then there is no increase in the earnings and profits by reason of the receipt of such stock dividend even though such stock dividend constitutes income within the meaning of the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution.

(b) The principles set forth in paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation in 1952 distributed to the Y Corporation, one of its shareholders, $10,000 which was out of earnings or profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, and did not exceed the adjusted basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made. This amount of $10,000 was, therefore, a tax-free distribution and under the provisions of section 115 (b) must be applied against and reduce the adjusted basis of the stock in respect of which the distribution was made. The earnings and profits of the Y Corporation are not increased by reason of the receipt of this distribution.

Example (2). The Z Corporation in 1934 had outstanding common and preferred stock of which the Y Corporation held 100 shares of the common and no preferred. The stock had a cost basis to the Y Corporation of $100 per share, or a total cost of $10,000. In December of that year it received a dividend of 100 shares of the preferred stock of the Z Corporation. Such distribution is a stock dividend which, under section 115 (f) of the Revenue Act of 1934, was not taxable and was accordingly not included in the gross income of the Y Corporation. The original cost of $10,000 is allocated to the 200 shares of the Z Corporation none of which has been sold or otherwise disposed of by the Y Corporation. See section 113 (a) (19) and §§ 39.113 (a) (19)-1 and 39.113 (a) (12)-1. The earnings and profits of the Y Corporation are not increased by reason of the receipt of such stock dividend.

§ 39.115 (m) Statutory provisions; distributions by corporations; earnings and profits, increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913.

SEC. 115. Distributions by corporations. * * *

(m) Earnings and profits; increase in value accrued before March 1, 1913. (1) If any increase or decrease in the earnings or profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, with respect to any matter would be different had the adjusted basis of the property involved been determined without regard to its March 1, 1913, value, then, except as provided in paragraph (2), an increase (properly reflecting such difference) shall be made in that part of the earnings and profits consisting of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913.

(2) If the application of subsection (l) to a sale or other disposition after February 28, 1913, results in a loss which is to be applied in decrease of earnings and profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, then, notwithstanding subsection (l) and in lieu of the rule provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the amount of such loss so to be applied shall be reduced by the amount, if any, by which the adjusted basis of the property used in determining the loss, exceeds the adjusted basis computed without regard to the value of the property on March 1, 1913, and if such amount so applied in reduction of the decrease exceeds such loss, the excess over such loss shall increase that part of the earnings and profits consisting of increase in value of property accrued before March 1, 1913.

[Sec. 115 (m) as added by sec. 501 (a), Second Rev. Act 1940]

§ 39.115 (m)-1 Adjustments to earnings and profits reflecting increase in value accrued before March 1, 1913. (a) In order to determine, for the purpose of ascertaining the source of dividend distributions, that part of the earnings and profits which is represented by increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913, section 115 (m) prescribes certain rules.

(b) (1) Section 115 (m) (1) sets forth the general rule with respect to computing the increase to be made in that part of the earnings and profits consisting of increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

(2) The effect of section 115 (m) (1) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation acquired nondepreciable property before March 1, 1913, at a cost of $10,000. Its fair market value as of March 1, 1913, was $12,000 and it was sold in 1952 for $15,000. The increase in earnings and profits based on the value as of March 1, 1913, representing earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, is $3,000. If the basis is determined without regard to the value as of March 1, 1913, there would be an increase in earnings and profits of $5,000. The difference of $2,000 ($5,000 minus $3,000) represents the increase to be made in that part of the earnings and profits of the X Corporation consisting of the increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

Example (2). The Y Corporation acquired depreciable property in 1903 at a cost of $100,000. Assuming no additions or betterments, and that the depreciation sustained before March 1, 1913, was $10,000, the adjusted cost as of that date was $90,000. Its fair market value as of March 1, 1913, was $94,000 and on February 29, 1952, it was sold for $25,000. For the purpose of determining gain from the sale, the basis of the property is the fair market value of $94,000 as of March 1, 1913, adjusted for depreciation for the period subsequent to February 28, 1913, computed on such fair market value. If the amount of the depreciation deduction allowed after February 28, 1913, and properly allowable for each of such years to the date of the sale in 1952 is the aggregate sum of $81,467, the adjusted basis for determining gain in 1952 ($94,000 less $81,467) is $12,533 and the gain would be $12,467 ($25,000 less $12,533). The increase in earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, by reason of the sale, based on the value as of March 1, 1913, adjusted for depreciation, is $12,467. If the depreciation since February 28, 1913, had been based on the adjusted cost of $90,000 ($100,000 less $10,000) instead of the March 1, 1913, value of $94,000, the depreciation sustained from that date to the date of sale would have been $78,000 instead of $81,467 and the actual gain on the sale based on the cost of $100,000 adjusted by depreciation on such cost to $12,000 ($100,000 reduced by the sum of $10,000 and $78,000) would be $13,000 ($25,000 less $12,000). If the adjusted basis of the property was determined without regard to the value as of March 1, 1913, there would be an increase in earnings and profits of $13,000. The difference of $533 ($13,000 minus $12,467) represents the increase to be made in that part of the earnings and profits of the Y Corporation consisting of the increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

(c) (1) Section 115 (m) (2) is an exception to the general rule in section 115 (m) (1) and also operates as a limitation on the application of section 115 (l). It provides that, if the application of (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) to a sale or other disposition after February 28, 1913, results in a loss which is to be applied in decrease of earnings and profits for any period beginning after February 28, 1913, then, notwithstanding section 115 (l) and in lieu of the rule provided in section 115 (m) (1) the amount of such loss so to be applied shall be reduced by the amount, if any, by which the adjusted basis of the property used in determining the loss, exceeds the adjusted basis computed without regard to the fair market value of the property on March 1, 1913. If the amount so applied in reduction of the loss exceeds such loss, the excess over such loss shall increase that part of the earnings and profits consisting of increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

(2) The application of section 115 (m) (2) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The Y Corporation acquired nondepreciable property before March 1, 1913, at a cost of $8,000. Its fair market value as of March 1, 1913, was $13,000, and it was sold in 1952 for $10,000. Under (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) the adjusted basis would be $13,000 and there would be a loss of $3,000. The application of (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) would result in a loss from the sale in 1952 to be applied in decrease of earnings and profits for that year. Section 115 (m) (2), however, applies and the loss of $3,000 is reduced by the amount by which the adjusted basis of $13,000 exceeds the cost of $8,000 (the adjusted basis computed without regard to the value on March 1, 1913), namely, $5,000. The amount of the loss is, accordingly, reduced from $3,000 to zero and there is no decrease in earnings and profits of the Y Corporation for the year 1952 as a result of the sale. The amount applied in reduction of the decrease, namely, $5,000, exceeds $3,000. Accordingly, as a result of the sale the excess of $2,000 increases that part of the earnings and profits of the Y Corporation consisting of increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

Example (2). The Z Corporation acquired nondepreciable property before March 1, 1913, at a cost of $10,000. Its fair market value as of March 1, 1913, was $12,000, and it was sold in 1952 for $8,000. Under (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) the adjusted basis would be $12,000 and there would be a loss of $4,000. The application of (2) of the first sentence of section 115 (l) would result in a loss from the sale in 1952 to be applied in decrease of earnings and profits for that year. Section 115 (m) (2), however, applies and the loss of $4,000 is reduced by the amount by which the adjusted basis of $12,000 exceeds the cost of $10,000 (the adjusted basis computed without regard to the value on March 1, 1913), namely, $2,000. The amount of the loss is, accordingly, reduced from $4,000 to $2,000 and the decrease in earnings and profits of the Z Corporation for the year 1952 as a result of the sale is $2,000 instead of $4,000. The amount applied in reduction of the decrease, namely $2,000, does not exceed $4,000. Accordingly, as a result of the sale there is no increase in that part of the earnings and profits of the Z Corporation consisting of increase in value of property accrued before, but realized on or after, March 1, 1913.

SEC. 116. Exclusions from gross income. In addition to the items specified in section 22 (b), the following items shall not be included in gross income and shall be exempt from taxation under this chapter:

(a) Earned income from sources without the United States—(1) Bona fide resident of foreign country. In the case of an individual citizen of the United States, who establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that he has been a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries for an uninterrupted period which includes an entire taxable year, amounts received from sources without the United States (except amounts paid by the United States or any agency thereof) if such amounts constitute earned income (as defined in paragraph (3)) attributable to such period; but such individual shall not be allowed as a deduction from his gross income any deductions properly allocable to or chargeable against amounts excluded from gross income under this paragraph.

(2) Presence in foreign country for 17 months. In the case of an individual citizen of the United States, who during any period of 18 consecutive months is present in a foreign country or countries during at least 510 full days in such period, amounts received from sources without the United States (except amounts paid by the United States or any agency thereof) if such amounts constitute earned income (as defined in paragraph (3)) attributable to such period; but such individual shall not be allowed as a deduction from his gross income any deductions properly allocable to or chargeable against amounts excluded from gross income under this paragraph. If the 18 month period includes the entire taxable year, the amount excluded under this paragraph for such taxable year shall not exceed $20,000. If the 18 month period does not include the entire taxable year, the amount excluded under this paragraph for such taxable year shall not exceed an amount which bears the same ratio to $20,000 as the number of days in the part of the taxable year within the 18 month period bears to the total number of days in such year.

(3) Definition of earned income. For the purposes of this subsection, "earned income" means wages, salaries, professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include that part of the compensation derived by the taxpayer for personal services rendered by him to a corporation which represents a distribution of earnings or profits rather than a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services actually rendered. In the case of a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income producing factors, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services rendered by the taxpayer, not in excess of 20 per centum of his share of the net profits of such trade or business, shall be considered as earned income.

(b) Teachers in Alaska and Hawaii. [Repealed by sec. 2, Public Salary Tax Act 1939]

(c) Income of foreign governments and of international organizations. The income of foreign governments or international organizations received from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds, or other domestic securities, owned by such foreign governments or by international organizations, or from interest on deposits in banks in the United States of moneys belonging to such foreign governments or international organizations, or from any other source within the United States.

(d) Income of States, municipalities, etc. Income derived from any public utility or the exercise of any essential governmental function and accruing to any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision of a State or Territory, or income accruing to the government of any possession of the United States, or any political subdivision thereof.

Whenever any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or any political subdivision of a State or Territory, prior to September 8, 1916, entered in good faith into a contract with any person, the object and purpose of which is to acquire, construct, operate, or maintain a public utility—

(1) If by the terms of such contract the tax imposed by this chapter is to be paid out of the proceeds from the operation of such public utility, prior to any division of such proceeds between the person and the State, Territory, political subdivision, or the District of Columbia, and if, but for the imposition of the tax imposed by this chapter, a part of such proceeds for the taxable year would accrue directly to or for the use of such State, Territory, political subdivision, or the District of Columbia, then a tax upon the net income from the operation of such public utility shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid in the manner and at the rates prescribed in this chapter, but there shall be refunded to such State, Territory, political subdivision, or the District of Columbia (under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) an amount which bears the same relation to the amount of the tax as the amount which (but for the imposition of the tax imposed by this chapter) would have accrued directly to or for the use of such State, Territory, political subdivision, or the District of Columbia, bears to the amount of the net income from the operation of such public utility for such taxable year.

(2) If by the terms of such contract no part of the proceeds from the operation of the public utility for the taxable year would, irrespective of the tax imposed by this chapter, accrue directly to or for the use of such State, Territory, political subdivision, or the District of Columbia, then the tax upon the net income of such person from the operation of such public utility shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid in the manner and at the rate prescribed in this chapter.

(e) Bridges to be acquired by State or political subdivision. Whenever any State or political subdivision thereof, in pursuance of a contract to which it is not a party entered into before May 29, 1928, is to acquire a bridge—

(1) If by the terms of such contract the tax imposed by this chapter is to be paid out of the proceeds from the operation of such bridge prior to any division of such proceeds, and if, but for the imposition of the tax imposed by this chapter, a part of such proceeds for the taxable year would accrue directly to or for the use of or would be applied for the benefit of such State or political subdivision, then a tax upon the net income from the operation of such bridge shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid in the manner and at the rates prescribed in this chapter, but there shall be refunded to such State or political subdivision (under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) an amount which bears the same relation to the amount of the tax as the amount which (but for the tax imposed by this chapter) would have accrued directly to or for the use of or would be applied for the benefit of such State or political subdivision, bears to the amount of the net income from the operation of such bridge for such taxable year. No such refund shall be made unless the entire amount of the refund is to be applied in part payment for the acquisition of such bridge.

(2) If by the terms of such contract no part of the proceeds from the operation of the bridge for the taxable year would, irrespective of the tax imposed by this chapter, accrue directly to or for the use of or to be applied for the benefit of such State or political subdivision, then the tax upon the net income from the operation of such bridge shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid in the manner and at the rates prescribed in this chapter.

(f) Dividend from "China Trade Act" Corporation. In the case of a person, amounts distributed as dividends to or for his benefit by a corporation organized under the China Trade Act, 1922, 42 Stat. 849 (U. S. C., Title 15, c. 4), if, at the time of such distribution, he is a resident of China, and the equitable right to the income of the shares of stock of the corporation is in good faith vested in him.

(g) Shipowners' Protection and Indemnity Associations. The receipts of shipowners' mutual protection and indemnity associations not organized for profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder; but such corporations shall be subject as other persons to the tax upon their net income from interest, dividends, and rents.

(h) Compensation of employees of foreign governments or of the Commonwealth of the Philippines—(1) Rule for exclusion. Wages, fees, or salary of any employee of a foreign government or of an international organization or of the Commonwealth of the Philippines (including a consular or other officer, or a non-diplomatic representative), received as compensation for official services to such government, international organization, or such Commonwealth—

(A) If such employee is not a citizen of the United States, or is a citizen of the Commonwealth of the Philippines (whether or not a citizen of the United States); and

(B) If, in the case of an employee of a foreign government or of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, the services are of a character similar to those performed by employees of the Government of the United States in foreign countries or in the Commonwealth of the Philippines, as the case may be; and

(C) If, in the case of an employee of a foreign government or the Commonwealth of the Philippines, the foreign government, or the Commonwealth grants an equivalent exemption to employees of the Government of the United States performing similar services in such foreign country or such Commonwealth, as the case may be.

(2) Certificate by Secretary of State. The Secretary of State shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the names of the foreign countries which grant an equivalent exemption to the employees of the Government of the United States, performing services in such foreign countries, and the character of the services performed by employees of the Government of the United States in foreign countries. If the Commonwealth of the Philippines grants an equivalent exemption to the employees of the United States performing services in such Commonwealth the Secretary of State shall certify such fact to the Secretary of the Treasury and the character of the services performed by employees of the Government of the United States in such Commonwealth.

(i) Treasury bills. For exemption from taxation of gain derived from the sale or other disposition of Treasury Bills, issued after June 17, 1930, under the second Liberty bond act, as amended, see act of June 17, 1930, c. 512, 46 Stat. 775 (U. S. C., Title 31, sec. 754).

(j) In the case of a clerk or employee in the Foreign Service of the United States, amounts received as cost-of-living allowances under authority of section 3, as amended; of the act of February 23, 1931; and in the case of an ambassador, minister, diplomatic, consular, or Foreign Service officer, amounts received as post allowances under the authority of section 12, as amended and renumbered, of the act of May 24, 1924; and in the case of other civilian officers or employees of the Government of the United States stationed outside continental United States, amounts received as cost-of-living allowances in accordance with regulations approved by the President.

(k) In the case of an officer or employee of the Foreign Service of the United States, amounts received by such officer or employee as allowances or otherwise under the terms of title IX of the Foreign Service Act of 1946.

(l) Income from sources within Puerto Rico—(1) Resident of Puerto Rico for entire taxable year. In the case of an individual who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year, income derived from sources within Puerto Rico (except amounts received for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof); but such individual shall not be allowed as a deduction from his gross income any deductions properly allocable to or chargeable against amounts excluded from gross income under this paragraph.

(2) Taxable year of change of residence from Puerto Rico. In the case of an individual citizen of the United States, who has been a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico for a period of at least two years before the date on which he changes his residence from Puerto Rico, income derived from sources therein (except amounts received from services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof) which is attributable to that part of such period of Puerto Rican residence before such date; but such individual shall not be allowed as a deduction from his gross income any deductions properly allocable to or chargeable against amounts excluded from gross income under this paragraph.

[Sec. 116 as amended by sec. 2, Public Salary Tax Act 1939; secs. 148 (a), and 149 (a), Rev. Act, 1942; secs. 107 and 125 (a), Rev. Act 1943; sec. 4, Pub. Law 291 (79th Cong.); sec. 1051, Foreign Service Act 1946; sec. 221 (c), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 321 (a), Rev. Act 1951; sec. 204 (a) and (c), Technical Changes Act 1953]

§ 39.116–1 Earned income from sources without the United States—(a) Resident of a foreign country. (1) Amounts constituting earned income as defined in section 116 (a) (3) shall be excluded from gross income in the case of an individual citizen of the United States who establishes to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that he has been a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries for an uninterrupted period which includes an entire taxable year, if such amounts are (i) from sources without the United States, (ii) attributable to such uninterrupted period, and (iii) not paid by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. The exemption from tax thus provided is applicable to such amounts as are attributable to that portion of an uninterrupted period of bona fide foreign residence which falls within a taxable year during the course of which the citizen begins or terminates bona fide residence in a foreign country, provided that such period includes at least one entire taxable year. If attributable to an uninterrupted period in respect of which the citizen qualifies for the exemption from tax thus provided, the amounts shall be excluded from gross income irrespective of when they are received. The period during which the citizen was a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries prior to the commencement of his first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, may be taken into account in determining whether such citizen has been a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries for an uninterrupted period which includes an entire taxable year.

(2) Though the period of bona fide foreign residence must be continuous and uninterrupted, once bona fide residence in a foreign country or countries has been established, temporary visits to the United States or elsewhere on vacation or business trips will not necessarily deprive the citizen of his status as a bona fide resident of a foreign country. Whether the individual citizen of the United States is a bona fide resident of a foreign country shall be determined by the application, to the extent feasible, of the principles of §§ 39.211–2, 39.211–3, 39.211–4, and 39.211–5, relating to what constitutes residence or nonresidence, as the case may be, in the United States in the case of an alien individual.

(3) In any case in which any amount otherwise constituting gross income is excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a), there shall not be allowed as a deduction from gross income any items of expenses or losses or other deductions properly applicable to or chargeable against the amounts so excluded from gross income. The apportionment and allocation of such expenses, losses, or deductions as between income from sources within, and income from sources without, the United States shall be determined in accordance with the principles of section 119 and the regulations thereunder.

(4) The entire amount received as professional fees may be treated as earned income if the taxpayer is engaged in a professional occupation, such as a doctor or a lawyer, even though he employs assistants to perform part or all of the services, provided the patients or clients are those of the taxpayer and look to the taxpayer as the person responsible for the services performed.

(5) In the case of a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, a reasonable allowance as compensation for the personal services actually rendered by the taxpayer shall be considered earned income, but the total amount which shall be treated as the earned income of the taxpayer from such a trade or business shall, in no case, exceed 20 percent of his share of the net profits of such trade or business. No general rule can be prescribed defining the trades or businesses in which personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, but this question must be determined with respect to the facts of the individual cases.

(6) An amount constituting earned income as defined in section 116 (a) (3) which is derived from sources without the United States shall not be included in gross income solely because it is received within the United States, since the place of receipt is immaterial in determining whether any items shall be excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a) No amounts received for services performed within the United States shall be excluded from gross income by such section. For the allocation or segregation as between sources within, and sources without, the United States in the case of compensation for labor or personal services, see section 119 and the regulations thereunder.

(7) Any return filed before the completion of the period necessary to qualify a citizen for the exemption under section 116 (a) shall be filed without regard to the exemption provided by that section, but claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of tax may be filed if the taxpayer subsequently qualifies for the exemption under section 116 (a) A taxpayer desiring an extension of time (in addition to that granted by § 39.53–3) for filing the return until after the completion of the qualifying period under section 116 (a) shall make application therefor with the district director of internal revenue, setting forth the facts relied upon to justify the extension of time requested and including a statement as to the earliest date he expects to be in a position to determine whether he will be entitled to the exclusion provided by section 116 (a) An extension of time may be granted for more than 6 months in the case of taxpayers who are abroad. For extensions of time for filing returns, see section 53 (a) (2) and § 39.53-2.

(8) In estimating his gross income for the purpose of making a declaration of estimated tax for any taxable year, a citizen of the United States is not required to take into account income which it is reasonable to believe will be excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a) and the regulations thereunder.

(9) The term "foreign country" means territory under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States. It does not include a possession or territory of the United States.

(b) Presence in a foreign country. (1) Amounts constituting earned income as defined in section 116 (a) (3) shall be excluded from gross income in the case of an individual citizen of the United States who during any period of 18 consecutive months is present in a foreign country or countries during a total of at least 510 full days, if such amounts are (i) from sources without the United States, (ii) attributable to such period, and (iii) not paid by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. If attributable to a period of 18 consecutive months in respect of which the citizen qualifies for the exemption from tax thus provided, the amounts shall be excluded from gross income irrespective of when they are received.

(2) For taxable years ending before January 1, 1953, there is no limitation upon the amount which may be excluded from gross income pursuant to subparagraph (1) For taxable years ending after December 31, 1952, but only with respect to amounts received after such date, the amount excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a) (2) shall not exceed $20,000 if the 18-month period includes the entire taxable year. If the 18-month period does not include the entire taxable year, the amount excluded from gross income under such section for such taxable year shall not exceed an amount which bears the same ratio to $20,000 as the number of days in the part of the taxable year within the 18-month period bears to the total number of days in such year. In the case of a fiscal year beginning in 1952 and ending in 1953 the exclusion of amounts received after December 31, 1952, shall not exceed the lesser of the amount determined under the two preceding sentences or an amount which is the same proportion of $20,000 as the number of days in such taxable year after such date is of 365 days. There is no limitation as to the total amount of the exclusion for amounts received prior to January 1, 1953, in the case of such a fiscal year.

(3) The period during which the citizen was present in a foreign country or countries before the commencement of his first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1951, may be taken into account in determining whether such citizen is present in a foreign country or countries during at least 510 full days during any period of 18 consecutive months.

(4) Any return filed before the completion of the period necessary to qualify a citizen for the exemption under section 116 (a) shall be filed without regard to the exemption provided by that section, but claim for credit or refund of any overpayment of tax may be filed if the taxpayer subsequently qualifies for the exemption under section 116 (a) A taxpayer desiring an extension of time (in addition to that granted by § 39.53-3) for filing the return until after the completion of the qualifying period under section 116 (a) shall make application therefor with the district director of internal revenue, setting forth the facts relied upon to justify the extension of time requested and including a statement as to the earliest date he expects to be in a position to determine whether he will be entitled to the exclusion provided by section 116 (a) An extension of time may be granted for more than 6 months in the case of taxpayers who are abroad. For extensions of time for filing returns, see section 53 (a) (2) and § 39.53-2.

(5) In estimating his gross income for the purpose of making a declaration of estimated tax for any taxable year, a citizen of the United States is not required to take into account income which it is reasonable to believe will be excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (a) and the regulations thereunder.

(6) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section respecting the disallowance of certain deductions, the definition of earned income, the source of income, and the immateriality of the place of receipt of amounts constituting earned income are equally effective in the application of this paragraph.

(7) The term "foreign country" means territory under the sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States and includes the air space over such territory. It does not include a possession or territory of the United States.

(8) The exclusion provided by section 116 (a) (2) applies to income attributable to any period of 18 consecutive months during which the citizen satisfies the 510 full-day requirement, even though such period constitutes a part of a longer period of presence in a foreign country or countries. For this purpose, the term "18 consecutive months" means any period of such duration, that is, any period commencing with the beginning of any day of a calendar month and terminating (i) with the close of the day which precedes that day in the eighteenth succeeding calendar month numerically corresponding to the day of the period's beginning, or, if there is no such corresponding day, (ii) with the close of the last day of such eighteenth succeeding month. Such period need not necessarily commence with the day of arrival in a foreign country nor terminate with the day of departure therefrom. In no event will the 510 full-day requirement be prorated over a period of less than 18 consecutive months.

(9) Thus, a citizen who arrives in a foreign country on January 1, 1952, makes several return trips to the United States, and then finally departs from the foreign country on February 14, 1954, may not be present in such country for 510 full days during the 18-month period commencing with January 1, 1952, and ending with the close of June 30, 1953, because of his visits to the United States during such period, but may satisfy the 510 full-day requirement during the 18-month period commencing with February 15, 1952, and ending with the close of August 14, 1953. In such event, the exclusion will apply to income attributable to the latter period, but not to income attributable to the period commencing with January 1, 1952, and ending with the close of February 14, 1952. For such purpose, it is assumed that no part of the period ending with the close of February 14, 1952, is included in any 18-month period during which the 510 full-day requirement is satisfied. Furthermore, the mere fact that the 510 full-day requirement has been satisfied with respect to the period ending with the close of August 14, 1953, does not mean that income earned thereafter will be excluded under section 116 (a) (2) unless such income is attributable to another 18-month period during which there is compliance with the 510 full-day requirement. Thus, the 510 full-day requirement cannot be prorated over the 6-month period commencing with August 15, 1953, and ending with the close of February 14, 1954, in order to determine whether the exclusion allowed by section 116 (a) (2) applies to income attributable to such 6-month period. Therefore, assuming that the citizen is present in the foreign country 170 full days (1/3 of 510 full days) during such 6-month period (1/3 of 18 consecutive months), the exclusion will not be applicable to income attributable to any part of such 6-month period if no part thereof is included in any 18-month period during which the 510 full-day requirement is satisfied.

(10) The term "full day" means, not any 24-consecutive-hour period, but a continuous period of twenty-four hours commencing from midnight and ending with the following midnight. In computing the minimum of 510 full days of presence in a foreign country or countries, all separate periods of such presence during the period of 18 consecutive months are to be aggregated. The 510 full days need not be consecutive, but may be interrupted by a number of short periods during which the citizen is not present in a foreign country. Time spent in a foreign country in the employment of the United States Government will count toward satisfaction of the 510 full-day requirement, even though amounts paid by such Government are not exempt from tax under section 116 (a) (2)

(11) In each of the following examples it is assumed that the facts are such that the limitations upon the amount to be excluded, which were added by section

204 of the Technical Changes Act of 1953, are not applicable.

Example (1). On February 1, 1953, Mr. White, a citizen of the United States privately employed, arrived in Puerto Rico on a business assignment. Upon completion of the assignment he departed for a new assignment in Venezuela. On June 1, 1953, at 9 a. m. he arrived in Venezuela, where he remained until 2 p. m. on October 25, 1954, at which time he departed for another assignment in Puerto Rico. On January 10, 1955, he left Puerto Rico for a new assignment in the United States. During the 18-month period commencing with April 25, 1953, and ending with the close of October 24, 1954, the taxpayer was in a foreign country an aggregate of 510 full days; in addition, during the 18-month period commencing with June 2, 1953, and ending with the close of December 1, 1954, he was in a foreign country an aggregate of 510 full days. The exemption from tax granted by section 116 (a) (2) will thus apply to income attributable to the entire period which commences with April 25, 1953, and ends with the close of December 1, 1954, a period of approximately 19 consecutive months.

Example (2). At 2 p. m. on January 18, 1952, Mr. Brown, a citizen of the United States privately employed, arrived in England on a business trip from the United States. On May 19, 1952, at 10 p. m. he departed from England by steamer and arrived in the United States on May 25, 1952. After spending a period therein on official business, he left the United States by steamer on June 9, 1952, and arrived in France at 3 p. m., June 14, 1952. At 8 a. m. on February 3, 1953, he departed from France by airplane for a brief visit to Puerto Rico, arriving there on February 4; and thence went to England, arriving there at 1 a. m. on February 12, 1953, where he remained until midnight, July 18, 1953, at which time the 510 full-day requirement was satisfied in respect of the period of 18 consecutive months which began with January 19, 1952. Mr. Brown continued his presence in England, not leaving such country until 5 a. m. on November 18, 1953, at which time he departed for the United States. During the 18-month period commencing with January 19, 1952, and ending with the close of July 18, 1953, the taxpayer was in a foreign country or countries an aggregate of 510 full days; in addition, during the 18-month period commencing with June 16, 1952, and ending with the close of December 15, 1953, he was in a foreign country or countries an aggregate of 510 full days. The exemption from tax granted by section 116 (a) (2) will thus apply to income attributable to the entire period which commences with January 19, 1952, and ends with the close of December 15, 1953. The computation with respect to each period may be illustrated as follows:

	Full days in foreign country
First 18-month period (1-19-52 through 7-18-53)
1-19-52 to 5-18-52	121
5-19-52 to 6-14-52	0
6-15-52 to 2-2-53	233
2-3-53 to 2-12-53	0
2-13-53 to 7-18-53	156
Total full days	510
Second 18-month period (6-16-52 through 12-15-53).
6-16-52 to 2-2-53	232
2-3-53 to 2-12-53	0
2-13-53 to 11-17-53	278
11-18-53 to 12-15-53	0
Total full days	510

Example (3). On March 6, 1952, at 3 p. m. Mr. Green, a citizen privately employed, arrived in Cuba where he remained until 9 p. m., June 25, 1952, at which time he departed from Cuba for a short business trip to Puerto Rico. Upon completion of his negotiations in that possession, he departed for Mexico, arriving there at 2 p. m. on July 24, 1952, where he remained until 10 a. m., August 22, 1953, at which time he departed from such country for a vacation in the United States. He arrived again in Mexico at 9 a. m. on September 5, 1953, where he remained until 8 a. m., January 1, 1954, at which time he departed from such country for a new assignment in the United States. During the 18-month period commencing with March 7, 1952, and ending with the close of September 6, 1953, the taxpayer was in a foreign country or countries an aggregate of 504 full days; during the 18-month period commencing with July 1, 1952, and ending with the close of December 31, 1953, he was in a foreign country an aggregate of 510 full days. The exemption from tax granted by section 116 (a) (2) will thus not apply to income attributable to any part of the period beginning with March 6, 1952, and ending with the close of June 30, 1952; it will apply to income attributable to the period commencing with July 1, 1952, and ending with the close of December 31, 1953. The computation with respect to each period may be illustrated as follows:

	Full days in foreign country
First 18-month period (3-7-52 through 9-6-53)
3-7-52 to 6-24-52	110
6-25-52 to 7-24-52	0
7-25-52 to 8-21-53	393
8-22-53 to 9-5-53	0
9-6-53	1
Total full days	504
Second 18-month period (7-1-52 through 12-31-53)
7-1-52 to 7-24-52	0
7-25-52 to 8-21-53	393
8-22-53 to 9-5-53	0
9-6-53 to 12-31-53	117
Total full days	510

§ 39.116-2 Income of foreign governments, international organizations, and their employees—(a) Foreign governments and their employees. (1) The exemption of the income of foreign governments applies also to their political subdivisions. Any income collected by foreign governments from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds, or other domestic securities, which are not actually owned by but are loaned to such foreign governments, is subject to tax.

(2) All employees of a foreign government (including consular or other officers, or nondiplomatic representatives) who are not citizens of the United States are exempt from Federal income tax with respect to wages, fees, or salaries received by them as compensation for official services rendered to such foreign government, provided (i) the services are of a character similar to those performed by employees of the Government of the United States in such foreign country and (ii) the foreign government whose employees are claiming exemption grants an equivalent exemption to employees of the Government of the United States performing similar services in such foreign country. Section 116 (h) (2) provides that the Secretary of State shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the names of the foreign countries which grant an equivalent exemption to the employees of the Government of the United States performing services in such foreign countries, and the character of the services performed by employees of the Government of the United States in foreign countries. The income received by employees of foreign governments from sources other than their salaries, fees, or wages, referred to above, is subject to Federal income tax. The compensation of citizens of the United States who are officers or employees of a foreign government is not exempt from income tax. But see section 116 (a)

(b) International organizations and their employees. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 1 of the International Organizations Immunities Act (22 U. S. C. 288), the income of an international organization (as defined in section 3797 (a) (18)) received from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds, or other domestic securities, owned by such international organization, or from interest on deposits in banks in the United States of moneys belonging to such international organizations, or from any other source within the United States, is exempt from Federal income tax. An organization designated by the President through appropriate Executive order as entitled to enjoy the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided in the International Organizations Immunities Act (22 U. S. C. 288-288f) may enjoy the benefits of the exemption with respect to income of the prescribed character received by such organization before the date of the issuance of such Executive order, if (i) the Executive order does not provide otherwise and (ii) the organization is a public international organization in which the United States participates, pursuant to a treaty or under the authority of an Act of Congress authorizing such participation or making an appropriation for such participation, at the time such income is received.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sections 1, 8, and 9 (22 U. S. C. 288, 288e, and 288f) of the International Organizations Immunities Act, wages, fees, or salary of any officer or employee of an international organization (as defined in section 3797 (a) (18)) received as compensation for official services to such international organization is exempt from Federal income tax, if such officer or employee is not a citizen of the United States. An individual of the prescribed class who receives wages, fees, or salary as compensation for official services to an organization designated by the President through appropriate Executive order as entitled to enjoy the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided in the International Organizations Immunities Act and who has been duly notified to and accepted by the Secretary of State as an officer or employee of such organization, or who has been designated by the Secretary of State, prior to formal notification and acceptance, as a prospective officer or employee of such organization, may enjoy the benefits of the exemption with respect to compensation of the prescribed character earned by such individual either before the date of the issuance of such Executive order, or before the date of such acceptance or designation by the Secretary of State, for official services to such organization, if (i) the Executive order does not provide otherwise, (ii) the organization is a public international organization in which the United States participates, pursuant to a treaty or under the authority of an Act of Congress authorizing such participation or making an appropriation for such participation, at the time such compensation is earned, and (iii) the individual is an officer or employee of such organization at such time. The compensation of citizens of the United States who are officers or employees of an international organization is not exempt from income tax. But see section 116 (a)

(3) Sections 1, 8, and 9 of the International Organizations Immunities Act provide in part as follows:

SECTION 1. For the purposes of this title [International Organizations Immunities Act], the term "international organization" means a public international organization in which the United States participates pursuant to any treaty or under the authority of any Act of Congress authorizing such participation or making an appropriation for such participation, and which shall have been designated by the President through appropriate Executive order as being entitled to enjoy the privileges, exemptions, and immunities herein provided. The President shall be authorized, in the light of the functions performed by any such international organization, by appropriate Executive order to withhold or withdraw from any such organization or its officers or employees any of the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided for in this title (including the amendments made by this title) or to condition or limit the enjoyment by any such organization or its officers or employees of any such privilege, exemption, or immunity. The President shall be authorized, if in his judgment such action should be justified by reason of the abuse by an international organization or its officers and employees of the privileges, exemptions, and immunities herein provided or for any other reason, at any time to revoke the designation of any international organization under this section, whereupon the international organization in question shall cease to be classed as an international organization for the purposes of this title.

SEC. 8. (a) No person shall be entitled to the benefits of this title [International Organizations Immunities Act] unless he (1) shall have been duly notified to and accepted by the Secretary of State as a * * * officer, or employee; or (2) shall have been designated by the Secretary of State, prior to formal notification and acceptance, as a prospective * * * officer, or employee; * * *

(b) Should the Secretary of State determine that the continued presence in the United States of any person entitled to the benefits of this title is not desirable, he shall so inform the * * * international organization concerned * * * and after such person shall have had a reasonable length of time, to be determined by the Secretary of State, to depart from the United States, he shall cease to be entitled to such benefits.

(c) No person shall, by reason of the provisions of this title, be considered as receiving diplomatic status or as receiving any of the privileges incident thereto other than such as are specifically set forth herein.

SEC. 9. The privileges, exemptions, and immunities of international organizations and of their officers and employees * * * provided for in this title [International Organizations Immunities Act], shall be granted notwithstanding the fact that the similar privileges, exemptions, and immunities granted to a foreign government, its officers, or employees, may be conditioned upon the existence of reciprocity by that foreign government: Provided, That nothing contained in this title shall be construed as precluding the Secretary of State from withdrawing the privileges, exemptions, and immunities herein provided from persons who are nationals of any foreign country on the ground that such country is failing to accord corresponding privileges, exemptions, and immunities to citizens of the United States.

§ 39.116-3 Bridges to be acquired by State or political subdivisions. (a) Any State or political subdivision thereof claiming a refund under the provisions of section 116 (e) of an amount equal to all or a portion of any income tax levied, assessed, collected, and paid in the manner and at the rates prescribed in chapter 1, shall file a claim therefor on Form 843 (to which there shall be attached as exhibits the matter hereinafter prescribed) with the district director of internal revenue for the internal revenue district in which the tax was paid, which claim shall be executed on behalf of such State or political subdivision thereof by the treasurer or other fiscal officer thereof and shall contain:

(1) A statement of the name of the taxpayer, of the amount of tax levied, assessed, collected, and paid for the taxable year or period in respect of which the claim is made, and the amount of refund thereby sought;

(2) A full statement of the facts considered by the claimant sufficient to entitle it to receive the refund, including copies of all contracts and other documents bearing on the case, and a statement that the claim is submitted under the provisions of section 116 (e)

(3) A showing which will establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the fiscal officer presenting the claim has authority to receive the amount of the refund on behalf of the State or political subdivision which he assumes to represent and to apply without delay the entire amount of such refund in part payment for the acquisition of such bridge, including copies of the laws, ordinances, or similar enactments considered by the claimant sufficient to establish its authority to receive the refund and so to apply it, together with a statement that such fiscal officer will receive and immediately so apply the entire amount of the refund; and

(4) A statement, verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, made by or on behalf of the taxpayer that the taxpayer thereby joins with and concurs in the request of the State or political subdivision thereof that a refund of an amount equal to all or a portion of the tax previously paid by such taxpayer be made to such State or political subdivision, that the taxpayer agrees to receive the amount refunded from the State or political subdivision to which it is paid and immediately to apply the entire amount of such refund in part payment for the acquisition of such bridge, and that if for any reason the contract which is the basis of the claim for refund is not fully executed and performed, the taxpayer will repay to the United States upon its demand the entire amount of the refund with interest at 6 percent per annum from the date the refund is made without seeking or claiming the benefit of any statute of limitations which prior thereto may have run against the United States.

(b) No refund shall be made of any amount in excess of the amount of the tax levied, assessed, collected, and paid by the taxpayer for any taxable year or period. A separate claim shall be made in respect of each separate taxable year or period. If by the terms of the contract on which the claim is based two or more States or political subdivisions of a State or States are entitled to acquire the bridge, the claim for refund in respect of each separate taxable year or period must be made jointly by the States or political subdivisions thereof so entitled. The amount refunded under section 116 (e) and this section is not considered an overpayment within the meaning of section 3771, relating to interest on overpayments, and no interest shall be allowed or paid upon the amount of the refund.

(c) A check or voucher in payment of a claim for refund allowed under section 116 (e) will be drawn in the name of the fiscal officer or officers having authority, as established under paragraph (a) (3) of this section, to receive the same, and will contain an express provision that it is issued for the sole purpose and subject to the conditions prescribed in section 116 (e) and this section.

§ 39.116-4 Exclusion of certain cost-of-living allowances. (a) Amounts received by Government civilian personnel stationed outside the continental United States as cost-of-living or post allowances in accordance with regulations approved by the President are, by the provisions of section 116 (j), excluded from gross income. Such allowances shall be considered as retaining their characteristics under section 116 (j) notwithstanding any possible combination thereof with any other allowance, such as a quarters allowance, as, for example, in a "living and quarters allowance," whether or not such other allowance is excluded from gross income.

(b) For the purposes of section 116 (j) the term "continental United States" includes only the States of the Union and the District of Columbia.

§ 39.116-5 Exclusion of certain allowances of Foreign Service personnel. Amounts received by personnel of the Foreign Service of the United States as allowances or otherwise under the terms of title IX of the Foreign Service Act of 1946 (22 U. S. C. 1131 et seq.) are, by the provisions of section 116 (k), excluded from gross income.

§ 39.116-6 Exclusion of certain income from sources within Puerto Rico. (a) There is excluded from gross income in the case of an individual (whether a citizen of the United States or an alien) who is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year income derived from sources within Puerto Rico, except such income as consists of amounts received for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof. Whether the individual is a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico shall be determined in general by applying to the facts and circumstances in each case the principles of §§ 39.211-2, 39.211-3, 39.211-4, and 39.211-5, relating to what constitutes residence or nonresidence, as the case may be, in the United States in the case of an alien individual. Once bona fide residence in Puerto Rico has been established, temporary absence therefrom in the United States or elsewhere on vacation or business trips will not necessarily deprive an individual of his status as a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico. An individual taking up residence in Puerto Rico during the course of the taxable year is not entitled for such year to the exclusion provided in section 116 (l)

(b) There is excluded from gross income, in the case of an individual citizen of the United States who during such taxable year changes his residence from Puerto Rico to a place outside Puerto Rico after having been a bona fide resident of Puerto Rico for a period of at least two years immediately preceding the date of such change in residence, income derived from sources within Puerto Rico which is attributable to that part of such period of Puerto Rican residence which precedes the date of such change in residence, except such income as consists of amounts received for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof.

(c) In any case in which any amount otherwise constituting gross income is excluded from gross income under the provisions of section 116 (l) there shall not be allowed as a deduction from gross income any items of expenses or losses or other deductions properly allocable to, or chargeable against, the amounts so excluded from gross income. The apportionment and allocation of such expenses, losses, or deductions as between income from sources within Puerto Rico and income from other sources shall be determined in accordance with the principles of section 119 and the regulations thereunder.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses—(a) Definitions. As used in this chapter—

(1) Capital assets. The term "capital assets" means property held by the taxpayer (whether or not connected with his trade or business), but does not include—

(A) Stock in trade of the taxpayer or other property of a kind which would properly be included in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business;

(B) Property, used in his trade or business, of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l), or real property used in his trade or business;

(C) A copyright; a literary, musical, or artistic composition; or similar property; held by—

(i) A taxpayer whose personal efforts created such property, or

(ii) A taxpayer in whose hands the basis of such property is determined, for the purpose of determining gain from a sale or exchange, in whole or in part by reference to the basis of such property in the hands of the person whose personal efforts created such property; or

(D) An obligation of the United States or any of its possessions, or of a State or Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, issued on or after March 1, 1941, on a discount basis and payable without interest at a fixed maturity date not exceeding one year from the date of issue.

(2) Short-term capital gain. The term "short-term capital gain" means gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months, if and to the extent such gain is taken into account in computing gross income;

(3) Short-term capital loss. The term "short-term capital loss" means loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months, if and to the extent such loss is taken into account in computing net income;

(4) Long-term capital gain. The term "long-term capital gain" means gain from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months, if and to the extent such gain is taken into account in computing gross income;

(5) Long-term capital loss. The term "long-term capital loss" means loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months, if and to the extent such loss is taken into account in computing net income;

(6) Net short-term capital gain. The term "net short-term capital gain" means the excess of short-term capital gains for the taxable year over the short-term capital losses for such year;

(7) Net short-term capital loss. The term "net short-term capital loss" means the excess of short-term capital losses for the taxable year over the short-term capital gains for such year;

(8) Net long-term capital gain. The term "net long-term capital gain" means the excess of long-term capital gains for the taxable year over the long-term capital losses for such year;

(9) Net long-term capital loss. The term "net long-term capital loss" means the excess of long-term capital losses for the taxable year over the long-term capital gains for such year.

(10) Net capital gain—(A) Corporations. In the case of a corporation, the term "net capital gain" means the excess of the gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the losses from such sales or exchanges; and

(B) Other taxpayers. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the term "net capital gain" means the excess of (i) the sum of the gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets, plus net income of the taxpayer or $1,000, whichever is smaller, over (ii) the losses from such sales or exchanges. For purposes of this subparagraph, net income shall be computed without regard to gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. If the tax is to be computed under Supplement T, "net income" as used in this subparagraph shall be read as "adjusted gross income"

(11) Net capital loss. The term "net capital loss" means the excess of the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the sum allowed under subsection (d). For the purpose of determining losses under this paragraph, amounts which are short-term capital losses under subsection (e) (1) shall be excluded.

[Sec. 117 (a) as amended by sec. 115 (b), Rev. Act 1941; secs. 150 (a) (b), 151 (a), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 8 (d) (1), Individual Income Tax Act 1944; sec. 210 (a), Rev. Act 1950; sec. 322 (c) (2), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (a)-1 Meaning of terms. (a) The term "capital assets" includes all classes of property not specifically excluded by section 117 (a) (1) In determining whether property is a "capital asset," the period for which held is immaterial.

(b) The exclusion from the term "capital assets" of property used in the trade or business of a taxpayer of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l) and of real property used in the trade or business of a taxpayer is limited to such property used by the taxpayer in the trade or business at the time of the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion. Gains and losses from the sale or exchange of such property are not treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets, except to the extent provided in section 117 (j) See § 39.117 (j)-1. Property held for the production of income, but not used in a trade or business of the taxpayer, is not excluded from the term "capital assets" even though depreciation may have been allowed with respect to such property under section 23 (l) before its amendment by section 121 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1942. However, gain or loss upon the sale or exchange of land held by a taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his business, as in the case of a dealer in real estate, is not subject to the provisions of section 117. The term "ordinary net income," as used in the regulations in this part for the purposes of section 117, means net income exclusive of gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets.

(c) A copyright, a literary, musical, or artistic composition, and similar property are excluded from the term "capital assets" if held by a taxpayer whose personal efforts created such property, or if held by a taxpayer in whose hands the basis of such property is determined, for the purpose of determining gain from a sale or exchange, in whole or in part by reference to the basis of such property in the hands of the person whose personal efforts created such property. As to the application of section 117 (j) to the sale or exchange of such property held by such a taxpayer, see § 39.117 (j)-1. The phrase "similar property" includes, for example, such property as a theatrical production, a radio program, a newspaper cartoon strip, or any other property eligible for copyright protection (whether under statute or common law) but does not include a patent or an invention, or a design which may be protected only under the patent law and not under the copyright law.

(d) Obligations of the United States or any of its possessions, or of a State or Territory or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, issued on or after March 1, 1941, on a discount basis and payable without interest at a fixed maturity date not exceeding one year from the date of issue, are excluded from the term "capital assets." An obligation may be issued on a discount basis even though the price paid exceeds the face amount. Thus, although the Second Liberty Bond Act (31 U. S. C. 754) provides that United States Treasury bills shall be issued on a discount basis, the issuing price paid for a particular bill may, by reason of competitive bidding, actually exceed the face amount of the bill. Since the obligations of the type described in this paragraph are excluded from the term "capital assets," gains or losses from the sale or exchange of such obligations are not subject to the limitations provided in section 117. It is, therefore, not necessary for a taxpayer, other than a life insurance company subject to taxation only on interest, dividends, and rents, to segregate the original discount accrued (see § 39.42–7) and the gain or loss realized upon the sale or other disposition of any such obligation.

Example (1). A (not a life insurance company) buys a $100,000 90-day Treasury bill upon issuance for $99,998. As of the close of the forty-fifth day of the life of such bill, he sells it to B (not a life insurance company) for $99,999.50. The entire net gain to A of $1.50 may be taken into account as a single item of income, without allocating $1 to interest and $0.50 to gain. If B holds the bill until maturity his net gain of $0.50 may similarly be taken into account as a single item of income, without allocating $1 to interest and $0.50 to loss.

Example (2). The facts in this example are the same as in example (1) except that the selling price to B is $99,998.50. The net gain to A of $0.50 may be taken into account without allocating $1 to interest and $0.50 to loss, and, similarly, if B holds the bill until maturity his entire net gain of $1.50 may be taken into account as a single item of income without allocating $1 to interest and $0.50 to gain.

(e) The phrase "short-term" applies to the category of gains and losses arising from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for six months or less; the phrase "long-term" to the category of gains and losses arising from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months. The fact that some part of a loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset may be finally disallowed because of the operation of section 117 (d) does not mean that such loss is not "taken into account in computing net income" within the meaning of that phrase as used in section 117 (a) (3) and (5)

(f) In the definition of "net short-term capital gain," as provided in section 117 (a) (6) the amounts brought forward to the taxable year under section 117 (e) are short-term capital losses for such taxable year.

(g) Gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for not more than six months (described as short-term capital gains and short-term capital losses) shall be segregated from gains and losses arising from the sale or exchange of such assets held for more than six months (described as long-term capital gains and long-term capital losses)

(h) In the case of a corporation, the term "net capital gain" means the excess of the gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the losses from such sales or exchanges, which losses include any amounts brought forward pursuant to section 117 (e) In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the term "net capital gain" means the excess of (1) the sum of the gains from sales or exchanges of capital assets, plus net income (computed without regard to gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets) of the taxpayer or $1,000, whichever is smaller, over (2) the losses from such sales or exchanges, which losses include amounts brought forward under section 117 (e) In the case of a taxpayer whose tax liability is computed under Supplement T, the term "net income," as used in the preceding sentence, shall be read as "adjusted gross income." For application of the term "net capital gain," in computing the capital loss carry-over under section 117 (e) see paragraph (c) of § 39.117 (b)–1.

(i) The term "net capital loss" means the excess of the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the sum allowed under section 117 (d) However, amounts which are short-term capital losses under section 117 (e) (1) are excluded in determining such "net capital loss."

(j) See section 23 (g) and (k) under which losses from worthless stocks, bonds, and other securities (if they constitute capital assets) are required to be treated as losses under section 117 from the sale or exchange of capital assets, even though such securities are not actually sold or exchanged. See also section 117 (j) and § 39.117 (j)–1 for the determination of whether or not gains and losses from the involuntary conversion of capital assets and from the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of certain property used in the trade or business shall be treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets. See also section 117 (n) and § 39.117 (n)–1 for the determination of whether or not gains from the sale or exchange of securities by a dealer in securities shall be treated as capital gains, or whether losses from such sales or exchanges shall be treated as ordinary losses.

(k) In the case of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or business within the United States, see section 211 and the regulations thereunder for the determination of the net amount of capital gains subject to tax.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * * (b) Deduction from gross income. In the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, if for any taxable year the net long-term capital gain exceeds the net short-term capital loss, 50 per centum of the amount of such excess shall be a deduction from gross income. In the case of an estate or trust, the deduction shall be computed by excluding the portion (if any), of the gains for the taxable year from sales or exchanges of capital assets, which, under section 162 (b) or (c), is includible by the income beneficiaries as gain derived from the sale or exchange of capital assets.

[Sec. 117 (b) as amended by sec. 150 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 322 (a) (2), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (b)–1 Deduction for long-term capital gains. (a) In computing gross income, adjusted gross income, net income, net capital gain, and net capital loss, 100 percent of any gain or loss (computed under section 111, recognized under section 112, and taken into account without regard to section 117) upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset shall be taken into account regardless of the period for which the capital asset has been held. Nevertheless, the net short-term capital gain or loss and the net long-term capital gain or loss must be separately computed. In computing the adjusted gross income or the net income of a taxpayer other than a corporation, if for any taxable year the net long-term capital gain exceeds the net short-term capital loss, 50 percent of the amount of the excess is allowable as a deduction from gross income under sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b) For instance, if an individual realizes $2,000 of long-term capital gain and sustains $1,500 of short-term capital loss during the taxable year, the whole amount of the gain ($2,000) is includible in gross income. Since the net long-term capital gain exceeds the net short-term capital loss by $500, 50 percent of the excess ($250) is allowable as a deduction under section 23 (ee) and 117 (b)

(b) In the case of an estate or trust, for the purpose of computing the deduction allowable under sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b) any long-term or short-term capital gains which, under section 162 (b) or (c) are includible in the gross income of its income beneficiaries as gains derived from the sale or exchange of capital assets must be excluded in determining whether, for the taxable year of the estate or trust, its net long-term capital gain exceeds its net short-term capital loss. For example, during 1952 a trust realized a gain of $1,000 upon the sale of stock held for 10 months. Under the terms of the trust instrument all of such gain must be distributed not later than 30 days after the close of the year to A, the sole income beneficiary. The trust is not entitled to any deduction with respect to such gain under sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b) On the other hand, assuming A had no other capital gains or losses in 1952, he would be entitled to a deduction of $500.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * * (c) Alternative taxes—(1) Corporations. If for any taxable year the net long-term capital gain of any corporation exceeds the net short-term capital loss, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 13, 14, 15, 204, 207 (a) (1) or (3), 421, and 500, a tax determined as follows, if and only if such tax is less than the tax imposed by such sections:

(A) A partial tax shall first be computed upon the net income reduced by the amount of such excess, at the rates and in the manner as if this subsection had not been enacted.

(B) There shall then be ascertained an amount equal to 25 per centum of such excess, except that in the case of any taxable year beginning after March 31, 1951, and before April 1, 1954, there shall be ascertained an amount equal to 26 per centum of such excess.

(C) The total tax shall be the partial tax computed under subparagraph (A) plus the amount computed under subparagraph (B).

(2) Other taxpayers. If for any taxable year the net long-term capital gain of any taxpayer (other than a corporation) exceeds the net short-term capital loss, there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 11 and 12 (or, in the case of certain tax-exempt trusts, in lieu of the tax imposed by section 421), a tax determined as follows, if and only if such tax is less than the tax imposed by such sections:

(A) A partial tax shall first be computed upon the net income reduced by an amount equal to 50 per centum of such excess, at the rates and in the manner as if this subsection had not been enacted.

(B) There shall then be ascertained an amount equal to 25 per centum of the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss. In the case of any taxable year beginning after October 31, 1951, and before November 1, 1953, there shall be ascertained, in lieu of the amount computed under the preceding sentence, an amount equal to 26 per centum of the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss.

(C) The total tax shall be the partial tax computed under subparagraph (A) plus the amount computed under subparagraph (B).

[Sec. 117 (c) as amended by sec. 150 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 301 (c) (2) (3), Rev. Act 1950; secs. 123 and 322 (b), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (c)-1 Alternative tax in case net long-term capital gain exceeds net short-term capital loss. (a) In case the net long-term capital gain of a taxpayer (other than a corporation) exceeds the net short-term capital loss, section 117 (c) (2) imposes an alternative tax in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 11 and 12 (or, in the case of certain tax-exempt trusts, the tax imposed by section 421) if and only if such alternative tax is less than the tax imposed by sections 11 and 12 (or, in the case of certain tax-exempt trusts, the tax imposed by section 421) This alternative tax is the sum of (1) a partial tax, computed at the rates provided by sections 11 and 12 (or, in the case of certain tax-exempt trusts, the tax imposed by section 421) on the net income reduced by an amount equal to 50 percent of the excess of the net long-term capital gain (determined by taking into account 100 percent of the gains and losses upon the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months) over the net short-term capital loss, plus (2) 25 percent (26 percent if the taxable year begins before November 1, 1953) of the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss.

(b) In case the net long-term capital gain of any corporation exceeds the net short-term capital loss, section 117 (c) (1) imposes an alternative tax in lieu of the tax imposed by sections 13, 15, 204, 207 (a) (1) or (3) 421, and 500, if and only if such alternative tax is less than the tax imposed by such sections. This alternative tax is the sum of (1) a partial tax computed at the rates provided by sections 13, 15, 204, 207 (a) (1) or (3) 421, and 500 on the net income of the taxpayer, excluding therefrom for this purpose the amount of such excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss, plus (2) 25 percent (26 percent if the taxable year begins before April 1, 1954) of such excess.

(c) In applying section 117 (c) in the case of tax-exempt trusts or organizations subject to the tax imposed by section 421, the only amount which is taken into account as capital gain or loss is that which is taken into account in computing unrelated business net income under section 422. Under section 422, the only amount taken into account as capital gain or loss is that resulting from the application of section 117 (k) (1).

(d) In the case of a joint return made by husband and wife, the excess of any net long-term capital gain over any net short-term capital loss is to be determined by combining the long-term capital gains and losses and the short-term capital gains and losses of the spouses.

(e) The following example illustrates the application of the provisions of section 117 (c) and of this section in the case of an individual taxpayer:

Example. A, a single individual, has for the calendar year 1952 an ordinary net income of $100,000. He is entitled to one exemption of $600. He realizes in 1952 a gain of $50,000 on the sale of a capital asset held for 19 months and sustains a loss of $20,000 on the sale of a capital asset held for five months. Since the alternative tax is less than the tax otherwise computed under sections 11 and 12, the tax payable is the alternative tax, that is, $77,438. The tax is computed as follows:

Tax under sections 11 and 12

Ordinary net income		$100,000
Net long-term capital gain (100 percent of $50,000)	$50,000
Net short-term capital loss (100 percent of $20,000)	20,000
Excess of net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss		30,000
		130,000
Deduction of 50 percent of excess of net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss		15,000
Net income		115,000
Less exemption		600
Income subject to normal tax and surtax		114,400
Combined normal tax and surtax under sections 11 and 12		83,176

Alternative tax under section 117 (c) (2)

Net income	$115,000
Less 50 percent of excess of net long-term capital gain over net short-term capital loss	15,000
Ordinary net income	100,000
Less exemption	600
Income subject to normal tax and surtax	99,400
Partial tax (combined normal tax and surtax on $99,400)	69,638
Plus 26 percent of $30,000	7,800
Total alternative tax under section 117 (c) (2)	77,438

(f) On amounts received or accrued from the disposal of coal to which the provisions of section 117 (k) (2) are applicable, the computation under section 117 (c) (1) of a tax in lieu of the tax imposed by section 500 shall be made without regard to section 117 (k) (2) that is, the partial tax under section 117 (c) (1) (A) insofar as it involves the tax under section 500, is computed without regard to section 117 (k) (2)

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(d) Limitation on capital losses—(1) Corporation. In the case of a corporation, losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges.

(2) Other taxpayers. In the case of a taxpayer, other than a corporation, losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges, plus the net income of the taxpayer of [or] $1,000, whichever is smaller. For purposes of this paragraph, net income shall be computed without regard to gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. If the tax is to be computed under Supplement T, "net income" as used in this paragraph shall be read as "adjusted gross income"

[Sec. 117 (d) as amended by sec. 212 (a), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 150 (c), Rev. Act 1942; sec. 8 (d) (2), Individual Income Tax Act 1944]

§ 39.117 (d)-1 Limitation on capital losses. (a) Section 117 (d) (1) provides that, in the case of a corporation, losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed as deductions only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges, and section 117 (d) (2) provides that, in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets shall be allowed as a deduction only to the extent of the gains from such sales or exchanges, plus net income (computed without regard to such gains or losses) of the taxpayer or $1,000, whichever is smaller. Thus, where an individual taxpayer having an ordinary net income of $5,000, has a loss of $4,000 from the sale of a capital asset which he held for more than six months, such net long-term capital loss of $4,000 is allowable only to the extent of $1,000, the remaining $3,000 being a net capital loss. If the taxpayer's ordinary net income had been $400 instead of $5,000, only $400 of the net long-term capital loss of $4,000 would have been allowed, leaving a net capital loss of $3,600. For carry-over of a net capital loss, see § 39.117 (e)-1.

(b) In the case of a bank, as defined in section 104, the limitation under section 117 (d) (1) is modified by section 117 (i) so that the excess of any losses of the taxable year from sales or exchanges of bonds, debentures, notes or certificates, or other evidences of an indebtedness issued by any corporation (including those issued by a government or political subdivision thereof) with interest coupons or in registered form, over gains of the taxable year from such sales or exchanges may be deductible in full as an ordinary loss.

(c) In case the tax is computed under Supplement T, the term "net income" shall be read as "adjusted gross income."

(d) In the case of a joint return made by a husband and wife, the limitation under section 117 (d) (2) relating to the allowance of losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets, is to be computed and the net capital loss determined with respect to the combined capital gains and losses of the spouses.

§ 39.117 (e) Statutory provisions; capital gains and losses; capital loss carry-over

Sec. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(e) Capital loss carry-over—(1) Method of computation. If for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1941, the taxpayer has a net capital loss, the amount thereof shall be a short-term capital loss in each of the five succeeding taxable years to the extent that such amount exceeds the total of any net capital gains of any taxable years intervening between the taxable year in which the net capital loss arose and such succeeding taxable year. For purposes of this paragraph a net capital gain shall be computed without regard to such net capital loss or to any net capital losses arising in any such intervening taxable years.

(2) Rule for application of capital loss carry-over from 1941. [Not applicable in 1952 and subsequent years.]

[Sec. 117 (e) as amended by sec. 212 (b), Rev. Act 1939; sec. 150 (c), Rev. Act 1942]

§ 39.117 (e)-1 Net capital loss carry-over (a) Any taxpayer sustaining a net capital loss may, under section 117 (e) (1) carry over such loss to each of the five succeeding taxable years and treat it in each of such five succeeding taxable years as a short-term capital loss to the extent not allowed as a deduction against any net capital gains of any taxable years intervening between the taxable year in which the net capital loss was sustained and the taxable year to which carried. The carry-over is thus applied in each succeeding taxable year to offset any net capital gain in such succeeding taxable year. The amount of the net capital loss carry-over may not be included in computing a new net capital loss of a taxable year which can be carried forward to the next five succeeding taxable years. In the case of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or business within the United States, see section 211 and the regulations thereunder.

(b) The practical operation of the provisions of section 117 (e) (1) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (1) For the taxable years 1950 to 1954, inclusive, an individual is assumed to have a net short-term capital loss, net short-term capital gain, net long-term capital loss, net long-term capital gain, and net income as follows:

	1950	1951	1952	1953	1954
Carry-over from prior years:
From 1950		($50,000)	($29,500)	($29,500)
From 1952				(19,500)	($13,000)
Net short-term loss (computed without regard to the carry-overs)	($30,000)	(5,000)	(10,000)
Net short-term gain (computed without regard to the carry-overs)				40,000
Net long-term loss:
50 percent taken into account	(20,500)
100 percent taken into account			(10,000)	(5,000)
Net long-term gain:
50 percent taken into account		25,000
100 percent taken into account					15,000
Ordinary net income (computed without regard to capital gains and losses)	500	500	500	1,000	500
Net capital gain (computed without regard to the carry-overs)		20,500		36,000
Net capital loss	(50,000)		(19,500)
Deduction allowable under sec. 23 (ee) and 117 (b)			None	None	1,000
Net income (computed with regard to deduction allowable under sec. 23 (ee) and 117 (b))			None	None	1,500

(2) Net capital loss of 1950. The net capital loss is $50,000. This figure, computed by taking into account 100 percent of short-term gains and losses and 50 percent of long-term gains and losses, is the excess of the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the sum of (i) gains from such sales or such exchanges, and (ii) ordinary net income of $500. This amount may be carried forward in full as a short-term loss to 1951. However, in 1951 there was a net capital gain of $20,500, as defined by section 117 (a) (10) (B) and limited by section 117 (e) (1), against which this net capital loss of $50,000 is allowed in part. The remaining portion—$29,500—may be carried forward to 1952 and 1953 since there was no net capital gain in 1952. In 1953 this $29,500 is allowed in full against net capital gain of $36,000, as defined by section 117 (a) (10) (B) and limited by section 117 (e) (1). For 1952 and 1953 the net long-term capital loss is computed by taking into account 100 percent of gains and losses upon the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than 6 months. However, in determining the amount of the capital loss carry-over ($29,500) to 1952 and 1953, the net capital loss for 1950 is computed by taking into account only 50 percent of gains and losses upon the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than 6 months, and the net capital gain for 1951 is similarly computed.

(3) Net capital loss of 1952. The net capital loss is $19,500. This figure, computed by taking into account 100 percent of both long-term and short-term gains and losses, is the excess of the losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets over the sum of (i) gains from such sales or exchanges and (ii) ordinary net income of $500. This amount may be carried forward in full as a short-term loss to 1953. However, in 1953 there was a net capital gain of $6,500, as defined by section 117 (a) (10) (B) and limited by section 117 (e) (1), against which this net capital loss of $19,500 is allowed in part. The remaining portion—$13,000—may be carried forward to 1954. Since this amount is treated as a short-term capital loss in 1954 under section 117 (e) (1), the excess of the net long-term capital gain over the net short-term capital loss is $2,000. Half of this excess is allowable as a deduction under sections 23 (ee) and 117 (b). Thus, the taxpayer has a net income of $1,500 for 1954.

(c) If a husband and wife making a joint return for any taxable year did not make a joint return for the preceding taxable years (not exceeding five taxable years) the individual net capital loss of each spouse for each of such preceding taxable years shall be a short-term capital loss for the taxable year to the extent provided by section 117 (e) (1) If, however, a joint return was made for each of the preceding taxable years (not exceeding five taxable years), a net capital loss as shown by each joint return shall be a short-term capital loss for the taxable year to the extent provided by section 117 (e) (1) If a husband and wife making separate returns for any taxable year made a joint return for each of the preceding taxable years (not exceeding five taxable years), a net capital loss as shown by each such joint return shall be allocated to the spouses on the basis of their individual net capital losses for each of such preceding taxable years, and the net capital loss allocated to each spouse shall be a short-term capital loss of such spouse for the taxable year, to the extent provided in section 117 (e) (1)

§ 39.117 (f)-(g) Statutory provisions; capital gains and losses; retirement of bonds, etc., gains and losses from short sales, etc.

Sec. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(f) Retirement of bonds, etc. For the purposes of this chapter, amounts received by the holder upon the retirement of bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates or other evidences of indebtedness issued by any corporation (including those issued by a government or political subdivision thereof), with interest coupons or in registered form, shall be considered as amounts received in exchange therefor.

Sec. 22. [Second Liberty Bond Act] * * *

(d) * * * For purposes of taxation any increment in value represented by the difference between the price paid and the redemption value received (whether at or before maturity) for savings bonds and savings certificates shall be considered as interest. * * *

[Sec. 22 as added by Sec. 6, Pub. Law 3 (74th Cong.), and amended by Sec. 3, Pub. Debt Act 1941.]

(g) Gains and losses from short sales, etc. For the purpose of this chapter—

(1) Gains or losses from short sales of property shall be considered as gains or losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets; and

(2) Gains or losses attributable to the failure to exercise privileges or options to buy or sell property shall be considered as short-term capital gains or losses; and

(3) Gain from the sale or exchange of property, to the extent that the adjusted basis of such property is less than its adjusted basis determined without regard to section 124A (relating to amortization deduction), shall be considered as gain from the sale or exchange of property which is neither a capital asset nor property described in subsection (j).

[Sec. 117 (g) as amended by sec. 216 (c), Rev. Act 1950]

§ 39.117 (g)-1 Gains and losses from short sales; in general. (a) For income tax purposes, a short sale is not deemed to be consummated until delivery of property to cover the short sale, and whether the recognized gain or loss from a short sale is long-term or short-term capital gain or loss shall be determined according to the period for which the property so delivered was held. Thus, if a taxpayer made a short sale of shares of stock and covered the short sale by purchasing and delivering shares which he held for not more than six months, the recognized gain or loss would be considered short-term capital gain or loss, even though he had on hand other shares of the same stock which he held for more than six months. If the short sale is made through a broker and the broker borrows property to make delivery, the short sale is not deemed to be consummated until the obligation of the seller created by the short sale is finally discharged by delivery of property to the broker to replace the property borrowed by the broker.

(b) As to certain short sales of capital assets to which section 117 (l) applies, see § 39.117 (l)-1.

§ 39.117 (g)-2 Gain attributable to amortization deduction. (a) Section 117 (g) (3) provides that gain from a sale or exchange of property, to the extent that the adjusted basis of such property is less than its adjusted basis determined without regard to section 124A, relating to amortization of emergency facilities, shall be considered as ordinary income. For example, on December 31, 1952, a taxpayer making his income tax returns on the calendar year basis acquires at a cost of $10,000 an emergency facility (used in his business) which normally would have a useful life of 20 years. Under section 124A he elects to begin the 60-month amortization period on January 1, 1953. He takes amortization deductions in the amount of $4,000 for the years 1953 and 1954 (24 months) On December 31, 1954, he sells the facility for $9,500. The adjusted basis of the facility on that date is $6,000 ($10,000 cost less $4,000 amortization) Without regard to section 124A, the facility would have been depreciated at the rate of $500 a year and its adjusted basis on December 31, 1954, would have been $9,000 ($10,000 cost less $1,000 depreciation) The difference between the facility's actual adjusted basis ($6,000) and its adjusted basis determined without regard to section 124A ($9,000) is $3,000. Accordingly, $3,000 of the $3,500 gain on the sale of the facility ($9,500 sale price less $6,000 adjusted basis) would be treated as ordinary income and the remaining $500 would be subject to the provisions of section 117 (j)

(b) If the taxpayer acquires other property in an exchange for an emergency facility with respect to which amortization deductions have been allowed, and if the basis in his hands of such other property is determined by reference to the basis of the emergency facility, then the basis of such other property is determined with regard to section 124A, and therefore the provisions of section 117 (g) (3) apply with respect to gain realized on a sale or exchange of such other property. The provisions of section 117 (g) (3) likewise apply with respect to gain realized on the sale or exchange of an emergency facility (or other property acquired, as described in the preceding sentence, in an exchange for an emergency facility) by a taxpayer in whose hands the basis of such facility (or other property) is determined by reference to the basis thereof in the hands of another person who was allowed deductions with respect to such facility under section 124A.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(h) Determination of period for which held. For the purpose of this section—

(1) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held property received on an exchange there shall be included the period for which he held the property exchanged, if under the provisions of section 113, the property received has, for the purpose of determining gain or loss from a sale or exchange, the same basis in whole or in part in his hands as the property exchanged. For the purposes of this paragraph, an involuntary conversion described in section 112 (f) shall be considered an exchange of the property converted for the property acquired.

(2) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held property however acquired there shall be included the period for which such property was held by any other person, if under the provisions of section 113, such property has, for the purpose of determining gain or loss from a sale or exchange, the same basis in whole or in part in his hands as it would have in the hands of such other person.

(3) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held stock or securities received upon a distribution where no gain was recognized to the distributee under the provisions of section 112 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1928, 45 Stat. 818, or the Revenue Act of 1932, 48 Stat. 705, or under the provisions of section 371 (c) of the Revenue Act of 1938 or this chapter, there shall be included the period for which he held the stock or securities in the distributing corporation prior to receipt of the stock or securities upon such distribution.

(4) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held stock or securities the acquisition of which (or the contract or option to acquire which) resulted in the nondeductibility (under section 118 of this chapter or section 118 of the Revenue Act of 1928, 45 Stat. 826, or the Revenue Act of 1932, 47 Stat. 208, or the Revenue Act of 1934, 48 Stat. 715, or the Revenue Act of 1936, 49 Stat. 1692, or the Revenue Act of 1938, 52 Stat. 503, relating to wash sales) of the loss from the sale or other disposition of substantially identical stock or securities, there shall be included the period for which he held the stock or securities the loss from the sale or other disposition of which was not deductible.

(5) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held stock or rights to acquire stock received upon a distribution, if the basis of such stock or rights is determined under section 113 (a) (19) (A), there shall (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) be included the period for which he held the stock in the distributing corporation prior to the receipt of such stock or rights upon such distribution.

(6) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held stock or securities acquired from a corporation by the exercise of rights to acquire such stock or securities, there shall be included only the period beginning with the date upon which the right to acquire was exercised.

(7) In determining the period for which the taxpayer has held a residence, the acquisition of which resulted under section 112 (n) in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized on the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of another residence, there shall be included the period for which such other residence had been held as of the date of such sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion.

[Sec. 117 (h) as amended by sec. 214 (c), Rev. Act 1939; secs. 151 (c) (1) and 152, Rev. Act 1942; sec. 318 (b) (4), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (h)-1 Determination of period for which capital assets are held. (a) Under section 117 (h) if property is acquired in certain transactions described in sections 112, 113, 118, and 371 (c) the period for which such property is considered to have been held by the taxpayer is not computed from the date such property was acquired by the taxpayer but from a prior date. For instance: In the case of stock or securities in a corporation a party to a reorganization received pursuant to a plan of reorganization in exchange solely for stock or securities in another corporation a party to the reorganization, the period for which the stock or securities exchanged were held by the taxpayer must be included in the period for which the stock or securities received on the exchange were held by the taxpayer. In the case of property acquired after December 31, 1920, by gift (if under the provisions of section 113, such property has, for the purpose of determining gain or loss from the sale or exchange, the same basis in the hands of the taxpayer as it would have in the hands of the donor) the period for which the property was held by the donor must be included in the period for which the property was held by the taxpayer. In the case of stock or securities the acquisition of which resulted in the nondeductibility (under section 118 of the Internal Revenue Code or under section 118 of the Revenue Act of 1928, 1932, 1934, 1936, or 1938) of the loss from the sale or other disposition of substantially identical stock or securities, the period for which the stock or securities the loss from the sale or other disposition of which was not deductible were held must be included in the period for which the stock or securities acquired were held by the taxpayer. If property acquired as the result of a compulsory or involuntary conversion of other property of the taxpayer has under section 113 (a) (9) the same basis in whole or in part in the hands of the taxpayer as the property so converted, the period for which the property so converted was held by the taxpayer must be included in the period for which the property acquired was held by the taxpayer.

(b) The period for which the taxpayer has held stock, or stock subscription rights, issued to him as a dividend shall be determined as though the stock dividend, or stock right, as the case may be, were the stock in respect of which the dividend was issued if the basis for determining gain or loss upon the sale or other disposition of such stock dividend or stock right is fixed by the apportionment of the basis of such old stock.

(c) The period for which the taxpayer has held stock or securities issued to him by a corporation pursuant to the exercise by him of rights to acquire such stock or securities from the corporation will, in every case and whether or not the receipt of taxable gain was recognized in connection with the distribution of the rights, begin with and include the day upon which the rights to acquire such stock or securities were exercised. A taxpayer will be deemed to have exercised rights received from a corporation to acquire stock or securities therein where there is an expression of assent to the terms of such rights made by the taxpayer in the manner requested or authorized by the corporation.

(d) The period for which the taxpayer has held a residence, the acquisition of which resulted, under the provisions of section 112 (n) in the nonrecognition of any part of the gain realized on the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of another residence, shall include the period for which such other residence had been held as of the date of such sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion. See § 39.112 (n)-1.

§ 39.117 (i)-(j) Statutory provisions; capital gains and losses; bond, etc., losses of banks; gains and losses from involuntary conversions and from sales or exchanges of certain property used in the trade or business.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * * (i) Bond, etc., losses of banks. For the purposes of this chapter, in the case of a bank, as defined in section 104, if the losses of the taxable year from sales or exchanges of bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates, or other evidence of indebtedness issued by any corporation (including one issued by a government or political subdivision thereof) with interest coupons or in registered form, exceed the gains of the taxable year from such sales or exchanges, no such sale or exchange shall be considered a sale or exchange of a capital asset.

(j) Gains and losses from involuntary conversion and from the sale or exchange of certain property used in the trade or business—(1) Definition of property used in the trade or business. For the purposes of this subsection, the term "property used in the trade or business" means property used in the trade or business, of a character which is subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l), held for more than 6 months, and real property used in the trade or business, held for more than 6 months, which is not (A) property of a kind which would properly be includible in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or (B) property held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of his trade or business, or (C) a copyright, a literary, musical, or artistic composition, or similar property, held by a taxpayer described in subsection (a) (1) (C). Such term also includes timber or coal with respect to which subsection (k) (1) or (2) is applicable and unharvested crops to which paragraph (3) is applicable. Such term also includes livestock, regardless of age, held by the taxpayer for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes, and held by him for 12 months or more from the date of acquisition. Such term does not include poultry.

(2) General rule. If, during the taxable year, the recognized gains upon sales or exchanges of property used in the trade or business, plus the recognized gains from the compulsory or involuntary conversion (as a result of destruction in whole or in part, theft or seizure, or an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation or the threat or imminence thereof) of property used in the trade or business and capital assets held for more than 6 months into other property or money, exceed the recognized losses from such sales, exchanges, and conversions, such gains and losses shall be considered as gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets held for more than 6 months. If such gains do not exceed such losses, such gains and losses shall not be considered as gains and losses from sales or exchanges of capital assets. For the purposes of this paragraph:

(A) In determining under this paragraph whether gains exceed losses, the gains described therein shall be included only if and to the extent taken into account in computing gross income and the losses described therein shall be included only if and to the extent taken into account in computing net income, except that subsection (d) shall not apply.

(B) Losses upon the destruction, in whole or in part, theft or seizure, or requisition or condemnation of property used in the trade or business or capital assets held for more than 6 months shall be considered losses from a compulsory or involuntary conversion.

(3) Sale of land with unharvested crop. In the case of an unharvested crop on land used in the trade or business and held for more than 6 months, if the crop and the land are sold or exchanged (or compulsorily or involuntarily converted as described in paragraph (2)) at the same time and to the same person, the crop shall be considered as "property used in the trade or business."

[Sec. 117 (j) as added by sec. 151 (b), Rev. Act 1942; amended by sec. 127, Rev. Act 1943; sec. 210 (b), Rev. Act 1950; secs. 322 (c) (3), 323 (a), 324, 325 (a), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (j)-1 Gains and losses from involuntary conversions and from the sale or exchange of certain property used in the trade or business. (a) (1) The recognized gains and losses described in subdivisions (i) through (iv) of this subparagraph shall be treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months if the aggregate of such gains exceeds the aggregate of such losses. If the aggregate of such gains does not exceed the aggregate of such losses, such gains and losses shall not be treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets. The gains and losses referred to in this subparagraph are the following:

(i) Gains and losses from the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of "section 117 (j) property", as defined in subparagraph (3) of this paragraph, held for more than six months.

(ii) Gains and losses from the involuntary conversion of capital assets held for more than six months.

(iii) Gains and losses upon the cutting or disposal of timber, or disposal of coal, to the extent provided in § 39.117 (k)-1.

(iv) Gains and losses from the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of livestock, regardless of age, held by the taxpayer for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes, and held by him for twelve months or more from the date of acquisition. See § 39.117 (j)-2.

(v) Gains and losses from the sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion of an unharvested crop under the conditions specified in paragraph (d) of this section.

(2) For the purpose of this section, the "involuntary conversion" of property is the conversion of such property into money or other property as a result of destruction in whole or in part, theft or seizure, or an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation or the threat or imminence thereof. Losses upon the destruction in whole or in part, theft or seizure, requisition or condemnation of property are treated as losses upon an involuntary conversion whether or not there was a conversion of the property into money or other property. For example, if a capital asset held for more than six months, with an adjusted basis of $400, is stolen, and the loss from this theft is not compensated for by insurance or otherwise, the $400 loss is included in the computations under section 117 (j)

(3) For the purpose of this section, the term "section 117 (j) property" means property used in the trade or business of the taxpayer at the time of its sale, exchange, or involuntary conversion, which is of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation provided in section 23 (l) or which is real property, except any such property which is within one of the following categories:

(i) Property of a kind which would properly be includible in the inventory of the taxpayer if on hand at the close of the taxable year, or which is held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of trade or business.

(ii) A copyright, a literary, musical, or artistic composition, or similar property, held by a taxpayer described in section 117 (a) (1) (C)

(iii) Livestock held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes. See, however, subparagraph (1) (iv) of this paragraph.

(iv) Poultry.

(b) In determining whether the gains described in paragraph (a) (1) of this section exceed the losses described therein, such gains and losses are taken into account in full, that is, 100 percent of such gains and losses is taken into account. The provisions of section 117 (d) limiting the deduction of capital losses are not applicable to exclude any losses from the computations under section 117 (j) With these exceptions, gains are included in the computations under section 117 (j) only to the extent that they are taken into account in computing gross income, and losses are included only to the extent that they are taken into account in computing net income. Thus, losses which are not deductible items under section 24 or section 118 are not included in the computations under section 117 (j) Similarly, if a taxpayer reports on the installment basis under section 44 the gain on the sale of property described in section 117 (j) only the portion of the gain reported under section 44 is included in the computation for such taxable year under section 117 (j). Any gains and losses which are not recognized under section 112 are not included in the computations under section 117 (j) Thus, if property is involuntarily converted into similar property, so that the gain on such conversion is not recognized under the provisions of section 112 (f) such gain is not included in the computations under section 117 (j)

(c) If it is determined under the above computations that the gains exceed the losses, all of such gains and losses are treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months. All such gains and losses are then subject to the limitations of section 117 (c) and (d) relating to the alternative tax in the case of capital gains and losses and to the extent to which capital losses are allowed. If it is determined under the above computations that the gains do not exceed the losses, none of such gains and losses are treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets, and such losses are then not subject to the limitations provided in section 117 (d)

(d) The conditions referred to in paragraph (a) (1) (v) of the section are: (1) The unharvested crop is on land which is "section 117 (j) property" as defined in paragraph (a) (3) of this section, and such land has been held for more than six months; (2) such crop and such land are sold, exchanged, or converted at the same time and to the same person; and (3) no right or option (other than one customarily incident to a mortgage or other security transaction) is retained by the taxpayer, at the time of the sale, exchange, or conversion, to reacquire, directly or indirectly, the land. The length of time for which the crop, as distinguished from the land, has been held is immaterial. A leasehold or estate for years is not "land" for the purpose of this section.

(e) The following examples will illustrate the operation of the provisions of section 117 (j)

Example (1). A, an individual, makes his income tax return on the calendar year basis. A's recognized gains and losses for 1952 of the kind described in section 117 (j) are as follows:

	Gains	Losses
1. Gain on sale of machinery, used in the business and subject to an allowance for depreciation, held for more than 6 months	$4,000
2. Gain reported in 1952 (under sec. 44) on installment sale in 1951 of factory premises used in the business (including building and land, each held for more than 6 months)	6,000
3. Gain reported in 1952 (under sec. 44) on installment sale in 1952 of land held for more than 6 months, used in the business as a storage lot for trucks	2,000
4. Gain on proceeds from requisition by Government of boat, held for more than 6 months, used in the business and subject to an allowance for depreciation	500
5. Loss upon the destruction by fire of warehouse, held for more than 6 months and used in the business (excess of adjusted basis of warehouse over compensation by insurance, etc.)		$3,000
6. Loss upon theft of unregistered bearer bonds, held for more than 6 months		5,000
7. Loss in storm of pleasure yacht, purchased in 1950 for $1,800 and having a fair market value of $1,000 at the time of the storm		1,000
8. Total gains	12,500
9. Total losses		9,000
10. Excess of gains over losses	3,500

Since the aggregate of the respective recognized gains ($12,500) exceeds the aggregate of such losses ($9,000), such gains and losses are treated under section 117 (j) as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months.

Example (2). If in example (1) A also had a loss of $4,000 from the sale under threat of condemnation of a capital asset held for more than six months, then the gains ($12,500) would not exceed the losses ($9,000 plus $4,000, or $13,000). Neither the loss on such sale of a capital asset nor any of the other items set forth in example (1) would then be treated as gains and losses from the sale or exchange of capital assets, but all of such items would be treated as ordinary gains and losses.

Example (3). A's yacht, used for pleasure and acquired for such use in 1945 at a cost of $25,000, was requisitioned by the Government in 1952 for $15,000. A sustained no deductible loss, and no loss with respect to such requisition will be included in the computations under section 117 (j).

§ 39.117 (j)-2 Livestock held for draft, breeding, or dairy purposes. (a) For the purpose of section 117 (j), the term "livestock" shall be given a broad, rather than a narrow, interpretation and includes cattle, hogs, horses, mules, donkeys, sheep, goats, fur-bearing animals, and other mammals. It does not include chickens, turkeys, pigeons, geese, other birds, fish, frogs, reptiles, etc.

(b) The determination whether or not livestock is held by the taxpayer for a draft, breeding, or dairy purpose depends upon all of the facts and circumstances in each particular case. The purpose for which the animal is held is ordinarily shown by the taxpayer's actual use of the animal. However, a draft, breeding, or dairy purpose may be present in a case where the animal is disposed of within a reasonable time after its intended use for such purpose is prevented by accident, disease, or other circumstance. An animal held for ultimate sale to customers in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's trade or business may, depending upon the circumstances, be considered held for a draft, breeding, or dairy purpose. An animal is not held by the taxpayer for a draft, breeding, or dairy purpose merely because it is suitable for such purpose or because it is held by the taxpayer for sale to other persons for use by them for such purpose. Furthermore, an animal held by the taxpayer for other purposes is not considered to be held for a draft, breeding, or dairy purpose merely because of a negligible use of the animal for such purpose or because of the use of the animal for such purpose as an ordinary or necessary incident to the purpose for which the animal is held.

(c) These principles may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). An animal intended by the taxpayer for use by him for breeding purposes is discovered to be sterile, and is disposed of within a reasonable time thereafter. This animal was held for breeding purposes.

Example (2). The taxpayer retires from the breeding or dairy business and sells his entire herd, including young animals which would have been used by him for breeding or dairy purposes if he had remained in business. These young animals were held for breeding or dairy purposes.

Example (3). A taxpayer in the business of raising hogs for slaughter customarily breeds sows to obtain a single litter to be raised by him for sale, and sells these brood sows after obtaining the litter. Even though these brood sows are held for ultimate sale to customers in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's trade or business, they are considered to be held for breeding purposes.

Example (4). A taxpayer in the business of raising horses for sale to others for use by them as draft horses uses such horses for draft purposes on his own farm in order to train them. This use is an ordinary or necessary incident to the purpose of selling such animals, and, accordingly, these horses are not held for draft purposes.

Example (5). The taxpayer is in the business of raising registered cattle for sale to others for use by them as breeding cattle. It is the business practice for the cattle to be bred, prior to sale, in order to establish their fitness for sale as registered breeding cattle. In such case, those cattle used by the taxpayer to produce calves which calves are added to the taxpayer's herd (whether or not the breeding herd) are considered to be held for breeding purposes; the breeding of other cattle is an ordinary or necessary incident to the holding of such other cattle for the purpose of selling them as registered breeding cattle, and the breeding of such cattle does not demonstrate that the taxpayer is holding the cattle for breeding purposes.

Example (6). A taxpayer, engaged in the business of buying cattle and fattening them for slaughter, purchased cows with calf. The calves were born while the cows were held by the taxpayer. These cows were not held for breeding purposes.

§ 39.117 (k) Statutory provisions; capital gains and losses; gain or loss in the case of timber or coal.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *
(k) Gain or loss in the case of timber or coal. (1) If the taxpayer so elects upon his return for a taxable year, the cutting of timber (for sale or for use in the taxpayer's trade or business) during such year by the taxpayer who owns, or has a contract right to cut, such timber (providing he has owned such timber or has held such contract right for a period of more than six months prior to the beginning of such year) shall be considered as a sale or exchange of such timber cut during such year. In case such election has been made, gain or loss to the taxpayer shall be recognized in an amount equal to the difference between the adjusted basis for depletion of such timber in the hands of the taxpayer and the fair market value of such timber. Such fair market value shall be the fair market value as of the first day of the taxable year in which such timber is cut, and shall thereafter be considered as the cost of such cut timber to the taxpayer for all purposes for which such cost is a necessary factor. If a taxpayer makes an election under this paragraph such election shall apply with respect to all timber which is owned by the taxpayer or which the taxpayer has a contract right to cut and shall be binding upon the taxpayer for the taxable year for which the election is made and for all subsequent years, unless the Commissioner, on showing of undue hardship, permits the taxpayer to revoke his election; such revocation, however, shall preclude any further elections under this paragraph except with the consent of the Commissioner.

(2) In the case of the disposal of timber or coal (including lignite), held for more than 6 months prior to such disposal, by the owner thereof under any form or type of contract by virtue of which the owner retains an economic interest in such timber or coal, the difference between the amount received for such timber or coal and the adjusted depletion basis thereof shall be considered as though it were a gain or loss, as the case may be, upon the sale of such timber or coal. Such owner shall not be entitled to the allowance for percentage depletion provided for in section 114 (b) (4) with respect to such coal. This paragraph shall not apply to income realized by the owner as a co-adventurer, partner, or principal in the mining of such coal. The date of disposal of such coal shall be deemed to be the date such coal is mined. In determining the gross income, the adjusted gross income, or the net income of the lessee, the deductions allowable with respect to rents and royalties shall be determined without regard to the provisions of this paragraph. This paragraph shall have no application, in the case of coal, for the purposes of applying section 102 or subchapter A of chapter 2 (including the computation under section 117 (c) (1) of a tax in lieu of the tax imposed by section 500).

[Sec. 117 (k) as added by sec. 127 (a), Rev. Act 1943, amended by sec. 325 (b) (c), Rev. Act 1951]

§ 39.117 (k)-1 Gain or loss upon the cutting and disposal of timber and the disposal of coal—(a) Gain or loss upon the cutting of timber—(1) Election to consider cutting as a sale or exchange. (i) A taxpayer who has owned, or has held a contract right to cut, timber for a period of more than six months before the beginning of the taxable year may elect under section 117 (k) (1) to consider the cutting of such timber during such year for sale or for use in the taxpayer's trade or business as a sale or exchange of the timber so cut. Such election must be made by the taxpayer in its income tax return for the taxable year, and cannot be made thereafter. The election shall take the form of a computation in the return under the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) and section 117 (j)

(ii) The election made under the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) shall be applicable with respect to all timber which was owned by the taxpayer or which the taxpayer had a contract right to cut, and the cutting of timber, whether or not actually sold or exchanged, shall be considered to be a sale or exchange, except that timber which is not cut for sale or for use in the taxpayer's trade or business and timber which was held for a period of not more than six months before the beginning of the taxable year shall not be considered to have been sold or exchanged upon the cutting thereof. The election provided by section 117 (k) (1) may be made with respect to any taxable year even though such election was not made with respect to any previous taxable year. If an election has been made under the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) however, such election shall be binding upon the taxpayer not only for the taxable year for which the election is made but also for all subsequent taxable years, unless the Commissioner on showing by the taxpayer of undue hardship permits the taxpayer to revoke his election for such subsequent taxable years. Such election shall apply with respect to all timber which the taxpayer has owned, or has had a contract right to cut, for a period of more than six months before the beginning of a subsequent taxable year and which was cut for sale or for use in the taxpayer's trade or business, whether such timber or contract right was acquired prior or subsequent to the election. If the taxpayer has revoked his election, such revocation shall preclude any further elections by the taxpayer under section 117 (k) (1) except with the consent of the Commissioner.

(2) Computation of gain or loss. (i) If the cutting of timber is considered as a sale or exchange pursuant to an election made under the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) gain or loss shall be recognized to the taxpayer in an amount equal to the difference between the adjusted basis for depletion in the hands of the taxpayer of the timber which has been cut during the taxable year and the fair market value of such timber as of the first day of the taxable year in which such timber is cut. The adjusted basis for depletion of such cut timber shall be based upon the number of units of timber cut during the taxable year which are considered to be sold or exchanged and upon the depletion unit of the timber in the timber account or accounts pertaining to the timber cut, and shall be computed in the same manner as is provided in § 39.23 (m)-21 with respect to the computation of the allowance for depletion.

(ii) The fair market value of the timber as of the first day of the taxable year in which such timber is cut shall be determined, subject to approval or revision by the Commissioner upon examination of the taxpayer's return, by the taxpayer electing to apply the provisions of section 117 (k) (1) in the light of the most reliable and accurate information available with reference to the condition of the property as it existed at that date, regardless of all subsequent changes, such as changes in surrounding circumstances, in methods of exploitation, in degree of utilization, etc. The value sought will be the selling price, assuming a transfer between a willing seller and a willing buyer as of that particular day. Due consideration will be given to the factors and the principles involved in the determination of the fair market value of timber as described in § 39.23 (m)-25.

(iii) The fair market value as of the beginning of the taxable year of the timber cut during such year shall be considered to be the cost of the timber which was cut, in lieu of the actual cost or other basis of such timber, for all purposes for which such cost is a necessary factor. Thus, if the products of the timber cut during a taxable year were sold during such year, the fair market value as of the beginning of such taxable year of the timber cut during the year shall be used in computing the depletion unit and the allowance for depletion as provided in § 39.23 (m)-21. This is also the rule in case the products of the timber cut during one taxable year with respect to which an election has been made under section 117 (k) (1) are sold during a subsequent taxable year, whether or not the election provided in section 117 (k) (1) is applicable with respect to such subsequent year. If the products of the timber cut during a taxable year with respect to which an election under section 117 (k) (1) was made were not sold during such year and are included in inventory at the close of such year, the fair market value as of the beginning of the year of the timber cut during the year shall be used in lieu of the actual cost of such timber in computing the closing inventory for such year and the opening inventory for the succeeding year. With respect to the costs applicable in the determination of the amount of such inventories, there shall be included the fair market value of the timber cut, the costs of cutting, logging, and all other expenses incident to the cost of converting the standing timber into the products in inventory. See § 39.22(c)-3. The fact that the fair market value as of the first day of the taxable year in which the timber is cut is deemed to be the cost of such timber shall not preclude the taxpayer from computing its inventories upon the basis of cost or market, whichever is lower, if such is the method used by the taxpayer. Nor shall it preclude the taxpayer from computing its inventories under the last-in first-out inventory method provided by section 22 (d) if such section is applicable to, and has been elected by, the taxpayer.

(iv) For any taxable year for which the cutting of timber is considered to be a sale or exchange of such timber under section 117 (k) (1) the timber so cut shall be considered as property used in the trade or business for the purposes of section 117 (j) along with other property of the taxpayer used in the trade or business as defined in section 117 (j) (1) Whether the gain or loss considered to have resulted from the cutting of the timber will be considered to be gain or loss resulting from the sale or exchange of capital assets held for more than six months depends upon the application of section 117 (j) to the taxpayer for the taxable year. See § 39.117 (j)-1.

(v) In case the products of the timber are sold after cutting, either in the form of logs or lumber or in the form of a manufactured product, the income from such actual sale shall be considered ordinary income. In determining the cost of the products so sold, the cost of the timber shall be computed pursuant to the provisions of section 117 (k) (1)

(b) Gain or loss upon the disposal of timber under cutting contract. If a taxpayer disposes of timber under any form or type of contract whereby he retains an economic interest in such timber, the disposal under the contract shall be considered to be a sale of such timber. The difference between the amounts received for the timber in any taxable year and the adjusted basis for depletion of the timber with respect to which the amounts were so received shall be considered to be a gain or loss upon the sale of such timber for such year. If the taxpayer owned the timber for a period of more than six months before the date of such contract, for the purposes of section 117 (j) such timber shall be considered to be property used in the trade or business for the taxable year for which it is considered to have been sold, along with other property of the taxpayer used in the trade or business as defined in section 117 (j) (1) Whether gain or loss resulting from the disposition of the timber which is considered to have been sold will be deemed to be gain or loss resulting from the sale of a capital asset held for more than six months will depend upon the application of section 117 (j) in the case of the taxpayer.

(c) Gain or loss upon the disposal of coal. (1) If a taxpayer disposes of coal (including lignite) held for more than six months prior to such disposal, under any form or type of contract whereby he retains an economic interest in such coal, the difference between the amount received for such coal and the adjusted depletion basis thereof under section 114 (b) (1) shall be considered to be a gain or loss upon the sale of such coal.

(2) The adjusted depletion basis under section 114 (b) (1) for the purpose of this section, includes adjustments for development and exploration expenditures and for deductions under section 113 (b) (1) (J) and (M) For the purpose of this section, the date of disposal of the coal shall be deemed to be the date the coal is mined. If the coal has been held for more than six months on the date that it is mined, it is immaterial that it had not been held for more than six months on the date of the contract. For the purpose of section 117 (j) such coal shall be considered to be property used in the trade or business, along with other property of the taxpayer used in the trade or business as defined in section 117 (j) (1) Whether gain or loss resulting from the disposition of the coal will be deemed to be gain or loss resulting from the sale of a capital asset held for more than six months will depend upon the application of section 117 (j) to that and other transactions of the taxpayer.

(3) There shall be no allowance for percentage depletion provided for in section 114 (b) (4) with respect to amounts received any part of which are considered to be received from the sale of coal under section 117 (k) (2) In computing the gross income, adjusted gross income, or the net income of the lessee, the deductions allowable with respect to rents and royalties shall be determined without regard to the provisions of section 117 (k) (2) Section 117 (k) (2) shall have no application with respect to amounts received by a taxpayer as a co-adventurer, partner, or principal in the mining of coal.

(4) To the extent any advance payments are treated, under section 117 (k) (2) as received from the sale of coal for any taxable year, and the grant of the coal rights for which such payments are made expires, terminates, or is abandoned in a later taxable year before the coal which has been paid for has been mined, the grantor shall recompute the tax liability for the prior taxable year and treat such payments to such extent as not received from the sale of the coal; such recomputation should be in the form of an "amended return" if necessary.

SEC. 117. Capital gains and losses. * * *

(l) Short sales, etc. In the case of a short sale of property made by the taxpayer after the date of the enactment of the Revenue Act of 1950:

(1) Short-term gains and holding periods. If substantially identical property has been held by the taxpayer on the date of such short sale for not more than 6 months (determined without regard to the effect, under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, of such short sale on the holding period), or if substantially identical property is acquired by the taxpayer after such short sale and on or before the date of the closing thereof—

(A) Any gain upon the closing of such short sale shall be considered as a gain upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for not more than 6 months (notwithstanding the period of time any property used to close such short sale has been held); and

(B) The holding period of such substantially identical property shall be considered to begin (notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (h)) on the date of the closing of the short sale, or on the date of a sale, gift, or other disposition of such property, whichever date occurs first. This subparagraph shall apply to such substantially identical property in the order of the dates of the acquisition of such property, but only to so much of such property as does not exceed the quantity sold short.

For the purposes of this paragraph, the acquisition of an option to sell property at a fixed price shall be considered as a short sale, and the exercise or failure to exercise such option shall be considered as a closing of such short sale.

(2) Long-term losses. If substantially identical property has been held by the taxpayer on the date of such short sale for more than 6 months, any loss upon the closing of such short sale shall be considered as a loss upon the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for more than 6 months (notwithstanding the period of time any property used to close such short sale has been held, and notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (g) (2)).

(3) Rules for application of subsection. (A) The provisions of paragraph (1) (A) or (2) shall not apply to the gain or loss, respectively, on any quantity of property used to close such short sale which is in excess of the quantity of the substantially identical property referred to in the applicable paragraph.

(B) For the purposes of this subsection—

(i) The term "property" includes only stocks and securities (including stocks and securities dealt with on a "when issued" basis), and commodity futures, which are capital assets in the hands of the taxpayer;

(ii) In the case of futures transactions in any commodity on or subject to the rules of a board of trade or commodity exchange, a commodity future requiring delivery in one calendar month shall not be considered as property substantially identical to another commodity future requiring delivery in a different calendar month; and

(iii) In the case of a short sale of property by an individual, the term "taxpayer" in the application of this paragraph and paragraphs (1) and (2), shall be read as "taxpayer or his spouse"· but an individual who is legally separated from the taxpayer under a decree of divorce or of separate maintenance shall not be considered as the spouse of the taxpayer.

(C) Where the taxpayer enters into two commodity futures transactions on the same day, one requiring delivery by him in one market and the other requiring delivery to him of the same (or substantially identical) commodity in the same calendar month in a different market, and the taxpayer subsequently closes both such transactions on the same day, this subsection shall have no application to so much of the commodity involved in either such transaction as does not exceed in quantity the commodity involved in the other.

§ 39.117 (l)-1 Gains and losses from certain short sales of capital assets—(a) General. Section 117 (l) provides rules as to the tax consequences of certain short sales of property if, at the time of the short sale or on or before the date of the closing of the short sale, the taxpayer holds property substantially identical to that sold short. The term "property" is defined in section 117 (l) to include only stocks and securities (including stocks and securities dealt with on a "when issued" basis) and commodity futures, which are capital assets in the hands of the taxpayer. Certain restrictions on the application of the section to commodity futures are provided in section 117 (l) (3) and paragraph (c) (2) of this section.

(b) Treatment of short sales. (1) The first two rules, which are set forth in section 117 (l) (1) are applicable whenever property substantially identical to that sold short has been held by the taxpayer on the date of the short sale for not more than 6 months (determined without regard to rule (2) below, relating to the holding period) or is acquired by him after the short sale and on or before the date of the closing thereof. These rules are
